STAFF MEMBERS

MRS. GEOFFREY WILSON - CONVENER

NATIONAL WOMEN'S COMMITTEE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

Mrs. Peggy Roach ---------------------------- Washington, D. C.
NCCW

Mrs. Eleanor French ------------------------- New York City
UCW

Mrs. J. B. Harris --------------------------- Atlanta, Georgia
YWCA

Mrs. Lorraine Sulkin ------------------------ Dallas, Texas
NCJW

Mrs. Sujette Crank -------------------------- Atlanta, Georgia
YWCA

Mrs. Dorothy Height ------------------------- Washington, D. C.
NCNW -- YWCA

Mrs. Kay Jones ------------------------------ Nashville, Tennessee
Tennessee Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Ruth Arnold ---------------------------- Little Rock, Ark.
Arkansas Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Alice Spearman ------------------------- Columbus, S. C.
South Carolina Council on Human Relations

Mrs. Ethlyn Christensen --------------------- New York City
YWCA

OPERATION OPPORTUNITY

SOUTHERN EFFORT - WOMEN

CITY	ORGANIZATION	REPRESENTATIVE
ALABAMA
Birmingham		Dr. Louise Branscomb 1225 Greensboro Rd.
Huntsville	UCW	Mrs. W. Raymond Berry 9614 Todd Mill Rd.
ARKANSAS
Little Rock	NCCW	Mrs. Patrick Murphy 423 Shamrock Drive
FLORIDA
Pensacola	AAUW	Mrs. Bernard Jacobson 330 Mehlenbacher Rd.
Tallahassee	AAUW	Miss Louise Blackwell Route 3, Box 218
Tampa	NCJW	Mrs. Nathan L. Marcus 917 Gulf View Avenue
LOUISIANA
Baton Rouge		Mrs. Julie Purnell 2772 - 79th Street
New Orleans	NCJW	Mrs. George Deyfous 1223 Conery Street
NORTH CAROLINA
Charlotte	UCW	Mrs. William P. Mears 206 Tranquil Avenue
Durham	YWCA	Mrs. Guy Alling 1622 Delware Avenue
Greensboro	NCJW	Mrs. Henry Isaacson 100 Batchelor Drive
Durham		Miss Louise Latham 521 George Street
Winston-Salem	YWCA	Miss Kahtaleen Carpenter 1201 Glade Street

SOUTH CAROLINA

Charleston	NCCW	Mrs. Charles Gartland P. O. Box 1253-Myrtle Beach
Florence		Mrs. Iola Jones 711 Oakland

TENNESSEE

Memphis	YWCA	Mrs. Stanley Ish 1483 S.Parkway, East
Nashville	NCJW	Mrs. Irving Hand 203 Ridgefield Court

VIRGINIA

Charlottesville	NCCW	Mrs. Gerard Hannon 108 N. W. Lane-Key West
Danville	NCCW	Miss Margaret Edmunds 133 West Moreland Court
Newport News	UCW	Mrs. Frank Fullman 316 Hurley Avenue
Richmond	YWCA	Miss Zula Pierce 6 North-5th Street
Richmond		Mrs. Lawrence Hilgeman 7625 Sweet Briar Road
Petersburg		Mrs. Carolyn Warrell
Roanoke	YWCA	Mrs. J. E. Stockman 605 First Street, S. W.

GEORGIA

Macon		Mrs. Frances Piper Bass Road-Hickory Rd.
Columbus		Mrs. Margaret Belcher 2861 Urban Avenue
Augusta		Mrs. Don Frank
Savannah		Mrs. Susan Watters 6802 LaRocke Avenue
Savannah		Mrs. Mason Robertson 323 East - 49th Street

OPERATION (COMPLIANCE (OPPORTUNITY

Whatever the fate of the Civil Rights Bill, we can look forward to a Spring and Summer of heightened protest activity. If the bill passes with the public accommodations section intact, Negroes will test the availability of service in thousands of facilities and hundreds of communities throughout southern and border states. If an enforceable public accommodations section fails to pass, there is likely to be a comparable number of demonstrations marked by anger and frustration. In either case, there is the possibility of major and possibly tragic crisis.

Our planning can best start from the assumption that the bill, including an enforceable public accommodations section, will pass. In that event, the remedy for a violation will be a civil suit initiated by a complainant, or by the Attorney General where a pattern of discrimination exists. Even the resort to the courts will probably have to be delayed pending efforts at conciliation and negotiation. In any case, the normal delays of litigation -- abetted in some cases by unfriendly judges -- mean that relief will be slow and peicemeal. To the extent that Southern businesses refuse to comply without court compulsion, the issue will be joined in the streets with the attendant likelihood of turmoil and violence.

It is unrealistic to suggest that any amount of preparatory effort can eliminate the prospect of resistance and crisis. Such areas as Mississippi and parts of other deep-South states will inevitably resist, given their political and social complexion. But this need not be the case in the majority of Southern towns and cities, though there may be intense opposition by individual proprietors in even fairly progressive cities and wherever certain firms operate. In many localities, foresighted governmental and private effort may make the difference between civil strife and orderly compliance with the law. The opponents of racial progress are doing their best to foment a Volstead-Act psychology of resistance to the proposed bill. The supporters of civil rights, private as well as governmental, can hardly take their responsibilities less seriously.

OBJECTIVES

(1) Lay the groundwork in slected Southern cities for strong organized support for open public facilities and accommodations.

(2) Carefully search out and enlist on a locality by locality basis whatever helpful resources exist in the other Southern communities.

(3) Prepare and disseminate, through the press and organizational channels as appropriate, information about the bill and what it provides, encouraging examples of desegregation in public accommodations to date, information directed to economic and civic self-interest, "how-to" guidance materials for community action, etc.

(4) In cooperation with Federal officials, enlist the cooperation of retail chains in promoting local compliance by their affiliates and franchise-holders.

(5) Enlist the active participation of national organizations that have constituents or influence in Southern communities, most particularly in the pilot cities selected for intensive effort.

(6) Maintain a central pool of information on specific community situations, retail chains, and influential business and political leaders.

(7) Work closely with Federal departments and agencies that can influence Southern communities through program or personnel, as well as with those charged directly with civil rights responsibilities.

COORDINATION

There will be two closely connected centers of coordination and communication for the proposed private efforts. The Southern Regional Council will provide this service for the effort in the South, with particular attention to the intensive activities in the selected communities and the other localities. As the secretariat for the Southern Interagency Conference, it is the logical clearing-house for the activities of the constituent agencies, as well as for the state and local human relations councils. To carry out these functions, SRC has added a temporary staff person who will assist the Executive Director and the Field Director for the duration of the project. In general, SRC will address itself to the following:

1. A division of labor among the Southern agencies, including assignment of special responsibility for the pilot community efforts to specific agencies.
2. Encouragement and guidance to purely local groups (e.g., women's committees, bi-racial committees) that can help create a spirit of compliance in their communities.

3. Preparation and distribution of appropriate informational and guidance materials.
4. Promotion of constructive newspaper stories and editorials.
5. Coordination of Southern activities with the Potomac Institute's contact work at the national level.

The Potomac Institute will attempt to involve as many appropriate national organizations and influences as possible in the Southern effort. In general it will:

1. Maintain liaison with the White House, Justice, the Civil rights Commission, and any other Federal agencies that are directly involved, and seek to relate their activities to those coordinated by SRC.
2. Explore possibilities of involving non-civil rights Federal departments and agencies (e.g., Defense, Labor, Federal Executive Boards) wherever they have influence or key personnel at the community level.
3. See that appropriate materials necessary to supplement SRC's output are prepared and distributed.
4. Work with the friendly press in Washington and New York as needed.
5. Work with national organizations -- civil rights, religious, business, labor, women's, civic, professional -- to enlist maximum support and resources behind the Southern effort.

6. Keep the Southern Regional Council and cooperating Southern agencies informed of developments in Washington and at the national level generally.

ACTIVITIES UNDERWAY OR POTENTIAL

1. SRC has convened several meetings of Southern agency personnel to discuss "Operation Compliance - Opportunity." Additional meetings are being planned. Compliance efforts are already underway in several communities.
2. Potomac is meeting with an informal, continuing committee of chain store businessmen and Federal officials who are planning ways to encourage desegregation of public accommodations in the South.
3. The International Association of Police Chiefs has expressed interest in cooperating by distributing case studies and other information to Southern police chiefs.
4. The Lawyers' Committee has offered to cooperate similarly with its constituency.
5. The National Women's Committee on Civil Rights and its constituent national organizations are developing community-wide women's efforts in selected communities in the South. Some women's groups are already at work (e.g., Atlanta, New Orleans).
6. The National Council of Churches Commission on Religion and Race already had contemplated an independent effort comparable to the one here described. SRC has had discussions with them and they have agreed to mesh planning and program.
7. The U. S. Conference of Mayors has initiated a community relations program for its constituents, and can be expected to distribute pertinent information through its mailing list, and will furnish its members on request consultative and technical assistance.

OPERATION - 6

A list of pilot cities for intensive efforts to mobilize strong and organized support for open public facilities and accommodations is appended.

PILOT CITIES

ALABAMA

- Anniston
- Birmingham
- Huntsville
- Mobile
- Tuscaloosa

ARKANSAS

- Little Rock

FLORIDA

- Daytona Beach
- Jacksonville
- Miami
- Pensacola
- St. Petersburg
- Sarasota
- Tampa

GEORGIA

- Atlanta
- Columbus
- Savannah

LOUISIANA

- Baton Rouge
- New Orleans

MISSISSIPPI

- Greenville

NORTH CAROLINA

- Charlotte
- Durham
- Greensboro
- Raleigh
- Rocky Mount
- Winston-Salem

SOUTH CAROLINA

- Charleston
- Columbia
- Greenville

TENNESSEE

- Knoxville
- Memphis
- Nashville

TEXAS

- Dallas
- Houston

VIRGINIA

- Charlottesville
- Danville
- Lynchburg
- Newport News
- Norfolk
- Portsmouth
- Richmond
- Roanoke

OPERATION OPPORTUNITY

INFORMATION REQUESTED

1. Community leaders or individuals who could be approached to work for compliance with Title II.

2. Community groups which could be approached to work for compliance with Title II.

3. Community leaders or individuals or groups which would tend to work against compliance with Title II.

4. General attitude of:

City officials

Press

Business leadership

Church leaders

OPERATION OPPORTUNITY (continued)

5. Present status of desegregation (by name if possible) in:

Lunch counters

Restaurants

Hotels - Motels

Theatres

Municipal facilities

Schools

OPERATION OPPORTUNITY (continued)

6. Is there a community bi-racial committee?

   a) Official or unofficial (check one)

   b) Names of members

7. In your opinion what places of public accommodations, if any, will be defiant of the law in your city?

Founded
1909

THE PROGRESSIVE

MADISON 3, WISCONSIN • ALPINE 5-6543
MORRIS H. RUBIN, EDITOR

January 18, 1963 2574626

Miss Margaret Long
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Miss Long:

Thanks for your note of January 16 with its kind comment on our December issue. The response has been uniformly excellent so far--except for the NAACP which is furious that there was no article dealing with it.

I am enclosing three copies to hand around among your friends. Let me know if you can use more for we have a rather tiny supply on hand.

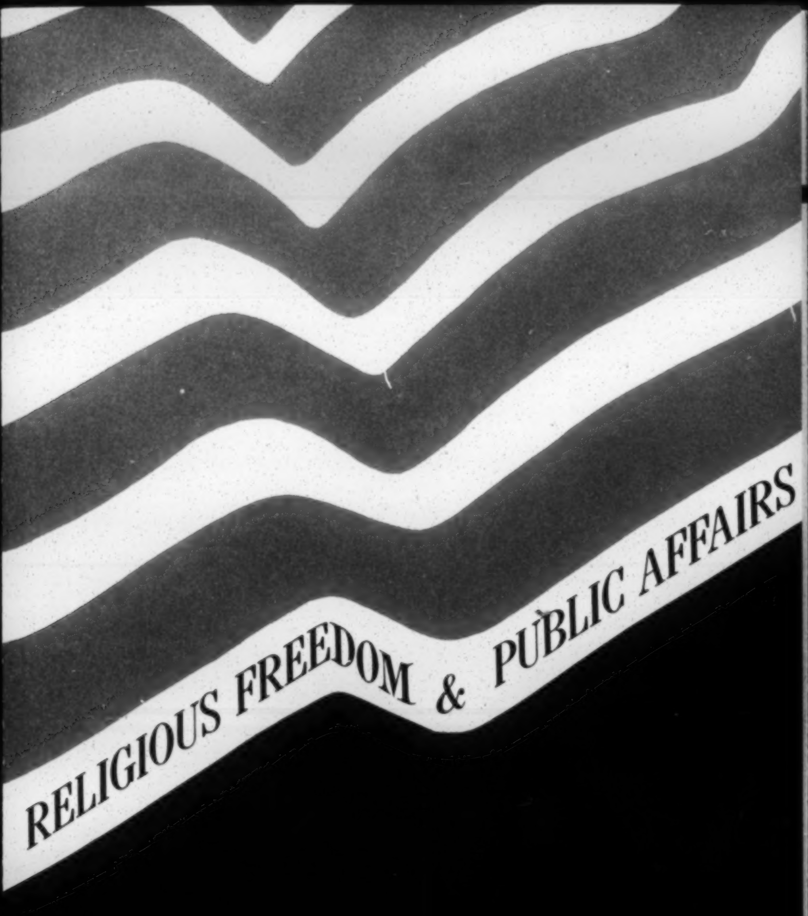
With best wishes,

Cordially,

Morris H. Rubin
Editor

bh
Enclosures

Founded in 1909 by Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. • Published by The Progressive, Inc., A Non-Profit Foundation



RELIGIOUS FREEDOM & PUBLIC AFFAIRS

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS & JEWS

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND PU

THE PROBLEM

A new era in interreligious relations is upon us. The Catholic Ecumenical Council, and the Protestant World Council of Churches' Faith and Order Conferences, the meeting of Christian leaders in the Holy Land, and other dramatic exchanges – these are all signs of a new stirring within our religious communities. They represent an eagerness to know and understand each other better, to join forces in battle against hatred and misunderstanding, to purify our religious institutions so that they may challenge more effectively the problems of a revolutionary world.

At the very same time there is evident sharp conflict among America's religious communities on matters of public policy – public funds for textbooks, transportation and shared time for parochial schools; birth control clinics; prayer and bible readings in the public schools; Christmas creches on public property; Sunday closing laws. These issues frequently become front-page community controversies, or decisive factors in political campaigns or the enactment of legislation. Even court cases offer no final solution to our disputes, as citizens organize themselves to achieve Constitutional amendment.

Insofar as these conflicts reveal confidence in the democratic process, they are not all bad. In fact, religious groups raise their voices for what they feel is just, precisely because they believe they will be given a hearing. Debates of this nature reveal that our religious feelings are strong, and thus they are a potential force for the general welfare. The question therefore is only how to handle our differences in a way to promote rather than to hinder the common weal.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews believes that these differences can best be handled through candid and patient exchange of ideas and analysis of issues in an atmosphere of charity and open-mindedness, and the result will be constructive answers for the common good.

Building upon the spirit of ecumenical exchange, the NCCJ has encouraged two thousand ministers, priests, rabbis and laymen in forty-five cities to meet every month in a dialogue probing the deeper significance of faith and its meaning for religious liberty in a pluralistic society.

NCCJ PROJECT

The National Conference of Christians and Jews has expanded its work in the field of interreligious relations through a project: Religious Freedom and Public Affairs. Partially supported by a grant of $325,000 from the Ford Foundation, this project is designed to raise the general level of public discussion and understanding among religious groups differing on issues of public concern. It seeks to expand through the coming years a program of dialogue among citizens across confessional lines.

To aid and assist the project in identifying key issues and in suggesting the most effective methods for handling such problems the NCCJ has organized a Council on Religious Freedom and Public Affairs consisting of nine distinguished Americans. This Council has authorized a three-fold program.

NATIONAL AND REGIONAL INSTITUTES

An effort to bring together across faith lines the outstanding and most competent leaders in a designated area of concern for a period of study and discussion.

BLIC AFFAIRS

THE PROJECT HAS CONDUCTED:

- An institute on political action by religious groups and its significance for religious liberty.
- An institute for editors of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religious press for a discussion on the handling of controversial issues.
- An institute for lawyers and church leaders on the meaning of the First Amendment.
- An institute for school board members and school superintendents for a discussion of problems involving religion and education.

DIALOGUE IN THE COMMUNITY

An effort to bring together priests, ministers, rabbis and laymen in ongoing discussion in every major city of the United States.

DIALOGUE GROUPS IN EXISTENCE HAVE ALREADY BROUGHT NEW LEADERSHIP TO THEIR COMMUNITIES:

- Through growth in understanding of each others point of view.
- Through agreement, where division is irreconcilable, to engage in interreligious controversy in such a way that religion is dignified and our democratic procedures strengthened.
- Through effective action meetings where consensus exists, to confront community problems cooperatively, with all the major religious groups working together.

PUBLICATIONS, PAMPHLETS AND FILMS

An effort to make available background studies of communities in tension, round up reports on the best ideas that shed new light on old problems, position papers that enhance discussion of the issues, films that stimulate thought and exchange of opinion.

A REPRESENTATIVE SAMPLING OF TITLES INCLUDES:

1 / DIALOGUE

1 / DIALOGUE — an occasional summary of news reports on religious issues as they affect public affairs, Claud Nelson, Editor.

THE COMMON BIBLE	15 cents
PLANNED PARENTHOOD	15 cents

2 / BACKGROUND REPORTS

2 / BACKGROUND REPORTS — an analysis of community conflict, Arthur Gilbert, Editor.

COMMUNITY CONFLICT — Christmas observance in the public school	10 cents
THE CHURCH AGAINST GAMBLING LEGISLATION IN TEXAS	10 cents
MASSACHUSETTS SUNDAY LAW & THE SABBATARIAN ISSUE	10 cents
THE FAUQUIER HOSPITAL STERILIZATION STORY	10 cents

3 / PAMPHLETS

BIRTH CONTROL AND THE LEGISLATION OF MORALITY	35 cents
THE QUESTION OF TAX EXEMPTION FOR CHURCHES	35 cents
RELIGION AND EDUCATION	35 cents
RELIGION AND POLITICS	50 cents

4 / REPRINTS

PRAYER AND THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOL	10 cents
RELIGIOUS FREEDOM IN AMERICA: CHANGING MEANINGS IN THE PAST AND PRESENT	25 cents

5 / FILMS

BUSSES AND BALLOTS — 25 minutes, black and white, 16 mm — A study of how one Connecticut community handled the question of public payment for the bus transportation of parochial school children.

SHARED TIME — 25 minutes, black and white, 16 mm — A discussion pro and con of the shared time idea based on the experiment now taking place in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

FUTURE PROJECTS

NCCJ is convinced that this project has already exerted an appreciable influence on American public opinion. The project must continue its work even beyond the period of the Ford Foundation grant. NCCJ welcomes contributions from foundations and philanthropic individuals. It also welcomes inquiry from all those who would wish to join themselves to our effort and to become better acquainted with project materials and resources.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIANS & JEWS

43 WEST 57th STREET / NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10019

CO-CHAIRMEN	ROBERT D. MURPHY CARROL M. SHANKS LEWIS L. STRAUSS
PRESIDENT	LEWIS WEBSTER JONES
STAFF CONSULTANT	ARTHUR GILBERT Project, Religious Freedom and Public Affairs

MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL ON RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS

DR. EDWARD WARE BARRETT
Dean, Graduate School of Journalism
Columbia University

REV. JOHN COLEMAN BENNETT
Dean of the Faculty
Union Theological Seminary

RABBI ROBERT GORDIS
Professor of Biblical Exegesis
Jewish Theological Seminary

DR. HEROLD CHRISTIAN HUNT
Eliot Professor of Education
Harvard University

DR. WILBER GRIFFITH KATZ
Professor of Law
University of Wisconsin

THE HON. EUGENE J. McCARTHY
United States Senator from Minnesota

REV. JOHN S. ROMANIDES
Assistant Dean and Professor of Theology
Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Theological School

REV. GUSTAVE WEIGEL, S.J.*
Professor of Ecclesiology
Woodstock College

DR. ROBIN MURPHY WILLIAMS, JR.
Department of Sociology
Cornell University

deceased*

NATIONAL CONFERENCE
OF CHRISTIANS
AND JEWS

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF MATERIALS

NCCJ

REPRINTS, ARTICLES, BOOKS & PAMPHLETS to help build Better Intergroup Relations

(Single copy free where price is not indicated.)

Materials for special use are designated as follows:
C .... Community agencies R .... Religious groups
L-M .... Labor-Management and Public Interest S .... Schools and Colleges
For all materials listed in this bibliography, please write to the NCCJ office nearest you. (See list on back.)

Annual Report of the President of NCCJ 10 pp.
The year 1963 in review.

Beginning Human Relations Programs from Scratch by Hilda Taba 6 pp. C, S
Basic suggestions for a community human relations program.

Big Big World and the People in It by Williard Johnson S, C, R
Illustrated message of good will for young people and adults.

Books for Brotherhood 10 pp. C, S, R
Annotated list of books for adults and children chosen by a committee representative of various faiths, races, etc., while at the same time authorities in the literary field.

Brotherhood and Your PTA 8 pp. C, S
Designed to enlist the activity of parents and teachers in programming for better intergroup relations.

Brotherhood Under God Series 5 cents each R
Program Suggestions for Catholic Organizations
Program Suggestions for Jewish Organizations
Program Suggestions for Protestant Organizations
Year-round program suggestions for building better human relations through religious organizations.

Business in Dixie L-M
Reprint from the Wall Street Journal on the high cost of discrimination.

A Catalogue of Church-State Problems R
by Rabbi Arthur Gilbert
Reprinted from Religious Education
A listing of issues on which religious groups differ in the public order, with some effort at sociological analysis, particularly an explanation of Jewish viewpoints in this area.

THE DIALOGUE C, R
A summary of news reports, drawing heavily upon Religious News Service and editorials in leading church magazines to demonstrate how particular cases in the area of religious freedom and public affairs are being discussed and debated. These items do not provide an exhaustive report on the issues in question, but they are suggestive of the complex nature of the issues and are intended to stimulate further discussion.

The Common Bible 15 cents
Paper prepared by Father Walter M. Abbott, S. J. on a proposed Common Bible.

Planned Parenthood 15 cents
A report on new developments in the ongoing conflict over the distribution of birth control devices by public health clinics and the use of public funds for such purpose.

Responsibilities of Religious Freedom 15 cents
A review and summary of the papers delivered at the First National Institute of the project, Religious Freedom and Public Affairs. An historical analysis of religious pluralism by three leading historians.

A Report on the Local Dialogue 15 cents
Defines the scope and interprets the purpose of NCCJ's dialogue program.

The Supreme Court: Bible Reading and Prayer 15 cents
Roundup of background information on a subject of current concern. Issued July, 1963.

The Vatican Council 1962 15 cents each
In two sections, this issue collects the reports of RNS correspondents Robert A. Graham, S. J. and Claud D. Nelson.

Emerging Concepts of Man and Society by Louis Finkelstein 20 pp. 15 cents R
Second in the Morgenstern Award Lecture series stressing the need for a sound character education in the present American pluralistic society.

A Fair Chance for All Americans 20 pp. 10 cents L-M
Four business leaders tell how their firms put a fair employment policy into action.

Guide for Rearing Children of Good Will Institutes 16 pp. 15 cents C
How to plan programs on the theme of "Rearing Children of Good Will."

Has Anti-Semitism Roots in Christianity? by Jules Isaac 96 pp. 50 cents R
Sorbonne lecture by a distinguished author with commentary by Richard Cardinal Cushing and Bernhard E. Olson.

The High Cost of Discrimination by Elmo Roper 20 pp. 10 cents L-M
Results of a nationwide employee survey and research in a wide range of industries on the economic cost to American business because of discrimination against minority groups.

If Christmas Brings Conflict 12 pp. 10 cents R, S
Issues involving religion and the public schools.

More Room at the Top L-M
Reprint from Management Review on company experiences in employing Negroes in professional and management jobs.

Platform of Good Will Series 5 cents each R
A Protestant View by Jaroslav Pelikan
A Catholic View by Walter J. Ong, S. J.
A Jewish View by Bernard Mandelbaum
A Greek Orthodox View by Leonidas C. Contos
Recognized leaders of four religious groups set forth fundamental principles which religiously motivated people should follow in their relations with their fellow men.

The Police and Community Conflict by William P. Brown 24 pp. 15 cents C
A practical treatment of an important subject written by a career police officer.

Prejudice Doesn't Come Naturally 5 cents C
Reprint from Parents Magazine giving a mother's experiences in trying to maintain a healthy atmosphere in the home.

Race by John Gillin 12 pp. 5 cents S, R, C
Anthropologists approach to question of race.

Rearing Children of Good Will C
N. Y. Times Magazine reprint describing the NCCJ national institute on the subject.

Rearing Children to Meet the Challenge of Change by Dan W. Dodson 16 pp. 10 cents C, R, S
Essay on the theme of Rearing Children of Good Will directed to parents, teachers and religious leaders.

Religious Concern with Politics by John C. Bennett
24 pp. 15 cents R

First in the Morgenstern Award Lecture series, outlining the role of religion in politics and its concern and contribution to the political scene.

Rules for the Dialogue R

Reprinted from Christian Century and Commonweal; where it was simultaneously published in 1960.

Robert McAfee Brown suggests six rules that must be observed if the Protestant-Catholic dialogue is to prove fruitful.

Some Children Are . . . by Jo Tenjford, Oslo 4 pp. C, S, R

Light verse calling attention to the many cultural differences of children and their basic likeness.

Speak Up for Brotherhood! 16 pp. C, R, S

Suggestions for speakers on the theme of Brotherhood.

Study Guides in Human Relations—Primary Grades S

Study Guides in Human Relations — Intermediate Grades S

Study Guides in Human Relations — Junior High Schools S

Study Guides in Human Relations — Senior High Schools S

Year-round programming in human relations in the schools for various age levels.

To: The Librarian — About Human Relations C, S

Practical program suggestions for stimulating human relations programs for Brotherhood Week and the year round in the library.

We Believe

Credo on Americanism and quotes on brotherhood from various sources.

What Is the National Conference of Christians and Jews?

Thumbnail description of NCCJ program and policy.

What You Can Do For Brotherhood 12 pp.

Direct appeal to people to promote the practice of Brotherhood.

National Conference of Christians and Jews
43 W. 57th St., New York 19, N. Y.

Co-Chairmen
CARROL M. SHANKS
ROBERT D. MURPHY
LEWIS L. STRAUSS

President
LEWIS WEBSTER JONES

Executive Vice President
STERLING W. BROWN

Treasurer
GEORGE B. MORAN

Secretary
OSCAR M. LAZRUS

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.
8205 Guadalupe
Trail, N.W.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.
910 Southeastern Bldg.
Greensboro, N. C.

ATLANTA 3, GA.
1144 Bank of Georgia Bldg.

BALTIMORE 2, MD.
514 Keyser Bldg.

BEAUMONT, TEX.
P.O. Box 2465

BIRMINGHAM 3, ALA.
927-8 City Federal Bldg.

BOSTON 8, MASS.
73 Tremont Street

BRONX 51, N. Y.
529 Courtlandt Ave.

BROOKLYN 1, N. Y.
105 Court Street

BUFFALO 2, N. Y.
Suite 36
Hotel Statler-Hilton

CHAMBERSBURG, PA.
765 Garfield Street

CHARLOTTE 2, N. C.
121 E. 3rd Street

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
3323 Windsor Court

CHICAGO 1, ILL.
203 No. Wabash Ave.

CINCINNATI 2, OHIO
313 Keith Bldg.

CLEVELAND 14, OHIO
304 Investment Ins. Bldg.
E. 6th St. & Rockwell Ave.

DALLAS 1, TEX.
1028 Dallas Athletic Club Bldg.
1805 Elm Street

DENVER 2, COLO.
307 Denver Natl. Bldg.
821-17th Street

DES MOINES 9, IOWA
707 Empire Bldg.

DETROIT 2, MICH.
150 W. Boston Blvd.

DULUTH 2. MINN.
313 Bradley Bldg.
10 East Superior St.

EASTERN, PENNSYLVANIA
Box 301
Blandon, Pa.

EL PASO, TEX.
614 E. Yandell Blvd.

FORT WORTH 2, TEX.
214 Danciger Bldg.
Fifth & Throckmorton

GREENSBORO, N. C.
910 Southeastern Bldg.

HARTFORD 3, CONN.
983 Main Street

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., N. Y.
27 West Columbia St.

HOUSTON 2, TEX.
1109 Scanlan Bldg.

INDIANAPOLIS 4, IND.
108 E. Washington St.
Room 1501

JAMAICA 33, N. Y.
92-32 Union Hall St.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
916 Walnut St.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.
P.O. Box 685

LAS VEGAS, NEV.
United Fund Bldg.
1622 South A Street

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
1921 W. 22nd Street

LOS ANGELES 5, CAL.
Suite 202
3335 Wilshire Blvd.

LOUISVILLE 2, KY.
501 Republic Bldg.

MEMPHIS 3, TENN.
223 Falls Bldg.

MIAMI 32, FLA.
305 Calumet Bldg.
10 N.E. Third Ave.

MILWAUKEE 2, WISC.
759 N. Milwaukee St.
Room 419

MINNEAPOLIS 2, MINN.
520 National Bldg.

NEWARK 2, N. J.
790 Broad Street

NEW ORLEANS 12, LA.
610 International Bldg.
611 Gravier Street

NEW YORK 19, N. Y.
43 West 57th Street

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.
330 Niagara Street
Lewiston, N. Y.

NORFOLK, VA.
269 Boush St.

OKLA. CITY 2, OKLA.
310 Com. Exch. Bldg.

OMAHA 2, NEB.
848 Insurance Bldg.

PHILA. 7, PA.
1211 Chestnut St.

PHOENIX 4, ARIZ.
624 Luhrs Bldg.

PITTSBURGH 22, PA.
1307 Keenan Bldg.

PORTLAND 5, ORE.
729 S.W. Alder St.

PROVIDENCE 6, R. I.
92 Benevolent Street

READING, PA.
YWCA, 8th & Wash. Sts.

RICHMOND 30, VA.
203 Westwood Bldg.
2317 Westwood Ave.

SAN ANTONIO 5, TEX.
632 Three A Life Bldg.
118 Broadway

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
4247 Park Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO 3, CAL.
Suite 815
Central Tower
703 Market Street

SEATTLE 1, WASH.
701 Seaboard Bldg.

SHREVEPORT, LA.
3507 West College

SOUTH BEND 1, IND.
128 Franklin Place

ST. LOUIS 1, MO.
915 Chemical Bldg.
721 Olive Street

TAMPA, FLA.
1216 E. Sligh Street

TULSA 3, OKLA.
515 S. Denver

UPPER NEW YORK STATE
43 West 57th St.
New York 19, N. Y.

WASHINGTON 5, D. C.
735 Southern Bldg.
1425 H St., N.W.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
175 Main Street

WICHITA 2, KAN.
257 No. B'way
Suite 104

WICHITA FALLS, TEX.
718 - 10th St.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.
514 Monument Ave.
Wyoming, Pa.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.
R.D. #2
Montoursville, Pa.

WILMINGTON, DEL.
1011 Washington St.

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews
506-508 Ryrie Bldg.
229 Yonge St.
Toronto, Canada

11-63

INTERGROUP EDUCATION PAMPHLETS

(A Series Prepared and Published by the NCCJ)

Building Brotherhood: What Can Elementary Schools Do? by Mary Beauchamp, Ardelle Llewellyn, Vivienne S. Worley 78 pp. 25 cents

Contribution to elementary education and approaches to democratic living.

Education in a Transition Community by Jean D. Grambs 128 pp. 25 cents S, C

Discussion of the problems to be faced in view of the Supreme Court decision declaring segregation in schools unconstitutional. Material organized with needs of public schools in mind, with constructive suggestions for school administrators, teachers, parents and community leaders.

Feelings Are Facts by Margaret M. Heaton 59 pp. 25 cents S, C

Intergroup relations and their effect on the healthy emotional life of children.

Human Relations and Audio-Visual Materials by Jean D. Grambs 68 pp. 25 cents S, C

Clarifying the meaning of visual aids for intergroup education.

Readings in Intergroup Relations by Helen F. Storen 40 pp. 25 cents S, C

Books on interreligious, interracial and other group relations.

The Resolution of Intergroup Tensions by Gordon W. Allport 51 pp. 25 cents S, C

What scientific research says about best methods for overcoming prejudice and bigotry.

Role Playing the Problem Story by George and Fannie R. Shaftel 78 pp. 25 cents S, C

Treatment of methods for using role playing in classrooms.

FILMS

16 mm Sound Motion Pictures

Variety of Titles, Apply NCCJ

FILMSTRIPS

(with script—35 mm)

Variety of Titles, Apply NCCJ

RADIO AND STAGE SCRIPTS

The Children Are Listening by Barbara Kay Davidson 36 pp. $2.00 single copy. C

Play tells how the prejudices of parents are transferred to children. (Call your nearest NCCJ office to plan for a performance.)

The People Next Door by Robert Crean 24 pp. 25 cents C

Play designed for use as an open-end discussion tool on the subject of race relations in housing.

(Other titles for school assemblies, drama groups and radio presentation. Titles vary from time to time. Ask for current samples.)

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS PUBLICATIONS

The NCCJ project, Religious Freedom and Public Affairs, is designed to raise the general level of public understanding and discussion on issues of public concern about which religious groups differ. The main objectives of this project are: to analyze the practical and theoretical problems involving political action and religious freedom; to effectuate a greater understanding of the significance of those religious commitments that affect public policy; and to lessen needless conflict created by different religious approaches to social problems.

BACKGROUND REPORTS

An effort to furnish analyses in depth on specific issues in the area of religious freedom and public affairs, or to probe a specific case incident where religious groups were in conflict on a matter of public policy.

Busses and Ballots by Theodore Powell 10 cents

A review of the procedures followed in Wilton, Connecticut, where the citizens had to decide whether public funds should be expended to pay for the transportation of children attending the new parochial school.

The Church Against Gambling Legislation in Texas by Harold C. Kilpatrick 10 cents

A report on the political role of the Council of Churches on this issue and their justification for overt political activity in an area of "the legislation of morality."

Community Conflict—Christmas Observance in the Public Schools 10 cents

An examination of conflict in Hamden, Connecticut, on the nature of Christmas celebrations in the public schools.

The Fauquier Hospital Sterilization Story by Gerry Grant 10 cents

A report on the maternity clinic in Warrentown, Virginia, that has permitted by state law the sterilization of 63 indigent mothers. The conflicting views of church leaders on sterilization as a matter of public policy are examined.

Massachusetts Sunday Laws and the Sabbatarian Issue by Philip Perlmutter 10 cents

Examines the role of religious groups in wielding political influence on opposite sides of legislative effort to pass a Sabbatarian exemption amendment to a Sunday closing law.

PAMPHLETS

Birth Control and the Legislation of Morality 48 pp. 35 cents

Papers by Rev. Dean M. Kelley, Executive Director, Department of Religious Liberty, National Council of Churches, and John de J. Pemberton, Jr., Executive Director, American Civil Liberties Union.

The Question of Tax Exemption for Churches 52 pp. 35 cents

Objective study of tax exemption by Andrew D. Tanner with comments by Theodore H. Husted, Jr., of particular interest to churchmen and civic leaders.

Religion and Education 52 pp. 35 cents

Papers by Very Rev. Msgr. John B. McDowell, Superintendent of Catholic Schools, Diocese of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Dr. Theodore Powell, Public Affairs Consultant, Connecticut State Department of Education.

Religion and Politics: A Conversation 72 pp. 50 cents

Excerpts from papers and discussions at the First National Institute of the Project Religious Freedom and Public Affairs of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Religious Responsibility for the Social Order 24 pp. 20 cents

A Symposium by Three Theologians: A Protestant View by Dr. Jaroslav Pelikan, Professor of Historical Theology, The University of Chicago; A Catholic View by Father Gustave Weigel, S. J., Professor of Ecclesiology, Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md.; A Jewish View by Rabbi Emil L. Fackenheim, Professor of Philosophy, University of Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

REPRINTS

Columbia Journalism Review 15 cents

Reprint analyzing press reaction to the 1962 prayer decision of the Supreme Court.

Prayer and the Bible in the Public School 10 cents

Reprint from Ave Maria. Exchange of views on the issue of religious practices in the schools.

Religious Freedom in America: Changing Meanings in the Past and Present 25 cents

Reprinted from Crosscurrents. Winter issue 1963. Papers on the historic development of religious liberty as seen from the perspective of several faith communities and the secular tradition. These essays, written by John Tracy Ellis, Franklin H. Littell, Bertram W. Korn, Edward Duff and Sidney Hook, were delivered at the sessions of the First National Institute of the project, Religious Freedom and Public Affairs.

What is the National Conference of Christians and Jews?

NCCJ is a civic organization engaged in a nation-wide program of intergroup education. It enlists Protestants, Catholics and Jews who without compromise of conscience or of their distinctive and important religious differences work together to build better relationships among men of all religions, races and nationalities. Its operation is civic and social although, obviously, the roots of the brotherhood which it seeks to build are in the moral law and in religious faith.

Founded
1909

THE PROGRESSIVE

MADISON 3, WISCONSIN • ALPINE 5-6543
MORRIS H. RUBIN, EDITOR

March 3, 1964

Miss Margaret Long
120 Lafayette Drive, N.E.
Apt. 11
Atlanta 9, Georgia

Dear Margaret:

This morning we received the enclosed long letter from Martin Luther King's attorney. Would you care to make a brief reply for the People's Forum? If so, I should have it by Monday, March 9, or Tuesday at the latest.

Incidentally, I thought that your letter to Dr. King was admirable. We would be most interested to know if you have had any other fuss.

You would have heard from Morris before this, except for his doctor ordering him out of town for a brief rest.

Cordially,

Mary
Mary Sheridan
Associate Editor

bh
Enclosures
Airmail

Founded in 1909 by Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. • Published by The Progressive, Inc., A Non-Profit Foundation

Founded
1909

THE PROGRESSIVE

MADISON 3, WISCONSIN • ALPINE 7-4626
MORRIS H. RUBIN, EDITOR

April 16, 1964

Margaret Long
120 Lafayette Drive, N.E.
Apt. 11
Atlanta 9, Georgia

Dear Margaret:

I have been in such a whirl--and heading away again--that I haven't had a chance to write you about your last piece. I think it is excellent--not Margaret Long at her peak, but still a mighty fine piece. It is running in the May issue now going to press.

Enclosed is our check for $100.

If you want us to send copies to any of your friends and associates, shoot the list along to me at your convenience.

What next? Perhaps we could consider something for mid-summer publication with an early June deadline.

With best wishes and many thanks,

Cordially,

Morris H. Rubin
Editor

bh
Enclosure
Airmail

P. S. I am enclosing a copy of the Negro Digest, which reprinted your piece on Aaron Henry.

For a variety of reasons too complicated to develop here, our September and October issues are especially important to us. I should like very much, in addition to this short effort for August, for you to consider a major piece for either the September or the October issue. Perhaps we can talk about it on the telephone between now and mid-summer.

Mary joins me in sending our best.

Cordially,

Morris H. Rubin
Editor

MHR/db

Founded
1909

THE PROGRESSIVE

MADISON 3, WISCONSIN • ALPINE 7-4626
MORRIS H. RUBIN, EDITOR

April 27, 1964

Margaret Long
120 Lafayette Drive, N.E.
Apt. 11
Atlanta 9, Georgia

Dear Maggie:

Thanks for your fine letter. It was so meaty and full of meaning that I was tempted for a moment to publish it as it was. Thanks for calling our attention to Benjamin Muse's Ten Years of Prelude. Mary had already learned of the book through the publisher and had written C. Vann Woodward asking him to review it. We have not heard from him as yet.

As for the Hodding Carter book, it is not too late for a review if you think the book worthy of attention. Perhaps a short--about 500 words--review would do the trick, but feel free to pass it by if that is your mood.

I would like to consider an article by you for our August or September issue--August would mean a July 1 deadline and September an August 1 deadline. Perhaps Birmingham might be our best bet, but why don't we keep it open for the moment and plan on talking to each other on the telephone in good season?

With best wishes,

Cordially,

M

Morris H. Rubin
Editor

bh

Final Exam
Schedule
Page 12

LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY IN NEW ORLEANS

The Driftwood

A reflection of action and change

Put A Little Fun In Your Life: Study!

Vol. V Monday, May 18, 1964 No. 29

280 Seniors Will Receive Bachelor's Degrees

★ ★ ★

Workshop Theatre Schedules First Summer Production

The Workshop Theatre has announced its plans to produce William Inge's "Picnic" this summer. Tryouts for the play will be held June 10 through June 11 at 3-5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. in the theatre.

"Picnic" won the Pulitzer Prize and the New York Drama Critics Award in 1953. Ralph Meeker, Kim Stanley, Eileen Heckart, Janice Rule, Paul Newman and Arthur O'Connell were in the original Broadway production directed by Joshua Logan. William Holden, Kim Novak and Rosalind Russell were featured in the film version.

The cast includes:

Helen Potts—widow about 50

Hal Carter—handsome ex-college football star

Millie Owens—sixteen

Madge Owens—unusually beautiful girl of 18

Flo Owens—widdow about 40

Rosemary—middle-aged schoolteacher

Alan—serious college senior

Irma and Christine—schoolteacher friends of Rosemary

Howard—middle-aged business-and a boarder who is a spinster school teacher. Into this congested female atmosphere there comes a young man of neither polish nor promise whose animal vitality seriously upsets the entire group.

The visitor is a most interesting character, child of parents who ignored him, self-conscious of his failings and his position behind the eight-ball.

One daughter, bored with being only a beauty, sacrifices her chances for a wealthy marriage for the excitement the visitor promises. Her sister finds her balance for the first time through a wayfarer's brief attention. And the spinster is stirred to make an issue out of the dangling courtship that has brightened her life in

Two hundred and eighty seniors will receive Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees at the third annual LSUNO Commencement Exercises on Friday, May 29.

The exercises, largest in the university's six-year history, will begin at 3 p.m. on the St. Peter street side of the Municipal auditorium.

Chancelor Hitt announced that President Hunter will confer the degrees. A number of members of the LSU Board of Supervisors will attend and participate in the official party.

The processional march by the LSU Brass Ensemble under the direction of Thomas Tyra, will begin promptly at 3 p.m. After the national anthem, the invocation will be given by Rev. Dr.

School Is Out

There is no school tomorrow. A one-day layoff before exams has been inaugurated, with Tuesday being dead day. Examinations begin on Wednesday. Check with the schedule on page 12.

★ ★ ★

JOHN J. McKEITHEN, Louisiana's new governor, beams broadly at his inauguration. McKeithen will address the graduating class.

Governor McKeithen To Address Graduates

By ANTOINE LAICHE

The Honorable John J. McKeithen will deliver the prin-

Flo Owens—widdow about 40

Rosemary—middle-aged schoolteacher

Alan—serious college senior

Irma and Christine—schoolteacher friends of Rosemary

Howard—middle-aged businessman

The action takes place in the joint back yards of two middle-aged, small town women, both long since deserted by their husbands.

One has an invalid mother and the other two maturing daughters chances for a wealthy marriage for the excitement the visitor promises. Her sister finds her balance for the first time through a wayfarer's brief attention. And the spinster is stirred to make an issue out of the dangling courtship that has brightened her life in a dreary, minor way.

W. Patrick Harrigan III, who will direct the production, emphasizes the need for older women to fill the mature roles. The production dates are set for July 22-25 with plans for re-opening the show in the fall.

There is no school tomorrow. A one-day layoff before exams has been inaugurated, with Tuesday being dead day. Examinations begin on Wednesday. Check with the schedule on page 12.

Students who plan to go out on a binge after finals are reminded that registration for summer school begins June 8.

Scholarly Merit Recognized At Annual Honors Convocation

William B. Brueggeman, a graduating senior at LSU in New Orleans, Thursday received the university's three highest awards in recognition of scholastic achievements by a student in the college of business administration.

Brueggeman and nearly 50 other LSUNO students were recognized at the university's annual Honors Day program.

The Society of Louisiana Certified Public Accountants award, the Delta Sigma Pi scholarship award, and the Business Administration Faculty Scholarship award, were all presented to Brueggeman for maintaining the highest scholastic average over a four-year period.

Randolph E. Trumbach and Edward D. White shared the College of Liberal Arts award for overall scholarly achievement and potential. Trumbach also received a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship.

The American Chemical Society's Outstanding Senior Award in Chemistry went to Robin W. Strickland, and the Student Louisiana Teachers' Association Academic award was presented to Mrs. Gladys W. Milliner.

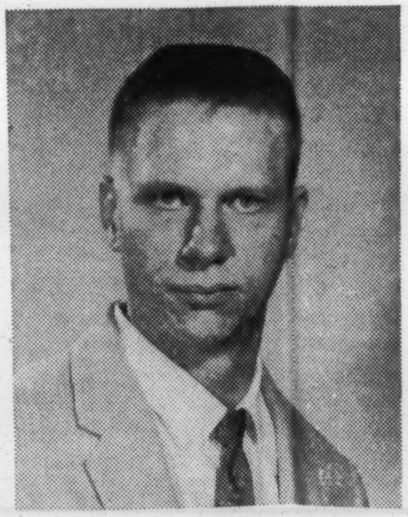
Other awards and their recipients are:

College of Education Faculty award: Nora Mary Lake.

Phi Chi Theta award: Jerlene Mancuso.

Delta Kappa Gamma award: Delores Marie Brady.

Philosophy Faculty award: Thomas P. Burkes and Edward Douglas White.



WILLIAM BRUEGGEMAN

Psychology Faculty award: Willie G. Braud.

Department of Foreign Languages awards: Susanne A. Ballard, French; F. Margaret Hodges, German.

Ella V. Schwing Freshman English Medal: Paul L. Seghers.

Louisiana Council of Teachers of English Award for Mastery in English: Gladys W. Milliner and

(Continued on page 11)

Julian B. Feibelman, Rabbi of Temple Sinai.

Before introducing Governor McKeithen, the principal speaker, Chancellor Hitt will deliver a brief report on the progress of LSUNO over the past six years.

After the principal address and the conferring of degrees, the exercises will close.

Those upon whom degrees are to be conferred are:

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

Bachelor of Arts

Charles Franklin Alexander, Brian David Ampolsk, Lawrence Stewart Audler, Margaret Dawson Baptist, John Spencer Batson, William Ben Benson, Glenn Michael Bourgeois, Willie Gilbert Braud, Jr., Charles Bulmer, Thomas Payne Thompson Burkes, Annabel Marion Caire, Frederic Gleason Carpenter, Clyde Taylor Casey, Jr., Joseph Crane Cassanova, Valery E. Cavalier, Jr., Judith Evans Chapman, James Alfred Charbonnet, Judith Clare Cohen, Gwendolyn Ann Coloton, Theresa Josephine Cosentino, Carl Norman Crane.

David Demestrio Diaz, Hugh Henry Doran, Jr., Emilie Frances Dours, Margaret Ann Dufour, Gene Francis Dunn, Robert Patrick Edel, L. Anita Evans, Joan Augusta Faust, Frank James Fury, Carol Geier, Gayle Ann Gonzales, Patricia Marie Guillaume, Charles Edgar Hamilton, Jr., Bonnie Jean Helmore, Joseph C. Ireland, Herman Albert Jacobi, Raymond Clarence Jacobs, Jude Joseph Johnson, George Haskell Jones, Ruth Barras Kirst, Kirkland Herman Kreutzig.

Antoine Anatole Laiche, Jr., Floyd John Beecher Ve Varr Lane, Henry A. Langhetee, Phyllis Valcour LaVizzo, John Michael Lazas III, J. Andrew Lennox III, David Leon Levy, Louis Edgard Madere, Jr., Louis John Marchiafava, Jr., Edward Porter May, Mary Jane McCauley, Patrick Jumel McClure, Ann Lee Meitzen, Merrill Y. Mey, Wilbert James Miller, Jo Ann Misuraca, Paul Charles Newfield III, Raymond Oscar Nussbaum, Emmanuel Nwafor Nweze, Dolores Margarita Obrador, Janet Eloise O'Rillion, Nona Shear Pailet.

Rhett Raymond Ralph, Thomas Harold Randell, Hallet Donald Rolls, Anne Shannon Rolufs, Gail Louise Sansone, Louis Harold Schultz, Barbara Ann Simon, Lorraine Smith, Llewelyn Joseph Soniat, Frank Jacob Speyerer, Jr., Beverly Cora Stephens, Richard Charles Stephens, Gordon William Stevenson, Jacqueline Virginia Taylor, Lance Lewis Teachworth, Teresa Gailey Teeslink, Randolph Earl Trumbach, Horace Merrill Wall II, Edward Douglas White, John Gerard White, Audrey Cecilia Yates.

(Continued on page 7)

To Address Graduates

By ANTOINE LAICHE

The Honorable John J. McKeithen will deliver the principal address at Commencement on May 29.

McKeithen took the oath of office as the 54th governor of Louisiana Tuesday. The 45-year-old former public service Commissioner was sworn in on the state capitol steps in Baton Rouge before a rain-drenched crowd of 5,000.

The governor, throughout his inaugural address, emphasized his reform position, seeking the industrial development of Louisiana.. He said, "Louisiana, in terms of natural resources, is one of the richest of these entire United States and our natural wealth is the envy of many of our neighbors. With improved government we can better encourage the development and the cultivation of that wealth."

"We must have more and better education for all our citizens . . . I am determined to project an image of a newly-awakened, newly-enlighted Louisiana, in which our native talent can flourish and to which new talent from elsewhere will be attracted."

Governor McKeithen summarized his aims: "My program, then, as your governor is to see that your government serves you honestly, prudently, efficiently and with imagination. It is to create a favorable climate for expanded private enterprise, and to see that the resulting public resources are invested wisely. We have a moral duty to posterity, and inescapably to ourselves . . . Won't you help me?"

John Julian McKeithen was born May 28, 1918 at Grayson, La., the son of Jesse Japheth and Agnes Eglin McKeithen. He attended elementary and high school in Grayson, where his father was a teacher, and later went to High Point (N.C.) College, a Methodist school, for two years. He then returned to Louisiana and entered LSU law school, where he received his degree.

In 1942 he married the former Marjorie Funderburk, and soon after joined the Army. After four years service, spent largely in the Pacific Theatre, he returned to Louisiana and began his legal career, practicing successfully in Columbia and Monroe.

In 1948, he ran for Representative from Caldwell Parish, and won. In 1952, he was an unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor, but political observers were much impressed with his ability as a stump speaker. In 1954, Mc Keithen decided to run for the Public Service Commission from the Third District, embracing most of north Louisiana, and won this race in the first primary. In 1960, he was re-elected.

In the 1963 gubernatorial race he was the first candidate in the field, but eventually found himself with nine opponents. Facing formidable opposition from several of these, he kept quietly and doggedly on the campaign trail, and in the first primary election finished second to de Lesseps Morrison, former mayor of New Orleans and Ambassador to the Organization of American States.

Although Morrison had amassed a tremendous lead over him in the first primary, McKeithen overcame the deficit, and on January 11 won the Democratic nomination by approximately 40,000 votes.

For the first time in modern Louisiana history, however, there was serious contention for the governorship by a Republican candidate, Charlton Lyons

(Continued on page 11)

We Want Our Sunshine

The nightmare has ended. The sun spots have faded.

No year could have been more irritating nor more productive in the life of this university. Construction mania seized the campus and inflicted its worst torments upon us. The weather couldn't have been more retarding to the building program.

But LSUNO will soon cash its post-dated check. The advent of the 1964-65 academic year will bring completion of the bulk of the landscaping and utilities distribution-site development systems, extended use of the new library and 2,000 eager freshmen.

THE DRIFTWOOD will continue to prod, cajole, incriminate and blast anyone we feel is not aiding this university in every way he can. We will consider ourselves failures if we cannot move a significant portion of our stagnant studentry.

Again the faculty turn-over will be significant. Salaries are inadequate. Many teachers find themselves without the prospect of a raise. Others make a name here and travel on. We cannot blame them, but we must continue to fight against the "exodus."

With another faculty renaissance, we offer our wish that this change will bring in the caliber of instructor this university must have to maintain its lofty academic image.

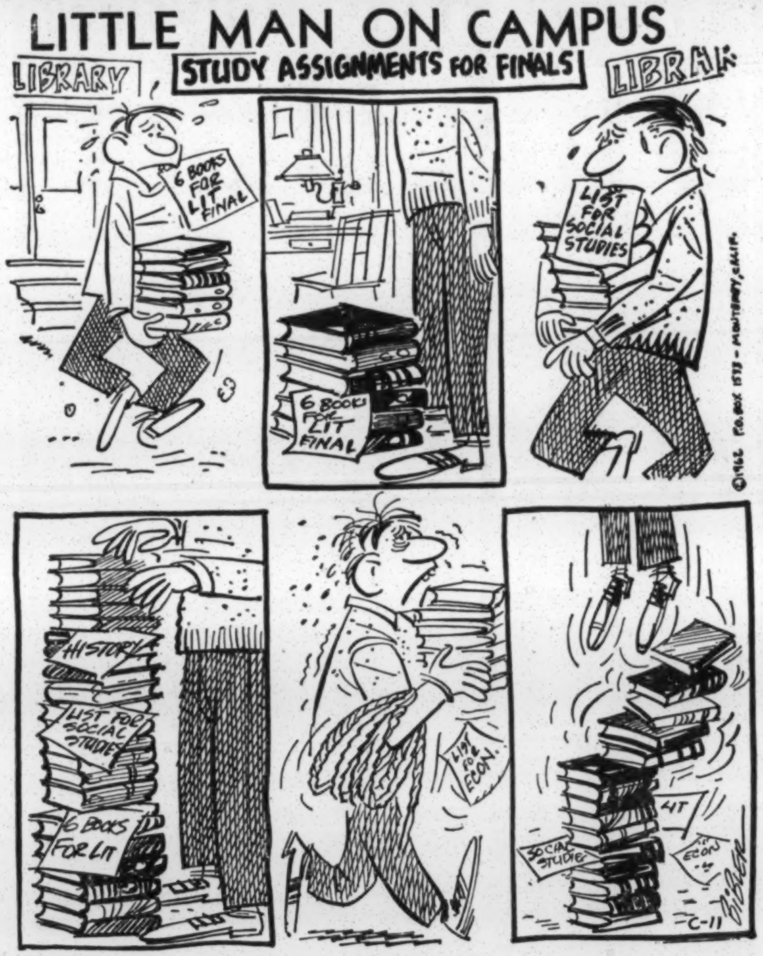
We cannot understand how the legislature could possibly slash funds for operation and capital improvements without choking off the greatest boon to education in this state since LSU was founded in 1860.

In the Biennium report released by the LSU Board of Supervisors, capital development needs were emphasized. "The need is so critical that if we had $50 million to use right now we would still be two years behind," the report says.

LSUNO needs $12,375,000 for a classroom building, union, administration building, gymnasium and physical education building, art, drama and music building, operations and maintenance building, engineering-mathematics building, library completion, science building addition and site development.

"We are hopeful that a lasting impression has been made; that all Louisianians understand that their university can ill afford to suffer a relapse of financial anemia."

We again assert that LSUNO should be given the Leroy



Shifting Sands

Sandman Closes The Year With Hopeful Predictions

By KIRK CARNEY

It is customary at the end of the year to list the accomplishments achieved during the year. Let us now, however, reverse tradition and examine our failures.

On the university level we have fallen even farther behind in our building program, still lacking from phase I, a general classroom building, an administration building, and a student union.

The city has neglected to rid the area of the winged pests and we still have a polluted lake. The streets, which are in a constant state of being re-

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the Editor are encouraged by THE DRIFTWOOD and will be printed whenever possible. They should not exceed 300 words.

Letters must be signed and accompanied by the contributor's return address for the purpose of certification. An unsigned letter will receive no consideration. If the writer desires, his name may be deleted, but the deletion will depend on content and will not be granted automatically.

No partisanship will be shown in the printing of letters. All conforming to the above policy will be printed except when lack of space prohibits.

THE DRIFTWOOD reserves the right to reject any letter because of content or character.

* * *

JFK Memorial

Sir:

I would like to thank the following people for their special help in establishing the John F. Kennedy Memorial Oratorical Contest: Harold Koretzky and Henry Tebbe, Jerlene Mancuso and the entire student council (the vote was unanimous); Kenny Carter for guiding the bill through the Council, Jim Dugan for giving it a favorable Committee recommendation, Thomas Barrow for his support as Morale Commissioner, Shields Stutts and Jerry Haddican for their valuable advice, Rosemary Nelson for offering to help with the making of the banner, Mary Derby, Susan Wall, Maggie Dowd, and Dianne Cavepa for helping to circulate the petition, the 456 people who signed the petition, Fr. Dauenhauer, Mrs. Peery and Mr. Percy for their moral support, and anyone else who deserves special thanks for special help.

The last "catch all" phrase is not included simply for form; so many people helped or offered to help with this project that I cannot remember them all by name.

I hope now that each student and maintenance building, engineering-mathematics building, library completion, science building addition and site development.

"We are hopeful that a lasting impression has been made; that all Louisianians understand that their university can ill afford to suffer a relapse of financial anemia."

We again assert that LSUNO should be given the Leroy Johnson site in toto. Since Governor McKeithen and the majority of the legislature recognize our needs, we see no reason for the Board to waste its or the state's time by putting the move off any longer.

To the graduating seniors, we offer our sincere congratulations on a job well-done. A degree from LSUNO, earned as it is through sweat, blood and tears can only make each graduate point with pride to his association with the university.

You can expect next year's DRIFTWOOD to intensify its drive for a better university first and an All-American newspaper, second. To meet both these demands, this tabloid must double, even triple the size of its staff. Won't you help us?

And, at the risk of going sentimental, I wish to personally extend my gratitude for the privilege of serving as editor-in-chief of this publication during the past year.

Without you, the students, faculty and administration, this NEWSpaper would be nothing but BLANKpaper. Without a productive staff and professional advice, we couldn't have pasted down our first dummy.

The University Community extends deepest sympathy to Mr. Lamar S. Cooper on the death of his mother, Mrs. T. W. Cooper of Glenmora, La. Mrs. Cooper passed away May 13 at her Glenmora home.

The Driftwood

Issued every week except during vacation and examination periods by the students of LSUNO. The views expressed are those of the editorial staff and do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty or administration.

ANDREW R. KREUTZ, Editor-In-Chief
WILLIAM K. CARNEY, Managing Editor
JACK WHITEHEAD, Business Manager
GARY DYSON, Feature Editor
VINCENT PEULER, Sports Editor
ELLIOTT SEYMOUR, News Editor

ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS
ACP MEMBER

Address all correspondence to The Driftwood, LSUNO, Lakefront, New Orleans, La. 70122. Phone 288-3161, extension 16.

Reporters: Gerard Haddican, Bonnie Doyle, Ron Bocage, Arnold Inniss, Kathy Boisseau, Gail Fayard, Lili Sikorski, Butler Nelson, Don Donnelly, Cynthia Lees

Cartoonists: Richard LeCorgne, Kim Chalmers, George Brumat
Subscription rate $2:00 per year. Write for Advertising Schedule.
Represented by National Advertising Service, New York, N. Y.
Printed by Simmons Press Inc.

however, reverse tradition and examine our failures.

On the university level we have fallen even farther behind in our building program, still lacking from phase I, a general classroom building, an administration building, and a student union.

The city has neglected to rid the area of the winged pests and we still have a polluted lake. The streets, which are in a constant state of being repaired, never seem to be completed.

State-wide, matters are hardly any brighter. We have been promised many improvements without a tax increase, but where will the money come from? Down in Plaquemines, Leander is just as belligerent as ever, and CORE has kindly consented to retaliate with demonstrations this summer.

On the national scene we are faced with racial problems every time we turn around, including sit-ins, stand-ins, kneel-ins, lie-ins, shop-ins, stall-ins, etc. (It has been suggested that the NAACP protest segregated cemeteries next and demonstrate with organized 'die-ins.')

And if domestic matters appear troublesome, foreign affairs make the former seem mild indeed. We are still at odds with Panama; tension in Viet-Nam increases day-by-day; and new headaches appear in Cuba as faithfully as the sun rises.

Of course, this is the dark side of the picture, but it does point up that there is much room for improvement and a great need for some changes. Since predictions are also customary as the year draws to a close, I will predict that many changes are close at hand.

With the new state administration coming into office, LSUNO's future looks brighter than ever before. We certainly have the support of Governor McKeithen and the majority of the legislators.

The city's mayorality race is still two years off, but several men are shaping up to be more than mere ribron-cutters—these including Councilman Joseph Di Rosa and District Attorney Jim Garrison.

If only a small portion of what has been promised to Louisiana by the new administration becomes a reality, the state faces a period of great prosperity. We have faith in McKeithen and wish him success in his administration.

The nation will continue to experience much racial strife for the next several years, but, due to popular demands, it will begin to decrease by 1965. Barry Goldwater will be nominated by the Republicans with Governor William Scranton as his running mate. They will lose to President Johnson and Senator Hubert Humphrey in a close race in 1964, but will come back strong in 1968 and win.

The outlook in foreign affairs is the dimmest of all. With the present administration's views, Communism will continue to spread, but this is probably necessary before the American people recognize the real threat which the Communists pose.

In conclusion, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you, the students of LSUNO, for all of the support you have given me (both positive and negative) during the year.

special help.

The last "catch all" phrase is not included simply for form; so many people helped or offered to help with this project that I cannot remember them all by name.

I hope now that each student in this school will help to make this project a complete success in the years to come.

SAM CARUSO

* * *

Where Doth It Lie?

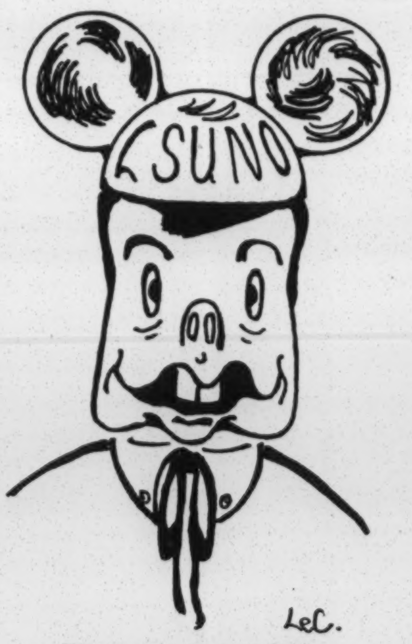
Sir:

The question is: should the burden of proof fall upon the candidate in announcing their candidacy? This is especially true if the candidate is running on an independent ticket.

If THE DRIFTWOOD staff finds out that two candidates have not turned their pictures in, shouldn't they proceed on the assumption that these two independents aren't familiar with their rights. I say yes!

THE DRIFTWOOD staff, in order to be entirely fair, should afford equal time to all the candidates running. THE DRIFTWOOD staff could make an announcement to all the candidates that they have this right.

JACQUELYN KILGORE



THE RAT FINK—
SMILE, THINGS COULD BE WORSER.

'Rights Tactics On Capitol Hill

By GARY DYSON

The Civil Rights Bill is now in its 11th week in the Senate, and still there are no definite signs that debate will end soon and voting begin. The chief "rights" strategist so far has been the Senate whip Hubert Humphrey, and thus far he has found that shutting off the Southern filibuster will take some doing. The 67 votes necessary to invoke closure and stop the Southerners in the midst of their conversation simply have not been mustered at this time.

Senator Humphrey's tactics have been obvious from the start. At the present time, the majority whip can count only 60 of the 67 votes necessary to stop the filibuster. The liberal senator from Minnesota must then find a way to entice seven or eight more solons into helping him muffle the loquacious South. His methods thus far to achieve this end have been three-fold.

Humphrey is counting a great deal on public sentiment. As the debate runs on the Minnesota Senator hopes to impress on the American public the fact that the Dixie solons are wasting the nation's time with their filibuster tactics. The constant plea for mail and speeches on the part of church groups and private individuals objecting to the talkathon isn't just a lot of political oratory. Humphrey would like to see the Senate's Southern contingent bombarded with stacks and stacks of mail—an event which would undoubtedly weaken the position of civil rights objectors.

Secondly, and perhaps more important, Humphrey is hoping that the extended debate will have an adverse effect on those members of the Senate who are as of now uncommitted. Many states, especially those with a comparatively small Negro population, don't have a deep personal interest in the civil rights struggle. Humphrey hopes, however, that Senators from such states will feel the need to take up other phases of the nation's business, and thus vote to shut off the filibuster.

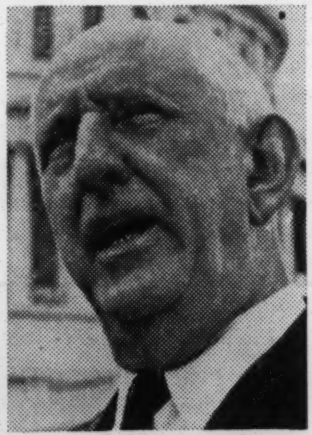
The third tactic ommendations to be palatable in spite of his distaste for compromise. Thus, in the weeks to come, Dirkson and Humphrey will be putting the bill in a form more to the Illinois Senator's liking.

Richard Russell, Senator from Georgia and the leader of the Southern foes to the rights bill, has a much easier job than Hubert Humphrey. Russell has been through struggles of this kind before and has his 18 comrades organized into three platoons. This guarantees a fresh crew of men on the Senate floor at all times. Because of the smaller number of men involved, the Southern opposition is much better organized than the civil rights advocates.



RICHARD RUSSELL

Russell would of course like to talk the bill to death—not permitting any votes on the measure and having nothing at all by way of civil rights legislation find its way to the desk of President Johnson. Because of the strength of the bill's supporters, however, Russell may not be able to completely stymy civil rights progress. But if debate goes on long enough, the initial zeal of the majority will diminish and the going won't be so tough. When this happens the Southerners can undoubtedly force the majority into a dramatic weakening of the bill—which may be all the Southerners can hope for this time.

Russell also hopes that the debate will serve to bring what he terms the "wrongs" of the bill to the attention of the public. In doing so the Georgia Senator is looking for a rise in public opinion against the bill. To make resentment seem more pronounced, right-wing organizations have launched

Student in the News

Driftwood Salutes Bonnie Helmore As Year's Final Student-in-News

By RON BOCAGE

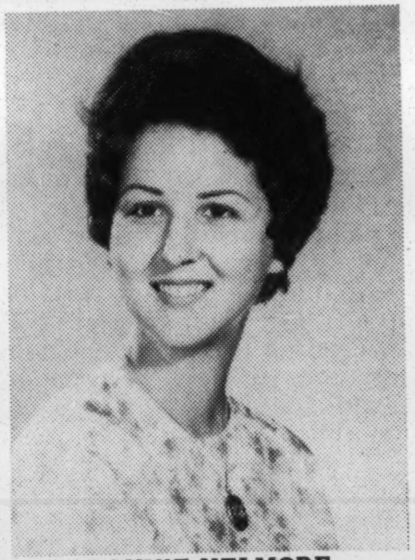
In this year's last student salute, THE DRIFTWOOD recognizes Bonnie Helmore as a deserving Student in the News. Bonnie was born in Louisville, Kentucky, but came to live in New Orleans in 1951. She attended Benjamin Franklin High School, and after graduation, she attended St. Mildred's College in Toronto, Canada for one year.

In September of 1961 Bonnie came to LSUNO. During her stint here, Bonnie has worked as a secretary for the Student Government Association. She has been a member of the Canterbury Club and a member of the LSUNO Chorus during her senior year. While in New Orleans, Bonnie has been active in the Canadian Club in the city. Bonnie's parents are native Canadians.

Bonnie's hobbies are sewing, painting, and choral work. In addition, Miss Helmore is a music lover, preferring the classical tones of Bach and baroque music. Bonnie also has a wide interest in the many facets of Canadian culture.

After graduation Bonnie will continue at her position at the Shell Oil Company. She intends to marry and eventually to enroll in another school to pursue her interest in commercial art. Bonnie's 1.9 overall average, and her English major while at LSUNO should certainly assure her success in future pursuits.

THE DRIFTWOOD is happy to salute Miss Bonnie Helmore—a most deserving student.



BONNIE HELMORE

Chambers Awarded TU Fellowship

Ethelyn Chambers, 23-year-old senior, has been awarded a NDEA fellowship worth almost $10,000. This three-year stipend will finance her study leading to a doctorate in anthropology at Tulane.

The blonde-haired, Warren Easton graduate began LSUNO in 1962. She had attended Southwestern for a year and a half.

Ethelyn holds an astounding 2.79 overall average.

Driftwords

Secondly, and perhaps more important, Humphrey is hoping that the extended debate will have an adverse effect on those members of the Senate who are as of now uncommitted. Many states, especially those with a comparatively small Negro population, don't have a deep personal interest in the civil rights struggle. Humphrey hopes, however, that Senators from such states will feel the need to take up other phases of the nation's business, and thus vote to shut off the filibuster.

HUBERT HUMPHREY

The third tactic at Senator Humphrey's disposal is compromise. If a rights bill is to be passed Mr. Humphrey is faced with the possibility that it may have to be weakened, or at least modified. Seeking to compromise the bill, so as to gain votes to halt debate, poses some problems for Humphrey, however. In the first place, Hubert Humphrey was very insistent that there would be no compromises in the opening days of the debate. Thus, he has to lose face somewhat in advocating a compromise. Moreover, many house members demand that the Senate pass a strong civil rights bill, and not a watered down version. The House did its part in passing a strong bill, and many feel that the Senate should do the same.

As the debate drags on longer and longer, it has now become quite apparent that Hubert Humphrey is ready to make some concessions. And the man to whom concessions are now being made very rapidly is the Senate minority leader, Everett Dirkson of Illinois. Dirkson is Humphrey's man of the hour because the Illinois Senator might be able to supply the Democratic leadership with enough support so that a demand to limit debate could be made.

Dirkson's proposals thus far have been confined mainly to the enforcement provisions of the civil rights bill. One of his major proposals has been to drop the attorney general's power to sue for opening public accomodations. This would mean that suits could be filed by individuals who felt that public accomodations were being denied them on account of race. Also, the Republican leader has made recommendations to the effect that jury trials be permitted to defendants in all except the most minor of civil rights cases.

Mr. Humphrey, or perhaps I should say Mr. Humphrey at the suggestion of President Johnson, has found the Dirkson rec-gress. But if debate goes on long enough, the initial zeal of the majority will diminish and the going won't be so tough. When this happens the Southerners can undoubtedly force the majority into a dramatic weakening of the bill—which may be all the Southerners can hope for this time.

Russell also hopes that the debate will serve to bring what he terms the "wrongs" of the bill to the attention of the public. In doing so the Georgia Senator is looking for a rise in public opinion against the bill. To make resentment seem more pronounced, right-wing organizations have launched massive mail attacks on the civil rights proposals.

What Negro leaders will do during the hot summer while the bill is still being debated is not wholly clear. It is evident however that demonstrations will be even more plentiful in '64 than they were in '63. CORE National head James Farmer expressed this view in a recent interview on NBC's "Meet the Press." To Negroes, it seems that demonstrations were the weapons with which they forced the rest of the country to recognize their plight, and demonstrations in the end will force President Johnson and the Congress to produce a meaningful piece of civil rights legislation.

Pictured above are several Negro leaders as they discuss plans for action in the Summer of '64.

At this writing it appears that the Civil Rights Bill, with some compromises, will pass the Congress. The efforts for passage will be long and tedious though, extending well into the summer. Southerners will no doubt filibuster the bill to the end, but after the Senate minority leader has been dealt with, the votes will be present to force the Dixie contingent to be close-mouthed.

The bill grew out of the anger and frustration of 1963. The Kennedy administration initiated the legislation, and President Johnson has obligated himself to see it through. Since its beginning, the bill has been bitterly assailed, but nevertheless has been shaped and guided by men such as Congressmen Halleck, and Cellers in the House and Javits and Humphrey in the Senate. And, finally in the summer of '64, Congress will reply to the demands of '63—the final tones being uttered not in austere oratory, but rather in the mellifluous comic notes of a Senator from Illinois.

to marry and eventually to enroll in another school to pursue her interest in commercial art. Bonnie's 1.9 overall average, and her English major while at LSUNO should certainly assure her success in future pursuits.

THE DRIFTWOOD is happy to salute Miss Bonnie Helmore—a most deserving student.

Ethelyn Chambers, 23-year-old senior, has been awarded a NDEA fellowship worth almost $10,000. This three-year stipend will finance her study leading to a doctorate in anthropology at Tulane.

The blonde-haired, Warren Easton graduate began LSUNO in 1962. She had attended Southwestern for a year and a half.

Ethelyn holds an astounding 2.79 overall average.

Driftwords

Did you hear about: The man who was so accustomed to having things done for him that he married a widow with three children?

* * *

And then there was the Scot who called his girl to ask what night she was free.

* * *

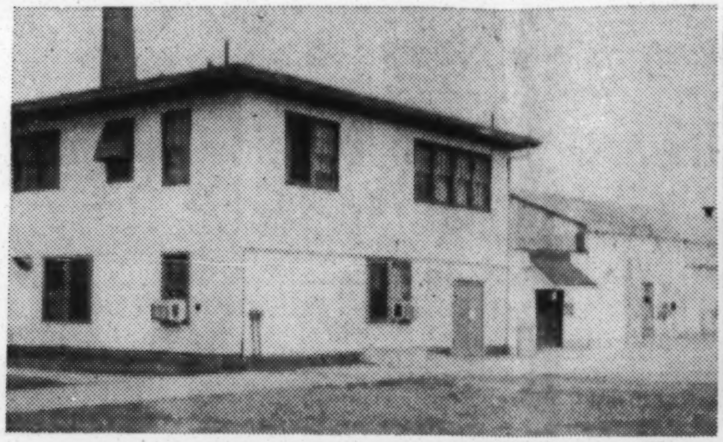
Mary was a pretty girl and loved to pick pretty flowers. One day she went to the park and picked lots of flowers. She also watched the pretty birds fly all around. Then she went home and gave the flowers to her mother who liked them very much. (Now, if that gets cut I'll resign.)

STUDENTS 18 AND OVER

Interviews now being arranged for students seeking summer employment. Opportunity to join other students in a proven successful scholarship program backed by 89 year old firm. To those who qualify our program offers:

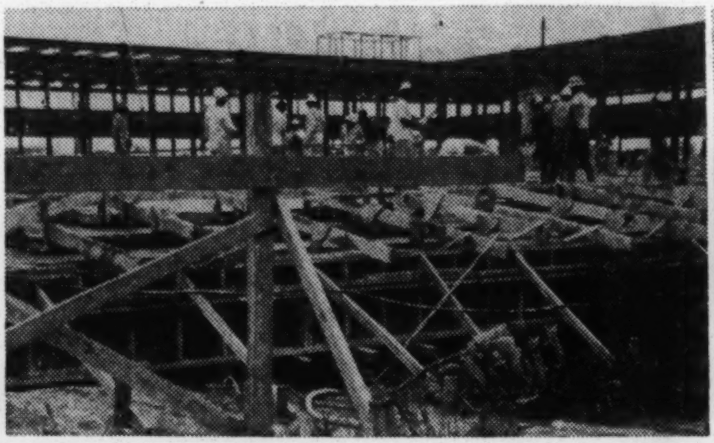
1. $97 per week salary with opportunity for more
2. Executive management training
3. All expense paid trip to Europe
4. One of 15 — $1,000 scholarships
5. Recommended background work for post graduation
6. Up to 13 weeks continuous employment guaranteed

Men accepted for a similar program last summer averaged $153.26 per week. These jobs may develop into part-time or full-time positions after September. For appointment call Mr. Burch at JA 2-6347.



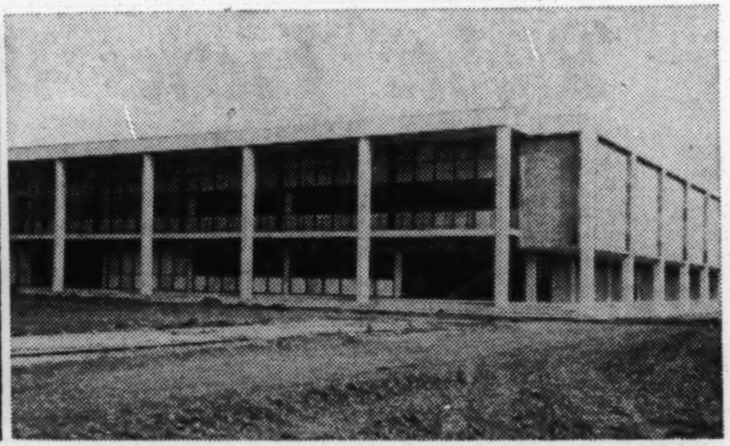
—Kreutz

THE "WORLD'S UGLIEST"—LSUNO's first library that served since 1958 will soon be vacated for the new building.



—Carney

CONSTRUCTION PROGRESS shown on new library as of September, 1963. Work was begun in August, 1962.



—Carney

THE COMPLETED STRUCTURE, which is capable of housing 470,000 volumes and seating 1518 students, will be ready for use June 1.

LSUNO Gets New Library To Replace 'World's Ugliest' June 1

The "world's ugliest" will be no more. LSUNO's new $2.5 million library will be ready for occupancy June 1, according to Lamar S. Cooper, comptroller. The mass exodus is expected to be accomplished May 28-31.

Replacing a make-shift warehouse inherited from the U. S. Navy, the new structure will be a significant step forward in developing a former air base site into one of the most attractive academic environments in the nation.

The building is in keeping with the architectural style of the campus master plan. Making use of expansive overhangs, slender vertical columns, and galleries with ironwork, the style may be described as a contemporary expression of Louisiana traditions. The supporting framework is steel, and the exterior walls are of glass and brick. The building has been designed by Robert L. Stephan and Associates of Lafayette, Louisiana.

In addition to the present two-story building, two other stories

The first floor has been completed. It will contain some 201,000 plus volumes within a 60,000 square foot area. As a two-story structure, it will contain approximately 120,000 sq. ft. and will hold some 470,000 volumes. It will seat 1,518 readers. Eighty-five per cent of these readers will be seated in individual study carrels.

The university was fortunate in obtaining the services of Dr. Keyes Metcalf, Librarian emeritus of the Harvard College library system, who is one of the world's outstanding library planning consultants. In accordance with Dr. Metcalf's suggestions, the LSUNO facility will employ an open stack system, organized around the basic divisions of humanities, social sciences, and sciences. Each academic division wil have its own office for library administration, and each will conduct its own reserve book program.

Government documents will be kept in a special section. Smoking areas, resembling lounges, will be conveniently located. There will be four seminar rooms, seating

There will also be four talking studies, for the use of students who wish to engage in group studies. In addition, there will be a microfilm room for near-print-type materials, a rare book room, a micro-card room, and a special browsing section. The lobby will feature display cases for special exhibits.

Faculty members will have 13 special studies at their disposal, each with a bookcase, drawers, and shelves. The building will be completely air-conditioned. At the time of opening, the librarian, Dr. John M. Goudeau, expects to have a collection of some 250,000 or 275,000 volumes. Until such time as books fill up the total capacity of the building, the excess space can be used for classrooms. Fourteen classrooms are included in the design.

There will be, within the building, various check-out points. Full

President John F. Kennedy Cited By Oratorical Contest

The Student Council has created a memorial to the late President John F. Kennedy by establishing an annual oratorical contest. The idea for the contest was proposed by Sam Caruso, a senior majoring in history.

Caruso planned the memorial and submitted the idea to the Student Council for consideration. The Student Council approved the proposal in the form of a permanent act.

The act states that the memorial contest is dedicated to the late president in recognition of his great speaking ability. All students enrolled in LSUNO, regardless of the number of hours they are carrying, will be eligible to compete in the contest.

The speeches will deal with topics of national or international importance. A banner to be hung at the contest will read, "John F. Kennedy Memorial Oratorical Contest—Let the word go forth from this time and place . . . That the torch fice of the Student Government Association, and the names of the winners of the contest will be engraved on the plaque yearly.

The act passed the Student Council without a dissenting vote, and it is now being considered by the president of SGA.

The supporting framework is steel, and the exterior walls are of glass and brick. The building has been designed by Robert L. Stephan and Associates of Lafayette, Louisiana.

In addition to the present two-story building, two other stories are to be added in the future.

for library administration, and each will conduct its own reserve book program.

Government documents will be kept in a special section. Smoking areas, resembling lounges, will be conveniently located. There will be four seminar rooms, seating approximately 20 people each.

of the building, the excess space can be used for classrooms. Fourteen classrooms are included in the design.

There will be, within the building, various check-out points. Full co-operation by the student body in taking proper care of books and equipment is desired.

The building is certain to be an architectural asset to both the campus and the lakefront, as well as an inspiration to students and an attractive lure to scholars.

topics of national or international importance. A banner to be hung at the contest will read, "John F. Kennedy Memorial Oratorical Contest—Let the word go forth from this time and place . . . That the torch has passed to a new generation of Americans."

The act provides that a Morale Commission Committee will be set up in order to handle the arrangements for the contest. A $25 savings bond will be presented to the first place winner, and those placing in the top three positions will receive certificates.

The contest will be held at a date as close as possible to the anniversary of the assassination of the late President. A plaque will be placed in the of-the president of SGA.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

Circle K Holds Installation Banquet; District Governor Delivers Address

William Short, newly-elected governor of the LaMissTenn Circle K District, delivered the keynote address at the annual LSUNO Circle K banquet held recently.

Short emphasized the significance of Circle K as an organization dedicated to strengthening the democratic, American way of life. He went on to say that the best way to achieve this is through service to the university, the nation, and the world.

Governor Bill then gave a brief history of Circle K, which was founded in 1936, but not officially chartered by Kiwanis until 1955. Short cited the growth experienced by the district in the last ten years. He also stressed the important role to be played by Circle K in the coming years. The club honored him with a standing oration.

Dean E. Frank Massingill was presented with two plaques, one from the district (for which he was director) and the other from the LSUNO club (for which he is faculty advisor), for outstanding service and dedication.

The officers for the 1964-65 year were formally installed by Dean Massingill. The officers include Michael Kettenring, president; Bowman Brach, vice-president; Louis Chapaton, corresponding secretary; Kirk Carney, recording secretary; and John Hauslauer, treasurer.

Kettenring, in his first official act as president, presented a plaque to Henry Kirsch, out-going president for his excellent work this year. Under Kirsch's leadership the organization received the "outstanding club" award at the district convention in Jackson, Miss.

Included among the guests were Mr. David Nelson, president of the Greater Gentilly Kiwanis Club, and his wife; Mr. J. J. Fraychinaud, Kiwanis sponsor for the LSUNO club and his wife; Lt. Robert Cricchio, past president of the club; and Miss Carroll Ditta, club sweetheart.

At the banquet eight new members were installed into the group.

———o———

Dr. Reinecke Elected Marketing President

Dr. John A. Reinecke, associate professor and chairman of the department of management and marketing, has been elected president of the New Orleans chapter of the American Marketing Association.

Dr. Reinecke was elected at a recent meeting of the group at International House. He succeeds Dr. Clinton Phillips, acting dean of the college of business administration at Tulane.

A native of New Orleans, Dr. Reinecke was awarded a B.B.A. degree from Loyola and M.B.A. from Tulane. He joined the LSUNO faculty in September 1959 after receiving a doctorate in business administration from the University of Illinois.

Other officers include Edward B. Randolph, William B. Reilly corp., vice-president; Merlin M. Warden, New Orleans Public Service Inc., secretary; and William P. McHugh, Robert Kottwitz Advertising Agency, treasurer.

ROBERT SMITH

Chemistry Club Elects New Officers

Officers for the 1964-65 academic year were elected at the last meeting of Chi Sigma, the Chemistry Club of LSUNO. The new officers for the coming session are: Bob Smith, president; Bob Towns, vice-president; Gene Schaeffer, secretary; and Chris Foret, treasurer.

The group plans a party for graduating seniors in the club and a trip to the Michóud Plant in the beginning of the fall semester. Anyone desiring to join the club must be enrolled in the Science Division, have a one point average in all chemistry courses taken and an overall one point average.

Summer-Study Scholarship Awarded LSUNO Graduate

Karl M. Petersen, Jr., a graduate of LSUNO, is among four south Louisiana college students who have been awarded summer-study scholarships to Great Britain by the New Orleans branch of the English-Speaking Union.

Petersen, a 1963 graduate of LSUNO, received a National Defense Education Act fellowship for graduate study at LSU Baton Rouge.

Other recipients are Miss Lynne A. Lagarde, a junior at St. Mary's Dominican College; Charles A. Suhor, a graduate of Loyola and the Catholic University of America; and Miss Judith Worley, a senior at Southeastern Louisiana College in Hammond.

Dr. Cresap S. Watson, chairman of the Department of English and Speech and president of the E-SU, said that, although the summer programs are designed primarily for graduate students or persons aleady holding a bachelor's degree, undergraduates with outstanding records are accepted.

Dr. Watson further stated that the scholarships are financed each year through E-SU sponsored flights to England as well as through donations of members.

Miss Lagarde and Miss Worley will study "Twentieth Century English Literature" at the University of London, while Petersen and Suhor will go to Oxford for lectures on "History, Literature and the Arts of Seventeenth-Century England."

STEER INN

MALTS SHAKES
STEERBURGERS
6101 Elysian Fields Ave.
PICK UP ORDERS
282-2255
Sandwiches of all kinds

Graduate Courses In Business To Be Offered In September

LSUNO has announced the inauguration of a program leading to the Master of Business Administration degree. The new degree program will begin in September. The announcement was made by Dr. John E. Altazan, dean of the college of BA.

Some of the courses to be offered during the first year are managerial accounting, research methods, intermediate microeconomic theory, a seminar in marketing, and foundation work for students holding the bachelor's degree in areas other than business.

Students planning to enter in the fall will be required to take an admission test for graduate study in business to be administered July 11. Applications for admission may be secured from the office of the dean of academic affairs and coordinator of graduate work on the LSUNO campus.

The new program will be conducted and administered by the LSUNO business administration faculty.

Dean Altazan said the decision by the university administration to enter graduate work in business resulted from a study of educational needs in the New Orleans area.

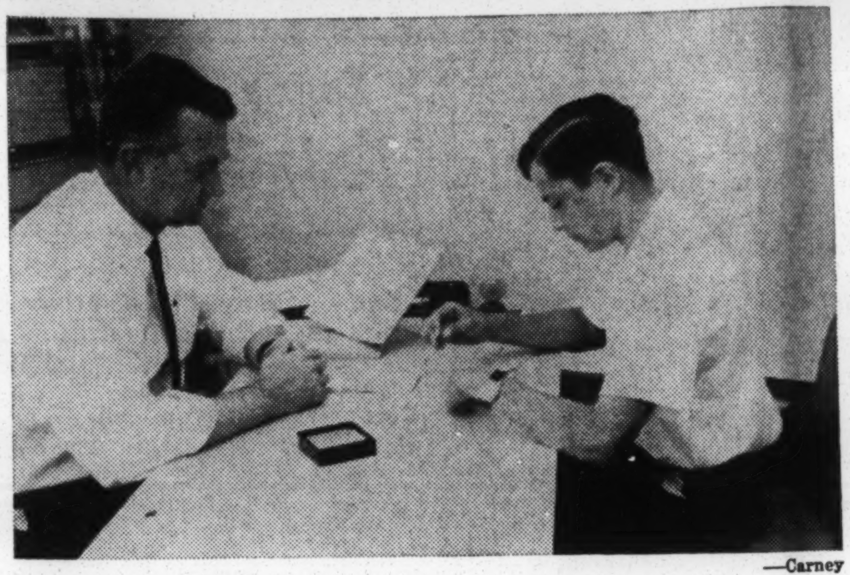
"Increased emphasis on graduate work in business administration is one of the striking developments in higher education in the post-war year," the report said. "Not only have more students from the undergraduate business schools been seeking advanced degrees but a substantial number of persons with undergraduate degrees in other areas are taking graduate work in business administation as well."

The report said an increasing number of persons in search of promotion in industry and government are returning to the university campus for graduate degrees since it is generally recognized that a baccalaureate degree is no longer sufficient preparation for superior positions in accounting, economics, marketing, management, finance, and business research.

"These developments," the report continued, "are a natural outcome of the increase in size and complexity of modern industry and government. The demands upon management in business and in public service are certain to increase in intensity in the future.

"In addition to meeting the needs of the community, LSUNO also faces the challenge of providing its own undergraduates with the opportunity to continue their education. A number of LSUNO graduates went on to graduate school and many of these would have preferred to remain at LSUNO for advanced work.

"LSUNO, as the only segment of the state university in this area, and its college of business administration have an obligation to the people of Greater New Orleans to provide this vital service," the report concluded.



—Carney

DAVID K. FOOSHEE (left), clinical psychologist in the Special Education Center is shown giving the therapy to a young student.

Education Center Completes First Year; Expansion Seen For Summer Months

By ARNOLD INNISS

In this year, the first for LSUNO's Special Education Center, the center has enjoyed tremendous success. The success, however, has also pointed out the need to increase this well-trained staff.

According to Dr. Alfred Stern, director of the center, the school had received approximately 300 referrals by May 1. About 150 are completed and about 50 are in process. The remainder will be handled during the summer months and carry over to next school year.

By January the center already had as many cases as could be conveniently handled. However, since that time, the staff has taken a number of special cases which required immediate attention.

Dr. Stern cited plans to provide graduate teaching this summer, with the first area of training concerning the men-

Garrison Blasts Outgoing State Administration

In a recent speech before Pi Lambda Sigma Legal Fraternity District Attorney Jim Garrison rapped Governor Davis, Attorney General Jack Gremillion, and the Pardon and Parole Boards for their handling of matters such as the Martin and Hebert case.

He said the establishment winked at armed robbery, murder, narcotics peddling, and the like, but the one thing that they could not tolerate was defamation.

He expressed disapproval of the entire Davis Administration, calling it a "day-to-day experiment in malfeasance."

Garrison concluded on an optimistic note, stating that those who felt that John McKeithen would be just another Governor in the Jimmy Davis tradition were in for a surprise.

TAKE
HIGH Style
HONORS
on graduation day!
AUTHENTIC

tion is one of the striking developments in higher education in the post-war year," the report said. "Not only have more students from the undergraduate business schools been seeking advanced degrees but a substantial number of persons with undergraduate degrees in other areas are taking graduate work in business administation as well."

The report said an increasing number of LSUNO graduates went on to graduate school and many of these would have preferred to remain at LSUNO for advanced work.

"LSUNO, as the only segment of the state university in this area, and its college of business administration have an obligation to the people of Greater New Orleans to provide this vital service," the report concluded.

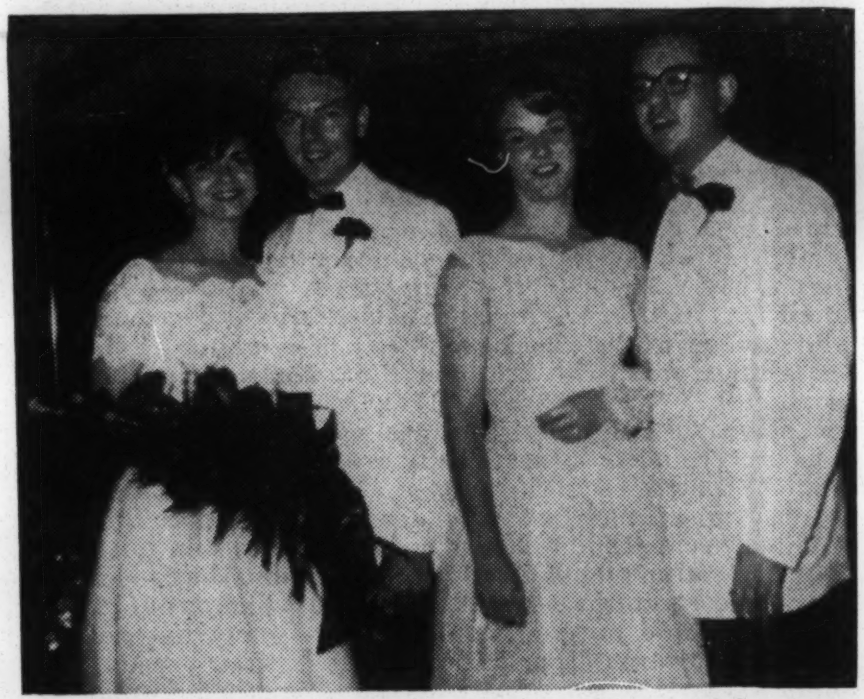
mer months and carry over to next school year.

By January the center already had as many cases as could be conveniently handled. However, since that time, the staff has taken a number of special cases which required immediate attention.

Dr. Stern cited plans to provide graduate teaching this summer, with the first area of training concerning the mentally retarded. He also hopes to add additional courses as needs and staff permit. This year members of the staff have participated as speakers before a number of community organizations, in an effort to inform the public of the services and programs of the center.

"The work we are doing," Dr. Stern said, "is educationally oriented. Efforts have been made to harmonize school-home relationships. We have received excellent cooperation from both parents and schools."

In reference to the year's work, Dr. Stern said, "It has been a very stimulating and challenging year for all of us, and we hope to be of continuing assistance to the parents and schools in the parishes which we serve." The center accommodates the parishes of Jefferson, St. Bernard, and Plaquemines.



MISS EMMY GALLOWAY, left, new TKE sweetheart, with her escort; Miss Gayle Kountz, last year's sweetheart, and Mike McNulty, TKE president.

Galloway Chosen TKE Sweetheart

The Red Carnation Ball of Tau Kappa Epsilon was the scene of the crowning of Emmy Galloway as the sweetheart for the coming year. Miss Galloway is in Junior Division and is a member of the Order of Dianna, an affiliate organization to TKE.

Miss Gayle Kountz, the sweetheart of 1963-64, presented Miss Galloway with a bouquet of red carnations, the fraternity flower.

Also included in the program was the presentation by Mike McNulty of a plaque for outstanding service during the past year to Gene Dunn, the past president. The presentation was made on behalf of the entire chapter.

The ball was held in the Lynn Park Country Club and decorations were made by the Order of Dianna.

Seven Kettles Restaurant

6325 Elysian Fields Ave.

Daily Lunches 55c - 75c

Palm Room - Banquets - Club Meetings

Oak Room available for Wedding Receptions

Call 283-2300

HONORS
on graduation day!
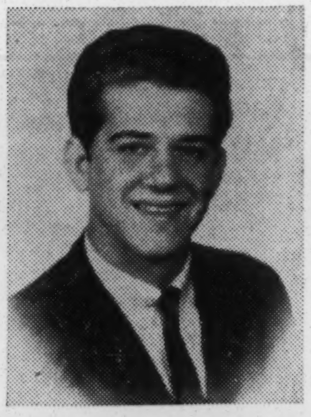
Bardstown
AUTHENTIC-TRADITIONAL CLOTHING BY MERIT

Graduate "cum laude for fashion-wise flair" . . . in a handsome Bardstown Traditional suit by Merit! Trim Natural - Line styling takes an adult point of view . . . eliminates exaggerated detail . . . concentrates on smooth, subtle precision-tailored authority. We have your size, in the newest popular colors and patterns.

$45 - $65

Our campus representative, Kenny Bonnaffons, will be on hand Thursday and Saturday to assist you in your selection.

Arnold's
Lakeside Shopping Center
Telephone VE 4-0724
Metairie, La.



PLAYBILL

FILMS

National	"Young and Willing," British drama about the younger set. With Virginia Maskell and Paul Rogers.
Peacock	"Point of Order"—a documentary of the Army-McCarthy hearings. Don't miss this very important film.
Gentilly Art	"Billy Liar." British comedy-drama of a youth who retires from reality into daydreams. With Tom Courtenay and Julie Christie.
Neighborhoods	"The Best Man," Gore Vidal's behind-the-scenes coverage of a presidential nominating convention. With Henry Fonda, Cliff Robertson, Edie Adams, Margaret Leighton, Shelley Berman and Lee Tracy.
Martin Cinerama	"It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," the long-run chase comedy. With a large cast, wide screen, color, and reserved seats.
Loew's State	"From Russia With Love." Starring Sean Connery and Daniel Bianchi, beginning May 20.
Saenger	"The Flesh Eaters," a horror film. The subject matter of this picture will take you to that point that is midway between life and death. The only people who will not be sterilized with fear are those among you who are already dead.
RKO Orpheum	"The Empty Canvas," drama based on Alberto Moravia's novel about a young artist, his model and his mother. With Bette Davis, Horst Buchholtz and Catherine Spaak.
Joy	"The Brass Bottle"—fantasy about a liberated genie. With Tony Randall, Burl Ives and Barbara Eden. Wide screen, color.

THEATRE

Civic	"Oklahoma"—the famous Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway musical. Don't miss this opportunity to view this exciting production.
Le Petit	Le Petit presents the musical "Guys and Dolls" featuring Rivet Hedderel, John DuBois and Julianne Perlt. The musical will run from May 22 to June

'Empty Canvas' Is Barren

By MAURICE KOWALEWSKI

When going to see the "Empty Canvas," be sure to bring plenty of popcorn and "No-Doz," for this poor man's "La Dolce Vita," from Bette Davis' supposed New Orleans accent, to its atrocious background music, proves that hokum is not dead after all.

Based on a novel by Alberto Moravia, the "plot" concerns a mixed-up, poor little rich boy (Dino, played absent-mindedly by Horst Bucholtz), his all-too-understanding mother, (played understandingly by Bette Davis), and a nymphomaniac, (Cecilia, played nudely by Catherine Spaak), who, for no apparent reason, gets the biggest kick out of destroying every man that she comes in contact with.

Movie begins—Hero leaves home to find himself. Hero meets girl. One hour, and forty-three fornications later, hero unsuccessfully attempts to kill himself because girl can never really be his. Hero grows up and loses his infatuation with girl. Movie ends.

The only thing left for the audience to do is to wonder how Bette Davis could allow herself to appear in such a trashy motion picture.

Language Prizes Given By Dept.

Awards for special achievement in foreign languages were presented Tuesday by the language department in conjunction with two plays "La Cueva De Salamanca" in Spanish and "Hans Im Gluck" in German.

Prizes were presented by Dr.

If You're White, You're Right

By TERRENCE ADAMS

Since jazz is the only creative area in which the Negro must be dealt with on his own terms, and since New Orleans is a good example of a city bursting with jazz musicians, disenfranchisement, and Negros, perhaps it would be interesting to offer reflections and a prospectus on the local scene, as it were.

White fans have spent the last few years running back and forth trying to find nebulous jazz clubs before they folded. Some of these bars were designed to attract the jet set of the grange; others were tax losses or fronts for illicit activity, and one or two of the least successful tried to make it on music alone.

Other white fans have spent the last few years running back and forth trying to find whether they'd be busted if they entered the few Negro bars that allowed race mixing, contrary to city ordinance.

Negro fans have spent the last few years running back and forth.

It would seem that there just isn't a large enough economic base to support a full time jazz club. Yet Larry McKinley has a somewhat successful jazz radio program, and jazz concerts seem to meet with good return. Why then is it impossible for musicians to find regular employ in local bars? The answer's blowing in the wind.

THE LAND OF COTTON

The Chamber of Commerce likes to brag about New Orleans respectable population, but like Jon Hendricks says, "You go upper nowhere at all." That is, due to our government's benevolent protection of white boys; this roaring metropolis is really two rather insignificant towns, each one with nothing to say. Thus the actual potential among the communities for economic support of a jazz club is minor.

Although the legal proclivities remain established facts, several members of the hard core of whites have been allowed to enter at least two of the more bourgois Negro night clubs, but their presence was seldom felt and both clubs have ceased operations anyway.

No jazz club, white or black, has been able to survive in New Orleans. Yet jazz concerts make money.

The Smith brothers, or sisters, were enlightened to the local economic facts of life some time ago. Perhaps this was due to the insistence of some of their prospective performers. In any case, both of their jazz concerts this year, Dave Brubeck, and Nancy Wilson-Julian Adderly, were good successes. And it's obvious that if they programmed the more well known jazz groups, like Miles Davis or Ornette Coleman, they would be assured of continued

	er. With Bette Davis, Horst Buchholtz and Catherine Spaak.
Joy	"The Brass Bottle"—fantasy about a liberated genie. With Tony Randall, Burl Ives and Barbara Eden. Wide screen, color.

THEATRE

Civic	"Oklahoma"—the famous Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway musical. Don't miss this opportunity to view this exciting production.
Le Petit	Le Petit presents the musical "Guys and Dolls" featuring Rivet Hedderel, John DuBois and Julianne Perlt. The musical will run from May 22 to June 7, the last three performances being open to non-subscribers.
Le Petit	Acting classes will be resumed at Le Petit. Classes will begin the week of June 13, concluding with an all student program on Aug. 22. Dan Mullin, associate professor in the Tulane Univ. Department of Theatre and Speech, will direct the program for students 15 years and older. An introductory meeting will be held June 1 at 8 p.m. at the Little Theatre.

MUSIC

WWMT-FM Radio	Weekdays. Music, 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Classical music, 4-5 p.m. and 9-11 p.m. Saturday: Stereo programs, noon-midnight: Classical music music, 2-3 p.m. Sunday: Religious programs, noon-1 p.m.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

City Park Stadium	Bonanza's "Little Joe" will star in Farhad Grotto Annual Western Rodeo on May 22-23-24. Proceeds from the affair will go to the benefit of cerebral palsy children of greater New Orleans.
Delgado Museum	An exhibition, made up of paintings, drawings, and artifacts is now being shown at the Delgado museum. The works, a private collection, represent the personal taste of a discriminating New Orleans couple, Dr. and Mrs. Richard W. Levy. The works will be at the Delgado museum through May 31.

MALTS and SHAKES 20 FLAVORS

STEER INN

STEERBURGERS

MALTS SHAKES

GOLDEN FRIED POTATOES

6101 ELYSIAN FIELDS AVE.

Phone 282-2255

audience to do is to wonder how Bette Davis could allow herself to appear in such a trashy motion picture.

Language Prizes Given By Dept.

Awards for special achievement in foreign languages were presented Tuesday by the language department in conjunction with two plays "La Cueva De Salamanca" in Spanish and "Hans Im Gluck" in German.

Prizes were presented by Dr. Paul Brosman to: Susan Meisner (French 51), Madeline Rasmussen (French 52), Robert Tiller (French 55), Betty Jean Fricken (German 51), Alexander Granzin and Patricia Behlar (German 52), George Antoine (German 55), Charles Ruffino (Latin 52) and Henry O'Quin (Russian 51).

AUGUSTA CICCIO

Phi Chi Theta Elects Ciccio

Augusta Ciccio has been elected president of Phi Chi Theta, women's professional fraternity. She was installed at last week's meeting. Other officers in the group include Lynn Latapie, vice-president; Carla Surla, treasurer; Caolyn Sconza, recording secretary; and Mary Otell corresponding secretary.

Augusta Ciccio's past activities on campus include: secretary of the Student Government Association, a member of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, Associate Editor of the TRIDENT, and a member of Alpha Zi Delta Sorority.

minor.

Although the legal proclivities remain established facts, several members of the hard core of whites have been allowed to enter at least two of the more bourgois Negro night clubs, but their presence was seldom felt and both clubs have ceased operations anyway.

No jazz club, white or black, has been able to survive in New Orleans. Yet jazz concerts make money.

The Smith brothers, or sisters, were enlightened to the local economic facts of life some time ago. Perhaps this was due to the insistence of some of their prospective performers. In any case, both of their jazz concerts this year, Dave Brubeck, and Nancy Wilson-Julian Adderly, were good successes. And it's obvious that if they programmed the more well known jazz groups, like Miles Davis or Ornette Coleman, they would be assured of continued success—not because the communist consiracy bought blocks of tickets, but because of old-fashioned race mixing.

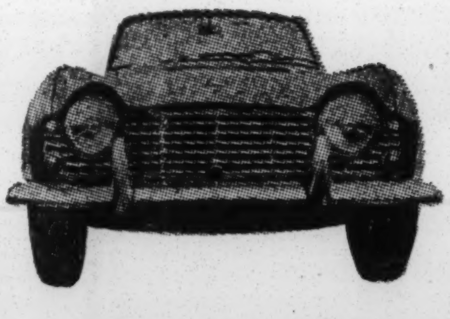
OLD TIMES, NOT FORGOTTEN

As race distinctions are slowly broken down, divisions of class will appear, and perhaps rightly so. It is true that both of the aforementioned concerts were marred by three or four Negroes insistence on getting drunk and yelling through most of the performance. Certainly this left a bad taste with the white folks who were having their first impersonal social experience with Negroes. But the vestiges of the past have a way of remaining contemporaneous, and will continue thus, for a long time to come.

It's this sort of thing, and the well founded apprehensions concerning the more woolly areas, that will foster new economic sanctions on the poor of all races in the new south.

Although an integration leader once said that the issue would be decided in the bedroom, clearly the solution didn't lie in the cotton fields. And I would submit that successful interaction at cultural events, most of which would hopefully be beyond my ken, could offer a somewhat painless first step towards flouridation because that breeds class solidarity. And it is indeed true that I would be doing my part listening to the juke cross the street from the Willow Street All-White School each afternoon; but I'm still afraid of being clubbed to death by the traffic boys.

TRIUMPH



"America's Most Popular SPORTS AND RACING CARS"

SALES - PARTS - SERVICE

HARING and LAMARE

118N. Claiborne Ave. 523-3092

JAMES BOND, secret agent 007, is distracted by an insistent young lady in "From Russia With Love." Sean Connery stars in the Ian Fleming thriller.

Around And About

'From Russia With Love' Is Scorching Follow-Up

By ANDY KREUTZ

James Bond is back! And "From Russia With Love," adapted from the Ian Fleming best-seller, is a scintillating sequel to "007's" screen debut in "Doctor No."

In this yarn, Sean Connery as the incalcuably perfect secret agent, is spun into the inevitable web of intrigue with Daniela Bianchi as tantilizing Tatiana Romanova, Robert Shaw as combination protector and assassin Red Grant and Lotta Lenya?? as a washed-out lesbian named Rosa Klebb.

Bond deliberately walks into the tender trap, carefully baited with the prospect of capturing a Russian decoding machine for the British and with the lures of black-ribbonned, blonde-tressed Tatiana.

The plot, writhing with surprises, sifts through a sabo-

• GRADUATES

(Continued from page 1)

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Bachelor of Science

Clifton A. Adcox, Gilbert Louis Aime II, Douglas Delano Allardyce, Leroy Joseph Aucoin, William Edward Baldwin, Jr., Joseph Arlin Bautsch, Joseph Louis Beauchamp, George Joseph Becker III, Lawrence Michael Berner, Ronald Robert Bernhard, Norman John Berthaut, William Tyler Bevington, Thomas Farris Bibb, Kenneth Robert Bird, Wayne Harold Blackmon, Andrea Joan Boehm, Linda Van Zandt Bonck, Thomas Michael Boudreaux, William Joseph Bravender, William Bernard Brueggeman, Andrea John Capaci, Allan Claude Civello, Joseph Lawrence Cottone, Thomas Dennis Crombie, Robert David Cummiskey, Jr., Frank Daroca, Jr., Henry Frank Decossas, Jr., Joan Elizabeth Dowty, Milton Joseph Durabb, Jr., John Robert Falgoust, Louis John Flattmann, John Coloze Garza, Lloyd Heywood Gautreaux, Raymond Joseph Gomez, Jr., Thomas Andrews Gonzales, Dennis Louis Good, Ernest Hamilton Gould, Jr., Elizabeth Marie Hamalainen, Abren Francis Hebert, Jr., Lionel Andrew Hotstream, Joyce Jacqueline Hunter, Sherrol Ann Johnson, Glenn Conway Kirsch, Henry Cleveland Kirsch, Rosalyn Lillian Klotz, Philip Joseph LaGrange, Robert Charles Lake, Kenneth Odell Levy, Vincent Joseph Liuzza, Jr.

Thomas George Lukowski, Esther Lavonne Mackey, Jerlene Mary Mancuso, Edward Thomas Manthey, Jr., Ferdinand Marcel Mariande, Donald F. McClure, Robert Craig McCoy, Louis Sawyer Nunes, Daniel William Osborne, Anna Robinson Patterson, John Edmond Pechon, Richard Allen Pennock, Sr., Lauve Evariste Poche, Jr., Thomas Oswald Porteous, Jr., Errol F. Putfark.

William Joseph Rapp, Rita Ann Robichaux, Anthony Joseph Saladino, John Martin Schmitt, Joseph Cieutat Seidel, Jules August Sevin, Jr., Edward George Standige, Jr., Myron Jerry Thompson, William Presley Townsend, James Vinterella, Jr., Alan Joseph Wells, Herman Charles Woessner III, Joseph J. Yodanza, John Joseph Zamora III.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

Bachelor of Arts

Marilyn Ann Adragna, Carole Lee Andrews, Louise Marie Arnoult, Marilyn Joan Arruebarrena, Deanna Mary Belmonte, Jane Gurry Buckman, Carolyn Theresa Bulot, Dorothy Ann Ceruti, Gibson Charles Chighizola, Carol Ann Cook, May Helen P. Crawford, Carol Gremillion Curet, Audrey Tassin Eckerle, Susan Agnes Enloe, Joan Geraci, Lurlyn Lillian Gonzalez, Cecile Marie Gremilion, Josephine Ann Habans, E. Roland Hall, Jr., Lydia Broussard Hanberry, Charles Raymond Hancock, Jane Gillis Hatch, Jane Ann Hooper, Iris Ann Johnson, Beverly Paulina Jones, Marie Sylvia Kass.

Michele Eyraud Kiefer, Joan Richard Knight, Nora Mary Lake, Joan Ann Lamare, Peggy Ann Foye Laplace, Leta Pugh Lay, J. Walter LeBon, Jr., Marie Josephine Dake Lord, Jo Ann B. Lotz, Carolyn Reid McCullough, Nancy Rose Miller, Gladys Welch Milliner, Gloria A. Monninger, Lonnie Allen Moore III, Marilyn Ann Muniz, Marian Victoria Owen, Caroline Poulard Perkins, Edwin Roger Pillault, Jr., Patricia Ann Resor, Barbara Jean Sallettes, Wanda Kuns Schenewerk, Betty Arnold Simmons, Frances Layne Sloan, Constance Evelyn Weber, Joan Catherine Weser, Carol

Journalism Class Invades Judge Babylon's Courtroom

By ELLIOTT SEYMOUR

The New Orleans night court was recently host to about 30 LSUNO students. No, they were not arrested for drunken disorder—the students were members of Mr. David Zinman's Journalism classes (plus interested friends).

The Journalism students went to cover the night court session, and afterwards they interviewed the judge.

Judge Babylon presided over night court and this wily old gentleman, who is a rare combination of ultra-conservatism, humane-liberalism, simple honesty and humor, was a delight to talk to.

The judge informed the students that the New Orleans night court was the only one of its kind in the United States. The only other existing night court is in New York, but it only reviews the cases brought before it; it does not prosecute.

Judge Babylon, well-known for his wit and humorous remarks, is the judge, jury and prosecutor in his court, but even with all this power he has maintained a reputation of fairness, honesty and concern for the accused.

He particularly noted that it is his job to protect those people arrested because, as he said, "The policemen have to turn in something, and sometimes bad arrests result." He also added, "Most of these people are sick. Contrary to common belief, you just can't lie around on steps and in gutters without getting tuberculosis."

Night court begins at 10 p.m. and it runs until the docket is cleared. An example of how long this can take can be found in the case which involved six girls from Newcomb college. The judge pointed out that around 1948 some 65 communists were living in one four-room apartment. The 65 included six girls from Newcomb and some boys from Dillard.

The case began at 2:15 one morning and ran through to 9:30 a.m. with the judge having to face a whole battery of lawyers by himself. He also pointed out that this "red brief" was looked into by the Kefauver communism investigation committee. Of course, he added, the only charge to get them on was disturbing the peace.

Judge Babylon also pointed out that things can happen in strange and unexpected ways. He related the story of his friend who arrested a man in a gas station for running a red light a block further back.

It turned out that the man was a bootlegger, and in that particular state a reward was given for the capture of bootleggers. Also the officer got a reward from an insurance company because the bootlegger's car was stolen.

The judge chose night court because he feels it's interesting and worthwhile. Of course now his position is an elective one, and with a smile the judge said that even judges can poltick for their position during election time. He also added, "I believe I have a lot of friends," and I believe he has.

Gene Dunn Is La. 'Top TKE'

Gene F. Dunn, past president of Theta Mu chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon at LSUNO, was named "Top Teke" in Shaw as combination protector and assassin Red Grant and Lotta Lenya?? as a washed-out lesbian named Rosa Klebb.

Bond deliberately walks into the tender trap, carefully baited with the prospect of capturing a Russian decoding machine for the British and with the lures of black-ribbonned, blonde-tressed Tatiana.

The plot, writhing with surprises, sifts through a saboteur's training school, the world's chess championship, rat-infested Turkish cellars, do-it-yourself bedroom movies, gypsy love quarrels, and adjoining compartments on a speeding train.

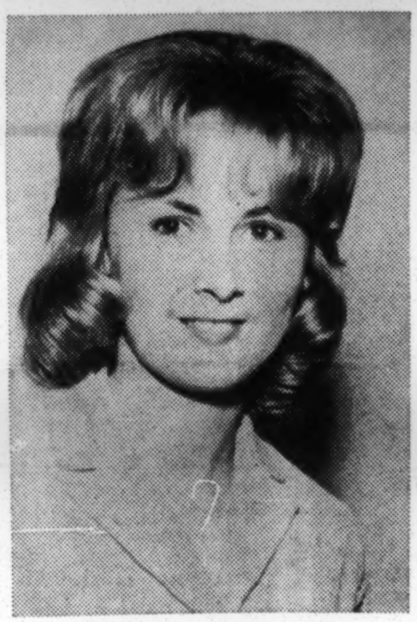
Our boy James makes his way and his women unaware that doom treads softly and carries a steel-grey Luger. Tension trails tension with breathing time barely couched between each scenario.

You get the impression that Bond is too cool. There can't be that much ice water flowing in his veins. But Connery manages to parlay everything in true Fleming fashion.

Though the screen version altered a few of the original episodes, such as the scrapping sequence on the train and the "kicks" that Rosa Klebb got out of the climax, the film does the novel justice.

As James again fades into the sunset, we may remind you that this flicker is worth the price of admission just to view its unique and exciting method of handling screen credits.

Until "Goldfinger" . . .



BETTIE COCREHAM

Phi Kappa Theta Selects Sweetheart

Alpha Phi Chapter of Phi Kappa Theta held its second annual Crimson Rose Ball recently in the Cypress Room of the Hilton Inn. Miss Bettie Cocreham was announced as the 1964-65 Sweetheart of Phi Kappa Theta. Mrs. Mary Collette, last year's sweetheart, presented Miss Cocreham with a sweetheart pin and bouquet of crimson roses, the fraternity flower.

Miss Cocreham, who attended LSUNO for two semesters, is presently a senior at LSUBR majoring in business administration.

The members of Miss Cocreham's court were Misses Charlotte Hudson, Ginger Bernier, Carol Scheffer, and Angele Demestre.

May Helen P. Crawford, Carol Gremillion Curet, Audrey Tassin Eckerle, Susan Agnes Enloe, Joan Geraci, Lurlyn Lillian Gonzalez, Cecile Marie Gremilion, Josephine Ann Habans, E. Roland Hall, Jr., Lydia Broussard Hanberry, Charles Raymond Hancock, Jane Gillis Hatch, Jane Ann Hooper, Iris Ann Johnson, Beverly Paulina Jones, Marie Sylvia Kass.

Michele Eyraud Kiefer, Joan Richard Knight, Nora Mary Lake, Joan Ann Lamare, Peggy Ann Foye Laplace, Leta Pugh Lay, J. Walter LeBon, Jr., Marie Josephine Dake Lord, Jo Ann B. Lotz, Carolyn Reid McCullough, Nancy Rose Miller, Gladys Welch Milliner, Gloria A. Monninger, Lonnie Allen Moore III, Marilyn Ann Muniz, Marian Victoria Owen, Caroline Poulard Perkins, Edwin Roger Pillault, Jr., Patricia Ann Resor, Barbara Jean Sallettes, Wanda Kuns Schenewerk, Betty Arnold Simmons, Frances Layne Sloan, Constance Evelyn Weber, Joan Catherine Weser, Carol Landry Winter.

Bachelor of Science

Leonard Louis Betzer, Sheryll Cascio Bourgeois, Lynne Emory Castle, Suzette Faustina Chachere, Marcia Ann Chalona, Barbara Lynn Dauterive, Edmond Charles Drouet, Kereigh Edward Fallon, Cynthia Jane Gilmore, Evelyn Inez Hebert, Patsy Delora Hicks, Ronald John Jefferson, Janice Hattie Kaltenbach, Jean Manale Knight, Lucy Margaret McClure, Claire Eugenia Orth, Joan Truehill Smith, Louis Albert Verret, Jr.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCES

Bachelor of Arts

Melanie Adler, Elmer Marcel Ducorbier, Betty Jean Fricken, Gary Bartlett Levy, Ralph B. Novoa, Philip Quartararo, Jr., Christian Phillip Ruppert III, Janet Ann Troyer.

Bachelor of Science

Warren Neil Beverung, Jr., Lanson Roy Chien, Alan Yale Cohen, Estrella Fernandez de Castro, Gary Emmanuel Dyson, Clifton Joseph Egle, Jr., Mary Ellen Everhart, Lawrence Thomas Guderian, Kerry Francis Harris, Leonce Everett Harris, Charles Bernard Hassenboehler, Jr. Marcel Leon Haulard, Sidney Clarence Hubble, Jr., Terry Ernest Ijams, Roy Miller Jenevein, Jr., Susan Jennings Johnson, Wayne Raymond Kempff, Michael John LeBherz, Owen Russell Lynch, Jr.

Kathleen Marie McGeown, Genevieve Edgard Naggiar, Henry Joseph Nuss, Jerelyn Ann O'Donnell, Michael Warren O'Shaughnessy, Gerald Joseph Pinero, Wallace Clark Pye, Salvador Ranatza, Jr., Kay Ann Richoux, Joseph Emile Robichaux, Jr., William Alexander Rock, Jr,. Louis Joseph Sardenga, Bennie Cox Strickland, Robin Whitney Strickland, Ross Anita Suggs, Arthur Francis Sullwold, Jr., Jacqueline Rita Terranova, Frank Anthony Ulm, Jr., Merline Robert Wilson, Jr.

around on steps and in gutters without getting tuberculosis."

Night court begins at 10 p.m. and it runs until the docket is cleared. An example of how long this can take can be found in the case which involved six girls from Newcomb college. The judge pointed out that

The judge chose night court because he feels it's interesting and worthwhile. Of course now his position is an elective one, and with a smile the judge said that even judges can poltick for their position during election time. He also added, "I believe I have a lot of friends," and I believe he has.

Gene Dunn Is La. 'Top TKE'

Gene F. Dunn, past president of Theta Mu chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon at LSUNO, was named "Top Teke" in Louisiana at the third annual province leadership clinic held in Shreveport, La.

Dunn, one of the more active students on campus, was recently chosen "Student in the News" by THE DRIFTWOOD.

Theta Mu chapter also captured the award for "Greatest Improvement In Scholarship" and an award for submitting the name chosen for the province newsletter.

George N. Kallintzas, national historian of TKE, was feature speaker at the clinic. James Backstrom, province supervisor and Andrew Flores, assistant province supervisor and Theta Mu alumnus coordinated the arrangements and activities for the clinic hosted by the TKE chapter at Centenary College.

TKE boasts chapters at LSUNO, LSU, Southeastern, Northwestern, McNeese, Louisiana Tech and Centenary.

GENE DUNN

MALE FEMALE

COMMERCIAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

1001 NBC Building 525-5237

NEED A JOB?

New Orleans' Oldest Personnel Service

Ye Olde College Inn

Drive-In Restaurant

Since 1923

ENJOY OUR CHICKEN FRIED STEAK SANDWICH

Put A Tiger In Your Tank!

NEW ESSO EXTRA GASOLINE BRINGS POWER BACK ALIVE!

In connection with our New Esso Extra Gasoline, we are now selling Bengal Tigers for only $1.99.

Tom Weidert's

Pontchartrain Esso

6799 Elysian Fields Ave. 282-9370

The Station Where Courtesy Is Contagious

Across from LSUNO — Top Value Stamps

TKE, Phi Kappa Gain First Place Tie By Scoring Shocking Upset Victories

Phi Kappa Theta coasted to a 2-0 upset win over first round champion Lambda Chi on Sunday, May 10, in the second of two games played on the St. Francis Cabrini diamond. In the first game Tau Kappa Epsilon pulled the biggest upset in Greek baseball history by downing Theta Xi, 3-2.

Right-hander Lester Vicknair led the Phi Kaps to victory in a game marred by bad throws and weak hitting which went the full seven inning limit.

Both sides went down in order in the first frame but in the top of the second the Phi Kappa cause came to life. After the lead-off man grounded out, singles by Mike Rodriguez and Andy Kreutz, and a walk to Sullwold combined to load the bases.

Two more free passes by Barney Pinschenat, LCA's hurler, plated the winning runs.

LCA mounted their first threat in the bottom of the second when two men reached base, but clutch pitching by Vicknair stemmed the tide.

The last LCA gasp came in the seventh when two walks put the tieing runs on base. Vicknair sealed the Phi Kappa win by striking out the last Lambda Chi batsman for the game's final out.

In the day's first outing a hard-hitting TKE crew scrambled to its first diamond victory in three years of competition.

In the second inning TKE scattered two hits and scored two markers to grab a 2-0 lead.

In the fifth, Ed Stempel, TKE's ace hurler, walked in two Theta Xi batters to knot the score at 2-2.

Greek Athletic Program Marks Another Banner Year

By DONALD DONNELLY

★ Football

During the 1963-64 campaign, the Greek Athletic League experienced a banner season which found each of its four members contributing liberally to the success that the league enjoyed. From Wayne Collier's touchdown strike to Don Marks in late September to Ron McNamara's bases loaded triple in early May, the GAL displayed an exciting brand of sports entertainment for its many followers.

As Autumn rolled onto the lakefront campus, the Greeks rolled onto the gridiron, demonstrating extremely rugged and aggressive play. A new champion was crowned in '63 as the Big Blue of Theta Xi dethroned Phi Kappa Theta's Black Plague.

The Xi-men captured the first round title, but, as in 1962, the Phi Kaps garnered second round laurels, thus necessitating a playoff between the league's most ardent rivals. In the championship tilt, Theta Xi's defensive might earned for them a hard-fought 12-10 victory. Not until the final moments, when Doug Schulte intercepted a PKT aerial, was the contest decided.

Mark Rodi of PKT edged Theta Xi's Herman Shultz for the individual scoring title, but the Xi halfback was honored as the league's outstanding performer. Phi Kappa Theta, led by Hernie Woessner and Buster Thiele, dominated the All-Star selections by placing eight gridders on the mythical squad. Theta Xi's Jeff Houin was among the six appointments that the Blue received. Tau Kappa Epsilon and Lambda Chi Alpha followed with three and two selections, respectively.

PKT avenged the grid defeat by taking the team title in bowling competition.

★ Basketball

A Sailor's First 'Luff'

By KIRK KREUTZIG

On Lake Pontchartrain where brisk winds cause flying spray and luffing sails, an enthusiastic core of LSUNO Mariners are providing some of the nation's top-ranking intercollegiate sailing competition.

The Sailing Club proudly boasts one of the finest competitive sailing records in the South. The Club has won the famed Baldwin Wood Regatta three years in a row, one time spectacularly the contest decided.

Mark Rodi of PKT edged Theta Xi's Herman Shultz for the individual scoring title, but the Xi halfback was honored as the league's outstanding performer. Phi Kappa Theta, led by Hernie Woessner and Buster Thiele, dominated the All-Star selections by placing eight gridders on the mythical squad. Theta Xi's Jeff Houin was among the six appointments that the Blue received. Tau Kappa Epsilon and Lambda Chi Alpha followed with three and two selections, respectively.

PKT avenged the grid defeat by taking the team title in bowling competition.

★ Basketball

Interest then turned to the roundball sport, and once again Theta Xi fielded a power-laden quintet. The Big Blue took honors in both rounds, displaying a well-balanced attack and strong bench. Led by Mike Becker and Sony Kern, the Xi-men rolled over one opponent after another, suffering but one setback the entire season. Big Emmett Poynot and reserve Sal Gutierrez provided the clutch performances that spelled victory. Kern, a freshman from Warren Easton, easily grabbed the league scoring crown.

★ Baseball

Lambda Chi became the surprise of the league as baseball came into focus. Behind the strong right arm of Barney Pinschenat and the timely hitting of Ron McNamara and Ken Gasperecz, the unbeaten LCA crew has captured the first round title.

Second round play has started with the coveted over-all sports trophy at stake. Theta Xi and Phi Kappa Theta have excellent shots at the award.

Next season the Greeks will again improve as they did this year. A new frosh class and more experienced players will strengthen the entire league. PKT and Theta Xi should continue their feud for top honors while Lambda Chi establishes itself as a darkhorse to be reckoned with.

TKE, winless wonders on the gridiron, hardcourt, and diamond, may still be a year away, but the free-wheeling Teke crew should once again provide the daffy-doings of the year. Two newcomers to the league, Poppa Kappa-Sava Kappa and Signa Phi Nothing, should battle hapless TKE for the cellar.

MIKE RODRIGUEZ (left) of Phi Kappa Theta moves in to stop Lambda Chi's Lloyd Gautreaux in LCA's upset win over PKT. Rugged, fast-moving action like this typified sports competition in 1963-64 Greek play.

seventh when two walks put the tieing runs on base. Vicknair sealed the Phi Kappa win by striking out the last Lambda Chi batsman for the game's final out.

In the day's first outing a hard-hitting TKE crew scrambled to its first diamond victory in three years of competition.

In the second inning TKE scattered two hits and scored two markers to grab a 2-0 lead.

In the fifth, Ed Stempel, TKE's ace hurler, walked in two Theta Xi batters to knot the score at 2-2.

A combination of a hit, an error, and two walks pushed TKE's winning run acorss the plate in the bottom of the sixth.

'Mural Baseball All-Stars Chosen

The selection of an intramural baseball all-star team has been announced by the members of the sports staff of THE DRIFTWOOD, who made the selections for the mythical nine.

Team members were selected impartially and quality of performance on the field was the only criterion used.

The 'mural league ended a highly successful inaugural season on Saturday, May 9.

The prime objectives of the league were to give anyone who wanted to play a chance to perform, regardless of ability, and to provide fun and enjoyment in the bargain. Judging on that basis the league was a complete success.

Competition was keen for team berths and the final selection was a hard one. The difficulty encountered in selecting the contingent is a testimony to the overall excellence and balance of play the league offered.

The team selected is:

P—Keith Dufour BA
P—Larry Navo, LA
C—Al Civello, BA
1B—Jim Mathews, JD
2B—Shields Stutts, Science
3B—Ferdi Mariande, BA
SS—Mike Rodriguez, LA
Util—Bill Bevington, BA
OF—Al Stolier, Science
OF—Larry Berner, BA
OF—Art McEnany, LA
Util—Walter Strata, Science

A Sailor's First 'Luff'

By KIRK KREUTZIG

On Lake Pontchartrain where brisk winds cause flying spray and luffing sails, an enthusiastic core of LSUNO Mariners are providing some of the nation's top-ranking intercollegiate sailing competition.

The Sailing Club proudly boasts one of the finest competitive sailing records in the South. The Club has won the famed Baldwin Wood Regatta three years in a row, one time spectacularly winning five races in a row to score twenty-seven points out of a possible thirty! The Sailing Club has won more than seventeen championships and regatta titles.

In 1960, a nucleus of ambitious sailors first organized the LSUNO Sailing Club. Inspired by the Univesrity's lakeside locale and the city's two distinguished yacht clubs, the University's only intercollegiate sport has grown overnight into the largest and most active organization on the campus.

The collegiate sailing program began in 1960 with the Mariners receiving a formal charter from the University. In the spring of 1962 the Club joined the 14-member Southeastern Intercollegiate Sailing Association (SEISA), and in the fall of 1963 became affiliated with the Intercollegiate Yacht Racing Union of North America (ICYRA of NA).

According to Commodore Steve Murray, "The LSUNO Sailing Club has one of the most active and rapidly expanding sailing programs in the nation."

Extensive and effective sailing instruction is being conducted each week. The classes provide instruction in the theory of sailing, small boat handling, rules of the road, marlinsike seamanship, water safety, and general seamanship. The student-conducted classes are highlighted by guest speakers, movies, and slides which help students to visualize particular situations while showing many thrills of boating and yachting.

A core of seasoned racing sailors has formed the intercollegiate side of the Club. It was in 1960 that the Mariners first tasted victory by winning the Mississippi State Fishboat Championships. Since then they have compiled the impressive racing record of six first place championships, six second place titles, two third place titles, and several fourth places.

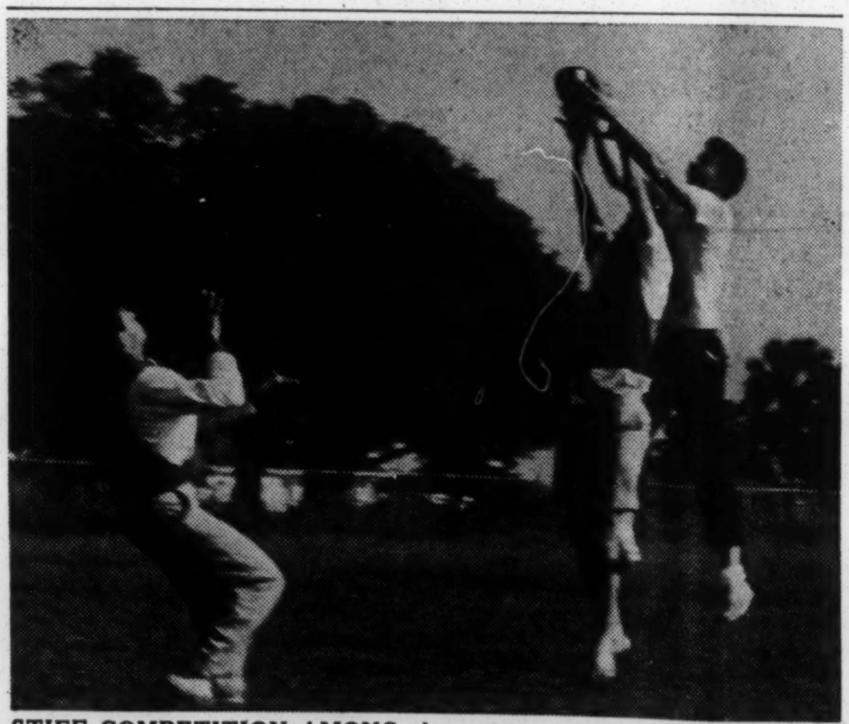
In a one-time stand in the Sugar Bowl Regatta, the Mariners placed higher than any other other Southeastern Conference School. They were the only SEC school to win at least one race. This year, as a non-collegiate entrant, Mariner Team Captain Bobbie Delgado won all three races to capture the Knarr Class trophy. Another entry sailed by Commodore Murray placed fourth.

This spring the LSUNO Sailing Club began an affiliateship with the New Orleans Yacht Club. Through the cooperation of NOYC, the intercollegians plan to create the most highly organized and developed sailing program in the South. Special NOYC memberships are being made available to the University sailors. NOYC Commodore Larry Sommers and the Board of Governors are encouaging the Mariners to participate in various yacht club regattas and functions.

As for future plans, the LSUNO Mariners are hoping to become an integral part of the new multi-million dollar East Lakefront Development Project being formulated by the Levee Board. The Sailing Club anticipates acquiring its own fleet of boats for training and competitive sailing. Already a program is underway to raise necessary funds.

The intercollegians expect to send teams to out-of-town regattas with financial support, and plan to host regattas of their own. Someday they hope to co-host the Sugar Bowl Regatta. For the present, some Mariners eagerly anticipate sending their best teams to the National Intercollegiate Championships in Vancouver, British Columbia, this June.

BA Captures Softball League Crown By Sneaking Past Liberal Arts, 3-2



STIFF COMPETITION AMONG the university's divisional teams was a trademark of the intramural league's inaugural season of play.

By JIMMY JOHNSON

The curtain closed on the intramural softball league's first season last Saturday when Business Administration defeated Liberal Arts 3-2 for the championship. In other action Science outlasted Education 4-1.

Keith Dufour gave up only four safeties en route to his third straight win of the campaign, making him the leading pitcher. The runs by LA were the first scored against BA pitching this year. Dufour struck out eight and issued only three walks.

BA jumped to a two run lead in the 4th inning. Two errors and a hit by Moore gave BA its two run lead, but these unearned runs didn't stand up for long.

In the 5th inning LA tied it up 2-2. A single by Barry-Daste, two errors, and a double by Larry Navo, the opposing pitcher, plated two runs, which were also on the tainted side. In the bottom of the 6th BA broke the tie. Three straight hits by Al Civello, Dufour, and Ferdie Mariande gave BA its championship.

Both Dufour and Navo pitched excellent ball and were prime candidates for the All-Star team.

In the other encounter, Science used four one run innings to defeat Education. Shields Stutts pitched a two-hitter for the slide rulers, striking out seven in the process.

Walter Strata supplied muscle with two walks and a booming triple. For the teachers Leon Na-

Formation Of Intramurals Sets 'NO Sports Milestone

By VINCENT PEULER

The '63-'64 academic year represented a true high-water mark for sports at LSUNO and there is no sign of an ebbing of the tide. Thanks are due, in large part, to the spirit and enthusiasm that have been generated by the organization of campus intramural competition.

An intramural sports program was little more than a dream when school opened last September, but determined action transformed the dream in-match squeaker to win the overall league title.

The second phase of 'mural competition at LSUNO consisted of the formation of a softball

Sports Clips

By VINCE PEULER

• It's Been A Great Year For Sports

LSUNO's campus calendar has been liberally strewn for the past year with activities as abundant as they were varied. And some of the most impressive accomplishments were registered in the world of sports.

There were the thrills and chills of Greek football, basketball, and baseball—not to mention bowling. There was the historic inauguration of a highly successful intramural program. The Sailing Club continued to add honors to its already distinguished record. And there was much, much more.

The achievements of the past year are an inspiring indication of what people can do when they join forces in a spirit of determination and cooperation. There can be no more effective molder of campus unity and spirit.

The fraternities, the Student Council, the Morale Commission, Circle K, and interested faculty members such as Dean Masingill combined to make LSUNO's sports picture a bright one.

But most important of all were the efforts of the individual students who joined teams simply because they liked to play and found it a rewarding way to while away a Saturday afternoon.

Playing a minor but, it is hoped, worthwhile part in the whole effort has been THE DRIFTWOOD.

For the first time in its brief history THE DRIFTWOOD boasted a full sports page, guaranteeing complete coverage of LSUNO's sports beat.

First of all, there was advance coverage of all LSU pigskin matches, keeping in step with this paper's avowed policy of outlining the future, rather than rehashing the past.

Also, for the second straight year, members of the sports staff, thanks to the cooperation of LSUBR's athletic department, were able to view Tiger home games in person.

The weekly Pigskin Prognosis was begun and it is hoped that it will become a permanent fixture.

By VINCENT PEULER

The '63-'64 academic year represented a true high-water mark for sports at LSUNO and there is no sign of an ebbing of the tide. Thanks are due, in large part, to the spirit and enthusiasm that have been generated by the organization of campus intramural competition.

An intramural sports program was little more than a dream when school opened last September, but determined action transformed the dream into a reality.

Through the cooperative efforts of the Student Council, the Office of the Morale Commissioner, and E. Frank Masingill, Dean of Men, an intramural football league was initiated on Sunday, October 6.

Teams representing Business Administration, Liberal Arts, Science, and Education were fielded. Junior Division was also represented by a four-team aggregation. Regular Commercial Athletic Association rules governed league play.

Funds to cover the expenses of equipment and preparation of facilities were appropriated by the Student Council and Dean Masingill.

On that historic October afternoon Liberal Arts downed Education, 12-0, in the first game of the young season. In the day's second action Business Administration trounced a spunky but outmanned Science eleven, 32-0.

From its lop-sided opening day victory Business Administration went on to win the first round championship by squeaking past a strong Liberal Arts team, 6-0.

Second round play ended in a three-way tie between Science, LA, and BA. Business Administration defeated Science but tasted a 12-6 defeat at the hands of a Liberal Arts band that won the second round championship.

BA downed LA in a revenge-match squeaker to win the overall league title.

The second phase of 'mural competition at LSUNO consisted of the formation of a softball league in early April. Again the credit for the initiating spirit belonged to the Morale Commissioner and his charges.

A donation of $100 from the Ford Motor Company, for equipment, and the cooperation of the T. L. James Co. in preparing a playing field, at no cost to the University, assured the league of a successful debut season.

'Mural softball play got off to a roaring April start, with the formation of a loop consisting of representatives from LA, BA, Science, Education, and the Junior Division.

At a special meeting regular baseball rules were set up for the season's play. In addition, a one hour, 15 minute or 7-inning time limit was imposed on all the games, which were scheduled for play on Saturday afternoons.

The season was highlighted by a struggle between the two diamond behemoths, BA and LA. Both teams boasted clean slates until Education blemished LA's record by clawing to a 3-3 deadlock.

This tie set the stage for last week's title match between BA and LA.

The overwhelming success of this year's intramural programs sould be of great satisfaction to those who took part and who hope for bigger and better things, starting next September.

lo, Dufour, and Ferdie Mariande gave BA its championship.

Both Dufour and Navo pitched excellent ball and were prime candidates for the All-Star team.

In the other encounter, Science used four one run innings to defeat Education. Shields Stutts pitched a two-hitter for the slide rulers, striking out seven in the process.

Walter Strata supplied muscle with two walks and a booming triple. For the teachers Leon Naard gave up all four runs on a like number of hits in four innings. Six Science stickmen ended up with K's, Navard accounted for four and Jimmy Johnson notched the other two strikeouts.

BUSINESS

	AB	R	H	RBI
Putfark, ss	3	0	0	0
Bevington, 1b	3	0	0	0
Berner, lf	3	1	0	0
Civello, c	3	1	1	0
Dufour, p	2	1	1	0
Mariande, 3b	3	0	1	1
Schully, cf	1	0	0	0
Moore, rf	2	0	1	2
La Rocca, 2b	2	0	0	0
	22	3	4	3

LIBERAL ARTS

	AB	R	H	RBI
Kreutz, 2b	3	1	0	0
Gutierrez, 1b	3	0	0	0
Navo, p	3	0	2	2
Mancuso, 3b	2	0	0	0
McEnany, lf	2	0	0	0
Rodriquez, ss	2	0	1	0
Johnson, c	3	0	0	0
Daste, cf	3	0	1	0
Odinet, rf	3	1	0	0
	24	2	4	2

SCIENCE

	AB	R	H	RBI
Strata, lf	2	2	1	0
Rinderle, cf	2	0	0	0
Stutts, p	3	1	0	0
Stolier, 1b	3	1	1	1
Decedue, 3b	2	0	1	0
Tighe, 2b	2	0	0	0
Sardenga, ss	2	0	0	1
Ditrapani, rf	3	0	1	0
Matti, c	3	0	0	0
	22	4	4	2

EDUCATION

	AB	R	H	RBI
Johnson, ss-p	3	0	1	0
Fink, 3b	2	0	0	0
Huxen, 1b	1	0	0	0
Ayres, 1b-2b	0	0	0	0
Jefferson, 2b-ss	2	0	0	0
Lemoine, rf	1	0	0	0
Scuhlte, rf	0	1	0	0
Ferry, cf	2	0	1	0
McCaffery, lf	2	0	0	0
Terry, c	2	0	0	0
Novard, p-1b	2	0	0	0
	17	1	2	0

Playing a minor but, it is hoped, worthwhile part in the whole effort has been THE DRIFTWOOD.

For the first time in its brief history THE DRIFTWOOD boasted a full sports page, guaranteeing complete coverage of LSUNO's sports beat.

First of all, there was advance coverage of all LSU pigskin matches, keeping in step with this paper's avowed policy of outlining the future, rather than rehashing the past.

Also, for the second straight year, members of the sports staff, thanks to the cooperation of LSUBR's athletic department, were able to view Tiger home games in person.

The weekly Pigskin Prognosis was begun and it is hoped that it will become a permanent fixture.

Profiles of important sports personalities such as Arnold Palmer, Cassius Clay, Willie Pastrano, and a host of others bedecked "page 7."

Next September there will be a new Sports Editor and staff, striving to improve on this year's modest record. To them we tender a sincere "good luck!"

To you, the reader, we offer thanks for the kind words—and the criticisms. Both were sincerely appreciated.

• Some Season-Ending Predictions

Since this is the final issue of the year, it's especially tempting to make some predictions as a finale to the column, because nobody will remember them and thus won't be able to laugh in case the crystal ball should somehow go awry.

Of course there may be a few individuals who will save these words simply to be able to say "I told you so" at the right moment, but regardless, we'll hazard a few guesses—oops, we meant to say, scientific prognostications.

For a starter, the Yanks will best the St. Louis Cardinals in six games to regain their world title. The Dodgers will have to settle for a dismal fourth place in the NL.

The Bayou Bengals will sport a 9-1 record and a bowl invite by season's end, their only loss being a shocker to Ole Miss.

In the NFL it will be Green Bay and the Giants in the title match, with the Packers winning all the marbles.

In the AFL, Buffalo and San Diego will vie for championship honors; the old tea leaves indicate a Charger victory, for the second straight year.

These are just a few gems, but they'll have to do. Time has run out.

"Bring Your Troubles To Church"
CHURCH TYPEWRITER
Service
SALES
SERVICE
RENTALS
114 Chartres Street JA 2-1273
NEW ORLEANS 16, LA.
Portables Standards Electrics

BOOKCASES from $8.00
GO TO THE DRIFTWOOD OFFICE
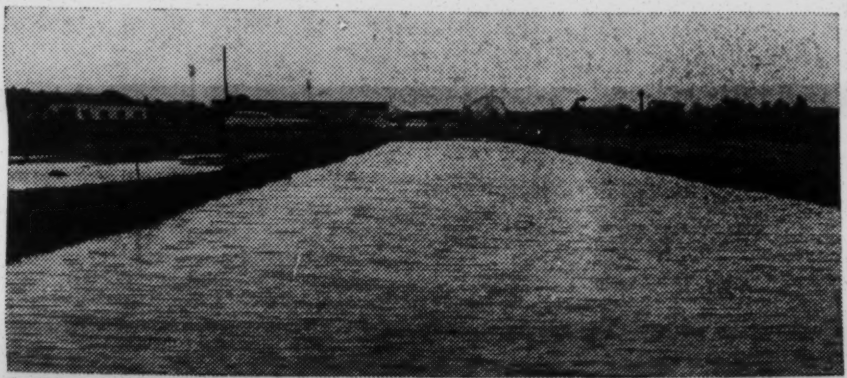
BUILDING 7

College Gulf Center
BOB CRAIS, Dealer
6232 Elysian Fields Avenue
Phone 288-8327

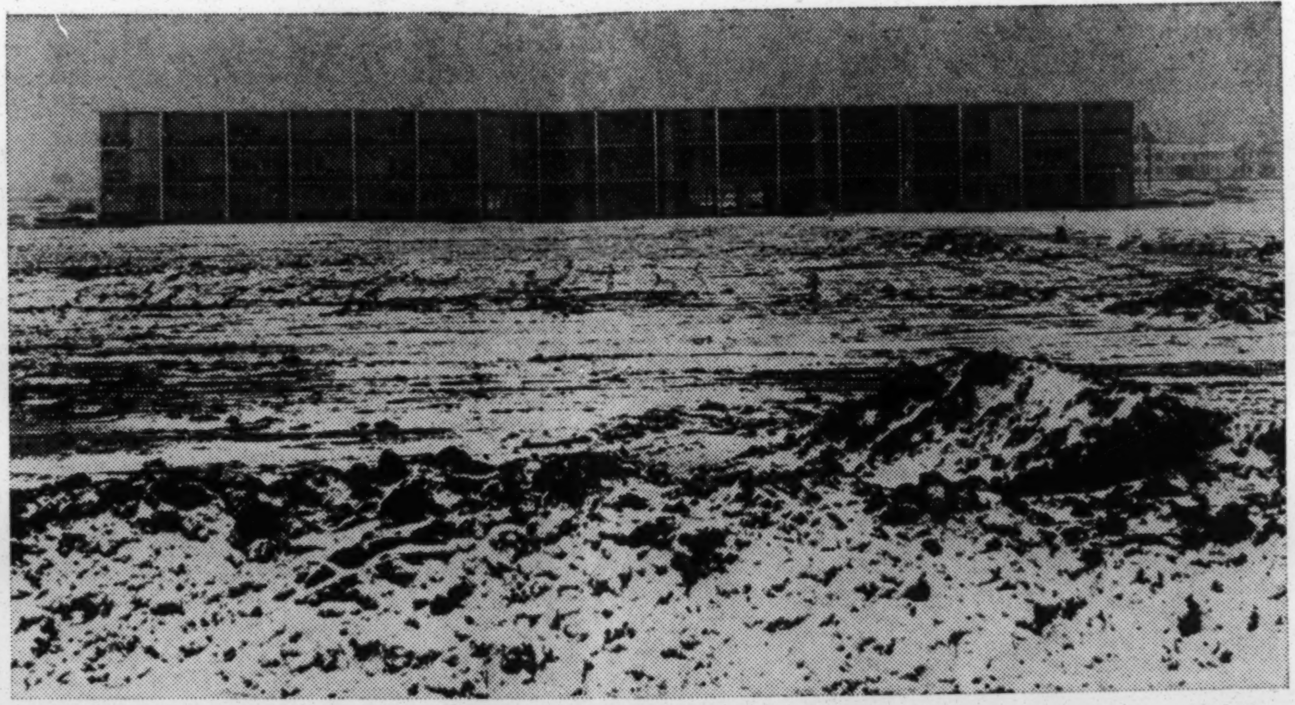
Pictorial Highlights Of The 1963-64 Academic Year

CANDIDATES
SUPPORT LSUNO

MAYOR VIC and former SGA president Harold Koretzky display bumper stickers on "Citizens Support LSUNO" Day, November 18, 1963.



LIKE THE EIRE CANAL—Deep crevices were frequently filled by torrential rains during construction daze. September to present.



HAPPY NEW YEAR—The weather man and Old Jack Frost turned the LSUNO campus into a miniature Siberia. Mounds of snow were heaped upon us and in this view the Liberal Arts building appears to be sitting on the top of Mt. Fujiama. December 31, 1963.

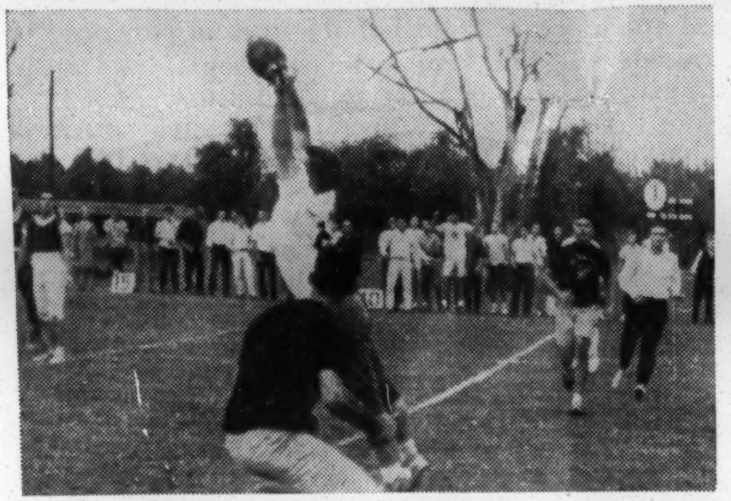
SHAKE OLD BUDDY—President John Hunter meets with Chancellor Homer Hitt on one of Dr. Hunter's frequent visits to the LSUNO campus. Caption by Kirk Carney. November 8, 1963.

OUR SWEETHEART—Rosemary Nelson, need we say more?

LIKE THE EIRE CANAL—Deep crevices were frequently filled by torrential rains during construction daze. September to present.

SHAKE OLD BUDDY—President John Hunter meets with Chancellor Homer Hitt on one of Dr. Hunter's frequent visits to the LSUNO campus. Caption by Kirk Carney. November 8, 1963.

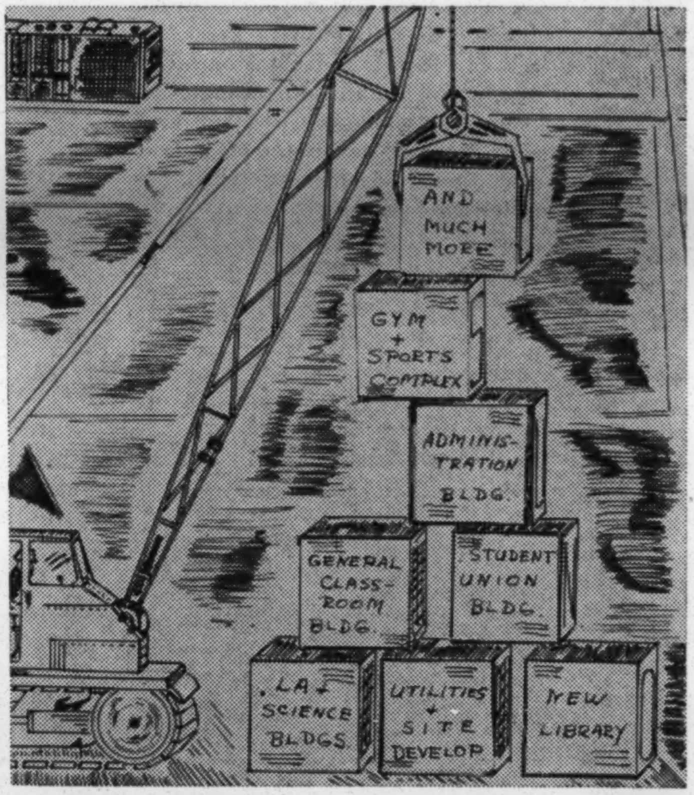
OUR SWEETHEART—Rosemary Nelson, need we say more?



GREEK KINGPINS—Theta Xi finally ovecame a two year Phi Kap jinx to beat the "plague" in the most exciting game of the year, 12-10. November 17, 1963.

SLOW BUT SURE—An aerial shot of landscaping and site development in progress since August, 1963.

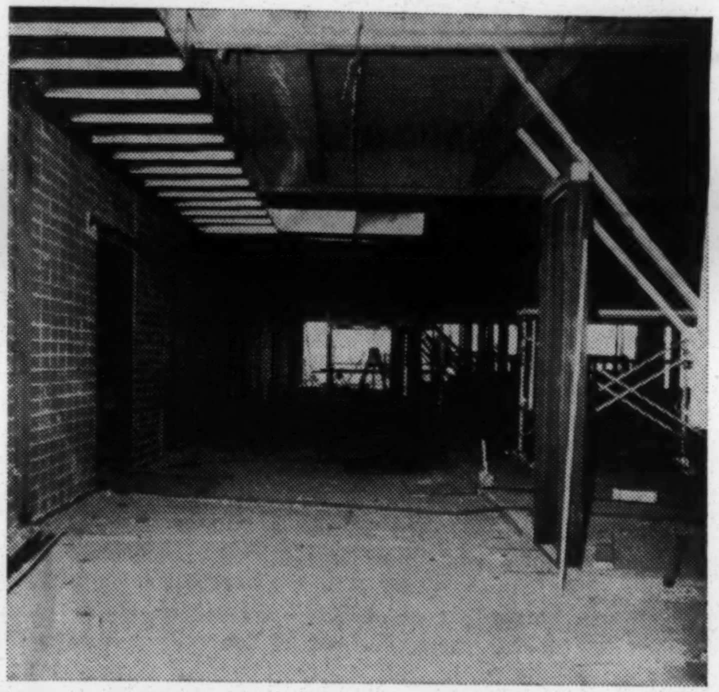
HONORABLE MEN—This year's student council pictured at a time of utter goodness. Watch the backbiting. September, 1963 through May, 1964.



AND MUCH MORE
GYM + SPORTS COMPLEX
ADMINISTRATION BLDG.
GENERAL CLASSROOM BLDG.
STUDENT UNION BLDG.
L.A. SCIENCE BLDGS.
UTILITIES + SITE DEVELOP
NEW LIBRARY

BUILDING BLOCKS—Cartoon illustration shows the progress of our capital improvement program. We need much more before LSUNO can be of greatest service to the city.

THAT'S THE ONE—That lousy, no good shrew is wrecking Pertruchio's life in "Taming of the Shrew," the best-attended play in the Workshop this year. Four people came. March 16-21, 1964.



DR. G.'S DREAM—Construction on the $2.5 million library is finally being completed with occupancy slated for June 1. Seems like it took forever.

OUR FAIR-HAIRED BOY—LSUNO student leaders discuss the university's future with Gubernatorial candidate John McKeithen. Governor McKeithen was the first to recognize LSUNO's needs in his trip to the campus. We've come a long way since then, haven't we? November 8, 1964.

IFC OFFICERS for the coming year are: (from left) Gaston Lemoine (LCA) treasurer, Sal Cusimano (PKT) secretary, Wayne Hill (TKE) vice-president, and James Donelon (Theta Xi) president.

SGA Convocation Honors Students For Extracurricular Activities

Student leaders at LSU in New Orleans were honored last week for outstanding work in the area of extracurricular activities.

The awards and certificates were presented at the annual Student Government Association convocation.

Awards and recipients were:

American Association of University Women award presented by the Metairie-Gretna branch: Nora M. Lake.

Student Council certificates: Robert D. Cummiskey, Louis S. Nunes, Allan J. Sanders, Philip J. LaGrange, Lonnie A. Moore III, Barbara J. Sallettes, Denis D. Kenney, Carol L. Brodtmann, Frank J. Speyerer, Gene F. Dunn, Kenneth F. Carter, Jr., Jacqueline V. Taylor, William Rock, Jr., Fortune A. Dugan, Amanda A. Beck, Eileen D. Lingener, Leonore F. Diamond, Ernest E. Tarantino, Gary B. Gaethe and Lester F. Vicknair.

Executive Department certif-ic: Sylvia M. Barbarin, Jansses A. Campos, Kenneth F. Carter, Jr., Jerilyn E. Cutler, Robert E. Delgado, Catherine L. Faust, Walter H. Grashoff III, Mary L. Greenbaum, Janie M. Hughes, Judith A. Jorns, Margaret R. McDonald, Crossley O'Dell, Pamela D. Rhoton, Malcolm J. Schwab, Janet E. Sinclair, Mary B. Weigand, Mary Beverly Weigand, Joyce D. Wesley, William R. Wilson, Jr.

• HONORS

(Continued from page 1)

Lynne E. Castle.

English Faculty prize: Gladys W. Milliner.

Freshman Mathematics award: Melvin B. Shear.

Freshman Chemistry award: Joseph F. Englert.

Delta Epsilon Distinguished Achievement Award in Mathematics: Betty J. Fricken.

LSUNO Religious Council Essay award: Edward Douglas White.

LSUNO's Women's Club award: Betty J. Fricken.

Alpha Xi Delta award: Estrellita de Castro.

Craftsman Guild Design award: Richard A. Bergez.

Honor Student Honor awards: Delores M. Brady, Millicent Ann Bourg, Fortune A. Dugan, Betty J. Fricken, Henry M. O'quin, Wallace C. Pye.

T. H. Harris Foundation Scholarships: Kathleen J. Boisseau, Richard E. Corbeille, Robert H. Doepke, Carol A. Eckelmann, Joseph E. Englert, Bonnie E. Gonzales, Philip J. Hargis, Jr., Billy M. James, Annette M. Johnson, Michael J. Kettenring, Sidney O. Lambert, Mary F. McConnon, Francisco M. Merchan, Madeline F. Ortner, John N. Palmisano, Robert R. Schlumbrecht, Helen L. Schmidt, Kenneth J. Tardiff.

Alumni Federation Certificates of Merit: Marilyn A. Adragna, William B. Brueggeman, Lynne E. Castle, Betty J. Fricken, Thomas O. Porteous, Wallace C. Pye. Randlph E. Trumbach, Edward D. White.

Delta Zetas Stage Formal

Delta Zeta National Sorority recently held its second annual Pink Rose Formal. Members, alumnae, and guests of the Theta Kappa chapter attended the formal on Saturday, May 2, at the Vista Shores Country Club.

Awards for scholarship

MEMBERS AND SPONSORS of Alpha Epsilon Phi are shown at formal installation of the colony as a national sorority.

AEPhi Installed, Officers Chosen

Ceremonies were recently held for the formal installation of the LSUNO colony of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. This is the fifth national sorority on our campus.

Officers of the new colony are Adrien Gernsbacher, president; Lee Diamond, vice-president; Jackie Goldberg, secretary; and Elinor Raffie, treasurer. Others initiated included Melanie Adler, Judy Cohen, Rachelle Goethe, Ethel Etzkin, Susan Regenbogen, Linda Rosenblum, and Charlotte Schwartzman.

The ceremonies were held at the Newcomb College chapter's sorority house. Officiating at the installation was Mrs. Harold Miller, director of the fifth province of AEPhi. Assisting was Mrs. Henry E. Friedlander, colony advisor.

Honored guests at the reception following the ceremonies included Mrs. Teal Bennett, Newcomb advisor; Mrs. A. Frank Wolf, one of the founders of the Newcomb chapter; Mrs. Ken Gormio, president New Orleans Alpha Epsilon Phi Alumnae Association; and Mrs. Martha Wickett, dean of women at LSUNO.

Dr. Good Awarded Contract To Study Various Elements

Dr. Mary L. Good, professor of chemistry, has been awarded an Atomic Energy Commission contract to study a variety of complex compounds resulting from nuclear reactions.

Three-quarters of the more than $25,000 contract is fi-

Student Council certificates: Robert D. Cummiskey, Louis S. Nunes, Allan J. Sanders, Philip J. LaGrange, Lonnie A. Moore III, Barbara J. Sallettes, Denis D. Kenney, Carol L. Brodtmann, Frank J. Speyerer, Gene F. Dunn, Kenneth F. Carter, Jr., Jacqueline V. Taylor, William Rock, Jr., Fortune A. Dugan, Amanda A. Beck, Eileen D. Lingener, Leonore F. Diamond, Ernest E. Tarantino, Gary B. Gaethe and Lester F. Vicknair.

Executive Department certificates: Michael Kettenring, Richard LeCorgne, legal department; Gerard J. Haddican, Antoine A. Laiche, Jr., Brian J. Cotter, Rosemary Ann Nelson, public relations department; Ronald R. Bernhard, finance department; Francis J. Ferry, Marilyn J. Arruebarrena, executive directorship; Alan Cohen, cabinet member; Raymond C. Fink II, morale commission.

Honor Council certificates: Gary E. Dyson, William B. Brueggeman, Wallace C. Pye, Edwin R. Pillault, Jr., Delores M. Brady, Dennis H. Blackinton, Robert L. Towns, Baldwin S. Stutts, Beverly A. Bihler.

Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities: Harold I. Koretzky, Louis S. Nunes, Allan J. Sanders, Barbara J. Sallettes, Marilyn A. Muniz, Nora M. Lake, Augusta A. Ciccio, Evelyn I. Hebert, Carol L. Brodtmann, Shirley E. Pettingill, Henry L. Tebbe, Jack L. Whitehead, Jr., Delores M. Brady, Annette M. Johnson, Marilyn R. Blasini, William K. Carney, Beverly A. Bihler, Randolph E. Trumbach, Baldwin S. Stutts, Amanda A. Beck, Robert L. Towns, William Rock, Jr., Gary E. Dyson, Fortune A. Dugan, Richard J. Majeste, Alan Cohen.

Morale Commission award: Denis D. Kenney.

Talent Night awards: First place individual, Nancy A. Renick; second place, Jack E. Belsom; third place, Mary Rose Gervais, first place group, the Augustine Twins; second place, the Beagles Combo; third place, the Sugar Shack Duet.

Plaques for the Morale Commissioner, Thomas R. Barrow; Honor Council Moderator, Randolph E. Trumbach; Coed Vice-President, Jerlene McCall; Immediate Past President, Isadore H. Koretzky; Vice-President, Henry L. Tebbe.

Certificates for Leadership Clin-

Jorns, Margaret

Crossley O'Dell, Pamela D. Rhoton, Malcolm J. Schwab, Janet E. Sinclair, Mary B. Weigand, Mary Beverly Weigand, Joyce D. Wesley, William R. Wilson, Jr.

William B. Brueggeman, Lynne E. Castle, Betty J. Fricken, Thomas O. Porteous, Wallace C. Pye. Randlph E. Trumbach, Edward D. White.

enbogen, Linda Rosenblum, and Charlotte Schwartzman.

The ceremonies were held at the Phi Alumnae Association; and Mrs. Martha Wickett, dean of women at LSUNO.

Delta Zetas Stage Formal

Delta Zeta National Sorority recently held its second annual Pink Rose Formal. Members, alumnae, and guests of the Theta Kappa chapter attended the formal on Saturday, May 2, at the Vista Shores Country Club.

Awards for scholarship were presented: Penny Bourg received the chapter member high scholarship award; Sybil Boudreaux and Corinne Kambur tied for the highest grade average for the pledges.

The Delta Zeta's give special honors to one pledge and one member who are outstanding. These honors, decided by secret ballot, are traditionally awarded at the Rose Formal. Sybil Boudreaux was chosen the outstanding pledge of the year; she was presented with the pledge paddle with her name engraved on it.

The "Dream Girl" of Delta Zeta is a very special presentation: she is chosen by her sorority sisters as the girl who is described by the words of the song, "Dream Girl." This year, the "Girl of the Lamp so True . . ." is Shea Stein.

Outgoing officers were presented. New officers were announced. They are: Shirley Pettingill, president; Carol Skelton, pledge trainer; Lois Brady, rush chairman; Andrea Nicolaides, recording secretary; Rosemary Allardyce, corresponding secretary; Penny Bourg, treasurer; Jo Ann Cheleno, historian; Lynette Jerry, Pan-Hellenic delegate. Committee chairmen are: Raven Coleman and Claudia Fernandez, social chairmen; Charlotte Hudson, activities chairman; Judy Gerstner, standards chairman; Ditty Nicolaides, scholarship chairman; Corinne Kambur, press chairman. Officers and chairmen were installed following formal initiation.

The president was presented with a bouquet of pink killarney roses; officers and committee chairmen were presented with single killarney roses, the flower of Delta Zeta.

DALE BOUDREAUX, was recently elected president of Theta Xi Fraternity, Beta Xi chapter. Other officers include James Donelon, vice-president; Bob Delaneunille, treasurer; Mike Becker, house manager; Emmett Poynot, corresponding secretary; Jean Caillouet, scholarship officer; Jeffrey Houin, pledge master; Leonard Nelson, social chairman.

● McKEITHEN

(Continued from page 1)

of Caddo Parish, who waged a full-fledged campaign. The Republican threat was turned back, however, and McKeithen now assumes the governorship for which he waged such a strenuous fight.

Governor and Mrs. McKeithen are the parents of six children, Jay, 20; Fox, 18; Rebecca, 16; Melissa, 10; Pamela, 8; and Geneva Maude, 6. His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse J. McKeithen, make their home in Columbia. Mr. McKeithen has a brother, Dr. E. E. McKeithen of Hodge, and twin sisters, Mrs. R. F. Meredith of Calvin and Mrs. W. W. Williams of Beaumont, Texas.

Dr. Good Awarded Contract To Study Various Elements

Dr. Mary L. Good, professor of chemistry, has been awarded an Atomic Energy Commission contract to study a variety of complex compounds resulting from nuclear reactions.

Three-quarters of the more than $25,000 contract is financed by the AEC and the remainder by the university.

Dr. Good will investigate the complex compounds of the man-made elements which result from nuclear reactions on uranium and plutonium.

Contract monies provide for summer salary, expenses and supplies, as well as travel. It also provides for a full-time post-doctoral research associate, two graduate and two undergraduate assistants.

Dr. Good will travel to Vienna, Austria, in September under AEC travel grant to address the Eighth International Conference on Coordination Chemistry. She will speak on ways and means of identifying specific metal complexes in water solutions. The meeting is sponsored by the International Union of Pure and Allied Chemistry.

Dr. Good, a native of Texas, is widely published in the field of complex ion chemistry. She received her doctorate from the University of Arkansas and joined the LSUNO faculty in 1958. She was recently named to the 1964 listing of Who's Who of American Women.

JEROME TELES (center), new president of Alpha Theta Epsilon is shown with: Michael Kettenring, representative, Elsa Pizatti, secretary-treasurer, Ken Tardiff, vice-president, and Emil Koretzky, representative.

Teles New Prexy Of Honor Society

The Alpha Theta Epsilon Honors Society is proud to announce its new officers for 1964-65. Succeeding Fortune A. Dugan as president is Jerome Teles, a junior mathematics major, and succeeding Robert L. Towns as vice-president is Kenneth Tardiff, a junior biology major. The other officers are Elsa Pizatti, secretary-treasurer, and Michael Kettenring and Emil Koretzky who are the new representatives.

The purpose of Alpha Theta Epsilon is threefold: to recognize academic accomplishments, to foster intellectual programs, and to serve to improve the level of scholastic achievement on the campus. In accordance with these aims the Society sponsors lectures and debates which are held on campus. Many of the members are also officeholders in the Student Government Association as well as many other organizations on campus.

In addition, Alpha Theta Epsilon emphasizes continuance of education in graduate school. The society takes great pride in the fact that most of its members go on to graduate school.

Hi—I'll be working for THE DRIFTWOOD next year, will you?

Applications are being accepted daily in Bldg. 7, Room 109.

FINAL EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

Second Semester 1963-64

Class	Examination Time	Examination Date
8 MWF	4:00 p.m.- 6:00 p.m.	Monday, May 25
9 MWF	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Saturday, May 23
10 MWF	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Tuesday, May 26
11 MWF	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Friday, May 22
12 MWF	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Wednesday, May 20
1 MWF	4:00 p.m.- 6:00 p.m.	Thursday, May 21
2 MWF	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Friday, May 22
3 MFW	4:00 p.m.- 6:00 p.m.	Wednesday, May 20
4 MWF	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Wednesday, May 20
8 TThS	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Saturday, May 23
9 TThS	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Monday, May 25
10 TThS	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Monday, May 25
11 TThS	4:00 p.m.- 6:00 p.m.	Friday, May 22
12:00-1:30 TTh	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Thursday, May 21
1:30-3:00 TTh	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Thursday, May 21
3:00-4:30 TTh	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Wednesday, May 20

GROUP EXAMINATIONS

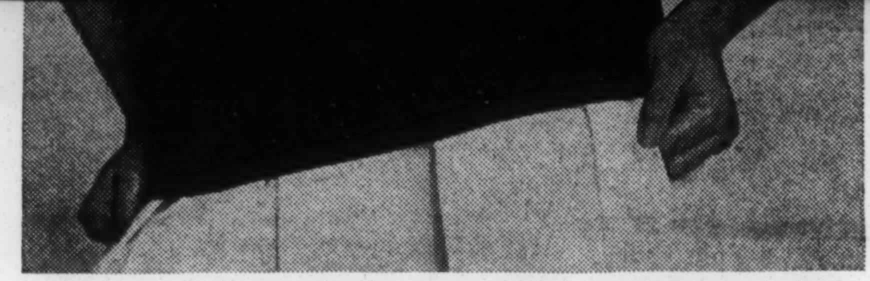
Class	Examination Time	Examination Date
Biology 1 and 2	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Monday, May 25
Chemistry 1, 2, and 2B	4:00 p.m.- 6:00 p.m.	Saturday, May 23
Chemistry 12	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Thursday, May 21
Education 51	1:30 p.m.- 3:30 p.m.	Tuesday, May 26
Health and Phys. Ed. 41	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Saturday, May 23
Mathematics 1	8:00 a.m.-10:00 a.m.	Tuesday, May 26
Mathematics 2 and 7	10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.	Friday, May 22

EVENING DIVISION EXAMINATIONS

Class	Examination Time	Examination Date
6:30 MW	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Wednesday, May 20
8:00 MW	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Monday, May 25
6:30 TTh	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Tuesday, May 26
8:00 TTh	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Thursday, May 21

NOTES:

1. Classes meeting MTWThF, MTThF, MW, MF, or WF will take examinations at the time scheduled for MWF.
2. Classes meeting TTh, or ThS will take examinations at the time scheduled for TThS.
3. Examinations scheduled as group examinations will be assigned rooms by the departments concerned.
4. Regular examinations will take place in the regular classrooms.
5. Examinations in Books and Libraries 1 will be given at the last class meeting.
6. Last meeting of evening classes will be Monday, May 18, 1964.



Hi—I'll be working for THE DRIFTWOOD next year, will you?

Applications are being accepted daily in Bldg. 7, Room 109.

6:30 TTh	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Tuesday, May 26
8:00 TTh	6:30 p.m.- 8:30 p.m.	Thursday, May 21

NOTES:

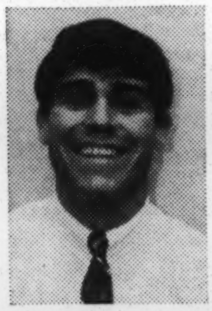
1. Classes meeting MTWThF, MTThF, MW, MF, or WF will take examinations at the time scheduled for MWF.
2. Classes meeting TTh, or ThS will take examinations at the time scheduled for TThS.
3. Examinations scheduled as group examinations will be assigned rooms by the departments concerned.
4. Regular examinations will take place in the regular classrooms.
5. Examinations in Books and Libraries 1 will be given at the last class meeting.
6. Last meeting of evening classes will be Monday, May 18, 1964.

Editor Announces Tabloid Staff Positions For The Coming Year

Andrew R. Kreutz, re-appointed editor-in-chief of THE DRIFTWOOD, has announced his selections for the tabloid's editorial staff for the 1964-65 academic year.

Stepping into the newly-created position of associate editor is Kirk Carney. Carney has served as managing editor during the past year and as a news writer in 1962-63.

After attending graduate school for a master's degree in journalism, Carney plans to make newspaper work his career.



Succeeding Carney as managing editor is Elliott Seymour, who during the past academic term, served as sports writer and later as news editor.

Seymour, a sophomore majoring in psychology, plans to get his master's in psychology and then enter the seminary.

Gerard Haddican takes over the post of business manager from Jack Whitehead. Haddican, who headed the SGA public relations department, is a sophomore majoring in economics. Haddican handled the bulk of student government news during the past year.

Lili Sikorski, who worked as a feature writer during the past term, succeeds Gary Dyson as feature editor. Miss Sikorski is a junior majoring in pre-law.

Before coming to LSUNO, Miss Sikorski attended the Universities of Hawaii, Michigan, Vienna, Loyola, and Brigham Young.

Filling the position of news editor is Jane Boisseau. Miss Boisseau, who is majoring in English, served as news writer during the past year.

She succeeds Elliott Seymour in this post. This semester she received a T. H. Harris scholarship, and last semester she earned a 2.8 average.

Succeeding Vincent Peuler as sports editor is Donald Donnelly. A pre-law major, Donnelly gained valuable experience as a sports writer during the past semester.

At Behrman high school Donnelly was a sports writer.

NOW OPEN IN GENTILLY

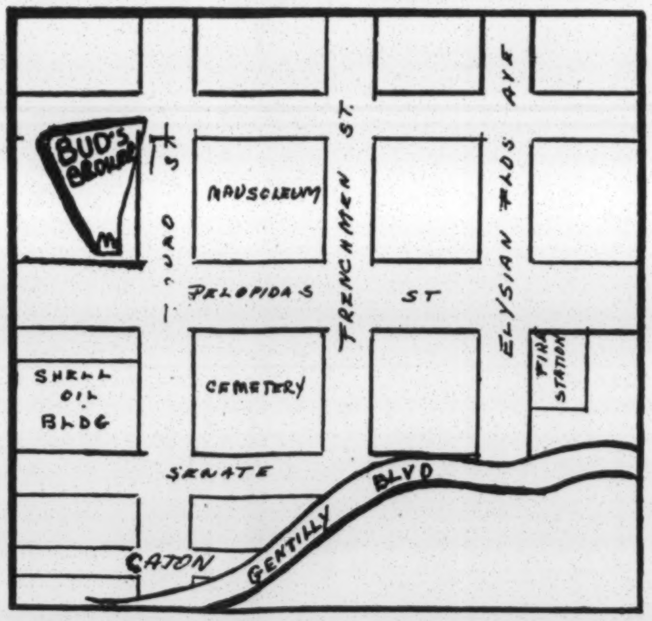
BUD'S BROILER

WHERE

"High Quality Meat and Glowing Charcoal Make the Difference"

2073 Pelopidas

OPEN 11 A.M. TILL 12 P.M.



Featuring 6 combinations of Charcoal Broiled Hamburgers

Homemade Fried Pies

Enjoy New Orleans Original Charcoal Broiled Hamburgers

FOR FAST TAKE OUT SERVICE

Call 282-6696

Also 2 other locations to serve you:

2338 Banks Street | Phone 524-2022
500 City Park Ave. | Phone HU 6-2559

② HS

197-MAGAZINE

TTS-Machine 1

grevilles, 2, june 2, 1'64— — — magazine—8 on 9½ x 12— — —K KLAN— — — — — — — — — — — smith— — — — — — — — — — —

By MARGARET LONG

ja resurgent ku Klux Klan rides this summer across the South. The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee has counted nearly 200 cross burnings in recent fonths. Since the organization of a Mississippi Realm of the Klan late last year, that sate has had six killings, several shootings and many beatings of Negroes, besides the disappearance of three civil-rights workers. Reporters and civil libertarians attribute recent violence over Negro demonstrations in Jacksonville, and St. Augustine, Fla., and in Tuscaloosa, Ala., to Klan "mentality" and incitements, if not to Klansmen directly. The Klan "mentality," as well as the Klan itself, is already a force in Alabama politics, and may become so in Mississippi. The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith estimates the Invisible Empire's membership at between 48,000 and 65,000—and growing.

u.c.

m

t

Actually, there are about a dozen different Klans. Georgia has a proliferation of them, notably an Atlanta group, led by Grand Dragon Calvin Craig, and the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan headed by an attorney named James Venable. There is a North Florida Klan led by Gene Fallow of Jacksonville. Tennessee has its Dixie Klans, and North Carolina has its faction.

Dominant among these splinter groups is the United Klans of America, Knights of the Ku Klux Llans, Inc., which was organized three years ago by Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa. Mr. Shelton seeks to create a "new Klan image."

K

The Knights have long been looked upon, locally, with scorn—ignorant poor whites, rednecks and roughnecks, far less respectable than members of the White Citizens Councils. The Imperial Wizard has brought to the Klan a new, soft-spoken line, adorned with talk of history, heritage and re-

7

The Knights have long been looked upon, locally, with scorn—ignorant poor whites, rednecks and roughnecks, far less respectable than members of the White Citizens Councils. The Imperial Wizard has brought to the Klan a new, soft-spoken line, adorned with talk of history, heritage and research.

The new voice advocates Christian tolerance and Americanism, warns of a Communist conspiracy to integrate and mongrelize the white South, professes nonviolence and predicts "racial war."

Particularly interesting is the constant inclusion in Mr. Shelton's talk, and in the new Klan literature, of ideas and phrases from the Negro movement—"nonviolence," "massive rallies," "demonstrations," "economic boycotts" and "voter registration to get these politicians out of office." The new Klan plan for "Caucasian communities" on a "reservation" somewhere in Alabama is suggestive of the Black Muslims' segregationist proposal to evacuate several Southern states of whites and give the area over to a Negro nation.

The three-room suite of the United Klans, in an old downtown office building, is quietly furnished with old desks, modern chairs~~, sofa~~ and draperies, photographs of Gov. George Wallace—and with Mrs. Shelton, a smiling young woman with dark eyes in a friendly face, who works all day with "Bobby." Mr. Shelton's purple satin robe with many-colored ~~stripes and~~ insignia hangs in a plastic garment bag next to a Confederate flag beside his desk. An American flag stands on the other side. A red-trimmed, white-satin robe—presumably that of an Exalted Cyclops—hangs on another wall.

Mr. Shelton is a slight, but broad-shouldered, man of 35, with a long, beautifully cut face, light blue eyes and a soft voice. His expression is melancholy and he occasionally emphasizes his speech with a grieved frown of his fair eyebrows.

He is a native of Tuscaloosa, where his grandfather was a farmer and storekeeper and his father is now "a retired merchant." It has been said that they were both Klansmen. Mr. Shelton denied the story.

"That may have gotten started from my belief that a person is born a Klansman," he said. "To a degree, it is a religion, a faith, a belief. A man may subscribe to its principles and live under it, and, in the heritage and background of the Klan—the only organization by and for Americans—sentimentally, in this way we are all members."

italics

198-MAGAZINE

TTS–Machine 1

C

He graduated from high school, took some correspondence courses and worked at a local rubber company, first in the plant and then as a salesman, and later sold automobile air-conditioning. (A friend of his said: "Bobby gave up a $10,000-a-year job; he lost it for his work with the Klan. No one has given up more than they have, and I don't see how they make it. He wants nothing for himself.")

He served three years in the Army, in Berlin during the Airlift and at the time of desegregation in the armed services—"a great educational opportunity."

The Klan, Shelton said, "is my entire dedication." He has no time for sports, hobbies or other pleasures except occasional visits from Klan friends at home, and his exercise is "running all over the country." The Sheltons have two daughters and a son, aged 7, 5 and 2.

ADL

Shelton smiled at ~~a mention of the published~~ estimates of Klan membership. He said 65,000 "is closer to the neighborhood of the Alabama Klan alone."

"Secrecy in the business of membership is one of our biggest weapons," he said. "If we boast about it then we lose advantage." He said the Klan is "very active" in states in the Norht, East and West, is well-organized in Alabama, Louisiana, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Georgia, and is having a "great increase in membership and activity in Mississippi, where it is now open and aboveboard." California membership "is very strong," he said, but "we can't come out openly, because the Communist conspiracy is strong and the Klan must not show its hand.

th

had

a

"We've ~~ad~~ a very rapid increase since we got chartered, an increase more than we can take care of. We do not have the desire of a rush of volume membership. We don't want people of an emotional, crowd feeling, or leaders to satisfy that excited emotional feeling, that can stomp and talk at meetings, and then they'll go out and beat or kill a nigger. No, we wish to provide satisfaction ~~of~~ people in a more constructive manner."

to

He said his new Klan "has a staff of 13 or 14 men—several lawyers, members of church boards and bank boards." Dues, he said, vary with local klaverns.

TTS–Machine 10

grevilius, 2, june 25, 1964— —
magazine—8 on 9 x 10½— —

"The Klan image," Shelton went on rapidly, "has been so misrepresented in various new medias, misrepresenting that the Klansmen are living on a theory of hate and fear . . . Th Klan symbolizes the Reconstruction. We try to keep the Klan today on the same pedestal of history, of the Reconstruction past, when there wer no laws to defend the Southerner under the cruel heel of Federal oppression.

"We are promoting mass education on the general program to the general public to inform them who our enemies are, what they are, the methods employed and how they ar to be countered. Though not a political organization, we realize that, utilizing the law of self-preservation, to survive w must be involved in politics, to extend the Klan program of voter registration."

The Klan education progra he said, has "many stages." One of them is "research on textbooks in schools."

"It is one means of the conspiracy to formulate an alien ideology among young children," and the Klan "contemplates to execute a program of the true writing of history." School officials, he explained, are often innocent of the conspiracy's distorting hand in school books, "and when it is called to their attention, many of them do not have a knowledge of what is taking place in our schools."

He did not name any objectionable books, but said: "The most liberal trend is in the hgher echelons of intellect. . . We find types of fellow travel ers in various walks of life . . We'll formulate a list of completely falsified textbooks, the constant attempt to create in a young child the beliefs that Southerners have always been backward, hating the nigra an unprogressive."

"The Southerner," he declared, "has progressed with the nigra on his shoulders farther than any other section of the country in every area of civilization and society. The War Between the States resulted, particularly in the Southeastern part of the Unite States, in the South being parched by burning and destroyed in Sherman's march. The South had to completely rebuild and revamp our civilization. And we had to carry the blunt weight of him, the nigra, in the uphill struggle against unfair freight rates, carpetbaggers, scalawags and Federal laws against us."

The North, Shelton observed "is jealous of the South, our progress beyond them, of man individuals moving South to enjoy our production, our attitudes and our labor forces."

2

199-MAGAZINE

TTS—Machine 10

He said Southerners and Klansmen "have no hate for the nigra." They believe "ther e is a place in society for all persons and ˑaces, but you can = not pass or legislate class and social equality. The nigra mus t study and try to gain this level, rather than force it by legislation. . . . He has far more economy in the South, more business and private own = ership, more homes owned by nigras than in any other part of the country."

Mr. Shelton was for years a member of Local 351 of the United Rubber Workers. He said he believes in unions, but feels that they are "at the national level, infiltrated and rot = ten . . . with no regard for the Southerner, and control and manipulate us for advantage and capacity in the North. Wa l= ter Reuther is an admitted worker to set up a Socialist republic, a Socialist America."

Shelton considers the Negro movement for integration and the national labor movement to be intertwined in a conspiracy to take Southern union
dues "to finance Communistic
(tr) rpograms of integration in the South. Using the money and using the nigra as a tool, they continue to utilize and use M.
[L. King the Rev. Dr. Martin
Luther King Jr.], Shuttles-
[worth the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference] and the N.A.A.C.P. to be more militant participants in racial demonstrations, and [they the Communists in turn] slip into the background and wrest control.

(tr) "I frimly believe," he went on, "that M. L. King will be eliminated by his own people
—will be assassinated.

"The nigra is beginning to realize that when his people are desegregated, that where the movement has taken hold, that they are affiliated with known Communists, and that i t brings about the destruction of his own economy, and the nigra businesses had to close their doors. Many well-meaning nigras know their own people are being used by Communists."

The Imperial Wizrd shares the current fashionable concern with poverty and unemployment, and offers the solution of restricting immigration.

"Cheap labor from foreign countries and a flood of immigration creates more problems," he said. "In foreign countries they look on Americ a as a place to get milk and honey, but their loyalty remains for the motherland across the waters. They are ~~n~~ not for our republican form of gov = ernment. Some of them return to the motherland and still receive their Social Security."

The Klan believes the poll tax is "a necessary method, disregarding race. We require thod of selecting in-

"Cheap labor from foreign countries and a flood of immigration creates more problems," he said. "In foreign countries they look on Americ a as a place to get milk and honey, but their loyalty remains for the motherland across the waters. They are ~~a~~ not for our republican form of government. Some of them return to the motherland and still receive their Social Security."

The Klan believes the poll tax is "a necessary method, disregarding race. We require some method of selecting individuals intelligent enough to elect the leadership to enact the laws that govern us." Shelton himself "would advocate some aptitude test similar to those given men in the armed services, and then they could not holler discrimination."

He conceded gravely: "If a nigra had the ability to pass such tests, he should have the right to vote. You have the immoral aspects of nigras who do not have the ability to writ e their names and can be controlled by a carton of cigarettes or a carton of beer; some whites, too, can be controlled. We must select citizen s who have the ability to vote for leadership which will enact (tr) alws for not only you and I but future generations."

The Klan is deeply concerne d over the welfare program known as Aid to Dependent Children.

bright
Of charm

"Most nigra women have a better contract with the welfare and A.D.C. than unions have with management," Mr. Shelton offered, with ~~another~~ a rare; quick smile. "A mother gets $30 for each illegitimate child, and then some of them, their children, are getting the same check for her illegitimate grandchildren. And they make the rounds of all the surplus food, welfare offices and churches, and the more illegitimate children they have, the better they can live. Go to the reciprocants of welfare and you'll see the TV antenna on the house, and a good sound auto in the front yard. They drive late-model Cadillacs and Buicks to the surplus-food lines. Should we carry the tab to support such families?"

correct
spelling?

The Klan program to buy up tracts of land and settle white people in Caucasian communities to avoid integration is "still in the planning stage, in the future," Shelton said.

"We are researching the possibilities and our legal staff is at work on it, and we're interested in it because we're coming under a governing dictatorial body. These reservations will be a sanctity, where a man is to continue to raise up a family and have his beliefs respected."

200-MAGAZINE

TTS—Machine 10

Unlike most white segregationists, the Imperial Wizrd a does not profess love for Negroes in their place. Mrs. Shelton has "a white lady" who takes care of her children because he wants them "raised i n a Caucasian atmosphere."

"I have a lot of nigras I'm in contact with, who pass on information to us and who hav e no regard for this movement," he said. "It is infringing on their own beliefs and principles, and they are intimidated and harassed. They say they have a boycott here and they have their own goon squads to harass and intimidate Negroes and snatch packages out of their hands and threaten them.

"They threaten more demonstrations. I welcome them; it shows their ignorance and stupidity. If they flout the laws, we are going to see that they uphold the law. As long as the police can handle it, we'll give them the opportunity, and if they can't, we'll use whatever means are necessary. They wil l not be allowed to openly flout the citizenry of this town or any town."

He expects a "spontaneous rise" in Negro activity "when the moon comes full. My research shows that the full moon brings ~~our~~ out the animal instincts, increases their excitement, and they become violent, restless, inclined to get in trouble and brawls."

I asked Mr. Shelton about cross burnings in Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama and about attacks, some by sheete d men, on Negroes.

"The Klan has not brought about any propagation of violence and intimidation," he declared. "In many cases, nigras are told that the Klan is responsible for violence against them; stories are exaggerated. The conspiracy will stoop to no level. The violence may be associated, yes, but it is not Klan work. There are, also, a number of Klans."

Of current Klan attitudes toward Catholics and Jews, he

"The Klan has not brought about any propagation of violence and intimidation," he declared. "In many cases, nigras are told that the Klan is responsible for violence against them; stories are exaggerated. The conspiracy will stoop to no level. The violence may be associated, yes, but it is not Klan work. There are, also, a number of Klans."

Of current Klan attitudes toward Catholics and Jews, he said: "A foreign section of a sect or belief, or allegiance to a religious body—in some case Catholics have been pushed to the limit. Leander Perez [the Louisiana segregationist who was excommunicated by the Roman Catholic Church for his war on parochial-school desegregation], rather than bow to his dynosee ~~(??)~~ was excommunicated; he would not be loyal to a mandate or ruling rather than his conviction.

correct? Not "diocese"?

"The argument as to why Jews don't belong to the Klan is belief in Christ. We are a Christian, Protestant fraternal organization, and they believe in the Messiah, Jehova and other figures, but not Christ. If a Jewish person is a Communist person, we should not be considered anti-Semitic for exposing this person. And many Jews have been found in the Communist conspiracy."

The Klan wants "each race t promote its own culture, to inculcate race pride." But, he added, desegregation "is disrupting and breaking down all connections and communications, so people who five years ago would think nothing of throwing 50 cents or a dollar into the hat of a nigra now won't do it."

White Emancipation, Too

Since the 1954 Supreme Court decision desegregating the public schools, many public and private agencies have directed their efforts toward improved Negro education in the South. But no comparable attention has been given to the related subject of white education in Southern schools and colleges or to the social structure that conditions the learning process.

A report in today's Times Magazine, plus a comment a few days ago by the outgoing president of the Southern Historical Association, paint a disturbing picture of the educational scene in Mississippi. The article by Margaret Long, a Southern novelist and editor, reveals the deeply ingrained prejudice against Negroes held by an intelligent white youth. Nothing that has happened in the United States or the world—as seen from Mississippi—has shaken this youth's conviction that "the Negro is inherently unequal."

The explanation for this frozen thought pattern comes to light in the comments made by Dr. James W. Silver, the University of Mississippi historian. He condemns the closed society that fosters unreasoning "obedience to an official orthodoxy almost identical with the pro-slavery philosophy." Ironically, he says that while Negroes have made gains, the white Southerner has sealed his own mind in the century since Emancipation.

Read together, the Long report and Professor Silver's bold remarks tell us that there is a need for white emancipation, too, in Mississippi—emancipation from the moral and mental sickness of a society built on the degradation of its Negro fellow citizens.

Founded
1909

THE PROGRESSIVE

MADISON 3, WISCONSIN • ALPINE 7-4626
MORRIS H. RUBIN, EDITOR

June 12, 1964

Margaret Long
Editor
NEW SOUTH
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Maggie:

Thanks for your letter (delightful, breezy, and informative as always) and the two articles.

I have regretfully decided against the Birmingham piece--at least for the time being. It has some fine reporting in it, but it does ramble a bit and seems to me to lack a sharp enough focus. Most of all, however, and this may sound subversive, I am getting a bit tired of, if not downright bored with, Birmingham. I want to make this suggestion, however: in the fall, after Dr. King's sorties during the long, hot summer, you might be able to pin a new piece on his leadership drive and incorporate much of your observations in this piece.

Now, as for the shorter piece on the untidy outsiders who invade the south each summer, I like it and want to use it in our August issue. It seems to me highly readable, tartly done, and very Long-ish. It should, as I say, be used in our August number--July is now going to press. It seems to me you ought to add a paragraph or two somewhere near the beginning or the end on anything pertinent you have observed thus far this summer. You say in your letter: "If it's not too late we might tie it in to the precipitation of students and adults to Mississippi this summer, with a cautionary paragraph or so, and possibly some SNCC plans to clean these people up, since they are screening them so carefully." In view of your suggestion and my own hunch for a bit of up-dating, I am returning the manuscript for that purpose. It would be most helpful if you could get it back to me at your earliest possible convenience--no later than June 24--so that we can clear the decks for it for our August issue.

Founded in 1909 by Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. • Published by The Progressive, Inc., A Non-Profit Foundation

HI WAY

November 1964

PRESENT STATUS OF THE KLANS IN THE SOUTH

There has been a significant resurgence of the Klans throughout the South. In our opinion, this increase in Klan activity and membership has come about as the Klan focalizes the objections to the Civil Rights Bill.

Included in the general term of the Civil Rights Bill, is the loss "of our southern way of life", "breakdown of our customs and traditions", "the grab for pure power by the Federal government", "the protection of states' rights", and other cliches and platitudes of this nature. With the exceptions noted below, the intensity of the Klan thrust is specifically pointed to defeat the Negro drive for equality which is taking place.

As you know, for some time during the latter part of the 1950s, the Klan reached a low point and, for all intents and purposes, was no longer an effective instrument throughout the South. With the coming of the social revolution of our time, the Klans grasped this issue and have used it as the vehicle on which their new found strength is based.

The Klans have used most of the arguments known as the segregationist line in their drive to regain power and recruit members. There have been straight-out appeals to pure segregation. There are appeals to fight Communism. There are appeals blatantly anti-Semitic -- "The Jews are responsible for the race mixing". These are but some of the exhortations that the Klans have used with the basic theme always being white supremacy.

It is estimated that Klan membership throughout the South has risen approximately 5,000 to 10,000 persons in the last year, with a total of between 45,000 to 65,000 Klan members. In many cases, the Klans have spread into areas of the country that have not seen Klan activity for many years. Using the Civil Rights issue, Klan organization is taking place in West Virginia, Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and California. This is not to suggest that there are not other places where the Klan is seeking to re-establish itself. These are merely the areas of most intense activity.

The largest group is THE UNITED KLANS OF AMERICA, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., headed by Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. This group has for some time been attempting to change its image into one of so-called respectability. This Klan has announced that it has purchased land in Alabama where white segregated private communities will be established. In addition, through the organizational structure of this Klan, insurance of all kinds is being sold so that the income can be used for Klan activities.

Affiliated with this Klan are a number of other Klan groups which will be outlined below. In addition, other Klan groups in Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, are part of the UNITED KLANS OF AMERICA.

The Grand Dragon for Georgia is Calvin Craig, and in Georgia there are 40 Klaverns with an estimated membership of from 7000 to 8000 persons in THE UNITED KLAN.

The Grand Dragon for North Carolina of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Jones. There are approximately 25 Klaverns in the North Carolina area with about ~~800~~ 6000 to ~~900~~ 7000 members.

The Grand Dragon for South Carolina of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Scoggins.

The Grand Dragon for Alabama of THE UNITED KLANS is Robert Creel.

THE UNITED KLANS have been trying to spread into Louisiana and Mississippi. It is reported that in Louisiana they are meeting with some success, but, so far, all indications show that they have not made much inroad into the Citizens Council areas of Mississippi.

2 THE NATIONAL KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., with headquarters in Tucker, Georgia, is headed by Atlanta attorney James Venable. In addition, Venable is the head of the Defensive Legion of Registered Americans, Inc., The Committee of One Million Caucasians to March on Washington, and, with Wally Butterworth, The Christian Voters and Buyers League, which produces and disseminates viciously anti-Semitic, anti-Negro and anti-government records which, among other things, are used as Klan recruiting devices and to further the other groups, which are all for the same purpose.

3 The major emphasis of THE NATIONAL KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., has been in bending most of their efforts toward this March on Washington as this has been a very lucrative program for them. While some recruitment has been taking place, much of their stress has been on activating chapters of this organization throughout the Midwest. In each of the areas where Governor George Wallace has been involved in primary campaigns, this group has flooded the area with material and has been receiving responses and money. They use the responses to create a new mailing list and attempt to use these people to start Klan chapters in their respective areas.

4 THE FEDERATED KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by William Hugh Morris of Buchanan, Georgia. This group has a very small membership, no programming and lacks power. It is, at present, merely a paper organization.

5 THE U.S. KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is now headed by H. J. Jones, a roofer who lives in Jonesboro, Georgia. This group has only one chapter with approximately 100 members from the local East and South areas of Atlanta. This group, however, is considered to be very radical, weapons conscience and prone to violence.

6 THE IMPROVED ORDER OF U.S. KLANS, headed by Earl E. George, has two small chapters in Georgia; one in Ocala, Florida, and two in Alabama. They are associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS. Jones' group, THE U.S. KLANS, actually split off from Earl George's IMPROVED ORDER because George was not doing anything. THE IMPROVED ORDER has relatively little membership, programming or influence.

7 THE ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA KLANS is headed by Charlie Maddox of Savannah, Georgia, has two or three small chapters in the Savannah area and is associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS. This group is small and of little influence.

8 THE DIXIE KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Jack and his brother, Harry Leon Brown, of Chattanooga, Tennessee. This group has a few small chapters in the Northwest corner of Georgia, one relatively strong Klavern in Anniston, Alabama, headed by a man named Adams, but most of their strength is in the Chattanooga, Tennessee, area. They also are associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS but work closely with other Klan groups.

9 UNITED FLORIDA KLAN, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Jason Kersey in the Jacksonville area. This group is associated with Shelton's UNITED KLANS but does not have a large membership or much influence.

10 They have been superseded by a group called simply THE KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, headed by a Gene Fallow of Jacksonville, Florida. This group has been attracting members at a very high rate, is considered to be an extremely radical group and very dangerous. It is thought that an effective persecution of the bombers from this group may stop their growth and slow down the organization. There is no indication that they are associated with any other Klan group.

11 THE ASSOCIATION OF SOUTH CAROLINA KLANS, KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN, INC., is headed by Robert L. Hodges of Columbia, S. C., and this group is picking up members as part of the general resurgence of the Klans throughout the South.

This listing is certainly not meant to indicate where all of the local chapters in each state are, and where we have used the expression "This group is small and of little influence", this is a relative statement in relation to the other Klan groups.

It is our considered opinion that from now through the rest of the Summer there will be a ~~small~~ surge of Klan activities such as public meetings, cross burnings, recruiting drives, etc.. It is to be noted that each facet of political or social upheaval which, in any way, can be interpreted as a set-back to the passage of the Civil Rights Bill, is eagerly grasped and used by the Klans at present.

There are no clearly defined lines that each individual follows by being a member of a particular Klan group. In many cases, these people are also members of other extremist groups and, in effect, a complex web has been formed with such organizations as the National States Rights Party and the Citizens Councils, etc.. The more violence prone of the Klan groups such as Venable's already are advocating that a race war will be the only solution, and they are sowing the seeds for this violence, if it comes.

Times Sunday Mag.

A resurgent Ku Klux Klan rides this summer across the South in a patchwork garb of new soft talk of nonviolence ~~and the~~ ~~Communist integrationist conspiracy~~ and old cross-burnings Concurrent ~~coinciding~~ with Negro abuse.

The "new image" of the revived Klan is motley montage of well-tailored suits and bow ties, satin robes of Wizards and Cyclops and familiar bed sheets of lesser Knights; the threadbare work clothes of poor whites hollering "Kill the niggers!" in an Atlanta demonstration, and new Klansladies dispensing charity to needy and thankful Negroes in Mississippi. The new voice warns of ~~that~~ the Communist ~~Conspiracy~~ Conspiracy to mongrelize the white South, disclaims hatred of minorities, predicts "racial war" and plans a segregated "all-Caucasian Community" ~~or "reservation"~~ in Alabama to escape integration.

~~Meantime, the Student Nonviolent Coordinadting Committee~~

~~Meantime, Dr. Martin Luther King, leading an uprising in St. Augustine where whites~~

~~Meantime, Negroes~~

~~Meantime in St. Augustine, whites~~

~~Meantime white attacks on Neg~~

Meantime in St. Augustine, white attacks on demonstrating Negroes and private beatings and house-burnings, ~~without hooded and robed trappings~~, persuade Dr. Martin Luther King that "the Klan has taken over St. Augustine," and Federal District Judge Bryan has [illegible] and rebuked questioned the ~~sheriff about Klansmen deputies~~. J. B. Stoner, Atlanta Klan lawyer, has spent weeks in the ancient ~~Florida city leading~~ white demonstrations and haranguing segregationists.

The student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee of Negro insurgent leaders tots ~~has counted~~ up more than 180 cross burnings, six killings, several shootings and many beatings of Negroes in Mississippi since the organization there of a ~~Mississippi~~ "Realm" of the Invisible Empire late last year, and a recent rash of home and church burnings since the state-wide Negro Council of Federated Organizations brought in hundreds of

A ~~resurgent Ku Klux Klan rides this summer across~~ the South, in axxxxx new patchwork garb of new soft-talk

A resurgent Ku Klux Klan rides this summer across the South in a ptchwork

h

A resutg

"outsiders" ~~---students, teachers, artists, lawyers and other white and Negro experts~~ to run Freedom schools for voter registration. ~~Thxxxx Two white missionaries to Mississippi and a young Negro xxx Mississippian, arrested at Philadelphia and~~ rel

The June 21 disappearance of two of these young "outsiders" and a young ~~Mississippi~~ Negro Mississippian ~~civil rights worker~~ at Philadelphia, Miss., remains as ~~mxxpkz~~ unexplained as the periodic assissination of Negro leaders since the Mississippi civil rights movement began. In April the Sheriff of Neshoba County ~~said at Philadelphia~~ reported 12 cross burnings as "well-organized" and "a sign of the Ku Klux Klan."

Reporters and civil rights leaders attribute street violence over demonstrations in Jacksonville (where five Klansmen ~~are~~ were indicted for bombing a Negro home last winter), St. Augustine and Tuscaloosa, Ala., to Klan "mentality" and incitements, if not to Klansmen directly. Other observers regard the National States Rights Party, an outcast Klan group called "Acirema" (America spelled backwards) near Atlanta, and other ~~bxxxx of~~ zealots banded together to save the white race, as equally as ~~and in some cases, more~~ threatening as ~~than recognized Klan groups.~~ Klans.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith, authority on what information can be gleaned from the off-and-on-again secret and historic order of the Klan, fears an emotional and spontaneous move into Mississippi this summer by ~~Knights of the~~ Klansmen rallying violently from other states to combat the non-violent education ~~committee of~~ program of COFO and its outside allies.

8

At ~~any rate, the new Empire is still large/ Invisible, and its "image" various, because, as~~ The ADL counts them, there are about a dozen Klans. They range from the United Klans of America, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., with its Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton, ~~and~~ its national office in Tuscaloosa ~~with~~ and its a mild, new "image" of tolerance and political preaching, to the violently excitable new Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, led by Gene Fallow of Jacksonville, sometimes called the North Florida Klan.

Georgia Klans include Grand Dragon ~~Calvin Cla~~ Calvin Craig's Knights associated with Shelton's Klans, and the National Knights of the KKK, Inc., out of Tucker, Ga. headed by Attorney James Venable, an able lawyer well-born to an old Georgia family. Mr. Venable is now devoting most of his ~~efforts~~ talents to organizing ~~the~~ a Caucasion March of One Million on Washington, which ADL regards as "a very, very lucrative program for them."

~~Chattanooga has Dixie Klans, Inc., and Anniston, Ala., as a strong Klavern somehow associated with Shelton's big United Klans and working with lesser ones.~~ The United Klans of North Carolina, with 28 Klaverns and ~~6,000~~ maybe 6,000 to 7,000 members, is credited with helping ~~to~~ defeat liberal candidate L. Richardson Preyer in the recent gubernatorial primary, where "moderate" Dan K. Moore won ~~with~~ with the support of the segregationist candidate in a second primary.

Klans or "Klan mentality" are obviously a force in Alabama politics, and in Mississippi, ~~hitherto kept~~ where the racist police state was hitherto maintained by locally respectable White Citizens Councils which now appear too "moderate" for activists against Negroes.

ADL estimates a ~~total~~ Klan membership between 48,000 and 65,000. ~~but Mississippi~~ Some Klan leaders claim 100,000 members in Mississippi alone. Klansmen do not disclose mbr. fees or dues, but ADL figure it's a big & paying business.

since the reorganization of a Mississippi Realm of the Invisible Empire late last year. Civil ~~Rigx~~ rights workers and reporters attribute street violence in ~~StxxAugustine,xTx~~ Jacksonville, St. Augustine and Tuscaloosa, Ala., to Klan "mentality" and incitements, if not to Klansmen themselves and five Jacksonville Klansmen were arrested by FBI men and charged with bombing a Negro homelast winter. The Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith, authority on what information can be gleaned from the 90-year-old secret order, fears a s[illegible] move into Mississippi this summer from ~~Klansmen~~ Knights from other states rallying [illegible] violently to combat the nonviolent Negro education~~al and political~~ program of the Mississippi Committee of Federated Organizations recruiting hundreds ~~of~~ "outside" students, teachers, lawyers, actors and other white and Negro experts to ~~conduct~~ run Freedom Schools and cultural and ~~politic~~ political programs for disfranchised Negroes.

Organized in Tennessee 90 years ago to intimidate ~~superstitious~~ emancipated Negroes in political ~~control in~~ eminence many southern states during Reconstruction, the Klan reached half a million members and was disbanded by the Imperial Wizard, General Nathan Bedford Forrest in 1869, The Klan ~~disappeared~~ almost disappaeared for a couple of generations, but revived at a meeting on Stone Mountain near Atlanta during World War I with new ~~aims~~ anti-Semitic and Anti-Catholic as well as anti-Negro aims, and before long acquired a dread name for lynchings, tarring & feathering ~~of Negroes,~~ and beatings of white and colored persons who incurred their moral, racial or religious distaste. ~~The Klan attains~~ There were 4,000,000 members in 41 states in the ~~xixxxxxxx~~ Twenties, with awesome political influence not only in the South, but in Indiana and other states and in national elections.

The violence and hatred of Southern ~~Klans,xwith~~ Klans, composed largely of ignorant poor whites and roughnecks

The violence and senseless prejudice of southern Klansmen, mostly ignorant poor and whites and roughnecks, and the laug hable

PAGE (s) MISSING

Caucasian March of One Million on Washington, which ADL regards as "a very lucrative program for them." ~~ADL~~

ADl also notes The Dixie Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klans, Inc., out of Chattanooga, with a strong Klavern in Anniston, Ala., someway associated with Shelton's United Klans and working with others, ~~and~~ The United Klans of North Carolina, with 25 Klaverns and 6,000 to 7,000 members ~~who~~ exerted s9me influence in the recent Gubernatorial primary, but by no means prevailed, as Dr. I. Beverly Lake, campaigning on race, lost out to L. Richardson Preyer and Dan K. Moore, who campaign against each other in a second primary. Dr. Lake has endorsed Moore against Preyer, who is campaigning moderately, assured of ~~with~~ the Negro vote, "for lines of communication between the races." So, the Klan "mentality" is still working in the North Carolina race.

ADL believes Shelton's United Klans to be the biggest and most

A resurgent Ku Klux Klan rides this summer across the South, in a patchwork of new trappings, soft-spoken new talk and sometimes solemn burning of a new and permanent aluminum cross.

The "new image" of the revived Klan is a confused picture comprised of well-tailored suits and nice bow ties, ~~purple~~ satin ~~and white and red~~ robes of Imperial Wizard and Cyclops and the familiar bed sheets of lesser Knights, the shirt-sleeved shabbiness of poor whites hollering "Kill the niggers!" in an Atlanta demonstration, and new Klansladies dispensing charity to needy and thankful Negroes in Mississippi. The new voice warns of the Communist Conspiracy to integrate and mongrelize the white South, professes nonviolence, preaches "education and voter registration," predicts "racial war" with vows to "die to save the Caucasian race" and plans a segregated "all-Caucasian community" or "reservation" in Alabama to escape from integration.

Meantime, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee of Negro insurgents has counted up nearly 200 cross burnings, six killings, several shootings and many beatings of Negroes in Mississippi since the organization of a Mississippi "Realm" of the Invisible Empire late last year. Civil rights workers and reporters attribute recent street violence over Negro demonstrations in Jacksonville and St. Augustine, Fla., and Tuscaloosa, Ala., to Klan "mentality" and incitements, if not to Klansmen directly. Five Klansmen were arrested by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and charged with bombing a Jacksonville Negro home last winter.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith, authority on what information can be gleaned from the off-and-on-again secret and historic order of the Klan, fears an emotional and spontaneous move into Mississippi this summer by Knights of the Klan from other states rallying violently to combat the non-violent Negro education program of the Mississippi Committee of Federated Organizations, ~~now recruiting hundreds of Federated Organizations recruiting hundreds of~~ "outsiders," students, teachers, artists, lawyers, actors and other white and Negro experts to run Freedom Schools ~~and~~ or cultural and political programs for disfranchised and badly schooled Negroes.

COFO, which has recruited

Organized in Tennessee 90 years ago to intimidate emancipated Negroes in political eminence in many southern states during Reconstruction, the Klan got a membership of half a million and then disbanded at the edict of the Imperial Wizard, Confederate General Nathan Bedford Forrest, in 1869. The White Knights subsided to nearly nothing for a couple of generations but rose again at a meeting on Stone Mountain out of Atlanta during World War I, and pronounced ~~hot~~ new ideals as anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic as the old anti-Negro precepts. Before long the Knights acquired a dread name for Negro lynchings, tar and featherings and beatings of white and colored persons who incurred their moral, racial or religious indignation and distaste. In the Twenties the Klan had about 4,000,000 members is 41 states, and awesome political influence not only in the South, but in Indiana, ~~particularly~~ and other northern states, and in national elections.

The violence and illiterate prejudice of southern Klansmen, most of them ignorant poor whites and impassioned rednecks and roughnecks, and the laughable hugger-muggery of the solemn hierarchy of the mystic order---Imperial Wizard, Genii, Cyclops, Grand Dragons, Furies, Goblins and Klubbs (chaplains) to cite a few---gradually did the Klan in in the South, with the brisk assistance of anti-mask laws rendering sheeted and masked crimes less feasible in many states.

By 1958, Klansmen were few, feeble and risible.

The ADL and Negro civil rights workers date the recent revival and revamped "image" of the Klan from first consideration of the civil rights bill in Congress. Robert Moses, head of COFO in Mississippi, says the Klan rose again there upon the assassination of President Kennedy.

At any rate, the new Empire is still pretty Invisible and it's image is pretty various, because, as ADL counts them, there are about a dozen different Klans. They range from the United Klans of America, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., with its Imperial Wizard, Robert Shelton, ~~[illegible]~~ its national office in Tuscaloosa, Ala., ~~and~~ it's mild new "image" of Christian tolerance, Americanism, non-violence, ~~the~~ and its holy war on the Communist Conspiracy and for States Rights, to the violently excitable new Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, led by Gene Fallow of Jacksonville, sometimes called the North Florida Klan, and ~~to~~ a proliferation of little Klans in Georgia.

Georgia Klans include Grand Dragon Calvin Craig's Knights associated with Shelton's United Klans, and the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., out of Tucker, Ga., headed by Atlanta Attorney James Venable, ~~The curious Mr. Venable---~~an able lawyer well-born to an old Georgia family, ~~which gave Stone Mountain to the United Daughters of the Confederacy for the ill-fated and still-projected Confederate Memorial on the grim and formidable face of the great, granite pile---~~is now devoting most of his Klan efforts to organizing the Caucasion March of One Million on Washington, which ADL regards as "a very lucrative program for ~~him~~ them".

ADL also notes The Dixie Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klans, Inc., ~~[illegible]~~ in Chattanooga, with a strong Klavern in Anniston, Ala., ~~[illegible]~~ sameway associated with Shelton's big Klan and working with lesser ones. The United Klans of North Carolina, with 25 Klaverns and an ADL-estimated 6,000 to 7,000 members, exerted some influence in in the recent Gubernatorial primary, but by no means prevailed; ~~as~~ Dr. I. Beverly Lake, campaigning on race, lost out to L. Richardson Preyer and Dan K. Moore, Racist who now campaign against each other in a second primary. Dr. Lake has endorsed Moore against Preyer, who is campaigning ~~moderately~~ with assurance of the Negro vote and with careful ~~soft~~ cries for maintaining "lines of communication between the races. So, it seems clear the Klan "mentality" at an any rate, is having its effect in North Carolina ~~[illegible]~~ politics. And the Klan mentality, as well as members, are a force in Alabama politics, and may become so in Mississippi, hitherto kept racist, police-state and oppressive to Negroes by the locally respectable White Citizens Council which now appears "too moderate" for white Mississippi activists against Negroes, ~~the~~ against federal government and against most humanity except what they suppose to be "Caucasian," in the new phraseology.

4.

~~A visit with~~ Robert Shelton, Imperial Wizard of the United Klans of America, organized three years ago and apparently the reigning fraternity of Knights, ~~did~~ also, indeed, ~~show~~ present a "new Klan image", including a lot of ~~[illegible]~~ grave preoccupation with history, "research" and similar borrowings from ~~[illegible]~~ big-mouthed commercial, professional and academic spokesmen of our time.

~~More startling, however, was the constant inclusion in Mr. xxx Shelton's talk and the~~

Mid

More startling, however, was the constant inclusion in Mr. Shelton's talk and in the new Klan literature of ideas, aims and jargon from the Negro Movement--- ~~[illegible]~~ "non-violence", "massive rallies," "demonstrations," "economic boycotts," and "voter registration to get these politicians out of office." Further, the new Klan plan for "Caucasian communities" is ~~xxx~~ ~~[illegible]~~ suggests the Black Muslim segregationists' proposal to evacuate several southern states of whites and give them over to Blacks.

Letter To a Columnist

(To understand this letter to Kays Gary of the Charlotte, N.C., Observer, the reader should know that the letter came to Mr. Gary from a white child who is living in a neighborhood which in the last four years has changed from predominantly white to predominantly Negro.)

Dear Mr. Gary:

My name is Max. I am eight years old. I need someone to play with because I am an only child. My mother and father have told me that you know the stork. If you see him tell him to send me a little WHITE brother or sister or both.

Sincerely,
Max L
North Graham st.,
Charlotte, N. C.

Dear Max:

Your mother and father are right. I do know the stork — twice as well as they do, in fact. But I have not seen him for a long, long time and to tell the absolute truth I have not been looking for him.

The stork and I agree. Boys need little brothers and sisters. You will have a hard time convincing those who already have them of this need but it is true.

Just like you, I had no brothers or sisters. Unlike you, I had no trouble finding somebody to play with.

My best friends at your age were two little boys who went away every Summer. They were white.

In the Summer I had a friend whose name was T. C. He was brown. His Mama cooked for some people down the road.

T. C. was a pretty good runner and wrestler. He was better at climbing trees. And when we picked blackberries he picked them twice as fast as I could and it made me mad.

"Don't you mind," he said. "I can't help bein' a gooder picker'n you."

And then he would give me some of his berries so we would have the same.

★

Somebody to play with? We "kicked-the-can" and shot marbles and built dams in the creek. We'd go prospecting for gold, but instead of gold we found muscadine vines to swing on and green apple trees and wild plums and tummy aches.

We also found baby terrapins and baby rabbits in their nests and smooth, round stones and we made slingshots.

One time we found a big turtle only we called it a cooter, but we didn't try to catch it because T. C. said if it got a-hold of your toe it wouldn't turn loose till it thundered and there wasn't a cloud in the sky and nobody wants to drag a cooter around on his toe for no tellin' how long. So we poked at it with a stick and I admired T.C.'s wisdom when it grabbed hold of that stick.

Besides being a good slingshot maker, T.C. knew how to carve the bark off a sapling to make a pretty stick. He gave 'em to his mother to stir clothes with in the wash pot. These were his gifts to her.

But I could read better than T. C. and sometimes he would listen. One day we walked to his school. It was better than two miles out there and it was a ramshackle place with a busted stove. Everybody who went there had to walk or they did walk, anyway. Our school had a furnace and buses.

★

The matter of color came up only twice in my memory.

One time his Mama made us wash our hands before giving us a piece of pie and I told T. C. he was lucky because if he didn't get his hands clean nobody would know it.

"Huh," he said. "Mama, she can tell. She 'bout rub your hide off!"

The other time was when we were cutting flips in the cotton seed house at the gin and a man hollered:

"Hey! You little niggers get outta there!"

We ran. We ran till we gave out of breath and flopped down on a bank of honeysuckle and T. C. said: "How come he said that? You ain't no nigger!"

His chin was trembling and his eyes were wild, then wet, and all of a sudden he started crying.

We didn't know what we were crying about, but it was bad, all right, and I said the only thing I could think of.

"You ain't no nigger, T. C. He's the nigger!"

"No, he ain't," T. C. sobbed, rocking his face down in the honeysuckle. "He ain't no nigger. He's as white as you."

That, Max, is the last thing I remember about my friend. He walked to his ramshackle school with the busted stove and I went to the brick school with the furnace where the buses rolled.

A lot of things have happened since then and there have been two wars. The only thing I know is that if he's alive he is about my age and he may be a bad man or he may be a good man. I can only remember him as a little boy and he was a good boy.

I have written all this because, no matter where you live, there must be a good little boy to play with. Your mother and father, though, must decide. Meanwhile, I'll try to get your message to the stork.

Sincerely,

KAYS GARY

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

WHENCE CAME THIS MIGHTY OAK? (THE CIVIL RIGHTS REVOLUTION)

The seeds of the Civil Rights Revolution were planted in 1619 when the first slaves were brought to Virginia. The seed began to germinate when the first slave became a Christian, for no matter how much the institutional church has dragged its feet, it has been the Christian faith that has caused the Negro to persevere for 250 years of struggle to grow this revolution, and it has been the fact that Negroes were Christians too that has nagged at the consciences of the slaveholder and the segregationists and has produced white southern abolitionists and integrationists.

The seed pushed toward the surface of the ground when the first Negro became free; perhaps earning his freedom by work aside from his slave tasks as hundreds did; perhaps being set free by a benevolent owner. The seedling burst through the ground in several slave revolts of the 17th century. It was nurtured when Negro Crispus Attucks became the first American to die in the Revolutionary War and when 5000 Negro troops marched with Washington. It has been fertilized down through the years by the ringing words about freedom and equality in the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights. The seedling was tenderly cared for by Frederick Douglas, Sojourner Truth, William Loyd Garrison and the abolitionists.

The fragile seedling became a lusty sapling when Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation and sank its roots deeper into the soil of America when 179,000 Negro troops served in the Union Army. It was watered by the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution.

The drouth of segregation laws and separate but equal laws upheld by the courts lasted from the 1890's to the 1950's. (Woodward's The Strange Career of Jim Crow, documents that the development of segregation laws came to full flower in the 1890's though beginning a decade or so earlier. Likewise the supreme court demolition of "separate but equal" began in the 1930's and reached full flower in the 1950's.) This drouth only slowed the growth of the sapling. Ralph Cregar, a liberal in Little Rock, in Look Down The Lonesome Road, says that the protest movement springs out of segregated institutions, so perhaps in the 20th century the segregation laws actually fed the movement.

The sapling was fed by the scientific achievements of George Washington Carver and Booker T. Washington. Washington's philosophy of accomodation did not set it back as much as his scientific and educational achievements furthered it.

The young oak grew by Negro participation in World Wars I and II and the Korean War, and was given a tremendous boost by the integration of the armed forces under Truman and Eisenhower. It was nourished by the Negro churches, Negro colleges, and the NAACP. It was spurred on by lynchings, riots, and injustices. It was encouraged by white liberals who sometimes suffered alongside their Negro brethren.

The sapling was given another tremendous boost by the world revolution against colonialism and the freedom of 51 new nations since World War II--most of them people of color.

So in 1963 and 1964 we have a mighty oak of the Negro revolt. The tragedy is that most white Americans and many Negro Americans don't know enough about the above facts (and the many volumes behind these facts) to know where this mighty oak came from. They think it came from the supreme court decision of 1954, or from "outside agitatiors", or from the Communists. They don't know that this mighty oak has been growing for 245 years.

~~The new~~

Most striking aspect of the "new" Klan is its incopporation ~~in literature its literature and talk~~ of ideas and phrases from the Negro Movement. Imperial Wizard Bobby Shelton at Tuscaloosa, speaks softly and fluently of "non-violence", # "massive rallies"," "demonstrations," #economic boycotts" and "voter registration to get these politicians out of office." His new Klan plan for "Caucasion communities" on a "reservation" somewhere in Alabama has interesting ~~startling~~ precedent in the Black Muslim segregationist proposal to evacuate whites from several southern states to make room for ~~to give them over to~~ a black state.

801 Cherry Rd
Rock Hill, S.C.
July 21, 1962

Dear Miss Long:

If my check covered a subscription above the cost of sending copies to certain designated Police chiefs, please send the subscription to

Mr. Tom Mabry
1450 Ebenezer Rd.
Rock Hill, S.C.

Many thanks

Sincerely,
Hawley Lynn

JOHN D. HENDERSON
COUNTY LIBRARIAN

COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES
PUBLIC LIBRARY
320 WEST TEMPLE STREET
POST OFFICE BOX 111
LOS ANGELES 53, CALIFORNIA

WILLIAM S. GELLER
ASST. COUNTY LIBRARIAN

August 31, 1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, NW
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Will you please send us gift copies of the publications listed below, if they are available in the quantities indicated, for use in our branch libraries throughout Los Angeles County.

If you cannot supply this material will you please inform us?

Very truly yours,

John D. Henderson
County Librarian

By Virginia Ossen
Virginia Ossen
Chief Central Services Librarian

VO:jmc

1 copy The unequal badge: Negro policemen in the south.
1 copy Executive support of civil rights.

Cn 232 4/62 rev.

sent 9-10-62
MG

SOUTHERN FIELD SERVICE
NATIONAL CATHOLIC CONFERENCE FOR INTERRACIAL JUSTICE

1046 BARONNE ST.
SUITE NO. 2
NEW ORLEANS 13, LA.
PHONE 523-2901

September 4, 1962

Southern Regional Council
#5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Please send us 100 copies of the Anthropologists' statement on race, and bill us for same.

Yours sincerely,

Henry Cabirac, Jr.

HC:ild

Sent 9-11-62
MG

Honorary Chaplain: Rev. John LaFarge, S.J. OFFICERS: Dr. John J. O'Connor, Chairman (Washington, D.C.); Robert Sargent Shriver, Jr., Vice Chairman (Washington, D.C.); John P. Nelson, Jr., Vice Chairman (New Orleans); Miss Dorothy Mattingly, Secretary (St. Louis); Charles W. Wexler, Treasurer (Detroit). EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE: Very Rev. Msgr. Daniel M. Cantwell (Chicago); George K. Hunton (New York); Harold T. Hunton (Brooklyn); James A. Leadon (St. Paul); Guichard Parris (New York); Very Rev. Harold R. Perry (Bay St. Louis). BOARD: Rt. Rev. Msgr. Charles J. Brady (Syracuse); Elmer Paul Brock (Wilmington); Mrs. James E. Brophy (Detroit); Dr. James T. Carey (San Francisco); Daniel Cassey (Detroit); Dennis Clark (Philadelphia); Rev. Joseph Connolly (Baltimore); Robert Andre Dumas (Toledo); Ellsworth Evans (St. Louis); John J. Farrell (Chicago); Dr. Eugene Fontinell (New Rochelle); Norman Francis (New Orleans); Dr. Charles L. Hayes (Greensboro); Rev. Philip S. Hurley, S.J. (New York); Rt. Rev. Msgr. Franklyn J. Kennedy (Milwaukee); George S. Lima (Providence); James K. Luger (Minneapolis); William McCoy (Portland); John A. McDermott (Chicago); Mrs. Anna M. McGarry (Philadelphia); Mrs. Roger Putnam (Springfield); Michael F. Quinn (Indianapolis); Dr. Ferdinand L. Rousseve (Boston); Miss Theresa Staudt (San Antonio); Percy H. Steele, Jr. (San Diego); William H. Thompson (Little Rock); Charles F. Vatterott, Jr. (St. Louis); John Edward White (Pittsburgh). EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR: Mathew H. Ahmann. DIRECTOR, SOUTHERN FIELD SERVICE: Henry A. Cabirac, Jr. (New Orleans).

Box 138
Anderson, S. C.
September 5, 1962

Southern Regional Council
Forsyth St.
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

Some time ago I read your review of the book "Race & Reason" by Carlton Putnam.

I was so impressed by your analysis, that I would appreciate it very much if you would send me two copies of this review.

Sincerely,

W.H. Farmer
W.H. Farmer

sent 9-11-62
ma

Boston University

CHARLES RIVER CAMPUS • 725 COMMONWEALTH AVENUE • BOSTON 15, MASSACHUSETTS

CHENERY LIBRARY

September 4, 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Please send us a list of your publications and/or any free or inexpensive material you have available. We wish to acquire useful material for our information files.

Very truly yours,

Zimmerman

for Joseph H. Dayag
Head, Reference Department

Sent pub list 9-11-62
MG

201 BOUNDARY STREET
MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA

September 7, 1962

Southern Regional Council,
Atlanta
Attention Mrs. Long

Dear Fellow Workers:

Thanks for the 50 (49) copies of June New South. Young Adult groups in the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches will have them as individual mail. My strategy is to cultivate this community in a pretty broad cross section, depending on the run of current events on the race issue to confirm our interpretation, as indicated in the mailings. This probably for a year before undertaking to form a Council unit.

From the list of Council publications you mailed me some time ago will you please send me the following, a sample copy of each:

L 28
L 29
L31
This I Believe (By an Atlanta doctor, I think Segregation versus the Space Age--M. Wright
SRC Reports the Changing South
L 1

You have mentioned possibly free literature for my work. This contribution by the central office I should appreciate. As you probably do not know, I am a retired Methodist pastor 81 years old in coming November. My work among the forty Negro churches of this-- Shelby-- county calls out all the resources I can share in this work. I go every Sunday to two Negro churches, am heartily welcomed have had most gratifying results from my efforts.

Despite the conflicts and the backsets I'm sure we are winning.

Sincerely yours,

A. M. Freeman

Sent 9-11-62
MG

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

September 10, 1962

Mr. Frank J. Menhart
15493 Indiana Avenue
Detroit 38, Michigan

Dear Mr. Menhart:

Enclosed you will find the Southern Regional Council publication list.

Please let us know which of our publications you wish to see and we will be happy to send them to you.

We appreciate your interest.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Miss Long

/mg

Enclosures

15493 Indiana av
Detroit 38 Mich
Sept 4 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn St N.E.
Atlanta 3 Ga.

Dear Sirs.

Would you be so kind as to send me any literature you have on degration as I am very interested in this field.

Thanking you

I am.

Frank J Menhart men hart sent L1 + pub list with note 9-10-62 MC

send L1 + pub list
write note make carbon / staple to letter received + put in Sept file

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
CHICAGO 37 · ILLINOIS
DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY

September 11, 1962

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Ave., N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

Late in 1960, George McMillan wrote a report on a study on "Racial Violence and Law Enforcement" for your council. I would appreciate receiving a copy of it, if it is available.

Thank you for your kind attention in this matter.

Cordially,

Morris Janowitz

Morris Janowitz,
Professor

MJ/fln

Sent 9-13-62
MC

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
McKeldin Library
College Park, Maryland

Sept. 12, 1962

Southern Regional Council
Room 201, 5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta, 5, Georgia

Gentlemen:

With reference to our order no: L-58859 dated 8-3-62 for: Racial Violence and Law Enforcement
by George McMillan

Please take immediate action on the matter(s) indicated by checkmark(s) below:

____ Shipment not yet received; overdue; kindly send at once or report.

____ Shipment not received; please cancel.

____ Shipment received, but we lack invoice; please send at once in quadruplicate, or advise us promptly if no charge is due.

____ We have received invoice for item, as indicated above; shipment not yet received; kindly send at once.

X Other:
We ordered 4 copies but received only one copy. Please send the other three (3) copies as soon as possible. Thank you.

Yours truly,

Albert M. Turner

Albert M. Turner, Head Acquisitions Department

Sent
9-18-62
MG

AMT:rf

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
Public Administration Collection
Princeton, New Jersey

September 14, 1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

We desire to obtain for the Public Administration Collection of the Library, Princeton University, the material listed below. If consistent with your policy, will you be kind enough to supply us with it?

If there is a charge for this material, please notify us before sending.

Your courtesy in forwarding it to us will be greatly appreciated.

No Charge

Very truly yours,

Helen Fairbanks

Special Librarian
Public Administration Collection

Executive support of civil reights. 1962.

Sent 9-18-62
MG

Camp Douglas, Wisconsin
September 15, 1962

9/25/62

Southern Regional Council, Inc
5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

$1.00 CR
RHA

Dear Sirs:

Thank you for the pamphlet on current materials. Will you please send me the following single copies:

The Negro and Employment Opportunities
In the South - 20¢
A Virginia View of "Race and Reason" 5¢
A Southern View of the South - S.C.7.
The City and the Negro ——— 20¢
A Southerner's Words Supply Rebuttal - SCF.
Racial Violence and Law Enforcement - 25¢
L-20 Problem Solving Through Race Relation Committees
L-24 Address by Malcolm Bryan -
L-19 - What Price Tag for Massive Resistance -

Yours truly,
(Miss) Etta G. Tierney

Sent 9-25-62
MG

Attention Mrs Lord

9-24-62
Sent material
Check subscription O.K.

201 BOUNDARY STREET
MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA

Sept 18, 1962

So. Regional Council,
Atlanta,

Dear Fellow Workers,

The pkt of several sample copies of SRC publications received yesterday.

Please send me at once, as a donation or bill me, 125 copies of This I Believe. Am mailing it to church people - 3 preachers, 50 Methodist families, 68 Baptist families and 15 Presbyterian families. I'll append a note in the letter. "The Composition of The Council" will come later when I try to organize. Any other samples you think I might use please let me know -

Sincerely,

H. M. Freeman

P.S. I'm not getting New South regularly. Am a paying member of Ala Council

North Carolina Council on Human from the desk of:

Harry S. Jones

September 18, 1962

TO: Southern Regional Council

I would appreciate your sending me, if you can spare them, thirty additional copies of Report L-36 - Richmond Quietly Leads Way in Race Relations.

H.S.J.

Sent 9-21-62
MG

September 19, 1962

Miss Susan Ballentine
328 Pennsylvania Avenue, SE
Washington 3, D. C.

Dear Miss Ballentine:

Under separate cover, we are sending you our publications list and two copies of our magazine, New South.

Our research department keeps records on hotels, parks, movies, and other facilities which have been desegregated, but this is not available in published form. The September New South will carry a report on desegregated recreational facilities.

We will be happy to send you information from our files on any subject you are specifically interested in.

We appreciate your interest.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long
Director of Information

MG/s

328 Pennsylvania Avenue, S.E.
Washington 3, D.C.
September 11, 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sir:

I understand your organization has pamphlets available dealing with desegregation of various public facilities. I would like any of these you could send me, also any material you have available for distribution.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Susan Ballentine

Sent material
9-19-62
MO

Memo

MG -

send pub list

L-1

NS - May & June '62

also

note - saying research department keeps records on hotels, parks, movies, etc., which are desegregated but this is not available

Tucker-Castleberry Printing, Inc.

226 Luckie Street, N.W. • JAckson 5-8654

in published form, as yet.

Sept. NS will carry a report on desegregated recreational facilities. We would be happy to send info from our files on any subject she is specifically interested in.

GRESHAM METHODIST CHURCH

R. JAMES REID, MINISTER

Sept. 11, 1962

Dear Sir:

Would you please send me one copy of the pamphlet "Albany" by Howard Zinn. Also include a note as to the cost and we shall forward the amount.

Sincerely

R James Reid

no charge

Sent 9-24-62
MG

8700 SOUTH EMERALD CHICAGO 20, ILLINOIS STEWART 3-8620

Sent 9-19-62. MG

HG -

Send "Albany" publication list
L-1 ("Aims & Origins")

NS - June issue
" last July-Aug '61 - Freedom Ride issue write a note saying we would be happy to send single copies, NS

over

regularly carries announcements of recent publications, & we write her to subscribe. Mention a new report on Albany is forthcoming from us, and Chicago City Missionary Soc.
19 S. LaSalle St., Chi. 3, Ill
. has published a recent one if she cares to write

September 18, 1962

Miss Dallas Lindgren
1481 Ashland Avenue
Saint Paul 4, Minnesota

Dear Miss Lindgren:

In a separate envelope, we are sending you our report on Albany, Georgia and our publications list. We will be happy to send you single copies of those which interest you.

We are also sending copies of our magazine, New South, which regularly carries announcements of our recent publications. We invite you to subscribe.

There is a new report on Albany forthcoming from us. The Chicago City Missionary Society has recently published a report on Albany. If you would care to write for it, the address is:

Chicago City Missionary Society
19 South LaSalle Street
Chicago 3, Illinois.

We appreciate your interest.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long
Director of Information

MG/s

1481 Ashland Avenue
Saint Paul 4, Minnesota
September 11, 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sir:

While I attended the Encampment for Citizenship this summer in New York City, I came in contact with a booklet published by the Southern Regional Council on the current situation in Albany, Georgia (giving background information on the current problems). I would appreciate it if you would send me a copy of this booklet. If there is a charge on this item, please let me know. Could you also send me a price list on any other materials you distribute. Thank you.

Yours truly,

Dallas Lindgren

(Miss) Dallas Lindgren

ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS *

1220 WEST CAPITOL
LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
PHONE FR 4-4521

TO: Southern Regional Council

FROM: ACHR

Please send 100 copies of Report No. L-36, September 12, 1962, entitled "Richmond Quietly Leads Way in Race Relations.

Sent 9-21-62
MG

OFFICERS— THE REV. CHARLES C. WALKER, CHAIRMAN • THE REV. MAYNARD M. MILLER, VICE-CHAIRMAN
MRS. JOE R. BREWER, VICE-CHAIRMAN • DR. W. H. TOWNSEND, TREASURER • MRS. W. E. MORRIS, SECRETARY
STAFF— NAT R. GRISWOLD, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR • OZELL SUTTON, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR • RUTH ARNOLD, SEC.

* A Council to attain equal opportunity for all peoples

STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
AGRICULTURAL AND TECHNICAL INSTITUTE
DELHI, NEW YORK

DIVISIONS
AGRICULTURE
BUSINESS
CONSTRUCTION
FOOD ADMINISTRATION
GENERAL EDUCATION

September 21, 1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Sir:

I would appreciate receiving a copy of The Federal Executive and Civil Rights and Executive Support and Civil Rights. If possible, I would appreciate receiving your publications.

.35

.50

ok on mailing list
PF

Sincerely,

Seldon M. Kruger

Seldon M. Kruger
Associate Professor and Head,
Department of Social Science,
General Studies Division

SMK:ab

Sent material with bill
10-1-62

The New York Times TIMES SQUARE NEW YORK 36 NY LACKAWANNA 4-1000

Sept. 21, 1962

put on mailing list 10/25/62 - BP

Dear Mrs. Long:

Many belated thanks for your kindness in sending me that generous packet of SRC publications. I found them all very useful, and particularly appreciated Mr. Zinn's long piece on Albany. I thought it was exceptionally well done, and wonder whether one of the good magazines wouldn't be interested in having him bring it up to date for wider consumption?

The racial situation seems to have suddenyl grown terribly bitter and confusing; I hope it's the sign of last gasps, not a strengthening segregationist effort. I've been working lately with this Mississippi situation, and find to my embarrassment that I've got awfully involved with it emotionally--not a good habit for an allegedly "nonpartisan" journalist. I see no alternative for strong, decisive Federal action, and it seems we're finally getting just that.

At any rate, many thanks for your kindness, and my best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

Jonathan Yardley

"ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO PRINT"

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

MV

[illegible]

September 24, 1962

Dear Mr. Wright:

Long before now I should have written to thank you for your contribution to our Civil War symposium. I hope you will approve of the way your essay and the others have been handled. We think they make up a very distinguished publication.

Please let us know if you would like additional copies, or would want us to mail copies to some of your friends.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Les

Leslie W. Dunbar

LWD:A
Enclosure

Mr. Marion A. Wright
Around-the-World-in-80-Days

Thanks. Could use about 25 copies if available.

M.A.W.

Sept 25

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS
DAVIS, CALIFORNIA

September 25, 1962

Dear Sir,

The INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS LIBRARY would appreciate the receipt of the publications noted below if available for free distribution to libraries. If this material may be obtained only by purchase, will you kindly quote the price before sending?

Thank you for your cooperation.

Very truly yours,

Clyde Baker

Clyde Baker
Librarian

Southern regional council
  Executive support of civil rights. March 13, 1962.

Sent 10-3-62
MG

Mary — send Albany —

Please send to following persons:

Dr. William A. Johnson
Dept. of Religion
Trinity College,
Hartford, Conn

Mr. J. Ronald Spencer
Trinity College
Hartford, Conn

Mr. Peter Morrill
Box 102
Hartford Seminary Foundation
Hartford, Conn

Miss Sue Lehrer
308 Donlon Hall
Cornell University
Ithaca, N.Y.

Sent 9-26-62 MO

Mrs. H.T. Chatfield
Bradford, Vt.

The Lehrers
17 The Intervale
Roslyn Heights, N.Y.

from Jock Chatfield
Field Sec.

Mr. George Will
805 W. Hill St.
Champaign, Ill.

MEREDITH COLLEGE
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

THE LIBRARY

September 26, 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta
Georgia

RHA 10/3/62

Gentlemen:

You will find enclosed 50¢ in stamps. Please send two copies of the publication noted below.

Sincerely yours,

Hazel Baity

Hazel Baity
Librarian

Price, Margaret. The Negro Voter in the South.

Sent 10-3-62
MG

26 Barton Street
Woonsocket, R.I.
September 27, 1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

I am a college senior taking a course in social problems. A requirement of the course is a term paper for which I have chosen the topic of desegregation in schools.

So that I might have a better understanding of the subject, I would appreciate it if you would send me copies of the following material:

L-11 Little Rock Report
L-15 Types of Desegregation Plans
L-20 Problem Solving through Race Relations Committees
L-21 Public Schools and Community Development
L-23 Desegregation in Higher Education
Action Patterns in School Desegregation
Southerners and Schools
The Truth about Desegregation in Washington Schools
The Easy Chair
Changing Patterns in the New South
Three Views of the Desegregation Decisions
Desegregation in Baltimore City Schools
South Carolinians Speak

Thank you for your assistance.

Yours truly,

John Fagan
John Fagan

Sent 10-3-62
mc

October 1, 1962

Professor George A. Chandler
Department of Sociology
The Principia
College of Liberal Arts
Elsah, Illinois

Dear Professor Chandler;

Under separate cover we are sending The Negro and the Ballot and Report on Freedom Riders.

The New South is our monthly magazine. Did you want us to send all eleven copies published in 1952?

Please let us know which issues of New South you would like and we will be happy to send them to you.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long

MG:s

The PRINCIPIA
COLLEGE of LIBERAL ARTS
ELSAH, ILLINOIS

A unit of
The PRINCIPIA
Saint Louis
Missouri

15 September 1962

Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

I should appreciate very much your sending me a copy of each of the following reports or pamphlets for use in connection with a sociology course entitled "Problems of Minorities:"

The New South, 1952

The Negro and the Ballot, 1959

Report on Freedom Riders, 1961

sent
10-1-62

Yours sincerely,

George A. Chandler

George A. Chandler
Professor of Sociology

The PRINCIPIA is now building a new UPPER SCHOOL and a new LOWER SCHOOL.
Friends everywhere are invited to take part in this historic, progressive step.

October 2, 1962

Mr. Alexis C. Ferm
P. O. Box 373
Fairhope, Alabama

Dear Mr. Ferm:

We have just mailed copies of A Hundred Years Later to the people whose names you sent us.

We appreciate your interest.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long

MG:s

ALEXIS C. FERM
Box 373
Fairhope, Ala.

Oct. 1, 1962.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Romm 201, 5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

For the enclosed dollar would it be possible to dend a copy of "A Hundred Years Later" to each of the following?

Mr. & Mrs. Iskander Hourwich
43 Fifth Ave. ,New York 3, N.Y.

Mr & Mrs. Hans Riedel,
1117 Xenia Av. Yellow Springs, Ohio.
a
Mr.&Mrs. Zachary Shaw
539 San Benito Ave. Menlo Park, Calif.

Miss Hazel Council,
Daphne, Ala.

Mr. & Mrs. Connie Council,
Fairhope Ave. Fairhope, Ala.

Sincerely,
Alexis C. Ferm
Alexis C. Ferm

1 00 Cash
RKA
10/2/62

Sent
10-2-62
mo

CLAIM NOTICE

Date Oct. 3, 1962

to: New South On a subscription placed

(Name of magazine.)

through F. W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.

83 FRANCIS STREET
BOSTON 15, MASS.

we have failed to receive: 1962, V. 17, #5

Please supply to complete our file for binding. reference.

We paid FAXON for J-D, 1962 on Nov. 14, 1961

(Inclusive dates or volume numbers.)

URGENT - PLEASE!

Name of Serials Department
Louisiana State University Library
Address Baton Rouge 3, Louisiana

(Be sure to list as per publishers mailing stencil.)

Sent 10-19-62
MG

ATTENTION PUBLISHER:

We are enclosing a copy of a letter sent to us by one of our subscribers. The missing issues are urgently needed to complete file on a continuous subscription placed by us. Please send issues directly to subscriber or advise if extended.

If further information is needed, please return the attached correspondence.

F. W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.

Subscription Agency
83 Francis Street
Boston 15, Mass.

INVOICE

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Order Department
University of Michigan Library
Ann Arbor, Michigan

****
Purchase Order #300828

Date Shipped 10-3-62

The Negro and employment opportunities in the South 3 vols.

1 copy - vol. 1	$.20
1 copy - vol. 2	.20
1 copy - vol. 3	.20
total --------	$.60

ORDER DEPARTMENT
THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN LIBRARY
ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN

ORDER NO. 13- 300828

FUND: Gen.-Dir.

Southern regional council.

The Negro and employment opportunities in the South.
Atlanta, Ga., The Council, 1961-62.
3 Vols.
(Southern Regional Council Employment studies in Southern cities)

DEALER:
Southern Regional Council
881 Peachtree St. NE
Atlanta 9, Ga.

CAT. & ITEM: 9-24-62
ORDERED: 5.00

[redacted]

THIS IS A PURCHASE ORDER - SEE OTHER SIDE FOR INSTRUCTIONS

☐

The PRINCIPIA
COLLEGE of LIBERAL ARTS
ELSAH, ILLINOIS

A unit of
The PRINCIPIA
Saint Louis
Missouri

9 October 1962

Sent 10-15-62 MG

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Attention: Miss Margaret Long

Dear Miss Long:

Thank you indeed for your letter of October 1, initiated by Miss Godwin, and for the copies of the two publications mentioned therein, which came a couple of days later.

At the time of my original request I had not realized that "The New South" was (probably I should say "is") a periodical, and I am grateful to have this called to my attention. It appears that the specific issue in which I am interested is that of July 1952.

Thank you also for the listing of materials currently available from your office; this I have taken the liberty of marking with red brackets to show the publications I would appreciate your sending me as soon as practicable. One copy of each is desired, except that I would like two of each of the four items pertaining to Putnam's "Race and Reason", as marked.

A dollar bill is enclosed to cover the charges on those few items which are not available free.

Yours sincerely,

George A Chandler

George A. Chandler
Professor of Sociology

10/17/62
Cash $1.00
LK

The PRINCIPIA is now building a new UPPER SCHOOL and a new LOWER SCHOOL.
Friends everywhere are invited to take part in this historic, progressive step.

SRC PUBLICATIONS

a listing of current materials relating to race relations and allied subjects available from

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Summer, 1962

EXECUTIVE SUPPORT OF CIVIL RIGHTS, a review of the current administration's first year of civil rights action. 1962, 52 pp. SC 50¢.

THE FEDERAL EXECUTIVE AND CIVIL RIGHTS, a 48-page report sent to President John F. Kennedy with an 18-point proposal on executive power in furthering civil rights. 1961. SC 35¢, Q 25¢.

THE CITY AND THE NEGRO, by Charles E. Silberman. Migrations from South to North and rural to urban as reported in Fortune, March, 1962. Reprint, 9 pp. SC 20¢.

THE NEGRO AND EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES IN THE SOUTH: HOUSTON, 22-page report based on a survey by Prof. Art Gallaher, Univ. of Houston, Nov., 1961; CHATTANOOGA, Dr. Major J. Jones, research coordinator, Feb., 1962; and ATLANTA, Prof. Carl Holman, research coordinator, May, 1962. SC 20¢, Q 15¢.

②

A VIRGINIA VIEW OF "RACE AND REASON," by Benjamin Muse. A refutation of Carleton Putnam's views on superior-inferior race. Reprint from New South, Dec., 1961. SC 5¢, Q 3¢.

② A SOUTHERNER'S WORDS SUPPLY REBUTTAL, by John Lofton. In his article reprinted from the Pittsburgh Post Gazette (March 18, 1959) Lofton pitts arguments from James McBride Dabbs' The Southern Heritage against Putnam's segregationist views. SCF, QRR.

ALBANY, by Howard Zinn, Prof. of History & Social Science, Spelman College. A first-hand account of the "Albany Movement" for desegregation in that Georgia city. (Mimeo.) 35 pp., 1962. SC 25¢, Q 20¢.

THE UNEQUAL BADGE, by Elliott M. Rudwick, Assoc. Prof. of Sociology, Southern Illinois Univ. A 14-page survey of the number of Negro policemen employed in the South and their status in 130 communities. 1962. SC 10¢, Q 6¢.

L THE ANNEALING OF THE SOUTH, by Leslie W. Dunbar. In his article reprinted from the Autumn 1961 Virginia Quarterly Review, SRC's Executive Director examines the changing climate of southern thinking. SC 10¢, Q 7¢.

L THIS I BELIEVE, by Haywood M. Hill, M.D. The eloquent message a southern Presbyterian elder delivered to his church school class. 1961. SCF, Q2¢.

L RACIAL VIOLENCE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT, by George McMillan. A study drawn on Chattanooga, Little Rock and Montgomery. 1960. SC 25¢.

L SCHOOL DESEGREGATION: THE FIRST SIX YEARS. In question and answer form the facts confronting the South on this issue. 1960. SC 25¢, Q 20¢.

L RACIAL CRISIS AND THE PRESS, by Walter Spearman and Sylvan Myer. Racial news in the press. 1960. SC 25¢, Q 20¢.

L THE NEGRO VOTER IN THE SOUTH (1957) and THE NEGRO AND THE BALLOT (1959), both by Margaret Price. Statistics and specific local examples. SC -57 20¢, -59 25¢, together 40¢.

L MAP, showing percentage of non-white population in counties of southern states as of 1960. SC 25¢, Q 20¢.

L THE FREEDOM RIDE - MAY 1961. A chronology of it and reactions to it. (Mimeo.) SC 25¢.

L THE STUDENT PROTEST MOVEMENT: A RECAPITULATION, a summary of sit-in activity from February 1960 to September 1961 and its results. (Mimeo.) SC 15¢.

WHAT THE SUPREME COURT SAID, by Prof. Robert A. Leflar. A 12-page legal analysis of the 1954 decision reprinted from Southern School News. SC 10¢

THE SOUTH AND THE NATION, by Leroy Collins, former Governor of Florida. "A picture of the material advance of the South in recent years ... and of the possible return of the South to her early position of national leadership." 1960. SC 10¢, Q 8¢.

THE CHURCH IN AREAS OF RACIAL TENSION, by the Rev. Cornelius Tarplee, Assoc. Secy. for Intergroup Relations, National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church. 1959. SC 5¢.

IF THE SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED ... A CRITICAL ANALYSIS OF THE PRIVATE SCHOOL PLAN, by Warren E. Gauerke & Donald Ross Green. 40 pp., 1959. SC 20¢, Q 15¢.

SEGREGATION VERSUS THE SPACE AGE, by Marion A. Wright. A probing address by a former SRC President. SC 5¢.

THE TRUTH ABOUT DESEGREGATION IN WASHINGTON'S SCHOOLS. Articles reprinted from the Washington Post. SC 10¢.

GEORGIA'S DIVIDED EDUCATION. A detailed report published by the Georgia Conference on Educational Opportunities points to "separate but unequal." 56 pp., 1960. SC 35¢, Q 25¢.

ARE SOUTHERN MINISTERS FAILING THE SOUTH? by Robert Paul Sessions. An Arkansas pastor critically appraises his colleagues. Reprint from The Saturday Evening Post, May 13, 1961, SC 5¢.

A SOUTHERN VIEW OF THE SOUTH, by Harold C. Fleming. Reprinted from The New York Times (April 3, 1960), this is SRC's former Executive Director's view of southern change and its effect on our image abroad. SCF, Q 2¢.

SANCTUARIES FOR TRADITION: VIRGINIA'S NEW PRIVATE SCHOOLS, by Mary Ellen Goodman. What "massive resistance" does to education by a member of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth. (Mimeo.) 27 pp., 1961, SC 10¢.

THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND, by Ralph and Carl Creger. How a white father and son in Little Rock came to champion equal rights and opportunities for Negroes. 60 pp., 1960. SC 25¢.

THE LOUISVILLE STORY, by Omer Carmichael and Weldon James. Detailed account of Louisville's desegregation of schools. 173 pp., 1957, Simon and Schuster. SCF, QCWC.

THREE VIEWS OF THE SEGREGATION DECISIONS, by William Faulkner, Dr. Benjamin Mays, Cecil Sims. Three papers read before the Southern Historical Association, 1955. 29 pp. SCF, QCWC.

THE EASY CHAIR, by Harry S. Ashmore. The story behind the Little Rock headlines reprinted from Harper's Magazine June, 1958. SCF, QCWC.

SOUTH CAROLINIANS SPEAK, compiled by the Rev. John B. Morris. Short essays on race relations by South Carolina "moderates." 89 pp. SCF, QCWC.

ACTION PATTERNS IN SCHOOL DESEGREGATION: A GUIDEBOOK, by Herbert Wey and John Corey. 276 pp., 1959, Phi Delta Kappa Commission Project. SCF, QCWC.

DESEGREGATION IN BALTIMORE CITY SCHOOLS. A 32-page report by the Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems & Relations and the Baltimore Commission on Human Relations. SCF, QCWC.

WHEN A CITY CLOSES ITS SCHOOLS, by Ernest Q. Campbell. Study of Norfolk, Va., citizens at a time when schools were closed there conducted by the Institute for Research in Social Science of the Univ. of North Carolina. 159 pp., 1960. SCF, QCWC.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL REPORTS THE CHANGING SOUTH. A collection of reprints illustrative of SRC's program in public information. SCF.

NEW BUSINESS WAYS IN THE SOUTH. Reprint from Business Week, Aug., 5, 1961. SCF

LEADERSHIP REPORTS (all mimeographed unless otherwise noted, SCF, QRR)

L-1 THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL - ITS ORIGIN AND AIMS

L-5 PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND THE ECONOMY OF VIRGINIA, excerpts from a talk by Dr. Louis T. Rader, Gen. Mgr., Special Controls Dept., General Electric Co., Waynesboro, Va., June 12, 1959.

L-12 VOLUNTARY DESEGREGATION IN SOME SOUTHERN SCHOOL DISTRICTS. Statistics from six states, 1954-59.

L-14 A REPORT FROM VIRGINIA. News reports of the Virginia Education Association's actions in the desegregation controversy. 1960.

L-16 ATLANTA AND WASHINGTON: RACIAL DIFFERENCES IN ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT, Frank H. Stallings, Assoc. Prof. of Education, Univ. of Louisville, Jan. 26, 1960.

L-17 DESEGREGATION AND ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT. The findings of some border and Southern school districts which have desegregated. 1960.

L-19 WHAT PRICE TAG FOR 'MASSIVE RESISTANCE?' Two articles by Frank Trippett on the economic effects of Virginia's policy reprinted from the St. Petersburg Times, June 24 and 31, 1960.

L-20 PROBLEM SOLVING THROUGH RACE RELATIONS COMMITTEES. Where and how this has been effective. 1960.

L-21 PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT, address by H. McKinley Conway, Jr., stressing importance of leaving education to educators. Nov., 1960.

L-22 A REPORT BY THE FOWLER COMMISSION ON RACE RELATIONS, a biracial group appointed by former Governor Collins of Florida to supply race relations leadership. Dec., 1960.

L-23A DESEGREGATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION. Fact sheet covering 1935 - 1961.

L-24 ADDRESS BY MALCOLM BRYAN, President of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, concerning racial problems and economics. Feb., 1961.

L-25 NEW CENSUS LOOK AT CITIES AND RACE. Reprint from the Washington Post, March 22, 1961.

L-26 ADDRESS BY GENERAL LUCIUS D. CLAY. Remarks on the industrial climate of Georgia. July, 1961.

L-27 THE EASY OR THE HARD WAY? Aspects of the option taken in parts of Virginia and North Carolina not to desegregate schools. Oct., 1961.

L-28 ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORTING THE STUDENT PROTEST MOVEMENT. Nov., 1961.

② L-29 AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION RESOLUTION ON RACE. Scientists reject theories of Negro racial inferiority. Nov., 1961.

L-30 A POSITIVE PLAN TO HELP SOLVE OUR RACIAL DILEMMA, reprint from the Jackson (Miss.) State Times, Nov. 3, 1961, and BIRMINGHAM FACES A HARD DECISION, reprint from the Birmingham (Ala.) News, Oct. 25, 1961. Two editorials from centers of Deep South resistance.

L-31 SLIPPING SEGREGATION: NEGROES WIN LOWERING OF MORE BARRIERS IN SOUTH. Reprint from the Wall Street Journal, Jan. 16, 1962.

② L-32 REFUTATION OF "RACE AND REASON," by Dr. William P. Sullivan, Asst. Prof. of English, McNeese State College, Lake Charles, La. 1962.

L-33 A STATEMENT OF RECOMMENDED POLICE POLICY RESULTING FROM THE NEW YORK UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL OF PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION CONFERENCE ON "The Challenge of Desegregation for the American Police Executive." March, 1962.

L-34 DESEGREGATION IN SOUTHERN PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS. Report on Catholic dioceses in 11 states. May, 1962.

Index to price code

SC - single copy   SCF - single copy free
Q - price per copy in quantity
QRR - quantity rates on request
QCWC - quantities considered without cost

Mr. & Mrs. David Allen
Eglise Methodiste
Sandoa, Sac privé
via Elisabethville,
Katanga

Gave to Bowman
10-15-62
MG

New South Complimentary

10/10/62

October 10, 1962

Mr. William F. McCabe
Box 122, Plassman Hall
Siena College
Loudonville, N. Y.

Dear Mr. McCabe:

In the absence of Mr. McGill, we are answering your letter to avoid any delay in getting the material you desire. As he will be out of town until November 1st, we are asking the Southern Regional Council to send you some material.

Sincerely,

Secretary to Mr. McGill

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Box 122
Plassman Hall
Siena College
Loudonville, N.Y.

10-15-62
Sent him pub list + some material
MG

October 6, 1962

Dear Sir,

For a term paper in my Sociology course at Siena College, I have been assigned the topic, "The New Negro: Contrasts since the Supreme Court Ruling of 1954". In view of your widely praised writings on the problem of integration in the South, I wonder if you could send me some objective information, such as pamphlets and the like, pertaining to my topic. Also, could you refer me to some other sources for my research. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

William F. McCabe

October 15, 1962

Miss Ada M. Field
1409 New Garden Road
Greensboro, North Carolina

Dear Miss Field:

We are sending you ten copies of A Hundred Years Later.

We certainly do appreciate your kind words about this issue, and your interest in increasing its circulation.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long

MG:s

1409 New Garden Rd.
Greensboro, N.C.
Oct. 9, 1962

Dear Friends;

The special issue of New South, One Hundred Years After, merits very wide reading. Please send me as many copies as a dollar will buy. Many thanks,

Ada M. Field

ck $1.00
10/17/62
LK

Sent
10-15-62
MG

MG - send 10 copies.
maybe a thank-you note
for her kind words & such

October 19, 1962

Mr. J. Earl Williams
Assistant Professor of Economics
The University of Tennessee
Knoxville, Tennessee

Dear Mr. Williams:

I'm sending you a few of our publications on the cost of discrimination, with a list of our publications in which you might find some other publications you'd like to see. If so, please let us know and we will send you any you want. We don't charge for this stuff, except in quanity.

You asked about "the economic cost of desegregation," and I wonder if you meant to write "segregation?" We don't have much on the cost of desegregation, but we might get up something like preparation, police protection and the rather heavy expense some states and localities have incurred in fighting desegregation. Before we go into this, though, will you straighten me out on whether this is what you want?

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML:mg

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE
KNOXVILLE

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

October 12, 1962

Miss Margaret Long
Editor, New South
5 Forsyth Street N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Miss Long:

I am to appear on a couple of programs within the next five or six weeks in regard to the economic cost of desegregation, as well as a discussion of the over-all social problem of race relations in the south.

While I have some familiarity with the subject and am familiar with some sources, I felt that your organization might have one or more publications, such as the economic cost of a dual education system, which might be available.

I would appreciate it if you would forward any material which you think would be useful; and I would, of course, be willing to pay whatever charges you usually make.

Very truly yours,

J. Earl Williams

J. Earl Williams
Assistant Professor of Economics

JEW:mjs

October 19, 1962

Dr. W. Sprague Holden
Chairman, Department of Journalism
Wayne State University
Detroit 2, Michigan

Dear Dr. Holden:

Mr. Dabbs has sent me your letter to him with your questions about desegregation. I think we are able to answer, to some extent, most of your questions.

I am sending you separately some of our publications which have some of the information you want, with our publication list. If you find anything else you want on this list let us know. There is no charge for these materials except in quanity.

I'm enclosing a note from Miss Bond in our research department with answers to three of your questions. Your article sounds extremely interesting and I hope we will be able to see it.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML:mg

Enclosure

- Please give Mr. Holden such information as you have readily available. Thanks
J. M. D.

WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS
DETROIT 2, MICHIGAN

October 8, 1962

DEPARTMENT OF JOURNALISM

Mr. James McBride Dabbs, Director
South Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

I am in the process of writing an article for a foreign periodical on the present state of integration in the South. The uglier picture of violence, such as that currently at the University of Mississippi gets the headlines in the foreign press and attempts are seldom made to indicate a hopeful side of the picture. It is my hope to present this in the article I am planning.

Can you give me specific information about such things as these:

The number of states, or areas within states, which are still resisting the Supreme Court order for desegration of schools.

What other universities are likely to follow the ugly Mississippi pattern?

What examples of progress can you cite in the integration of restaurants, lunch counters, transportation and other public places.

Are there any cities which can be pointed to as excellent examples of progress in desegregation?

What cities and places in the North are troublesome or are likely to be?

The foregoing questions will indicate the sort of information I am seeking. Perhaps there are pamphlets, reports, or other material which you publish or are available elsewhere. If some of it is available in public libraries, the titles, publishers and dates of issue would probably be sufficient -- I could look them up in the Detroit libraries. I will be willing to pay for pamphlets that do not have free distribution.

Because an article of this kind has a time angle on it, I would appreciate the earliest possible attention you can give my request.

Thank you in advance.

Sincerely,

W. Sprague Holden

W. Sprague Holden
Chairman
Department of Journalism

H/is

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY
NUTLEY 10, NEW JERSEY

HELEN TERRY
LIBRARIAN

10/24/62 October 22, 1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

RHA 10/24/62

Gentlemen:

We are enclosing herewith 20¢ in coin for which please send us a copy of RACIAL ~~WORK AND~~ NEGRO WASTE IN SOUTHERN EMPLOYMENT.

Thank you!

Sent 10-26-62
[illegible]

Very truly yours,

Helen Terry
Librarian
per O.L.

Foreign visitors

October 24, 1962

Mr. Frank S. Loescher
Program Director and General Secretary
U. S. South Africa Leader Exchange Program
101 South 39th Street
Philadelphia 4, Pa.

Dear Mr. Loescher:

We have your letter of October 22 and shall see that Professor Olivier and Mr. Chyte do get all of our publications.

I am sorry that I missed you when you were in Atlanta recently. From all that I have heard you and your companions did an excellent job in Mississippi.

Incidentally, my daughter, Linda Dunbar, who is a sophomore at Swarthmore, worked here in the office last Summer helping principally to receive and escort foreign visitors. If you ever send any of your South Africans out to the college and need a campus guide, I am sure that Linda would be delighted to help.

Sincerely yours,

LWD:A

Leslie W. Dunbar

UNITED STATES-SOUTH AFRICA LEADER
EXCHANGE PROGRAM, INC.

October 22, 1962

Program Director and General Secretary:
F. S. LOESCHER
101 SOUTH 39th STREET
PHILADELPHIA 4, PA.
EVergreen 2-7830

South African Secretary:
N. J. J. OLIVIER
P. O. BOX 225
STELLENBOSCH
SOUTH AFRICA

Dr. Leslie Dunbar
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

Could you see that all of your publications are sent to Professor N. J. J. Olivier, Secretary in South Africa, United States-South Africa Leader Exchange Program, Inc., P. O. Box 225, Stellenbosch, South Africa? I am informed that presently he receives only New South.

I wish you could also send everything you publish to Quintin Whyte, Director, South African Institute of Race Relations, P. O. Box 97, Johannesburg, South Africa.

Many thanks and best regards.

Sincerely,

Frank S Loescher
Frank S. Loescher

FSL/r

CC: Professor N. J. J. Olivier put on mailing list 11-21-62

gave Mr. Whyte complimentary NS
subscription 11/21/62

MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE: G. H. BENNETT (U.S.A.); C. B. BRINK (S.A.—VICE-CHAIRMAN); W. O. BROWN (U.S.A.); G. W. CARPENTER (U.S.A.); L. W. DOUGLAS (U.S.A.); H. GOLDBERG (S.A.); H. K. HOCHSCHILD (U.S.A.); L. M. HOSKINS (U.S.A.—VICE-CHAIRMAN); W. A. LANDMAN (S.A.); F. S. LOESCHER (U.S.A.—PROGRAM DIRECTOR); R. W. LOGAN (U.S.A.); E. O'C. MAGGS (S.A.); E. S. MUNGER (U.S.A.); N. J. J. OLIVIER (S.A.—SOUTH AFRICAN SECRETARY); L. PAFFRATH (U.S.A.); A. PIFER (U.S.A.); MRS. W. F. H. PURCELL (U.S.A.); E. ROSS (U.S.A.); K. P. G. SCHOEMAN (S.A.); T. P. STRATTEN (S.A.); W. G. SUTTON (S.A.); H. B. THOM (S.A.); T. L. TUCKER (U.S.A.); H. J. VAN ECK (S.A.—CHAIRMAN); F. J. VAN WYK (S.A.); A. D. WASSENAAR (S.A.); J. B. WEBB (S.A.); J. H. WHEELER (U.S.A.).

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE
KNOXVILLE

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

October 24, 1962

Miss Margaret Long
Director of Information
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Miss Long:

I appreciated your letter of October 19 and look forward to receiving your publications on the cost of desegregation. You were right in questioning my phrase "The economical cost of desegregation." I had, of course, meant to write "segregation". Consequently, I am sure, with my present knowledge supplemented by the publications you are sending, that you will suffice me in my present endeavor.

Thank you so much for your help, and I look forward to meeting you sometime in the future.

Sincerely,

J. Earl Williams

J. Earl Williams
Assistant Professor of Economics

JEW:maj

REVIEW COPY

PUBLICATION DATE APRIL 21, 1962
PRICE $10.00

Please do not release review prior to above date.

WE WOULD APPRECIATE RECEIVING TWO COPIES OF ANY NOTICE CONCERNING THIS BOOK WHICH APPEARS IN YOUR PUBLICATION.

Thank you.

University of Kentucky Press
LEXINGTON

Sent
10-26-62
mc

201 Benedict Ave.
Thornwood, N.Y.
October 23, 1962

Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

10/25/62
RHA

10/25/62

Enclosed please find 20¢ for your pamplet on "School desegregation: the First Six Years" (New South volume 15 No. 5).

Thank-you
(Miss) Heidi Barkentin

Student Office
National Student YWCA
41 Exchange Place, SE
Atlanta 3, Georgia

telephone order
10-29-62
10-31-62

15 copies - THE FREEDOM RIDE - $.15 each

total $3.75

We are sorry but TRAGIC FELLOWSHIP OF SOUTHERNERS is an old publication and we have no copies left.

Thank you.

November 6, 1962

Mr. Thomas E. Mulligan, Jr.
New York State Civil War Centennial Commission
P. O. Box 1861
New York 19, New York

Dear Mr. Mulligan:

Leslie Dunbar wants me to thank you for your compliments on "A Hundred Years Later." I believe we can send you as many extra copies as you need. Will you tell us how many?

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML/mg

✓

November 6, 1962

Mr. W. Sprague Holden, Chairman
Department of Journalism
Wayne State University
Detroit 2, Michigan

Dear Mr. Holden:

The Southern Regional Council is an organization which really dates back to 1919. We were the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation, a group of Negro and white liberals which was reorganized into the Southern Regional Council in 1944. We are now a board of eighty some distinguished Negro and white Southerners, from business, education, and other professions. We do not have members but we work with state and local Councils on Human Relations, which are membership groups. These Councils are autonomous but, of course, we have the same interests and we give them a little money.

We are now committed to complete desegregation and public equality in the South and direct our persuasions to that end. We are an organization of fact finding and persuasion, I should say, and our research department is our most important function for its reports, reprints of important ideas and opinions and new findings on the state of race relations in the South.

We're enclosing a little history of the Southern Regional Council which also explains our purposes better than I have here.

I certainly hope we will have a chance to see your Australian story if you could arrange to get us a copy.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
ML/mg
Enclosure

WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS DETROIT 2, MICHIGAN

DEPARTMENT OF JOURNALISM

October 25, 1962

Miss Margaret Long
Director of Information
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Miss Long:

The information you sent me about the present status of desegregation is exactly what I wanted. Thank you for your prompt response and for your helpfulness.

My purpose is to do an article for an Australian publication which I have already queried; if it isn't interested I shall try another. My wife and I visited Australia for more than a year in 1956-57, a period which included the Autherine Lucy story; and we saw then how little understanding there was of the whole context of race relations in the United States. Foreigners read only the spot news about such events, and almost never see the complete picture.

I do have one more question for you. What is the makeup of the Southern Regional Council? Are you primarily a research organization? Who belongs? Is it bi-racial? How old is it? What is its membership? I first heard of it through one of our graduates, who works on the Michigan Chronicle, one of Detroit's negro weeklies. I'd like to include some detail about the Council in my story.

Thank you again.

Sincerely,

W. Sprague Holden

W. Sprague Holden
Chairman
Department of Journalism

H/is

November 6, 1962

Mr. A. M. Freeman
201 Boundary Street
Montevallo, Alabama

Dear Mr. Freeman:

We are sending you 175 copies of "The Southern Regional Council - Its Origin and Aims." I'm sorry to be so slow but we have been terribly busy.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML:mg

201 BOUNDARY STREET
MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA

Monday, October 22, 1962

Southern Regional Council,
Atlanta, Georgia
ATTENTION MRS. LONG

Dear Mrs. Long:

As among the leaflets samples received from your office, I take it the best one to send now to the citizens and college staff here is
The Southern Regional Council--Origin and Aims.

Am late sending request for this month's distribution, waiting for a list of the college staff. The directory, which is due this week, will furnish me that. I am estimating 50 names in addition to my present college and community list of 125.

So if you will supply me with 175 copies, I'll get out every one of them, and then follow next month with the list of organizations which have endorsed the movement we are supporting

The present exceptional stir over integration in Alabama is, I believe, quite favorable to the cause. One body of city preachers came out last Friday with a strong statement of support for law observance in the integration issue:Huntsville.

Thank you and the Office for cooperation and support.

Yours truly,

A. M. Freeman

November 6, 1962

Mr. Everett J. Landers
Executive Director
Civil War Centennial Commission
State House
Trenton 25, New Jersey

Dear Mr. Landers:

Lewlie Dunbar has asked me to thank you for your good letter about our "A Hundred Years Later." We are proud of your compliments on it, and are delighted to send you fifteen copies.

Please do send us your booklet. We await it with interest.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML/mg

November 6, 1962

Mrs. Dale Lamb
2104 Lynn Road, NW
Huntsville, Alabama

Dear Mrs. Lamb:

Ralph McGill has asked us to send you some of our publications, and we have selected a few of the important ones which are on the way with a list of publications.

Do let me know if you see anything else of our list that you would like to see, and I will be delighted to send it to you.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long
Director of Information

ML/mg

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

BOX 4689
ATLANTA 2, GEORGIA

RALPH McGILL
Publisher

October 23, 1962

Miss Margaret Long
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, S. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Maggie:

Will you please send some of the material you usually mail out to people on inter-racial affairs to the following person:

Mrs. Dale Lamb
2104 Lynn Road, N. W.
Huntsville, Alabama

Best regards,

Ralph McGill

RM:gl

send pile

November 6, 1962

Mr. Floyd L. Haight, Chairman
Michigan Civil War Centennial
Observance Commission
22307 South Military
Dearborn, Michigan

Dear Mr. Haight:

We are happy to have your compliments on our "A Hundred Years Later," and delighted to send you fifty copies. I'll pass on the good word to our authors too.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long

ML/mg

MV - pls do
MA - file

GEORGE McMILLAN
Box 299
Aiken, S.C.
Midway 9-4747

send
NS
"Miss"

November 8, 1962

sent 1-7-63 mb

Dear Leslie:

I am glad to hear you are reprinting my Washington POST piece. If your supply is ample will ~~x~~you please send me 50 copies?

I am very much impressed with your description of a kind of bok that might be written about what has happened in the Negro movement since 1944. I would give you an "advance" on the basis of that paragraph. It is one of the best pieces of writing I have seen from~~x~~your hand.

I wish I could put everything aside and start work on the book you describe tomorrow morning. As you know, it is~~x~~ not that simple. But I am very grateful for your having given me a good idea with specific limitations, etc. I would like to do it and am going to mull it over for some time.

I agree with you that the violence book ought to include violence outside the South as well as within it. One reason I am not so eager to try it is that I somehow feel the phase of violence is coming to an end. That may not happen tomorrow. There is still Alabama.

Thanks again for your help. Hope you are feeling better.

Sincerely,

George

Leslie Dunbar
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta,~~x~~ Georgia

UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST
COUNCIL FOR CHRISTIAN SOCIAL ACTION

289 PARK AVENUE SOUTH, NEW YORK 10, NEW YORK · GR 5-2121

COUNCIL

Walter S. Press
Chairman

A. William Loos
Vice-Chairman

Mrs. Robert McGeehan
Secretary

Clarence E. Josephson
Treasurer

George D. Alley
Herbert E. Baldwin
Mrs. John C. Bennett
Theodore A. Braun
Leonard C. Brecher
Tilford E. Dudley
Roy J. Eilers
Jean Fairfax
Emerson G. Hangen
Mrs. Frank Havice
Ralph D. Hyslop
Byron L. Johnson
Mineo Katagiri
Constance Keller
Henry C. Koch
James H. Lightbourne, Jr.
Everett W. MacNair
Alfred F. Schroeder
Mrs. Horace Shonle
Arthur D. Shores
Robert D. Smink
Ernest J. Toth
Park J. White

STAFF

Ray Gibbons
Director

Huber F. Klemme
Associate Director

Elizabeth Johns
Publications

Lewis I. Maddocks
Washington Secretary

Chester L. Marcus
Galen R. Weaver
Racial and Cultural Relations

Herman F. Reissig
International Relations

F. Nelsen Schlegel
Field Secretary

November 9,1962

NEW SOUTH
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, NW
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Please find enclosed 5¢ for which send us your pamphlet entitled "A Virginia View of Race and Reason" by Benjamin Muse. Also please send us a sample copy of the following:

1. L - 31 "Slipping Segregation" - Reprint from Wall Street Journal.
2. L - 32 "The Challenge of Desegregation for the American Police Executive." Statement from New York University Graduate School of Public Administration.

Thank you kindly.

Sincerely yours,

Lena Crawford

Mrs. Lena Crawford, Seacetary to
Dr. Galen R. Weaver, Secretary
Racial and Cultural Relations

Enclosure 5¢

Coin

RHA 11/21/62

Sent 11-21-62

18 December 1962
173 Gilbert Way, S.E.
Hapeville, Georgia

Mrs. Margaret Long
c/o Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mrs. Long:

Will you please furnish me the complete mailing address of the publishers of the book From The Back Of The Bus by Dick Gregory. Since reading an article relative to this book that appeared in a Sundays Atlanta Journal & Constitution I have, thus far, been unable to procure it locally. Having discarded the paper that the article appeared in is the reason for this request of you as I do recall your name and your association with the Southern Regional Council, Inc. Trust this request does not inconvenience you and thanks very much for your assistance .

Yours truly,

Quillar Carmichael
Quillar Carmichael

December 18, 1962

Mr. Quillar Carmichael
173 Gilbert Way, SE
Hapeville, Georgia

Dear Mr. Carmichael:

FROM THE BACK OF THE BUS was published by E. P. Dutton & Company, Inc., 201 Park Avenue, South, New York 3, New York. The price is $1.95.

We are glad that we can help you and hope that you will call on us again.

Sincerely,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to Margaret Long

MG/s

MG

Nº 151868

HARVARD COÖPERATIVE SOCIETY
Harvard Square
Cambridge 38, Massachusetts

Date 12-24 1962

The above order number must appear on invoice and each package

FOR RESALE - Please enclose invoice with retail & discount

OMIT INVOICE ON DROP SHIPMENTS

To Southern Regional Council
Street State Capitol
City & State Atlanta Geo.

Wanted Ship Via

So. Regional Council
The Federal Executive and civil rights.

sent also;
Executive Power & Civil Rights

Albany

sent 1-4-63

WALTHAM SALESBOOK CO., WALTHAM, MASS.

HARVARD COÖPERATIVE SOCIETY
By

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY

Department of Sociology and Anthropology
1879 Hall - Room 116

December 26, 1962

Order Department
Publications
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

I enclose a check for the pamphlets listed on the attached sheet in the total amount of $2.10.

Please send them to me at the following address:

Prof. Morroe Berger
Public Health Service Grant
1879 Hall - Room 116
Princeton University
Princeton, New Jersey

1/2/63

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Morroe Berger
Morroe Berger
Professor of Sociology

MB/gn

ck $2.10
1/8/63
LR

Gentlemen: MG

December 27, 1962
Washington 1, D.C.

Please send me two copies of Southern Regional Council Reports the Changing South, 1960.

Sincerely yours,
Wm. Stuart Nelson
Howard University

sent 1-7-63 MG

Prof. Morroe Berger
Public Health Service Grant
1879 Hall - Room 116
Princeton University
Princeton, New Jersey

letter 12/18/62

12/28/62

1 year subscription to NEW SOUTH beginning January 1963 expiring December 1963	$2.00
total	$2.00

Thank you.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY

Department of Sociology and Anthropology

December 18, 1962

Order Department
Southern Regional Council
Room 201, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Please enter a one year subscription to

New South

for one year, effective with the next issue. Please bill me as follows:

Prof. Morroe Berger
Public Health Service Grant
1879 Hall - Room 116
Princeton University
Princeton, New Jersey

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Morroe Berger

Morroe Berger
Professor of Sociology

RHA
MG

December 31.
1962

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St. N.W.
Atlanta, Ga.

I have seen notice of your "Zinn Report" in the "Southern Patriot" – The notice says copies are available – I would like to have a copy –

10¢ stamps
1/2/63
RHA

Yours truly
Hannah B. Fyfe

MRS. JAMES L. FYFE
316 South Euclid Avenue
Oak Park, Illinois

sent 1[illegible]-4-63
1-4-63MG

You do not speak of a charge I suppose this will cover postage?

Haywood Handicrafters
League - % O. Sanders
307 West Margin Street
Brownsville, Tennessee

Dec. 31

RHA
MG

Gentlemen,

I would like a copy of professor Howard Zinn's Albany, a Study in National Responsibility as mentioned in the December issue of the Southern Patriot.

I enclose a couple of 4¢ stamps for mailing it.

Eric Weinberger

8¢ stamps

1/2/63
RHA

PLEASE
USE THIS HANDY LABEL
for your reply.
Just paste it on your envelope.
Tear off here ►

sent 1[illegible]-4-63 MG
1-4-63

CLAIM NOTICE

Date 1/4/63

To: The New South On a subscription placed (Name of magazine.)

through F. W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.

83 FRANCIS STREET
BOSTON 15, MASS.

we have failed to receive: Vol. 17, No 9 to date Late went out 2tp reg. way 1-9-63 MA

Please supply to complete our file for binding. reference.

We paid FAXON for Current Issues
(Inclusive dates or volume numbers.)

Education Library
Name of Library.

317 Norman Hall, University of
Address.
Florida, Gainesville, Fla.
(Be sure to list as per publishers mailing stencil.)

URGENT - PLEASE!

JAMES M. DABBS, PRESIDENT
ALBERT W. DENT, VICE PRESIDENT
MARION A. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOHN H. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
LESLIE W. DUNBAR, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W.
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JAckson 2-8764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

January 4, 1963

Mr. George McMillan
Box 299
Aiken, South Carolina

Dear Mr. McMillan:

Under separate cover we are sending you ten copies of our reprint of your WASHINGTON POST story "The South's Pattern of Violence Has Changed." We are also sending one copy of the October NEW SOUTH in which the article appeared.

If you would like to have additional copies of the magazine or the reprint, we will be glad to send them to you.

Sincerely,

Mary Godwin

Mary Godwin
Secretary to the Editor of NEW SOUTH

sent 1-7-63 MG

Dear Mary -- On the assumption there are plenty of copies, will you please send me 40 additional of the reprints and one more copy of NEW SOUTH? Thanks.

GeMcM.

MOREHEAD STATE COLLEGE

BUSINESS OFFICE

PURCHASE ORDER

1-7-63
MA
sent

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street. N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Order No. E. P. 6983

Date January 4, 1963

Deliver on or Before

Ship to MOREHEAD STATE COLLEGE

Johnson Camden Linrary Department

Morehead, Kentucky

THIS IS AN EMERGENCY PURCHASE ORDER—Read instructions below.

QUANTITY	UNIT	DESCRIPTION	UNIT PRICE	AMOUNT
1		New South, V.17, #6 June 1962.
		Stamps Enclosed. 20¢ postage 1/8/63 RH
			Total Amount

IMPORTANT INSTRUCTIONS TO VENDORS

1. Render invoice in duplicate on your form direct to:
   Business Office
   M. S. C., Morehead, Ky.
2. On invoice refer to this order No.

Ione M. Chapman

Signed: Ione M. Chapman

~~Business Manager~~

Librarian

M.O $1.10
1/8/63
LK

Dear Sirs:

Please send the following literature:

① The City & The Negro (20¢)
② The Negro Voter in the South
The Negro and the Ballot (40¢)
③ Map (1960) (25¢)
④ The Freedom Ride (25¢)
⑤ L-12 Voluntary Desegregation in Some Southern Districts SCF
L-16 Atlanta and Washington
L-17 Desegregation and Academic Achievement
L-25 New Census Look
L-28 Organizations Supporting Student Movement
L-29 A.A.A. Resolution on Race

Sent
1-7-63 MA

(OVER)

Total : $1,10

Thank you,

Mrs. H E Nelson
521 E Kenedy
Kingsville
Texas

LIBRARY
COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY
FOUNDED IN 1693
WILLIAMSBURG, VIRGINIA

OFFICE OF THE LIBRARIAN

January 10, 1963

Southern Regional Council
Room 201
S. Forsyth Street
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

Please send us the issues of the periodical listed below, which we did not receive on our subscription.

Thank you.

Yours truly,

Periodicals Department

NEW SOUTH Vol. 17 #7, 8, 9 July-October, 1962

THIRD CLAIM

1-14-63
MA

January 14, 1963

Office of the Librarian
Library
College of William and Mary
Williamsburg, Virginia

Dear Sir:

We have your notice (marked "third claim") requesting New South, Vol. 17, #7, 8, 9. Under separate cover today we are mailing these to you.

Please note that A Hundred Years Later is for July-August and is therefore #7 and #8. We have included #9, September, and #10, October also. We are expecting the November-December issue from the printer in a week or ten days, and you should receive it soon.

Recently we have begun reorganizing our mailing list for New South, under a more efficient system, and this has caused some disorganization. We hope to have this all correct and in operation within the next few weeks.

I am sorry you have had this difficulty; please let us know if you fail to receive subsequent copies.

Sincerely yo urs,

Montez G. Albright (Mrs.)
Administrative Assistant

February 1, 1963

Mr. G. Linnemann
La Porte High School
La Porte, Indiana

Dear Mr. Linnemann:

You will find enclosed a November-December, 1962 NEW SOUTH which contains a list of our most recent publications on page 25. Also enclosed is our Summer, 1962 publications list.

We can send you thirty copies of "A Hundred Years Later" for fifteen cents each.

Thank you for your inquiry.

Sincerely,

Mary Godwin
Secretary to the Editor of NEW SOUTH

MG/s

Enclosures

The Lipscomb Library
Randolph-Macon Woman's College
Lynchburg, Virginia

January 10, 1963

Gentlemen:

We failed to receive the following:

New South, all issues published since that of July - Aug. 1962

We shall appreciate your supplying the issues requested as soon as possible.

Mildred Johnson
Mildred F. Johnson
Reference Librarian

sent 1-14-63 MA

Our renewal July '62 - June '63 placed through Faxon.

15¢

G. LINNEMANN
LA PORTE HIGH SCHOOL
LA PORTE, INDIANA

Gentlemen:

Would you kindly tell me at what price I could obtain 30 copies of "A Hundred Years Later"? Have you a price list of other of your publications?

Thank you!

G. Linnemann

Mr. W. Judson King
President-Treasurer
Franklinton Center
Bricks, North Carolina

letter
2-11-63
2-26-63

One copy of each of following:

Albany, A Study in National Responsibility	-$.25
A Hundred Years Later	.20
The Unequal Badge	.10
Executive Support of Civil Rights	.50
Segregation Versus the Space Age	.05
A Study of Negro Farmers in S. C.	.10
Employment Studies
Chattanooga	.20
Houston	.20
Atlanta	.20
Total	$1.80

Thank you.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.
CHAIRMAN OF TRUSTEE BOARD

Z. P. JENKINS
VICE CHAIRMAN TRUSTEE BOARD

R. A. KING
SECRETARY

Franklinton Center

SPONSORED BY THE
UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST
Bricks, North Carolina

WM. JUDSON KING
PRESIDENT-TREASURER

TELEPHONE
ENFIELD HI 5-2146 AND HI 5-2147

February 11, 1963

Miss Margaret Long, Editor
The New South
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia.

Dear Miss Long:

The November-December New South has a list of pamphlets on Page 25 some of which the undersigned would like to secure: Among the free single copies I would wish all from L-31 to L-39.

I would also like the following of the priced titles:

Albany, A Study in National Responsibility - Howard Zinn

A Hundred Nears Later-

The Unequal Badge - Elliot M. Rudwick

Executive Support of Civil Rights-

Segregation Versus The Space Age- Marion Wright

A Study of Negro Farmers in South Carolina

Enployments Studies-

Chattanooga
Houston
Atlanta

These may be sent me C.O.D.

Very truly yours,

W. Judson King

W. Judson King.

April 15, 1964

TO: All Members of the National Lawyers Guild.

FROM: Ernest Goodman, President.

SUBJECT: Mississippi, and the Guild's Committee for Legal Assistance in the South.

Dear Guild Member:

The "Committee for Legal Assistance in the South" is the new name for what was formerly CASL. George Crockett and Ben Smith are Co-Chairmen of the Committee and George Downing and Len Holt are Co-Secretaries.

Crockett, Smith and Downing recently returned from a conference at Jackson, Mississippi where they were participants in what is, perhaps, the most exciting and promising development in the whole civil rights struggle in the South today: the proposed "Mississippi Project" to be sponsored and conducted in Mississippi this summer by the Mississippi Council of Federated Organizations (COFO).

What is COFO?

In 1963, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) in Mississippi joined with CORE, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), the NAACP and several other voter and civil groups in that state to form a statewide civil rights organization. Since then COFO has continued under the leadership of Aaron Henry as President and Robert Moses (of SNCC) as Program Director.

What is The Mississippi Project?

This summer, SNCC, in cooperation with COFO, is launching a massive Peace Corps-type operation for the disenfranchised citizens of Mississippi. One Thousand (1,000) college students, teachers, technicians, nurses, artists and legal advisors from all sections of the country are pledging themselves to come to Mississippi to staff a wide range of programs that include voter registration freedom schools, operation of community centers and special projects.

How Will The Project Operate?

The Freedom Schools and Community Centers will operate essentially the same as the Peace Corps operates abroad--a combination of adult education, arts and crafts, work-while-you-learn projects, health and recreation centers and political science seminars.

Voter Registration will be conducted by workers deployed in teams of four (4) in every county, with larger concentrations of roughly 100 in the major urban centers. These workers will assist in developing local leadership and organization. They will encourage as many Negroes as possible to attempt to register on the county books and will assist in a campaign, launched in February, to register over 400,000 Negroes on "Freedom" registration books. The "Freedom" registration campaign, now in progress, involves establishing local registrants in every precinct in Mississippi with registration books resembling as much as possible the official books of the state. The "Freedom" registration books will serve as the basis for challenging the official books of the state and the validity of "official" elections this fall. Finally, voter registration workers will assist in the summer campaigns of Freedom candidates who are running for Congress against the present incumbents.

The Problem for Lawyers.

A problem of major concern to the delegates at the COFO meeting was how to assure maximum legal protection and assistance for the workers in such a campaign in a state that has only three (3) attorneys (all Negroes) who will accept the defense of civil rights cases, and where court-assigned attorneys refuse to raise constitutional issues.

Mississippi officials are preparing for all-out resistance. According to Newsweek (2/24/64), the Mayor of the capitol city of Jackson boasts of a "riot-trained police force" which is "twice as big as any city our size"; the acquisition of two "detention compounds" for "demonstration POWs; and a specially built "13,000 pound armored battle-wagon" ..."abristle with shotgunds, tear-gas guns and a sub-machine gun." In addition, the New York Times (4/7/64) reports pending state bills authorizing municipalities to restrict the movements of citizens in the interest of "public safety;" and making it a felony to threaten or coerce another from lawfully carrying on business, or to print or circulate any matter encouraging economic boycotts.

The problem of litigating these restrictions on freedom and defending those who insist upon their freedoms is further complicated by the fact that, while the state courts are open to out-of-state lawyers without the necessity of formal motion and admission, the right of out-of-state attorneys to handle such cases can be challenged by any two (2) local attorneys at any time. The local Federal Court rule requires formal motion and at least one Federal Judge in the past has required that a local attorney physically accompany any out-of-state attorney appearing in his Court. Two (2) proceedings sponsored by the Guild already are pending in which it is sought to have this local Federal Rule declared inapplicable in all instances where the inability to obtain local counsel is shown.

The Guild's Concern As A Bar Association.

The Guild is not a civil rights organization. It is a national bar association of attorneys, professionally and personally committed for the past twenty-seven years to the defense of the civil rights and liberties for all people.

The distinction is important because it explains why the Guild itself cannot become an integral part of a lay defense organization or association of such organizations. Our concern in the Mississippi Project is to attempt to redress the lack of available lawyers in Mississippi ready, willing, and able to handle civil rights cases. And we would hope that our example might bring an increasing awareness of their professional obligation to members of the Mississippi bar, which would permit us to reduce and eventually withdraw our commitment. Unfortunately, no indication of such a development has yet taken place.

The Guild's Program For Mississippi.

The Proposal: It is proposed that the Guild and its members make available the maximum legal assistance possible to those participating in the Mississippi Project.

It is further proposed that such assistance be coordinated through a field office to be established in Mississippi, with a full-time integrated staff, consisting of two (2) attorneys, two (2) law students and a secretary. The function of this staff is

A. to handle, on an emergency basis, all request for immediate assistance until such time as particular Guild attorney can be assigned.

B. to set up immediately a register of Guild attorneys who will accept full responsibility for particular cases assigned to them; and

C. to keep a progress docket of all Guild cases and render such on-the-scene assistance to assigned attorneys as possible.

The Register of Guild Attorneys: Services of Guild attorneys would be solicited and utilized on the following bases:

1. General Guild Attorneys are those attorneys who agree to come and stay in Mississippi for an extended period of a week or more. Such an attorney would be assigned to a particular community, county or district for the duration of the stay. He would be expected to handle, on an emergency basis, all cases referred to him in that community or district. This includes arraignments, preliminary hearings, releases on bail, summary trails in magistrate's courts and appeals and trials de novo in County Court. It also includes habeas corpus and removal proceedings. COFO would provide him with subsistance and the facilities for working. His legal services would be rendered gratuitously and the Guild would pay for his transportation to and from his Mississippi location. When the tour of duty of a General Guild Attorney is about up, another would be on hand to step immediately into his place.

2. Special Guild Attorneys are those attorneys who accept an assigned Mississippi case or cases for preparation in their own offices and who come to Mississippi for the single purpose of trying or presenting argument in the particular case assigned to him. In such instances the "work-up" of the case or group of cases will have been handled (as outlined above) by a General Guild Attorney or the staff attorneys on the scene. The Special Guild Attorney would be expected to try such cases on appeal and to follow the case to its ultimate conclusion (including higher appeals). He also might be called upon to prepare briefs and argue removal proceedings or juvenile court proceedings. His services also would be volunteered and the Guild would assume responsibility for his travel and other expenses incident to his assignment.

Attorney's Registration and Commitment Form.

1. It is believed that we can achieve and maintain a fair territorial coverage if we can provide a total of sixty (60) "lawyer-weeks" (one lawyer for one week) of service for our General Guild Attorneys. This presupposes one (1) fulltime General Guild Attorney in each of the five (5) Congressional Districts in Mississippi for each of the twelve (12) weeks of the Project, or five (5) attorneys for each week from June 2, to August 31. In addition, of course, we shall need as many Special Guild Attorneys as we can obtain.

2. It is imperative that registrations of volunteer attorneys begin now. I am enclosing the Committee's Commitment Form and ask that you execute it and return it as promptly as possible. In addition to indicating whether or not you or someone from your office will be able to go to the South (Mississippi), please specify with as much certainty as possible the dates and total period of time you or someone from your office can stay in Mississippi.

3. Each Guild member who registers will be used to the extent that our finances will permit; and he will be informed, as far in advance as possible, of the place where he is wanted and the time when he is expected.

4. If you cannot come to Mississippi for a week or more, please indicate your willingness to work on any of the other aspects of the Guild's Mississippi program.

General Observations

1. The Guild's function in Mississippi is to bring clients and attorneys together -- to "guarantee" a competent attorney for any civil rights defendant who request an attorney.

2. The Guild will interest itself in a person's defense only upon request by the person or a representative of the person. In such cases, the function of the Guild will be limited to assigning counsel and providing for counsel's travel expenses where the client or the attorney is unable to do so.

3. Each attorney assigned by the Guild is required to obtain a written retainer from his client appointing the attorney as attorney-in-fact (as well as at law) to do what in his judgment is necessary to the client's defense. This applies also in those instances where either of the staff attorneys mentioned above undertake to represent any person with respect to any aspect of his defense.

4. It is not the Guild's function to itself handle or be responsible for the handling or even the direction of any defense case. The Guild is not a Civil Rights defense organization. Once the attorney is recommended by us and is accepted and engaged by the client, the relationship of attorney and client is established and it is the attorney's case.

5. The full support of the Guild is pledged to the assistance and to the defense of any attorney who accepts a case at the request of the Guild.

Initiation of Program: We propose to initiate the Guild's Mississippi program by conducting our third conference for civil rights attorneys in or near Jackson, Mississippi, on June 5 - 7, 1964. In addition to our usual work-shop discussions, the conference would explore in detail the legal needs of the Mississippi Program and the implementation of the Guild's proposals to meet these needs.

Budget: The proposed budget for this program is estimated at $15,000.00; the larger part of which represents the allocation for travel to and from Mississippi. This budget can be reduced to the extent that attorneys or their offices pay for their travel or the travel is provided by the local chapter of the Guild.

Mr. Crockett - with the approval of his firm - will spend the entire twelve (12) weeks at the Mississippi field office. We desperately need an additional volunteer attorney whose circumstances will permit a similar commitment "for the duration."

The two (2) law students and the secretary in the field office would be paid a subsistence of $50.00 per week. Rent, phone, office supplies, office rent, auto expense, travel and miscellaneous expenses should be kept to $1,000.00 per month. We should anticipate travel expense averaging $150.00 round trip for sixty (60) attorneys to come to Mississippi. And the expenses for the initiating conference could be kept at about $800.00. Thus, we have the following minimum proposed budget for three (3) months:

Field Office Staff Salaries	$1,800.00
Field Office Operating Expenses	3,000.00
Initiating Conference	800.00
Round Trip Travel for 60 Attorneys	9,000.00
Miscellaneous Expenses	400.00
Total	$15,000.00

(The above budget does not include expenses for Special Guild Lawyers or for costs and expenses on appeals)

Conclusion.

The realization of the Guild's objective in Mississippi will require the personal commitment of every Guild member. All of us cannot go to Mississippi; but we can help make it possible for others to go. We can do this by immediately sending a substantial increase in our current tax-exempt dues payment to the Guild, specially earmarked for this project.

NEWS FROM
Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.
822 Perdido Street, New Orleans, La. 70112 April 22, 1964

WASHINGTON, D. C. - The American Civil Liberties (ACLU) has urged the U. S. Supreme Court to pass on the validity of the Louisiana Subversive Activities and Communist Control Act.

ACLU attorneys told the high court that it "has the obligation to lay down clear rules preventing the destruction of Negro rights on the pretext that those who claim them or defend them are subversive." This plea was made in a brief supporting the request of the Southern Conference Educational Fund (SCEF), New Orleans, for review of a ruling against it in Louisiana.

SCEF is a Southwide interracial organization working to end segregation and discrimination. All of its records have been seized and two of its officers are charged with violating the subversive-activities law. The law partner of one of them is also accused.

These men are Dr. James A. Dombrowski, executive director of SCEF; Benjamin E Smith, SCEF treasurer, and Bruce Waltzer. Smith and Waltzer are also Louisiana attorneys for ACLU and have given their services in many civil rights cases. Dombrowski and Smith are charged with being officers of an organization cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) of the U. S. Congress.

Smith and Waltzer are charged with being members of the National Lawyers Guild also on the ground that the Guild has been cited by HUAC. The Louisiana law states that this is all that is necessary to show a person guilty of subversion.

The ACLU attorneys told the Supreme Court that this case is of "special importance." They said in their brief to the court: "Decisions validating politically repressive legislation against one unpopular minority offer to local governments a continuing incentive to achieve, by indirection, denial of the federal rights of a regionally unpopular minority. By capitalizing on the legitimated aversion to communism, the appellees (officials of Louisiana) hope to create another obstacle in the way of Negro freedom."

This supports SCEF's claim that Louisiana authorities are using the subversive activities law as an excuse for destroying a civil rights organization. This contention has been supported by leading civil rights advocates in the South.

The case on appeal to the Supreme Court arose out of refusal of two members of a Three-judge federal court in New Orleans to pass on the constitutionality of the Louisiana law. One judge said the law is unconstitutional.

Filing the brief for ACLU were Louis Lusky and Melvin L. Wulf, New York, and Leonard Dreyfus, New Orleans. Lusky has written extensively on the failure of U. S. courts in the South to uphold the rights and liberties of integrationists.

NATIONAL LAWYERS GUILD
2801 Cadillac Tower
Detroit 26, Michigan

FOR RELEASE: 12:00 Noon
Thursday, April 23, 1964

A "LAWYERS' PEACE CORPS" MOVES INTO MISSISSIPPI

The National Lawyers Guild launched its summer Mississippi Project at a luncheon meeting, Thursday, April 23, 1964, at Detroit's Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel.

The Project calls for lawyers to participate in a Peace Corps-type operation in Mississippi, defending, without fee, persons who would otherwise be without defense.

A letter has been sent to every member of the Guild urging them to donate from a week to three months of their time to the Mississippi Project. A copy of that letter is enclosed.

"Law Day, U.S.A." will be celebrated on May 1st, said Ernest Goodman, Detroit attorney and Guild national president.

"It is appropriate to add a new dimension to this day by including support to the movement for equality under the law of our nation."

"One situation which cries out for a remedy exists in Mississippi. Of two million people living in that State, 900,000 are Negro; yet, only 3 Mississippi lawyers (all Negro) will handle civil rights cases," Goodman said.

"Our purpose in going to Mississippi is to help bring into reality one of the principles of Law Day--equal justice under the law. As far as I now, the "Lawyers Peace Corps" is the first project of its kind."

A number of prominent Michigan lawyers have urged their colleagues to contribute to the Mississippi Project as a fitting commemoration of Law Day.

A joint effort this summer, by civil rights organizations in Mississippi, will attempt to secure justice in that state with emphasis on voter registration.

The need for lawyers was highlighted by a recent report in Time Magazine, that local officials in Mississippi are already preparing "detention compounds for demonstration POW's."

It is expected, therefore, that hundreds, perhaps thousands of registration workers will be arrested, and that the full power of the State will be brought down on persons seeking citizenship rights.

Goodman stressed that the Guild is not a civil rights organization, but a national bar association of attorneys, "professionally and personally committed to the defense of civil rights and liberties of all people. The distinction is important," he declared. "Our concern in the Mississippi Project is to attempt to redress the lack of available lawyers in Mississippi, ready, willing and able, to handle civil rights cases. We are going there as lawyers, and only as lawyers."

The "Lawyers' Peace Corps" will be under the direction of the Guild's Committee for Legal Assistance in the South, with George W. Crockett, Jr., of Detroit, and Benjamin Smith, of New Orleans, as co-chairmen, and George Downing of Detroit, and Len Holt of Washington, D.C., as co-secretaries.

IMMEDIATE ACTION URGENT

Dear Friends:

Have you written your Senators on the Civil Rights Bill? If not, Please DO IT NOW! Mail is still running heavily against the Bill.

Write in your own words just why you think all citizens should be treated equal to every other citizen, emphasizing Title II and Title VII ...

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS (TITLE II) The debate on the bill has focused largely on this title, which provides for federal action against discrimination in hotels, restaurants, theatres and the other places of public accommodation. No serious consideration has been given to such a federal law until 1963. It provides for suits to enforce the law. A civil action may be brought by an aggrieved person or by the Attorney General whenever any person has engaged in a violation or there are reasonable grounds to believe that he is about to.

FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES (TITLE VII) This part of the bill is quite long since it constitutes a full fair employment law. It applies to employers, employment agencies and labor organizations. An employer and labor organization is covered if its operations affect interstate commerce and if it has 25 or more employees. The number would begin with a minimum of 100 employees and decrease by 25 for each of the next 4 years. The bill also prohibits discriminatory advertising and retaliation against anyone because of invoking the procedures of the Act. They will create a five-man bi-partisan Equal Employment Opportunity Commission which will investigate violations.

The Bill contains eleven titles: (I) Voting Rights; (II) Injunctive Relief Against Discrimination in Places of Public Accommodations; (III) Desegregation of Public Facilities; (IV) Desegregation of Public Education; (V) Commission on Civil Rights; (VI) Non-Discrimination in Federally Assisted Programs; (VII) Equal Employment Opportunity; (VIII) Registration and Voting Statistics; (IX) Procedure After Removal in Civil Rights Cases; (X) Community Relations Services; (XI) Miscellaneous.

THIS BILL NEEDS MUCH SUPPORT! Those who have been against the Bill should be made to know that a great number of their constituents are opposed to their stand. Those who are for the Bill need your support too since the organized opposition is strong. This Bill is absolutely necessary for progress in race relations in this country and your support is vital.

Home Visits go on the year-round in now over 150 cities (not just on the National Home Visit Day of April 19), and organizers are finding these visits an ideal way to gain support of civil rights from among the uncommitted. Many areas are now encouraging discussion on the Bill during these visits and urging participants to take positive actions in contacting their Senators.

EVERY LETTER, TELEGRAM AND PHONE CALL IS CRUCIAL. Write ...

(example)

Senator - - - -
Senate Post Office
Washington 25, D.C.

urging them to pass favorably on the Civil Rights Bill now before the Senate. Major modifications and weakening amendments must be strongly discouraged. Remember that the Senator's "fan mail" will govern his final decision.

	Senators Strongly Opposed	Not Strongly Committed	Favorable
ALA.	X
ALASKA		Bartlett	Gruening
ARK.	X
ARIZ.		X
CALIF.			X
COLO.			X
CONN.			X
DELA.		Williams	Boggs
FLA.	X
GEORGIA	X
HAWAII			X
IDAHO		Jordon	Church
ILL.		Dirksen	Douglas
IND.			X
IOWA		Hickenlooper	Miller
KY.
KAN.		Morton	Cooper
LA.	X
MAINE		Smith	Muskie
MD.			X
MASS.			X
MICH.			X
MINN.			X
MISS.	X
MO.			X

	Senators Strongly Opposed	Not Strongly Committed	Favorable
MONT.			X
NEB.		X
N. H.		Cotton	McIntyre
N. J.			X
N. MEX.		X
N. Y.			X
NEV.		X
N. C.	X
N. D.		Young	Burdick
OHIO		Lausche	Young
OKLA.		X
ORE.			X
PENNA.			X
R. I.			X
S. C.	X
S. D.		Mundt	McGovern
TENN.		X
TEXAS	Tower	Yarborough
UTAH		Bennett	Moss
VT.		X
VIRGINIA	X
WASH.			X
W. VA.		Byrd	Randolph
WISC.			X
WYOM.		Simpson	McGee

Total Favorable-50 Strongly Opposed-19 Not Strongly Committed-31

* * *

(for further specific information and helpful summaries of the Bill contact):

Leadership Conference on Civil Rights - 707 - 17th St., N.W., Washington, D.C.
American Jewish Congress, 15 E. 84th Street, New York 28, New York
Johnson Publishing Co. (JET Magazine), 1820 S. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Quantity Discounts Available

FRIENDSHIP HOUSE
4233 S. Indiana Ave.
Chicago, Illinois

Non-Profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 4493
Chicago, Ill.

EDITOR, NEW SOUTH
RM. 201 - 5 FORSYTH NW
ATLANTA 3 GEORGIA

New Horizons for Youth
1426 Bristol Street
Phila. 40, Penna.

Dear Reader:

Yes, youth are on the move! They are demonstrating and organizing for more jobs, equal rights, better housing, integrated schools, adequate recreational facilities, and security through world peace. They are questioning the status quo in many areas of our national life and are searching for answers and solutions. The keynote of this new awareness among youth is ACTION.

New Horizons for Youth has played an active role in reporting and analyzing avents and current views of young people since the sit-ins of 1960 ushered in this new era of youth activity. From a four-page to an eight-page newspaper to the present 20-page magazine, New Horizons for Youth has expanded and adapted to meet the needs of a growing movement and a broadening readership. It will continue to report and analyze developments throughout the country on a bi-monthly basis.

Our recent move to Philadelphia has enabled us to solve many of the problems which plagued the publication in its old home. New Horizons for Youth is now being managed efficiently; moreover it is being revamped in format and content so as to appeal to a greater number of young people. Many have noticed the difference in the first issue published in Philadelphia(Volume IV, No. 1) and have written us their approval and encouragement.

Your subscription has expired and we urge you to renew it now! We know you will want to follow the struggles and excitement, as young Americans work to build a more secure future. And you can be assured that you will receive your copy regularly every two months. Subscriptions are now only $1 per year (for six issues). Your renewal will help give us the support we need to bring you the news and viewsof youth on the move.

Just clip out the renewal form below and send it in with your dollar (cash, check or money order).

Thank you
NEW HORIZONS FOR YOUTH
Arlene Shupak
Arlene Shupak
Business Manager

YOUTH PUBLICATIONS, INC. 1426 Bristol St. Phila., Penna. 19140

Please renew my subscription to New Horizons for Youth.
- () I enclose $1.00 for a 1 year sub
- () I enclose $ .50 for a ½ year sub
- () I enclose an additional $____ contribution to help sustain NEW HORIZONS for YOUTH

Name________________________________
Address______________________________
City__________________ Zone __________ State ________

L/D

November 30, 1963
42677-B-2
Reidsville Ga

Dear Mrs Long.

I am writing you once a gain to ask you to send me my court transcript which I sent to you quite some timen ago.

I recieved the copies of my hand printed writ back some three (3) week ago but as I plan to sontinue trying to get a review of my case - I will be needing ~~my~~ the photostatic copy of my court record ~~that~~ that I sent you.

I appriciate your efforts to help me however, I haven't heard from any of the persons you mentioned. Nevertheless I shall keep trying because I am indeed innocent of any crime.

Respectfully
Yours.
B. J. Perry

P.S.
Please send them soon.

42677-B-2

INSTRUCTIONS TO DELIVERING EMPLOYEE

☑ Deliver ONLY to addressee ☐ Show address where delivered

(Additional charges required for these services)

RECEIPT

Received the numbered article described on other side.

SIGNATURE OR NAME OF ADDRESSEE (must always be filled in)

SIGNATURE OF ADDRESSEE'S AGENT, IF ANY

Lee Woods Mail Clerk

DATE DELIVERED

10/19/65

SHOW WHERE DELIVERED (only if requested)

C55—16—71548-5—F GPO

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT
OFFICIAL BUSINESS

PENALTY FOR PRIVATE USE TO AVOID PAYMENT OF POSTAGE, $300

REIDSVILLE
OCT 19
6 [illegible] AM
1963
GA.

POSTMARK OF DELIVERING OFFICE

INSTRUCTIONS: Fill in items below and complete instructions on other side, if applicable. Moisten gummed ends, attach and hold firmly to back of article. Print on front of article RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED.

RETURN TO

REGISTERED NO. 2726	NAME OF SENDER Southern Regional Council
CERTIFIED NO.	STREET AND NO. OR P. O. BOX 5 Forsyth St. NW
INSURED NO.	CITY, ZONE AND STATE Atlanta. Ga 303

POD Form 3811 Apr. 1962

C55—16—71548-5—F

The Presbyterian Outlook

AUBREY N. BROWN, JR.
Editor

JAMES S. BROWN
Business Manager

MIlton 9-1371 • 512 East Main Street • Richmond 19, Virginia

Old in Service • Established 1819 • New in Spirit

March 25, 1964

Dear Miss Long,

Somewhere during the past month or two I have seen a very good comment on the public accommodations section of the civil rights bill showing how many so-called private businesses are dependent upon many public factors. I thought this was in the Dabbs address, but I don't find it. I think it must have been in something going about during the SRC meeting. I wonder if anybody there can help me?

Gratefully yours,

Aubrey N. Brown, Jr.

ANB/dk

TRANS ACTION

SOCIAL SCIENCE AND THE COMMUNITY

Published by the Community Leadership Project
Washington University
Skinker at Lindell Boulevard
Saint Louis, Missouri 63130
Phone 314 VO 3-0100

advisory editors

Chris Argyris
Harold J. Barnett
Allen H. Barton
Howard S. Becker
Warren Bennis
Bennett Berger
Edgar F. Borgatta
Earnest S. Brandenburg
Robert Buckhout
Marion E. Bunch
Dorwin Cartwright
W. W. Charters
John A. Clausen
Wilbur J. Cohen
Donald R. Cressey
Richard DeCharms
Leonard J. Duhl
Joseph W. Eaton
Thomas H. Eliot
Heinz Eulau
Herbert J. Gans
John C. Glidewell
Erving Goffman
William E. Gordon
Mary E. W. Goss
Bertram M. Gross
Andrew Hacker
Everett E. Hagen
Eugene L. Hartley
Reuben Hill
Edwin P. Hollander
Irving L. Horowitz
Laurence Iannaccone
Robert W. Kleemeier
Victor T. LeVine
Oscar Lewis
Ronald Lippitt
Eugene Litwak
Martin Loeb
Joseph D. Lohman
Norton E. Long
Henry Maas
Raymond W. Mack
Carl A. McCandless
Robert K. Merton
S. Michael Miller
Robert A. Nisbet
Lloyd E. Ohlin
David J. Pittman
Ralph E. Pumphrey
Lee Rainwater
Paul C. Reinert, S.J.
Ronald G. Ridker
David Riesman
Frank Riessman
John W. Riley
Milton Rokeach
Arnold M. Rose
Peter Rossi
Robert H. Salisbury
R. Nevitt Sanford
Sterling H. Schoen
Leo F. Schnore
Morris S. Schwartz
Myron Schwartz
Judson T. Shaplin
Muzafer Sherif
James F. Short, Jr.
Stanley Spector
Herman D. Stein
Anselm Strauss
Marvin B. Sussman
John Thibaut
James D. Thompson
Jackson Toby
Wayne Vasey
Harold L. Wilensky
Alvin W. Wolfe

Alvin W. Gouldner
editor-in-chief

March 31, 1964

Miss Margaret Long, Editor
New South
5 Forsyth Street N.W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Dear Miss Long:

We are interested in exchanging copies of TRANS-ACTION with your publication, New South. I am enclosing a copy of the March issue for your inspection. If you would be interested in such an exchange, please let us know. Our mailing address would be:

TRANS-ACTION
BOX 43
WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY
SKINKER AT LINDELL
ST. LOUIS, MO. 63130

Sincerely,
TRANS-ACTION

Doreen C Simpson

Doreen Cronkite Simpson
Production Editor

DCS:er

Encl.

Miss Margaret Long,
Editor,

New South
Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Miss Long -

Congratulation on the fine work of Vol. 18 of New South, Oct. Nov. 1963. Please send me 5 copies. I enclose $1.00. Thank you.

Elaine Heffernan

4/16/64

apt. 102 1009 24th St. NW
Washington DC 20037

Southern Illinois University

EDWARDSVILLE, ILLINOIS

Library

May 15, 1964

New South
Room 201
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:,

We are interested in completing our files of the periodical(s) listed below. We would appreciate your supplying us with information as to the availability and cost of the issues or volumes indicated. This is an inquiry only, not an order.

NEW SOUTH

V. 15 Nos. 1-11 Jan.-Nov. 1960
V. 17 Nos. 7-12 July-Dec. 1962

Sincerely yours,

Jewell W. Smith

(Mr.) Jewell W. Smith
Periodicals Librarian

JWS/jw

JOHN H. WHEELER, PRESIDENT
ALBERT W. DENT, VICE PRESIDENT
MARION A. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
LESLIE W. DUNBAR, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W. ATLANTA, GEORGIA 30303
JAckson 2-8764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

July 24, 1964

MEMO TO: Maggie Long
Pat Watters

FROM : Leslie W. Dunbar

This is to summarize the plans we discussed earlier this week for the remaining issues of New South this year.

July - August - Pat's report on St. Augustine.

September - Ed Stanfield's analysis of the church.

October - Short articles.

November - Lillian Smith.

December - Maggie's essay on the book explosion of 1964.

Lillian Smith's piece possibly could be available for October or possibly not until December. In order words, the plans for October, November, and December might be juggled. I think the stronger possibility is that Lillian Smith will not have her piece done before the time for the December issue. This means that Maggie should be prepared to get her piece about books finished for the November issue.

Memo from MONTEZ G. ALBRIGHT

Maggie, please include in next New South if you have space.

Memo from MONTEZ G. ALBRIGHT

New publications:

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, 1944-1964. How, why, and by whom the SRC was organized; statement of policy and aims; statement of views. SC .20, Q .15

DIRECT ACTION IN THE SOUTH. A report on the Negro revolt, beginning with Feb. 1, 1960 and continuing through Summer, 1963. SC .35

SERIES OF SPECIAL REPORTS telling of progress in race relations in five Southern cities: what happened, how, why, and the outlook for the future. CHARLOTTE, LOUISVILLE, MEMPHIS available now, ~~[illegible]~~ .40 each city. Others to be out later.

LAW ENFORCEMENT IN MISSISSIPPI. Special Report on Mississippi during the Summer of 1964, ~~especially as it relates to law enforcement and white reaction to the COFO program. SC .40~~ responsibilities of Mississippi + federal authorities

THE PRICE WE PAY ~~(for discrimination)~~. Samples the costs--chiefly money--incurred by the South's resistance to equal opportunity. Produced in cooperation with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. SC .75

L-47, THE QUESTION FROM JACKSONVILLE. Was the Easter Week outbreak of racial violence a portent of things to come as the great turning point of federal civil rights legislation is reached? SC ~~free.~~ .10 responsibilities of Mississippi and federal authorities as they relate to law enforcement and white reaction to the COFO program.' SC .40

Ans 7/30/64

ELBRIGE GATEWOOD
395 RIVERSIDE DRIVE
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10025

July 26, 1964

The New South
Southern Regional Council of Atlanta
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

In hoppe that I have the address correct. Saw your magazine mentioned by Carleton Putnam, in The Road To Reversal.

Will you kindly send me a sample copy of your magazine.

Yours truly,

Elbrige Gatewood

No. 45627- B-1
Benny Frank Young
Reidsville, Ga.

August 13, 1964.

Miss Margaret Long
New South
5 Forsythe St.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Miss Long:

After reading your excellent editorial in the June New South which I received today, I could not help wondering what is meant by the sentence on page 23, "and the forgiving love of God".

How does it come about that people still talk of the mercy, love and forgivness of a supposed God when there is so much evidence~~s~~ that if you believe in a God, a Creator, you must of necessity believe in a cruel God!

How could an almighty God permit the cruelty to go on against so many innocent people, not to mention the cruelty of nature, hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, mosquitos, fleas and all the other pests that torture man?

All religion does is to keep man from facing realities and to keep man in ignorance, or rather to keep the human being from seeing things as they are.

The Turk-Greek problem is found all over the world. That is what we have here. Hatred is stronger than love. Is it not because of ignorance, of the lack of knowledge of the universe as it is, of knowing that man cannot prosper as a human being until he understands the human being instead of trying to get God to forgive him for all his trespasses?

But it's a long story. Where does it begin and end?

Sincerely,

Alexis C. Ferm

1225 Waverly Dr
Daytona Beach, Fla.
Aug. 14, 1964

32018

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga

8-17-64 P

Gentlemen —

Enclosed find check for 2$^{\underline{50}}$ for subscr. for "New South" (I would not want to pay only 2$^{\underline{00}}$ when your costs are 2$^{\underline{50}}$).

I was shocked by the affidavits in the June issue.

I hope that, somehow, the Civil Rights leaders will find a way to curb the unruly demonstrations + looting by the young element in the East that is damaging the cause seriously.

Yours truly
Paul A Hurt

North Tulsa Baptist Center
2707 E. 27th St. North
Tulsa 10, Oklahoma
FI 5-0194

W. T. Moore, Director
Res. Ph. LU 5-8889

Sept. 15, 1964

Dear ~~Sirs~~ Madam,

I can hardly hope that my first such efforts might be worthy of publication but I think the idea ENCLOSED is worthy if someone else could rework it. I could wish that even some national magazine might do a feature on the origins of the Negro revolt. Anyway I thought I would pass this along for anything it might be worth. I am sending a couple of other ideas to some of my denominational publications.

Another idea I have harbored for several years and never have found the time or place to do the necessary research. There was a time when several states had public schools (at least on the high school level) segregated by sex. My theory is that some of the protest against co-education must have sounded strikingly similiar to present day protests against integration. If so and such a passge could be located in print, a ~~other~~ rather good point might be made ~~article might have done~~ beginning by quoting ~~this~~ SUCH A passage, and then revealing its source. Remember how popular the quote from before the time of Christ about the world & young people goihg to the dogs has been with public speakers?

Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

W. T. Moore

W.T. Moore

DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY, INC. Publishers

277 PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10017 TEL: 212 TA 6-2000

November 18, 1964

Dear Miss Long:

Under separate cover we are sending you a copy of "Off My Chest" by Jimmy Brown, which Doubleday will publish on November 20th.

You have our permission to use the paragraphs on equality and bigotry in your monthly magazine with, of course, credit to Doubleday.

Sincerely yours,

Dianitia Hutcheson

Dianitia Hutcheson
Publicity

Miss Margaret Long
NEW SOUTH
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sirs,

Upon reading your "June 64" New South, I was moved in anger at police officers mentioned. I am now deeply concerned with this problem. I think that your mag. has awakened me more than any single speaker or lecturer since I heard Martin L. King.

I am inclosing two dollars for a subscription, in hopes that you will keep up the good work.

7-17-64

Yours Truly
Steven Semanski

Mr. Steven E. Semanski
4th ave.
Norway, Michigan

925 University Street
Memphis 7, Tennessee
December 17, 1964

The Editors
New South
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

Because I am a citizen of the New South with a deep commitment to the eradication of racial prejudice, I received and read with interest several issues of your publication. It is this same commitment to the eradication of racial prejudice which prompts me to request that you take my name from your mailing list. I do not find prejudice against white people more palatable than prejudice against Negroes. Any white person who can read Margaret Long's Strictly Subjective in your October issue without anger must have a very bad conscience and a need for self punishment.

I hope you will some day come to realize that true racial harmony implies a recognition of the human dignity of all races.

Sincerely,

Emilie S. Ratner
(MRS M. L. RATNER)

MAMARONECK
OCT 1
PM
1964

U.S. POSTAGE 4c

THIS SIDE OF CARD IS FOR ADDRESS

Southern Regional Council,
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.,
Atlanta 3,
Georgia.

Dear sirs,

Could you send me a copy of the May, 1964 issue of 'New South'. I would like to read Judge Tyler article. Any charges I will be glad to cover with my check. The address is -

The Rev. Ian George,
St. Thomas Episcopal Church,
Mamaroneck, N.Y..

Thanking you,

Ian George.

ans
2-25-65

EMORY UNIVERSITY
ATLANTA 22, GEORGIA

THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

February 5, 1965

NEW SOUTH
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gentlemen:

We would appreciate your help in clarifying the volume numbers of NEW SOUTH. The September 1964 issue was numbered volume 19, no. 9. Since then we have received the October and November issues numbered volume 1, no. 9 and volume 1, no. 10, respectively. We are anxious to know why these have been numbered in this manner.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Turner Cassity Jr

Turner Cassity, Chief
Serials and Binding Dept.

JE:ls

FYI from Janet Smith

296 W 11 St. #5r
New York, N.Y. 10014
September 10, 1965

Dear Miss Alexander,

Enclosed is a check for $2.50 for the renewal of my subscription to New South. I would appreciate it if you would also send me a copy of the Pat Waters pamphlet which you published this spring on the student movement. If there is any charge please let me know. 9-13-65.5

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Nancy Stearns

Nancy Stearns

p.s. Please give my best regards to Margaret Long.

IF NOT NOW WHEN !

An Address Delivered by the Rev.
Wyatt Tee Walker, Executive
Assistant to Martin Luther King,
Jr. at the Hungry Club Open
Forum, Atlanta, Georgia, May 6,
1964 as a part of the Annual Observance of Alpha Phi Alpha's
Education For Citizenship Week.

Dr. Newsome, Brothers in Alpha, Ladies & Gentlemen: I am appreciative of the opportunity to address what is perhaps one of the most significant luncheon forums in the nation. Let me say to my Greek brothers that I am humbled that they have chosen me to speak during the Annual Observance of Alpha Phi Alpha's Education For Citizenship Week.

There is no need for me to confess to you that I am not an educator _per se_. However, I sincerely believe that the task with which my hands have been buised for the past ten years or so is helping more than anything else to draw out of and develop in the Negro his stifled and blocked native capacities that have been literally strangled for the past one hundred years. If we deal with education from an etymological point of view, it means precisely that. The root word in the original Latin idiom is the verb duco meaning to lead. Coupled with the prefix ex, a preposition meaning from or out, it forms educo- literally to lead forth or to lead out of- from which the word education is derived. Thus in the literal sense, education does mean to lead or to draw or to develop from personality that which is already inherent. Thus the aim and end of result of education is not to put something in us but to develop that which we already possess to its maxium.

To be sure there are different kind of education. There is in our person Biological education. In that moment when the spark of life is struck in the coniugal relationship, our being is 1/100th the size of the point of a pin. Yet at that microscopic level of development, the ear which is not yet formed is already adapted to hear and the tongue to taste and the eye to see. This is biological education. As we lay in our crib, in a few months, our eyes begin to distinguish colors we roll over, pull up on all fours, and ultimately walk. Sinew, muscle and bone strengthen and we clearly experience Physiological education. The one day, someone takes by the hand and leads us to school where we learn "reading, 'ritin, and'rithemetic" and we come to know the discipline of Mental education a as our minds are honed to sharpness. The nature of our churches and the basic morality of our heritage develops within us a sense of Religious education, that I suppose in most instances we grapple with unceasingly to respect its demands. But yet the compounded discipline of all these are not sufficient to equip us to meet life on better than even terms. I submit to you that successful living is not measured quantitatively so much as it is qualitatively. The most meaningful life is that which spills over beyond its immediate historical context. Our concern should focus on the rest of life in such manner that our passing will be more than an incidental note in the obituary column but rather, that the presence of our lives can still be recognized in some humanitarian and noble cause long after the ashes of our remains are blown to the four winds. Thus, I would suggest within our immediate frame of reference - that of being a part of the Negro community and living in Atlanta, Georgia - that we need to submit ourselves to what I call Spiritual education. I mean by this to so develop within the aura of our lives, a sensitivity to the great issues of our time; the oppression of the weak, the exploitation of the poor, the terror foisted upon the defenceless, slaying of the innocent, degradation of the human spirit the hunger of the starvin g etc. A commitment to relieve these conditions should influence the bent of our lives. All of the others educational disciplines become empty and shallow unless unless they are undergirded by the discipline of an educated spirit that translates into action the real meaning of life.

Thus, by this measure, how can we ignore in any degree the swirling events of sharp social transition about us which are aimed squarely at relieving many esternal and internal problems of the Negro as well as striking the shackles of prejudice and guilt from the white man as a prelude to establishing the beloved community. Against the backdrop, let us consider what is immediately before us in order that we may fix the responsibility that is ours.

No one need. be sage or seer to discern clearly that 1964 will be a far more critical year in the civil rights fortunes of the Negro than was 1963. This assertion in no way is an attempt to minimize the importance of the epochal "summer of discontent." Rather it is aimed at underscoring what is to come in an awesome and devastating social context. The mood of the larger Negro community, white certainly not vengeful, bitter or violent, is distinctly one of extreme impatience with the continual denial of his basic freedoms: Behind his alleged unrealistic demand for "Freedom Now!" there stands his almost surly, "If not now, when?"

It is so very apparent that a counter-revolution at this moment is reaching its crest. The chief evidences are the "Stall-In" in the Senate on the present civil rights legislation and the polling of more than a quarter million votes by the racist George Wallace in the Wisconsin primary. There is hardly a reasonable conjecture that the Negro is going to turn around or even delay his forward movement though the resources and determination of the opposition must not be lightly judged. The few months (?) or weeks ahead will most certainly spell the moment of truth, not only for the Negro revolution, but in a larger sense, for the nation as a whole. If the counter-revolution displays more strength and stamina than the revolution that spawned it, America and the Negro community will be in real trouble. This is not meant to be a prophecy of doom, but only a realistic appraisal that there are two possibilities existent.

Let me address myself to the other possibility - that is, the off setting of the counter-revolution by a determined thrust forward by the Negro community and its allies. First, it seems that if the counter-revolution is to be turned aside, there will be definite ear-marks by which the Negro revolution will be heightened and intensified. It will be preceded and prodded by new events and dimensions, some of which we already have seen glimpses.

The Negro revolution will begin to develop in structured form along national lines. This does not mean the cessation of local protest, but rather a consistent pattern with a high degree of uniformity evident. The basic approach of the nonviolent revolution will not be changed. It will be marked by increasing frequency and intensity of activity. Broad goals will be sought as over against specific demands of the past. It is already evident that the South will not be the chief focus of activity. The entire nation will feel the brunt of nonviolent forces insisting "Freedom Now." The South will see most of the activity focused on public accommodations and the right to vote; . The North's activity will center chiefly on _de facto_ school segregation and housing; both North and s South will give considerable attention to employment. In no event will any form of discrimination go unchallenged.

It has become remarkably clear in the national community that we have a problem. We thought after the civil rights bill cleared the House with flying colors, principally intact, that we were on our way to some solution. The recent events in the Senate and the advent of what has been called the "white back-lash" against civil rights, gives the general Negro community a sense of being on a treadmill. The much critized "Stall-In" in the words of Dr. King, "is symptomatic of the discontent, frustration and seething despair of the Negro" in the face of continuing and entrenched segregation across the spectrum of his experience North and South. It was above all else, a sincere attempt to dramatize the "unfair world" at the World's Fair. Somehow, the Negro intuitively understands that the nation will only respond to his dilemma under the hammer of national crisis. He is now convinced that "nobody really gives a damn!"

The Negro community has some concrete ideas as to how he might call national attention and relief to his problem. He contemplates seriously the implementation of a national program of economic withdrawal. With nation-wide coordination, it would be aimed at a show-case, giant, consumer industry. The convening city has already been chosen and only the date and the industry are left to be named.

To Quote from an earlier paper:

> "A massive refusal to buy on the part of the Negro community and others of good will would throw the business community into shock. Maybe then, and only then, will the nation's financial leaders exert some initiative in eliminating the evils of segregation and discrimination."

Money does not talk, it screams!

We have already had intimations of what is to come. It is very possible that in the next few months that on some appointed day, at some appointed hour, the nation will be literally immobilized by widespread acts of civil disobedience. That day may not be far off if the nation does not act swiftly on the Negro's plea for justice and morality. Transportation centers could be strangled by the bodies of committed witnesses nonviolently insisting, "Freedom Now!" Airports, train stations, bus terminals and the traffic arteries of large cities could very well be the site of the next major battleground in civil rights.

The plight of the Negro is swiftly becoming desperate. On the one hand, he carries the social leprosy of his visible identity which has crippled him psychologically, emotionally and educationally; on the other hand, the dread onslaught of automation is grinding out his economic existence. He supposes that a nation-wide work stoppage might attract enough attention to persuade someone to do something to get this monkey of segregation off his back. And of course, there is the fast unto death. This is not as far-fetched as it seems for in an almost literal sense the Negro is economically and politically put to death by the thousands under the present system.

We may see one or all of these in the next few months ahead. Why is it that we must be concerned as to where our allegiance falls in the future? The summer of 1963 was long and hot; the summer of 1964 will be longer and hotter. The Negro, for the sake of our nation must find a definite answer to his present query, "if not now, when?"

THE CHANGING MIND OF THE SOUTH: THE EXPOSED NERVE

LESLIE W. DUNBAR
Southern Regional Council

I

I PREMISE THAT THERE has been such a thing as a southern folk, clearly if not definably more a single people than any other Americans, composed of two grades of persons, both of whom have been truly part of the same folk, and yet one of whom, the Negro Southerners, because they were ruled by the other did not sense and hallow as did the whites their folk integrity and their distinctness from the rest of the nation. And because white Southerners have consciously known that they were set apart, they have struggled to define themselves, have striven for self-identity, and with every Cash or Percy—or Faulkner—asking "Who am I?" have moved nearer the point which comes in every self-examination, where discovery means either release or reunion.

Who is there who is not tired of this search, who would not rather give it up before he has to choose between release, and rejection, or recoil into the mind of the South, who would rather not stop short in self-discovery and become what history makes of him? And indeed, there has been a re-directing of the South's self-study. The intellectual and artistic concern is changing, has changed, from a deep, self-combative hoeing and chopping of souls and history and eternity, and toward commitment to the active issues of the day. The dark, Faulknerian, problems recede.

The classic interpreters of the South began with the conviction that there was a "South" and a "Southerner," and they hunted for definitions. Because the interpreters were themselves Southerners, dredging their prey up through their memories and revealing it as a Protean substance, their definitions were never abstract, and they never tired of examining countless aspects. Nor did they, however, ever yield the belief that something constant and essential lay under the aspects. The Southerner was to be known as a being, and not an active one at that. Only the public figures of the South defined themselves in activity, and the interpreters tended to be less interested in them than in regarding the South's election of them as another aspect of the essential being which needed to be pondered. The essential Southerner acted occasionally, savagely and without premeditation, and this proclivity of his was another aspect to be explained. But except for this, the Southerner "was"; he did not, since the Civil War, "do."

Our preoccupation today is with how Southerners do and will act. For this is a time of testing. We are re-learning an old truth, which historians have nearly always known and social scientists have frequently forgotten, that men reveal themselves more accurately through their action than through their established feelings, opinions, and beliefs.

Another change has occurred as well. Cash, writing as late as 1941, was not really much attentive to Negro Southerners, and Percy, writing also in 1941, could say that he was "usually in a condition of amazed exultation over the excellent state of race relations in the South." James Agee, almost the quintessential New Dealer, took only an occasional and not seriously interested glance at the Negro neighbors of his white Alabama sharecroppers. Of the classic writers, only Lillian Smith had the greatness to wrestle with what the others saw, but passed by, and that was the centrality of race to the southern self-consciousness[1]

In fact, not until the sit-in movement began in Greensboro in 1960 did the "mind" of Negroes become of conscious interest to white Southerners, in the sense that an active awareness began that the southern consensus had to include Negro values and desires. Even in the titanic controversies after 1954, the actors—those who were conspicuously making history—were almost always white: Senator Byrd, Governor Faubus, and the other captains of massive resistance. Negroes appeared only as a shadowy mass, from whom now and then emerged an impersonal lawyer or a poker-faced schoolchild walking through white faces lit with expression. The state of North Carolina might well put one of its historical markers at that dime store in Greensboro: here is where, after more than three centuries, the white and the Negro South were finally met.

---

[1] W. J. Cash, The Mind of the South. N. Y., 1941. W. A. Percy, Lanterns on the Levee. N. Y., 1941; the quotation is from p. 286 of the 1959 reprinting. James Agee, Let Us Now Praise Famous Men. N. Y., 1960; the book was written in the late 1930's. Lillian Smith, Killers of the Dream. N. Y., 1949 (revised edition 1961).

In result, they have learned to know each other better. One Negro civil rights leader remarked to me that southern racial relations in the past had been like an unfaithful marriage, which could be preserved only by the two parties not speaking the truth to each other. Negro Southerners are today speaking the truth to their white neighbors. If white Southerners can learn to live with this truth, the marriage can be continued, and may even become a fruitful one. Still today, no Southerners are more bred to the essence of the region's distinctive history, manners, and outlook than are the Negroes. If Dixie is not yet ready for its epitaph, it will be only because Negroes, freed of illegitimacy, may give it new life.

For earlier white Southerners, even for those as late as Cash, a decision about racial policies was not socially crucial. Men had different opinions and beliefs, but these were like other personal preferences, or even convictions, that were tolerable by the folk. Southern racial relations were like Hinduism, able to absorb and contain many changes and interests and ideas. The advent of industrialization, the steady immigration of non-Southerners, the growth of learning, the magnification of cities—all had come and had modified the old patterns and would surely in time overthrow them. But the endurance—what a Southerner might call the "cussedness"—of the old ways was remarkable.

But now this changes, and I know no better way to illustrate the change at its profoundest — though infrequently perceived — level than by contrasting Faulkner with that present-day southern writer who, in surface aspects, is most like him. The genius of Faulkner was such that he was able to suffuse his characters in life and individuality even though, in fact, they were little more than marionette's. They were held in the hand of God, but that hand which controlled them kept them in ceaseless confrontation with their home, i.e., with southern history, and in it they defined themselves. Miss Flannery O'Connor's characters are also marionettes and also in the grasp of God. They are Southerners too, but this is only an artist's detail. They could be anyone, they are caught directly, as simple individuals, in the human predicament, and they act diretcly to meet it, not, as Faulkner's characters always did, as Southerners, but as mere people.

Fundamentally, this is where Southerners find themselves today, forced to act directly without validating their acts against their history, much of which is sinking fast underneath them. Another southern writer, Allen Tate, in his novel The Fathers, depicts the deep psychological hurt felt by conservative Virginians in 1860-1861 when pressures from the cotton states and from the North were mysteriously pushing Virginia into severance from the government in Washington, of which over the years since 1787 they had come to feel as proprietors. Something similar is happening today over the South, as men see institutions which they had thought were theirs (e.g., the churches, the town school), relationships which they had thought secure (e.g., mistress and maid), begin to take on new shape and purpose.

All this has meant that, for today's white Southerner, an explicit rationalizing of his views about race has become the most urgent of his intellectual and spiritual tasks, and that he has had to achieve it on his own, or with new referents. He has had to attune himself, harmoniously or discordantly, to the authoritative words and practices of institutions from outside his region, such as the federal government, national church bodies, national media, and even-in fact-Wall Street. Perhaps still a man living in a remote Black Belt county untouched as yet by racial controversy may be as unengaged as nearly all of us were but a few years past. But I suspect that no white man living now in a Danville or an Albany or a Birmingham can support himself either by mores or by Faulknerian brooding. For the strong segregationist, the mores will appear too mild when the protest comes; for nearly all men, the brooding will seem irrelevant.

It is astonishing how often a southern white liberal can date his acceptance of racial equality at some specific episode in his life, much as did the ex-Communists in The God That Failed[2] tend to date their break with Communism with a decisive, illuminating event. It is even more notable that almost every liberal can (and often does) recount the history of his changing attitudes. This sort of keen self-awareness occurs only with those life problems deeply and genuinely felt. Nevertheless, in accepting racial equality, the southern liberal does not typically reject the South. In Turgenev's

---

[2] Edited by R. H. S. Crossman, N. Y., 1949.

Fathers and Sons, when Bazarov's tolerance of an older conservative is asked—"you must take into account his upbringing as well as the times in which he lived the best part of his life"—, Barzarov exclaims: "His upbringing: Every man should educate himself. . . . As to the times, why should I depend upon them: Much better they should depend on me. No, brother, all that is just loose thinking, there's nothing solid behind it!" To a Southerner, if to no one else, this is questionable doctrine, because inadequate tolerance; and rightly or wrongly, the key word of southern liberalism has been "tolerance."

Southern liberalism deserves more serious study than it has had. What, in this context, is worth remarking is the long sustained refusal of southern liberals to repudiate the South, and this is one side of the tolerance which they have elevated above all other social virtues. Few liberals have acted out their beliefs. They do not try to enter their children in Negro schools, do not usually refuse to eat in segregated restaurants or worship in segregated churches, do not spontaneously and widely mingle socially with their Negro peers. This is not well described as either hypocrisy or timidity. It is something a good bit more basic. The general conformity of the liberal to social practices which he opposes is a mark of his dogged refusal to alienate himself from southern society. He has counted himself a Southerner, with an obligation to respect the community and, so far as possible, to keep it whole. He often will, in fact, contend (and not only from polemical motives) that he—and not the defenders of segregation—represents the core of southern traditions, and he will sometimes appeal to other values acknowledged to be "southern," such as "courage" or "manners" or "individuality, against the less venerable practice of segregation. The tenacity with which liberals hold to southern culture, while endeavoring to reform it, is a quality which cannot be measured, but it would seem at least as intense as the somewhat comparable spirit of the Benthamites and later Labourites in England; they too insisted on behaving as Englishmen as they went about changing the country.

On the whole, this attitude of respect toward the community is not alien to a great many of the Negro leaders. And on the whole, this shared attitude presents the only real possibility, for those of us who want one, of preserving the South as a cultural organism, and not merely as a cultivated, but mummified, memory, analogous to

New England. It is not a very strong possibility, though the relative poverty of the region may help along its chances: poverty is a strong folk-tie. I may be wrong and shortly proved so, but I see the white South today, outside the Black Belt but even there in some measure, as disposed, though often reluctantly, to accept more and more racial integration, but wanting also to keep the community much as it has been. I see Negro Southerners wanting equality desperately and angrily, but disposed to keep the community much as it has been, if they are admitted to it.

The South that Cash sought to track down was the white South, and, assuming that Cash found what he sought, it was unprepared for 1954. That South is still here. But because, being what it was and is, it stayed distant from the black South, called itself and itself only "the South," it has become an inert thing, a mere environment. Within this environment and against it, the southern leaders of today —the Negroes—act. It is the antithesis of motion against matter, and unless it can be cured there is not even a meager chance that the South will persevere. The white South is become an object, and only subjects can, even in a Faulknerian sense, endure.

II

Myrdal remarked that, "The intellectual energy spent on the Negro problem in America should, if concentrated in a single direction, have moved mountains."[3] In truth, almost the profoundest thing one can say about southern race relations is that it is an old problem, toughened and complicated and made wondrously intricate by age, which has confused its diagnosis, rendered uncertain its treatment, and obscures its prognosis. Ancient as it is, it has had changing definitions, and these have, in the past, been determined by the interests and policies of white people. As Myrdal put it,

> It is thus the white majority group that naturally determines the Negro's 'place.' All our attempts to reach scientific explanations of why the Negroes are what they are and why they live as they do have regularly led to determinants on the white side of the race line. In the practical and political struggles of effecting changes, the views and attitudes of the white Americans are likewise strategic. The Negro's entire life, and, consequently, also his opinions on the Negro problem, > are, in the main, to be considered as secondary reactions to more primary pressures from the side of the dominant white majority.[4]

[3] Gunnar Myrdal, et al., An American Dilemma, N. Y., 1944. p. 27.

This analysis was undeniably correct as an interpretation of the pre-1945 period; it is no longer so. Beginning about the close of World War II, the power to determine the Negro's "place" began to shade off from white control. Today, the Negro grip on the levers of social change is secure, and much more firm than the remnants of white direction.

The race relations policy of the southern white leadership from 1619 until Reconstruction, and from about 1890 until the 1940's, was governed by the objective, How to get the maximum satisfaction from the Negro population. The policy was pursued in economic, political, and social relationships, frequently with unsuccess. This fairly unanimously held single policy has, in the years since the 40's, been both losing adherents and singleness of application; the growth of Negro votes combined with pressures from Washington are forcing on our public life policies markedly more progressive than those which still dominate our churches and other more or less privately determined activities. Perhaps only in Mississippi today is there near unanimity about racial policy. But it is not the old policy of maximum satisfaction. Instead, it is, How to maintain white control of the institutions of society. At least, Negroes are not regarded as instruments and tools, but as antagonists. That, in itself, is a higher status.

If initiative has passed from the white majority to the Negro minority, the principal cause has been the success of Negroes in achieving a new and more stable self-knowledge. The dilemma—intellectual, emotional, political—of the Negro, especially the Negro male, has always been the problem of identity.[5] A man's valuation of himself is derived and sustained by his reading of other people's assessment of him, and at all times in a person's life there are some "other people" whom he regards as the most authoritative assessors. Because of history and color, Negroes for centuries got maddeningly confusing reports whenever they inquired of their society, "Who am I?"

---

[4] Myrdal, op. cit., p. li.

[5] There has been a lot of recent writing on this subject, mostly by non-southern interpreters. See the three books of essays by James Baldwin: Notes of a Native Son. Boston, 1955; Nobody Knows My Name. N. Y., 1961; The Fire Next Time. N. Y., 1963. Essays in the first book are of uneven quality and interest, but some of them and all of the two later books are superb and required reading for insight into the Negro revolt. For the latter reason only, so too is Louis Lomax, The Negro Revolt. N. Y., 1962. See also the excellent book by Harold I. Isaacs, The New World of Negro Americans. N. Y., 1963. Isaacs has an especially interesting essay in Encounter, August, 1963: "Blackness and Whiteness." One scientific inquiry is B. P. Karon, The Negro Personality.

With some notable variations, they adopted the social values and standards of the dominant white society. For generations, Negro Southerners had no sustained insight into white society beyond their own neighborhood, and they consequently shaped their self-portrait through the terms of local opinion. The past three or four decades have been a time, even for rural Negroes, of awareness of a larger universe of values and authoritative opinions, and increasingly they have tended to disregard local definitions in preference for more favorable nation-wide and world-wide judgments of their worth. But even in the old days, the answer to their question, "Who am I?", was far from clear. The Christianity they had been taught affirmed some things so surely that not even the utmost ingenuity of white pastoral apologists could altogether obscure them. The grand generalities of American democracy seeped into their consciousness. Their white neighbors behaved toward them with contradictory manners, producing what was (and, to a large extent, still is) surely one of the most weirdly implausible patterns of human relations ever observed. And always, Negroes were accompanied by a few stereotypes which sprang easily into the minds of white persons, even those a Negro might regard as friends, and displaced the actual Negro person they knew—or thought they knew.

The stereotypes were and are the damning judgments of white society on Negro identity. What is happening today is that Negroes are disowning the stereotypes, the white man's creations, are refusing any longer to acknowledge themselves to be what the white man said

N. Y., 1958; its findings and methods aroused some dispute. As a stranger to psychology I hesitate to cite writings in this field but from a dilletantish reading I might mention three pieces which were suggestive to me: Robert Coles, "Serpents and Doves: Non-Violent Youth in the South" (in Erik H. Erikson, ed., Youth: Change and Challenge. N. Y., 1963). Lewis W. Jones, "Negro Youth in the South" (in Eli Ginzberg, ed., The Nation's Children, Vol. 3, N. Y., 1960); D. C. Wilson and E. M. Lantz, "The Effect of Culture Change on the Negro in Virginia, as Indicated by a Study of State Hospital Admissions," American Journal of Psychiatry, July, 1957.

they were. White Southerners are confronted with a blunt demand from the Negro that he be accepted on his terms: and this is the crucial problem of race relations today. For years, whites have decreed that Negroes must think of themselves as the whites thought of them. Negroes now are insisting that the white majority revise its opinion of them in accord with their own, newly fashioned self-conception.

Negroes found that in the same European-American culture which had relegated them to inferiority, white supremacy had become a strand of that culture which "tends to wear away protective strata, to break down its own defenses, to disperse the garrisons of its entrenchment." The words are Schumpeter's,[6] and taken from a context which, though not analogous, is suggestive. Some other words of his are exactly applicable to contemporary Negro agitation: "Secular improvement that is taken for granted and coupled with individual insecurity that is acutely resented is of course the best recipe for breeding social unrest."[7] A concatenation of economic and educational factors, supported haphazardly and minimally by politics, produced the secular improvement; another array of political, emotional, and social circumstances caused and kept strong the individual insecurity. The social unrest is a direct outcome of the combination, and is given its specific form and intensity through the re-infusion of ideas and values into American culture by a constantly growing number of educated Negroes who have derived these ideas and values from the cultural property of western white peoples, the terms of whose inheritance require them to admit nonwhites with whom they come into regular communication to equal shares in the property.

III

Lincoln began his Gettysburg Address by recalling that "fourscore and seven years ago" there had been brought forth "a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." If, in this centennial year of the Emancipation Proclamation, of Gettysburg and Vicksburg, we look back four score and seven years, we confront a less happy and auspicious event: 1876, the year when Hayes defeated Tilden, or Tilden defeated Hayes, whichever it was. Hayes became President through the Compromise of 1877, and for the next 70 years or so the white South was left alone by the nation in its policies and in its relationships toward Negro citizens.

---

[6] A. Schumpeter, Capitalism, Socialism, and Democracy, 3rd edition. N. Y., 1950, p. 143. Schumpeter's brilliant analysis (pp. 121-164) around the theme of capitalism's "crumbling walls" illuminates racial unrest throughout the world. As capitalism sponsored its own intellectual and emotional opposition, so European-American culture has sown the denials of its own privileges.

[7] Ibid., p. 145.

The Civil War had freed the slaves and preserved the union. It had, besides, put on two Amendments to the Constitution—the 14th and 15th—which in the years after 1876 would be, as to Negroes, well nigh meaningless: four generations of Negro and white Southerners would come and go and live without acknowledging that Negroes could and should vote, or that laws should give them equal protection. The Civil War, moreover, left all these people in a ravished region, where men would get used to desperate poverty. The War and its aftermath made the South feel its spiritual and cultural separation from the rest of the nation more keenly even than before.

Then, earlier, and now, we have defined "the South" by its differences from the rest.

Southerners and non-Southerners have been, in fact, much alike. White men everywhere ruled, and Negroes were subservient, and treated as inferiors. Society belonged—and still largely does—to the white man. Protestants ruled, dominating the economic and cultural and political life of the nation. Society placed a high sentimental value on farm or small-town culture and people, and long after the bulk of our population moved into cities the rural districts kept political power. And North and South, East and West, we all believed that any man who worked hard could get ahead.

These common qualities of American life, native both to the South and the non-South, are dissolving. And the present crisis in the South, which became acute in 1954, does not result from traditional differences from the nation; it results instead from the dissolution of things which have in the past united us.

Six landmark dates conveniently illustrate the changes. Although they affect the whole nation they are a special challenge to the South. Somebody—Arthur Koestler, I think—once spoke of the Jews as humanity's exposed nerve, feeling first and most sharply all the troubles and pains. Sometimes one feels that the South is America's exposed nerve, and that issues which are national in scope are most intense, or at least most apparent, here.

There was 1944, and Smith v. Allwright, and the ensuing erosion of the white monopoly of power to make political decisions. There was 1954, and Brown v. Topeka, which in its deeper import signified that the civic institutions of American society could no longer be operated as if they were the property of one race, and which, in its application since the New Rochelle case,[8] has upset the North as well as the South. There was 1960, and confirmation that non-Protestants have a share in the power to make the country's highest decisions. There was 1962, and Baker v. Carr, and the consequent remarkably fast crumbling of the rural fortress of political power.

There was 1940, the last year before our entry into World War II, the last year of a peace-time economy. After seven years of prodigious effort by the New Deal, unemployment in the United States was 14.6% of the working force. We went into the war and unemployment virtually ceased. We came out of the war and unemployment stayed low while the country was busily engaged in converting to peace-time needs. We had a recession in 1948, and the next year unemployment shot up to 5.9%. We went into the Korean fighting, and again unemployment declined. We had another recession in 1954, and unemployment was up again. We had yet another recession in 1958, and this time unemployment really rose—to 6.8% of the working force of this country. After each recession, recovery was slower. There has been little improvement since, and President Kennedy in March 1963, called unemployment our "number 1 economic problem," and reported that it was still about 6%; the rate for August 1963 was a seasonal 5.5%. Many economists believe that the government's way of computing unemployment seriously minimizes its extent.[9]

Neither the policies of Republican nor Democratic administrations have, as yet, been able to lick this problem. Unemployment is high despite the boosting of the economy with huge expenditures for armaments and for space exploration; without those would we be back to the 14.6% unemployed of 1940?

---

[8] Taylor v. New Rochelle, 195 F. Supp. 231, 294 F. 2d. 36 (1961).

[9] See chapter 4 of the Manpower Report of the President and a Report on Manpower Requirements, Resources, Utilization, and Training, U. S. Department of Labor, 1963. The statistics above are from Statistical Abstract of the United States, 1962, p. 215, except for the 1963 ones, which come from news reports.

Here we meet a tragic irony; as has happened in the past Negroes seem to be the victims not only of discrimination, but of impersonal history. After the first World War the country severely restricted the flow of immigrants from abroad. Up to then, American industry had grown by drawing on a boundless labor supply of European immigrants. With immigration drastically cut, industry met its need for new labor by drawing from the farms of America, including those of the South. Beyond this last large supply of white manpower, waited in economic succession the Negro. The tragic irony is that when his turn is come, the job market is declining. This is occurring in manufacturing and mining, chiefly, and these are fields which have been a gateway for new entrants into the free competition for economic advancement. No one seriously can continue to believe that America is for everyone now a land of opportunity where any man, unaided, can get ahead by dint of his own hard work. Some five to seven per cent or more of those people who want to work, find that there are no jobs, even though there is general prosperity in the country, and for the Negro the unemployment rate is about double that for whites.[10]

And, finally, there was 1947, when Mr. Truman appointed the President's Committee on Civil Rights, and later espoused its recommendations, even at the cost of a party split at the Democratic convention of 1948. No political act since the Compromise of 1877 has so profoundly influenced race relations; in a sense, it was the repeal of 1877. Among the consequences were (a) a shift of emphasis from Negro "uplift"—essentially a paternalistic approach—to civil rights, i.e., the achievement of more than nominal citizenship; (b) a renewal of the fateful rupture between South and non-South; and (c) the ensuing complications for economic and social reform by statute, so that, since 1948, law-making for domestic problems has fallen into desuetude.[11]

---

[10] See Charles E. Silberman, "The Businessman and the Negro," Fortune, September, 1963.

[11] The ability of southern Congressmen to act through concepts of the national interest, so long as they felt presently secure in race relations, made pos-

These six landmarks suggest, if I am not mistaken, that we shall have much more democracy in the United States. The price of that will be the ending of certain old ways and traditions. Groups who have led and controlled the country from its earliest days will have to accept a lessening of their influence. And if the South had trouble joining the old union—which, like it, was white, Protestant, and rural in its outlook and leadership—can it join this new union? The South was separated from the basically similar non-South of yesterday by a sharp enough cleavage; the new division would be a gulf.

To put it differently, the policies which Mississippi represents would not merely perpetuate North-South differences. The longer these policies are pursued, the greater becomes the alienation of Mississippi and the Black Belt generally from the American consensus. Just by standing pat, residents of these places will become strangers in their own land, because the nation as a whole is moving farther and farther from them.

IV

Over the years, Negro Southerners tried various methods of effecting change. They occasionally resorted to violence in the slave revolts of the ante-bellum period. During Reconstruction they sought the power of office. In Populist days they experimented—to their sorrow—with an electoral alliance with small farmers and mechanics. They tried the Booker T. Washington regimen of self-improvement, in the expectation that they would be accepted when their uplift was completed. They left the South, for the uncertain and often unrewarding North and West.

Finally—and with really their only success—they converted the political issue of equality into the Constitutional issue of equal rights. The "direct-action" movement has been a new force, and one of tremendous effect. It has produced results and it has unleashed and directed energies. Yet even its appeal has been to values thought to be in or implied by the Constitution, and the safety and success of the movement have been protected throughout by the procedural guarantees of the Constitution. The reform of the Negro question sible the reforms of Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. For an interesting case study, see I. A. Newby, "States' Rights and Southern Congressmen During World War I," Phylon, Spring 1963.

---

in the United States has been a striking instance of the effect of a constitution upon the life and events of a society. The constitution, created by the society, becomes a force which changes society.[12]

The Constitution becomes a revolutionary instrument, for Negroes, being political outcasts, have had to combat the government, and not merely the government of the day. Nowhere yet in the old Confederacy does a politically representative body debate and settle on policy, except in two circumstances: to shore up the legal defences of segregation; or to circumscribe as closely as possible the scope of a judicial decree when defiance is considered inexpedient. Nowhere has a deliberative body accepted the premise that social change is necessary or inevitable, and that action to guide that change is its responsibility.

None has done so, because southern political theory has been incapacitating. Although formal democracy has been in short supply in the South, the tone and practice of southern politics has been democratic almost to an extreme—among the whites. Probably no where else in the country have there been closer personal relationships between voters and representatives, at all levels of government. But a democracy which is short on formal controls and efficient methods of obtaining popular consensus, and which puts a high value on informal means of effecting accountability, is going to be a conservative society. And when not all the inhabitants are constituents, the conservatism will be, in fact, defensiveness. Thus both the democratic and the conservative spirits of the South combined to defend the folk, its monopoly of power and its cultural integrity. There is nothing to deliberate about, and to do so is betrayal. There is no relief from this paralysis except through an enlarged Negro vote, and a few municipalities of the South are already tasting this emancipation.

We may well ask again whether, when a conflict runs deep, democratic politics and its institutions can solve it. If the southern conflict is being resolved, it is because it was possible to appeal it to a constitution, whose first principle is that it itself is enforceable law. There is still some life left in the old maxim that democracy requires agreement on fundamentals, although it may more accurately be this: that democratic politics cannot be counted on to bridge deep chasms of opinions and values unless undergirded by a fundamental authority (e.g., a self-enforcing constitution) which is independent of parties and legislatures.

---

[12] cf. the interesting analysis by Gerhard Loewenberg, "The British Constitution and the Structure of the Labour Party," American Political Science Review, September, 1958.

Impersonal causes—the boll weevil, farm technology and chemicals, faster-paced industrialization, communications media, and still others—re-arranged the roots of southern life after World War I. But human action did not, until the last decade.

Now Southerners are not only being moved by their environment, but are revising themselves and their manners of living with and getting along with each other. Events and change are pell-mell, and unpredictable. Whatever we say, we must say most tentatively. I note, therefore, that the case has often, even usually, been that white Southerners can and do change their racial mores when inescapably confronted by a community-wracking situation to which they must respond in one way or another. But I note further that this has not been invariably so; witness, e.g., Albany (Ga.). Those places, however, which have refused to yield to the Negro demands, modest as they often have been in the South, have been able to do so only through techniques of suppression which tear at precepts of the Constitution. They have maltreated the right of assembly, denigrated the supremacy of federal law, whored the police powers of the states.

The Negro demands have been within the Constitution. The Negro methods have been within the liberties and privileges of the Constitution; only occasionally have they violated the rules of the game. Southern communities have been tested, therefore, not only in their customs and morality, but in their understanding of and affection for the Constitution. Those many which have accommodated, and have stepped into the currents of change, have shown to us that the feelings men have do not necessarily determine their actions or reactions; that when confronted with practical choices, men discover themselves more accurately than they had before. I have to leave to others the scientific analysis,[13] but I believe we can see the mind of the white South changing through the action of the black South and the accommodating reaction of the white South, and that a new South is shaping itself through history-making, and not through history-consciousness.

---

[13] Which is, of course, being supplied. The point of view I have here expressed is consistent with that of Allport and his supporters. See, e.g., Thomas F. Pettigrew, "Personality and Sociocultural Factors in Intergroup Attitudes: a Cross-National Comparison," Conflict Resolution, March 1958; and "Regional Success breeds hard problems, and it seems to me that the Negro movement is courting two very serious ones. There is disquieting evidence that a great many Negroes, naturally imbued with the excitement and the power of having led America's first sustained experiment in government by the street, are oblivious to the fact that their guiding rule and their indispensable ally has been the Constitution. Secondly, the availability of the political process has been so long withheld from them that they may not learn soon to value it.

I see little or no prospect for rational answers to America's or the South's racial woes unless the channels of politics are opened up for their resolution, by Congress and by the states. This means a steady transference of issues from court to legislature. The Constitution has done its work, and the way is cleared to reach decisions through consensus. For the long run, Baker v. Carr may be the avenue through which Negroes, under the leadership and representation of new, political types, may bring racial issues finally into political settlement. In the nature of things, the South's practical alternative to government by the street may include the price of a half dozen or more Adam Clayton Powells, but that is democracy's age-old exaction.

In the meantime, we can note that any government has but three possible postures toward the question of racial equality: in favor, opposed, or neutral. The political theory of the South has for more than three centuries been grounded on the principle of white supremacy. It has been the cardinal doctrine. If, then, southern state governments were to follow the lead already given by some municipalities, and move from opposition to neutrality, this would be a truly historic change.

Differences in Anti-Negro Prejudice," Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology, July 1959, From the former: "The success of the movement in the South does not depend—this hypothesis would contend—on changing the deeply ingrained orientations of prejudice-prone personalities; rather, it rests on the effectiveness with which racial integration now going on in the South can restructure the mores to which so many culturally intolerant southerners conform."

In fact, the border states have already moved beyond neutrality,[14] and have begun incorporating into their public policy commitments favoring equality. And of even greater historic moment, some of the old Confederacy states have begun the withdrawal of state power from the defense of segregation and inequality.

This seems to me the sine qua non for the preservation of the South, as a community of persons acknowledging a common heritage. There must be an end to governmental hostility toward Negro advance, and acceptance of a political theory which sees government as neutral toward the competing aspirations of all economic and social elements. Such theory has been a commonplace in American national politics since at least Theodore Roosevelt. It will have to be established in the South and will have to be founded on the conditional truth that neutrality of the governmental power has to exist if there is to be order. Hobbes may not have said the last word in political philosophy, but he did say the first: power should be independent of the competition of private interests, and, because of its recognition of the equal potential threat of every person to public order, must acknowledge the equality of rights.

V

Let us say only that as long as a large number of people sense an identity among themselves, the South as a specific, self-conscious culture will endure. As was said at the start of this essay, who is there who is not tired of struggles for more definitive answers?[15] Perhaps I could venture that a Southerner is a person who feels, as against all other people, that he is the more moral, using that word in its broadest meaning of being spiritually fit for life as it is. But this would say no more than that the Southerner shares a widespread conceit. Perhaps it would mean more if I said that the Southerner is someone who can recognize that he has lost every argument about good and evil he has ever had—and he's had a lot

---

[14] Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, and West Virginia have all legislated some minimal standards and mediation procedures for racial relations, and the governor of Kentucky has gone further with a sweeping executive order.

[15] I have been privileged to read a draft of the forthcoming book of James McBride Dabbs, whose The Southern Heritage (N. Y., 1958) is the likeliest candidate of recent years to stand beside the classic interpretations of Cash and Lillian Smith. Dabbs has not tired of the search.

—yet he still feels himself somehow more moral, again in the broadest meaning.

But it is safer to come back to the simple test of identification. The deepest wisdom in human relations is to accept a man as whatever he names himself. Ten years from now, or 20, will people living between the Potomac and the Rio Grande still identify themselves with each other, still feel worthwhileness in calling themselves Southerners?

I don't know. But I think we all do know some things that bear on the answer.

We know, most importantly, that politics is the way a people conducts its affairs, and that politics not only serves a group of people pragmatically but gives it unity, helps make of it a community. When the political processes cannot handle the affairs of the people, and when to settle grievances men have to act outside those processes, the polity is always hurt, sometimes to the point of death. Both Negroes and intense segregationists, including segregationist officials, have felt that they must take their causes outside the normal processes of politics.

The South is a little place. It cannot act greatly, and its survival means hardly anything to the world. Except that, as I have tried to argue, the only way it can, in fact, survive is to do something that would matter to the world, and that is to become a rarity, a bi-racial community at peace with itself. It can do so, I think, only by integrating Negroes into its political processes.

Southern politics is just now, as usual, full of curious things. Mississippi is experimenting with a Soviet style government, with the Citizens Council paralleling the state machine in emulation of a successful Communist Party. Southern governors have become the de facto executive directors of the state chambers of commerce, and spend their time competing with each other as supplicants for new plants. We have talked of state socialism and state capitalism, but what do we call governments whose chief affair it is to entice and propitiate business? And all over the South, battle lines draw close to each other, portentous of an epic contest which may never occur in any explicit, decisive engagement, but which will, one way or another, reach to the innermost desires of the South.

For southern conservatism is blending now with that of the nation at large in spirited defense against the dissolution of the old unities of American life. Southern liberalism has, and this is its good luck, no choice but to accept the Negro's cause as its own. The pains of the warfare between those who are rebelling against 300 years of history and those who want to move more rapidly into the future, will probably be most acutely felt in the South; it is the South's ancient calling to deflect pain and guilt from the rest of the nation.

Negroes have hymned the American dream, but only its battle-cries. There are other parts of it and, if we read our history honestly, the Birchites and lesser breeds within the law are responsive to them. A "nice" home; people like ourselves; Jesus, and "our" church; the righteousness of property. America is on its way, not to a confrontation with its dream, but to a study of it, a mining of its content. The cutting edge of one drill is the radical right, and the other is the Negroes. It is in the South that each will probably cut most deeply. We are likely to learn a lot about ourselves, these next few years, as the drills cut away.

LIVING ABROAD DOMESTICALLY

Seminar In Social Relations

5-9-64

David J. Ackerman

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The following paper was begun as a term paper for Dr. Eric Lincoln's Seminar In Social Relations. As it progessed, it became obvious to me that the paper was taking on the form of a diary of a sort--written in reflection. The work bears the peculiar distinction of having no documentation, other than the writers memory, and no purpose other than to serve as a catharsis for the writers pent-up emotions. For this I am apologetic to the unfortunate reader.

To my roommate, Ernest R. McKinney I am indebted for reading the manuscript and putting up with my eccentricities. To Dr. C. Eric Lincoln, I am indebted for the opportunity to pursue this paper and verbal and moral support from his quarter. (Gastronomically I am similarly indebted to him and his wife) Lastly, to the students, faculty and administrative personnel of Morehouse College I am eternally grateful, for without their cooperation, conscious and unwitting, this paper would not have been possible.

Atlanta, Georgia 9 May, 1964 D.J.A.

CONTENTS

Section Page

I. MOREHOUSE COLLEGE..............................1.

Observations and Impressions of a Negro College

II. ATLANTA, GEORGIA.............................8.

The City of a Hundred Hills; The People I've Known

III. SOME SUGGESTIONS (For the Negro College)......20.

IV. AN AFTERTHOUGHT..............................23.

Section One--Morehouse College

> The function of the university is not simply to teach bread-winning, or to furnish teachers for the public schools or to be the centre of polite society; it is, above all, to be the organ of that fine adjustment between real life and the growing knowledge of life, an adjustment which forms the secret of civilization.
>
> W.E. Burghardt DuBois

While at Cornell, I naively hoped that Morehouse might be a college where students pursue knowledge for their own enjoyment, and where such pursuit might reward the student with self-discovery and personal identity. Reflecting four months later. I am both apalled and disappointed with my findings. Having seen first hand the blight of Southern high school education, the disappointing values of the "black bourgeoisie" and the almost complete lack of democracy on this Negro college campus, I recognize that Morehouse can only be a second-class reflection of the larger society's values.

Bluntly, I've found Morehouse to be an educational joke. Writing in 1903, W.E.B. DuBois criticized the founders who "scattered haphazard through the South some dozen poorly equipped high schools and called them universities." The statement is painfully appropriate today, for the level of teaching, with rare exceptions, does little to correct the stunted backgrounds of entering and departing seniors. Morehouse, like so many other American degree-bestowing institutions, does little more than raise the country boy's level of sophistication regarding liquor, women and the ways to succeed---without even trying.

Although great lip service is paid to studying, I have seen relatively little done by Morehouse students. The classwork and exams are on a very elementary level. Perhaps the greatest difference between this and other college work I've done is the amount of reading required. Not since high school have I had a course using one textbook. Reading material for courses at Cornell was from many sources and in much greater quantity. A further distinction is that the class meetings at Cornell presented something different from the reading material. At Morehouse, my classes are a rehashing of the book, if that.

The teachers with whom I have had contact are very complacent. A better term might be lethargic, for they receive little challenge from the students; allowing them to fall behind on the latest developments in their fields.

Several of these teachers have become very pedantic in their positions, acting as though their degrees permit them the use of excess verbiage as a replacement for hard facts in the classroom. Not only are they tolerated, but they seem to be the idols of many awe-struck Morehouse students. I am most critical of these people. They have come to Morehouse well prepared in their respective fields and allowed the mediocrity to deaden their intellectual vigor.

It must be very hard for a teacher to remain calm under trying circumstances often found in the Morehouse classroom. When students don't bother to prepare for class; when students cannot employ proper English usage; when handwriting is illegible and when the self-admitted goal of most students is "just to get through", I suppose complacency is a valid defense for the professor.

While Cornell students, for the most part, had disappointing values, I find the Morehouse counterpart to have still poorer ones. The Negro, in a dor-or-die attempt to become an accepted American, seems to be out-middle-classing the white middle-class. Robert C. Weaver in describing his background said: "...and believe me, there is nothing more middle-class than a middle class minority."

Sensing that the materialism and affluence so long valued in America is now within his reach, the black American (atleast those with whom I've spent the last four months) thrashes madly for it without concern for the more aesthetic but less tangible aspects of arrival. "...Man, don't tell me 'bout no movements; all I want is a fine crib,'chine and a good woman, and I'll be happy," is too often the attitude of the Morehouse student. Worse, Morehouse gladly complies with it. The College demands little more than chapel attendance, reasonable class attendance and a scrubbed face and dark suit come Sunday. In return it offers the magic sheep-skin that serves as a passport to the black world of business, medicine and law.

Morehouse students will go to unbelievable lengths to get that diploma. Cheating is not an isolated incident but the norm in most classrooms. One can hardly comprehend the degree to which cheating is employed until he spends some time at Morehouse. In reference to the proposed honor system, one student remarked: "teachers will have the honor, students will have the system!"

While at Morehouse, I lived in Mays Hall; the modern, newly-completed dormitory named for President Benjamin Mays. The rooms bear a striking resemblance to those in University Halls at Cornell, but they are a bit larger and cheerier. The dorm is the pride of Morehouse, housing seniors, juniors--and exchange students.. As a sophmore I feel a bit uncomfortable being housed in the dorm because of my "guest status". I think that such treatment tends to compound the already dificult task of just being another student at Morehouse.

There is no student floor counselor in the dorm as was the case at Cornell. Consequently, the maintenance of quiet hours and general conduct regulation is left to the students themselves. I sometimes wonder how students study, for the library closes at ten o'clock and the dorm is so public that study seems out of the question. This seems inconsistent with a philosophy prevalent on the campus. It involves not trusting the students to do things on their own. Every morning the rooms are inspected by the house mother; a perfect example of the many phases of coercion of one form or another used to achieve a desired result--in this case clean floors, empty wastebaskets, and dustless windowsills. It seems odd to me that the college is more concerned with neat rooms than a conducive study atmosphere.

My relations with the students in Mays Hall have been most cordial. I feel that I have gone as far as time and cultural differences allow in making genuine friendships in the student body. I feel that I am treated as one of the fellows by those people in the dorm.. Excepting the absence of a floor counselor, the dorm is very similar to that at Cornell. This the case, I see no need to prolong its discussion.

Students living on campus are required (strongly requested) to take their meals in the dining hall locatedon the first floor of Mays Hall. The food is typical of most institutional meal plans. One might criticize the lack of variety and mediocre quality. One could praise its low cost to the student. I prefer to eat and forget it altogether. A personal religious conviction will not allow me to eat pork. The college and those responsible for food preparation have gone out of their way to respect this conviction. Whenever pork in any form was served in the dining hall, some other kind of meat was prepared especially for me. I am most appreciative for this courtesy.

To this point, my comments have been rather negative. Were this all I saw at Morehouse, I would consider my semester a disappointing experience. Fortunately, it has been more rewarding, due in large measure to the Canterbury House, a combination student union, chapel, all-purpose office and gathering place for some of the more challenging minds on the campus. Father Warren Scott, Episcopal Chaplain for the A.U. Center is the force behind the 'house. He is a very impressive man--settled and apparently calm on the outside, but with a dynamic nature that occasionally bubbles through the deceptive outer shell. More than the house (itself), Father Scott, the coffee--always available, and the special events that make Canterbury House an oasis on the Morehouse desert, are the people who make it their second home. They have something to offer, but what makes them special is that they want to share it with those who appreciate their fellowship. I want very much to convey the good that I've found in the midst of so much bad; the warmth within the cold; the living among the dead.

South of the North, yet north of the South, lies the City of a Hundred Hills, peering out from the shadows of the past into the promise of the future.
W.E. Burghardt DuBois

To the City of a Hundred Hills I apologize, for I have not seen all or nearly all of what you have to offer. I have not consciously limited myself to "this side of town", but the isolation that I've felt in Atlanta has sublty kept me close to the campus. Atlanta is far from an open city. There are many places that Negroes cannot go. There are other places that we* can go, but don't, because to exercise the right is so uncomfortable that such effort is not worth the time. I am a foreigner to the culture, the tastes and values of native Atlantans. I am a Jewish, New York yankee, and with these three strikes against me the fact that I am a "nigger-lover" does not enhance my popularity with the local citizenry.

The Jewish community in Atlanta has been of great interest to me. Before coming South, my conception of Jews was heavily influenced by those in my home town. Friends and relatives did little to break the stereotypes. What I used to think was a "Jewish accent" might more properly be called a New York accent, for Jews in Atlanta sound, atleast to my untrained ear, like Southerners--previously meaning Christian to me.

---

*"we"meaning that while I am not physically a Negro, I feel a greater identity with them than most southern white people.

An aunt of mine has a cousin who married a native Atlantan. In private, my mother advised me that "he is a 'real southerner', David, and he just doesn't think or feel the way you do about race relations." My mother, I must add, never knew his feelings, but based her opinion on his accent and mannerisms. I digress. One night the woman called and invited me to their home for supper. Recalling my mother's words, I hesitatingly accepted the invitation. They lived in a garden-type apartment development on West Peachtree Street.She seemed to be enjoying all the comforts of the genteel southern life; a maid-cook, Cadillac theater dates, luncheon dates, hairdresser dates, et. al. Her husband, who soon disproved my initial misgivings about the evening, was a manufacturer of ladies clothing.

While the meal was a reprieve from the bland institutional food at the college, and the visit itself was rewarding, the most significant thing that happened was a remark made by the husband. He asked me what I thought of the Jews in Atlanta. Not waiting for an answer he continued, saying "they live pretty good down here--nice big homes over there," pointing abstractly out the window, "they're almost like white people!" A most enlightening comment coming from a southern Jew.

The Reform Synagogue in Atlanta is called, appropriately enough, The Temple. Rabbi Jacob Rothschild, its Rabbi, comes from Cincinnatti. Not an imposing figure in person, nevertheless his voice on the telephone and his name in converstaion command a great amount of respect. The Temple was bombed in 1958. Rabbi Rothschild told me that the bombing was a shock to the members of the Synagogue and for a time, atleast, they were aroused to action on the questions of desegregation and minority rights. White supremists have great potential for antisemitism. Incidents such as the bombing drive the point home to Jews. As the Rabbi said, however, they soon forgot it and now it is history. It is something that happened--not something that could happen. The Jews in Atlanta are, as typified by this congregation, secure in their feelings. They may be theoretically aware of the danger in complacency; they may see vague similarity between anti-semitism and white supremacy; between Albany, Georgia and Auschwitz, but it takes a bombing or something similar to shake them out of false security. One day it may be too late for the Jews of Atlanta--or the Jews of Atlantas.

The University Super Market (SELF SERVICE!) is located on Fair Street, three blocks from the campus. It is owned, operated, clerked, managed, etc., by Marty Starch and his wife. Marty is one of a breed of Jewish grocery store owners in the Negro ghettos. For many of the nation's Negroes, Marty Starch is the only Jew they've ever met. He is particularly interesting because he has assimilated many of the southern cliches into his speech. Like the clothing manufacturer, mentioned on the previous page, he speaks "southern-English." Coming from France and previously Russia, this is the only form of English that he's been exposed to. I never fail to be amused when, leaving the store, he calls "come again, heah?" in a mongrelized broken English infused with the culture of the fine old South! Knowing I am Jewish, and also that I speak "Yiddish", he goes out of his way to see me on the street. Marty is an expatriate from New York, even though he has never been there. Talking with me brings him a little closer to "home."

A Morehouse student recently returned from a year in France and Switzerland, has given me some startling insight into Negro-Jewish relations. The fellow is not a bigot. I would consider him one of the most enlightened, well informed students I have met at Morehouse. He told me that before going to Europe (implying a before and after distinction in his life) he was developing a definite dislike for Jews. In Atlanta he saw much of what appears to be exploitation by Jewish merchants and managers of Negro labor; paying sub-standard wages, bringing in new men (nearly always relatives) instead of promoting Negroes,and the like. The Jews are the tangible representation of Negro exploiters, and he now sees the problem in greater perspective, but he feels that Negroes today, growing increasingly discontent, may vent their bitterness on the nearest white man...in many cases Jews. To me, a fr~~e~~ightening but but conceivable thought.

I arrived in Atlanta on January 25, 1964 at 11:30 p.m. At this time Atlanta was the scene of violent racial demonstrations. Not knowing anyone in Atlanta, assuming the Morehouse dorms closed for the semester break and wanting to appear as inconspicuous as possible, it was my plan to spend the night at the YMCA. As I walked from the plane into the airport, a student about my age who had been on the plane approached me and asked if I'd share a cab with him into town. Hearing from the cab driver of the demonstrations going on in Atlanta, and seeing I was a stranger he offered me his home for the night. With hesitation I accepted and we proceeded to his house. The Raefords were quite wealthy. The father was an established opthamologist, and his education included three years at the University of Pennsylvania medical school. Their home was tasteful and everyone seemed unbelievably well-mannered. The great shock came when the mother, up to this time the quietest of women, referred to the niggers and the "riots" downtown. Noticing my interest in his wife's comment, Dr. Raeford began to explain his views on integration. He talked in terms of Negroes needing more responsibility, making reference to Winston Churchill's History of the English Speaking Peoples, which he felt every "Negra ought ta read" because they simply aren't ready for full acceptance of western culture yet. I was amazed that people of such breeding could hold such ignorant prejudices, to me, inconsistent with their sophistication and education.

My second stopping place in Atlanta was much more to my liking. A couple at Cornell knew Vincent Harding, director of Mennonite House. To "get away" from my first hosts, I hastily telephoned Vincent and explained my plight. He told me to come right over. Not knowing what or who to expect, I was mildly surprised to find that Reverend Harding was Negro. Somehow in my limited contact with the Mennonite Church, I got the impression that it was very conservative, and never thought that it might support an integrated "house" in Atlanta, or that it had Negro members. Like Father Scott, one can easily gather a deceiving first impression about Vincent Harding. Non-violence is an abused term today. To many it is a "tactic," something to be used on people. Reverend Harding, however, not only understands the broader, more challenging implications of non-violence, he lives it. He is a man of perfect, often disarming honesty, and a leader of tremendous courage as well as being a minister in the Mennonite Church. He commands the respect of friends and foes alike. There is a "religiosity" that he seems to radiate. He has greatly affected me, turning my cynicism into faith and channeling me to constructive activity.

The people living at Mennonite House have varied backgrounds, occupations and interests. What brings them together is a common conviction in the goodness of man and concern for future of man. The ideals are lofty but the people very practical--living what they believe.

Another "house" with which I have come in contact in Atlanta is the Quaker House. A weekly Friends meeting is held there but its extracurricular activities include lectures, luncheons and gatherings where peace, civil rights, student and adult groups exchange ideas. The words on the House stationery speak of its aims: "A House of Living Dialogue."

An experience that allowed me unusual familiarity with the South was a job I held for five weeks at Sears Roebuck in the West End shopping area. The men I worked with ranged from a former whiskey-runner to a J. Alfred Prufrock type bureaucrat who spent every spare moment assuring me that Tobacco Road did not typify the South. He may not have thought so, but the poor farmers (black and white) who came into the store didn't lend any support to his argument. I think that about two thirds of the non-urban people who came in on Saturday had liquor on their breath. In plain English they were dirty, seemingly quite poor, illiterate and just as one pictures southern rural farmers.

The Courts, the jim crow laws and the police forces of the South have come under a great deal of fire in the past few years. The South is not a homogeneous area. This is important to understand. Atlanta is different from Albany, Greenwood from Nashville and Birmingham is a class of its own with regard to economic factors, social factors and political factors. I can only speak for what I have seen in Atlanta and what I have heard about the others. The cities are said to be more just than the rural areas. If this is true, than I believe the South (as a generalized area) has a long,long way to go before it comes up to national standards for law;its equal enforcement. Judge Pye, elected by the "liberal people of Atlanta",now has a national reputation for his treatment of Negroes and whites who come before him in violation of Atlanta's anti-tresspass law. I have seen policemen in Atlanta turn their back when a mob attacked a peaceful picket line protesting segregation. Persons have received terrible abuses while jailed for civil rights activity. The citizens refuse to listen to the pleas of the disadvantaged Negro people. This is Atlanta, the city "too busy to hate." One must see it to believe that the seemingly sensational reports coming out of the South are just a statement of fact.

My discussion of Atlanta would be incomplete without some mention of what E. Franklin Frazier called The Black Bourgeoisie. Atlanta, Georgia is considered by many to be the geographical center of Negro wealth and influence. If it could be further defined, Collier Heights, more commonly known as the Gold Coast, would be the origin of such a center. The homes, the cars but most especially the values of the Black Bourgeoisie are as the name implies--smug and respectable. There is an air of stiff formality that seems to pervade all Negro life above the level of the lower socio-economic classes. It is stiffling to free expression. Stiff formality is reflected in dress, and mannerisms of the Negro middle and upper classes but most particularly in the places where these people gather. In the classroom, in Paschals Restaurant, in the churches and even in the homes. A teacher who I have come to respect very much at Morehouse told me in a candid moment that a "Negro man might turn to his wife ine middle of the night and ask 'what d'you think, Mrs Smith?' and she reply 'O.K., Dr. Smith!" I only relate the comment of this Ph. D, and cannot speak from personal experience.

In an earlier section I mentioned a philosophy of not trusting students to do anything on their own. This is closely related to values of the black middle class. Almost no responsibility is left to the students in governing the college. The student government association is powerless when it comes to central issues. The advisory committee, the pride of many who are deluded by thoughts of student power, is in reality a rubber stamp for the dean and the president of the college. At Spelman College, there exists such a maze of rules and regulations that genuine student responsibility is impossible. The Negro College (generalizing from what I've seen) does things for the students. It selects the courses, inspects the rooms, provides a "religious hour", sets the moral standards i.e., when,where, until what hour, with whom, and what the students (especially the girls) may or may not do.

Some questions have arisen out of my experience at Morehouse and in Atlanta. Has the Negro been brainwashed by American, middle-class values? Does the fact that there is a lack of trust placed in the students imply an insecurity in the value system held by the administration? Will the "third American revolution" serve to desegregate public facilities only, or does it have broader social, economic and political overtones? Phrasing this last question differently, is there a difference between the SNCC approach (appealing to class) and the more traditional and acceptable approach of the SCLC and NAACP factions which appeal to race? I do not intend to answer these questions in this paper. In the future they will serve as food for thought. The reader might do well to ponder them himself.

Section Three--Some suggestions

This paper to this point has been a statement of observations and experiences that I have had in the past four months. Its only purpose was to put in writing some impressions that I have gathered and to account for the things that have influenced my thought while in Atlanta.

In the following pages I intend to make some suggestions based on my experiences that might aid those who will try to alter or redirect the course of Morehouse College life.

The Atlanta University Center, the six colleges in the area, must become more unified. I realize that personal traditions are hard to sacrifice, but for the sake of one adequate instead of six inadequate colleges this step must be taken. Three positive steps should be taken in this direction. One good infirmary could be set up to treat students from the member colleges with no sacrifice of college identity. As it now stands Morehouse has an inadequate infirmary as does Spelman, Clark has none (does anyone get sick at Clark) and Morris Brown and Atlanta University also have none (to my knowledge). At any rate there is no excuse for the present situation. A common student union building would go a long way to unify these campuses. It would also offer a place to which students and faculty members might retire for relaxation between and after class. In it could be housed a coffee shop, a movie theatre, a small browsing library, perhaps an art room, a craft shop, a game room (pool tables, ping pong tables etc.) and an information desk or board. The student union would provide a much healthier atmosphere for A.U.C. students than the Yates and Milton Drug Store. A college is measured by its library. On this count the Atlanta Univ. Center falls pitifully short. It will be vital to the existence of the Center's member colleges to build and maintain one good, up-to-date library.

Morehouse College should do several things to improve itself. Some of the better, more-advanced students are held back in the classroom because of the sub-normal backgrounds of many other students. I suggest that Morehouse begin an honors program, or something similar, to allow some of these better students to do more challenging work in their fields of interest. It is unfair to them that they must be a part of a remedial program. Mandatory chapel attendance must be abolished. So too, mandatory room inspection. If students are to develop into responsible adults they must be given some self-determination in their private lives. If chapel is worthwhile people will attend. If not, better that it's not attended. I think that the lack of trust shown in the students by the administration is unwarranted. Left to themselves, students would probably take more pride in their actions.

More non-Morehouse people should be hired to teach here. This would bring in new blood-new ideas, a heterogeneous faculty, in many instances better prepared persons. A conscious attempt should be made to recruit white students. This could be done through the aid of foundation grants, recruiting a better faculty & luring white students (at first from the North) with a prestigious faculty and financial aid. If we strive for an integrated society it is hypocritical to maintain a segregated school.

Section Four--An Afterthought

Having proof-read the manuscript, I wish to add some comments. Should this be read by any persons other than Dr. Lincoln, I want it known that because my words are negative they are not meant as an insult to the College, the City or any persons mentioned specifically. I wrote what I felt. For this I do not apologize. Should anyone be offended by my words, I wish to express my disappointment for they were offered in love--love of Morehouse, despite all, love of Atlanta and love of people. Forgive me.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

Why couldn't you use this chapter, deleting 1st graph p. 18? This confirms my good opinion of Eric Lincoln, he being obviously a big influence on this kid.

patw

The Atlanta Journal

APR 3 1961

PREROGATIVE OF PREJUDICE

Rights of an Individual in a Free Society May Even Extend to Hate

By MARGARET LONG

AS EVER when freedom-loving and literate people of good will start to resist the tyranny of the prejudiced they slip into over-zealous attitudes which would curb the liberties of all of us.

HATE-BEMUSED

There are a good many signs of this tendency lately and suggestions that it's time the liberals, moderates or people-respecting radicals — or whatever we want to call ourselves — would do well to stop and consider the rights of the dangerous, fear-driven and hate-bemused extremists on the other side. We should recall our cherished principles of free thought, speech and assembly and be sure to accord these liberties to the most frightening of our opponents.

Here now we've got Atlanta school officials saying it's "unwise" for segregation extremists to meet and harangue us in public school auditoriums and withdrawing a permit for them to speak at an East Atlanta high school, what with the inflamations of Mr. Roy Harris and Mr. Lester Maddox as guest speakers.

Well, these peculiar patriots are certainly very alarming people with a hot gift for evoking the meanest fears and hostilities among our less stable and literate citizens. I, too, wish they'd hush and leave us alone to an intelligent consideration of our change. But if other "civic groups" and community protagonists of this and that idea have free access to school auditoriums, dare we deny these irresponsibles the same facilities to air their ideas? I don't think we can, just because we are disgusted with them and afraid of them.

We should let them meet in our, and their, accessible halls, shout their horrendous ideas, and then dispute them, in full faith in the integrity of more informed and less savage opinions on race rights and community weal. Then we should rely on our police to control the belligerent excitement of simple-minded people they may incite to violence. We must let them say what they feel, but keep their hands off the rest of us.

Similarly, I think the Atlanta Jewish War Veterans Post 112 is in understandable error in asking Governor Vandiver to legislate against distribution of "hate literature" on state property. I've seen my share of this horrifying literature against Jews, Negroes, Catholics and other varieties of civilized people.

I have felt that perpetrators of such fierce and child like lies and such irrational and fearful opinion ought to be flung in the Buford Rock Quarry, which is, as far as I can tell, about the same as hell. The sick and inflaming emotion of these tracts is repellent to any reasonable or peaceable Southerner or American.

FIREBRANDS

But even these psychotic, or cynical, firebrands have their rights, which are quite as inviolable as anybody's. We share rights to pass out printed opinions to passers-by, no matter how idiotic or dangerous these opinions are. We even have a right to tell lies to hate our neighbors for color and religion, and our neighbors have protection to some extent in libel and slander laws. We must, however, cope with this precarious clash of ideas and free expression of any opinion.

The trouble is, we haven't had sufficient dispute and clash of ideas in the South. When the fascist fanatics get going with their alarms and obscenities, decent people subside, hoping it will blow over, too fearful of the forces of hatred and too timid about the strength of truth and generosity.

We've still got a lot of arguments to finish, a lot of lies to deny and a lot of democracy to affirm. And we won't do this shutting anybody up. If we do try to shut them up, and deny their rights, they can silence us, too — as they have for too many years already.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

6411 Regent Street
Oakland 18, California

June 7, 1962

Dearest Va,

This'll be my last letter for a bit, because we are leaving next weekend and I'm beginning to get that suspended in mid air feeling, nothing done or ready.

Oh dear, the article. I see it met with little favor even with friends like Maggie. All I can say about "lambchop" is that I have definitely heard Marge call Binky lamb-chop, sincewhen I've been calling Benjy Veal-Cutlet. Anyway I think lamb chops are better than lamb pie, or lamb stew for that matter. I'm glad you liked Maggie, I adore her. I do hope she is not genuinely cross about the article.

Only trouble is, Mrs. Ham was furious about my book--that is, she said she thought it awfully good but was livid at being left out of it. She wrote me a long letter when it was published, the whole first part very complimentary; then she sort of went into the 3rd person, like this: "This writer feels, however, extremely hurt..." and so on, about not being in.

The odd part about Debo is that she more and more gathers the Lit. set round her (although she still reads pointing with her finger) and of course they love it, writers and artists etc. always adore being invited to the Dukeries because of the extreme comfort. Also, I must say she has been awfully nice about getting reservations etc for us, and a car.

I'll send you Philip's book from London. Perhaps you will like it. He wrote to say he hopes I won't mind if he tends to cut down the curtains at Inch Kenneth before leaving.

I could do so much more with your play if you'd send it after I get back--because you know how NY is, one mad dash from point to point;

in touch with Dave

LOUISE THOMAS, Director of Public Relations
HELEN CROSBY, Assistant
WOLCOTT GIBBS, JR., Publicity Manager
JANET GLENNON, Radio & TV
BETSY BEILENSON, Children's Books

Doubleday

DOUBLEDAY & COMPANY, INC., 575 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK 22, N. Y. / MUrray Hill 8-5300

News for Immediate Release About:

100th ANNIVERSARY OF FREEDOM

On January 1, 1963 - the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation by Abraham Lincoln - Doubleday will publish FOREVER FREE by Dorothy Sterling. For young readers up to the age of 16, this is the story of slavery in the United States - from the first African slave traders up to the people and events behind the signing of the Proclamation.

Dorothy Sterling, who has written books for children of all ages, has won several prizes for her books. CAPTAIN OF THE PLANTER, a biography of Robert Smalls - a slave who became a congressman, received the Nancy Bloch Award in 1958 for the children's book which best fosters intercultural understanding. In 1959, MARY JANE, a fictional account of school integration, also won the Nancy Bloch Award as well as The Community-Woodward School's award for promotion of "one-worldness" among children and an honorable mention from The Child Study Association of America.

The linecuts in FOREVER FREE are by Ernest Crichlow, who has illustrated several of Mrs. Sterling's books, including MARY JANE and FREEDOM TRAIN.

JR-RC, JRC-2, JRC-3, NJ, I December, 1962

Fight for Freedom

By Langston Hughes, 224 pp. W. W. Norton, New York. 1962. $4.50.

There has long been a need for a dramatic and readable history of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. In Fight For Freedom we have such a history by one of the leading poets and writers of his generation, Langston Hughes.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

DOUBLEDAY
575 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22 NEW YORK
MURRAY HILL 8-5300

LOUISE THOMAS, Director of Public Relations–HELEN CROSBY, Assistant–DOUGLAS ANDREWS, Publicity Manager
JANET GLENNON, Radio and TV–LINDA COHEN, Publicity Projects Manager–BETSY BEILENSON, Children's Books

NEWS FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ABOUT:
"The Witching Lands" by Hugh B. Cave/Publication date: May 10

NEW TALES OF THE WEST INDIES

"Too small to lure the conventional tourist, the Etoile attracts guests of more lasting interest," writes the owner of the West Indian hotel that serves as mise en scène for most of the stories in Hugh B. Cave's new book, "The Witching Lands." This collection of fourteen tales of love, religion and politics Caribbean style will be published by Doubleday on May 10.

Like an exotic Winesburg, Ohio, the mythical St. Joseph City, where the Etoile is situated, is notable for the interplay of lives within its borders and environs. Foreign service officials, men from outlying plantations, doctors and nurses from back-country hospitals, mining and construction engineers, scientists, teachers, artists and writers converge on the Etoile.

Mr. Cave has spent many years in the Caribbean, wearing out four jeeps in his explorations of the area. He has written several books, including a recent novel about voodoo and Christianity, "The Cross on the Drum," and a non-fiction book about Jamaica, "Four Paths to Paradise." His "Haiti: Highroad to Adventure," is recognized as a superlative description of that country.

A longtime resident of Warwick, Rhode Island, Mr. Cave also spends a lot of time on a coffee plantation in Jamaica. He is married and has two sons.

April, 1963
TRV, I, LQ, NSpec, N-1

DOUBLEDAY
575 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22 NEW YORK
MURRAY HILL 8-5300

LOUISE THOMAS, Director of Public Relations–HELEN CROSBY, Assistant–DOUGLAS ANDREWS, Publicity Manager
JANET GLENNON, Radio and TV–LINDA COHEN, Publicity Projects Manager–BETSY BEILENSON, Children's Books

NEWS FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ABOUT:
"If We Must Die," by Junius Edwards / Publication date: August 2, 1963

A PIN-POINTED LIFE

In the office of the Attorney General of the United States there is a map studded with pins marking the counties in which the Justice Department has taken action to protect Negro voting rights.

"If We Must Die," a first novel by Junius Edwards, to be published by Doubleday on August 2, tells one of the thousands of stories behind each of those little pins. It is the story of one man, Will Harris: Negro, veteran, would-be voter. "If We Must Die" minutely examines this man's inner reactions to certain facts of his life. He cannot get a cold drink where or when he wishes; cannot escape the heat, for the nearby shade is not for his use; does not dare to help a person in distress, because a difference in the color of his skin makes his every move suspect.

"If We Must Die" covers one day in Will Harris' life--the day he attempts to register to vote. Junius Edwards tells, simply and vividly, of the attitudes, emotions and results that accompany this act, but draws no conclusions. That is left to the reader. But perhaps in this exciting and powerful novel is the key to the current unrest in one segment of our community:

> "If we must die, let it not be like hogs > Hunted and penned in an inglorious spot..."
>
> --Claude McKay

YM Student council Wilkes

July, 1963
N-Spec, N-1, I

Students Y.M.C.A
41 Exchange Place
10 o'clock
A.M.

Moroccans

THE MANTINBAND MEGILLAH 1963

On November 13th I addressed the annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee in Dallas. Rabbi Levi Olan introduced me. After a complimentary reference to the speaker as a "Rabbi's Rabbi", he went on to say: "My colleague left Mississippi to escape the tensions of that area. He thought he could enjoy peace and serenity in Texas. Let him wait. He'll find out!" Prophetic words. Within ten days the shocking news of the President's assassination in Dallas stunned the world. We wept with grief and shame, for we were great admirers of John Kennedy, unlike so many others in this part of the country. Here is a Profile in Courage. Boruch dayan emes.

The year 1963 was quite eventful. Primarily there was the decision to pull up stakes in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, after eleven good years, and make Longview, Texas our new home. A major consideration was the proximity to our children (Carol, Abe and their four in Shreveport, Frank and Toni in Dallas, Bill and Edith and their five in San Antonio). Irony of ironies. Bill promptly moved to St. Louis; he is with the U. S. Air Force as cartographer. And now the Dallas-ites contemplate departing to points north.... And the heartache over Clyde Kennard and Medgar Evers, both good friends, not to mention the recent gubernatorial election and its portents, will remain.

There were the usual trips and talks far from home. Outstanding were two visits to Chicago, the first in January with the National Conference on Religion and Race, and again in November at the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Ours was a notable experience at the White House with President Kennedy in June, also on the race situation. Some 200 clergymen had been invited from all over the country. We had an intimate session with the President for almost two hours. Other addresses and committee meetings took us to Fort Wayne, Atlanta, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. There was occasional writing also, -- some collaboration with Harry Golden, and "The Diary of a Southern Rabbi" which appeared in American Judaism.

Highlight. I escorted our grandsons Guss and Martin, 17 and 16, on a 5000-mile motor trip through Virginia (Williamsburg to Natural Bridge), Washington, New York, Boston, the rolling Berkshires and the White and Green Mountains, and then Canada -- Quebec, Montreal, Toronto-returning via Niagara, Gettysburg and Cherokee in the Smokies. We included a Broadway play, a Big League ball game, and all the sights of Great Gotham. En route I officiated at an interdenominational religious service as we sped along the highway at 70 miles per hour. During this period, Anna and Carol deposited the younger children at Camp Belle Aire and trekked around the country together, footloose and fancy free. Thank God, our health for the most part is good, and our zest for life abundant. Texas is a world in itself. There is always the unexpected.

In early May, Anna's only brother passed away in Florida. His was a good and useful life. We hope to visit the Kest family in Florida this winter.

The longer we live, the more we prize our friendships. Mail comes regularly from our family in Israel, Hungary and England. Old army associations bridge the distance to Alaska and Honolulu. We cherish our ties on the home front no less ...... May the New Year bring abundant happiness to you all. Keep in touch. Sholom u'vrocho.

Charles and Anna Mantinband

MM ✓
MG
RHA

3/7/64

SEABOARD WORLD'S FAIR TOURS

ESCORTED TOURS

LEAVE

JUNE 21ST or
SEPTEMBER 20TH

$130.00

Includes:
Round-trip coach fare Atlanta to New York including reserved seat.
Four nights at Edison Hotel (twin-bedded room).
Two admissions to World's Fair.
All-day tour of New York.
Orchestra Seat to Hit Musical.
Breakfast in diner going and dinner returning.
Baggage handling - Transfers between Penn Station and hotel - Bell Boy tips.

RESERVATIONS LIMITED - "Hurry" "Hurry" Hurry"

INDIVIDUAL PACKAGE TOURS

Plan your own tour - go any date - stay as long as you like. You pick the tour that contains the features that interest you most, you select the hotel in your price range, tell us when you want to go and when you want to return. We do the rest. You'll receive complete information that will enable you to see the most, do the most, all on your own!

If you have a group who would like to take in the Fair, give us an opportunity to plan your low-cost group tour for you.

Make your trip on the SILVER COMET - coaches and pullmans.

....

Mr. R. A. Perkin, General Passenger Agent
Seaboard Air Line Railroad Company
67 Luckie Street, NW
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Telephones: JA 2-5018
JA 1-2179

Check One

☐ I desire to join your escorted tour leaving: ______________________
(June 21st or September 20th)

☐ I am interested in an individual package tour.

☐ I have a group interested in private group tour.

Please send me additional information.

____
(name)
____
(address)
____

DOUBLEDAY

575 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK 22 NEW YORK
MURRAY HILL 8-5300

LOUISE THOMAS, Director of Public Relations—HELEN CROSBY, Assistant—DOUGLAS ANDREWS, Publicity Manager
JANET GLENNON, Radio and TV—LINDA COHEN, Publicity Projects Manager—BETSY BEILENSON, Children's Books

NEWS FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ABOUT:
"Dancers on the Shore," by William Melvin Kelley Publication date: March 20, 1964

DANCERS ON THE SHORE

William Melvin Kelley was born in 1937, and by 1962, with the publication of "A Different Drummer," he had become a highly acclaimed novelist. His gifts for imaginative, meaningful story-telling, praised by reviewers both here and in England, are again displayed in "Dancers on the Shore."

Mr. Kelley presents 16 short stories in this volume, to be published by Doubleday on March 20. While each story has its own theme, there is an over-all theme that binds them together: the nature of individual integrity and the stresses of prejudice and frustration that batter it. Whether telling of a secret dream fulfilled with unexpected consequences in "Cry for Me" or describing an absurd but necessary game that binds two men together in "Not Exactly Lena Horne," Mr. Kelley's concern is with the universal in human beings, whether black or white.

William Melvin Kelley was born in New York City. After graduating from Fieldston School, he went to Harvard, planning to study law. His first creative writing course, however, changed all that. While at Harvard, he studied under Archibald MacLeish and John Hawkes, and won the Dana Reed Prize for 1960.

In 1962, Mr. Kelley was awarded fellowships to the New York Writers' Conference and the Breadloaf Conference; in 1963 he won the Richard and Hinda Rosenthal Foundation Award for his first novel, "A Different Drummer." He has recently received fellowship grants from the John Hay Whitney Foundation and Stanford University. His stories have been published in the Harvard Advocate, Dial, Accent, The Saturday Evening Post, Cavalier, Mademoiselle and The Negro Digest.

MORE

Mr. Kelley is married and makes his home in New York City--although he and his wife are currently residing in Rome, where he is working on his second novel.

February, 1964
N-Spec, N-1, I, LQ

PRESS RELEASE

NAACP LEGAL DEFENSE AND EDUCATIONAL FUND
10 COLUMBUS CIRCLE • NEW YORK, N. Y. 10019 • JUdson 6-8397

DR. ALLAN KNIGHT CHALMERS
President

JACK GREENBERG
Director-Counsel

CONSTANCE BAKER MOTLEY
Associate Counsel

SUPREME COURT HEARS ARGUMENT ON HOW FAST IS "DELIBERATE SPEED?"

Question Held Key to Speed of School Integration

March 30, 1964

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The question of how fast is "deliberate speed"--an issue that has constantly been before the nation's courts since 1954, will gain its first U.S. Supreme Court hearing Monday, March 30th.

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund is specifically challenging the grade-a-year school integration plan of the Atlanta, Ga. Board of Education on behalf of Negro children there.

The case is slated to be argued by Constance Baker Motley, associate counsel of the Fund.

Atlanta initiated its "integration" plan in response to court order when 10 Negro high school seniors were admitted to previously all-white high schools in September of 1961.

Negro parents, acting through Legal Defense Fund attorneys, sued to end the city's dual school system in January of 1958 in the U.S. District Court of the Northern District of Georgia.

The parents had been asking local officials for integration of schools since 1956.

"Atlanta's public schools, a decade (1964) after the first Brown decision (1954) have 145 out of a total of 56,000 Negro students attending public schools with 58,000 white students.

"In short," the Legal Defense Fund attorneys maintain, "tokenism has now been superimposed upon a so-called separate but equal" school system.

The Atlanta plan, which starts at the 12th grade and works downward, integrated 10 Negroes in 1961; 40 in 1962 and 119 in 1963.

One hundred twenty nine Negro students applied for transfer between May 1st and 15th, 1961, the dates open for application under the Atlanta plan.

The school board used 17 criteria to judge Negro students. Among them were:

*"psychological qualification of the pupil for the type of teaching and associations involved"

*"morals, conduct, health and personal standards of the pupil"

*"possibility of breaches of the peace or ill will, or economic retaliation within the community"

*"reason for wanting to transfer"

*"achievement in relation to the norm for the school to which they were requesting transfer."

This plan went into effect in September of 1961, although the district court issued its order in July of 1959. The court ordered Atlanta to submit its plan for desegregation by December, 1959.

(more)

The district court said that this was "contingent upon enactment of state statutes permitting such a plan to be put into operation."

Georgia had laws providing for closing or withholding state funds from racially mixed schools.

The city of Atlanta waited until December 1, 1959--the final day provided by the court--to submit its integration plan.

School Board spokesmen cited numerous administrative problems before submitting their pupil assignment plan with its 17 criteria.

Eleven days later, Legal Defense Fund attorneys filed objections to the plan, arguing that:

*it did not end the dual school system

*Negro students would be assigned on the basis of race

*the burden of transfer was based solely on Negro children

*the school board had not demonstrated the need for a 12 year period in which to accomplish integration.

*the plan did not provide for assignment of school administrative personnel without regard to race.

The district court rejected these objections.

Meanwhile, the Georgia legislature adjourned without repealing its anti-school integration laws, thereby blocking enactment of the plan.

Legal Defense Fund attorneys argue that "it is painfully apparent that the plan calls for a war of attrition, in which only the hardiest will be able to bear the burden of a contest with state power."

Moreover, the plan "not only depends upon enmeshing each child in an administrative net, but depends as well upon clothing the city of Atlanta--an admitted wrongdoer--with practically unreviewable discretion over the quality and extent of its own reformation."

The Defense Fund attorneys, who represented Negro Americans in 30 cases presented to the Supreme Court last year, cited the positions of the Courts of Appeal on this issue:

They "have shown great impatience with the all-too-deliberate sloth of the 12 year plans. Four circuits--the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth--have now invalidated 'grade-a-year' plans," the attorneys assert.

Although Negroes constitute 45 per cent of Atlanta's total school population, they have been alloted only 33 per cent of the school buildings and 40 per cent of the teachers and principals.

They suffer "serious overcrowding and higher pupil-teacher ratios," the Defense Fund attorneys report.

Mrs. Motley was joined by Jack Greenberg, director-counsel from the Fund's New York City headquarters; E.E. Moore and Donald Hollowell, of Atlanta. Attorneys A.T. Walden, Norman Amaker and J. LeVonne Chambers, were of counsel.

- 30 -

OIL, CHEMICAL & ATOMIC
AFL-CIO
Union New
OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF OIL, CHEMICAL AND ATOMIC WORKERS INTL. UNION
VOL. 20, NO. 2 A

NEW SOUTH
FORSYTH ST., N.W.
ATLANTA 3, GA.
XCH 4-67

Injuries Up in Oil Industry

On the job injuries in the petroleum industry have been increasing both in number and in severity in recent years.

This testimony was voiced at a public hearing on proposed revision of Walsh-Healey Safety and Health Standards in Washington March 25 by Fred J. Kolojay of the OCAW Research Department.

Citing records kept by the National Safety Council, Kolojay testified that the 1962 injury frequency rate was 8.2 percent higher than the previous year and 17.4 percent higher than the all-industry average. He added that 1962 injuries reached a severity of 790 on a scale of measurement set up by National Safety Council, an increase of 4.2 percent in severity over the previous year, and 13.8 percent higher than the all-industry average.

"Part of this recent uptrend in the injury rate for the petroleum industry is due to excessive employe cutbacks that have been recently taking place in the industry," Koljay testified. "Let me illustrate: between 1959 and 1962, the number of employes in the industry decreased by 21.1 percent, the injury frequency rate increased by 3.4 percent and the severity rate by 7.5 percent. In the refining segment of the industry, between the years 1959 and 1962, the number of employes decreased by 24.7 percent, the injury frequency rate increased by 10.3 percent and the severity rate by 16.2 percent."

1,000 Men With $1
equals
One Man With $1,000

That's the whole theory of organized labor's campaign to collect a voluntary contribution of $1 from each union member for COPE — the Committee on Political Education. By combining our modest resources, we can support candidates for public offices who are friendly to working people. Otherwise, candidates have to turn to the big-money boys, who often are not friendly to working people.

75% Ratify Program

Union V Brookl Mobil

OCAW has won bargaining rights in the Socony Mobil oil refinery in Brooklyn, N. Y., which employes 284 men in the hourly-rated unit.

Intl. Rep. Lyman Covert was in charge of the organizing project, assisted by Intl. Rep. Ray L. Clark. The vote, in an NLRB election, was 153 for OCAW and 104 for an independent union.

Now OCAW represents all Mobil refineries in the United States, except one — that being a plant in Paulsboro, N.J., having an independent union. OCAW represents Mobil refineries in Torrance, Calif.; Beaumont, Tex.; Casper, Wyo.; Ferndale, Wash.; East St. Louis, Ill:; Augusta, Kan.; East Chicago, Ind.; Trenton, Mich.; and Buffalo, N. Y. A number of marketing units also are under OCAW contract.

The Brooklyn plant is considered by many to be the oldest refinery in the United States. It was producing coal oil before the Drake discovery well of natural petroleum a hundred years ago. The independent union has been in the plant more than 20 years.

in the industry decreased by 21.1 percent, the injury frequency rate increased by 3.4 percent and the severity rate by 7.5 percent. In the refining segment of the industry, between the years 1959 and 1962, the number of employes decreased by 24.7 percent, the injury frequency rate increased by 10.3 percent and the severity rate by 16.2 percent."

Kolojay's testimony was in direct contradiction of recent statements by industry management. For example, the January 13, 1964 issue of Oil and Gas Journal asserted, "The regulations are not needed because the industry's safety record is evidence of its concern with safety and its ability to take protective steps."

In his testimony, the OCAW spokesman expressed support for proposed new Walsh-Healey safety standards providing for greater control over gases in portable cylinders, fire prevention, inspection of boilers and pressure vessels, control of toxic gases, vapors, fumes, dusts and mists.

turn to the big-money boys, who often are not friendly to working people.

The Brooklyn plant is considered by many to be the oldest refinery in the United States. It was producing coal oil before the Drake discovery well of natural petroleum a hundred years ago. The independent union has been in the plant more than 20 years.

Teamsters Fail in 2 Elections

OCAW members have rejected two recent raids by the Teamsters Union.

At Standard of Ohio Refinery No. 1 in Cleveland, O., where employes have been represented by OCAW for many years, a recent election resulted in 275 votes for OCAW and 50 for the Teamsters.

At Foods Plus, Inc., in Moonachie, N. J., an NLRB election last month showed 70 votes for OCAW, 15 for Teamsters and 3 for no union. Therefore, OCAW will continue to represent this group.

Two other major Teamster raids against OCAW are now pending. One is at the Cit-Con Refinery in Lake Charles, La., where OCAW represents 450 workers. Another is at the Mobil refinery in Trenton, Mich.

75% Ratify Program For Oil Bargaining

OCAW Pres. O. A. Knight has advised all affected groups that the 1964 bargaining program for the oil industry has been ratified by vote of more than 75 per cent of the bargaining units involved.

Sufficient favorable votes had been received on March 12 that the president could make this announcement. Subsequently, ratifying votes from additional groups increased the percentage.

This action by more than three-fourths of the oil groups means that the program, adopted by the National Bargaining Policy Committee for Oil in a meeting last January, now becomes mandatory on oil industry groups.

The program calls for the equivalent of a 5 per cent wage increase to be applied to improvements in hospital and medical plans, pensions, severance pay and vacations.

The program also requires negotiation of a clause providing for sixty day notice of layoffs, with cancellation of the no-strike clause permissible if during the sixty day period no agreement can be worked out to save the jobs. It calls for guaranteed continued employment, within certain limitations, for employes whose jobs are eliminated.

Negotiations for these improvements have begun at some points. Many contracts already were open for bargaining when the program was adopted and others are being opened daily.

It is expected that collective bargaining will move into high gear in the oil industry during the month of May, when a large number of OCAW units will open their contracts.

The only major development recently in oil negotiations came when American Oil offered the independent union representing its employes at Whiting, Ind., a straight 2 per cent wage increase. The independents rejected this, in three separate votes in a single meeting. As a result the incumbent president resigned and a new president was elected.

Norco Shell Group Aligns With OCAW

The independent union representing employes of Shell Oil and Shell Chemical at Norco, La., has entered into an affiliation agreement with OCAW.

This organization, Independent Oil and Chemical Workers Union of Lousisana, represents the 320 employes of the Shell refinery and the 180 workers in Shell Chemical at Norco (a suburb of New Orleans.)

One of the first steps of service to this group to be extended by OCAW will be the carrying out of an extensive steward's train-program, Intl. Rep. Robert Palmer reports.

There was close cooperation between this group and OCAW during the long and bitter Shell strike in 1962-63. OCAW extended assistance to the independent union at that time.

The affiliation of this group with OCAW brings all Shell refinery groups in the United States into OCAW ranks except one. The Wood River, Ill., installation is the one exception and it is organized by a group of craft unions affiliated with AFL-CIO.

OCAW represents workers in the Shell refineries in Long Beach and Martinez, Calif., Pasadena, Tex., and Anacortes, Wash. In Canada, OCAW also bargains for Shell employes at Vancouver, B.C.

Clark Oil Refinery Unit Joins OCAW

7-739 OCAW has added to its rolls a new local and a significant new bargaining unit in the Chicago area.

Members of an independent union representing Clark Oil Refining Co. at Blue Island, Ill. (on the south edge of Chicago) recently voted 182 to 46 to affiliate with OCAW.

This group has been issued Local Union Charter No. 7-739.

Probabilities are that an NLRB election will be necessary to nail down the bargaining rights in the plant, for the company thus far has not agreed to recognize voluntarily the affiliation. If so, such election would be held approximately in August, when the current contract in the plant expires. With the four-to-one expression of support for OCAW evident in the independent union vote, the NLRB election should be easy to win.

Intl. Rep. Tom Curdie has been handling this project.

Charter members of the new local are Russell Berkes, Andrew Botte, Charles Boza, Lorne W. Davis Jr., E. Leo Fellores, Donald C. Fischer, Guide Gasbarro, Robert C. Kislery, Robert Krell, Stanley Kwiatkowski, Walter C. Moore, Donald Mitchell, Loren W. Parkhill, Roy Powers, Richard Pryor, Jack Russell, Earl W. Sopko, James Webb, Clarence White, Carl Zeilstra.

Response Terrific On Mail Service

Last month we asked readers to advise us when the paper was delivered. The response was teriffic! More than 1,500 readers took the trouble to jot down delivery date, address an envelope, furnish a stamp, and mail to us the information wanted. Thanks very much!

Some areas are getting amazingly fast delivery of the paper, some very slow. A complete analysis will be turned over to the postoffice; we will print a report in the paper next month. Some misspelled names and wrong addresses were reported; we are correcting these. If your correction is not made on this issue, it will be on the next issue.

"Okay, Team! Get Those Tax Cut Dollars!"

We Still Need Program Of Public Works

If ever there was a time when Americans needed to cast aside old ideas and seek new ones, this is the time.

Truth changes. What was true in earlier years is not necessarily true today.

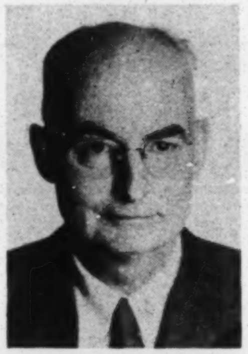
It used to be true that if business was booming, jobs were plentiful. That's not entirely true any more. Business has been very good for three years now, but there has been little change in the unemployment picture. It used to be that a booming business hired more people; today, in many cases, such a busi-

---

Says ROSCOE FLEMING:

More Serfdom Than 'Sport'

FEW PEOPLE recognize surviving chattel slavery when they see it. But suppose that going to work for your first oil company were your last free act—that for the rest of your working life you could be sold or traded by your "owner"; that you'd have to take any wage he offered, or leave your profession; and that if he made money by selling you, you couldn't get a penny of it?



FLEMING

This is the plight of today's professional baseball players, under an anti-trust exemption which Congress gave this cold-blooded business in 1922.

Now U.S. senators headed by Hart, (Mich.), Dodd, (Conn.), Long, (Mo.), Dirksen, (Ill.), Keating, (N.Y.), and Hruska, (Nebr.) have a bill to extend this serfdom to professional football, basketball, and ice hockey — all, they say, to firm up the highest ideals of sportsmanship.

Because signing that first contract will be their last free act, young ballplayers' guardians demand big bonuses. They get scolded for this by "sports writers" and broadcasters, who usually take their cue from the owners.

A stubborn player is called a "holdout," inferentially guilty of something like sedition. A player who gets too old is "unconditionally released" i.e., set free, portrayed as a favor to him. But if he signs again, he's hooked again.

OWNERS bully the players. Jim Brosnan, a fine relief pitcher, was fired because he sold books and articles about the game and refused to stop — basically, for being literate.

Jim Bouton, a leading American League pitcher, was told by the Yankees that he'd be "fined" $100 a day until he signed up. So he signed — for a pittance compared to the salaries of many less valuable players.

Rocky Colavito, a fine outfielder, was sold for big money to the Kansas City Athletics, who boasted how he'd help them — but who declared an immediate cash dividend by cutting his 1964 salary $6,500.

Even owners get a taste of serfdom. C. O. Finley, who owns Colavito, was threatened with suspension of his franchise — meaning virtual confiscation of a several-million-dollar property — unless he did as the league wished.

If the owners are arrogant, the players are meeker than Americans ought to be. They have something called an organization, but it would be blasphemy to call it a union. Nor has organized labor ever moved in — as it perhaps should.

Actually the owners bully city governments, due to the latters' belief that a major league team brings prestige to a city.

MANY New York schools are rat-infested and almost falling down. Yet the city has already spent $21 million on a stadium for the Mets, perpetual last-placers. Confronted with a demand for $4,500,000 more, the city's finance committee said in so many words that it would have preferred to spend the $4,500,000 on "needed school facilities," but that instead it has to be spent so the Mets can open on time. So the city's school children too, got short-changed in the name of "sport."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Auto Tires Keep Changing

AS AUTOMOBILE sales boom and the industry talks of a right angles, like a zebra's stripes, while the cords in a con-

Of Public Works

If ever there was a time when Americans needed to cast aside old ideas and seek new ones, this is the time.

Truth changes. What was true in earlier years is not necessarily true today.

It used to be true that if business was booming, jobs were plentiful. That's not entirely true any more. Business has been very good for three years now, but there has been little change in the unemployment picture. It used to be that a booming business hired more people; today, in many cases, such a business just turns up the switch on the automated equipment.

The recent tax cut was very pleasant to receive and no doubt it will mean that most of us will be spending a little more money for various goods on the markets. This is supposed to create jobs. To some extent it probably will do so. But it is highly doubtful if it will create enough jobs.

More action is needed. Organized labor has made several suggestions. One of the more pertinent suggestions made by labor — and long advocated by OCAW Pres. O. A. Knight — is an expanded public works program.

This would mean the spending of federal money to step up the construction of those things supplied to the people by public, rather than private agencies. Included would be reclamation projects, improved water and sewage systems, improved parks, new streets and highways, better schools and hospitals, and so on.

It is just as sensible for the federal government to run a deficit financing these things as it is to run a deficit by cutting taxes.

A fortunate aspect is that most of these public works jobs would provide work of a sort that is less subject to automation and mechanization than are most manufacturing projects, therefore they would create jobs. Of course construction equipment and processes are much improved over previous years, but it still takes manpower to construct a road, a dam or a building.

Further, public works are sorely needed in most areas — much more needed, perhaps, than the extra television set or the nicer car that we might buy from private industry with the money we are saving on taxes.

Oil, Chemical & Atomic Union News

Published monthly by Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Intl. Union, (AFL-CIO, CLC) 1840 California St., Denver 2, Colo.

Entered as second class matter at the post office in Denver, Colo., under the act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the act of August 4, 1947.

International Labor Press AFL-CIO Association

Ray Davidson, Editor

All members of Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Intl. Union are subscribers to UNION NEWS through the payment of their regular dues. Subscription rate to non-members is $2 per year. There are no subscription agency discounts.

Deadline for news and picures for the May issue will be Monday, April 20.

But if he signs again, he's hooked again.

OWNERS bully the players. Jim Brosnan, a fine relief pitcher, was fired because he sold ferred to spend the $[illegible] on "needed school facilities," but that instead it has to be spent so the Mets can open on time. So the city's school children too, got short-changed in the name of "sport."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Auto Tires Keep Changing

By SYLVIA PORTER

AS AUTOMOBILE sales boom and the industry talks of a 1964 sales year approaching or even reaching the magic 8 million mark, naturally tire sales are zooming along too. The estimate is that total shipments of tires of all types this year will be close to 147 million units, an all-time record and about 1.5 million more than 1963's sales.

Here, from J. W. Keener, President of the B. F. Goodrich Co., are provocative comments about this growing industry.

Q., Porter: When will the industry be able to announce an absolutely safe and trouble-free tire?

A., Keener: Never. Tires have been improved each year since the automobile era began, but a tire must withstand millions of flexings and thousands of impacts during its life. The severity of these flexings and impacts is at the discretion of the driver.

All that a tire can do to assure safety is to provide good control of the car in respect to steering, sidesway, skid resistance and air retention. Beyond this, the control of the car is in the hands of the driver and is based on his skill and judgment. When judgment is not compatible with skill, trouble is likely to result.

Overloading, high speeds, stretching a tire's life an extra thousand miles are up to the driver. The tire manufacturer just cannot deliver absolute safety without absolute cooperation from the user.

THESE are general rules applying to all tires, but the concept of maximum service varies greatly from one driver to another. A salesman carrying heavy sample cases and traveling at high speeds on turnipikes has an entirely different idea about tire service than a housewife who uses the family car for trips to the shopping center.

You should get specific recommendations on the best tire for your needs and for air pressure in relation to load, speed and mileage from a competent tire dealer who has the opportunity to judge exactly how you drive.

Q., Porter: Anything new in tires in the near future?

A., Keeler: The new tires that will be introduced on 1965 automobiles will be slightly different in shape than those familiar to us today. The 1965 tire will have an "Ivy League" look, with gently rounded shoulders replacing the conventional squared appearance of the tread.

It will be slightly smaller in diameter and slightly wider than those in use today and you'll be able to "feel" these design changes. The steering response and the stability will be improved and the tire will better withstand sustained high-speed driving. It also will wear slightly longer than today's tires.

Q., Porter: Anything more radical on the horizon?

A., Keeler: Yes, the radial tire for passenger cars. The engineering, construction and performance of this tire is entirely different from that of conventional tires. Its cords run at right angles, like a zebra's stripes, while the cords in a conventional tire run at about 36 degrees from the center line of the tire. This radial ply construction, used in combination with inextensible steel cord bands under the tread produces a tire which rolls as easily as a hoop.

Radial truck tires are now being made and marketed on a limited scale. Experience indicates that these deliver about half again as many miles as conventional highway truck tires and are so easy rolling that they cut fuel consumption by about 10 per cent.

Q., Porter: How often do you change tire designs?

A., Keeler: At periodic intervals, somewhat like new car model changes. Even in a high production run tires are more nearly perfect than laboratory-built tires were a few years ago. We'll never make a trouble-free tire, but those made just five years ago can't begin to come up to the standards of tires on today's market.

(Copyright 1963, The Hall Syndicate, Inc.)

Four More Locals 100% For COPE

Four more OCAW locals have contributed 100 per cent to COPE, Intl. Sec.-Treas. A. F. Grospiron announced March 20. They are:

Sunburst, Mont., Local 2-452.

Gainesville, Tex., Local 4-444.

Nashville, Tenn., Local 3-193.

McPherson, Kans., Ladies' Auxiliary 5-558A.

Niagara Falls Mathieson Strike Enters 10th Month

Bill Workman Assumes Post On Top Board

John L. Frank has resigned as District 3's representative on the International Executive Board and the former alternate board member, Bill Workman, has automatically advanced to replace him.

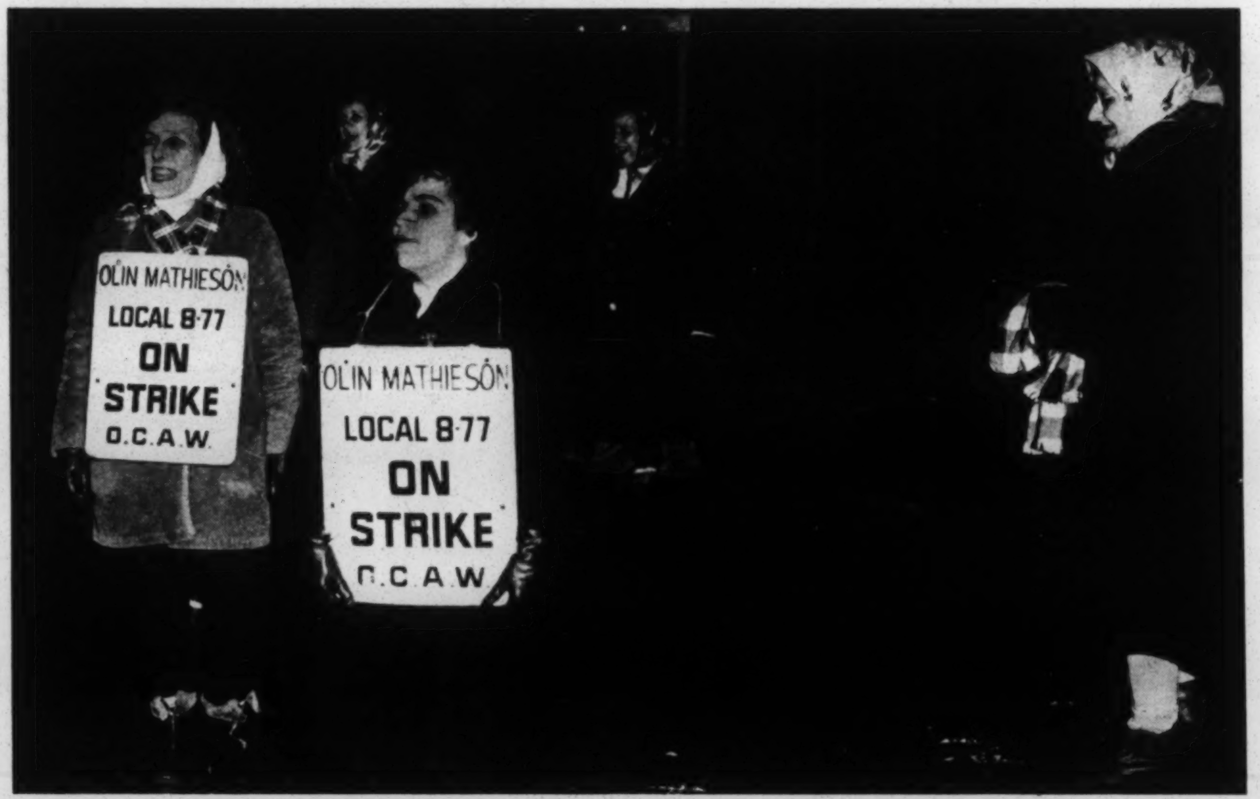
In a circular letter Feb. 28, Intl. Pres. O. A. Knight said, "It is with regret that I announce the resignation of John L. Frank . . . effective midnight on Saturday, February 29. Brother Frank advises that his resignation is due strictly to personal reasons."

Frank, from Clarksburg, W. Va., Local 3-276, served on the Board from the time of the OCAW merger March 1, 1955, until the convention of August, 1956, from old District 10. He was again elected to the board from the new District 3 in August, 1961, serving until his resignation.

Workman, an employe of Ashland Oil and Refining, is president of his local, Leach, Ky., Local 3-505, and is president of District 3 Council. He is well known to OCAW convention delegates for his work on committees.

Sohio Group Votes to Join With OCAW

The Independent Association



Long Olin Mathieson Strike Goes On

These pictures would indicate that morale remains high in the long strike of OCAW's Local 8-77 against Olin Mathieson Co. at Niagara Falls.

In the top picture is shown a group of picketing wives, bundled up for protection against the winter weather. Women have been putting on a picket line demonstration weekly. Left to right, the ladies are Mrs. John Butry, Mrs. Lewis Sherman, Mrs. Stanley Zaczek, Mrs. Arthur Tracy, Mrs. Walter Marsden. In the background is John Kopenski.

In the lower picture are shown some of the members taking a break inside one of the winterized picket shelters. Left to right are Eddy Wahl, Leonard Hall, Al Marsh, Picket Captain John Kopenski and Joe Bacelli. (See article on this page for more strike details.)

Company Puts Misleading Ads In Newspaper

8-77 Members of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Local 8-77 are now in the tenth month of their strike against Olin Mathieson and although the company boasts that it is running the plant at capacity and will keep the members out 'till hell freezes over, management has launched a strong campaign to divide the members and force a return to work.

One of the current gimmicks of management is to run ads in local newspapers asserting that the company's latest proposal has not been made available to employes and offering to supply them with copies of the proposal.

But the company document fails to include all the facts, including a manning chart, which management laid before the negotiating committee.

Intl. Rep. Clifford Myers, in charge of the strike, reports that the issues remain the same as when the strike began last June 28. He states that the company wants to eliminate all job classifications, to have the right to change assignments, work days, shifts and work week at any time, to have the right to contract out the jobs, to eliminate all overtime procedures, the right to force overtime work, a broad management rights clause

Sohio Group Votes to Join With OCAW

The Independent Association of Petroleum Workers, representing approximately 330 employes of 63 company-owned service stations of Standard Oil of Ohio in Northeast Ohio have applied for affiliation with OCAW, District 7 Director H. J. McClain reports.

In a recent meeting of this organization, the members voted overwhelmingly to apply for affiliation.

Intl. Rep. R. P. Buchanan has been assigned to work with this group to determine if effective assistance can be given to them. A motion has been filed before NLRB to change the bargaining certification of the group to OCAW.

While Sohio has indicated that it has no objections to Rep. Buchanan working with the group, it has not indicated whether or not it would agree voluntarily to a change of bargaining rights certification. If the company chooses to object, an NLRB election to settle the matter probably could not be held until next January, when the contract is open.

picketing wives, bundled up for protection against the winter weather. Women have been putting on a picket line demonstration weekly. Left to right, the ladies are Mrs. John Butry, Mrs. Lewis Sherman, Mrs. Stan-

winterized picket shelters. Left to right are Eddy Wahl, Leonard Hall, Al Marsh, Picket Captain John Kopenski and Joe Bacelli. (See article on this page for more strike details.)

when the strike began last June 28. He states that the company wants to eliminate all job classifications, to have the right to change assignments, work days, shifts and work week at any time, to have the right to contract out the jobs, to eliminate all overtime procedures, the right to force overtime work, a broad management rights clause, and the right to replace bargaining unit employes with salaried personnel.

Under the company proposals, seniority would be practically eliminated.

"The amazing thing about all the company proposals," says Rep. Myers, "is that they cannot give the union any reasons for them other than that they must operate the plant efficiently. But if the company's proposed contract were accepted, it would actually result in less efficient operation of the plant. Company representatives have been arrogant, evasive and impossible to negotiate reasonably with."

The strikers have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits and are having to pay their hospital and surgical insurance premiums.

Considerable assistance is coming in from other locals. For this, the local wishes to express its deep appreciation. However, more financial aid is needed to maintain these determined strikers who are trying to save their contract.

Carborundum Local Helps Striking Units

8-12058 Substantial support to strikes of sister locals has been given by Niagara Falls, N. Y., Local 8-12058 in recent months, reports Sec. Robert Jarvis .

The local has been giving $200 a month to Niagara Falls Local 8-77, on strike against Olin Mathieson since last June, and $150 a month to Niagara Falls Local 8-277, on strike against Goodyear from last November until mid-March. (The later strike is now settled.) In addition, plant gate donations have been taken and Pres. Oscar Goltara has contacted other locals in solicitation of support.

Jarvis also reports these other recent activities in the local, which represents Carborundum employes:

- Louis D. Marino resigned as grievanceman-at-large to accept appointment to the International staff; William Osolinsky was elected to replace him.
- Peter Walos is the new COPE chairman of the local.
- Eloise Jessup was honored at a recent steward dinner on her retirement. She was presented with farewell gifts by Chief Steward Frank Devro, on behalf of local officers and stewards. Eloise has been active in the local many years, having served as steward, grievance committee member, safety committee member, executive board member and International convention delegate.

Sixth Merger Meeting Held

As this issue of UNION NEWS went to press (on March 25), the sixth in a series of meetings to discuss merger of the two unions was underway between representatives of OCAW and of the International Chemical Workers Union.

The meeting was being held in Chicago; it was called at the request of Richard Leonard of the Industrial Union Department of AFL-CIO, who has been acting as mediator between the six-member committees from each union.

Results of this meeting will be reported in the May issue of UNION NEWS.

COMING EVENTS

Atomic Energy Workers Council, Washington Hotel, Washington, D. C., Apr. 12-14.

Union Carbide Nationwide Council, Hotel Manhattan, New York, N. Y., Apr. 22-24.

District 5 Council, Sheraton Oklahoma Hotel, Oklahoma City, Okla., May 2-3 (corrected dates).

Intl. Executive Board, Denver, Colo., May 11.

District 7 Council, Pick-Oliver Hotel, South Bend, Ind., May 22-24.

District 1 Council, Bakersfield, Calif., June 19-20.

ELECTION NOTICES

8-215 Election for a trustee for Tonawanda, N. Y., Local 8-215 will be held at Leonard Post, Jr. Post No. 6251, 2000 Walden, Ave., Buffalo, New York, between one and four p.m., May17.

Letters and Comments

Retired Member First on COPE

To the Editor:

. . . am pleased to tell you that I have been the first to pay COPE dues the past two years. This presidential election year every union member should pay up promptly. I have been retired from Standard Oil Refinery since Aug. 1, 1960. Best wishes.

Art Foster
Member Local 1-547
(Retired)
Inglewood, Calif.

Let's Remember Why Overtime Established

To the Editor:

Concerning Brother Zawacki's letter in the March issue complaining of a lack of overtime, I would like to make the following comment.

It is indeed unfortunate that most of us have lost sight of the fact that the original purpose of overtime was not to make us rich, but to keep us from being overworked. The sooner we remember this concept, the better off both the labor movement and industry will be.

Henry W. Basch
Local 8-604
Deepwater, N. J.

Reminding Members Of Union Benefits

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate you on your job of putting out the very interesting and informative

Sends Along His Dollar for COPE

To the Editor:

I would like to thank you for the union paper which I enjoy so much.

I have been retired two years and am enjoying every minute of it. Thanks for the benefits that our good union got for us. I would like to say a good word for our union officials all these years. I think they have been wonderful. Sending my dollar for COPE.

(Editor's Note: Check for $1 for COPE was enclosed).

Don R. Grant
Retired Member Local 5-466
Arkansas City, Kan.

Found Loan Shark Article Interesting

To the Editor:

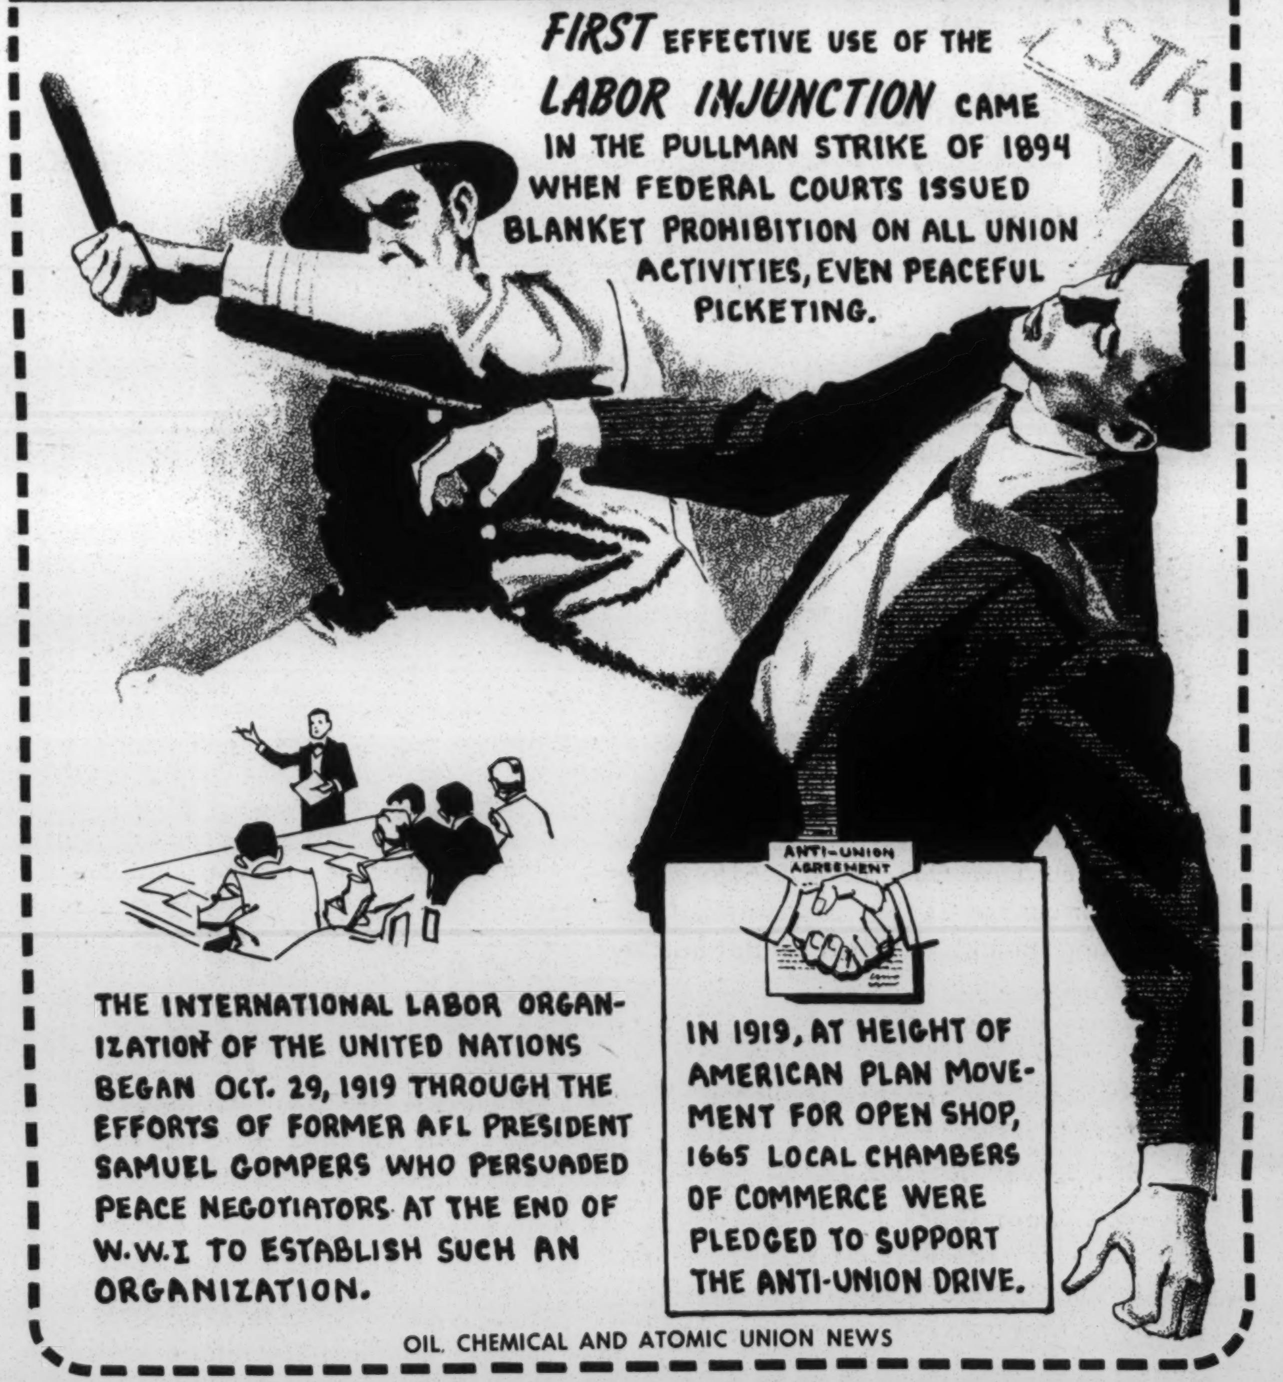
I enjoyed very much the article on Loan Shark Deals in the March issue of the UNION NEWS. This condition, I believe, is one of the major factors today that is causing our economy to lag behind.

If a person buys a home today he winds up paying more for interest than he does for the house.

We could buy a lot of appliances, furniture, etc., for the amount of excess interest we pay on these mortgages of anywhere from 5 to 6¾ percent.

What can we do to correct this? I have complained to the people who hold the note, but they say they must have a good return on their investment of such long terms! Actually the high interest rate is what makes

A PAGE FROM HISTORY



FIRST EFFECTIVE USE OF THE LABOR INJUNCTION CAME IN THE PULLMAN STRIKE OF 1894 WHEN FEDERAL COURTS ISSUED BLANKET PROHIBITION ON ALL UNION ACTIVITIES, EVEN PEACEFUL PICKETING.

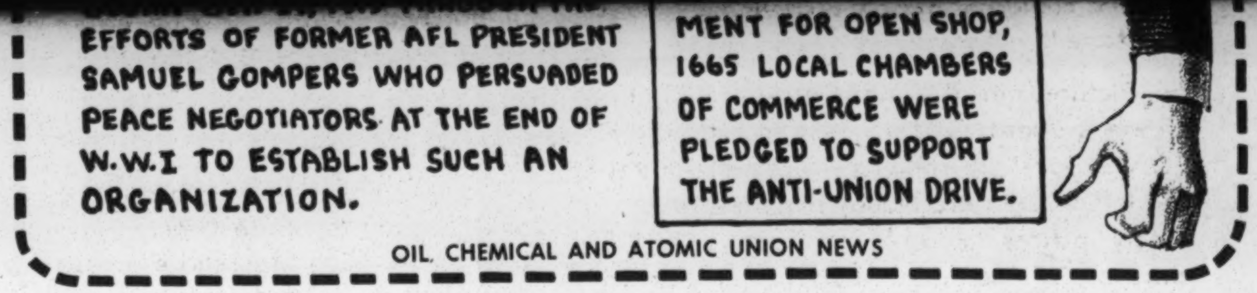
THE INTERNATIONAL LABOR ORGANIZATION OF THE UNITED NATIONS BEGAN OCT. 29, 1919 THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF FORMER AFL PRESIDENT SAMUEL GOMPERS WHO PERSUADED PEACE NEGOTIATORS AT THE END OF W.W.I TO ESTABLISH SUCH AN ORGANIZATION.

IN 1919, AT HEIGHT OF AMERICAN PLAN MOVEMENT FOR OPEN SHOP, 1665 LOCAL CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE WERE PLEDGED TO SUPPORT THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE.

OIL. CHEMICAL AND ATOMIC UNION NEWS

applications. I for one would love to read more from the Scriptures in the UNION NEWS.

Wet Milling Groups



EFFORTS OF FORMER AFL PRESIDENT SAMUEL GOMPERS WHO PERSUADED PEACE NEGOTIATORS AT THE END OF W.W.I TO ESTABLISH SUCH AN ORGANIZATION.
MENT FOR OPEN SHOP, 1665 LOCAL CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE WERE PLEDGED TO SUPPORT THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE.
OIL, CHEMICAL AND ATOMIC UNION NEWS

industry will be.

Henry W. Basch
Local 8-604
Deepwater, N. J.

Reminding Members Of Union Benefits

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate you on your job of putting out the very interesting and informative UNION NEWS.

I especially think the pictures you have in your paper are good in reminding the men and women that we need our union now more than ever before. If it wasn't for our unions we would not have what we have today. Pride, good wages, and good working conditions are just a few of the many things we owe a big thanks to our union for.

People seem to have to be reminded from time to time that they are the union! Without people there wouldn't be any unions. It gripes me to no end to see the few people who turn out for union meetings. I belong to Local 7-210, OCAW, and in our local there are about 3700 members. You're lucky to see 25 men at a meeting. The group I belong to, 7-210, Swift and Co., Tech. & Chem., 2 out of our 3 union oficers don't even attend the local meetings held once every two weeks. It seems to me they are nothing more than burdens to the union.

So maybe if you keep up the good work it will eventually bring some of the stay-at-home union members out to the meetings.

E. D. Hess
Member Local 7-210
Hammond, Ind.

day he winds up paying more for interest than he does for the house.

We could buy a lot of appliances, furniture, etc., for the amount of excess interest we pay on these mortgages of anywhere from 5 to 6¾ percent.

What can we do to correct this? I have complained to the people who hold the note, but they say they must have a good return on their investment of such long terms! Actually the high interest rate is what makes it a long term note, and they don't take chances with people with poor credit, so why?

Maxie H. Neely
Member Local 4-23
Vidor, Tex.

Kind Words From Many Sources

. . . I have a few words to praise your paper. I enjoy reading your very interesting news and editorials. Some articles which do not appear in no other paper, such as comparisons in cosmetics which appeared in the March issue of the UNION NEWS, and also who pays the highest federal income taxes?

Mrs. John Stefek
Wife of Member, Local 7-210
Whiting, Ind.

●

. . . Always appreciate getting the paper and always read most every article.

J. H. Ruble
Member Local 3-573
Covington, Va.

●

I wish to say I appreciate the quotations and passages from the Holy Bible which occur occasionally in the UNION NEWS. The Bible is full of modern day applications. I for one would love to read more from the Scriptures in the UNION NEWS.

J. D. Wilson
Local 1-547
Redondo Beach, Calif.

●

Keep up the good work. The paper is fine. I like the addition of consumer news.

Wm. Staresnick
Member Local 7-210
Gary, Ind.

●

. . . I look forward to reading this paper (UNION NEWS) as it enlightens me on matters that concern me and all the people in the industry. May I congratulate you people for the good work you are doing and thank you for your consideration.

Thomas O'Connell
E. Boston, Mass.

●

Just a note to say that I read the publication of UNION NEWS from page to page. I find it very interesting.

Mrs. Richard Amantite
Wife of Member, Local 1-561
Point Richmond, Calif.

●

Thank you for the paper. I look for it every month and enjoy reading it.

George Burbank
Member Local 7-196
River Rouge, Mich.

Wet Milling Groups To Seek Better Security, Benefits

Negotiations for new contracts covering OCAW's 7,000 members in the wet milling industry will get underway soon, Intl. Vice Pres. B. J. Schafer has announced.

A coordinated program of contract demands was drawn up at a meeting of delegates from the eight locals involved in Corpus Christi, Tex., Feb. 28, and has been submitted to the locals for ratification.

All contracts expire on July 1, or on sixty-day notice. Thus termination notices will be served May 1 and negotiations should begin soon after that time.

While the union will seek a wage increase, emphasis will be placed on improving job security and fringe benefit items. These include longer vacations, improved pensions, severance pay on death, improved group life insurance, better sick-and-accident benefits, company payment of a greater share of hospitalization and maximum union security provisions.

In the wet milling industry, OCAW represents employes of National Starch, Union Starch, American Maize, National Industrial Products (Keever) and four plants of Corn Products Refining Co.

Newark Fuel Oil Unit Joins OCAW

Employes of Oilco Co., Inc., in Newark, N.J., have voted to designate OCAW as their bargaining agency and will become members of Newark Local 8-406.

This group, maintenance workers and drivers for a fuel oil retailing company, was organized under the direction of Intl. Rep. Herb Sterling. They voted 9 to 1 for OCAW in an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board March 16.

Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers
International Union, AFL-CIO and CLC

Headquarters: 1840 California St.
(P.O. Box 2812), Denver 2, Colorado

O. A. Knight, President
A. F. Grospiron, Secretary-Treasurer
Elwood D. Swisher, B. J. Schafer, Vice Presidents

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEMBERS

1. . . . . .E. H. Eliason, Rt. 3, Box 349, Anacortes, Wash.
2. . .M. Phyl Poulson, 1620 South 6th E., Salt Lake City, Utah
3. . . . . . .Bill Workman, 2817 Cumberland Ave., Ashland, Ky.
4. . . . . .Lamar Bishop, Box 604, Cactus, Tex.
5. . . . . .Ray Collier, 903 N. 7th, Kansas City, Kans.
6. . . . . .Wallace Weston, 1823 E. Ivy, St. Paul, Minn.
7. . . . . .Kenneth Koch, 436 Parker Ave., Toledo 5, Ohio
8. .Anthony Mazzocchi, 51 Hammond Rd., Glen Cove, L.I., N.Y.
9. . . . . .Thomas Towler, 129 Paget St., Corunna, Ont.

DISTRICT DIRECTORS

1. . .James A. Morgan, 215 Long Beach Blvd., Long Beach, Calif.
2. . . . . .B. J. Rickey, P.O. Box 834, Casper, Wyo.
3. . . . . .Samuel J. Lopez, 812 Quarrier St., Charleston, W. Va.
4. . . . . .W. J. Forrester, 806 Scanlon Bldg., Houston, Tex.
5. . .Robert Bickel, 719 McBirney Bldg., 8 E. Third, Tulsa, Okla.
6. . .Lawrence Hunter, 1951 Univ., Rm. 208, St. Paul 14, Minn.
7. . . . . . . .H. J. McClain, 4340 West 95th St., Oak Lawn, Ill.
8. . .Anthony Sabatine, Rm. 1101, 744 Broad St., Newark, N.J.
9. . . .J. R. Duncan, 106 Lakeshore Rd., East, Port Credit, Ont.

Ray Davidson, Publicity Director William E. Rentfro, General Counsel William A. Hanscom, Legislative Director Alfred L. Wickman, Education Director

MAN OF THE YEAR

Division Fina 'Homme de l'Année'

Pictured above holding the Fina Division "Man of the Year" award from that division of Montreal East, Que., Local 9-618, is Ron Gibb, surrounded by his fellow officers. In presenting the award, Chairman Bill Butcher of the group said, of Gibb, "No effort was too great, no distance too far, no eddying current too swift, that on behalf of his fellow men he could not meet the challenge. He is an example for us all."

Pictured in the front row are Graem Howie, steward; Gibb, division secretary; and Jerry Slovacek, division vice chairman. Standing left to right are Nobby Nullmeyer, union safety officer; Lou Juneau, steward; Bill Butcher, division chairman; John Barton, steward; and Pat Reddy, steward.

'Nous apercevons sur la photographie Ron Gibb à qui a été décerné le prix de la division Fina "Homme de l'Année," entouré de ses confrères officiers qui venaient de terminer une assemblée-conseil. Ron reçu ce prix pour lequel il avait été voté à l'unanimité à un souper-dansant organisé en son honneur par ses confrères officiers de l'Union et leurs épouses. En preséntant le prix le Directeur Bill Butcher déclara: "Aucun effort ne fut trop grand; aucune distance trop longue; aucun courant trop fort pour l'empêcher de se trouver à la hauteur du défi — il est un exemple pour nous tous."

Dans la première rangée assis nous voyons de gauche à droite Graem Howie, conseiller, Ron Gigg, secrétaire divisionnaire, Jerry Slovacek, vice-président divisionnaire, dans la rangée arrière debout nous voyons de gauche à droite Nobby Nullmeyer, officier de sécurité syndicale, Lou Juneau, conseiller, Bill Butcher, président divisionnaire, John

Irving Strikes In Canada End

The bitter Irving strikes in Eastern Canada have been settled.

On March 2, agreement was reached between OCAW and Irving Oil Co., Ltd., covering 146 members of four locals who had been on strike against Irving marketing operations in Quebec since Jan. 4.

As a part of the settlement, lawsuits demanding a total of $625,000 from the union and several charges against individual members were dropped. From the beginning, these strikers had been bedeviled by a deluge of lawsuits, injunctions and other legal actions.

An acceptable contract settlement was reached.

On March 8, a contract providing a significant concession to the union was reached with Irving Refining, Ltd., at Saint John, N.B.

The 145 members of OCAW there had been on strike against North America's most efficient oil refinery since last Sept. 16 in an effort to wipe out wage inequities. Most of these people were being paid around 75 cents an hour below Canadian oil industry standards.

The company took the position that these inequities would be wiped out in time by the application of so-called "merit raises." The flaw in this was that the company would remain sole judge of who "merited" a raise — thus giving opportunity for much discrimination.

In the final strike settlement, Irving agreed that company decisions on "merit increases" would be subject to grievance and arbitration procedure, thus

NDP Again Elects Reimer Alberta Chief

OCAW Intl. Rep. Neil Reimer was reelected president of the Alberta New Democratic Party, by unanimous vote, in its annual convention in Calgary.

Surprising pep and determination were shown by the 254 delegates to the convention — these including representatives of labor, farmers, small businessmen, professional people and youth groups.

The convention heard reports from T. C. Douglas, national leader of the party, and Terry Grier, national secretary. The delegates were pleased to hear that the status of the party in Alberta had increased sharply in comparison to a year ago. While before it had ranked only eighth or ninth in size and influence among the various provincial organizations, it is now considered the fourth strongest, behind Saskatchewan, British Co-

Pictured in the front row are Graem Howie, steward; Gibb, division secretary; and Jerry Slovacek, division vice chairman. Standing left to right are Nobby Nullmeyer, union safety officer; Lou Juneau, steward; Bill Butcher, division chairman; John Barton, steward; and Pat Reddy, steward.

se trouver à la hauteur du défi — il est un exemple pour nous tous."

Dans la première rangée assis nous voyons de gauche à droite Graem Howie, conseiller, Ron Gigg, secrétaire divisionnaire, Jerry Slovacek, vice-président divisionnaire, dans la rangée arrière debout nous voyons de gauche à droite Nobby Nullmeyer, officier de sécurité syndicale, Lou Juneau, conseiller, Bill Butcher, président divisionnaire, John Barton, conseiller, et Pat Reddy, conseiller.

The flaw in this was that the company would remain sole judge of who "merited" a raise — thus giving opportunity for much discrimination.

In the final strike settlement, Irving agreed that company decisions on "merit increases" would be subject to grievance and arbitration procedure, thus giving the union a method to enforce fair and nondiscriminatory application of the increases.

Canadian Director J. R. Duncan of OCAW, congratulated both groups of strikers for their valiant battle and complimented international staff members for their part in conducting the strikes — Intl. Rep. Fernand Daoust who dealt with both the strikes throughout, Intl. Reps. Maurice Vassart and Paul Desaulniers who maintained constant vigilance on the Quebec strike, and Intl. Rep. Fred Kahanek who directed the Saint John activities beginning shortly after the walkout started.

leader of the party, and Terry Grier, national secretary. The delegates were pleased to hear that the status of the party in Alberta had increased sharply in comparison to a year ago. While before it had ranked only eighth or ninth in size and influence among the various provincial organizations, it is now considered the fourth strongest, behind Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Ontario.

Enthusiasm of the delegates was demonstrated by the fact that they contributed $7,000 from their own pockets to build up the party's general fund.

In his address to the convention as provincial leader of the party, Reimer emphasized the need for expansion of agricultural production to meet world food needs, for expansion of industry in Canada, and the need for various progressive movements to unite in support of those issues on which they can find agreement. He noted that the various conservative organizations throughout North America are uniting today.

Standard Employes on Aruba Go 'International' Despite Plea of International Boss

Members of the Independent Oil Workers Union of Aruba, who work for a big Standard Oil of New Jersey refinery, have voted to affiliate with the International Federation of Petroleum and Chemical Workers and thereby become identified with bona fide trade unionism.

They did this despite objections from the American management of the refinery, which is located on the Dutch Antilles Island of Aruba just off the coast of Venezuela.

With unbelievable hypocrisy, an American named W. A. Murray, who is manager of this American-owned refinery which exploits comparatively low labor rates on Aruba, wrote a letter to all employes telling them they should avoid getting involved with unions from other countries.

His lengthy letter to the employes stated that the company believed the employes would be better off if they avoided international affiliations! This was indeed a strange thing for the American named Murray to say to a group of colonial peoples ruled politically by the Netherlands and economically by Standard of New Jersey, which is virtually the only employer on the little island.

Standard of New Jersey operates on Aruba under the name Lago Oil & Transport Co., Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary which uses the same "Esso" trademark used in the U.S.A. and around the world by Jersey Standard.

Two-thirds of the 2,714 members of the union voted on the question of affiliation with IFPCW; they voted 1,808 for affiliation and 23 against.

IFPCW stimulated the organization of workers in the refinery several years ago, while at the same time organizing Shell workers in the big refinery on the nearby island of Curacao. Standard vigorously resisted union organization, eventually recognizing a company-dominated union. Gradually, however, this former company union changed its viewpoint and became a bona fide labor organization — as is reflected by its recent vote over the bosses' objections to affiliate with the world federation of oil workers.

Ask Resignation Of Labor Minister In New Brunswick

The Saint John and District Labor Council has demanded the resignation of New Brunswick Labour Minister K. J. Webber. The council's request, in a letter to Premier Louis J. Robichaud, was based on the labor minister's ineffective handling of the strike of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers against Irving Refining Ltd.

Due to the influence of the K. C. Irving interests on the economic and political life of the province, it had not been possible to obtain an impartial decision from the New Brunswick Labor Department, the Saint John Labor Council declared, urging that the strike be referred to the federal labor department.

Property First, Says Congressman From Dallas

Once upon a time there were people who thought that nothing was more important than property rights. And there are still a few of these people left around.

Rep. Bruce Alger (R. Tex.), a far, far right winger, said the other day: "I believe the most important human right of all is the right to own property."

What happened to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness?"

Retirees Honored

Honored retirees at a recent stag given by Hamilton, Ont., Local 9-633 were Steve Puskas, left above, and Walter Fall, third from left.

Local Pres. Len Bowley, second from left, and Jerry Johnston, far right, hold enscribed beer mugs which were presented to Puskas and Fall, as well as $50 each.

Local Sec.-Treas. John Dunbar tells us the combined service of the retired members adds up to 55 years.

The Most for Your Money

Careful Advance Shopping Needed For Nursing Home

Most families give little thought to a nursing home until the day of crisis arrives, say Ruth and Edward Brecher in the February issue of Consumer Reports. Then they have no time to shop sensibly, though their decision may involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, and the health and happiness of the patient. It's wise, therefore, to survey some of the local nursing homes in advance of the time of need.

First, prepare a "shopping list" of perhaps half a dozen homes likely to be worth a visit. CU suggests a number of sources including the nursing homes licensed by your state's health or welfare department.

Remember that all homes don't offer the same services. The range runs all the way from simple residential care to skilled nursing.

Other things being equal, convenient location for visiting should put a home high on your list.

Once you have a list, you can send for descriptive brochures, and then start visiting.

Advice on special points to examine and how to examine them is detailed in the 6-page article covering such things as: adequacy of staff, provisions for privacy, opportunities to social-

COOK DOUBLE, SAVE TROUBLE — Take a big rolled roast, as this homemaker is doing, barbecue it in your automatic electric oven, serve tonight and save the rest for later. While the roast's cooking, you can bake a cake, too, if you have a roomy double oven like this.

Think Big, Automate And Save on Cooking

A homemaker can save time, effort and money by thinking "big." A large roast is often more economical than a small one, and the bigger the turkey, roast or turkey big enough for a crowd.

When it does come to cooking a turkey, be sure to take the bird

Soon All TV Sets Will Have UHF

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

April is the last month before manufacturers must stop producing the traditional VHF television sets under Federal law, and must produce only all-channel receivers. The new sets will be equipped to receive both the 12 Very High Frequency channels as before, but also all 70 Ultra High Frequency channels.

The general significance of this law is that eventually you will be able to receive more TV programs, especially more educational broadcasts, but also more commercially-sponsored programs. Already in some cities a few UHF channels are in operation, such as the municipally-operated Channel 31 in New York and several channels in Los Angeles, Boston and a number of other areas. Other cities such as Chicago and Los Angeles are expected soon to have municipal TV stations broadcasting educational programs in the UHF band. For the entire country, there are now 29 educational stations operating in the UHF band, and about 100 commercially-operated UHF stations.

•

This does not mean that in most parts of the country you need to rush out and buy a UHF set. In fact, in most areas there still are not stations op-

one meanwhile, until UHF does arrive locally.

Aside from the possibilities of using a rehabilitated old set meanwhile, the most suitable choice seems to be to buy a UHF set if you are going to buy a new one at all, even though lower-priced VHF sets still will be available for some months. We do want to make it clear that you don't have to do anything about your present set if there is no UHF channel in your area, or if you aren't especially eager to receive whatever UHF stations already are broadcasting locally. When UHF does become available locally, and you want to receive it, you then can convert any present sets.

•

Eventually the availability of these additional programs will be a boon to your family. Both the set manufacturers and the large broadcasters resisted the Federal law requiring that new sets manufactured after April 30 must be the all-channel type. You may recall that the large broadcasters also once resisted FM radio broadcasting. They want to monopolize the public's air waves as much as they can. But the existence of more UHF receivers in homes will encourage more broadcasters to offer nursing.

Other things being equal, convenient location for visiting should put a home high on your list.

Once you have a list, you can send for descriptive brochures, and then start visiting.

Advice on special points to examine and how to examine them is detailed in the 6-page article covering such things as: adequacy of staff, provisions for privacy, opportunities to socialize, freedom in dress, quality of food, provisions for an activity program, and opportunities for residents to do useful work if they wish.

Above all, CU counsels, take careful note of the patients in the homes you visit. Their feelings and attitudes—not the sales talk—are the best clue to the spirit of the place.

Steam-and-Spray Iron Advantages

An iron that can both steam and spray has a list price $4-$7 higher than an ordinary steam iron. But, according to an article in the February issue of Consumer Reports, now on newsstands, the spray feature, when effective, is well worth the extra price.

Consumers Union tested 17 models. In addition to the laboratory tests, use tests were made on a variety of common fabrics.

One model had an unsatisfactory heat range, another had unsatisfactory steam performance. Evaluation of the spray feature revealed decided differences. A few irons required only pressure on a pushbutton; the others required the user to pump the pushbutton. Also, some of the irons failed to deliver an adequate spray directly in front of the iron.

The financial assets of all the labor unions in America combined amount to only 6 percent of the assets of one corporation—General Motors.

---

roomy double oven like this.

Think Big, Automate And Save on Cooking

A homemaker can save time, effort and money by thinking "big." A large roast is often more economical than a small one, and the bigger the turkey, the better the buy.

Housewives can relieve the pressure on themselves and their families by planning ahead and dropping the one-meal-at-a-time approach in favor of cooking double when possible.

Large roasts or turkeys can be cooked and served for one meal and the remainder frozen for later use. Soups, curry and pies can be made from the left-overs. This allows wider use of the storage benefits of an ample refrigerator-freezer, which is also important to a smoother-running house.

What's the point of having a new electric range if you don't know how to use the automatic features it offers?

A homemaker with a modern electric range need have no doubt about her oven — or double ovens — carrying heavy cooking loads. Using her range at full capacity, she can prepare four complete meals, even serve 30 persons at a time. And there are four ways of cooking available to her — surface, rotisserie, broiler and oven.

Many of the special easy-to-use features of new electric ranges are ideal aids for the amateur cook. She can be confident of turning out delicious dishes with their automatic help.

Easy-to-use oven timers turn roasts on and off even when the housewife is away from her kitchen. One timer may be set to start the cooking, the other to stop it. A complete meal prepared in advance and placed in the oven will be cooked automatically and ready to serve at the time set.

An electric oven equipped with rotisserie, which cooks one-third faster than roasting, can cook a roast or turkey big enough for a crowd.

When it does come to cooking a turkey, be sure to take the bird out of the freezer in advance. Two to three days should be allowed for thawing a large turkey in the refrigerator section.

The simplest approach to food preparation is often the best. Some of the most delicious dishes are the easiest ones, and the directions don't overwhelm new cooks and busy homemakers.

Turkey for instance, is just as delicious roasted unstuffed, with the stuffing baked separately, some homemakers say. The cooking time is shorter too.

For a gourmet touch, add a cup of chopped green or ripe olives to the following basic savory stuffing:

1 loaf day-old bread or 12 to 14 cups crumbs
2 teaspoons salt
¾ teaspoon pepper
1¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 cup finely chopped celery
1 slightly beaten egg
½ pound melted butter, margarine
½ cup finely minced onion

Break dry bread into pieces, add seasonings and celery and the slightly-beaten egg. Melt butter or margarine in skillet, add onions and cook until tender. Stir into crumb mixture and blend thoroughly. Roll into balls, place in oven 1 hour before turkey is done.

It is good food-saving practice to strip the meat off the turkey after the first dinner and freezer-wrap meal-size portions of both dark and light meat, preferably in gravy. This can be stored in a zero-zone freezer for a month or more. The carcass can be broken up to make broth, which should be chilled quickly and refrigerated or frozen for later use.

The following rotisserie Orange Glazed Ham recipe also is appealing because of its easy preparation and tangy taste.

1 (7 to 8 pound) half ham — cook-before-eating type
½ cup brown sugar
1 (6 ounce) can undiluted frozen orange juice, thawed
½ teaspoon ground cloves

Run skewer lengthwise along bone, centering ham on skewer. Insert fork at each end to hold securely. Set skewer on rotisserie and grill for 2 to 2½ hours at 400°. Fifteen minutes before cooking is completed roll off rind, if necessary. Combine brown sugar, orange juice, and ground cloves. Spoon one-half of this mixture over ham and complete cooking.

After a family ham dinner, the homemaker can freezer-wrap and store the large unsliced left-over portion. Less perishable than poultry, ham may be freezer stored for six months or more.

---

educational programs in the UHF band. For the entire country, there are now 29 educational stations operating in the UHF band, and about 100 commercially-operated UHF stations.

•

This does not mean that in most parts of the country you need to rush out and buy a UHF set. In fact, in most areas there still are not stations operating in the UHF band, and the big television networks, broadcasting in VHF themselves, are not eager to encourage additional UHF competition. Even when UHF broadcasting does come to your area you won't need to buy a new set. You can have your present VHF receiver converted for perhaps $30-$40.

What the advent of UHF sets means is that if you are in the market for a TV set, you will have the choice of (1) buying one of the remaining VHF sets still in the dealers' stocks which would have to be converted if UHF does come to your area and you want to receive it; (2) paying $10 to $30 more for a new UHF receiver, or (3) repairing your old set or buying a used the set manufacturers and the large broadcasters resisted the Federal law requiring that new sets manufactured after April 30 must be the all-channel type. You may recall that the large broadcasters also once resisted FM radio broadcasting. They want to monopolize the public's air waves as much as they can. But the existence of more UHF receivers in homes will encourage more broadcasters to offer additional programs in this band. This means that people in smaller cities and in fringe areas will be able to get better reception than they now get tuning in on broadcasts from the nearest big city. It also means that families in some small-town and rural areas no longer may be forced to pay high fees to operators of community antennas, since programs of nearby origination eventually will be available.

Moreover, programs should improve as the result of additional stations and thus more competition for viewers. Most cities now have only two or three TV stations, some have only one and some none at all. Only nine of the very largest have four or more, the Federal Communications Commission reports. Most present TV broadcasting is on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

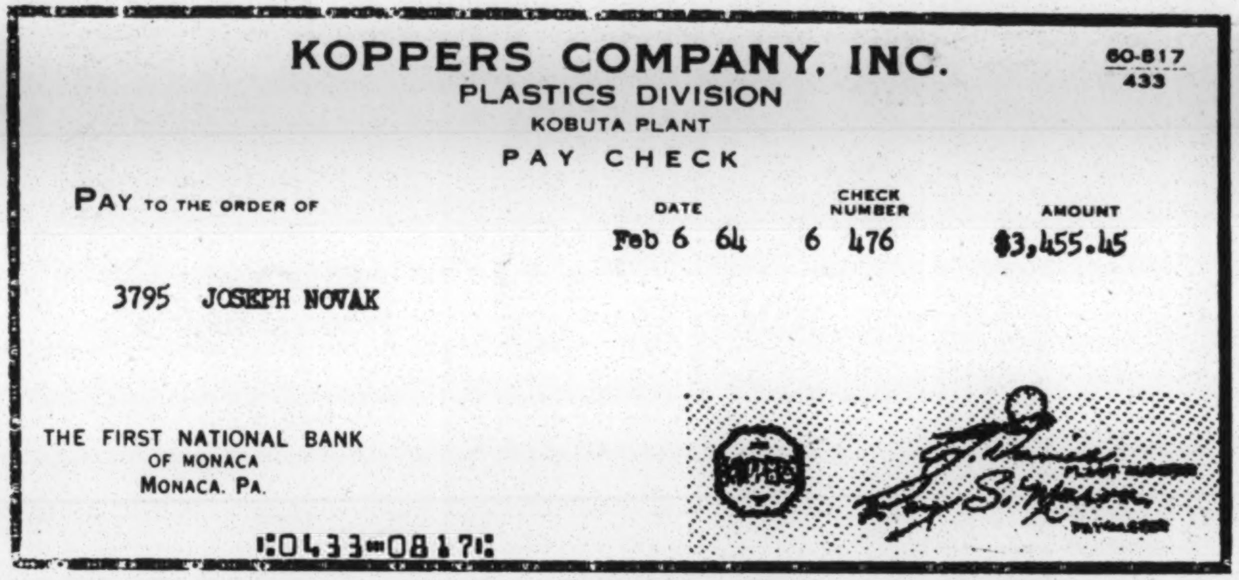
Prices of TV sets in general have been low this year, with some portable sets selling in the $100-$125 bracket for the VHF models.

Auto Accident Fatal to Member

8-729 Raymond A. Bruno, 31, member of Phillipsburg, N. J., Local 8-729 was killed in an automobile accident on February 26.

Bruno's auto smashed headon into a railroad bridge abutment and rescue squads worked more than half an hour to free his body from the wreckage.

Bruno had been an employe of the J. T. Baker Chemical Co. in Phillipsburg since 1955. He is survived by his wife, Sondra, and two children.



KOPPERS COMPANY, INC.
PLASTICS DIVISION
KOBUTA PLANT
PAY CHECK

60-817
433

PAY TO THE ORDER OF

DATE	CHECK NUMBER	AMOUNT
Feb 6 64	6 476	$3,455.45

3795 JOSEPH NOVAK

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MONACA
MONACA. PA.

⑆0433⑉0817⑆

Unions Offered Film on Life Of Mrs. FDR

A 28-minute documentary motion picture on the life of Eleanor Roosevelt is now available for free showing at trade union meetings in connection with the AFL-CIO's campaign on behalf of the Eleanor Roosevelt Memorial Foundation.

Narrated by Mike Wallace, and featuring a special message by Chet Huntley on behalf of the Foundation, the film dramatically traces Mrs. Roosevelt's event-filled life — in support of trade unions, on behalf of social legislation, and in pursuit of world peace. It offers a broad view of American politics, from Franklin Roosevelt's unsuccessful campaign as the Democratic vice-presidential candidate in 1920, to the election of the late John Kennedy in 1960.

Unions may book "Biography of Eleanor Roosevelt" by writing to the Princeton Television Center, Box 431, Princeton, N. J.

Johnson Needles

Union Wins Back Pay

Joseph Novak, member of Kobuta, Pa., Local 8-74, has his job back and full pay for the time lost from work because of an improper discharge, thanks to the union.

After Novak was discharged by the Koppers Co., the union took the case to arbitration. Arbitrator Donald A. Crawford ruled that the company lacked just cause for the discharge and ordered Novak reinstated with full seniority and full back pay.

The picture above is of the back pay check, which netted $3,455 after deductions for taxes, social security and so forth. Below is shown Pres. W. "Ed" Walker of Local 8-74, Leonard "Gus" Bloom Jr., chief steward, and Novak, looking over the big check.

Intl. Rep. F. J. Prorok led the union team in presenting the case to the arbitrator.

Security, Pension Improvements In Lever Contract

7-336 Significant improvements in job security and pension benefits, as well as other gains, were won by Hammond, Ind., Local 7-336 in joint negotiations with four locals of the International Chemical Workers Union with Lever Bros.

OCAW's local representing 1,500 workers joined with ICWU locals representing workers at Baltimore, Edgewater, N. J., St. Louis and Los Angeles in Company-wide negotiations at Baltimore.

Agreement was reached to interweave seniority amongst the plants, providing that if one of the plants should be shut down the workers could bid into jobs in other plants. Provision was made however, that no employe hired before Jan. 1, 1962, could be bumped in such case.

The major pension improvement was that in calculating retirement benefits hereafter, the wages earned as of Jan. 1, 1964, or the five prior years averaged, whichever is higher, would be the basis of calculation, rather than the average wage of all years of employment. This will mean significantly larger pensions.

Also, pension coverage will now apply to any employe aged 30 or older. In the past, an employe began participating in the pension plan at age 35.

The company agreed that any employee with 20 years service or of age 60 or older who is demoted to lighter duty and therefore lower pay because of disability now will be guaranteed his current higher rate of pay until retirement.

Vacations now will be granted of the year, a slack production time in the company in which there are frequent temporary layoffs. This was agreed to by the union in an effort to reduce the number of layoffs.

The company gave the unions a letter of intention to better plan its production schedules so as to minimize seasonal layoffs.

A revision was made which will assure that any man laid off will be guaranteed that his hospitalization insurance will remain in effect an additional 30 days. The dental phase of the insurance plan was broadened to cover dentures.

A seven cent general wage increase was provided in the one-year contract. Value of the overall package is estimated at 4 percent or 12½ cents an hour.

Leading the OCAW negotiators on the team were Vice Pres. E. D. Swisher and Intl. Rep. Joseph Bolattino. Local committeemen were Pres. Herman Loden, Max Westphal, Carl G. Rumps, John Swentko, Joe Alishio, Joe Grandys, Bruno Nalepa and Dan Wigley Jr.

Barnsdall Honors

ful campaign as the Democratic vice-presidential candidate in 1920, to the election of the late John Kennedy in 1960.

Unions may book "Biography of Eleanor Roosevelt" by writing to the Princeton Television Center, Box 431, Princeton, N. J.

Johnson Needles Business Worriers

Union officials in Washington were delighted to discover that President Lyndon Johnson enjoys an occasional needling of big businessmen as much as did President Kennedy. At his first meeting with the Business Council, comprising 87 of the country's most reactionary industry and business executives, President Johnson reminisced about the legendary Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Said the President, "Mr. Rayburn told me that in his 50 years here in Washington he believed the most frightened man that he ran into was the average American businessman.

"He said that although the U. S. businessman can go to bed at night—one of the few businessmen in the world—and wake up next morning knowing that his property has not been confiscated out from under his pillow, he is still frightened. And if he can't scare himself enough he will go hire a lawyer or a public relations man to keep him scared."

Union Lawyer Gets Federal Judgeship

Union Attorney David Rabinovitz has received a recess appointment as Federal Judge for the Western District of Wisconsin despite the opposition of the American Bar Association and conservative business groups.

Rabinovitz, who has solid trade union support for the post, was sworn in at Sheboygan, Wis. This was the scene of many years of activity where he represented the United Auto Workers against the Kohler Co.

The company agreed that any employee with 20 years service or of age 60 or older who is demoted to lighter duty and therefore lower pay because of disability now will be guaranteed his current higher rate of pay until retirement.

Vacations now will be granted on the basis of three weeks for employes of 7 years service (instead of 10) and four weeks after 15 years service (instead of 20). It is provided, however, that these longer vacations can be taken only in the first quarter

Action Sought on Bill To Provide Federal Policing of Mine Safety

Workers in metal and nonmetallic mines are watching with interest the progress in Congress of the Metcalf-Montoya bill which would strengthen federal policing of safety in such mines.

The federal government already exercises considerable influence on safety in coal mining, but all other mines are policed mostly by the states, and state laws are generally inadequate.

More than 500 men are killed or permanently crippled each year in accidents, thousands are injured from breathing silica dust and radon gas and 7,000 man-years of labor are lost annually due to work injuries in mineral industries now unprotected by federal law.

The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers has issued an eight-page pamphlet summarizing a two-year study by the Department of Interior of health and safety conditions in metal and nonmetallic mines.

The pamphlet calls for early hearings on the Metcalf-Montoya bill, introduced in Congress last July. This bill would establish a safety code for mines and quarries, as well as associated smelters, refineries and other processing plants, enforceable by sanctions which would include criminal penalties. The bill would give the Secretary of the Interior power to close unsafe working places until they are made safe.

Even though the Metcalf-Montoya bill is in line with recommendations made by Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, it is strongly opposed by the mining interests.

The National Western Mining Conference, meeting in Denver early in February, passed a resolution urging the federal government "to stay away from further policing of mines." The mine owners took this attitude in the face of heavy death and injury tolls.

The Metcalf-Montoya bill was offered as a result of a detailed study of mine safety ordered by Congress in 1961. The study, made under direction of Secretary Udall, found that state laws and enforcement are "clearly inadequate."

In a survey of 800 mines, this study found 12,155 dangerous safety hazards in existence — about 15 per mine on average — and that upon reinspection later it was found that the mine operators had failed to correct 57 percent of these hazards and that in the meanwhile 2,159 new ones had developed.

In the 800 mines, 4,080 violations of the existing weak state mine safety laws were found. During 1962, 212 men were killed and 329 permanently crippled in metal and nonmetal mining and quarrying.

None of the foregoing applies to coal mines. They have been under federal supervision since the passage in 1941 of the Federal Coal Mine Safety Act.

The bill seeking to put other mines under federal safety regulations comparable to those in coal mining, known as the Metcalf-Montoya Bill, was introduced (as S 1949) in the Senate by Senators Lee Metcalf (D.-Mont.) and Frank Moss (D-Utah). The same bill was introduced in the House (as HR 7812) by Congressmen Joseph Montoya (D.-N.M.), Henry Gonzalez (D.-Tex.), Arnold Olsen (D-Mont.), Edward Roybal (D.-Calif.), George Senner (D-Ariz.) and Morris Udall (D.-Ariz.).

* * *

President Johnson says medical care for the aged under the social security system is "The American Way" of meeting the problem.

* * *

E. D. Swisher and Intl. Rep. Joseph Bolattino. Local committeemen were Pres. Herman Loden, Max Westphal, Carl G. Rumps, John Swentko, Joe Alishio, Joe Grandys, Bruno Nalepa and Dan Wigley Jr.

Barnsdall Honors Retired Members

5-391 Seventeen retired members of Barnsdall, Okla., Local 5-391 were honored guests at the local's meeting on March 2.

Local Sec. Emitt D. Jones reports that Friendship Bibles were presented to each retired member and that refreshments were served and enjoyed by all.

UAW SUED

The United Auto Workers and its Local 880 are being sued for $2.5 million by Malleable Industries. The company claims that several union disputes caused a loss of millions of dollars and were illegal. The UAW is prepared to fight on the grounds that it was involved in only one strike, and that one was legal.

New Officers

3-276 Clarksburg, W. Va. Pres. Percy C. Ashcraft, Vice Pres. William Golden, Rec. Sec. Edwin A. Parsons, Fin. Sec.-Treas. J. J. Johnston, Sgt.-at-Arms Carlo Fragman, Trustees Lee Pierce, Albert Westfall and Lloyd Eneix, Negotiating and Grievance committee William L. Davis, Kermit Post, Carl Lemasters and Robert Robey.

Niagara Local Wins Strike At Goodyear

8-277 The strike by members of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Local 8-277 against Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co was settled with a complete victory for the union in mid-March, just short of four months after it began.

The strike was caused by company insistence on changing arbitration procedures and otherwise weakening the contract.

Company demands for contract changes finally were dropped and the company also agreed to a 5 cent an hour wage increase for each year of a three-year contract, plus improvements in shift differentials and improved vacations. The strike ended March 15.

"Our membership remained strong and united throughout this strike," Rec. Sec. Frank J. Micale of the local reported. "The assistance we received for food baskets from the District 8 Council Strike Fund and the generous financial aid received from brother OCAW unions helped to ease the burden for our members. We wish to thank everyone for their support."

Local 8-277 submitted the following list of contributors of assistance to their strike:

Local 1-5, $25; 1-120, $50; 1-589, $50; 1-591, $408; 2-574, $25; 3-180, $25; 3-193, $10; 3-276, $105; 3-357, $25; 3-523, $25; 3-552, $25; 3-271, $50; 3-727, $10.

Local 5-7, $50; 5-220, $25; 5-225, $25; 5-232, $25; 5-401, $25; 6-502, $25; 7-87, $15; 7-155, $50; 7-496, $50; 7-509, $25; 7-641, $25

Goodyear Strike Scenes

The picture above shows the negotiating group which settled the strike of OCAW Local 8-277 against Goodyear Tire and Rubber at Niagara Falls with a successful agreement. First three men at left are unidentified company negotiators. Beginning with the fourth man, the OCAW team is Intl. Rep. Sebastian Alvarez, Pres. John S. Miller Jr. of the local, Intl. Rep. Louis Marino, D. Cirrincione and Rec. Sec. Frank J. Micale.

Below, Angelo Gigliotti is shown manhandling some of the food supplies contributed to the strike by sister locals. (See article on this page for more details of the settlement.)

Recent Contract Gains

District 1

1-128 National Supply Co., division of Armco Steel Corp., Torrance, Calif. Eighteen month contract instead of 24. Improvements in notification time for vacations, savings and vacation plan, supplemental unemployment benefits program, insurance agreement and contract language. Intl. Rep. D. D. Brymer headed negotiating committee composed of unit chairman Eddie A. Dawson, unit secretary Frank Gilbert, committeemen Paul Lessing, Glen Smith, Wayne Vernon, Duane Schultz, Alex Herwer and local representative James Walker.

1-128 Productol Chemical Co., Long Beach, Calif. Two year agreement effective February 1, 1964. Employee and company contribution to retirement plan and pension benefits increased 33⅓% with 100% vesting at ten years, temporary transfer clarified and limited with 15 day training period and thirty day demonstration period, one week's pay with less than 5 years' seniority and two weeks pay with more in case of lay-off, labor-management relations committee established apart from negotiating and workmen's committees.

District 3

3-611 Armour Agricultural Chemical Co., South Norfolk, Va. Five-cents-across-the-board wage increase, in addition to gains reported in March issue of UNION NEWS.

District 4

4-245 Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Shreveport, La. Seven-cents-per-hour general wage increase in a one-year contract.

District 6

6-111 Wisconsin Contractors, Inc., Lake Geneva, Wis. Eleven-cents-per-hour general wage increase effective March 1, 1964, in a one-year contract. Four weeks vacation for 16 years of service, added holiday, funeral leave, and improved major medical. Increased sick leave and company to submit proposal for profit sharing program.

6-395 W. H. Sweney & Co., St. Paul, Minn. Three-year contract carries wage increase of nine-cents-per-hour effective February 1, 1964, four cents on January 1, 1965, and again on July 1, 1965, January 1, 1966, and July 1, 1966. Three-cent increase in hospitalization and four weeks vacation after 20 years. Intl. Rep. Russell W. Trout headed negotiations with Merrill Lind and John Vogel.

6-578 Dillon Hotel Corp. (Red Cedar Inn), Austin, Minn. Six-cents-per-hour general wage increase in a one-year contract. Holidays increased.

6-665 Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co., Cumberland, Wis. Six to eight-cents-per-hour general wage increase for production and maintenance in a two-year contract. Improved our members. We wish to thank everyone for their support."

Local 8-277 submitted the following list of contributors of assistance to their strike:

Local 1-5, $25; 1-120, $50; 1-589, $50; 1-591, $408; 2-574, $25; 3-180, $25; 3-193, $10; 3-276, $105; 3-357, $25; 3-523, $25; 3-552, $25; 3-271, $50; 3-727, $10.

Local 5-7, $50; 5-220, $25; 5-225, $25; 5-232, $25; 5-401, $25; 6-502, $25; 7-87, $15; 7-155, $50; 7-496, $50; 7-509, $25; 7-641, $25.

District 8 Council, $2,112.50; Local 8-86, $40; 8-99, $50; 8-234, $100; 8-250, $50; 8-373, $50; 8-398, $25; 8-406, $25; 8-455, $50; 8-459, $12.50; 8-543, $25; 8-548, $36.62; 8-638, $25; 8-3660, $50; 8-6220, $100; 8-6230, $30; 8-12058, $1,800; 9-691, $1,500.

15-Cents Won At Metalsalts

8-447 Hawthorne, N. J., Local 8-447 has negotiated a two-year contract with Metalsalts Corp. calling for a fifteen-cents-per-hour wage increase; eight cents effective the first year and seven cents the second year.

The new contract calls for $10 a week increase in Temporary Disability benefits, five cents and three cents inequity adjustments for the maintenance group in the first and second years respectively, three cents cost-of-living increase gained over past two years permanently incorporated in wage scale, and four weeks severance pay for five years' service.

The local and the company will attempt to set up a pension program during the coming year. Double time will be paid for hours worked over twelve on Saturdays and the company will furnish one pair of leather shoes per year. Grievance procedure and warning system language was improved and a manning clause for plant expansion was added.

Intl. Rep. George R. Papp headed the local negotiating committee composed of Peter Buckpesch, John Dickerman and George Arnnett.

Ladies Garment Workers Win Pay Increase

Some 80,000 members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in eight eastern states have ratified a new, three-year contract providing for wage and fringe benefits averaging between 3 and 9 per cent.

Some 2,500 shop stewards and chairmen of the union approved the pact at a meeting.

A possible snag was seen in the fact that two employer organizations, employing 20,000 workers, are balking at the agreement. Meetings are scheduled with Mayor Robert Wagner to head off a strike.

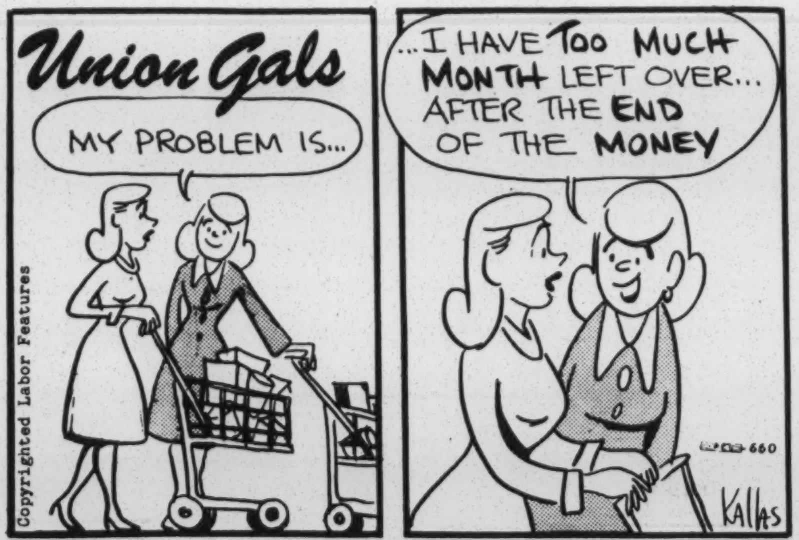
The agreement covers employers of jobbers who purchase fabric and cut patterns and contractors who do the sewing for the jobbers.

Unions Back Young Over John Glenn

The Ohio AFL-CIO has rallied to the support of Democratic Senator Stephen M. Young in his race for re-election to the United States Senate against the challenge of Astronaut John Glenn.

Although the Federation has made it a policy not to make endorsements in primary races, it declared, without mentioning Glenn's name, that "the special circumstances of the current contest call for this expression of support" for Sen. Young.

In its statement, the State AFL-CIO cited Senator Young's "exemplary record on behalf of legislation to advance the general welfare of Ohio citizens" and his consistent and wholehearted support of the policies of President Johnson and the late President Kennedy.



Union Gals
MY PROBLEM IS...
...I HAVE TOO MUCH MONTH LEFT OVER... AFTER THE END OF THE MONEY
Copyrighted Labor Features 660
KALLAS

committee established apart from negotiating and workmen's committees.

District 3

3-611 Armour Agricultural Chemical Co., South Norfolk, Va. Five-cents-across-the-board wage increase, in addition to gains reported in March issue of UNION NEWS.

3-677 Nuclear Fuel Services, Inc., Erwin, Tenn. Nine-cents-per-hour general wage increase. Additional paid holiday, increased shift premium and meal allowance, no sub-contracting of ordinary maintenance work normally performed by bargaining unit, 36 month seniority retention for lay-off or sickness and improvements in funeral leave and grievance procedure. Company to conduct and pay for employe attendance at two hour health and safety school each quarter. Improvements in overtime and vacation clauses. Suspension of employes must be in presence of steward or committee and in writing. Intl. Rep. Henry A. Adkinson headed contract committee composed of local Pres. John Williams, Don "Brushie" Lewis and Gordon Peterson.

3-679 Hercules Powder Co., Bessemer, Ala. Wage settlement averaging 6.4¢ per hour. Intl. Rep. B. C. Emrick headed local union committee comprising Pres. M. H. Clark, Hercules group chairman R. L. Knox, M. J. Lucas and Floyd Vining.

3-722 New York Mining & Manufacturing Co., Calvert City, Ky. Ten-cents-per-hour wage negotiated on a wage opening clause; increase effective April 1, 1964. Company to furnish rubber boots and gloves. Intl. Rep. Hugh Owen led local negotiating committee composed of Pres. H. B. Jones, Fin. Sec. Jim Robertson, Vice Pres. Roy McKamey, Paul T. Owen, W. Oliver and Bill Russell.

A dollar donated to COPE means help to a candidate for office who is friendly to working people.

Trout headed negotiations with Merrill Lind and John Vogel.

6-578 Dillon Hotel Corp. (Red Cedar Inn), Austin, Minn. Six-cents-per-hour general wage increase in a one-year contract. Holidays increased.

6-665 Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co., Cumberland, Wis. Six to eight-cents-per-hour general wage increase for production and maintenance in a two-year contract. Improved pension plan and floating holiday added. Intl. Reps. Leslie J. Van Tol and Joseph A. Ricci headed negotiating committee composed of John Helstern, M. L. Hubbard, Henry C. Miller, Ron Woodward, Paul Pett, Jr., Gene F. Gunderson and George Ricci.

District 7

7-355 American Cyanamid Co., Hamilton, Ohio. Six to eight-cents-per-hour wage increases in a two year agreement effective December 9, 1963, and wage re-opener December 15, 1964. Increased shift differential and contract language improved. Negotiating committee was headed by Intl. Rep. Carl A. Bachmann and included Pres. W. H. Brosch, Fin. Sec. Luther Deaton, Robert Steele and Eddie Wilson.

7-507 UBS Chemical Co., Argo, Ill. Eight-cents-per-hour wage increase effective February 1, 1964. Intl. Rep. Roy Freeman and group chairman Gene L. Mullins handled negotiations.

How Goldwater Shows Initiative

When Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.) in a speech here, blamed poverty on the lack of intelligence and ambition, one trade union leader recalled a Herblock cartoon.

It showed a downtrodden mother with her two poorly clothed children. Goldwater was depicted as saying to them: "If you had any initiative you'd go out and inherit a department store."

In Faberge Negotiations

Key people at the signing of Ridgefield, N. J., Local 8-6210s new contract with Faberge are pictured above. Back row, left to right, are Intl. Rep. George Papp, Fin. Sec. Garry Cohn, Pres. John Keel, Intl. Rep. Herb Sterling and Acting Director Raymond P. Rogowski. Seated are Philip Brass, management; Dorothy LaGarde, Rec. Sec.; James Hughes, Vice Pres.; and Joe McGuinness, Sgt.-at-Arms. (See article on this page for details.)

Management Men Speak Favorably Of Study Groups

Three management spokesmen had good things to say about joint labor-management study committees in a panel discussion held recently at the Midwinter Personnel Conference of the American Management Association.

Participating in the discussion, sentative of a small steel company, reported good success. A joint study committee between his company and the union has dealt with four key issues since 1962 — incentive practices, seniority, scheduling and a big backlog of grievances. Management reversed its position on in-

19-Cents Won At Faberge

8-6210 Ridgefield, N.J. Local 8-6210's recently signed contract with Faberge, Inc. gained the membership a 19c across-the-board wage increase; ten cents the first year and nine cents the second year.

The two year contract brings additional gains of first and second year inequity adjustments for machinists of 25c and 15c, and a 10c inequity adjustment

Mobil Disregards Arbiter's Ruling; Union Must Sue

7-644 OCAW will be forced to take Mobil Oil to court for the company's defiant disregard of an arbitrator's ruling against them.

Returning to work after a six month strike, East St. Louis, Ill., Local 7-644 was forced to take arbitration Mobil's discounting of that year's vacation time by 50%, despite the fact that the contract bases vacation time earned upon length of service, not upon the number of days, weeks or months worked in a single year.

Arbitrator Carroll Daugherty, government appointed mediator in many nation-wide labor disputes, ruled that barring any "established plan" covering vacation discounting apart from the contract, the company would have to pay the employees the difference due them.

Mobil admitted they had no established plan, accused the arbitrator of being pro-union, and walked out of the hearing.

Since the company has refused to accept as binding the arbitrator's ruling, it is violating its contract with the union and therefore the union will have to go to court to sue the company for breach of contract and seek a court order forcing the company to follow the arbitrator's order.

Labor-management relations between OCAW and Mobil have been strained for some time. Local Vice Pres. O. V. Clover says that this latest display of contempt for the contract and the whole concept of arbitration in labor-management disputes makes it clear that Mobil's real intent is to "program human relations out of existence."

Acralite Workers Vote for OCAW

Production and maintenance employes of Acralite Co., Inc., in Brooklyn, N. Y., have voted to join OCAW.

The vote was 8 to 2 in an elec-

Negro Leader Talks Against R-T-W Laws

The Rev. Martin Luther King, noted Negor leader in the civil

Three management spokesmen had good things to say about joint labor-management study committees in a panel discussion held recently at the Midwinter Personnel Conference of the American Management Association.

Participating in the discussion, held in Chicago, were R. Heath Larry of U. S. Steel, Charles H. Parcells of U. S. Rubber and Robert F. Groves of Allen Wood Steel Co.

The three agreed that joint study committees are not the answer to all labor-management problems but that the technique has led to solution of many problems that can't be solved in the heat of collective bargaining sessions.

Speaking from his experiences in the steel industry, Larry said that four ingredients are necessary for success in the joint study committee approach. They are (1) a will and desire to make it work — which in the steel case came about after the long 1959-60 strike, (2) properly established mechanics and procedure of the committee — for everything is done by mutual agreement, (3) adequate staffing on both sides by educated and sophisticated people and (3) flexibility as to time—no deadlines to put undue pressure on the participants.

Parcells, speaking as a representative of an industry that has not yet operated its newly-established joint study committees but from experience in a similar activity, described divisional meetings his company has had with Rubber Workers locals during the past twenty years.

He said these meetings usually ran three days, with the company presenting its problems the first day, the union its problems the second day, and solutions sought on a third day. Parcells said the meetings were not always successful but that he could honestly attest that they had never put management to any disadvantage.

Groves, speaking as a representative of a small steel company, reported good success. A joint study committee between his company and the union has dealt with four key issues since 1962 — incentive practices, seniority, scheduling and a big backlog of grievances. Management reversed its position on incentives, accepting a plan used elsewhere in industry. Solutions to the other three problems were worked out by the committee.

Nearly a year ago, OCAW proposed to the oil industry that joint labor-management study committees be established to study manpower stabilization problems, but the idea has gotten a very cool reception from management.

30-Year Vet

Ernest Black, member of South Bay Local 1-547, proudly wears OCAW's handsome 30-year pin presented to him at a regular meeting with a commendation from the officers of the international.

Black has 13 more years to go before retirement from the Mobil Oil Co. at the Torrance, California, refinery where he is an insulator. He started as an insulator with Cities Service Corp. at East Chicago, Indiana, in 1933.

signed contract with Faberge, Inc. gained the membership a 19c across-the-board wage increase; ten cents the first year and nine cents the second year.

The two year contract brings additional gains of first and second year inequity adjustments for machinists of 25c and 15c, and a 10c inequity adjustment for powder fillers and 15c for truck drivers, all apart from general wage increase.

One week's severance will be earned for 52 weeks' work. No vacation benefits will be lost by lengthy illness if employes have 15 years or more seniority. Overtime distribution was improved as were methods of promotion to fill vacancies. Negotiations on job evaluation and description will begin four to five months in advance of contract expiration.

Acting Director Raymond P. Rogowski assisted Intl. Reps. George R. Papp and Harold C. Sterling with negotiations. Local committee was composed of Pers. John Keel, Vice Pres. Jim Hughes, Fin. Sec. Garry Cohn, Rec. Sec. Dorothy LaGarde, Sgt.-at-Arms Joe McGuinness. Federal mediators called in were Dan Fitzpatrick and John Wagner.

Human Depreciation Write-Off Needed

An expert, speaking before the American Economics Association, believes that people are as valuable as property.

Economist Harry Greenfield of Queens College, New York, said that people should be allowed "human depreciation" on their income tax forms just as industry is allowed to deduct depreciation on machinery. He said medical expenditures to repair human depreciation compare to the costs of repairing machinery.

Your local union meeting is your opportunity to make suggestions as to how your union can operate better.

Acralite Workers Vote for OCAW

Production and maintenance employes of Acralite Co., Inc., in Brooklyn, N. Y., have voted to join OCAW.

The vote was 8 to 2 in an election held by the National Labor Relations Board. Intl. Rep. Warren Bunn conducted the organization. The unit will be a part of Local 8-712.

How Do You Get to Work?

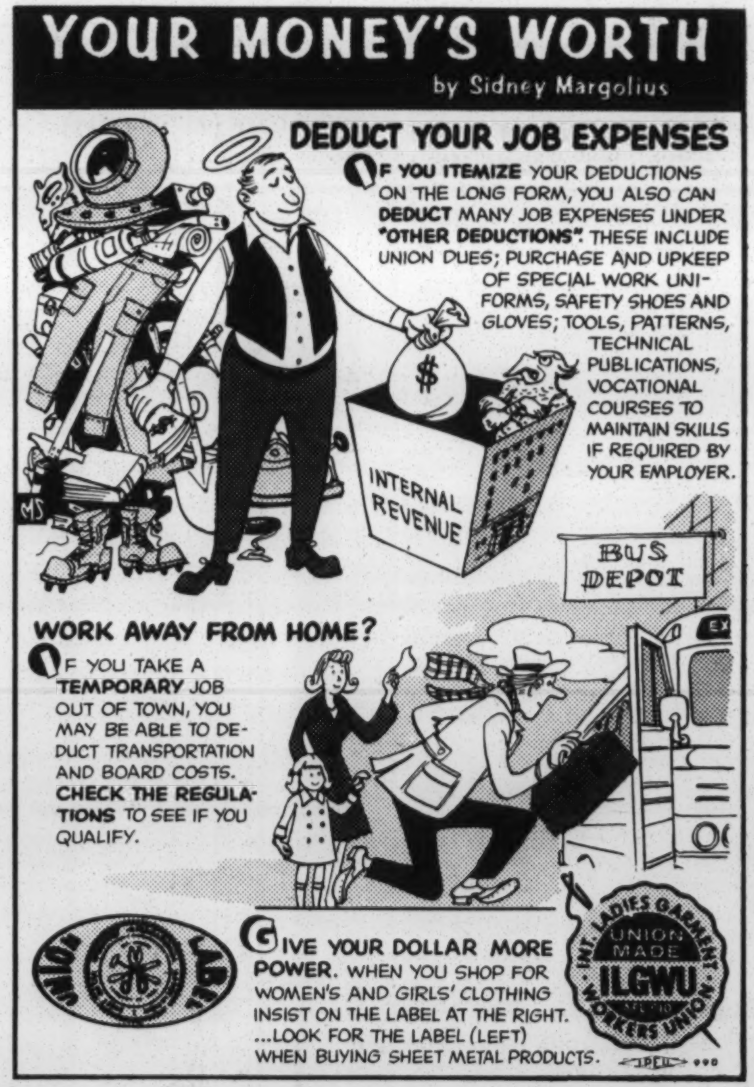
A Census Bureau survey shows that 10 per cent of all American workers still walk to work. Automobiles carry 64 per cent, 8 per cent use buses or street cars, and nearly four per cent go by rail, subway or elevated trains.

Negro Leader Talks Against R-T-W Laws

The Rev. Martin Luther King, noted Negor leader in the civil rights battle, has condemned "right-to-work" laws as representing a denial of both the civil rights and the job rights of the nation's Negro workers.

King particularly denounced the current attempt to enact the anti-labor law in Oklahoma.

"This so-called 'right-to-work' law provides no 'rights' and it provides no 'work'," King said in a speech in Oklahoma City. "It is, instead, a law to rob us of our civil rights and our job rights."



YOUR MONEY'S WORTH
by Sidney Margolius
DEDUCT YOUR JOB EXPENSES
IF YOU ITEMIZE YOUR DEDUCTIONS ON THE LONG FORM, YOU ALSO CAN DEDUCT MANY JOB EXPENSES UNDER "OTHER DEDUCTIONS". THESE INCLUDE UNION DUES; PURCHASE AND UPKEEP OF SPECIAL WORK UNIFORMS, SAFETY SHOES AND GLOVES; TOOLS, PATTERNS, TECHNICAL PUBLICATIONS, VOCATIONAL COURSES TO MAINTAIN SKILLS IF REQUIRED BY YOUR EMPLOYER.
INTERNAL REVENUE
$
MS
BUS DEPOT
WORK AWAY FROM HOME?
IF YOU TAKE A TEMPORARY JOB OUT OF TOWN, YOU MAY BE ABLE TO DEDUCT TRANSPORTATION AND BOARD COSTS. CHECK THE REGULATIONS TO SEE IF YOU QUALIFY.
UNION LABEL
GIVE YOUR DOLLAR MORE POWER. WHEN YOU SHOP FOR WOMEN'S AND GIRLS' CLOTHING INSIST ON THE LABEL AT THE RIGHT. ...LOOK FOR THE LABEL (LEFT) WHEN BUYING SHEET METAL PRODUCTS.
INT. LADIES GARMENT WORKERS UNION
UNION MADE
ILGWU

Outdoor Lowdown

By FRED GOETZ

Wild and wooly still is the "out country" out of Mood's Mill, Yarmouth county, Nova Scotia, according to a story from Lou Spinney of Welsford, New Brunswick, a member of Local 9-691.

Seems like Lawrence Christian of Mood's Mill was doing a little winter hunting for rabbits near home when his right to use the trail was questioned by a snarling bobcat, standing firm and hurling sparks of defiance. Christian recalled that neighbors had been complaining about a huge bobcat prowling the vicinity, raiding farmyards.

Anyway, Lawrence let go with a blast from his 12-gauge rabbit gun and downed the defiant bob which tipped the scales at 42 pounds and measured four feet from snout to tail.

Ever since his dad took him fishing, as a mere splinter of a lad, Randy Odle, 12-year-old a pair of the illustrated METRIC lures by sending in a photo of a fishing, camping or hunting scene — and a few words as to what the photo is all about.

Send it to:

Fred Goetz
Dept. OLME
0216 S.W. Idaho
Portland, Oregon 97201

Please state your local number. Of course, retired members and the family are eligible.

•

Piscatorial loose ends:

...Another avid father-and-son angling team is Ronald Stamos of Sarnia, Ontario, and his dad Christopher Stamos, a member of Local 9-14. Just for the record, chalk up a 12 pound pike for Cris, a battler taken from the St. Clair river, Sarnia Bay area, and a 15 inch perch for Ron.

...One of the top walleye catches for this column is an eight pounder taken by Mrs. M. Irwin, wife of Melvin Irwin, Oil City, Pa., a member of Local 8-455. The 28-inch "wallie" came from the Alleghany river near Oleapolis and was taken on an artificial. We recall a past letter from Melvin which told about his affection for a coon he tamed after getting permission to do so from the game commission. The Irwins claim it was the smartest thing on four legs and a joy of their life.

...Sometime ago we got a letter wanting to know: "What the heck are clothesline bass? Can't remember who posed the question but here's a look-see on

Laminated Shim Negotiators

Members of the amicable negotiating teams of Stamford, Conn., Local 8-320 and Laminated Shim Co. are pictured at the recent signing of their new one-year contract. Seated at left is Local Pres. Charles W. Betts and Laminated Shim Pres. Arthur V. Anderson. Standing left to right are personnel manager George Hubbard, local committee members Daniel Mecca and William Holmes, Intl. Rep. David Abrams, local committeeman Joseph Necatera, local Vice Pres. Zygmund Olzerowicz and company Vice Pres. and Production Manager Otto J. Hecht.

Stamford Unit Again Wins Quick Pact

8-320 For the second year in a row negotiations between Stamford, Conn., Local 8-320 and Laminated Shim Co. have been settled satisfactorily in a single negotiating session of one day.

Local Pres. Charles Betts reports that in somewhat over

Three Unions Compare Notes On Gas Utilities

Sixty-two delegates from three international unions exchanged information at the annual Inter-Union Gas Conference in Detroit March 4-6, OCAW Vice Pres. B. J. Schafer, coordinator of the conference, reports.

Participating in the conference ton, Ont., Local 9-633; Kenny Finnerty of St. Louis Local 5-194; Charles Madeson and Robert C. Tibbs of St. Louis Local 5-6; Don Teply and Webb F. Harting of Cushing, Okla., Local 5-283; George C. Thornton of Texas City, Tex., Local 4-449; Charles R. Moore of Kenova, W.

Ever since his dad took him fishing, as a mere splinter of a lad, Randy Odle, 12-year-old son of Billy Odle of Groves, Texas — a member of Local 4-23 — had a hankering, as anglers of all ages, everywhere, have had a hankering, to catch a lunker. One so monstrous that he — nor anyone, need later have to brag about it.

In line with this we hear that Randy was fishing the Gulf surf, for the first time, with his dad. As he started to retrieve one of the many routine casts, his rod tip jerked ever so gently; jerked again, this time more vigorously; then again, violently, to touch the rolling swells.

Randy was fast to a finny freight train that took off like a downgrading runaway and it was touch-and-go and pump-and-wind-in for 40 minutes after that. Begrudgingly the tired monster was inched to beach for the kill—a chunky bull redfish—hooked by the tail — that measured 45 inches from nose to caudal fin and bent the scale to the tune of 40 pounds. See photo above.

The previous day, dad nipped two redfish from the same stand but they ran ten pounds under Randy's catch.

●

The waters out of Birch, Wisconsin, are lucrative for perch, bluegill and crappie, says Elmer Peters of 10933 Avenue H, Chicago, Illinois, a member of Local 7-336. "Try 'em."

Members of the OCAW in good standing — and the members of their families — can earn artificial. We recall a past letter from Melvin which told about his affection for a coon he tamed after getting permission to do so from the game commission. The Irwins claim it was the smartest thing on four legs and a joy of their life.

. . . Sometime ago we got a letter wanting to know: "What the heck are clothesline bass? Can't remember who posed the question but here's a look-see on some clothesline bass — and a few bluegill mixed in. Fella' standing behind 'em is Ernest Logue of Fullerton, Calif., a member of Local 1-128, Long Beach. Ernest and his wife amassed this great catch from the waters of Vale Lake in San Diego county. Mr. and Mrs. Logue contend that fishing is the greatest sport in the world.

. . . It's a gala time for fishermen when the white bass run occurs, usually the first week of October at Fremont, Wis., between Wolf river and Pelican lake. Four anglers who have participated in this run are Mr. and Mrs. Kasper Shields and Mr. and Mrs. B. T. McNabney of Hammond, Indiana.

Mrs. McNabney recalls they took home 53 white bass, plus 4 pike, 4 black bass and 3 walleyes.

B. T. McNabney, a member of OCAW for 28 years was presented with a lifetime membership.

. . . Don Keister, secretary-treasurer of Local 7-630, Logan, Ohio, and his fishing partners, Cliff Smith and Kermit Ringhiser, take their panfish the hard way. Hear tell they amassed a stringer of 100 bluegills, some of 'em measuring 11 inches, on fly gear, topped off with yellow-spider poppers. The place was Logan Lake.

Quick Pact

8-320 For the second year in a row negotiations between Stamford, Conn., Local 8-320 and Laminated Shim Co. have been settled satisfactorily in a single negotiating session of one day.

Local Pres. Charles Betts reports that in somewhat over three hours the membership won a three percent general wage increase in a one-year contract.

Other gains include company paid life insurance for retired employes, as well as a company paid medical and surgical plan. Retirement is at age 65 with 17 years' service. The new contract brings two weeks vacation after one year and an extra paid holiday.

The local negotiating committee, headed by Intl. Rep. David Abrams, included Pres. Betts, Vice Pres. Zygmund Olzerowicz, William Holmes, Daniel Mecca and Joseph Necatera.

Community Services Program Emphasized In Minersville Local

8-719 Rec. Sec. Charles Huntzinger of Minersville, Pa., Local 8-719 reports that the membership is enthusiastically participating in a Community Services Schooling Program thanks to Schuylkill County's United Labor Council and United Fund.

A Red Cross sponsored blood bank has already been set up by the members and is in operation. Local Pres. Dave Donlin has been appointed to the United Fund Board of Directors and to its Labor Advisory Committee.

George Kelly of the AFL-CIO Community Services Committee is the school coordinator and Huntzinger reports the school will run for six weeks with participants attending a graduation dinner in the seventh week.

On Gas Utilities

Sixty-two delegates from three international unions exchanged information at the annual Inter-Union Gas Conference in Detroit March 4-6, OCAW Vice Pres. B. J. Schafer, coordinator of the conference, reports.

Participating in the conference were delegates from locals of OCAW, ICWU and Building Service Employes Union who have bargaining rights with gas utility companies.

The conference does not plan or coordinate collective bargaining, but exchanges information about work and contract conditions which can assist each union in bargaining.

Problems currently facing gas utility workers are notably similar to those in most other industries in which OCAW members work. Delegates noted that contracting out of work, particularly meter repairs, was on the increase with resulting loss of jobs. Automated or highly mechanized data processing and billing equipment is costing still other jobs.

Many of the delegates expressed a concern that safety standards are slipping in connection with decreasing of work forces. As in the oil industry, complaints were voiced that management is attempting to expand the role of supervisors and give them work belonging to the hourly-rated people.

A steering committee of nine persons was selected to coordinate work of the conference, three coming from each union. OCAW members of this committee are Jim White of St. Louis Local 5-6, Joseph H. McDonald of St. Louis Local 5-194 and John M. Dunbar of Hamilton, Ont., Local 9-633.

Other OCAW delegates attending the conference included: LeMoine Cardinal, Henry Sniadach and William M. Paulin of Milwaukee Local 6-18; Eugene J. Smith and Robert A. Meyerhofer of Burlington, Wisc., Local 6-111; Intl. Rep. Ernest J. Toth of District 6; James Curran and Leonard Bowley of Hamilton, Ont., Local 9-633; Kenny Finnerty of St. Louis Local 5-194; Charles Madeson and Robert C. Tibbs of St. Louis Local 5-6; Don Teply and Webb F. Harting of Cushing, Okla., Local 5-283; George C. Thornton of Texas City, Tex., Local 4-449; Charles R. Moore of Kenova, W. Va., Local 3-372; Zeon Quintila of Port Arthur, Tex., Local 4-23; and Arnold Makinson of Winnipeg, Man., Local 9-681.

Sohio Chemical Units Win 14c, Other Benefits

7-626 Two groups of Lima, Ohio, Local 7-626 members at Sohio Chemical Co. won fourteen cents-per-hour wage increases in two-year contracts; seven cents effective February 9 this year, and another seven cents on February 7 next year.

Both groups, Acrylonitrille and Nitrogen, gained double time over eight hours and the right to negotiate company-proposed classification changes.

The Nitrogen group got the 18 month restriction on bidding by Storeroom personnel removed, posting rights for assistant storeroom keeper's job, 48 hour notice on schedule changes and recall rights to service group for laid-off employees.

The Acrylonitrille group improved their grievance procedure and secured thirty days' notice of lay-off whenever practicable.

Intl. Rep. Carl A. Bachmann headed both groups' negotiating committees. Negotiating for the Nitrogen group were group chairman Fred Britsch, Karl Garlock, Robert Dahill, Frank Early and Dick Burdin. Acrylonitrille's negotiating committee included group chairman Leo Brown, William Selover, Ralph Davis and Ned Ford.

126 Stewards Take Training In District 1

Four separate Stewards' Training Programs were held in District 1 during February and March attended by stewards from nine West Coast locals.

A total of 126 stewards were enthusiastic in their reception of the courses which were first proposed at last December's District 1 Council meeting. Locals represented were: Long Beach Local 1-128, South Bay Local 1-547, Taft Local 1-6, Kern River Local 1-19, Ferndale Local 1-590, Anacortes Local 1-591, Martinez Local 1-5, Santa Maria Local 1-534 and Emeryville Local 1-589.

Education Director Alfred Wickman conducted the sessions in conjunction with Intl. Rep. Verlin L. McKendree.

McKendree is responsible for the handling of all arbitration cases in District 1 and his competence is well known throughout the district. He keeps a master record of all arbitration costs, arbitrators, and contract clauses that enter dispute. He prepares the cases for hearing and serves as the union's advocate. McKendree has trained many of OCAW's West Coast local stewards in arbitration.

Labor Explains Why It Wants Double-Time

Safety Awards at Carborundum

Three divisions of the Carborundum Co. in Niagara Falls received awards for their safety records at the 17th annual dinner of the Labor-Management Safety Committee in the plant. They were Bonded Abrasives, largest division in the plant, Functional Staff, and Research and Development Division. Pictured above in the presentation ceremony are, left to right, Clifford H. Seymour, manager of safety and security for the company; Stanley Kasprzak, union safety committee chairman; Peter Walos, chairman of the union safety committee in Bonded Abrasives; Vincent Stricker, chairman of the management safety committee; Donald J. MacLaren, representing the Research and Development division safety committee; and Oscar Goltara, president of OCAW's Niagara Falls Local 8-12058, which represents employes in the big plant.

AFL-CIO Raises Questions About Pipe Line Ownership

The AFL-CIO Executive Council at its last meeting adopted a statement requesting the government to investigate the impact on the public welfare of multi-company owner-the general public as well as to employees of the oil industry.

"Such multi-company ownership combines the resources and power of several companies in ticipating companies are injected in the same line for shipment. We question whether the consumer receives truly competitive prices and services as between the products of the

42 Houston Sinclair Men Retire Early

4-227 Forty-two employes of Sinclair Refining Co. at Houston have taken early retirement under a negotiated agreement with the company in order to keep 42 young employes on the job, Sec.-Treas. L. Tom Fox of Houston Local 4-227 reports.

One of these men — William U. Smith — had been in Sinclair service more than 41 years. Most of the others had service periods ranging from 30 to 39 years. Only one had less than 20 years of company service.

All except one was a member of OCAW and several had 30 years of membership in the union. The plant was first organized just over 30 years ago.

The early retirees are Juan Baldes, James L. Bresee, William H. Buffington, McKinley Burnstein, Samuel Cain, Arlie R. Carpenter, Ed W. Christie, Archie B. Collins, Adam Dangler, Guadalupe Escamilla, Adolphus L. Findley, Jeronimo Flores, Lloyd L. Follis, Alvin G. Freeman.

Otto B. Gates, Lewis O. Greene, Chalbert W. Grigsby, Mack Hardin, Prentice P. Havard, Robert Hensely, Ernest P. Hickey, Theador Johnson, Albert T. Jones, Leslie J. Kessler, Lawrence L. LaBouve, Leslie D. LeGalley, Edd T. Laird.

Lonnie O. McGill, Olive E. McLean, Lewis T. Miller, Albert Moore, Austin Mouton, Amos J. Neal, Clarence L. Newell, Roger E. Oliphant, William U. Smith, Villery Spencer, Willie Thomas, Hollis C. Thrash, Thomas D.

many of OCAW's West Coast local stewards in arbitration.

Labor Explains Why It Wants Double-Time

Precisely why the AFL-CIO is asking for a 35-hour week and penalty pay of double time for overtime was spelled out to a House Subcommittee by Andrew J. Biemiller, the federation's director of legislation.

"The AFL-CIO is fully convinced that hours of work must be cut in order to reduce unemployment," he testified before the Select Subcommittee on Labor of the House Labor Committee, "or even to keep it from growing beyond its present intolerable level.

"We do not argue that a reduction in hours, in itself, would achieve that end. But we do insist that shorter hours are an essential element in achieving it."

The AFL-CIO spokesman predicted that double-time for overtime "would open up as many as a million full-time job opportunities."

Unions Object To Scranton's Jobless Plan

More than 3,000 leaders of AFL-CIO unions and State bodies in Pennsylvania held a mass meeting on the steps of the Capitol in Harrisburg in protest against unemployment compensation revisions proposed by the Republican Administration of Gov. William W. Scranton.

They heard President Harry Boyer of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO denounce the bill's provisions as "cruel and inhuman" and charge that it would penalize thousands of jobless for the benefit of a few favored industries.

About Pipe Line Ownership

The AFL-CIO Executive Council at its last meeting adopted a statement requesting the government to investigate the impact on the public welfare of multi-company ownership of crude oil and oil proproducts pipe lines.

The resolution is similar to one adopted by the OCAW Executive Board at its last meeting and subsequently by the Maritime Trades Department of AFL-CIO.

Text of the statement as adopted by AFL-CIO follows:

"The practice of vesting ownership of pipe lines, particularly products pipe lines in several supposedly separate and competitive companies, poses a number of questions of concern to the general public as well as to employees of the oil industry.

"Such multi-company ownership combines the resources and power of several companies in such a way as to give them a competitive advantage over companies which do not participate in the ownership. Although such pipe lines are supposedly common carriers available to all shippers of petroleum products at a posted rate of tariff, in practice they typically, serve only the owning companies. Artificially high tariff rates, assertions that capacity is not available, and other subterfuges place the company which does not own a share in the pipe line at a disadvantage.

"Products of the various participating companies are injected in the same line for shipment. We question whether the consumer receives truly competitive prices and services as between the products of the various companies when these products in fact are handled as unidentifiable bulk commodities.

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Executive Council of the AFL-CIO hereby requests the Administrative Officers of the AFL-CIO to call these problems to the attention of the appropriate government agencies and members of Congress with the suggestion that the impact of multi-company ownership of crude oil and oil products pipe lines be carefully investigated."

New Pennsalt Agreement

Representatives of the union and the company are pictured signing the new agreement between Wyandotte, Mich., Local 7-591 and Pennsalt Corp. Standing left to right are committeeman Claude Sutton, company representative Dan Minnick, committeemen Robert Allen and Robert Wilkes and company representative Al Fortino. Seated: Don Long, personnel department; Charles Gagnon, union chairman; Pete Nugent, labor relations; Paul Stawicki, Intl. Rep.; Robert Brown, local union president; George Featherstone, committeeman.

Contract gains include limitation on return of non-bargaining unit employes to unit, voluntary lay-off permissible instead of demotion at times of cut-backs, call-in work to be specified, increases in vacation, shift differential, Blue Cross-Blue Shield (by company), and work schedule to be firmed up for following week at 6:00 p.m. on Friday.

Hickey, Theador Johnson, Albert T. Jones, Leslie J. Kessler, Lawrence L. LaBouve, Leslie D. LeGalley, Edd T. Laird.

Lonnie O. McGill, Olive E. McLean, Lewis T. Miller, Albert Moore, Austin Mouton, Amos J. Neal, Clarence L. Newell, Roger E. Oliphant, William U. Smith, Villery Spencer, Willie Thomas, Hollis C. Thrash, Thomas D. Walters, Joseph G. Zenon.

17-Cents Won At Carborundum

8-490 A 17c general wage increase has been gained by Perth Amboy, N.J., Local 8-490 in a two year contract with Carborundum Corp.; nine cents effective March 1 this year, and eight cents on that date next year.

Other gains include inequity raises after job re-evaluation, two cent increase in afternoon shift differential, insurance program to include extended Blue Cross benefits, incentive program changes as requested by union and revision of contract's temporary transfer section.

Intl. Rep. Raymond P. Rogowski headed the local negotiating committee composed of Pres. Eugene Ur, Jr., Zolan Orosz, Stephen Moroz, Joseph Giordano John W. Vargo, Irving Britten, Andrew Milochik and John Volk.

Goldwater Washed Up?

Senator Barry Goldwater (R. Ariz.) has been washed out of the Republican Presidential sweepstakes pretty completely by columnist Joseph Alsop with these words:

"No serious Republican politician, even of the most Neanderthal type, any longer takes Goldwater seriously. The real question is why he was taken seriously for so long. On this point, many big businessmen, and one must add, many big newspapers and magazines, have much to answer for."

Voting Should Be Made Easier

National Study Commission Suggests How To Do This

It is a fact that one-third of all U.S. adult citizens do not vote in presidential elections.

It is a fact that more than one-half of all U.S. adult citizens do not vote in congressional elections.

The reasons behind these facts — facts that undermine the very foundation of our democracy — are both psychological and legal and have long been a source of concern to Republicans and Democrats alike.

Prompted by this concern, President Kennedy established the President's Commission on Registration and Voting Participation March 30, 1963. The commission's purpose was, in effect, to study these reasons and to submit to the President its recommendations for enabling every citizen to cast his vote.

The findings of the commission were presented to President Johnson Dec. 20, 1963. The report proposes 21 specific standards to enable the millions of Americans who for one reason or another do not vote — in 1960 35 million — to cast their votes on election day. The 11 man commission based their recommendations on working within the framework of the present electoral system.

The 21 proposed registration and voting standards are:

1. Each state should create a commission on registration and voting participation, or utilize some other existing state machinery to survey in detail its election law and practices.

2. Voter registration should be easily accessible to all citizens. In some states, voters ofttimes have to make an out-of-the-way trip to the county court house to register.

3. State residence requirements should not exceed six months.

4. Local residence requirements should not exceed 30 days.

5. New state residents should be allowed to vote for President.

6. Voter registration should extend as close to election day as possible, and should not end more than three or four weeks before election day. The commission feels that with continual canvassing, early launched education campaigns and accessible registrars, a four week deadline on registration would suffice for even the states with large and mobile populations. (New York requires only three weeks to compile central records and supply current registration lists).

7. Voter lists should be kept current, by the regular removal of ineligible names as well as entry of new registrants. This is essential to eliminate criticism as well as fraud.

8. No citizen's registration should be cancelled for failure to vote in any period less than four years.

9. Voter registration lists should be used only for electoral purposes. Some states use their voter registers for tax assessment, jury selection and other non-voting purposes that could prejudice the voter's normal desire to register.

10. States should provide absentee registration for voters who cannot register in person. Registration by mail and/or special canvassing should be used to allow all absent or handicapped citizens to register.

11. Literacy tests should not be a requisite for voting. Such tests assume that people who can't read do not deserve to have their interests represented. A human being, because he is a human being, has certain rights and responsibilities, and if a citizen cannot assume his responsibility because of a physical defect or lack of education he should be given a helping hand — not have his responsibility and his right taken from him.

12. Election day should be proclaimed a national Day of Dedication to our American democracy.

13. Polling places should be so equipped as to eliminate long waiting periods.

14. Polling places should be open throughout the day and remain open until at least 9 p.m.

15. The states should provide every possible protection against election fraud.

16. Voting by persons 18 years of age should be considered by the States.

17. Candidacy should be open to all. Minority parties and individuals should be permitted to enhance party competition and to run for office. Excessive primary costs and high filing fees, as well as inability to meet a previous election's required number of votes to get on the ballot, can hinder such healthy competition. Reasonable filing fees and minimum signature requirements are recommended.

18. The right to vote should be extended to those living on federal reservations. Several hundred thousand citizens living on federal land are ineligible to vote. The commision recommends that these people be allowed to vote as citizens of the state in which the federal land is located.

19. Absentee voting by mail should be allowed for all who are absent from home on primary or general election day.

20. The poll tax as a qualification for voting should be eliminated. (Since the commission's report this has been done by Constitutional amendment relative to federal offices, but not state).

21. Each state should keep informed on other states' practices and innovations in election administration.

How Does Your State Measure Up?

New Precedent Set as OCAW Wins Rehiring of Man Fired for Drinking

OCAW has won the reinstatement to his job of a member who was discharged for alcoholism by an oil company in the Long Beach, Calif., area in an arbitration case that may set a new benchmark in this sort of problem.

The arbitration case was presented for the union by Intl. Rep. Verlin McKendree. All other names are withheld in this case to protect the identity of the individual involved.

There was little doubt that the employe had given the company considerable grounds for discharge. He was charged with leaving the plant without permission, working under the influence of alcohol and being in possession of liquor on the plant premises. Furthermore, he had had three previous lapses due to alcoholism.

On the other hand, the employe had worked for the company for more than 20 years, including a military leave, before he first began showing signs of alcoholism three years ago. He was considered a well-qualified and satisfactory worker who had risen to the highest hourly rated job classification.

The arbitration board commended the oil company management for its patience and understanding in trying to help the man before ultimately firing him.

But the board further said:

"It is a well accepted principle in arbitration and industrial relations that the primary purpose of industrial discipline is not to inflict punishment for wrongdoing, but to correct individual faults and behavior and to prevent further infractions.

"Both the company and the employe lose when the employe is terminated. It is for this reason that discharge is normally invoked only as a last resort, after it has become abundantly clear that corrective measures will not succeed.

"Mr. ------ has a social-problem disease called alcoholism, for which there are no dramatic and quick cures. Current therapy focuses on attempts to arrest the disease and restore the person to a useful and respected role in society.

"This is no easy task, and most of the effort must come from the affected person himself. He must become aware of the problems that induced the disease; he must believe strongly that he has the ability to remain sober and he must practice rigorous self-discipline in his personal habits and his relations with others.

"The chances of successful rehabilitation are increased if the person has the understanding and cooperation of family, friends and society itself. Some risks are certainly involved, but the gains from success are of such inestimable value . . . that they seem to be worth the effort."

With that in mind, the arbitration board ordered the discharged man reinstated. It agreed that his offenses merited the severest disciplinary measures short of permanent dismissal; the man was given his job, but was not awarded the eight months back pay lost while the case was in dispute.

One of the mitigating points in the mind of the arbitrators was that during the time since his dismissal, the man had started a rehabilitation program to solve his drinking problem.

Job Accident Kills Member At Richmond

1-561 Joseph Scott, veteran member of Richmond, Calif., Local 1-561, was killed in an accident on the job at California Chemical Co. on February 29.

Scott suffered fatal injuries when he was pinned against a wall by the payloader he was driving. Efforts to save Scott by fellow workers Gus Karas, Howard Wilson and Sam Nahem were futile, as was use of city fire rescue equipment.

Scott is survived by his wife and three children. He had served his local as a steward and was a highly regarded member.

Local Sec. George A. Davis reports that this tragic accident serves to point up the need for "strong safety language in all OCAW agreements."

GEORGE W. CARLSON

Carlson Named Hammond City Council Head

7-507 George W. Carlson, veteran member of Argo, Ill., Local 7-507 and former International Executive Board member, recently was named president of the city council of Hammond, Ind., his home town.

Carlson has been chairman of the Sinclair group of the Argo local for several years. He has been a member of Hammond city council eight years.

In a speech of acceptance of his nomination, Carlson said that the job of the Hammond city government was to improve service. "Instead of cutting back we should do more to provide services for the people without fear of complaints. There are many areas in which this can be done. We can begin by adding police and firemen every year until we build up the forces. It is our duty to give service to the people," he said.

Carlson noted that when he first came on the council, he thought it important to cut taxes and that by hard work the council did manage a small cut then — which was promptly offset by an increase in school taxes.

Kentucky Group Votes for OCAW

Employes of Kentucky Hydrocarbon Co. at Langley, Ky., recently voted 25 to 2 to designate OCAW as their bargaining agent.

Intl. Rep. Virgil Miller conducted organization of the group.

Local Collects $931 For March of Dimes

4-245 Shreveport, La., Local 4-245 has collected $931.85 for the Ouachita Parish Central Trades and Labor Council March of Dimes drive, according to council chairman Jack Wuichet.

Your local union meeting is your opportunity to make suggestions as to how your union can operate better.

Mr. Hughes traces the story of the NAACP from its roots i the Niagara Movement and its founding in 1909 up to the present. The book is particularly useful for its colorful treatment of the civil rights struggle during the early decades of this century. Evets have been moving so fast that we need to be reminded of the great contributions of the early leaders: W. E. B. Dubois, Charles Houston, James, James Weldon oJhnson, Walter White, Mary White Ovington, Arthur B. Spingarn, and others.

Fight For Freedom takes us back to the 1920's when the NAACP carried forward the fight almost singlehanded, when the effort to bar lynching was the major thrust, when Northern cities were virtually as segregated in terms o fhotel and restaurant accommodations as in Birmingham, Alabama today. The story of the organization of the National Association emphasizes what is too often overlooked in the South, the fact that the NAACP is an inter-racial organization and always has been.

2/3 page

When the final history of the struggle for equality in 20th century America is written, the NAACP will oom as the most important, single, organized force in this effort. In the area of human relations the Association has herved as the conscience of the nation.

Fight For Freedom is a useful book. It is also disappointing. One somehow expects great things from a Langston Hughes work, and this is not a great book. There is little here that has not been told before, little by way of original insights into the great moral problem of our time. The limitations of the book may be primarily the limitations of its purpose. It is too obviously an official history of one organization. It is too concerned with numbers, dollars and status.

But Fight For Freedom is well worth reading. It reminds us of the continuity of our present efforts. It reminds us that the Fight for Freedom did not begin with the non-violent movement or even with the Supreme Court decision in the Brown case.

PAUL M. RILLING

PRESS RELEASE

NAACP LEGAL DEFENSE AND EDUCATIONAL FUND
10 COLUMBUS CIRCLE • NEW YORK, N. Y. 10019 • JUdson 6-8397

DR. ALLAN KNIGHT CHALMERS
President

JACK GREENBERG
Director-Counsel

CONSTANCE BAKER MOTLEY
Associate Counsel

SUPREME COURT RULES COURTESY TITLES FOR NEGROES IN SOUTHERN COURTROOMS

April 3, 1964

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The U.S. Supreme Court this week struck down a long standing southern courtroom tradition: the addressing of Negroes by their first names.

The high court upheld the objections of Mary Hamilton, Congress of Racial Equality field worker, who was represented by attorneys of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Jack Greenberg, director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which won the high court ruling, expressed "extreme pleasure" on learning of the ruling.

"This assures that southern judicial proceedings will be conducted with dignity and without racial insult.

"This is another milestone in procuring equal justice under law for all Americans," he said.

Mary Hamilton, CORE field secretary, was defendant in this case, which should have far reaching effects toward better treatment and respect for Negroes in southern courts.

Miss Hamilton appeared in an Alabama courtroom last June to answer charges growing out of demonstrations against racial discrimination.

The southern white solicitor, William Rayburn, addressed all Negro petitioners by their first names. Courtesy titles, such as "Miss," "Mrs.," "Mr." were used for white persons.

The incident erupted when the solicitor began cross-examining Miss Hamilton and asked her name.

"Miss Mary Hamilton," she replied.

The solicitor then addressed her as "Mary."

"Please address me correctly," Miss Hamilton answered.

The white lawyer ignored this request, and pressed his question, ending with "Mary." Miss Hamilton repeated her refusal to answer "until I am addressed correctly."

At this point, Norman Amaker, NAACP Legal Defense Fund assistant counsel, raised objections, pointing out that "her name is Miss Hamilton."

The judge ordered her to answer the question and when she refused until addressed correctly she was instantly sentenced to five days in jail plus a fifty dollar fine.

Legal Defense attorneys appealed the case to the Alabama Supreme Court, which upheld the lower court. From there they moved to the U.S. Supreme Court, which acted.

FEATURE PRESS SERVICE

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, 156 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 10, N.Y.

ERNEST ANGELL
Chairman
Board of Directors

EDWARD J. ENNIS
OSMOND K. FRAENKEL
General Counsel

JOHN de J. PEMBERTON, JR.
Executive Director

ORegon 5-5990

Alan Reitman, Associate Director
in Charge of Public Relations

WEEKLY BULLETIN #2199 April 13, 1964

ACLU QUESTIONS FOREIGN ASSETS CONTROL BARRING OF COMMUNIST CHINESE PROPAGANDA

The American Civil Liberties Union has raised the question of what appears to be a censorship operation by the Foreign Assets Control Division of the Treasury Department to bar written material, whether Communist propaganda or not, from mainland China.

In a letter to Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon last fall, Lawrence Speiser, director of the ACLU's Washington office, requested the Secretary to look into such censoring activities of the FAC. The ACLU reported that pamphlets and magazines sent by Anna Louise Strong from China to individuals in the United States had been returned to her stamped "Return to Sender -- Refused Entry -- FAC Violation." When Miss Strong later sent the material first class -- that is to say, outside the FAC purview of "merchandise or goods," it went through the mails without difficulty.

FAC regulations prohibit the unlicensed purchase abroad or the importation of goods and merchandise from Communist China, as part of the administration of the Trade with the Enemy Act. According to the Treasury Department, "a basic purpose of the regulations is to deprive the Communist Chinese of badly needed foreign exchange by the sale of their products directly or indirectly in the American market." It is on this basis that foreign publications come under FAC jurisdiction.

In its letter the ACLU said it was "aghast that leaflets and pamphlets or any written matter are considered by an agency of the United States Government as merchandise or goods." The letter strongly protests censoring activities such as the Strong incident, and calls attention to a 1962 Congressional law that in effect specifically permits entry into this country of Communist political propaganda.

The ACLU also queried the lack of correct procedure in the Strong case. According to Treasury Department regulations adopted in the wake of the 1962 law, Communist written material or propaganda may be imported by certain "exempt" categories such as government agencies, libraries, universities, and the like. However, any addressee not in these categories is entitled to be notified that material addressed to him has reached the United States, and to have the material delivered to him upon his request. Furthermore, the FAC exempts goods or merchandise valued at less than one dollar -- which the Strong material undoubtedly was. Yet the addressees of the Strong pamphlets were never notified that the material had arrived, and the mail was returned to China without regard to its value.

In its reply to ACLU, the Treasury Department denied that the FAC regulations constituted a censorship program. It noted the "exempt" categories referred to above, and the willingness of the Department to "license, on application, the importation of publications that have been sent as bona fide gifts from Communist China." The facts on the Strong incident, the letter declared, "can only be explained as an oversight."

BOSTON POLICE STUDY CALLS FOR CREATION OF CITIZEN ADVISORY BOARD

A recently-completed study examining the existence of police malfeasance in Boston and the relationship between the police and the community, especially minority group members, has called for sweeping changes in police procedure.

Among the changes recommended by the author of the study, Alan Gartner, a Florina Lasker Fellow in Civil Liberties and Civil Rights at Brandeis University, were: establishment of a citizen advisory board, revision of police recruitment and selection procedures, comprehensive training of officers in human relations and reforms in certain present Boston police procedures.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 5, 1964

LEHMAN FAMILY AIDS INTEGRATION VIA NAACP LEGAL DEFENSE FUND

NEW YORK, N.Y.--The family of the late Senator Herbert H. Lehman has started a drive to gain integrated educations for more Negro youth, it was announced here last week by Jack Greenberg of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

Director-Counsel Greenberg said that the initial grant of $60,000 will be administered by the Fund under the direction of Dr. John W. Davis, former president of West Virginia State College and Director of the Department of Teacher Information and Security of the Fund.

The Lehman Education Fund seeks to promote good-will and understanding through education by providing scholarships and financial assistance to students to enter desegregated schools, colleges and universities.

It seeks also to inform Negro parents of opportunities for their children to attend newly desegregated elementary and high schools.

The program, after a brief experimental phase, has just commenced functioning on the elementary and secondary levels. The Legal Defense Fund is about to launch the higher education phase for the forthcoming school year, Mr. Greenberg pointed out.

Miss Betty Stevens, southern school coordinator, joined the Fund staff in February of this year.

She visits southern Negro communities which request her services through local civil rights organizations or through the 120 cooperating attorneys of the Legal Defense Fund.

Her job is one of community organization. She informs Negro families of their right to attend schools desegregated by court actions won by the Fund.

She publicizes enrollment dates, assists in filling out application forms, helps allay fears that parents may have that their child will be the only Negro child in a newly desegregated school.

(more)

Miss Stevens' task is made difficult by the fact that the usual means of communication--radio, TV and press--are invariably denied.

Miss Stevens works through church and community groups...organizes door-to-door teams...makes mailings...and arranges for sessions to explain the mechanics of school application and transfer.

These procedures stress to Negro parents of elementary and secondary school youngsters the value of nonsegregated education. She attempts to show

*Negro parents how their children are being shortchanged as matriculants in inferior and segregated schools, *how segregation curtails the Negro child's motivation to study and learn, *how Negro parents can enroll or transfer their children to previously all-white schools.

In short, this program seeks to fill the gap between court edict and the reality of follow-through in the daily lives of citizens.

To date, Miss Stevens has conducted campaigns in the states of Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Virginia and Alabama.

The dramatic results of Miss Stevens' work document, Mr. Greenberg said, the willingness of Negro citizens to take advantage of desegregation decisions if they are properly informed how to do so and know their children will not be isolated as lone Negro students in formerly all-white schools.

She signed up 80 youngsters in Albany, Ga. in a single week; 50 in Jackson, Tenn. in two weeks; and 100 in Richmond, Va. in two weeks. She has also launched campaigns in Tampa, Fla., Lynchburg, Va. and Huntsville, Ala.

All these children will enter their new schools this September.

The Lehman Fund will also allow the Defense Fund to work on a college level, by providing scholarships and financial assistance to make possible a flow of Negro and white students into desegregated colleges and universities.

This phase of the program is still in formation.

The Fund will shortly have two additional southern school coordinators, Mr. Greenberg added. Judging by the response received thus far there is a vast need for this service, which will be expanded as rapidly as funds allow.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 5, 1964

SPECIAL GUESTS HONORED BY LEGAL DEFENSE FUND

NEW YORK, N.Y.--The name plaintiffs in the historic 1954 Supreme Court integration decision were among the special guests hailed here last week at the 25th anniversary Convocation of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

At the meetings, which celebrated the 1954 ruling as well as the 1939 founding of the Defense Fund as a separate organization, the five students were applauded for their role in breaking the barrier of Jim Crow.

The were Mrs. Linda Brown Smith of Topeka, Kan., whose name the famed ruling bears; Mrs. Ethel Belton Brown of Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. Dorothy Davis Bost of Prince Edward County, Va.; Spottswood Bolling, Jr. of Washington, D.C.; and Harry Briggs, Jr. of Clarendon County, S.C.

Also feted at the two-day Convocation were leaders of the civil rights struggle in Mississippi, Dr. Aaron Henry, president of the State Conference of the NAACP and Charles Evers, brother of martyred Mississippi NAACP Field Secretary Medger Evers, who is carrying on his brother's work.

FEATURE PRESS SERVICE

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, 156 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 10, N.Y.

ERNEST ANGELL
Chairman
Board of Directors

EDWARD J. ENNIS
OSMOND K. FRAENKEL
General Counsel

JOHN de J. PEMBERTON, JR.
Executive Director

ORegon 5-5990

Alan Reitman, Associate Director
in Charge of Public Relations

WEEKLY BULLETIN #2204

June 8, 1964

ACLU ATTACKS REGULATIONS FOR SALE OF PUBLICATIONS IN FEDERAL BUILDINGS

The American Civil Liberties Union announced on May 24 its opposition to regulations which have been proposed by the General Services Administration concerning the choice of publications to be sold by vendors in federal buildings. The stands are generally run by blind persons licensed by state agencies.

In a memorandum filed with the GSA and the Bureau of the Budget, the ACLU characterized the GSA's suggested criteria as "vague, redundant, arbitrary and restrictive.

"If a government agency undertakes to provide facilities for the distribution of publications," the ACLU said, "it must conform to the constitutional principles that protect the free press. We submit that the proposed General Services Administration standards regulating the sale of publications at vending stands in federal buildings fall short of these principles."

The ACLU urged the rejection of the GSA's proposed censorship criteria on the grounds that this type of censorship violates the right of the citizenry to sell to buy and to read written material of almost any nature without hindrance.

The selection of the publications in question became a public issue in January, 1963 when a GSA official in San Francisco, now retired, issued an "approved" list of magazines for concessionaires in his region. This list resulted in the removal of many nationally-known periodicals before it was rescinded in July, 1963, following criticism from the press and other sources. At that time the GSA began consideration of an overall policy to regulate the operation of vending stands in federal buildings. Its proposals are now before the Bureau of the Budget.

The GSA proposes to limit the sale of periodicals and publications to "those determined to be appropriately consistent with the public dignity and nature of governmental business transacted in the federal property wherein the vending facility is located." The decision would be made by the heads of the GSA regional offices and the state licensing agency. The criteria for determining whether its standard is being met would be examination of publications as to whether they:1)meet customer demand, preference and acceptance; 2) are "patently offensive;" 3) are in good taste "under the decency concepts of the average person;" are prohibited from sale by state or local law and 5) are barred from the mails.

The ACLU finds these criteria at fault both in their substance and because they would be difficult if not impossible to implement within constitutional limits.

Concerning the standard of customer demand, preference and acceptance, the civil liberties organization said: "If this criterion is intended to mean only that the vendor will stock publications which his experience shows meet the demands of the free market, then, of course, we have no objection. If, however, it is intended to mean that his stock must be acceptable to all his customers, then, of course, it is wholly objectionable. The power of the majority cannot be permitted to dictate the tastes of the minority." Commenting on the criteria of "patently offensive," the memorandum states: "This criterion is drawn from Manual Enterprises v. Day, 370 U.S. 478, but ignores half of the standard which the Supreme Court laid down. Patent offensiveness by itself is not enough. Without a showing that a publication has 'prurient interest' appeal, there can be no showing of obscenity. Outside the area of obscenity, this standard is equally deficient. If applied to political literature for example, there are those who find Communist publications, John Birch Society publications, and shades of opinion in between, to be patently offensive. Surely, however, there is no ground for suppression."

Both the Bureau of the Budget and the GSA responded to the ACLU memorandum stating that they would carefully consider the Union's views.

123

ACLU WITNESS OPPOSES CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO REVIVE RELIGIOUS EXERCISES IN SCHOOLS

A leading New York clergyman, appearing before the House Judiciary Committee on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union on May 21, strongly condemned proposed constitutional amendments to permit prayers in the schools. The Rev. Edward O. Miller, Rector of St. George's Episcopal Church of New York City, warned that "the threat is not the secularisation of our schools but the secularization of our religion."

The Protestant leader was one of a series of persons to testify before the House panel on amendments offered by Representative Frank J. Becker and other Congressmen. All would have the effect of reversing the U.S. Supreme Court decisions of 1962 and 1963, which outlawed prayers and Bible-reading in the public schools.

Contrary to the opinion of the Court's detractors, Rev. Miller argued, "you cannot kill God by a Supreme Court decision." He said the high court's decisions did not impair religious freedom, because individuals could apply the remedy suggested by President Kennedy: to "pray a good deal more at home...."

He expressed the belief that American home and community life and the American churches cannot be so weak that government help is needed to inculcate religious values and inspire prayer. It is not the Court's decisions, but the proposed amendments which represent a great threat to the religious liberty enjoyed by all under "the brave American experiment" of the secular state, the Rev. Miller said.

He suggested Thomas Jefferson's "Bill for Establishing Religious Freedom" in colonial Virginia, and the religion clause of the First Amendment to the Constitution set a bold new precedent in the development of church-state relations. Previous to this period, the clergyman noted, observance of a "civic religion" inseparable from civic responsibility was obligatory in all civilizations and cultures. He said the Protestant Reformation was a great step forward for religious freedom, because it encouraged "religious territorialism" and permitted unhappy subjects of any one monarch to migrate to a more satisfactory religious climate.

The First Amendment declares that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.... The essence of the 'no-establishment' clause," the Rev. Miller contended, "was that there would be no 'official' civic religion to which all loyal citizens must pay at least lip-service. A lesser part of this provision was the guarantee that no church or ecclesiastical hierarchy would be supported by taxation, but that was subordinate to, and implementive of, the protection against religious qualifications for citizenship," he added.

Rev. Miller remarked that in spite of the First Amendment prohibition, "vestiges of the establishment pattern of European Christendom persisted in America for many decades after the beginning of our noble experiment." Among such "vestiges" he named theistic qualifications for oaths of office, Protestant practices in civic ceremonies and institutions, school Bible-reading, etc. The Episcopal leader said it was natural that the groups who had created these secular but sectarian institutions would declare themselves "shocked" by the Supreme Court's efforts to place persons of all religious persuasions on an equal footing, by eliminating the religious institutions.

Yet, the preservation of such institutions presents two grave dangers, Rev. Miller warned. On the one hand, absolute majority rule would bring "divisive sectarianism..., with a strong pattern of Mormon practices provided for school districts in Utah, Roman Catholic sacramentalism in Boston and New York City, and Black Muslim rites in Harlem and South Chicago." And on the other hand, adoption of a vague, weak non-sectarian religion would, he charged, "be a regression to Constantinianism, if not to the emperor-cult of pagan Rome, where a single attenuated religion was the universal test of civic belonging." Such a non-sectarian religion would encourage the growth of a local, as opposed to cosmopolitan, culture, in which persons would be unable to imagine others different from themselves, Rev. Miller said. "For members of the minority, who are no less citizens because their faith is different, the result is not merely a moment or two of inconvenience but an impairment of equal citizenship," he added.

DELAWARE CLU CHAPTER DECRIES RESTRICTIONS ON TEACHER "PARTISAN POLITICAL ACTIVITY"

The Delaware Chapter of the Greater Philadelphia Branch of the ACLU recently issued a report asking the University of Delaware to delete provisions in its faculty handbook which the Chapter said infringed on academic freedom. Under the heading "Engagement in Political Activity", the handbook said: "The position of the University of Delaware as a state-assisted but non-political institution imposes on faculty members special responsibilities for the use of good judgment in political matters. In general, members of the Faculty are expected to refrain from partisan political activity, especially at the State level... Faculty members proposing to engage in political activity of any sort are expected to notify the President of the University in advance...."

Among its arguments against the restrictions on outside political activity the ACLU report stated: "The Handbook falsely equates 'good judgment' with refraining from political activity 'especially at the State level.' The debates in our State's highest councils need the enrichment that would come from engagement in partisan political activity by the trained minds of our University's faculty. The Handbook contains no definition of 'good judgment,' hence the entire statement, which is premised on the necessity to exercise 'good judgment' has no meaning. If 'good judgment' means the honest judgment of the teacher according to his own best lights, the entire statement is useless; if... somebody else's judgment is involved, the policy constitutes an interference with the teacher's judgment and hence an infringement on academic freedom.

"The implication of the Handbook provision is clear that the judgment to be exercised is to be that of the University's President. Otherwise, why the requirement of clearing with him? A college president is the last person with whom a faculty member should have to clear his outside activities.

"The faculty was not consulted in determining the provisions of the Handbook.

"Stripped of all the verbiage, the provision of the Handbook seeks to empower the University's President to censor political activities of the faculty. This is especially serious at Delaware because (a) there is no tenure and (b) there is no salary scale, and (c) there is no ... faculty group which must be consulted with respect to discipline or dismissal of the faculty members."

University officials explained that the policy, which had been in effect for years, was born out of a concern for the effect of political activity on the teacher's academic work. The Handbook does not limit participation in local community government.

The position advanced by the Delaware chapter was based on the principles put forth by the ACLU's Academic Freedom Committee in 1956 which stated: "In his private capacity the teacher should be as free as any other citizen to participate in political, religious, and social movements and organizations and in any other lawful activity, and to hold and to express publicly his political, religious, economic, and other views."

CIVIL LIBERTIES BRIEFS

IN A COLUMN in the December 15, 1963 issue of the Toledo Blade, Eric Sevareid spoke of the treatment given Lee Oswald, suspected assassin of President Kennedy. He sharply criticized what he called the growing practice "in this age of publicity" of convicting individuals before they are tried -- by the police, the FBI, and the news media. ... THE U.S. SUPREME COURT has turned down the ACLU of Southern California's appeal from a California Supreme Court ruling that Los Angeles can require users of school facilities to pledge in advance to refrain from using school property for any illegal purpose. The high court held against ACLU's contention that the Los Angeles rule unconstitutionally denied the rights of free speech and assembly, stating that the rule did not inquire of political beliefs, merely asked for a statement of intention not to use school facilities to commit illegal acts. ... DUE TO ACLU INTERVENTION, Dr. D. N. Pritt, a London barrister invited to speak at Carnegie Hall in New York last fall, was granted a visitor's visa for entry to the U.S., which was first denied him. ... A STORM OF PROTEST was raised by a report that a film about President Johnson made by the U.S. Information Agency omitted a scene showing a rabbi, in order to avoid Arab objections. USIA denied censorship, but Senator Keating of New York and three N.Y. Congressmen protested USIA policy, and Dr. Joachim Prinz, president of the American Jewish Congress, declared that the USIA forbad showing of things relating to the Jewish faith in order not to disturb Middle Eastern countries. ... SPEAKING BEFORE the Greater Pittsburgh Chapter of the ACLU, Irving Brant, editor and author, strongly criticized Common Pleas Court Judge Gwilym Price Jr. for accompanying police to a downtown theater to protest the showing of allegedly obscene movies. Brant warned American citizens to be alert to dangerous attacks on their civil liberties.... THE BANNING of a Jane Mansfield movie by county and city officials without resort to legal proceedings was condemned by the Pittsburgh chapter of the ACLU.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

June 11, 1964

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

LEGAL DEFENSE FUND BREAKS U. OF MISSISSIPPI BARRIER

JACKSON, MISS.--A federal judge this week issued a temporary restraining order requiring University of Mississippi officials to admit 18-year old Cleveland Donald, Jr., a Negro transfer student, for the University's 1964 summer session, which began today. Acting on a motion brought by NAACP Legal Defense Fund attorneys, Judge William Harold Cox of the Southern District of Mississippi enjoined further efforts to block Donald's immediate admission, thereby opening the door for the third Negro to enter that state's university.

In 1962, James H. Meredith became the first Negro to enter a previously segregated Mississippi college after lengthy litigation. Meredith graduated in August, 1963. In June, 1963, Cleve McDowell became the first Negro to enter the Univeristy of Mississippi Law School, but was expelled in September after being apprehended with a gun on campus.

Donald is thus the only Negro in attendance at Ole Miss, as Legal Defense Fund attorneys are currently appealing McDowell's expulsion to federal court. They contend that McDowell had a right under state law to have a gun while traveling on the state highways.

Efforts to Continue

Legal Defense Fund attorney Derrick A. Bell, who appeared last week on Donald's behalf, indicated that he was extremely pleased with Judge Cox's decision and stated, "We shall continue our efforts to convince federal judges at the District Court level of the correctness of our position in civil rights cases." Mr. Bell was joined in the action by Director-Counsel Jack Greenberg and Associate Counsel Constance Baker Motley in New York and by Carsie A. Hall, Fund cooperating attorney in Jackson.

(more)

Donald has completed one year at predominantly Negro Tougaloo College in Jackson and plans a pre-law course, with a major in political science. He applied for transfer in February, 1964. His application was provisionally approved by University officials in May, but before final admission could be obtained, the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning intervened.

The Board, a state body whose members are appointed by the Governor, ordered the University to defer action on Donald's application while they sought an opinion in federal court as to whether the Meredith decision required them to admit all Negroes who applied. Legal Defense Fund lawyers contended that the prior decision had been a "class action," requiring the admission of all qualified Negroes, but rather than litigate this issue--which would probably have required a long time--they brought on June 6th a new action seeking immediate relief for Donald, whose education will not be delayed.

In support of their motion, Defense Fund attorneys obtained affidavits showing that the University officials had made careful preparations for Donald's admission and protection, and that delaying his entrance would not only be detrimental to him scholastically, but would interfere with the University's plans to enroll him peacefully at the school. They further argued that the Board's action was designed merely to perpetuate racial segregation at the University.

Ruling in favor of the Legal Defense Fund attorneys, Judge Cox gave little consideration to the Board's contention that the admission of Donald would lead to riots and possible bloodshed on campus and elsewhere in Mississippi. The Defense Fund had noted that the large number of teachers, the high proportion of married students and the scholastic pressures of the accelerated summer program made it unlikely that Donald's admission would occasion events similar to those occurring at Meredith's admission.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 16, 1964

DEFENSE FUND TRIUMPHS IN MEMPHIS SCHOOL CASE

MEMPHIS, TENN.-- The board of education was instructed to speed school desgregation, to redraw zoning lines and to consider a plan for integrating teaching staffs by a Sixth Circuit court here last week.

The court acted on an appeal by the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Struck down was the board's previous desegregation plan, under which integration would not have reached all grades until after 1970. The new ruling requires that all elementary schools be integrated this September, junior high schools in 1965, and senior high schools in 1966.

Defense Fund attorneys had pointed out that as of this year, only 294 of the 50,953 Negro youngsters in Memphis attended school with the 54,684 white students. Desegregation began with 12 students in 1961, after a year and a half of litigation by the Legal Defense Fund.

The court further ordered that new school zones be set up. Fund lawyers had argued that when the board had done away with dual zone lines (separate maps applied to the two races), it had formed new zones by irregular lines or by gerrymandering, thus maintaining a high degree of segregation.

Two other arguments made by the Defense Fund were heeded by the court. In outlawing the board's minority transfer plan, the judges ruled that the plan was designed to perpetuate segregation by allowing pupils to switch from bi-racial schools.

(more)

In addition, the court cited its own decision in a case brought by the Legal Defense Fund against the Chattanooga Board of Education, in which it ruled that "assignment of teachers by race may impair the students' rights to an education free from any consideration of race." The judges asked the federal district judge to determine whether the Memphis Board should submit a plan for teacher desegregation.

Arguing the case for the Legal Defense Fund was Assistant Counsel Derrick A. Bell. He was joined in the action by Fund Director-Counsel Jack Greenberg and Associate Counsel Constance Baker Motley of New York, and Fund cooperating attorneys R.B. Sugarmon Jr. and A.W. Willis Jr. of Memphis.

Also participating in the suit were cooperating attorneys B.L. Hooks, H.J. Lockard, and B.F. Jones, all of Memphis.

- 30 -

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 16, 1964

DEFENSE FUND ASKS U.S. SUPREME COURT TO REVERSE FREEDOM RIDER CONVICTIONS

James Farmer Among Petitioners

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund last week asked the nation's highest court to review the convictions of James Farmer, national director of CORE, and 28 other "Freedom Riders" arrested in 1961 in Jackson, Miss.

The appeal by Defense Fund Director-Counsel Jack Greenberg to the Supreme Court represents the fifth step in the lengthy defense of the 303 persons who attempted peacefully to desegregate that city's bus and railroad terminal facilities.

The State of Mississippi required separate trials for each of the 303 Freedom Riders, all of whom were convicted of breach of peace and disorderly conduct in City Court, fined from two hundred to five hundred dollars and given sentences ranging from 60 days, suspended,to four months in jail, not suspended.

Two decided to pay their fines and serve their sentences, and on appeals to the County Court, 54 others chose not to contest the charges, accepting fines and suspended sentences. Bond money in excess of $370,000.00 had to be raised for those who continued to appeal.

Last week's action on behalf of Mr. Farmer and the other 28 leaves over 200 cases pending at various levels of the Mississippi courts. Defense Fund attorneys had repeatedly asked that the cases be consolidated, as the facts and charges were practically identical, but Mississippi repeatedly denied this request.

Mississippi's unusual requirement of separate trials, held two a day over many months, has brought Defense Fund legal expenses in this case to more than $70,000.00. Those who sought new trials in County Court had their convictions affirmed and their sentences increased to $500.00 fines and four months in jail.

(more)

The cases continued at snail's pace on appeals to the Circuit Court and the Mississippi Supreme Court throughout 1962 and 1963. The state courts consistently refused to consider the constitutional arguments raised by Defense Fund lawyers, and in March of this year the Mississippi Supreme Court affirmed the convictions appealed last week.

Jackson Police Captain J.L. Ray, who made the arrests immediately upon the arrival of the racially mixed groups at the terminals of the Greyhound and Trailways bus lines and the Illinois Central Railroad Station, repeatedly testified that the defendants were at all times peaceful.

It was their "presence," their refusal to leave the terminals, that was offered as evidence of guilt. Captain Ray cited the "ugly and angry" mood of gathered white persons as a reason for asking the Freedom Riders to leave, but at no time did he arrest any of those who threatened to create disturbances.

Among the defendants are several whose bus was overturned and burned near Anniston, Ala. on the way to Jackson. Others arrived by train from Memphis in the drive to test interstate travel facilities throughout the South.

In support of the appeal submitted last week to the U.S. Supreme Court, Legal Defense Fund attorneys made the following points:

*the convictions violate due process of law, as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment, in that the records show no evidence of guilt;

*the convictions violate due process of law, since the breach of the peace statute is so vague as to give no ascertainable standard of guilt, and fails to warn of the conduct punishable;

*the arrests, prosecutions, and convictions fly in the face of due process and equal protection of the laws, since they were "designed to enforce racial segregation required by state statutes and by ordinance of the City of Jackson in interstate facilities;"

(more)

*the convictions violate the First and Fourteenth Amendments, since the Freedom Riders were exercising their rights of free expression and assembly in their peaceful actions;

*the prosecutions violated the "Commerce Clause" of the U.S. Constitution (Art. 1, Sect. 8, clause 3), since they placed an illegal burden on commerce. Federal law forbids racial discrimination in interstate travel facilities.

The State now has a month in which to reply to the Defense Fund brief, after which the high court will decide whether or not it will review the convictions. Because of the summer recess, a decision is not likely until after the Court convenes in the fall.

Joining Director-Counsel Greenberg in the appeal were James M. Nabrit III and Derrick A. Bell of the Defense Fund's New York headquarters, and Jack Young, Carsie A. Hall and R. Jess Brown, Fund cooperating attorneys in Jackson.

Messrs. Young, Hall and Brown are the only lawyers in the entire state of Mississippi who handle civil rights cases.

Of counsel in the proceedings were Carl Rachlin, general counsel of CORE, and Leroy D. Clark and Michael Meltsner of the Legal Defense Fund.

- 30 -

WALL STREE JOURNAL

June 22, 1964

Policing Civil Rights

Administration Seeks To Ease Way for South In Accepting New Law

Projects Under Way to Get Fast, Peaceful Compliance; Courtroom Headaches Seen

Will Big Firms Take Lead?

By JAMES HARWOOD
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

WASHINGTON—Now that Congress is nearing passage of far-reaching civil rights legislation, the Johnson Administration is searching for short-cuts that might help get Dixie's citizens to accept the measure gracefully and thus minimize touchy enforcement problems.

Otherwise, Administration strategists fear the coming law may bear few of the racial-equality fruits promised during the long months of Congressional consideration; enforcement by outright compulsion alone would be tortuous and slow. And civil rights advocates might feel more impelled to carry their struggle into the streets this summer.

Even before the bill passes, Administration agents are trooping the South to set up quick voluntary compliance with its provisions, particularly in desegregation of public accommodations and schools. Much of this missionary work is being done by such race relations groups as the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta and the Potomac Institute here in Washington. This week the council is sponsoring an Atlanta gathering of about 30 representatives of women's groups, including the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Council of Catholic Women and National Council of Jewish Women, coming from such Southern cities as Charlotte, New Orleans, Birmingham and Tampa; they'll hear advice on how they can assist home-town compliance on public accommodations. Last Friday the Potomac Institute held a strategy session with representatives of similar groups to plan distribution of "campaign" literature designed to show Southerners that any economic loss from past desegregation moves has been minor.

Meeting With Southerners

So far Federal officials and national business, labor and church leaders have held more than a dozen meetings with local Southern groups, such as chambers of commerce, seeking to promote peaceful compliance. A particular hope is that bigger businesses will take the lead in desegregating such public accommodations as hotels, motels, theaters and restaurants and that smaller proprietors might then fall peacefully into line. While no firm commitments from individual companies have been won so far, some are expected now that the Senate has finally passed the bill.

Julius Manger, chairman of the New York-based Manger Hotel chain with several Southern hotels, and other cooperating businessmen are striving to persuade local Southern leaders that resistance is futile. Says a Government official coordinating the activity: "We are trying to convince them that putting off compliance is only buying trouble for a town. This isn't like prohibition. The law isn't going to go away."

Leaders of the missionary bands believe their forays have set the stage for some immediate compliance in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Arkansas, Tennessee and Texas, if only in the larger cities. Breakthroughs are looked for in such Dixie landmarks as Savannah and Columbus, Ga.; Nashville, Tenn.; Spartanburg and Charleston, S.C.

In some racially moderate cities where breakthroughs have long since been made, Government men are counting heavily on local initiative to extend the desegregation trend. Toward that end, a subcommittee of the Atlanta coordinating committee, a biracial group appointed by Mayor Ivan Allen, will hold an initial meeting on Wednesday to speed public accommodations compliance in Georgia's biggest city, starting with a scrutiny of what the Senate-passed bill requires. On hand will be some 30 representatives of restaurants and other retail businesses.

Courtroom Strategies

In case the voluntary efforts fall short, Justice Department attorneys are beginning to draft courtroom strategies that might produce the most results in the simplest fashion. Assistant Attorney General Burke Marshall, who will be in charge of the department's efforts to enforce the law, says he expects considerable litigation along with voluntary compliance, and civil rights groups have indicated they will try for early court tests of the legislation. The simplest legal actions may add up to an awesome task. During the new law's first year, the department expects to ask Congress to double its present civil rights staff of about 55 lawyers and boost its annual appropriation by more than $1 million.

Meantime, officials at the Health, Education and Welfare Department are charting plans to help schools shed racial barriers, including a scheme for "back-alley academies" where Southern teachers could quietly prepare to cope with integration problems. And the U.S. Civil Rights Commission is pondering past school desegregation cases, searching for keys to quick transformation elsewhere.

Because most of the Government's civil rights talent has been committed to getting a bill passed rather than preparing for its enforcement, there's a frenzied air about the current preparations. In the rush, some of the less urgent matters, such as planning for enforcement of fair employment provisions that won't take effect for another year, are being deliberately allowed to wait.

Right now, some Administration officials see themselves in a race to get meaningful results before segregationist leaders, such as Alabama's Gov. George Wallace, rally Southern resistance like that following the 1954 Supreme Court decision against school segregation. This summer's promised civil rights demonstrations also threaten to inflame local sentiment in the South, making compliance harder to achieve. Furthermore, President Johnson knows that lack of prompt achievements from such a highly touted bill could stir disaffection among Democratic-inclined Negro voters this November.

Please Turn to Page 12, Column 2

Continued From First Page

Problem of Acceptance

No amount of effort, it's conceded, will alter the fact that gaining public acceptance for the measure will be far more difficult than passing it, tough as that job has been. Civil rights advocates in and out of Government expect that this summer itself may demonstrate that the measure won't exactly shift the civil rights struggle from the streets to the courts, as former President Kennedy hoped when he proposed it.

But in border areas and some Southern metropolitan centers, Government prompting backed by the new law is expected to accelerate desegregation in such important fields as jobs, public accommodations, and schools.

In the school field, for example, "the bill is coming at a time when it may have the most tangible effect," one Justice Department official declares, explaining that the Government has already done a lot of spadework with Southern school districts, notably in Florida and Texas, trying to get voluntary desegregation. One new target could be Gulfport, Miss. The official says that "five years ago many school districts would have waited to be sued" under the bill's new authority for the Government to institute antisegregation suits. "Now many will just go ahead," he ventures.

Not only can school districts expect considerably more Federal prodding now, but the Government will stand ready, with financial and other help, to ease the pain of transition. The bill provides that communities can get Federal funds to hire advice from private sources on how to desegregate.

One official frankly calls this a "kind of bribe money." The idea, he explains, is to first unsheathe the threat of court suit, then hope local officials will reason this way: "The Government is going to sue. It will cost us money to defend the case. The law makes it clear we'll probably lose. So if we've got to do it, we might as well get some Federal money to help us."

The bill also authorizes the U.S. Commissioner of Education to set up special "institutes" to train school personnel to deal with desegregation problems. HEW officials now are seeking Southern colleges willing to set up summer training sessions that "teachers can slip off to unnoticed." It's thought such schools will have some euphemistic title like "special education problems institute" that won't give away their real purpose.

"The less publicity the better," a Government official says. "Teachers go off to 'educational institutes' all the time for one reason or another. We hope they can attend these racially oriented ones without attracting local attention."

Equally covert are Government efforts to public accommodations compliance. Under the new law's provisions, lawyers say, there won't be many businesses that can legally seek patronage from the public without welcoming all races. Such sweeping coverage of thousands of shopkeepers raises massive problems of enforcement. So the emphasis will be on persuasion rather than courtroom compulsion.

Drive Will Step Up

After the bill is passed, the drive for voluntary compliance will step up, as a new Federal agency, the Community Relations Service, swings into action. When Negroes complain they've been turned away from soda fountains, theaters or similar establishments, the agency will intervene and try to settle the dispute peacefully.

Where efforts at voluntary compliance fail, however, the Government will go to court. And that may surely be necessary in such a Deep South state as Mississippi. "Few Mississippians are expected to throw their doors open to Negroes simply because Congress has passed a law," one attorney says.

In such a state, prosecutors could be heading into a legal labyrinth. Lawsuits in the public accommodations field will break completely new ground. Justice Department lawyers say it isn't certain that a court could enjoin a whole townful of merchants to stop discriminating; if not, each one might have to be prosecuted individually—an almost impossible task. Even if large groups could be enjoined, one attorney muses, the courts might be faced with wholesale problems of contempt actions against individuals refusing to comply with court orders. Moreover, before the Government can win a case, it must show the alleged discrimination is part of a broad "pattern or practice" of racial bias. These three words could take years to define in court, attorneys fear.

Looking at such problems, one of President Johnson's civil rights advisers even goes so far as to say, "I don't think the bill will do much good, except in the marginal Southern areas that have shown progress already."

Only as a last resort, Administration spokesmen say, will the Government resort to the bill's most drastic provision: Cutting off funds from Federally assisted programs administered locally on a segregated basis. The Government already is acting to remove racial bars in certain aid programs; it will help build no more segregated hospitals, for example. But many considerations argue against any sweeping shutoff of Federal money to Southern states.

"The most difficult area will probably concern welfare payments," a HEW official says. "Suppose we believe Negroes on old-age assistance are being helped at only segregated facilities. And state officials tell us, 'Go ahead and cut them off. Then the Negroes won't get any benefits.' What does the Federal Government do then? I'm afraid I don't have the answer. The last thing we want to do is cut off funds."

Farther down the road, lawyers expect, will be knotty legal questions surrounding the bill's anti-job-discrimination features. A new five-member Federal Equal Employment Opportunities Commission will set standards for unlawful employment practices much as the National Labor Relations Board determines unfair labor practices. To back up the commission in court the Justice Department must again prove discrimination was part of a "pattern or practice," whether by the employer or by the community. Because of the intricate questions of job qualifications, Government lawyers fear these cases might be far more difficult than ones involving whether a Negro was refused service at a lunch counter.

Breather for Business

The job provisions of the new law won't be effective for a year after the President signs it, to let businesses prepare for the changes. Because of the time lapse, firm preparations for enforcing this section will not be made for several months.

Though the Administration considers the bill's voting rights provisions highly important, they mainly follow up more basic safeguards enacted in 1957 and 1960; the new provisions are expected to make it easier for the Justice Department to prove voting-discrimination charges in court.

In all its enforcement planning, the Administration is concentrating on the South almost to the exclusion of the North—assuming that's what Congress intends. "It's become pretty clear that we're not supposed to mess around in the North," one HEW official declares. Lawyers say the "patterns or practices" provisions in effect rule out Government participation when Negroes complain of individual instances of job or accommodations discrimination in the North. Moreover, the law would require the Government to first yield to state anti-discrimination agencies, which exist mainly outside the South. And the bill includes a blunt notice that nothing therein will pertain to so-called "de-facto" school segregation resulting from racially imbalanced neighborhoods.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP
Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 24, 1964

U.S. SUPREME COURT UPSETS SIT IN CONVICTIONS OF 77

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The convictions of 77 peaceful sit-in demonstrators were voided here this week by the U.S. Supreme Court, ruling on ten cases originating in five southern states.

The high court based its decisions on various grounds in acting on the appeals in ten separate cases, seven of them brought by Legal Defense Fund lawyers. Fund attorneys assisted in the other three.

It was the fourth consecutive year that Defense Fund actions led to legal victories in the Supreme Court vindicating the efforts of Negroes to obtain non-discriminatory service in facilities open to the public.

According to Fund Director-Counsel Jack Grenberg, this week's decisions will lead to the voiding of hundreds of sit-in convictions now pending on appeal. The Civil Rights Act of 1964 will guarantee service in places of public accommodations in the future, Mr. Greenberg added.

Among the grounds for its decisions in upsetting the sit-in convictions, the high court held:

*that Maryland courts should re-examine one case in light of subsequent passage of state public accommodations laws;

*that South Carolina students had no fair warning that the trespass law applied to failure to leave upon request;

*that there was no evidence, in the case of five other South Carolina students, of breach of the peace;

*that Florida's policy of segregation was embodied in a rule requiring restaurants to have separate washrooms.

(more)

The Supreme Court also agreed to hear next term Legal Defense Fund appeals on behalf of 14 more sit-in defendants from South Carolina and Arkansas.

This week's court actions were the last until the nine justices return in the fall. In addition to securing victories in the sit-in decisions, Legal Defense Fund lawyers won numerous historic cases in the 1963-64 term just ended. These include:

*a ruling that school desegregation in the south must proceed at a faster rate, and that Atlanta's grade-a-year and pupil-assignment plans are insufficient;

*a ruling that Negroes are entitled to courteous treatment in southern courtrooms, and may not be addressed by their first names;

*an affirmation of the principle that criminal convictions by juries from which Negroes have been sytematically excluded are unconstitutional;

*a refusal to review a lower court decision outlawing discrimination against Negro physicians and patients in publicly supported hospitals;

*a judgment reversing the convictions of 438 Negro students arrested while peacefully demonstrating against discrimination in Orangeburg and Rock Hill, S.C.

In all, the Legal Defense Fund took part in 26 actions in the Supreme Court this term, more than any other organization except the U.S. Department of Justice.

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397

NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

June 26, 1964

YOUTH - LAWYER PARTNERSHIP HAILED FOR RIGHTS TRIUMPHS

Defense Fund Announces Summer Attack on Lawlessness

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The unusual partnership of young people and lawyers "will push the country over the top on civil rights faster than anyone ever would guess it could be done," NAACP Legal Defense Fund Director-Counsel Jack Greenberg told the Youth Banquet of the national NAACP Convention here this week.

At the same time, Mr. Greenberg revealed Legal Defense Fund plans to combat the growing wave of lawlessness on the part of Southern officials and citizens' groups.

For the summer, the Defense Fund will have the services of W. Robert Ming and his Chicago law firm and of Charles P. Morgan Jr. of Washington. "Both are superb professionals in this struggle," Mr. Greenberg said.

Attorney Ming is "one of the foremost civil rights lawyers and scholars in the country," Mr. Greenberg noted. Mr. Morgan was "the only white lawyer in Birmingham, Ala. with courage to speak up against the outrages of that city, and as a reward was driven from it."

Mr. Greenberg further announced an increase in the Defense Fund staff to 17 full-time lawyers. He added that top law professors are conducting a series of seminars under Fund auspices "to sharpen the training of our 120 cooperating lawyers throughout the South, without whom there would be no such thing as civil rights in their communities.

"Our goal is that when there is a job to be done, there should be a lawyer available to do it," Mr. Greenberg stated.

(more)

In his talk to the assembled young paople, Mr. Greenberg traced the pace-setting role of the law that led to the historic precedent of Brown v. Board of Education in 1954.

Lashing out at tokenism, Mr. Greenberg warmly praised the youths who, in seeing through the "hypocrisy of our community leaders," initiated the sit-ins and peaceful demonstrations in the '60's.

"It is no accident that the sit-ins began in Greensboro, N.C. and rapidly spread through Raleigh, Durham, Charlotte and elsewhere in that state because those are the communities where tokenism was practiced as a fine art," he continued.

Mr. Greenberg said that attorneys are now at work to secure enforcement of the precedents Legal Defense Fund suits have created over the years. He stressed the efforts to integrate schools and hospitals, and to defend demonstrators.

Citing the recent U.S. Supreme Court reversal of 77 sit-in convictions, Mr. Greenberg emphasized that the law has repeatedly sanctioned peaceful demonstrating, and that "violence almost always has come from white supremacists.

"The hallmark of a demonstration is what NAACP youth and the youth of other organizations were doing when they quietly sat at the lunch counters all over the South, or paraded on the state house grounds and made solemn witness against the greatest moral crime that exists in this country.

"We will triumph if we keep it that way, as I am sure we will," Mr. Greenberg told the banquet meeting.

- 30 -

10 Columbus Circle
New York, N.Y. 10019
JUdson 6-8397
NAACP

Legal Defense and Educational Fund

PRESS RELEASE

President
Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers
Director-Counsel
Jack Greenberg
Associate Counsel
Constance Baker Motley

July 10, 1964

ATLANTA RESTAURANT SUIT
TO TEST NEW 'RIGHTS ACT

NAACP Legal Defense Fund Attorneys Score Historic "First"

ATLANTA, GA.--Federal District Judge Frank A. Hooper here has named Friday (July 17th) as the day on which the new civil rights act will be tested.

NAACP Legal Defense Fund attorneys secured an order to have segregationist restaurant owner Lester Maddox "show cause" why Negro citizens should not be served.

The suit, filed by Legal Defense Fund Cooperating Attorney William Alexander, is in behalf of three Atlanta clergymen.

It is the nation's first suit to enforce Title Two of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. It is also the first suit of a series of suits to be filed in hard core southern states, according to Constance Baker Motley, associate counsel of the Fund.

In the Atlanta suit, George S. Willis Jr., Woodrow T. Lewis and Albert L. Dunn, all clergymen and students at the Interdenominational Theological Center here, asked the U.S. District Court for an injunction against discriminatory practices of Maddox and the Pickrick Restaurant.

The plaintiffs, acting on behalf of themselves and other Negro citizens of Atlanta, were "denied and deprived" service at the Pickrick on Friday, July 3rd.

Maddox, on that day, confronted the neatly dressed Negro clergymen with a drawn pistol. He called for Pickrick customers to grab ax handles (which he keeps in a box at the door) and charge the Negroes.

(more)

Some of his customers, including women, responded and descended on the Negroes, who retreated, saying they would return.

The complaint states that discimination against Negroes at the Pickrick is in violation of plaintiffs' rights to full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages and accommodations of places of public accommodation.

The Pickrick restaurant serves and offers to serve interstate travelers. Its operations affect travel, trade, traffic, commerce and transportation between states. A substantial portion of the food it serves moves in commerce.

This places it precisely within the scope of the new civil rights act.

Meanwhile in New York City, Jack Greenberg, Fund director-counsel, announced that his staff "is prepared to move quickly and vigorously in any community where there is interference with or violation of Negro citizens' rights secured by the new act."

A survey this week of the Fund's 120 cooperating attorneys in deep south and border states indicates that compliance to date has been good.

However, several suits are imminent in Alabama at this time and the Fund staff has been augmented in the event pockets of defiance erupt, Greenberg said.

Joining Alexander and Mrs. Motley in the Atlanta suit was Assistant Counsel Michael Meltsner of the Fund's New York City headquarters.

- 30 -

From Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia For immediate release 1964

SOCIOLOGIST TO SPEAK AT ATLANTA UNIVERSITY

Atlanta, Georgia, April 2 - Special -

Atlanta University Department of Sociology will present Dr. T. Lynn Smith as the guest speaker at a lecture to be held in Dean Sage Auditorium on Monday, April 6, at 8:00 p. m. The public is cordially invited to attend this lecture. Dr. Smith's topic will be "The Homogenization of American Society."

Receiving both his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees in Sociology from the University of Minnesota, Dr. Smith visited each of the twenty Latin American countries in 1951 as a Guggenheim Fellow gathering materials for demographic studies of Latin America. His book, Brazil: People and Institutions, included some of his findings. In 1962, he served as a member of the faculty for the First International Course on Agrarian Reform held in San Jose, Costa Rica, under the auspices of the Inter-American Development Bank and the Food and Agriculture Organization. Dr. Smith holds honorary doctorates from the University of Brazil and the University of Sao Paulo and in 1953 was decorated by the Brazilian Government with the Order of the Southern Cross.

While at the University, Dr. Smith will give two lectures to students and faculty only, the series of three lectures being made possible by a grant from the American Sociological Society.

A Deep South quest for "militant teen-age segregationists" through the dusty, drouth-plagued October glare of Mississippi yielded half a dozen attractive, voluble youngsters eager to proclaim white superiority, southern culture, Negro contentment, and their love and contempt for colored neighbors and servants.

These high school and college boys and girls also exhibited a common Deep South innocence of the Negro Movement they believed fomented by "outsiders" and Communists (the NAACP, the only civil rights organization they know, seems to them a blend of both) and a two-sided, intense feeling of warm attachment and savage scorn for insurgent Negroes among them.

From here, the mutual ground fell away into varying attitudes ranging from the valiant "Never!" of one lawyer-farmer's son who would "die for" segregation to the "it's coming" of several others and the rather anguished concern of a pretty 17-year-old "segregationist" who does think "it's awful that Negroes can't come to our churches."

The good-looking, sweetly mannered young people I talked to seemed more than anything else gripped by an inexpressible and poignant loyalty to the precarious present and the easy past of the white South, a loyalty uncorrupted by alien information and ideas from outside the tight but turbulent little world of Mississippi.

This ~~A~~ charming boy from Lexington in Holmes County in the Delta, eager to explain the white Mississippi viewpoint, answered questions at word-tumbling length, his perorations replete with nice, old-fashioned "Yes'ms," and "No'ms." He is Doh Barrett, ~~18 years old,~~ a Phi Delta Theta pledge at the University of Mississippi at Oxford, whose forebears came to Mississippi from Virginia and South Carolina, and whose great-grandmother gave a hidden $80,000 to the Confederate Army after her plantation, Newstead, was used by Grant as headquarters during the Vicksburg campaign, then sacked and ruined, he recalled.

"She turned it over, lock stock and barrel," he said, his round, rosy face glowing and his eyes dark with love. "That's the kind of heritage I came from, and I'm proud of it."

Mr. Barrett's more recent heritage includes a pleasant childhood of play in the backyard pecan tree houses, fishing and hunting, adoration of a beautiful mother (she was beauty queen in high school, in Millsaps College and at Ole Miss) and trusting attachment to an energetic and commanding father (He's got more sense in a minute than I've got in three weeks; he's the wisdom I draw on.") He also exhibits the usual masculine pleasure in two little sisters and prise tingled perhaps with rivalry for an older brother, Pat, Jr., taking psychology at Millsaps and planning to study law at Ole Miss.

"Yes, of course, I used to play with Negro children," he said. "We quit, well, we quit when...when we both realized the difference, and they went their way and I went mine. You may be surprised that our next-door neighbors were Nigras, they lived catty-corner across the street from us the nearest neighbors."

Mr. Barrett spoke ardently of the good Nigras andhis affection for them and their profound loyalty to him andhis. He smiled quickly and radiantly in emphasis of these ancient felicities, with a savoring happiness which also illumined his descriptions of his family, and his girl, who is "wonderful, just wonderful."

Dora who cooks and cleans up is "a young 43," like his mother; they were born on the same day and exchange birthday presents. Allie Mae, a registered nurse by correspondence course,"respected by the white community and venerated by the Negro community," nursed little Don when he was born and promised his grandmother "she'd always take careof Sara", his mother, and, indeed, visits frequently in Miss Sara's bedroom and on the phone. Amelia, older, cooks on Sunday and Pecolia, he confided with a flash of delight, "is making me a quilt." There are several Negro hands on his cattle farms who are also lifelong familiars at the Barrett house in Lexington.

Lexington is the seat of Holmes County, seven miles in the hills at the edge of the Delta, "the heart of Mississippi and the citadel of Southern rights," with "stark nekkid bluffs looking out to the Mississippi." It is to him the most beautiful place in the world, a rich center of farming which produses the best crops and "the best people, too." The citadel of Holmes County has 19,600 Negro citizens and 7,000 whites.

"I feel, as do most of the white population of the South, that the Negro is inherently unequal," said Mr. Barrett. "Now they say it's lack of opportunity, cause and result, the reason men first took the fire and light of learning, that the Nigras never had the need in Africa because they could just pluck the fruit of the woods and all, and sustain life on that. You can't say they didn't get learning and civilization because of the easy climate, because they've got a range of all climates and mountains and jungles. They came into contact with the Saracens in North Africa. And Alexander the Great and they never did catch the light of learning, nobody in the region. If they hadn't been taken over by the white man...

"Well, where they're not, they're still eating each other," his voice vibrant with a triumphant disgust.

"But the white South has taken the Neegra, fed, clothed, taught them how to speak and wear clothes and taught him Christianity. Still, look at 'em, their illegitimacy rate!"

(Mr. Barrett was at such polite pains to say the respectful southern "Nigra" and never to lapse into the easy and offensive "nigger", and I am so vigilant with my proper and hard-learned "Negro," that we quite rattled one another, so that he once, in the heat of exchange, said "Neegra" and, again, "Neeger," and I once wildly pronounced it "Nigroo," to our mutual dismay. But we both behaved nicely upon these lapses, quite as if they had not occurred, and proceeded as nice as you please.)

"In my opinion," he said," the South made its biggest mistake ---because they hated to do it out of our love and affection for the Nigras --- but our mistake is in talking states' rights instead of anthropology."

"The moderates (and here Mr. Barrett used the term as it is widely understood in Mississippi, as comparable to Communists or other enemies of order and freedom), prophets of gloom and doom, say it's coming, we gotta accept it. I think if the Nigra is able to live on an equal footing after the troops leave, then we are wrong---wrong when we say the Nigra is not capable.

"Yes'm, I expect there'll have to be an occupation before there'll be integration in Mississippi, and the Kennedy twins are ruthless enough to do it without batting an eye if they're reelected. It would probably be the most tragic thing that could happen to our beloved state. But, afterward when the troops leave..." and here he explained that white resistance to the troops would be so adamant that upon their despairing withdrawal , "everything would be just like before, only the poor Nigras would lose all the friendship and good will they had."

Mr. Barrett's uncle is a cotton planter and head of the Citizen's Council in Lexington and his father is a founder. Don himself is "a sort of honorary member", because he "wanted to give my five dollars" though he is under the usually accepted age of members through school and of man's estate.

Contemplating a hypothetical Negro political control in the Delta with its 65 to 70 Per cent Negro majority---"Although it would never happen" --- Mr. Barrett said ~~with~~ such a regime "without white man's control would be chaos."

"If we turned politics over to them, we'd have another Congo. It's not wild like that under the patient, restraining hand of the white man, they behave reasonably well.

"Do anything to us? I don't think so, no'm. I don't believe the Nigras, if they got control would have any reason to hurt people who have nurtured and cared for them, but it would be chaos. Yes, out of their incompetence. The economy woubd collapse, and it would be like Reconstruction. You remember the Nigras in power in Reconstruction were voting themselves carriages and all kind of luxuries. It wouldn't be out of malice---they're a kindly people---but out of inabilizy to run things. The southern code of hospitality, gentleness, kindmess, they've learned it and accepted it.

"If the majority of Nigras with the vote there (in Charles City County, Va.) haven't taken over, it's because they haven't got the initiative.

"But look at Memphis. Nigras are 32% of the electorate. They're beginning to control politics, and Memphis is beginning to look like a dirty, northern city," he reported in another gust of disgust.

Mr. Barrett also suffers some apprehension over treatment of white women under black domination.

"If the social system is thrown out of kilter, as moderates would do, there would be more danger than there is now under the patient hand of white leadership. I would certainly take up arms to protect our women. To me there is nothing more wonderful than a southern lady. Gosh! It's really undefinable. But cultured, genteel, intelligent, beautiful---usually beautiful, anyway."

In defense of the social and economic system Mr. Barrett would not eat with a Negro, or call one Mr. or Mrs. or Miss, because "it's not socially acceptable, it's not done---anymore than I'd cut more than one piece of steak at a time or tuck my napkin under my chin."

Nor could he chamge his manners for distinguished Negroes or a change of scene. In Milwaukee, where he visited an aunt and "a wonderful yankee uncle---the only good yankee I know", he did not desist from giving his bus seat to standing ladies, in the Mississippi way, just because it was not the custom in Minnesota.

As to celebrated and accomplished Negroes, Mr. Barrett says, "More power to 'em." He cited "Gaston in Birmingham"(a millionaire Negro banker and large property owner).

"You can see he obviously has a very high I.Q., is well-mannered and a fine man, I'm sure. Well, it's just a combination of genes that worked out that way. But the chances are 1 in 5000 that his children would be like that."

There are "exceptional" Negroes in Lexington, who own stores, cafés and funeral businesses, but no professionals.

"We are courteous and treat them with the respect due their education," he explained. "There's none of this pushing around or 'Get outa my way' for them in stores or anywhere---or for the lowest field hand either."

Mr. Barrett scoffs at the outsiders' notion that it's deprivation and "brutality" which makes Negroes migrate from the South.

"That's ridiculous. It's economic. The Negro definitely was necessary to farming 20 years ago. My uncle owns a plantation where he had 60 families chopping cotton, borrowing money, depending on him, you know, old style sharecropping. Ten of the fifteen live there now because they love my uncle and they depend on him, he just needs five of 'em. But he gives them Saturday night spending money and everything and he could say, "Fred, go up the hill and kill me a big snake, or go cut off your head," and Fred would do it.

"They don't help him; they're an economic liability. He supports 10 families out of love and loyalty. He's a fine fellow, president of the Tchula Citizens Council. The others left because they had to sell their small farms, and had no place to live. Now you just see old grandfathers and little bitty children, pickaninnies, the young ones have gone to Chicago.

"

"My girl, I talked to her on the phone and this horrible thing had happened. Houston was dead. Houston drove their tractor and she just loved him. Mr. Foose's father (that's his name, Mary's father, Mr. Foose) and Houston's father were always on the place together, Houston's father had worked for Mr. Foose's father all that time, and they loved him.

"The Citizens Council, Mr. Foose is a leader in it, is not like the Ku Klux Klan. We hate violence. But we are determined to keep our Way of Life," he pepeated with rapid and rising fervor. "Nobody can take it away from us, and I would die for it. I wouldn't do anything foolish, but we will not give up.

"People say Nigras are catching up---that's wonderful---but that's no justification for social change in 1963, for what might happen in 500 or 1000 years.

The militant Mr. Barrett is not much disturbed by the current Mississippi Negro drive to write-in 15,000 or 20,000 Negro protest votes for Aaron Henry, a state NAACP president, for governor, and Rev. Ed King, a young white civil rights devotee, for lieutenant-governor, and to draw 200,000 disfranchised Negro votes in a straw election for Henry. Nor does he share outside dismay at intimidation of Negro voting aspirants---random violence, arrests of demonstrators, eviction of would-be voters from jobs and property, and a few killings.

"Federal right to vote. No, the Constitution gives the states the right to say who shall vote and who shall not. There's no such thing as the right to vote; it's a privilege, earned only after qualifications set up by the state have been met. Instead of reducing voting requirements, we ought to make them more strict. I believe in the poll tax. Our $2 poll tax goes straight to the schools, white and colored.

"I don't think there's any harm in a few qualified Negroes voting. But you can't open the floodgates. I don't condone violence, but the state has the right of police power to protect the health, morals, and general welfare of the people. And when feelings are running high and the spark is there, they could set off a riot.

"I think the police were right in Greenwood and Jackson (scene of summer disorders and mass arrests of Negroes seeking the vote and other civil rights.) And about these peaceful grievances, they should not trespass on private property.

"Now in Jackson, the first day they didn't have a riot. But when they attacked each other. White persons were hitting Nigras and Nigras were nonviolent, because they do what they're told, they're controlled so thoroughly from the top.

"I went to Greenwood to buy duck decoys, it's just 35 miles from Lexington. That Gregory, he looked awful," Here Mr. Barrett smiled and knit his blond brows in pitying distaste at the Negro comedian who met police with nigger taunt for nigger taunt, "He tried so hard to get arrested, but they wouldn't. That police dog (an officer's dog set on the demonstrators, which attacked three Negroes and injured one), well dogs are psychologically bad. But it's right to use them if need be, if it's the only way to control them. You ought not to kill people, either, but if attacked you have to fight back."

~~Mr. Barrett [illegible]~~

Mr. Barrett went "defending my state---no, not that, either, as an observor," to the University of Mississippi upon the entrance of James Meredith to the University. He drove to Oxford with a friend, without his father's permission.

"I was close enough to the marshalls to see what was happening," he explained,"some of the boys were armed, and one man was standing by the Y Building shooting out street lights with a 22 rifle. The students were jeering and sneering and occasionally tossing a cigaret butt at the marshals...All of a sudden McShane said, "Gas 'em!" and from a clear blue sky a patrolman got hit in the head, from behind, and knocked down by a marshal throwing tear gas, that metal case hit him.

"Barnett made a mistake. That Sunday, if he'd issued a call to white males of Mississippi to stand firm at the gate, why you'd have seen 600,000 men mustered at the gate. I know all of Holmes County would have come, except a couple of scalawags.

"I didn't attack the marshals, and I was not armed, it was not my place to. But if Governor Barnett had called the Citizens Councils and other responsible citizens, and had said, come, it is Armageddon, get your gun, well I certainly would. Yes ma'am!

"Oxford seemed to me a nightmare. I felt I was not in the United States, but in Budapest or a Warsaw ghetto. If that was American action, then God save us."

If whites and Negroes attend schools together, he wonders "what's to keep little white Mary from bringing home little black Johnny from school some day, and that leads to mixed dating and mixed marriages."

Would either of his sisters grow up to choose a Negro husband? "Heavenly days, no! But girls who haven't had the upbringing would if we change the social order."

He considers Cleve McDowell, the Negro recently expelled from the University for carrying a gun, as "more dangerous than Meredith."

The way he behaved, like I've heard people say,'he's a good Nigra, he just wants an education.' And that would lead to acceptance. He behaved like a nigger, he would open doors, he had good manners and he scuffed his feet and held his head down. So, he could be the leak in the dyke, and then the dams burst.

"Of course, Meredith was the most segregated Nigra in the United States. He was ignored. Yes," he laughed in appreciation of the placard rhyme which appeared on the campus, "'Ignore the Nigger with Vigor.' And 'Nigger free in 1963.' Ole Miss has never really been integrated."

Mr. Barrett was "not much impressed" by the Negro March on Washington. It "wasn't any different from what I see Saturday night in Lexington when they come to town to get drunk and cut up, except they're happier in Lexington." He smiled fondly at

"No ma'am," Kay answered a question about "superiority." "Like it says in the Bible, all men are created equal. I think they are equal in a way because both of us are humans. But the Negro has been like a slave and accepted as such. Well, yes, that!s good to keep it that way, because that's the way they started out."

The young man, first of the restive others to enter the discussion, volunteered: "I talked to colored boys my age and a few years ahead. When they started having all this, they wanted to stay in their places. The Nigras had better schools, cafeterias and everything. Both were human beings but separate, and were treated like human beings. I think the NAACP pressured them, it was NAACP pressure."

He mentioned a gang of "Night Hawks", teenqge Negroes arrested for gang thefts and vandalism.

"Most Negroes here," a tall, dark girl with a sweet and earnest face offered hesitantly, "Most Negroes here I've been associated with are not as clean as a lot of white people. I!m so prejudiced, though," She added. [illegible] "Still, I wouldn't want to eat with them."

"It's an instinct inside," said the serious and slender brunette. "You've been brought up and taught thqt you are superiot and they are inferior. If you have it in your mind from childhood, you can't drive it completely out,"

Mr. McMillan, just before leaving, contributed: "I was raised with niggers, played with niggers. My grandparents would have tanned my brithhes if I'd mistreated any of them. But why mix with them? They had better schools until last year, when we built a new white school. They did think they were well off.

"I've got some been working for me 17 years, and they'd jump in

PAGE (s) MISSING

Friends of Captain Hugh Mulzac
189 Maple Street IN 9-2141
Brooklyn 25, N.Y.

Dorothy Burnham - Coordinator

RECEPTION TO HONOR HUGH MULZAC ON THE OCCASION OF THE PUBLICATION OF HIS BOOK: A STAR TO STEER BY

Hugh Mulzac, Captain of the Booker T. Washington, will be guest of honor at a combination autographing party and reception tendered him on the occasion of the publication of his book A STAR TO STEER BY, which is the story of his life.

The affair will be held from 3:30 p.m., Sunday, April 7, at the YWCA, 361 West 125th Street, New York City.

Miss Beulah Richardson will read excerpts from the book and Miss Louise Jeffers will render an original ballad dedicated to Captain Mulzac. Hope Stevens, Esq.; Richard B. Moore; George B. Murphy, Jr.; and representatives from the publishers and former crew members will also participate on the program. All friends and acquaintances of Captain Mulzac are invited to attend.

—30—

and organized a gang of welders to join him in writing a letter to President Roosevelt. Several days later they received a reply: the President thought it would be a good idea - and thus was the Booker T. born.

Originally Washington officialdom saw the Booker T. Washington as manned by an all-Negro crew. Such did not become the case and the exploits of both Captain and his completely integrated crew made of this ship a seafaring ambassodor of goodwill whereever she docked.

While Captain Mulzac relives adventures aboard that almost legendary Liberty ship, he does not gloss over his years of struggle and abuse until achievement was won. He describes the seamen's fight for decent berths and decent wages; and portrays the Negro seaman's concerted effort to win social and economic equality; and the redress of sore grievances.

The Mulzac story is exciting reading but even more it is the story of a life which found it could not be fulfilled until the dreams of others came to fruition.

--30--

A STAR TO STEER BY by Hugh Mulzac, as told to Louis Burnham and Norval Welch. International Publishers, New World Paperback $1.85; Cloth $5.00

From a sermon delivered the evening of November 22, at Temple Emanuel, Houston, Texas
by Rabbi Robert I. Kahn

Weep, America, weep!
For that bullet was aimed at you
And everything you stand for.
It was aimed at Washington and Jefferson,
at Jackson and Lincoln,
At Wilson and Roosevelt.
It was aimed to shoot holes in the Declaration of Independence
Especially those wild words about life and liberty.
Weep, Americans, weep!
For the climate that spawned this violence
For those of the far left and the far right,
For Fascists and Communists,
So unable to convince others in the open marketplace of ideas
So unable to persuade by logic,
So unable to win men's hearts
That for ballots they substitute bullets, for discussion, death.

Weep,Americans, weep!
John F. Kennedy is dead.
But what he stood for lives
What he believed is still with us
What he lived by is still vital.
All of us
Republicans and Democrats
Christians and Jews
White~~s~~ and Negro~~es~~ and Oriental
All of us must share his concern
For the American dream.
A dream of mankind free and unafraid
A dream of men no longer hungry
A dream of nations no longer at war.
To be any less concerned
To dream any lesser dream
Would be to betray his life
And mock his death.

NEWS from HILL and WANG, Inc.

141 Fifth Avenue New York 10, New York Algonquin 4-6975

Vasiliki Sarant, Publicity Director

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE January 15

SECOND VOLUME OF LANGSTON HUGHES AUTOBIOGRAPHY -- February 19

I WONDER AS I WANDER by Langston Hughes. An Autobiographical Journey. 416 pages. Cloth $4.95. Paper $2.45 AC-68

The second volume of Langston Hughes' autobiography, I WONDER AS I WANDER: An Autobiographical Journey, will be published on February 19 in the American Century Series at $2.45 (AC-68). Long out of print, the book will also be available in cloth at $4.95.

In this volume Hughes looks into his life in the 1930's and recalls its most dramatic and intimate moments. It is a personal narrative filled with adventure and exciting episodes. He journeys through Cuba, Haiti, Russia, Soviet Central Asia, Japan. He finds himself in Spain during the Civil War. He lives through democracies and dictatorships, through wars, revolutions. He meets famous people - from Arthur Koestler to Emma, the Black Mammy of Moscow.

THE BIG SEA, the first volume of Hughes' autobiography, was published last Fall, and is a lively description of his life in the 1920's, those fabulous years in Paris and Harlem. In Paris he was a cook and waiter and in Harlem he was the rising young poet, in the center of the "Black Renaissance." He also traveled as a seaman on freighters to Europe and Africa, and taught English in Mexico.

And all the time he was writing.

Other recent titles of related interest: THE BEST OF SIMPLE and SOMETHING IN COMMON, both by Langston Hughes; AMERICAN NEGRO POETRY edited by Arna Bontemps; THE LINCOLN NOBODY KNOWS by Richard Current; THOREAU: People, Principles and Politics edited and with an introduction by Milton Meltzer.

Sample Copy   Sample Copy

APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION , QUESTIONNAIRE AND OATH.

I, ______________, do hereby apply to the Board of Registars of Dallas County, State of Alabama, to register as an elector under the Constitution and laws of the State of Alabama, and do herewith submit answere to the interrogatories propounded to me by said board.

____
NAME OF APPLICATION

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. State your name, the date and placcof your birth, and your present address:____________________.

2. Have you previoulsy applied for and been denied registration as a Voter?______(a) If so , give the facts:____________________.

3. Has your name been previously stricken from the list of persons registered:____________________.

4. Are you now or have you ever been a dope or an habitual drunkard ?____________. (a) if you are or have been a dope addict or an habitual drunkard, explain as fully as you can:____________________
____________________.

5. Have you ever been legally declared insane ?______(a) if so, give details:____________________
____________________.

6. Give a brief statement of the extent of your education and business experience:____________________
____________________.

7. Have you ever been charged with or convicted of a felony or crime or offense involving moral turpitude ?______________(a) if, so give the facts:____________________.

8. Have you ever served in the Armed Forces of the Unites State Government?_____________(a) if so, state when and for approxmiately how long:____________________.

9. Have you ever been expelled or dishonorable discharded from any school or collage or from any branch of the Armed Forces of the Unites States, or of any other Country?_____________(a) if so, State the facts:____________________.

10. Will you support and defend theConstitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Alabama?______________
____________________.

11. Are you nor or have you ever been affiliated with any group, or organization which advocated the overthrow of this United States Government of any State of the United States by Unlawful means ___________(s) if , so , State the facts: ______________________

____ __________.

12. Will you bear arms for your Country when called upon by it to do so?_____________(a) if your answers no, give reasons:______

____.

13. Do you believe in free election and ruled by the majority-

____.

14. Will you give aid and comfort to the enemies of the United State Government or the Government of the State of Alabama?___6

____.

15. Names some of the duties and obligation of citizenship?

____

(a) Do you regard those duties and obligations as having priority over the duties and obligations you owe to any other secular organization when they are in conflict?_________________________

16. Give the names and post Office address of two persons who have present knowledge of your present bona-fide residence at the place as stated by you:_______________________________________.

17. Are you married or single ?__________(a) If married, give names, residence and places of birth of your husband or wife as the case may be:__________________________ ____________________.

18. Give the names of the places , respectively , where you have lived during the last five years, and the names or names by which you have been known during the last five years:__________6

________________ ____.

19, If you are self- employed , State the nature of of your business:____
(a) If you have been employed by another during the last fiveyears, state thenature of your employment ant the names of such employer or empoyersand his or thier addresses:_______ __________________

________ ________ ____.

20. If you claim that you are a bona-fide resident of the State of Alabama , give the on which you claim to have become such bona- fice resident:__________________________(a) When did you become a bona- fide resident of Dallas County?____ ______________(a) When did you become a bona-fide resident of (Commuity) Ward of precinct.__________________________________ ____________ __________.

21. If you intent to change your place of resident prior to the next general election State the facts:____________________

____.

For Further information call Mrs. A. P. Boynton- Tr. 2-3759 or Rev. Bernard Lafayette Tr. 2-2154.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

THE BASIC LAW OR FUNDAMENTAL LAW OF GOVERNMENT WHICH TELLS HOW LAWS ARE MADE, PASSED, AND HOW PEOPLE ARE ELECTED TO OFFICE. TELLS THE BASIC RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE, AND THE POWER OF THE GOVERNMENT.

CONSTITUTION OF ALABAMA

THE BASIC LAW OR PRINCIPLES OF GOVERNMENT OF THE STATE OF ALABAMA THAT GOVERNS THE PEOPLE OF ALABAMA.

THE MAIN DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

1. EXECUTIVE	2. JUDICIAL	3. LEGISLATIVE
PRESIDENT	SEPREME COURT	CONGRESS
ENFORCES THE LAW	INTERPERTS THE LAW	MAKES THE LAW

PREAMBLE

IN ORDER TO ESTABLISH JUSTICE, LEBERTY, FORM A MORE PERFECT UNION, AND PROMOTE THE GENERAL WELFARE OF THE PEOPLE OF THE U.S. THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES WAS ESTABLISHED.

AMENDMENT 13---------------SLAVES FREED
AMENDMENT 14---------------GUARANTEE OF PROTECTION TO ALL CITIZEN.
AMENDMENT 15---------------THE RIGHTS OF CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES SHALL NOT BE DENIED BECAUSE OF RACE OR COLOR. (WE WERE GIVEN THE RIGHT TO VOTE UNDER THIS AMENDMENT)

MEANING OF CERTAIN WORDS

SECULAR.....NOT UNDER CHURCH CONTROL: NOT SACRED: NOT BELONGING TO A RELIGIOUS ORDER. AS, SECULAR COURTS, EDUCATION MUSIC.

BONA FIDE...WITHOUT FRAUD, IN GOOD, AS A BONA FIDE CITIZEN OR A BONA FIDE TRANSACTION.

PREVIOUSLY..GOING BEFORE, OR HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

TURPITUDE...CORRUPTION, A CORRUPT ACT OR PRACTICE.

INTERROGATORIES....WORDS USED IN ASKING QUESTIONS. SENTENCES IMPLYING QUESTIONS.

AFFILIATE...TO CONNECT OR ASSOCIATE ONESELF.

(MEANING OF) THE MAN ON THE STREET.....THE MAN ON THE STREET SHOULD ACT AND LIVE MORALLY HIGH.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DOES

COLLECTS FACTS:

On integrated facilities, school transfers, MDTA and Apprentice programs, available houses for sale, Hill-Burton projects, etc.

SUPPLIES FACTS:

To individuals who want to patronize integrated facilities, groups working to extend desegregation, public officials who need informal information, writers and students.

PROVIDES A COMMUNITY FORUM:

-e.g., Series on Human Relations and Metropolitan Growth

Feb. -- Realtors, government housing officials, planning officials on Housing.

March- Professionals in industrial management, vocational education, training, labor, on Employment.

April --School Board and Professional Educator on Education.

PLANS AND ASSISTS IN COMMUNITY PREPARATION FOR CHANGE:

-e.g., Special programs to encourage school transfers, orient Negro students to new "white" schools, assist individual transfer students and families.

OFFERS HUMAN RELATIONS EDUCATION.

-e.g.,Panel of Americans special intergroup program for students.

GIVES OPPORTUNITIES FOR FRIENDSHIP:

To Negroes and whites as they meet in all kinds of situations, from dinner parties to picnics.

PRESENTS BROAD BASE OF COMMUNITY SUPPORT FOR DESEGREGATION:

576 individual members, from all parts of the Metropolitan area, cutting across racial, religious, professional lines.

INTERPRETS ATLANTA TO VISITORS FROM OTHER STATES AND COUNTRIES

- e.g., Ambassador from Ceylon, Official of Tanganyika, northern Baptist ministers, British journalist.

WORKS WITH ATLANTA SUMMIT LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE:

Special program to interpret and enlist support of white community; observors in court, visitors to jails, contacts with families of student demonstrators, information to ASLC.

COOPERATES WITH OTHER AGENCIES:

-e.g., With YWCA in workshop for high school students, with ACLU Lawyers Committee in distributing information in Newsletter, with state, regional and national agencies. (The Council is affiliated with the Georgia Council on Human Relations)

SOME SPECIFICS ACCOMPLISHED BY THE COUNCIL IN 1963:

. Negotiated desegregation of Smith-Hughes Vocational School.

. Negotiated desegregation of neighborhood and drive-in movies.

. Designed, printed and distributed 35,000 anti-discrimination stickers.

. Prepared, kept current and distributed list of integrated facilities in Greater Atlanta.

. Presented speakers to interracial audiences including Associated White House Press Secretary, Protocol Officer of U.S. Department of State, and Atlantans invited to Presidential White House Conferences.

. Helped publish Directory of Equal Opportunity Employers in Metropolitian Atlanta area.

. Programmed more than 100 visitors at average of 3 days each for State Department.

. Counseled with Negro transfer students and parents.

. Maintained liaison with Atlanta Summit Leadership Conference, printed document ACTION FOR DEMOCRACY for community information.

. Assisted officials and citizens in Decatur and DeKalb County in human relations developments.

. Planned special programs to increase support and use of desegregated facilities, including restaurants and swimming pools.

. Cooperated with other agencies in programs to extend desegregation in education, employment, housing, health services, social services, etc.

WHAT IT IS:

A private, voluntary, tax exempt organization of individual members who live in Greater Atlanta, who pay annual dues, elect officers, serve on committees, give money and join with fellow citizens to enlarge the "coalition of conscience" to bring about better human relations in our community.

WHAT ITS RESOURCES ARE:

Director's salary currently paid by the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee, but all other expenses paid out of funds from individual contributions.

WHAT IT NEEDS:

$20,000 to fill increasing demands for more information, more human relations education, more opportunities for friendship, more preparation as Metropolitan Atlanta, with the rest of the nation, faces inevitable changes.

WHO RUNS THE COUNCIL:

Members elect 5 officers and 20 Directors for 2-year terms. This Board of Directors is solely and completely responsible for the policies and program, and the staff works under its direction.

Officers for 1964-66

Chairman -Mr. M. Stanford
1st V. Chm.- Dr. J. Rothschild
2nd V. Chm.- Dr. E. Weaver
Secretary -Mrs. Sujette Crank
Treasurer -Mr. H. Jackson

Directors Are

Mrs. Philip Brachman
Mr. Martin Handrick
Mrs. Clifton Hoffman
Dr. William Jackson
Dr. Jon Johnston
Mr. Sinclair Jacobs
Rev. Eugene Pickett
Miss Norah McNiven
Dr. Sam Williams
Mr. Q. V. Williamson
Mrs. P. Q. Yancey
Dr. Tilman Cothran
Mr. Carl Holman
Mr. Donald Hollowell
Mr. Charles Mathias
Dr. Margaret Rowley
Mrs. John Stanley
Dr. John Tumblin
Dr. Clinton Warner
(Mrs. E. Paschall, Ex. Drct.)

COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia
30303
Telephone: 523-1581

Date_______________

I pledge $_________ for the support of the COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA for April, 1964 to April, 1965.

Payable: Now__________________

Installments__________________

In Full__________________

____
(Signed)

NAME:__________________________

ADDRESS:__________________________
____

TELEPHONE:__________________

Contributions are tax deductible

. . . There is little argument that there will be change in 1964 . . . but what kind of change in Greater Atlanta, and how will be accomplished?

Will restaurants be open?
Will hotels be open?
Will schools be open?
Will housing be open?

WILL HEARTS AND MINDS BE OPEN?

GIVE

DOLLARS FOR DEMOCRACY

GIVE

to the

COUNCIL OF HUMAN RELATIONS OF
GREATER ATLANTA
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia
30303

NEWS from BRUCE
Howard Smith, Publicity Director

The BRUCE PUBLISHING COMPANY
400 NORTH BROADWAY
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MILWAUKEE, WIS. -- A revised and enlarged edition of An Evil Tree, a best-selling study of communism for high school students has been announced by Bruce of Milwaukee. The author is Agnes Murphy, professor of History and Philosophy at San Diego College for Women.

Released in a new paperback format, the book traces the ideology, objectives and tactics of atheistic communism and outlines the lives of its founders. The revision also contains a new section on the communist conspiracy, in which the subversive campaign in the United States is compared to a submarine, lying chiefly below the surface of American life, but nevertheless presenting a deadly danger to American liberty. This section records the recent infiltration of campuses, anti-anticommunist counter-movements, and psychological warfare promulgating the idea that communism poses no internal threat to America.

A new study guide has been incorporated, listing for each chapter points to remember, points to ponder, projects and suggested readings. The bibliography has been extensively revised.

A reviewer for the Catholic School Journal called the book "especially valuable as a pointed study of the evils of Communism, and should be useful as a supplement to existing high school courses in United States history. The author has had direct experience in the field in which she writes, and has produced a text that is outstanding for its conciseness, clarity and power. It is an excellent study of the major problem of our time." The Fort Worth Star Telegram says: "Prepared especially in answer questions in the minds of young people. The author has amassed a large quantity of material and has presented it in a concise and readable manner."

(more)

Also available (for classroom use) is a handbook offering background material on Communism for teachers, A Sourcebook for a Course on Communism. This includes a comparison of the Communist and Christian interpretations of such words as peace, bourgeoisie, capitalism, communism, socialism, democracy; a bibliography of works on Communism; and a list of test questions on the material in An Evil Tree.

#

AN EVIL TREE, by Agnes Murphy, Ph.D., revised edition, $1.25, xvi & 216 pages; published by The Bruce Publishing Company, 400 North Broadway, Milwaukee 1, Wisconsin

THE U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

February 28, 1964

MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: The Civil Rights Bill

This memorandum was prepared for Commission, staff and state advisory committee use in response to many recent inquiries from committee members and Members of Congress.

In this memorandum we summarize the main provisions of the Civil Rights Bill as passed by the House of Representatives and which is now pending in the Senate. The main allegations advanced in opposition to the legislation are mentioned and discussed briefly.

TITLE I - VOTING

The 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Act sought to guarantee to all citizens the right to vote without discrimination as to race or color and authorized the Attorney General to commence court action to prevent persons from interfering with the right to vote. However, the Commission on Civil Rights found in 1963 that there are still at least 100 counties in 7 States where qualified Negro citizens are denied the right to vote by being forced to meet standards not applied to white citizens. Title I is intended to cope with problems encountered in the implementation of these earlier Civil Rights Acts.

With respect to elections held for the purpose of electing Federal officials, the bill would:

a. prohibit the imposition of different standards for Negroes and whites seeking to register and vote,

b. prohibit the denial of the right to vote because of immaterial errors or omissions,

c. require that any literacy test employed as a qualification for voting be administered in writing and a copy of any individual's test be available on request,

d. establish a rebuttable presumption that any person who has completed the 6th grade is literate.

With respect to any voting proceeding commenced by the Government, the Attorney General or the defendant may request the appointment of a three-judge court to hear the case initially. Appeals would be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court. The Attorney General would not have authority to register any voters.

Amendments: Title I was amended twice on the floor of the House with the effect that now defendants as well as the Attorney General may request the appointment of a three-judge court. Also persons who have completed the 6th grade in an English language school in Puerto Rico will be presumed to be literate. This provision originally applied only to the States, territories and the District of Columbia.

TITLE II - DISCRIMINATION IN PLACES OF PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

Discrimination would be prohibited in specific places of public accommodation whose operation affects interstate commerce or whose practices of discrimination are supported by State action. An example of the latter would be State or local laws requiring proprietors to exclude or segregate Negro customers. The public accommodations covered include hotels and motels, restaurants, lunch counters, gasoline stations, theaters and staduims or other facilities which are part of an establishment covered by the bill.

The provision would be enforced by civil actions brought by the persons discriminated against or by the Attorney General. The Attorney General could use Federal, State or local public agencies to secure voluntary compliance before beginning the court proceeding.

The civil rights bill would not make persons or businesses licensed by a State or city subject to the Act by virtue of their license. Nor are all businesses offering goods and services to the public covered. Only those establishments specifically listed in the bill or physically part of a listed establishment would be subject to the Act. (The bill would not prohibit racial discrimination in barber shops, beauty parlors and many other service establishments, retail stores, bowling alleys and other places of recreation unless such places serve food. It would not cover hotels or lodging houses which have less than six rooms for rent in a building occupied by the proprietor.) Merely operating under a State regulation would not make an establishment subject to the Act.

It has been suggested that the public accommodation section would be a vast extension of Federal control and that it is unconstitutional. However, businesses open to the public are already subject to many Federal, State and local regulations (e.g., anti-trust laws, zoning ordinances, health and sanitation standards) designed to protect the public and business itself. Also, the proposed legislation prohibiting racial discrimination by certain businesses serving the public is similar to statutes already in existence in 30 States. These statutes have been held constitutional.

Amendments: Discrimination "supported by State action" was redefined by the House to mean discrimination or segregation carried on under color or any law, statute, ordinance or regulation; or carried on under color of any custom or usage required or enforced by public officials; or required by action of the State.

Finally, the Committee version of the bill made it unlawful to incite, aide, or abet any person to discriminate against another. The House deleted this section, but left in tact the prohibitions against intimidation, coercion and retaliation.

TITLE III - PUBLIC FACILITIES

The Attorney General is authorized to institute civil actions against any publicly owned or operated facility (such as a State owned park) whenever he receives a complaint of discrimination. Such facilities are required by the Constitution not to engage in racial discrimination, but many still do discriminate.

He is also authorized to intervene in any action seeking relief from the denial of equal protection of the laws on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

Amendments: The Committee version of the bill made the United States liable for court costs in any proceeding under this Title, and the House added "reasonable attorney's fees" to these costs.

TITLE IV - PUBLIC EDUCATION

The U.S. Office of Education is directed to conduct a survey on the availability of equal educational opportunity. It is authorized to render technical assistance to school districts in the implementation of desegregation plans, to arrange training institutes for school personnel and to make grants to school boards to employ specialists for in-service training. These plans have been required by law since 1954 when the Supreme Court ruled that enforced racial segregation in public schools violates the Constitution. This provision is intended to assist school boards which wish to comply with their constitutional obligations.

The Attorney General is authorized to institute civil actions upon receipt of complaints alleging the continuance of school segregation.

It has been alleged that the U.S. Commissioner of Education "could influence the transfer of children from one school to another . . . . until racial balance exists." The civil rights bill gives no authority to the Commissioner of Education to require or influence the transfer of children.

Amendments: The House redefined "desegregation" to make it explicitly clear that it does not include the assignment of students to public schools in order to overcome racial imbalance.

Another amendment provided that besides school boards, States, municipalities or school districts, other governmental units might apply for technical assistance provided that the unit is legally responsible for operating public schools.

TITLE V - COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

The life of the Commission on Civil Rights is extended for four years and in addition to its present functions of investigating denials of the right to vote and infringements of equal protection guarantees, and appraising Federal policies, the Commission is directed to serve as a national clearinghouse for civil rights information and to investigate general allegations of voting frauds not related to racial discrimination.

Amendments: The Committee version of the bill made the Commission a permanent agency, but the House limited its life to four years. In addition, the House specifically prohibited the Commission from inquiring into or investigating fraternities, sororities, private clubs or religious organizations.

TITLE VI - FEDERALLY ASSISTED PROGRAMS

Each Federal agency which administers a program of financial assistance by grants, loans or contracts is directed to require the elimination of discrimination under the program.

Action of a Federal agency effectuating this requirement might include the termination of or refusal to grant assistance. If such action were taken, it would be subject to review by the courts.

This Title has been attached as an extension of Federal control beyond that presently exercised as part of the normal supervision of Federal expenditures.

The Supreme Court has ruled that the Constitution prohibits the Federal Government or its instrumentalities from discriminating because of race. Other Federal courts have ruled that private or public agencies receiving Federal financial assistance cannot deny the benefits of the program to persons because of their race. Title VI of the civil rights bill simply states these rulings as a principle supported by Congress. It says in effect that when Federal tax monies are collected from all citizens regardless of color the benefits flowing from Federal expenditures of these monies should be available to all citizens regardless of color. For example, this Title would require:

> Hospitals constructed with Federal funds to serve all patients without regard to race, color or national origin;

State employment agencies entirely financed by Federal funds to refer qualified job applicants to employment opportunities without discrimination;

Elementary and secondary schools constructed and maintained by Federal funds to admit children without regard to race, color or national origin;

Colleges and universities receiving Federal funds for the construction and operation of research centers to admit students without discrimination.

It has also been alleged that this section would apply to farmers and to homeowners, implying that they will be "subject to Federal Control." Actually, the bill simply means that when Federal money is made available to help farmers it must be available to Negro farmers as well as white farmers without racial discrimination. It means that when the Federal government makes funds available for the construction of homes, the homes must be offered to all eligible persons without regard to race.

Amendments: The procedures to be followed in the administration of this Title were amended by the House to require that (1) the President approve all implementing rules and regulations, (2) a hearing be held before compliance steps are taken, and (3) Congress be notified 30 days before funds are denied or discontinued to a program.

Another amendment makes clear that this Title would not apply to Federal programs which insure or guarantee loans by private institutions. The Housing Executive Order remains unaffected by this amendment.

TITLE VII - EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

An Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is created to receive or initiate complaints alleging discrimination by employers in industries affecting interstate commerce with 25 or more employees or by labor unions or employment agencies whose activities affect interstate commerce. The Commission initially would seek to eliminate any discriminatory practices found by conciliation and persuasion but where these efforts fail is authorized to bring civil actions in which the courts would review the facts de novo. If the court finds racial or religious discrimination, it would order the discriminating employer, employment agency or union to treat all persons on the basis of their merit and ability rather than on their race, religion, national origin or sex.

It has been alleged that employers could be told by Federal officials "whom they shall hire, fire, promote and demote, and how they shall handle their employees," that employers could be required to maintain a work force which is balanced along racial or religious lines, and that the rights of employees within their company could be destroyed.

The civil rights bill does not give the Federal government these powers. It only requires that employers, labor unions and employment agencies treat all persons on the basis of their merit and ability and without regard to their race, color, religion or national origin. Employers subject to the bill are free to hire, promote or fire anyone they want provided their action is not based on the person's race, color, religion or national origin. And, under the bill, it would be as unlawful for an employer to discriminate against a white applicant because of race as it would be if he discriminated against a Negro.

__Amendments:__ The House extended the coverage of this title in two respects: (1) sex is now within the prohibited types of discrimination; and (2) retraining and in-service training were added as areas in which there can be no discrimination. The rest of the amendments were largely limiting in nature. Atheists and Communists were excluded from coverage, and religious institutions of learning were allowed to use "religion" as an employment criterion. The Committee bill provided that no union or employer would be subject to coverage during the first year after enactment, only those with 100 or more workers during the second year, fifty workers the third year, and 25 or more during the fourth and succeeding years. The House modified this by adding another year and a 75-worker level to the graduated coverage, postponing coverage of employers of 25 or more till five years after enactment.

Title VII was further amended by several procedural provisions. In order to initiate a complaint, the Commission must now have reasonable cause to believe a violation has occurred. The Committee bill had empowered the Commission to bring a civil action before exhausting their informal techniques if circumstances warranted, but this provision was deleted by the House. The investigative powers of the Commission were clarified and modified to the extent that it may now inspect records of and examine only those persons being investigated or proceeded against. The Committee bill had authorized such action whenever it might add to the enforcement of the title. Regulations or orders by the Commission may now be prescribed only after a public hearing. Government agencies must still furnish all relevant information to the Commission, but the House limited this requirement to information that can be disclosed legally.

An entire section relating to employment practices of Federal agencies and contractors with the government, which was essentially a restatement of an existing executive order, was deleted from the bill. Certain clarifying amendments were also passed.

TITLE VIII - VOTING STATISTICS

The Secretary of Commerce is directed to conduct a survey of persons of voting age by race, color and national origin and to determine the extent to which such persons have registered and have voted, in such geographic areas as recommended by the Commission on Civil Rights.

This Title was not amended by the House.

TITLE IX - REMOVAL IN CIVIL RIGHTS CASES

The order of a Federal court sending a civil rights case back to a State court shall be reviewable by appeal.

This Title was not amended by the House.

TITLE X - COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

This entire Title was inserted in the bill on the House floor, after having been deleted by the Judiciary Committee. It establishes a Community Relations Service in the Department of Commerce to provide informal assistance to persons or communities requiring help with civil rights problems. The Service is limited to a Director and six employees.

TITLE XI - MISCELLANEOUS

The last title in the act contains necessary miscellaneous provisions. Appropriations are authorized to carry out the act, and a separability clause provides that the rest of the act will be unaffected if any portion is invalidated. Another section preserves existing remedies under Federal law.

Amendments: A new section was added by the House to insure that the provisions of the act are not construed as "occupying the field" of civil rights legislation. State laws in this area are to remain in force unless inconsistent with the act.

CONCLUSION

The civil rights bill pending before the Senate would not, as has been alleged, deprive people of their personal liberties. It would prevent discrimination because of race, religion, or national origin or sex. And it would not even prevent all forms of discrimination. It prohibits discrimination by government officials in education and voting; discrimination by large employers and unions in their hiring practices; discrimination by business establishments which operate in interstate commerce and are open to the general public; and discrimination by institutions such as universities, schools and hospitals which give service provided by Federal funds. The bill would certainly not prohibit a homeowner from deciding whom he wants to invite to his house, or a private club from restricting its membership on the basis of race.

Contrary to allegations, the bill does not deny anyone's constitutional rights. In fact, its major provisions are designed to secure rights which are guaranteed by the Constitution but which have been denied some citizens. The constitutionality of the major provisions of this legislation is supported by bar associations, eminent lawyers and law teachers throughout the Nation.

Prepared by the staff,
U.S. Commission on Civil Rights
Washington, D.C. 20425

February 28, 1964

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April 13, 1964

Dear Harold:

This will asknowledge your memorandum of April 7 concerning the effort of the informal committee of business leaders to improve the prospects for general compliance with the public accomodations section of the Civil Rights Bill when it is passed.

As the President told the group on April 1, this undertaking is a valuable contribution to the national interest. It is his earnest hope that these public spirited business leaders and those who are cooperating with them will continue to devote their energy and influence to this important objective.

I am also enclosing for your information a transcript of the President's remarks to a number of business leaders he met with on April 9 in connection with the Plans for Progress program of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. In his speech the President made the same point about the role that can be played by businessmen most emphatically and effectively.

Sincerely,

Lee C. White
Assistant Special Counsel to the President

Mr. Harold C. Fleming
Executive Vice-President
The Potomac Institute, Inc.
1501 Eighteenth Street, N. W.
Washington, D. C.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE APRIL 9, 1964

OFFICE OF THE WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY

THE WHITE HOUSE

REMARKS OF THE PRESIDENT TO "PLANS FOR PROGRESS" GROUP IN THE EAST ROOM

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I have a railroad strike on at 5:45 and my time is going to be necessarily limited. We want to try to ask both the employers and employees to give us a little extra time and I am going to meet with them in the Cabinet Room, so I will necessarily be briefer than I would like to be.

First of all, I want to say to you that you are welcome here in your house as you have come here to work for your country. I want to especially and personally thank you gentlemen for your efforts in advancing the cause of justice and the cause of decency.

There are today 192 major American corporations employing more than 7 million persons who have joined in a national partnership voluntarily on their own volition because they believe it is right to make equality of opportunity not just a phrase, but a fact. I have personally signed each of these 192 plans on behalf of the committee, as its chairman. It was a proud signature that I signed because this movement of our industrial society has been achieved by cooperation and has been formed by reason.

The Senate of the United States today is engaged in a great debate. From that great deliberative body and that debate will come, I am confident, a bill of civil rights, of equal rights that is a reaffirmation of the native decency of our American society. This debate is evidence that this Government of free men, constitutionally sound, born of struggle and agony, can endure a difference of opinion and can stand still and erect and strong when the issue has been settled.

We are going to pass the civil rights bill. Nothing has happened to deter us from that course. The demands of justice and decency make that necessary. But the challenge we face goes beyond the passage of a single piece of legislation, for any law is insufficient unless it is supported, and all of us have had some experience in this field, by the moral commitment of the people of the country.

The burning issue, then, is simply, "What does America stand for?" I believe America stands for progress in human rights. I believe America stands for full and equal rights for all of its citizens, for the realization of freedom and justice for all of its people, for equality of treatment, and equality of opportunity for all of its citizens in every sphere of national life.

So it is to these goals that we are all committed. We must, therefore, realize that the passage of the big peak still above us. To reach that peak is going to require the cooperation, the good will, the moral courage, the determination, the good sense and the patriotism of every single American.

What I urge on you today is to look ahead to that day very soon when this bill that has already passed the House and is now under debate in the Senate -- look ahead until the day when it becomes law. Congress, as the final result of that national debate, will have an obligation to our Nation and our Constitution to accept the law that has been passed. The problems of our society will not automatically disappear with the passage of that bill, you can be sure. They will still have to be dealt with by all Americans.

The civil rights bill can only chart in law the directions that we must take as individuals. Now, how swiftly and how harmoniously, how effectively we take those directions depends in measure on the leadership of men and women like you.

I am proud of you. You have come to the top of a great company, of many great companies, because of your judgement and because of you character and because of your understanding of your fellowman and because of a great many sacrifices that you and your families have made. Today you meet here in the first house of this land with your chin up and your chest out, standing proudly and erect and happy to say, "I am an American businessman." Now, there have been tines in this country when men didn't go around wearing that badge, and if they did wear it they were not as proud of it as you are today.

But this society is such, our economy is such, and our leadership in the world is such that you are the envy of your counterparts wherever you may find them. You can give great assistance not only just in your little immediate company that, relatively speaking, makes up a small part of the millions of workers, some 70 million, that work in this country, but you can give it on your Boards, in your churches, in your lodges, in your communities, by increased understanding. The best way in the world for you to give it is to just forget that you are the president of the company or the vice president of the officers, and imagine that things are reversed and you are in the other fellow's position. Assume for a moment that you are Hobart Taylor 20 years ago in Houston, Texas, trying to get a job with one of these great companies, American Home Product, Sterling, or Anheuser Busch, or others that I have met here today, and do unto him as you would have him do unto you.

Bear in mind that golden rule -- "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," and examine your Personnel Department; examine your own conscience. See if you are doing unto others as you would have them do unto you. If you are, then we can say, "Well done thy faithful servant." But until you can say that, until you can do that, until there is increased understanding, until there is a desire to put this bill into effect and make it work, we still have our job to do.

Let's not take too much for granted, Mr. Businessman. Let's not assume for a moment that we can just sit in our rocking chairs and let the rest of the world go by.

I have talked to a great friend that I worked for as a young boy, who proudly owns the King Ranch of Texas. He was talking to me the other day about a ranch that he owned in Cuba. I think that both of us, as a result of that discussion, really forgot some of our gripes of the moment and took pride in this great constitutional system that is ours. Let's not just make the Constitution apply to property. Let's let it apply to people, and let's not forget that a great President that we all revere today, that lived in this house 100 years ago, took the chains away from the slaves of that time and freed the slaves of their chains.

Until education is blind to color, until employment is unaware of race, you can free the slaves of their chains, but you have not freed society of bigotry.. Emancipation may be a proclamation, but it is not a fact.

So I appeal to you to give us the leadership that will make it a fact because we businessmen are outnumbered in America. We Americans are outnumbered in the world 17 to 1. If we don't want a decision tonight that is based on man's religion or that is based on his race, or that is based on his color, or that is based necessarily on the numbers because might doesn't make right, because if it is based on any of those things, we Americans are outmoded.

So I suggest that in this Nation of Laws that you, as community leaders, make this legislation work as smoothly and as effectively as possible. Make your plans that you have promised to promulgate a reality; make them a living thing that you can really take pride in and pass on to your children, the heritage that Lincoln passed on to us, because your action is just as necessary as his was -- to the good and the future and leadership and pride of your country, for in the final end of it all, what is really supremely important to you and to me, to every citizen in the land, is that our differences be settled by constitutional and lawful processes in the courts. That is what we are trying to do instead of in the streets and in the alleys, and might making right.

Much of the Nation has already voluntarily enacted a civil rights bill. At least some desegregation of privately owned facilities of public accomodations are now open to everyone, regardless of race, in some 390 of the 566 communities in Southern States of over 10,000. 390 of the 566 have already to some degree desegregated in cities over 10,000.

I saw that great, beloved man who was denied the privilege of being with us now, John F. Kennedy, meet in this room with his brother, the great Attorney General of this country, and talk to restaurant men, hotel men, motel men, employers, bankers, lawyers, businessmen from every section of the land, and plead with them to please go home and try to get this voluntarily done. I am proud to say that almost two-thirds of this progress has been, since May of last year, been made. Two-thirds, or 390 of the 566, have desegregated since then. They have desegregated in 284 cities, some restaurants in 298 cities, some theaters in 280 cities, lunch counters in 340 cities. This has all been done voluntarily, and if we can do this much voluntarily, the rest can and should be done by compliance with the law.

I have talked too long, but this subject is one that is intensely interesting to me. I could not leave this rostrum without an attempt to arouse within you the desire to heal this Nation, to unify our people, to seek remedy for what we believe to be wrong in those places where remedies and not rancor are to be found and, most of all, to make it sternly clear what this Nation really believes in and what this Nation really stands for.

I came to Washington in 1931. I saw the Bonus Army driven down to the Anacostia Flats. I saw the businessmen hauled up before the Congressional committees, and I saw the Wall Street bankers with midgets on their knees. I saw all the great reform legislation born, but I am here to tell you today that we have had our ups and downs and our lows and our highs, but there has never been a period in our national life when businessmen could take greater pride in their achievements than today.

Relatively speaking, we have so many less economical problems than our adversaries that we ought not even worry about them. Our foreign relations are so much better than the problems that our adversaries have that we ought to really take pride, but we can't just let well enough be good enough. We have to do these jobs that are undone, and whether you pick up a paper and see what is happening in Cleveland or Austin or Boston, until we learn that we can win together and protect the constitutional rights of all Americans, then we will have work to do.

Russia has more people than we do. She has many more resources in many more categories than we have. She has 600 million arable acres of land, compared to our 187 million. She has 225 million population compared to our 190 million population. But the one thing she does not have is the imagination, the ingenuity, and the initiative that comes with the free enterprise system, where a capitalist is willing to invest his dollar in the hope that he will get a small return back on it and where the manager is willing to get up at daylight and work until midnight and develop stomach ulcers in order to get a better mouse trap at a cheaper price; where the employee will almost willingly get in a trot because he has pride in the product that his sweat produces.

Those three elements of our national society -- the capitalist, the manager, and the worker put together -- can out-produce and out-develop and out-survive any slave state where that incentive is not there and where that profit motive is gone.

So I don't speak to you as Democrats or Republicans. I hope I am President of all of the people of this country, because I am the only President that you have, at least for another eight or nine months. But I speak to you as Americans who want to leave this land a better place than you found it, who want your children to have the same opportunity that you have had and to go just as far as you have gone, and maybe even a little farther, and who recognize that if we survive in this world that is part slave and part free, it is going to be not because of our superiority of resources, but our superiority of system of government.

Now, let's make the Declaration of Independence, let's make that Constitution that we embrace when it comes to protecting our property rights, let's make it a living, breathing thing for all human beings. We demonstrated that for the first time in our national life you could elect a Catholic a President of the United States, and that was a proud day, because our Constitution and our Declaration of Independence had indicated and implied that you could always do that and that we had religious freedom, but until we actually did it, not fait accompli was there.

We also demonstrated you could elect a Southerner Vice President. I found myself after this terrible tragedy of last November with the problem of transition, the continuity of this Government, with the eyes of the world looking on us, and with 190 million people in doubt, and the businessmen and the captains of industry and the leaders of labor came to this house by the dozens and by the hundreds and said, "We are enlisted for the duration. Ask me not what church I belong to or what party I vote for. Just count me in the pot as doing what is good for my country."

The spirit of unity and closing ranks never made me more proud of my heritage. The Business Advisory Council has been here a number of times, labor and management has been here a number of times. I am going from here to meet with the railroad titans of this Nation, the Executive Board, and to the Railroad Workers, and I am going to plead with them to please work for another 20 days to try to settle this strike so that we will not drive our gross national product down, so that we will not create great unemployment, so that we will not injure this Nation, so that in the words of Isaiah, "We can come and reason together," and reason these things out.

So I say to you this is not just a pro forma thing for me. I feel what I am saying, and what I am doing, and I am grateful to each of you as individuals and to your company and to your Board of Directors for setting this kind of an example. I hope that in the months ahead, sometime we can meet again here to look at our record of achievement, to look at the record we have made in our individual companies, in our individual towns, in our individual communities, so that we can take pride in our achievements.

MORE

Please accept the gratitude of a grateful President who is doing his dead-level best to keep us pulling together, keeping our ranks closed, keeping us loving our brother and our fellowman, instead of hating him, keeping us united before the world instead of divided, because in unity there is strength, and in division there is disorder and defeat.

We are living in a challenging period, a dangerous period, but we have so much to preserve and so much to protect. You are the guardians of a good deal of it. So go back and do this job as you have done the job of progress in your own company, and know that your Nation will continue to be proud of you.

Thank you very much.

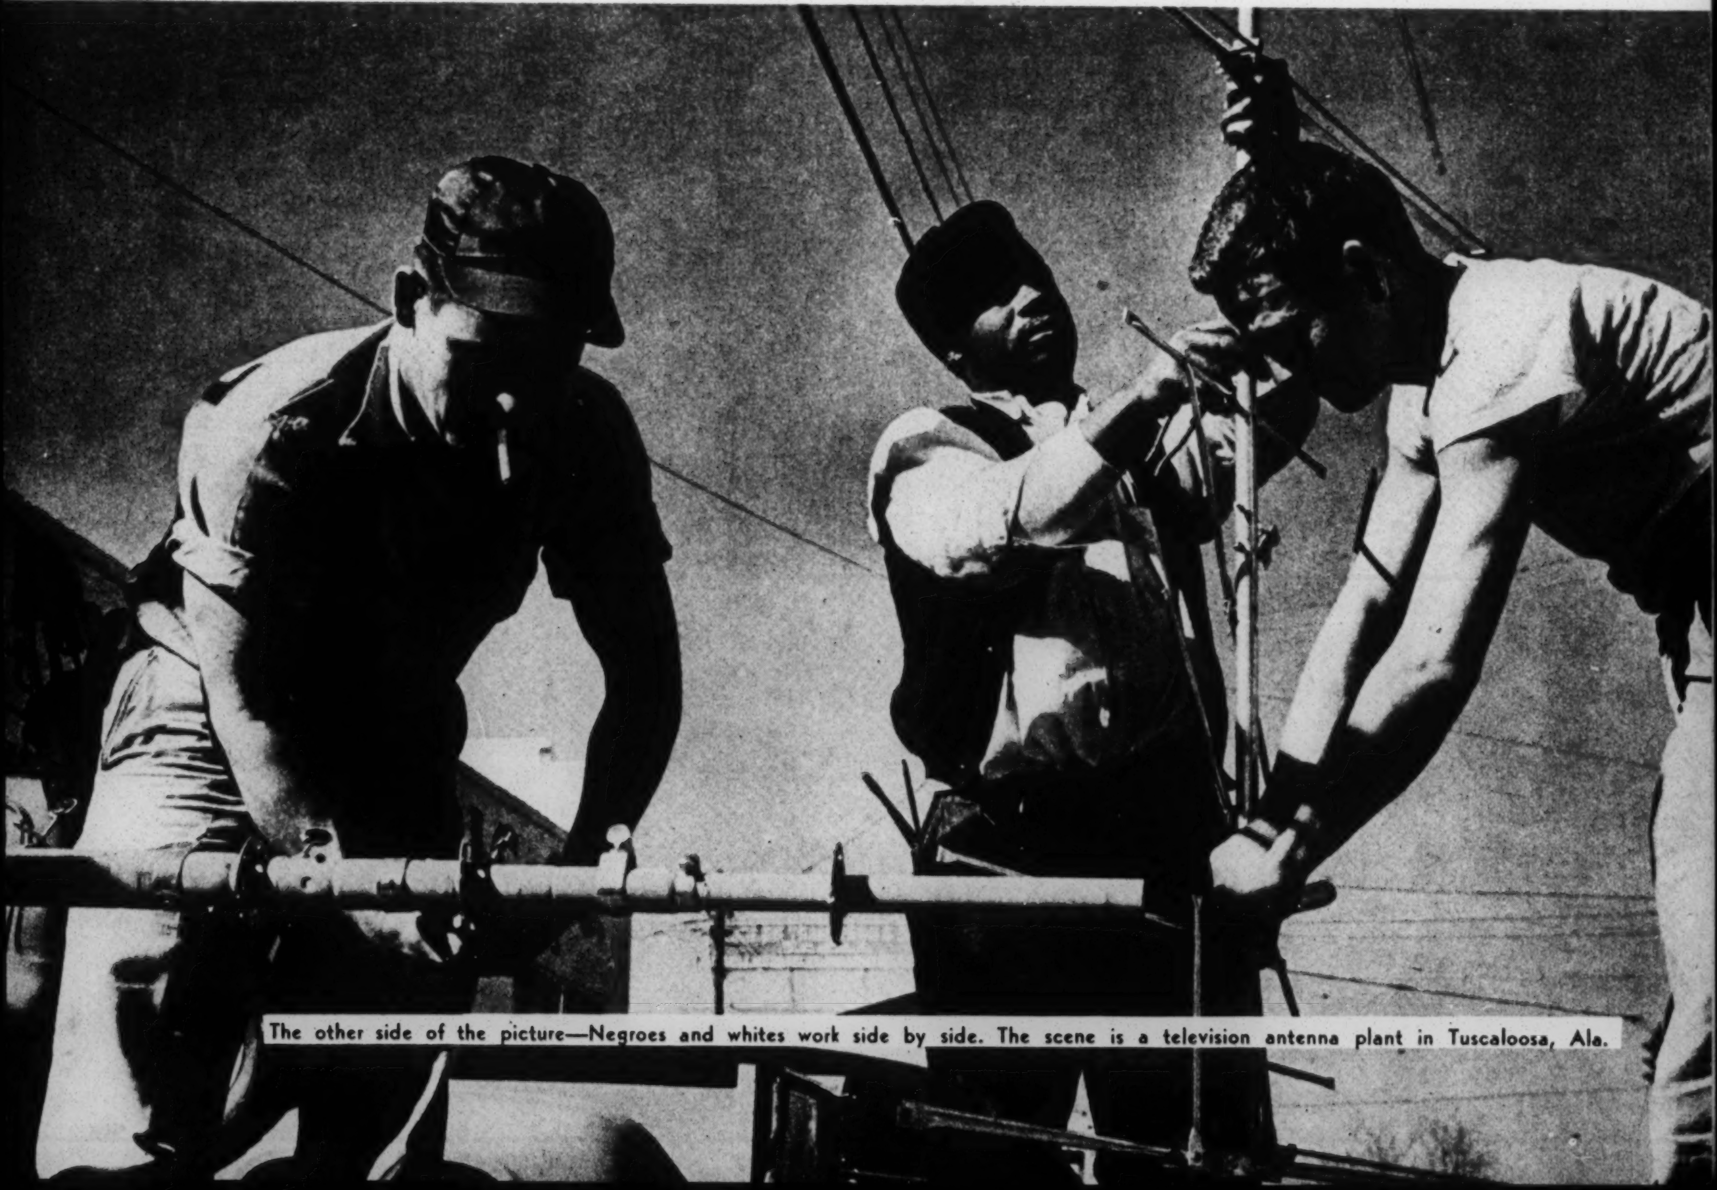
END

The New York Times Magazine
April [illegible], 1960 SECTION 6

A SOUTHERN VIEW OF THE SOUTH

A liberal Southerner sees the racial turmoil as part of revolutionary, forward-moving changes — changes that must be better explained to foreign critics.

by HAROLD C. FLEMING



The other side of the picture—Negroes and whites work side by side. The scene is a television antenna plant in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

ATLANTA.

THE turbulence accompanying Negro student demonstrations has thrust the South, once again, into the glare of publicity. Not since the tension in Little Rock subsided has the United States faced as great a danger of international scandal over the region's racial problems.

The stolid young faces of the Negro demonstrators, the grimaces of white rowdies, and the mouthings of white-supremacist politicians are made to order for Communist propagandists. Not that they need strain at the task; the normal functioning of the democratic press will do most of the work.

Coincidentally, President Eisenhower has just created a committee of leading Americans to survey our overseas information programs and policies. It may be hoped that they will concern themselves to some degree with the effectiveness of American efforts to counter exploitation of the periodic eruptions in the South. A fair number of Southerners have had some opportunity of their own to make such a judgment. For the years since the Supreme Court's school decision of 1954 have brought a steady flow of overseas visitors to the South. A turban in Atlanta, a fez in Montgomery or a sari in New Orleans—to say nothing of a British or German accent—is no longer the rarity it once was.

WHAT do these foreign visitors volunteer about our racial problems? Very little, indeed. But, more often than not, behind a courteous and noncommittal demeanor lies a well-developed set of preconceptions. Visitors from the emergent young nations of Asia and Africa are especially likely to harbor strongly negative views. To most of them, Southern racial incidents are atrocities of an undemocratic and unchanging society. Here, to their mind, is the archenemy colonialism in American dress and on the ascendancy.

As one young Nigerian expressed it, "How do your people expect to win our friendship when they exalt the very evils we have been fighting against?"

For the Negro or liberal white Southerner—the only ones likely to be asked such a question—a persuasive answer comes hard. It takes more time and interpretation than is afforded by an hour's conversation, or even a two-day stopover, to remold a sharply defined image of a whole region. The process has to start earlier, and continue later.

Admittedly the only satisfactory way to answer criticisms of our racial practices is to eliminate discrimination and segregation. Yet even the most optimistic prophets calculate the time this will require in years rather than in days or months. Let us, by all means, redouble our efforts. Meanwhile, more concern for the image we project to the rest of the world is imperative.

The violence, injustices and political excesses that have fouled the wake of the Supreme Court's desegregation rulings cannot be denied or suppressed. To try to do this will only earn us the distrust and contempt of those whose goodwill we seek. But we can honestly present a more positive picture of the South; if we are accurate, we will do so.

THE disturbances of the past few years are symptomatic not of regression, but of forward movement, bitterly contested but inexorable. The South's troubles are not caused by a resurgence of an old order; they are the results of an old order's last desperate rally against new forces it can neither understand nor control. It is a disheartening fact that as the pressures for change mount in the Deep South, more severe reactions may be expected. But these, too, will represent the backlash of a mortally strick- en system of inequality, not a rebirth of oppression.

ON THE EDUCATION FRONT—In Georgia a state commission is inviting both Negroes and whites to give their views on school integration. Above, a Negro leader in Atlanta is heard by the commission.

A middle-aged Southerner can remember a time when race relations stagnated peacefully, at least on the surface. There was occasional violence, to be sure, but it was mainly the ritual brutality of lynching, so common that it caused little public outcry. Segregation in its multitudinous forms was virtually unchallenged. Even the grossest inequalities—in schools and teachers' salaries, in trains and buses, in sanitation and medical care—were accepted by all but a few as part of the natural order.

As for the Negro's right to cast a meaningful ballot, to attend a high school or university, to swim in a municipal pool, in many areas there was no question of inequality—such opportunities for Negroes simply didn't exist. There were occasional gains within the rigidly separate framework, but these were so slight and scattered as to be almost imperceptible.

Many Southerners, scarcely aware of the cruel injustice of those years, look back on them as "the good old days" of race relations. Yet even they, hurled suddenly backward in time, would be shocked at the price in human suffering and denial that was paid for interracial peace.

During the last twenty years, a high price of another kind has been exacted of Southerners, white and Negro. Homes schools and churches have been bombed by small bands of hate-filled marauders. Mobs have rioted in the streets of Clinton and Tuscaloosa and Little Rock. Negro children have walked the gantlet of jeering adults and suffered abuses from bullying classmates. A few Negroes have died at the hands of the rabble who interpreted the inflammatory words of their betters as license to kill.

THIS is far from a complete tally; nor has it yet ceased to mount. But at least it is a price paid for something worth having—the elimination of injustice systematically practiced against a large segment of Americans. As a result, in Little Rock and elsewhere, countless children still unborn will get a better and more democratic education; some children already are. A mob drove Autherine Lucy out of the University of Alabama, but the same general effort peacefully opened the doors of more than 200 colleges and universities to Negroes.

Americans a hundred years hence may well look back on the race relations changes of our day as a major social revolution. While many may wonder what all the fuss was about, the more thoughtful will marvel that it was accomplished as rapidly and peacefully as it was. In any case, without minimizing the harsh costs of these changes, we can appreciate the value of what is being won by and for Americans.

It should not be assumed that the new aspirations and rising status of the Negro are the sole cause of the traditional South's malaise. The region is also shaken by the chills and fever of profound economic change, of huge population shifts, of big-city growth and rural decay.

Within a few short years the South has experienced an industrial revolution that was spread over generations in the rest of the country. In the decade following World War II, the South added 4,000 new manufacturing plants. A third of this new industrial growth was accounted for by only thirty - seven metropolitan areas; the lesser cities showed similar gains. By 1955 the average per capita income of Southerners had climbed to 257 per cent of its 1929 level, as compared with 141 per cent for the rest of the nation.

Population changes have been equally spectacular. During the Forties, the number of Southerners living in cities swelled by 39 per cent, as against only 15.4 per cent elsewhere in the country. At least four million native Southerners, more than half of them Negroes, have moved out of the region entirely. A smaller but sizable group of Northerners and Westerners have moved in with the new industry.

As these trends continue, the South is being abruptly transformed from a rural agricultural society to an urban, industrial one. But factories can be built and people shifted about far more speedily than attitudes and customs can be changed. Old roots have been torn up and new ones not yet put down. Outworn patterns of decision-making and political power have still to be reshaped to drastically changing circumstances. The central cities are choked with rural newcomers, under-educated, unskilled, and uninitiated in urban ways.

It is no wonder that widespread feelings of insecurity and anxiety lie close to the surface. Even the stabler elements of the society are uneasy in the face of rapid changes whose magnitude and significance they can only dimly perceive.

Racial antagonism is a ready outlet for the fears and frustrations bred by economic and social upheaval. The old isolation has broken down, leaving the South unprotected against the influx of people and ideas alien to its once impervious way of life. Seeking to hold on to the familiar, to a sense of continuing identity, many a white Southerner has rallied to the call for solidarity on the segregation issue. But to even the most recalcitrant it daily becomes clearer that this cause, too, will be lost. The racial patterns of the South cannot remain fixed and immutable while all else is in flux.

THESE are the realities of the Southern revolution—and he who tries to find the meaning of racial discord apart from them is on a fool's errand.

The dark-skinned peoples of Asia and Africa are peculiarly well-equipped to understand the conflict of old and new that disturbs the peace of the South. For, though different in detail, in essence it is not unlike the revolutionary ferment they know in their own countries. The upthrust of a people long denied, the fearful and sometimes cruel resistance of the privileged group, the clash of new technology and ancient custom—in one form or another, these are the common realities of our time, in southeast Asia and southeast United States alike.

One need only consider the persistence of caste and religious intolerance in India, tribalism in Nigeria, internecine strife in Indonesia, ethnic and language barriers in Malaya, revolt in Algeria, unrest in the Belgian Congo — and everywhere the stumbling blocks of ignorance and superstition, poverty and disease, inexperience and apathy. The path of progress, there no less than here, is clogged with this detritus of the past.

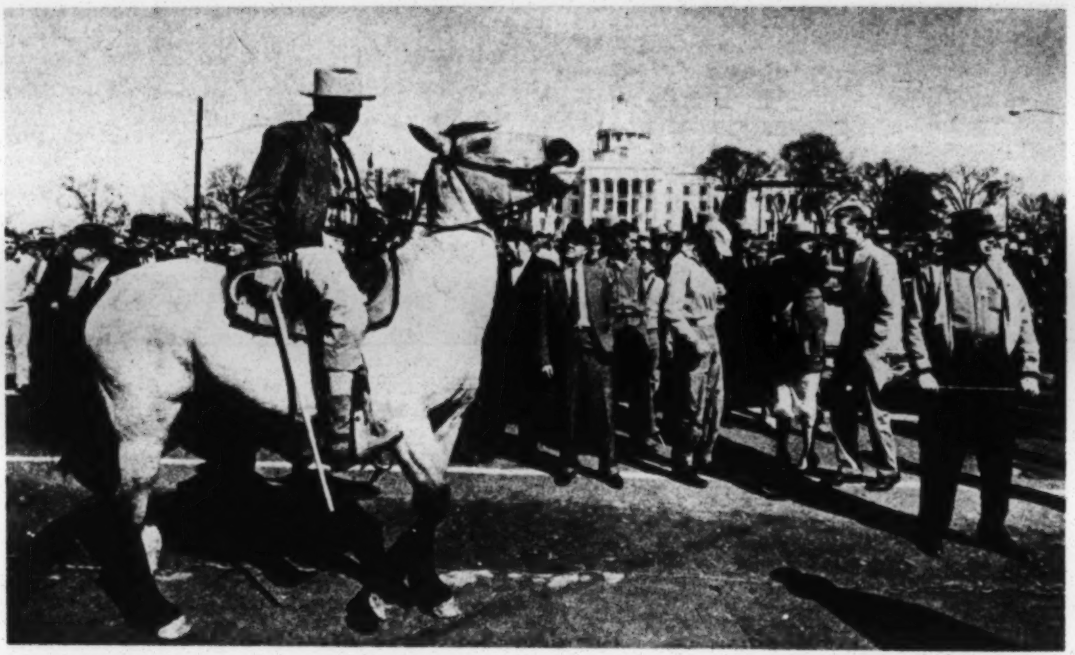
The failure to see the South's difficulties in these terms, a failure shared with foreign observers by many Americans, betrays a lack of historical perspective.

The South is perpetually being rediscovered in times of crisis by reporters and pundits and moralists. But in the obscure intervals between these moments, the flow of history continues. The outbreaks in Little Rock, Clinton or Tuscaloosa must be viewed against a backdrop, as part of a drama of sweeping transition rather than as self-contained incidents.

In Atlanta not long ago, a sensitive and well-informed visitor from India addressed himself to this problem.

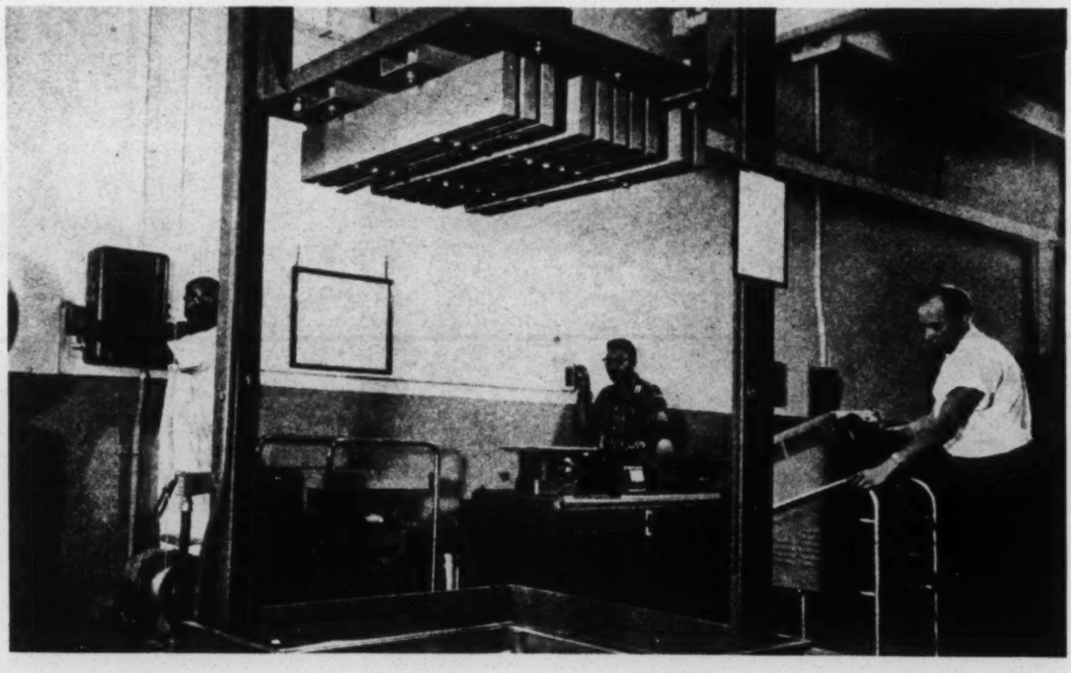
"In my country," he said "we try to conceal the difficulties we face in eradicating caste. I regret this. But we are not the self-appointed leader of the free world, like the United States. My people measure your anti-Negro acts against the high democratic standards you yourselves profess. At the height of the Little Rock disorder, the American information bulletins I read made almost no mention of it; instead, they talked of the exceptional American Negroes who have won fame or acceptance in spite of discrimination. So we were left to the simplification and sensationalism of the press."

PERHAPS the obstacles to creating abroad a more mature understanding of the South are insuperable. But it might be worth trying bold analysis, rather than silence or embarrassed mutterings, when our domestic revolution spills over into violence. After all, most of the uncommitted peoples of the world also know what it is to live through a revolution.



SEPARATION—Police, one on horseback, hold back a crowd near a Negro meeting in Montgomery, Ala.

INTEGRATION—A missile part is subjected to a shock test by workers in a plant in Winston-Salem, N. C.



HAROLD C. FLEMING is executive director of the Southern Regional Council, an organization in Atlanta that has been working to improve race relations in the South since 1919.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Accountant's Certificate

We have examined the financial statement of the Southern Regional Council, Inc. for the period January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion the accompanying statements taken from the full audit present fairly the financial position of the Southern Regional Council, Inc., at December 31, 1962, and the results of its operation for the period then ended.

Daniel E. Harrison
Daniel E. Harrison
Registered Public Accountant

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

BALANCE SHEET
December 31, 1962

ASSETS

Funds toward future obligations, 1963-64:
Cash in Bank, Citizens Trust Company - Checking		$ 57,779.30
Cash in Bank, Citizens Trust Company - Savings		42,024.00
Cash in Bank, First National Bank - Checking		18,701.10
Investment in Trust Fund, Trust Company of Georgia	$ 63,232.00
Income reinvested	2,669.90	65,901.90
Investment in Federal Intermediate Credit Bank 3.10% Debentures due 3/4/63		40,000.00	$224,406.30
Inventory, Pamphlets		$ 1,500.00
Office Equipment		13,766.49
Accounts Receivable - Sale of Stock		1,924.30	17,190.79
Total Assets			$241,597.09

LIABILITIES

Due to Special Projects, 1963-64:
Voter Education Project	$ 18,013.85
Registration and Voting Survey	1,552.91
Trust for Burned Churches	5,000.00
Southern Leadership Project	40,398.31
Special Fund for Educational Projects	4,687.42
New Orleans Project	813.59
Research in Student Adjustment	3,228.02
Consultant Service Program	526.34	$ 74,220.44
Special Grants-in-Aid to State Councils on Human Relations - 1963	$ 38,493.67
Advance Appropriations, General Operations - 1963-64	28,472.72
Reserve Fund	65,901.90
Obligations Outstanding	5,429.91	138,298.20
Total Liabilities		$212,518.64
Excess of Assets over Liabilities		29,078.45
Total		$241,597.09

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF INCOME AND EXPENSES - GENERAL OPERATIONS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

INCOME

Contributions:
Foundations	$ 149,924.30
Labor & Other Organizations	1,300.00
Churches	4,025.00
Individuals	1,728.63	$ 156,977.93
Interest Income	2,024.00
Dividends on Trust Fund	2,669.90
NEW SOUTH Subscriptions	5,079.02
Sale of Literature	841.72
Overhead from project grants	11,269.18	21,883.82
Total Income		$ 178,861.75

EXPENSES

Salaries	$ 101,328.56
Social Security Taxes	2,796.58
Travel	10,506.84
Telephone and Telegraph	4,977.01
Consultant Fees	3,632.24
Executive Committee & Annual Meetings	6,690.93
Books and Subscriptions	2,756.72
Office Supplies	3,535.52
NEW SOUTH Postage	1,606.09
NEW SOUTH Printing	5,453.21
NEW SOUTH Authors' Fees	255.00
Postage	1,879.24
Printing	11,009.96
Rent	7,200.00
Accounting	635.00
Georgia Sales Tax	73.59
Miscellaneous	1,372.74
Reinvestment in Trust Fund	2,669.90
Group Hospitalization Insurance	991.73
Group Term Life Insurance	662.95
Liability Insurance	314.99
Retirement Insurance	2,614.35
Foreign Visitors' Expense	886.64
Moving Expense	406.68
Total Expenses		174,256.47
Excess of Income over Expenses		$ 4,605.28

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS - SPECIAL PROJECTS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT

RECEIPTS

Field Foundation, Inc.	$ 75,000.00
Taconic Foundation, Inc.	60,000.00
Edgar Stern Family Fund	62,000.00
Organizations and Churches	2,524.46
United Church Board for Homeland Ministries	1,000.00
Individuals	125.00
Total Receipts		$200,649.46

DISBURSEMENTS

Salaries	$ 21,939.08
Social Security Taxes	466.47
Travel	6,748.36
Telephone and Telegraph	1,744.25
Consultant Fees	2,083.98
Grants for Voter Registration Program	133,437.60
Rent	1,610.00
Overhead	7,269.18
Moving Expenses	1,385.05
Office Equipment	2,962.52
Office Supplies	443.30
General Insurance	152.49
Hospitalization Insurance	163.50
Miscellaneous Expense	84.83
Printing	523.92
Postage	120.62
Revolving Bail Fund	600.00
Office Renovation	213.21
Total Disbursements		181,948.36
Balance, December 31, 1962		$ 18,701.10

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS - SPECIAL PROJECTS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

SOUTHERN LEADERSHIP PROJECT

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962		$36,990.61
Rockefeller Brothers Fund		40,000.00
Total Receipts		$76,990.61

DISBURSEMENTS

Salaries	$ 8,568.84
Travel and Communication	3,020.86
Office Expense	1,159.45
Printing and Distribution	3,564.85
Consultants' Fees	4,785.00
Consultants' Travel	2,948.10
Overhead	4,000.00
Southern Project	2,500.00
Fee for Tapes on Alabama, etc. Ed Randall	5,800.00
Total Disbursements		36,347.10
Balance, December 31, 1961		$40,643.51

SPECIAL FUND FOR EDUCATIONAL PROJECTS

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962		$ 8,057.08

DISBURSEMENTS

Work in Mississippi	$ 239.66
New Orleans Community Relations Council	360.00
Florida State University	600.00
Atlanta University	170.00
Alabama Council on Human Relations	2,000.00
Total Disbursements		3,369.66
Balance, December 31, 1961		$ 4,687.42

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS - SPECIAL PROJECTS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED

RECEIPTS

Woman's Baptist Home and Foreign Missionary Convention of North Carolina	$ 25.00
Woman's Society of Christian Service Southeastern Jurisdiction, Alabama	250.00
Mrs. F. R. Muhleman, Tennessee	50.00
Miscellaneous Income	417.94	$ 742.94
Southern Regional Council - To Cover Deficits for:
Year 1961	$ 6,185.40
Year 1962	3,341.88	9,527.28
Total Receipts		$10,270.22

DISBURSEMENTS

Travel	$ 3,982.91
Materials	101.91
Total Disbursements		$ 4,084.82
Balance, January 1, 1962 (1961 Deficit)		6,185.40
Total		$10,270.22

REGISTRATION AND VOTING SURVEY

Balance, January 1, 1962 and December 31, 1962	$ 1,552.91

EXHIBIT E

TRUST FOR BURNED CHURCHES

RECEIPTS

United Church Board for Homeland Ministries	$ 5,000.00
Balance, December 31, 1962	$ 5,000.00

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS - SPECIAL PROJECTS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

NEW ORLEANS PROJECT

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962		$ 2,169.07

DISBURSEMENTS

Printing, Promotion, Mailing, etc.	$ 575.00
Edgar Stern Family Fund	780.48
Total Disbursements		1,355.48
Balance, December 31, 1962		$ 813.59

RESEARCH IN STUDENT ADJUSTMENT

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962		$ 3,733.24
General Education Board		10,625.00
Total Receipts		$14,358.24

DISBURSEMENTS

Consultants' Fees	$ 7,250.00
Travel and Communication	2,645.03
Revolving Fund for Research Materials	966.91
Total Disbursements		10,861.94
Balance, December 31, 1962		$ 3,496.30

SPECIAL GRANT FOR RESEARCH

RECEIPTS

The Aaron E. Norman Fund, Inc.	$ 1,000.00

DISBURSEMENTS

Consultant Fee	$ 1,000.00

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS - SPECIAL PROJECTS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

SOUTHERN HISTORY PROJECT

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962	$ 2,800.00

DISBURSEMENTS

Research Grant	$ 2,800.00

CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962	$ 1,691.52

DISBURSEMENTS

Consultants' Fees	$ 880.00
Travel and Communication	285.18
Total Disbursements		1,165.18
Balance, December 31, 1962		$ 526.34

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

SCHEDULE OF CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED - GENERAL OPERATIONS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

CONTRIBUTIONS

Foundations:
Taconic Foundation, Inc.	$ 35,000.00
The Rockefeller Foundation	50,000.00
New World Foundation	25,000.00
Aaron E. Norman Fund	5,000.00
The Field Foundation	25,000.00
New York Foundation	3,750.00
Ottinger Foundation, Inc.	1,000.00
Hopkins Charitable Fund	1,000.00
Marion R. Ascoli Fund	1,000.00
Adele R. Levy Fund	1,000.00
San Francisco Foundation	250.00
Total		$ 148,000.00
Churches:
The Protestant Episcopal Church in U.S.A.	$ 1,000.00
Woman's Division of Christian Service, The Methodist Church	1,200.00
Division of National Missions of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church	1,000.00
Board of National Missions, United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.	250.00
Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church in the U.S.	250.00
Board of Education of the Methodist Church	300.00
Woman's Society of Christian Service, North Carolina Conference	25.00
Total		$ 4,025.00
Labor and Other Organizations:
Textile Workers Union of America	$ 200.00
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union	500.00
Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO	500.00
Mechanics & Farmers Bank	100.00
Total		$ 1,300.00

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
Atlanta, Georgia

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS
AID TO INDEPENDENT STATE COUNCILS ON HUMAN RELATIONS
January 1, 1962 to December 31, 1962

RECEIPTS

Balance, January 1, 1962	$ 38,984.83
Field Foundation, 1963	25,000.00
Taconic Foundation, 1962	25,000.00
Total Receipts	$ 88,984.83

DISBURSEMENTS

Alabama Council on Human Relations		$ 6,600.00
Arkansas Council on Human Relations		5,400.00
Florida Council on Human Relations		3,372.97
Georgia Council on Human Relations		6,300.00
Houston (Texas) Council on Human Relations		2,300.00
North Carolina Council on Human Relations		4,900.00
South Carolina Council on Human Relations		6,300.00
Tennessee Council on Human Relations		6,100.00
Virginia Council on Human Relations		7,500.00
Discretionary Fund	$ 1,218.19
Advance toward 1963 Grants-in-Aid	500.00	1,718.19
Total Disbursements			$ 50,491.16
Balance, December 31, 1962			$ 38,493.67

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Room 201
Atlanta 3, Georgia
December, 1962

OFFICERS*

PRESIDENT

James McBride Dabbs

VICE-PRESIDENTS

Rufus E. Clement
Miss Josephine Wilkins
Albert W. Dent
Marion A. Wright

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

John H. Wheeler, Chairman

Paul R. Christopher
John A. Griffin
Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton
John P. Nelson, Jr.
Raymond Wheeler
H. Franklin Williams
Stephen J. Wright
Thomas W. Young

LEGAL COUNSEL

Joseph F. Haas

*Addresses of the officers are given in the attached list of the members of the Council. All organizations and positions are shown for identification purposes only.

Class of 1963

Crawford Brock W
14 Professional Court
Rome, Georgia

W. E. Solomon C
Executive Secretary
Palmetto State Teachers Association
1719 Taylor Street
Columbia, South Carolina

Mrs. E. M. Sparling White
Route 5
Hot Springs, Arkansas

Charles Steele C
Executive Secretary
Louisville Urban League
209 West Market Street
Louisville, Kentucky

James E. Stewart C
548 N. E. Fourth Street
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

James Stokely
405 Clifton Heights White
Newport, Tennessee

Miss Florence Sytz W
1347 Moss Street
New Orleans 19, Louisiana

Lee B. Thomas, Jr. C
Executive Vice-President
Vermont American Corporation
500 East Main Street
Louisville 2, Kentucky

The Rev. Thomas Thrasher White
Chapel of the Cross
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Mrs. J. F. Tillman White
Palmetto Farm, RFD 1
Lewisburg, Tennessee

deceased
~~H. Council Trenholm~~
~~President~~
~~Alabama State College~~
~~Montgomery, Alabama~~

John H. Wheeler Negro
President
Mechanics and Farmers Bank
Box 1932
Durham, North Carolina

Raymond Wheeler White
1900 Brunswick Avenue
Charlotte, North Carolina

Bell I. Wiley White
Department of History
Emory University
Atlanta 22, Georgia

Miss Josephine Wilkins White
387 South Milledge Avenue
Athens, Georgia

H. Franklin Williams White
Vice President
The University of Miami
Coral Gables, Florida

Paul Williams White
3320 Gloucester Road
Richmond, Virginia

Marion A. Wright White
Top Knot
Linville Falls, North Carolina

Stephen J. Wright Negro
President
Fisk University
Nashville, Tennessee

Thomas W. Young Negro
Publisher
The Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Class of 1964

Fred D. Alexander Negro
2140 Senior Drive
Charlotte 8, North Carolina

The Rev. Hubert Beckwith White
Congregational Christian Church
of Fiarfax County
P. O. Box 186
Annandale, Virginia

B. R. Brazeal Negro
Academic Dean
Morehouse College
Atlanta 14, Georgia

The Rev. T. C. Brooke W
St. Elizabeth's Episcopal Church
P. O. Box 4211
Roanoke, Virginia

The Most Rev. Joseph B. Brunini W
Bishop, The Catholic Church
123 North West Street
Jackson, Mississippi

I. H. Burney
Secretary
Afro-American Life Insurance Company Negro
P. O. Box 660
Jacksonville, Florida

Irving E. Carlyle W
Wachovia Bank Building
Winston-Salem, North Carolina

Hodding Carter
Editor and Publisher white
Delta-Democrat Times
Greenville, Mississippi

The Rev. C. S. Cartwright white
Pulaski Heights Christian Church
Hillcrest and Spruce Streets
Little Rock, Arkansas

Paul R. Christopher
Regional Director, AFL-CIO
216 Flatiron Building white
Knoxville, Tennessee

Rufus E. Clement
President Negro
Atlanta University
Atlanta 14, Georgia

James A. Colston N
President
Knoxville College
Knoxville, Tennessee

Mrs. James S. Crate
8510 Ferris Street
Houston 35, Texas White

Jerome Crossman W
President
Ryan Consolidated Petroleum Corporation
3400 Republic National Bank Building
Dallas, Texas

James McBride Dabbs white
Rip Raps Plantation
Mayesville, South Carolina

Herbert M. Davidson
Editor and Publisher white
Daytona Beach News Journal
Daytona Beach, Florida

Albert W. Dent
President Negro
Dillard University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Frank P. Graham
(United Nations, New York) white
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Douglas Jackson W
Perkins School of Technology
Southern Methodist University
Dallas, Texas

Mrs. Charles White N
2209 Southmore Boulevard
Houston 4, Texas

Class of 1965

A. D. Beittel W
President
Tougaloo Southern Christian College
Tougaloo, Mississippi

Mrs. Joe R. Brewer W
Box 314, Route 1
Scott, Arkansas

Mrs. Moise Cahn W
40 Versailles Boulevard
New Orleans, Louisiana

The Rev. Caxton Doggett W
Pastor, First Methodist Church
~~P. O. Box 825~~ 504 South Lake Street
~~Winter Park, Florida~~ Lakeland, Florida

Luther H. Foster Negro
President
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee, Alabama

C. G. Gomillion Negro
Chairman
Division of the Social Sciences
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee, Alabama

Paul E. Green ~~Negro~~
University of North Carolina White
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

John A. Griffin White
Director
Division of University Relations
Florida State University
Tallahassee, Florida

Joseph F. Haas White
1116 First National Bank Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton Negro
582 University Place, N. W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia

The Rt. Rev. John E. Hines W
Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Texas
520 San Jacinto Street
Houston 2, Texas

The Rev. Duncan Hunter W
~~District Superintendent~~ 8705 Camille Dr. S.E.
~~The Methodist Church~~
~~1009 Westmoreland Avenue~~
Huntsville, Alabama

Guy B. Johnson W
Department of Sociology
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

E. T. Kehrer W
Director
Southeastern Region, ILGWU
1065 Gordon Street, S. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Mrs. Austin Kimball W
3131 S. W. First Avenue
Gainesville, Florida

Z. A. Looby N
327 Charlotte Avenue
Nashville, Tennessee

Rabbi Charles Mantinband White
~~808 Mamie Street~~ Temple Emanuel
~~Hattiesburg, Mississippi~~ P.O.Box 1502
Longview, Tex.

Mrs. Vivian Carter Mason
(The Peace Corps, Washington, DC)
6401 Virginia Beach Boulevard Negro
Norfolk, Virginia

The Rev. M. D. McCollom White
P. O. Box 423
Walterboro, South Carolina

John P. Nelson, Jr.
702 Gravier Building White
533 Gravier Street
New Orleans 12, Louisiana

Lucius H. Pitts
President Negro
Miles College
Birmingham, Alabama

David H. Scull W
President
Turnpike Press
Annandale, Virginia

Andrew M. Secrest W
Editor
The Cheraw Chronicle
Cheraw, South Carolina

The Rev. Kelly M. Smith N
First Baptist Church
318 Eighth Avenue, North
Nashville, Tennessee

McNeill Smith W
700 Jefferson Street Building
Greensboro, North Carolina

Class of 1966

Roosevelt D. Crockett n
President
Philander Smith College
Little Rock, Arkansas

The Rev. Theodore R. Gibson ~~W~~
Christ Episcopal Church Negro
3841 Hibiscus Street
Miami 33, Florida

Edward E. Haddock W
1133 West Franklin Street
Richmond 20, Virginia

Robert J. Harris Pavillion IX West Lawn
~~Department of Political Science~~
~~Vanderbilt University~~ U. of Va.
~~Nashville, Tennessee~~ Charlottesville, Va.

Mrs. Martin Harvey n
415 N. Farish Street
Jackson 2, Mississippi

John G. Lewis N
P. O. Box 2110
Baton Rouge, Louisiana

Benjamin E. Mays Negro
President
Morehouse College
Atlanta 14, Georgia

Francis Pickens Miller W
(2810 "P" Street, N. W.
Washington, D. C.)
Charlottesville, Virginia

L. D. Milton Negro deceased 6/63
President
Citizens Trust Company
212 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Riley B. Montgomery W
President
College of the Bible
Lexington, Kentucky

J. Rupert Picott n
Virginia Teachers Association
316 Clay Street
Richmond, Virginia

Dr. Samuel Proctor n
Associate Director
(The Peace Corps, Washington, D.C.
Greensboro, North Carolina

Mrs. J. N. Rayzor
3207 Groveland Lane White
Houston 19, Texas

J. M. Richards W
President
Columbia Theological Seminary
Decatur, Georgia

Dr. Harry V. Richardson
President
Interdenominational Negro
Theological Center
671 Beckwith Street, S. W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia

Rabbi Jacob Rothschild White
1589 Peachtree Street, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Miss Dorcas Ruthenburg
2215 Bonnycastle Avenue White
Louisville 5, Kentucky

Walter Sharp
Route 2, Beech Creek Road White
Brentwood, Tennessee

~~Charles A. Shaw~~
~~President~~
~~Watchtower Life Insurance~~ ~~Company~~
~~2206 Dowling Street~~
~~Houston, Texas~~

Courtney Siceloff
Director
Penn Community Services White
St. Helena Island
Frogmore, South Carolina

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Alexander W
O. Sigur
P. O. Box 532, U.S.L. Station
Lafayette, Louisiana

J. Ray Shute White
317 E. Windsor Street
Monroe, North Carolina

Moreland G. Smith white
3236 Bankhead Avenue
Montgomery 6, Alabama

William H. Townsend, O.D.
507 W. 31st Street
Little Rock, Arkansas

Nat Welch
322 Hare Avenue white
Auburn, Alabama

Life Fellows

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames white
The Wren's Nest
Tryon, North Carolina

Leonard Haas white
601 Haas-Howell Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gordon B. Hancock N
P. O. Box 6056
Richmond 22, Virginia

Bishop M. LaFayette Harris
The Methodist Church N
250 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Edward A. McDowell W
Southern Baptist Theological Seminary
Wake Forest, North Carolina

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
June 25, 1963

THE CIVIL RIGHTS CRISIS: A SYNOPSIS OF RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

(This is a synopsis of racial protest and reaction in the South from April 1963 through June 24, 1963, prepared by the Research Department of the Southern Regional Council. It is neither a press release nor a detailed analysis of recent events. It is meant to serve only as background information. Additional data or corrections are invited.)

ALABAMA:

Attalla --	April 24 -- William Moore, a Baltimore postman hiking to Jackson on a one-man civil rights crusade, found murdered near here. His bullet-pierced body, still carrying anti-segregation signs, was discovered along U. S. Highway 11.
Alabama-Georgia Border --	May 3-10--Freedom marchers arrested as they entered Alabama to continue ill-fated march of William Moore. Found guilty of breach-of-peace charges in Fort Payne, June 3, fined $200 each and court costs. Their attorneys filed immediate notice of appeal.
Anniston --	May 12--Negro homes and a church fired into by a carload of whites. Former Ku Klux Klan member convicted for shooting into church (May 30), sentenced to 180 days in jail. City commission formed bi-racial committee of 4 Negroes, 5 whites, May 18.
Birmingham --	April 3 - June 21--Weeks of mass Negro demonstrations in which thousands were arrested ended May 10, when a truce was reached between prominent white businessmen and Negro leaders. Truce almost came apart May 11-12, when a riot broke out following 2 bombings of Negro property. Federal troops were alerted, remained near city until May 31. Initial steps taken in June to implement desegregation agreement included dropping of racial barriers in the fitting rooms of major downtown department stores and promotion of some Negro employees. Though unrelated to the agreement, three of City's four public golf courses slated to re-open June 29.
Gadsden --	June 18-21--More than 450 Negroes, many of them children, arrested June 18 for defying an injunction against sit-in demonstrations. Forty-two more arrested June 21. Several downtown churches accepted Negroes for services without incident June 16.
Mobile --	June 1 --Sheraton Hotel announced it will desegregate.
Montgomery --	May 27--Montgomery Advertiser-Journal announced that papers will cease to print Negro editions, incorporate Negro news with white news, effective immediately.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

ARKANSAS:

Fayetteville -- June 17--Local restaurant association began a 60-day desegregation test.

Hot Springs -- April 4--Negroes attempted to integrate local bath house, 4 arrested.

Little Rock -- June 3--Arkansas Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional 4 state laws that NAACP contended had been adopted to suppress its activities. Theatres desegregated the following week.

Pine Bluff -- April-June--1,300 Negroes participated in a march protesting all segregation (April 1). Thirty-nine arrested April 25 in demonstration to integrate local theatre. Four Negroes served at Woolworth's and Walgreen lunch counters May 5. Biracial committee formed in early June.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

FLORIDA:

Brandenton -- Plans have been announced to picket stores and theatres.

Cocoa -- Late May - early June--Peaceful picketing of restaurants and hotels. Mayor has been meeting with owners.

Daytona Beach -- June 1-9--At least 7 street demonstrations, also picketing and sit-ins, involving in one instance over 100 persons, at least 12 arrests. Targets are theatres, hotels, recreation facilities and restaurants (beaches and some lunch counters are desegregated). Mayor has formed a biracial committee.

Gainesville -- June 2--Attempt of Negroes to buy movie tickets led to gathering of 1000 persons, some violence, 1 shooting, and mayor formed biracial committee during the 4-hour disturbance. Picketing of theatres and stores subsequently peaceful, continued.

FLORIDA (Continued)

Melbourne--	No demonstrations. Mayor has named bi-racial committee.
Miami --	May 25 - June 1 -- Peaceful picketing of chain stores for employment. All municipal facilities are desegregated. No demonstrations.
Palmetto --	Plans have been announced to picket stores and theatres.
Orlando --	June 8 -- City government forming a committee to meet demands and avert demonstrations, none to date.
Sarasota --	June 1 -- Picketing stores and theatres, peaceful, continuous to date.
St. Petersburg --	Theatre picketing threatened. No demonstrations. Has bi-racial committee.
Tallahassee --	May 23 - June 8 -- Large scale (75 pickets 1st day) demonstrations began, primarily aimed at theatres, but also chain stores (for employment). By May 28, 29, 30 protest marchers numbering 300 and 400, 500 arrests in 3 days, tear gas used. During the first week of June Court upheld the right to picket, limited number of pickets. Picketing subsequently continuous and with police guard.
Tampa --	Has had a bi-racial committee for some time, most facilities are desegregated, employment demands being met. No demonstrations.
Winter Haven --	June 1-7 -- Swim-ins, hostile white crowds, beaches closed.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

GEORGIA:

Albany --	May 7 - June 24 --Picketing and boycotting began May 7, with Negro employment the goal and lasted for three consecutive days, then sporadically through May 25, with over 100 arrests. On June 14, after Negro leaders had legally contested the sale and lost, the city sold one pool and tennis court to James Gray for $72,000, kept others closed. Early in day of June 19, 47 Negro ministers issued manifesto asking peaceful negotiation of differences. Late in day of June 19, 20, and 21, gathering to march and demonstrate, at least 140 Negroes were arrested, there was some violence. Negro stores were closed.

GEORGIA (continued)

Atlanta -- April 12 - June 24--After first sit-in attempt April 12, Atlanta had demonstrations - sit-ins, a prayer march (estimated 200 participants), kneel-ins, picketing - on at least 32 days from April 27 to the present, with at least 103 arrests. Demonstrations were usually in small groups, by June 7 drawing some crowds of hostile whites and occasioning one stabbing. Targets were restaurants and cafeterias. Highlights: 2 Negro Metropolitan Opera singers denied restaurant service May 5; Journal and Constitution dropped racial designations from obituaries, want-ads and amusements; and a night club integrated second week of May; students agreed to suspend demonstrations for bond issue vote May 15; Chamber of Commerce made public statement urging desegregation of accommodations May 29; city pools opened integrated June 10; 14 leading motels and hotels announced integrated policy June 20; leading restaurants expected to follow suit week of June 24. Some churches which previously turned away Negroes have admitted them to services. Mayor has met with Negro and white leaders without an official committe Atlanta has a private, staffed Council on Human Relations.

Augusta -- April 5 -- A group of young people picketed municipal recreation facilities.

Brunswick -- June 20 -- Howard Johnson motel desegregation.

Columbus -- Demonstrations threatened, none to date.

Macon -- April 2 and 3 -- Two rows initiated by whites resulted in one stabbing, two arrests in integrated park. Mayor declined to close park, his mailbox bombed April 6. April 22, 5 Negro girls sat-in at segregated (some are integrated) lunch counter and were arrested. Has a Negro committee which has negotiated with whites with some success in past.

Marietta -- By mid-May reported to have a bi-racial committee. No demonstrations .

Rome -- April 2 -- Sixty-two high school students stood trial (51 of age received sentences) for lunch counter sit-ins of previous week, the first such activity in the northwest area of Georgia. June 12, 13, 14 - 15 students sat-in again.

GEORGIA (Continued)

Savannah -- June 3 - June 24-- Current wave of demonstrations -- marches, picketing, sit-ins, began June 3, continued daily through June 14, when the city announced some restaurants, theatres, and hotels had agreed to desegregate. (On June 4, 3 movies had desegregated for a few hours, then re-segregated after a protest demonstration by whites.) June 13 -- Negro home shot into. When owners reneged demonstrations resumed June 18, 19, 20. Over 1000 arrests in 2½ weeks. Four restaurants have been granted injunctions against demonstrators on their property. Mayor has been meeting with a recognized bi-racial committee formed during the month. June 20 -- Howard Johnson's desegregated.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

KENTUCKY:

Louisville -- April 9---May 16 -- The 11-member Louisville Human Relations Committee submitted to the Board of Alderman on April 9, an ordinance outlawing racial discrimination in public business places. The ordinance provided for fines up to $100 for violations. After three convictions, the City could get an injunction against the violator which could lead to jail sentence for contempt of court. The ordinance was passed on May 16, to go into effect in mid-September.

The new ordinance will include all remaining restaurants, barber shops, pool halls, and any other segregated public facilities. Public schools, parks, swimming pools, hotels, theatres and 268 of 410 restaurants have been desegregated in the past eight years, the restaurants two years ago after mass demonstrations and a Negro shopping boycott.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

LOUISIANA:

Baton Rouge -- May 28 - June 4 -- City created a bi-racial committee, the first such group to be appointed in Louisiana (May 28). Committee met for first time May 31, following a march by 21 Negroes around the state capitol (May 29), and a sit-in (May 30). Negroes agreed to a 30-day truce June 4.

New Orleans -- April 3 -- Louisiana State University -- medical school cafeteria closed following a walkout by Negro employees after a Negro pre-med student was refused service.

April 26 -- State Attorney General Jack F. P. Gremillion declared there is no law in Louisiana which prohibits Negroes from occupying hotels or motels. But no hotels or motels accept Negro guests at the present time, with the exception of the airport hotel at New Orleans airport.

Shreveport -- June 1 -- Negro demonstration held.

Winnsboro -- May 30 -- Beaten by whites, a Negro teacher resigned his post.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

MISSISSIPPI:

Clarksdale -- May 4--June 22-- State NAACP President Aaron Henry's drugstore was damaged by an explosion which ripped a hole in the roof; no one injured (May 4). A similar firebomb was tossed into Henry's home April 12 during a visit there by Negro Congressman Charles L. Diggs (D., Mich.). Negroes threatened to broaden their boycott of downtown merchants May 26, unless bi-racial talks were held. Henry announced the launching of a series of spot picketing and demonstrations in the city (June 22).

Greenville -- May 25 --City Council voted unanimously to consider the possibility of forming a bi-racial commission.

Jackson -- May 27 - June 24 -- After talks between 13 Negro leaders and Mayor Allen C. Thompson broke off, a series of demonstrations began May 28, resulting in more than 600 arrests by June 6, when a state judge issued an injunction barring further demonstrations. Same day two Negro men integrated the municipal golf course, teeing off without incident. Local NAACP leader Medgar W. Evers murdered June 12. Following his funeral services June 15, Negroes clashed with police in downtown area; Justice Department Attorney John Doar helped bring demonstration under control. Next day four young Negro women were admitted to a white Protestant church without incident. Mayor Thompson announced June 18 that city will hire 6 Negro policemen, Negro school-crossing guards, and seven Negro sanitation workers. A 42-year old fertilizer salesman, Bryan de la Beckwith of Greenwood, was charged with the murder

MISSISSIPPI (Continued)

Jackson -- of Medgar Evers June 23. Jackson District Attorney William L. Waller said June 24 that he will seek the death penalty for Beckwith.

Lexington -- May 8 -- A Negro who attempted to register to vote reported that white men threw "Molotov cocktails" into his home about 3 a. m.; no one was injured.

McComb -- May 15 -- Injunction against CORE forbidding it to back sit-in demonstrations at local bus station struck down by Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Winona -- June 9--Two Negro women and a 15-year old girl beaten by police at the local jail after trying to use the white facilities at town's bus station. The women, who were released a few days later, have been active in voter registration work in Mississippi.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

NORTH CAROLINA:

Asheville -- Mayor's bi-racial committee of 12 formed this spring. Five lunch counters and 3 drive-in restaurants desegregated in late June.

Charlotte -- April 19-May 30--Proprietors of segregated hotels, restaurants, and theatres warned of mass picketing unless they agreed to desegregate (April 19). Chamber of Commerce urged immediate desegregation of all public facilities May 23, and eight major hotels and motels dropped all racial barriers four days later. A permanent bi-racial committee was formed by the mayor in May.

Chapel Hill -- May 24-25--Chamber of Commerce issued statement opposing discrimination May 24. Two hundred and fifty Negroes demonstrated next day.

Concord -- June 7--Bi-racial committee appointed. Seven drug stores and 9 restaurants desegregated.

Durham -- May 18-June 5--1,400 were arrested during demonstrations May 18-20. Temporary truce agreed upon May 21, with the appointment of a bi-racial committee by the mayor. City Council desegregated swimming pools May 30. Twelve motels and hotels, 55 restaurants desegregated June 4. Following day mayor's bi-racial committee announced that 31 retail businesses and several industrial concerns would institute or continue practice of hiring and promoting without regard to race. Public accommodations ordinance currently being considered. Charges against some 1,400 students arrested were dropped.

N. C. (Continued)

Enfield -- May 30--Local theatre picketed.

Edenton -- April 5--Three Negroes arrested for picketing a theatre in March were acquitted.

Fayetteville -- May 14-June 19--Police dispersed mobs of Negroes and whites with tear gas May 14. Demonstrations lasting over a week began May 19, with some 1,500 persons participating in daily marches. Mayor's coordinating committee recommended immediate desegregation of restaurants and theatres May 27. Demonstrations resumed June 11, continued several days. Nine-man bi-racial committee appointed by mayor following week. 12 Motels and hotels desegregated June 19.

Goldsboro -- Four parades of demonstrators staged during week of May 30.

Greensboro -- May 10-June 23--Mass demonstrations began May 10, resulted in the arrest of some 440 persons by May 15. 420 arrested May 19 for sitting-in at a Howard Johnson parking lot. Demonstrations continued through May 24, with approximately 1,500 arrested. Mayor appointed a 16-member committee on Human Relations May 22 and two days later city's governing body unofficially endorsed an 11-point resolution urging integration of businesses. Truce arranged May 25, but demonstrations resumed June 2. Official end of truce came June 6, was marked by another demonstration in which 278 were arrested. S&W cafeteria desegregated during week ending June 22. Earlier four indoor theatres had tentatively agreed to desegregate.

Hickory -- June 6--Mayor formed a bi-racial Community Relations Council.

High Point -- May 28-30--Mass demonstrations began May 28, mayor's bi-racial (11-member) committee appointed two days later.

Lenior -- May 24--Mayor appointed five-member bi-racial committee.

Lexington -- June 3-6--Mayor Sink appointed bi-racial committee of 10 members. June 3, 15 or more Negroes requested and received service at drug store lunch counter June 5; but they were turned away at theatre and bowling alley. Demonstration by approximately 50 Negro students met by anti-desegregation group of 500 whites; one person killed and seven arrested June 6. The First Methodist Church recently admitted Negro worshippers.

Lumberton -- June 6--Mayor Hedgpeth appointed tri-racial committee of Indian, Negro and white members.

Monroe -- Mayor's bi-racial committee of 12 members formed sometime in May.

Mount Airy -- May 30--3 Negroes served in a drug store.

Oxford -- June 16--Truce declared after previous demonstrations.

Raleigh -- April 4-June 5--Demonstrations began April 4, continued for over a month. By May 10 some 250 had been arrested. Following day 1,000 demonstrated; May 14, 750 marched, were mocked and cursed by about 200 whites. 347 were arrested, with 15 charged with assault and one for carrying a concealed weapon. A 15-member bi-racial committee was appointed by the Mayor May 14, and the Raleigh Merchants Bureau adopted a resolution same day urging its 400 members to serve all persons. Demonstrations continued through June 3. Some 76 food and amusement concerns desegregated June 5.

Roxboro -- June 23--Mayor appointed a 20-member bi-racial committee.

Statesville -- June 9--Some restaurants and cafeterias voluntarily desegregated.

Thomasville -- May 10-June 1--Spontaneous sit-in by a group of teen-age Negroes at a restaurant May 10 followed by planned demonstrations beginning May 24. Two day later Negroes called off demonstrations until June 1, but 300 demonstrated May 30. City-owned pools opened on an integrated basis June 1; no incidents.

Wadesboro -- June 5--Windows of 2 business establishments, including one restaurant which had recently desegregated, were shot out in a pre-dawn shooting spree; no injuries.

Wilmington -- June 7--Some 75 high school students staged a protest demonstration at cafeterias and theatres; a bi-racial commiteee is studying the problem.

Winston-Salem -- May 21-June 5--About 25 students picketed theatre May 21, and mayor appointed an 18-member bi-racial committee. Demonstrations continued through May 27. Fourteen of 15 major restaurants, many smaller restaurants, and all hotels and motels desegregated June 5.

OKLAHOMA:

Oklahoma City --	May 31-June 4--Following sit-ins May 31 and June 1, Bishop's, a local restaurant, agreed to desegregate, was joined June 3 by city's largest downtown cafeteria. Three city hotels desegregated June 2, were joined by one other and 20 suburban motels June 3. City council approved appointment of a 15-member Community Relations Commission June 4. Two days later the board of managers of the Central YMCA recommended that Negroes be allowed to rent rooms at the downtown YMCA.

SOUTH CAROLINA:

Charleston --	During the week of June 17-22, Kress, Woolworth and W.T. Grant department stores desegregated their facilities, two weeks after marches, sit-ins, stand-ins, and picketing, No official bi-racial committee has been formed as yet. Local groups have announced that pressure for additional desegregation will continue.
Columbia --	June 7--City Council began meeting with Negro leaders
Greenville --	On May 27 city officials met with Negro leaders, and on May 28, in less than 15 minutes, City Council repealed segregation laws but passed a "trespass" city ordinance making it unlawful not to leave a business after being asked to do so by the owner. The new law does not mention race. On June 3, 11 lunch counters were voluntary desegregated, two weeks after the Supreme Court made a Greenville case the key to a series of sit-in rulings by overturning the trespass convictions of ten Negroe arrested at a lunch counter in 1960. Small groups of Negroes ate in the 11 places without incident. Greenville is the second South Carolina city to desegregate lunch counters, Columbia having opened some lunch counters on a non-racial basis last August. The Greenville stores affected were: S.H. Kress, W.T. Grant, H.L.Green, Walgreen Drugs, Eckerds Drugs, and Belk-Simpson; in shopping centers, the K-Mart discount store and a Woolworth and Walgreen store. Desegregation was effected by a committee of variety and drug stores, and restaurant operators.
Rock Hill --	June 1--16 Negroes demonstrated in front of drive-in restaurant.
Spartenburg --	June 1--Unofficial meetings were held to consider desegregation. On June 5 most downtown lunch counters and restaurants desegregated and Negroes ate in several places without incident.
Sumter --	A suit to integrate the Carnegie Public Library (class action) was filed June 5 in U.S. District Court by three Negro plaintiffs.

TENNESSEE:

Chattanooga -- June 7--Following a series of demonstrations by Negroes at 4 local restaurants and 1 theatre, mayor appointed a bi-racial committee, and Negro leaders agreed to a truce.

Clarksville -- May 28-June 7--300 Negroes sought service in a drive-in restaurant, were turned away (May 28). All public parks and pools desegregated June 7.

Knoxville -- May 9-28--Demonstrations began May 9, resulted in arrest of about 100 by May 11. Three hospitals agreed to desegregate May 19, and mayor appointed a bi-racial commission same day. Two thousand citizens signed a petition May 22, to desegregate all public facilities; petition sponsored by Chamber of Commerce. Four leading hotels and 2 motels voted to desegregate May 28.

Maryville -- June 24--A mountain training camp sponsored by CORE was found burned to the ground; no injuries reported. Camp had been raided by sheriff's deputies previous week; 28 whites and Negroes arrested.

Memphis -- May 1-June 10--Normad corporation announced May 1, that it will build an integrated motel. All first-class hotels and motels desegregated May 20, followed by desegregation of all public recreational facilitie May 30, except swimming pools (as a result of Supreme Court decision May 27). Voter registration drive began June 10. Has permanent bi-racial committee.

Nashville -- May 8-June 5--Following demonstrations May 8 and 9, a clash between Negro students and white hecklers May 10, another demonstration May 13 in which two persons were hospitalized, a permanent bi-racial Metropolitan Human Relations Council was appointed by the mayor May 16 "to recommend actions by the business community." City parks and wading pools opened to all on June 5. Earlier (May 13), seven motels and hotels, eight restaurants desegregated.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

TEXAS:

Dallas -- June 2--South's first integrated hospital opened here, will have completely integrated facilities including an open staff of Negro and white physicians. Following day insurance executive George L. Allen became the first Negro namedto an important City Hall appointive body, the City Planning Commission.

TEXAS (Continued)

Denton -- April 6-Fifty Negro and white students from North Texas State University, picketed in the downtown area, carrying banners calling for the integration of local theatres.

Houston -- June 10--All city pools and municipal facilities desegregated.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

VIRGINIA:

Alexandria -- May-June--City Council banned discrimination in all municipal public facilities May 27, and instituted a merit hiring and promotion program for all city employees regardless of race. Movie theatres and some bowling alleys quietly desegregated June 14.

Arlington -- April-June--County Board established in Arlington County Human Relations Council in April. Arlington City Council eliminated all mention of race on job questionnaires June 3.

Charlottesville--May 25-30--Sit-ins began at La Paree restaurant May 25, but the main target became Buddy's restaurant near the University of Virginia, with groups of about 50 Negroes and whites demonstrating through May 30, when a local Negro leader was beaten up by two white men and hospitalized. The "stand-ins" were temporarily called off as a result of this incident. City's first Negro policeman was appointed in the midst of the demonstrations in which 5 persons were arrested. Efforts are being made to form a bi-racial committee, but have been unsuccessful this far.

Danville -- May 31-June 22--Fifty-sixty Negro youths started demonstrations to force hiring of a Negro policeman. Demonstrations continued through June 10, when 50 Negroes were arrested and a rally broken up by police using firehoses;about 45 persons were injured. City passed ordinance June 14 limiting number allowed to participate in demonstrations to 6; the following day 35 more Negroes were arrested. Ten leaders in the demonstrations, including 3 whites, were indicted by a special grand jury June 21 on a criminal charge of inciting to riot. Police seized three other leaders who had taken sanctuary in a local church June 22. Thus far, about 150 persons have been arrested. June 19, 29 demonstrators broke three-day truce by marching downtown; all were arrested. Mayor Stinson announced 10 Negroes had been assigned to white schools. Motel operators met to discuss desegregation.

VIRGINIA (Continued)

Farmville -- May 18--Small sit-ins staged, with no violence and no arrests.

Hampton -- April-May--A petition of 1000 signatures was sent to mayor April 1 charging "racial discrimination" and "police intimidation" after Hampton Institute students,10 of whom were arrested, attempted sit-ins. An 11-member bi-racial Council on Community Relations was formed May 18.

Lawrenceville -- May 29-30--Students quietly picketed downtown lunch counters.

Lynchburg -- May-June--Patterson's drug store announced May 22, following prolonged sit-in demonstrations,that it would serve anyone. Following week 10 restaurants voluntarily desegregated. In early June, 2 movie theatres and 2 bowling alleys also voluntarily desegregated.

Martinsville -- June 7--Martinsville - Henry County Christian Civic League called on local business leaders to voluntarily desegregate public facilities and employment, and requested City Council appoint official bi-racial committee.

Norfolk-Portsmouth-- Late May--Major movie theatres agreed May 25 to lower all racial bars after private meetings between white businessmen and Negro leaders. Norfolk City Council asked mayor to form a bi-racial committee May 28.

Petersburg -- April 25--Three Virginia State College students fined $25.00 and given 30-day suspended sentences for picketing.

Richmond -- May 28-June 18--Parker Field, local athletic stadium quietly admitted 9 Negroes to previously all-white section. All downtown movie theatres announced June 15, that they will desegregate by July 10. Three days later 35 of city's better restaurants agreed to serve all customers without regard to race. Another 25 restaurants had previously desegregated.

STATE ACTION

FLORIDA:

During the 1960 demonstrations there - Governor Fowler appointed the Statewide Fowler Commission on Race Relations. The Commission was not continued by Governor Bryant.

KENTUCKY:

Commission on Human Rights established under a General Assembly Act of March, 1960. Eleven members are appointed by the governors. Governor Combs stated June 4 he would "ask the General Assembly to pass a general civil rights act."

NORTH CAROLINA:

June 18--Governor Sanford moved on several fronts to head off North Carolina's growing racial crisis. In a statewide radio and television address (June 18) the Governor spoke sympathetically of Negro "requests and aspirations." He also asked for a halt to Negro demonstrations "to help avoid strife, ill will, danger to life and property, and damage to our state."

He announced he had called Negro leaders to the Capital for a meeting on June 25, "to place before the public in an orderly manner their requests and aspirations." He appointed retired Major General Capus M. Waynick, former commander of the N. C. National Guard and experienced in negotiating racial conflicts, to represent his office in continuing negotiations with Negro leaders. Two immediate targets are sought by the Governor's negotiators: statewide application of the "Durham Plan"; daily progress reports to local Negro leaders by city officials.

Also under intense negotiation: employing more Negroes in state jobs. In January of this year the Governor began naming of 24 prominent Negro and white citizens to the statewide North Carolina Good Neighbor Council.

VIRGINIA:

May 29--Governor Harrison rejected a proposal for a statewide bi-racial commission.

SUMMARY

CITIES WHERE SOME DESEGREGATION HAS OCCURRED SINCE APRIL 3, 1963

ALABAMA:

Birmingham
Gadsden
Mobile

ARKANSAS:

Fayetteville
Little Rock
Pine Bluff

FLORIDA:

Miami

GEORGIA:

Atlanta
Brunswick
Savannah

MISSISSIPPI:

Jackson

NORTH CAROLINA:

Asheville
Charlotte
Concord
Durham
Fayetteville
Greensboro
Lexington
Mount Airy
Raleigh
Statesville
Thomasville
Wadesboro
Winston Salem

OKLAHOMA:

Oklahoma City

SOUTH CAROLINA:

Charleston
Greenville
Spartenburg

TENNESSEE:

Clarksville
Knoxville
Memphis
Nashville

TEXAS:

Austin
Houston

VIRGINIA:

Alexandria
Arlington
Falls Church
Lynchburg
Norfolk
Portsmouth
Richmond

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

ESTIMATED NUMBER OF ARRESTS IN 11 SOUTHERN STATES SINCE APRIL 3,1963

10,420

(The Southern Regional Council estimated the number of arrests during the February 1, 1960 through September 1, 1961 period of demonstrations in southern and border states at 3,600.)

NUMBER OF FATALITIES RELATED TO DEMONSTRATIONS SINCE APRIL 3, 1963

3

CITIES WHERE SOME DEMONSTRATIONS HAVE OCCURRED SINCE APRIL 3, 1963

ALABAMA:

Birmingham
Gadsden

ARKANSAS:

Hot Springs
Pine Bluff

FLORIDA:

Cocoa
Daytona-Beach
Gainesville
Lakeland
Miami
Sarasota
Tallahassee
Winter Haven

GEORGIA:

Albany
Atlanta
Augusta
Macon
Rome
Savannah

LOUISIANA:

Baton Rouge
Shreveport

MISSISSIPPI:

Biloxi
Clarksdale
Greenwood
Jackson

NORTH CAROLINA:

Charlotte
Chapel Hill
Durham
Enfield
Fayetteville
Goldsboro
Greensboro
High Point
Lexington
Oxford
Raleigh
Thomasville
Wilmington
Winston-Salem

OKLAHOMA:

Oklahoma City

SOUTH CAROLINA:

Charleston
Rock Hill

TENNESSEE:

Chattanooga
Clarksville
Knoxville
Nashville

TEXAS:

Denton

VIRGINIA:

Charlottesville
Danville
Farmville
Hampton
Lawrenceville
Lynchburg
Petersburg

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

ADDENDA

FLORIDA:

Lakeland -- June 6 -- movie theatre picketing.

Miami -- June -- leading hotels desegregated, (comparable to Miami Beach where they have been desegregated for some time).

KENTUCKY:

Covington)
Henderson)
Hopkinsville)---Local commissions on civil rights Lexington)---sponsored in these cities by the Louisville)---statewide commission.
Paducah)

MISSISSIPPI:

Biloxi -- June 23 -- attempted wade-in.

Greenwood -- June 24 -- six Negro girls attempted sit-in (the city's first) at a drugstore.

NORTH CAROLINA:

Sanford -- June -- bi-racial committee formed.

TENNESSEE:

Athens --) both cities have official bi-racial commissions
Oak Ridge --) and have had no demonstrations.

TEXAS:

Austin -- June 10 -- 38 restaurants (estimated 70% of total) desegregated.

VIRGINIA:

Arlington -- June 17 -- 4 movie theatres desegregated.

Danville -- June 13 -- moderate business leaders from Chamber of Commerce and Retail Merchants Association outvoted Mayor Stinson and formed new bi-racial committee to replace collapsed white City Council Committee. On the same date Negroes picketed a local mill for the first time, and pickets subsequently applied for jobs.

Falls Church --June 17 -- a movie theatre desegregated.

Front Royal)
Harrisonburg)---- Mid-April--Howard Johnson's in these cities Waynesboro) desegregated.

Newport News -- June -- a bi-racial committee in operation.

Roanoke -- June -- a race relations sub-committee of the Citizens Committee for Greater Roanoke in operation. There have been no demonstrations.

Woodstock -- June -- has a bi-racial commission of 8.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
July 26, 1963

THE CIVIL RIGHTS CRISIS: A SYNOPSIS OF RECENT DEVELOPMENTS, II

This synopsis of racial protest and reaction in the South covers the period of June 24-July 24, 1963. It also includes events since April 1, 1963, not carried in the first synopsis, dated June 25, 1963. It is neither a press release nor a detailed analysis of recent events. It is meant to serve only as background information. Additional data or corrections are invited.

ALABAMA:

Bessemer -- Has repealed city ordinances requiring segregation.

Birmingham -- Has been quiet and without demonstrations or arrests pending terms of May agreement being put into operation. June 27 -- 3 municipal golf courses desegregated without incident. At least 9 churches integrated

July 11 - City tentatively agreed the use of City Auditorium on August 5 by the American Guild of Variety Artist's "Salute to Freedom '63," integrated show before a non-segregated audience (2 firsts for the hall).

July 13 - Mayor Boutwell announced formation of a 211-member bi-racial community affairs committee, created by city council resolution, to have 10 subcommittees, about 20% Negro membership. Some segregation signs down in stores' fitting rooms and water fountains, a Negro reportedly hired as a retail clerk, approximately 10 department & chain store lunch counters to desegregate this month, according to truce timetable.

July 23 - City repealed its segregation ordinances.

Gadsden -- Since June 23 when approximately 600 attended a Martin Luther King rally demonstration, marches were heavily attended and continuous through July 1. During this time, at least 52 demonstrators arrested (June 27) and one protestor (June 29) who sat on white side of Trailways Bus Depot waiting room. A Justice Department aide sparked mediations.

July 1 - Negroes announced suspension of demonstrations indefinitely as transit company buses ended de facto seating segregation.

GADSDEN (Cont'd)

July 6 - KKK rally.

July 10 - County Solicitor announced his office had been hampered in work on death of freedom walker William Moore (there have been no developments) as "all of our investigation agencies have been tied up" with racial demonstrations. Persons arrested during previous mass demonstrations released on bond pending trial.

Huntsville -- Week of May 20 - first Negro policeman named to city force.

Montgomery -- Has repealed city segregation ordinances.

Talladega -- Demonstrations aimed largely at lunch counters desegregation, which began April 9, resulted in more than 50 arrests before a temporary injunction halted them briefly April 28.

July 5 - Permanent injunction barring racial demonstrations issued.

Selma -- June 17 - A Negro voter registration worker arrested during drive.

June 26 - Justice Department's motion for injunction to bar the trial denied. City has repealed segregation ordinances.

ARKANSAS:

Gillett -- Week of June 24 - Rural Negro church bombed with dynamite.

Hot Springs -- Week of July 15 - Majority of theatres and restaurants desegregate.

Little Rock -- June 25 - Twenty Negroes picket Coca-Cola Bottling Company protesting discriminatory wages.

June 27 - Five Negroes sought and denied admission to municipal swimming pool.

Pine Bluff -- Late June - mid-July - Movie theatres, including drive-ins, desegregate, and all city park facilities, except pools.

FLORIDA:

Bradenton -- June 25 - Attempted sit-in at cafeteria, four Negro youths arrested, cafeteria closed.

June 26 - Approximately 80 Negroes demonstrated before Manatee County Courthouse protesting the arrest.

Clearwater -- Has a municipal bi-racial committee.

Cocoa -- During May - bi-racial Citizens Advisory Committee formed.
July 9 - Announced most motels, hotels, and restaurants will desegregate by August 18.

FLORIDA (Cont'd)

Cocoa Beach -- Hotels, motels, restaurants and night clubs integrated for "sometime."

Fort Myers -- June 25 - established bi-racial committee of 5 City Councilmen, 5 "Negro taxpayers." "Excellent progress" reported in desegregations of lunch counters, a bowling alley, drive-in movies.

Gainesville -- June 12 - 11 restaurants began desegregating.

Miami -- June 11 - Metro Commission passed ordinance creating bi-racial Community Relations Board of 15.

Ocala -- July 18 - Leader of lunch counter pickets arrested.

July 20 - 29 youths arrested while demonstrating to protest jailing of leader.

July 21 - 6 more arrested picketing jail.

Orlando -- Week of July 15 - 56 motels, hotels, restaurants desegregate, mayor crediting efforts of bi-racial advisory committee.

Pinellas County -- (St. Petersburg-Clearwater area) - June 27 - County Commission voted creation of a 10-man bi-racial committee.

St. Augustine--June 25 - July 4 - Continuous and peaceful picketing of variety stores, Chamber of Commerce Information Center.

June 30 - Negroes swam at white beach, heckling but no arrests or incidents.
July 2 - In early a. m. NAACP leader's house shot into, one white youth arrested, 3 Negro youths arrested for shooting at auto from which they alleged shots were fired into home.
July 5 - City Commission refuses to name a bi-racial committee, contends city library is desegregated along with a miniature golf course on city property; Negroes claim they are not.
July 18 - 13 arrested during sit-ins at 4 drugstores.

St. Petersburg-Week of June 24 - saw peaceful theatre picketing continued as Negroes and whites together attempted orderly admission to movies. Mayor Herman Goldner announced efforts to get City Council to give bi-racial committee more authority and flexibility.
June 27 - Both Chamber of Commerce and City Council passed resolutions favoring desegregation of public facilities and hiring practices.
July 5 - members being named to City Council -approved bi-racial committee. Several department stores reported to be hiring Negro retail clerks and negotiations with theatre operators in progress.

FLORIDA (Cont'd)

Stuart -- Bi-racial committee formed in early May under the auspices of city commission.

Tallahassee -- Mid-June - bi-racial committee began meeting with mayor.

June 24 - Municipal tennis court integrated.
June 27 - Nine Negro students attempted to use white swimming pool, pool closed.

June 28 - Three white students arrested attempting to use Negro swimming pool.

Vero Beach -- July 5 - Mayor Jack Sturgis appointed 18-man bi-racial committee with sub-committees on housing, recreation, employment, education.

Winter Park -- June 28 - Five white children, ages 6 to 10, integrated a formerly all Negro pool without incident.

GEORGIA:

Albany -- July 6 - KKK rally of approximately 300.

July 7 - Groups of Negroes and whites attempted to swim at former city pool. Now privately owned and operated for whites only.

Resulted in 12 arrests.

July 8 - Thirteen arrested in protest gathering at city hall.

July 10 -- 6 arrests.

July 12 - One white arrested for shooting at Negroes.

July 13 - 10 arrested for picketing home of head of board of education.

In early July a Justice Department negotiator attempted to bring city commission and Negro and white business leadership together in a bi-racial committee. No official results, but 40-odd businessmen have met unofficially with Negro leaders in recent weeks.

July 23 - City commission refuses to appoint a biracial committee. Periodic, isolated outbursts of disorder and/or vandalism.

Americus -- July 12 - 14 -- 35 persons total arrested picketing segregated movie theatre.

July 19 - At least 11 arrested after attempts to enter theatre.

Atlanta -- June 25 - Approximately 45 restaurants began desegregating, and Since June 27 - Pickets protesting integration have appeared sporadically at about 6 locations.

June 27 - University of Florida band cancelled reservation for 140 persons at a hotel which had declined to integrate during the previous week (when approximately 14 did) - band currently has no Negro members.

Since June 27 - Negroes have picketed off and on a liquor store protesting discriminatory employment; owner has agreed to hire an additional Negro employee.

June 30 - Attempts by Negroes to worship at morning and evening services of First Baptist Church failed.

July 1 - Approximately 250 Negroes marched through downtown protesting discriminatory hiring of restaurant chain.

July 7 - NAACP, SCLC, Operation Breadbasket, Committee for Cooperative Action, and Committee on Appeal for Human Rights met and reactivated (1961) Student-Adult Liaison Committee. Goal - 5,000 new jobs for Negroes.

July 7 - Attempt to enter First Baptist Church failed again.

Atlanta (cont'd)

July 13 - Pro and anti-integration pickets appeared simultaneously without incident.

July 14 - Attempt to enter First Baptist Church failed again, but that date Negroes arrived early, seated themselves for evening services, had their seating area roped off by ushers when they did not leave.

July 16 - Pro and anti-integration pickets appeared simultaneously without incident.

July 16 - Mississippi Gov. Barnett spoke under auspices of White Citizens' Council with pro - and con - pickets, no incidents.

July 19 - 12 pickets arrested at one restaurant, site of more or less continuous anti-segregation picketing and some hurly-burly.

July 22 - Picketing at telephone company favoring hiring of more Negroes.

Augusta -- June 29 - May Park desegregated as Negro and white children played baseball together without incident.

July 14 - Chronicle-Herald editorially advocated desegregation of tax-supported facilities, equal civic, county employment.

Brunswick -- Has an advisory bi-racial committee set up by city government, dates from Winter, 1963, is currently active.

Carrollton -- June 27 - An episcopal minister publically addressed members of his congregation to support his opposition to White Citizens' Council.

Colubmus -- June 25 - Negro ministers announced plans whereby movie theatres have agreed to desegregate in Fall, 1963.

Since July 5, when 7 Negroes used the library reading room but were denied library cards, protests with substantial numbers of demonstrators have centered around the library, with at least 10 arrests, the library being closed at times, indefinitely on July 18.

Three separate groups of Negro leadership have expressed opposition to protest demonstration.

Columbus (cont'd)

July 17 - While pickets marched before Muscogee County School Board, Board announced library and school desegregation on a "timetable," probably 1964.

July 17-19 - Successive attempts of Negroes to use Lakebotton and Weracoba Parks, rocks hurled by Negro and white youths at one another, 5 arrests, parks closed.

July 17 - Two (one Negro and one white) of the city's 3 pools closed.

Cordele -- July 16 - Announced hiring of city's first Negro policeman.

Macon -- July 1, Ten establishments, including Mercer University and Wesleyan College, a grocery, bookstore, and shopping center, signed contracts with the federal government to operate the businesses where their post office stations are situated on a non-discriminatory basis.

Savannah -- June 19-July 16 (When demonstrations, which had been halted briefly, erupted into violence) negotiations between Negro leaders and white businessmen have been intermittent and a bi-racial committee had been meeting with the approval of the City Commission and the Chamber of Commerce.

July 16 - After nearly a month of stalemate and disturbances, closed negotiations commenced, mediators being named by a group of 100 business elite.

No agreement has been reached on desegregation of public accommodations asked by Negroes, their cause confused somewhat by lack of centralized leadership to date. Activities through July 12 included nightly demonstration marches numbering hundreds, daytime picketing and smaller demonstrations, mass meetings, weather permitting. Police surveillance has been thorough.

Toll in wounded at least 6, arrests astimated at 240, with some violence.

June 25 - Arrest of youth leader triggered intensive and resumed talks, several days of calm, then July 4 renewed demonstrations demanding his release. A school desegregation plan to commence with the 12th grade in Fall of 1963 announced July 1 disatisfying to many.

Savannah (Cont'd)

July 5 - First appearance of approximately 30 white, anti-integration pickets.

July 9 - Popular Negro leader arrested, currently in jail on reduced bond of $15,500.

July 10 - Thirty arrested for lying down in streets protesting arrest. Concurrently - July 10 and 14, wade-ins at Savannah Beach, with at least 8 arrests.

July 10-11 - Midnight demonstrations comprising approximately 1000 persons, exchanges of rocks and tear gas, vandalism. By dawn of July 11, approximately 100 state troopers arrived.

July 12 - Demonstrations, further violence.

July 13 - Pro-segregation white motorcade of approximately 65 persons -- 31 ministers, including Catholic, Episcopal, and Methodist bishops, call for "just resolution," offer their services.

July 14 - Negroes denied admittance to several white churches.

Subsequently, all factions of Negro leadership have called for end to violence and mass demonstrations, urged voter registration, peaceful picketing, economic pressure.

July 16 - Negro fireman shot by white youths, 6 arrested.

July 18 - Negro youths picket Chase-Manhattan Bank (buyer of Savannah Municipal Bonds) in New York.

July 20 - Ku Klux Klan outdoor meeting. Rallies, picketing, negotiation continue. Atmosphere quiet, tense, expectant.

KENTUCKY:

Frankfort -- June 26 - Kentucky Governor Burt Combs issued an executive order banning racial discrimination in all businesses licensed by the state.
July 8 - Governor subsequently narrowed order to pertain to public places of food, shelter, recreation or amusement. Since the order was issued, 5 Kentucky cities have had additional desegregation: Bowling Green, Hopkinsville, Danville, Frankfort, and Paducah.

Hopkinsville-- July 2 - City council gave preliminary approval to an ordinance establishing a bi-racial human relations council; final approval slated for next council meeting July 16. Mayor said he expected to appoint a 15-member commission following July 16 council meeting.

Lexington -- July 12 - Three additional members, all white, assigned to Lexington's Human Relations Committee.

Louisville -- Louisville Human Relations Commission recommended that Mayor issue an executive order banning racial and oth discrimination in the employment policies of those firms having city contracts. Mayor agreed to study bias-ban proposal.

LOUISIANA:

Baton Rouge -- July 2 - City's bi-racial committee held its sixth weekly meeting.

July 23 - About 50 Negroes scuffled with 6 policemen during an attempt to use a public swimming pool. Five Negroes were arrested. It was the first outbreak of racial violence in Louisiana this summer.

Buras -- July 6-16 - Window panes broken in rectory of Our Lady of Good Harbor Church. It was the second time the rectory has been fired on since nearby Our Lady of Good Harbor school was integrated last September. Twenty-six panes were shattered by birdshot on November 13. Police were unable to connect anyone with the earlier shooting, are investigating the latest blast.

New Orleans -- June 26 - A three-panel federal court took under advisement a suit seeking to desegregate New Orleans recreational facilities.
July 1 - A three-judge federal panel struck down a 1956 state law requiring separate seating and segregation of other facilities for whites and Negroes. The ruling in effect desegregated the city's municipal auditorium. Court declared: "Cities may as well face up to the facts of life: New Orleans, here and now, must adjust to the reality of having to operate desegregated public facilities." City plans to appeal the decision.
July 3 - A request for a bi-racial committee on Human Relations was made by the local NAACP branch, in a letter to Mayor Victor Schiro, who was not immediately available for comment.

Shreveport -- July 19 - Negroes staged sit-ins at the lunch counters of 2 downtown stores. Police quickly broke up demonstrations, arrested 10. A "pick-up order" was also issued for Charles Evers, brother of slain NAACP leader Medgar Evers, who spoke at a Negro rally in Shreveport July 17. The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a lower court order to integrate the Shreveport airport and bus station May 22.

MISSISSIPPI:

Canton -- June 26 - Ben P. Lewis, a 43 year old white service station attendant, arrested, charged with firing a shotgun at 5 Negroes near a hall where a voter registration rally was being held.

June 29 - Twelve Negroes were registered to vote within a week here, where no Negro has ever registered before.

MISSISSIPPI (Cont')

Clarksdale -- June (last week) Thirty-six protest marchers arrested.

July 20 - A young white segregationist who confessed to firebombing the home of local civil rights leader Aaron Henry was acquitted of arson charges by an all-white jury, which took 15 minutes to render a verdict. Prosecution immediately dropped an identical charge against his companion in the bombing. The 2 men admitted throwing 2 "Molotov cocktails" into Henry's home April 13. Negro Congressman Charles C. Diggs (D., Mich.) was Henry's house guest at the time.

Columbus -- July 2 - City Council passed an ordinance prohibiting parading without a permit, carrying of placards or banners and certain other activities.

Greenville -- June 19-July 5 - City council announced that a six-man bi-racial committee will be formed to advise it on racial problems. Three members of city council will serve with "an equal number of representatives chosen from the Negro community."

July 6 - The city's first week of mass racial demonstrations ended today, and was highlighted by 25 arrests, 3 sit-ins, one play-in, and 2 protest marches. City council adopted two new "parade" ordinances. Most of activity generated by Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee; 3 of its field secretaries were arrested in the demonstrations. Police Chief W. C. Burnley commended by both Negroes and whites for his handling of demonstrators and maintenance of law and order at all times.

Greenwood -- June 24-July 7 - First drugstore lunch counter sit-in ever attempted here failed when white persons filled every available seat before Negroes arrived; sit-in attempted by 6 Negro girls. City passed 2 ordinances against demonstrations same day.

June 29 - Ten arrested for demonstrating in local park, 2 more arrested July 1

July 1 - Two more were arrested for sitting-in at a lunch counter.

July 2 - Fourteen civil rights demonstrators being held at the LeFlore County Farm staged a sit-down at the barracks, refusing to do work assigned them, authorities reported. The 14 were among the more than 50 arrested previous week on charges connected with voting demonstrations.

Greenwood(Cont'd)

July 7 - Some 300 to 400 Negroes joined with 3 white folk singers to sing of their dissatisfaction with segregation.

Gulfport -- June 28 - Mayor R. B. Meadows, Jr., announced the appointment of a 13-member bi-racial community relations committee, with 8 white and 5 Negro members. Previous day an explosion scattered debris about the waiting room of Dr. Felix H. Dunn, president of local NAACP chapter. Police and FBI investigating.

Itta Bena -- June 19 - Fifty-seven Negroes arrested June 19 on charges of disturbing the peace; 12 were children under 15 and were subsequently freed.

June 28 - Justice Department sued for release of the remaining 45. Suit was third filed by Justice which involved LeFlore County. First, filed in August, 1962, challenged constitutionality of state voting laws, is awaiting trial. Second filed March 30, charged county and other defendants with intimidating Negro voter registration efforts in Greenwood.

Jackson -- June 30 - First 2 Negro policemen since Reconstruction days sworn in by Mayor Allen C. Thompson. Mayor has also promised to hire 8 Negro school crossing guards by September 1. Four Negro men escaped serious injury, when an explosion collapsed a two-family frame house. Charles Evers, brother of Medgar Evers, said he thought a bomb caused damage, but a local detective attributed blast to a gas leak. Same day 3 white churches refused to admit 5 Negroes who tried to attend Sunday services.

July 1-8 - A public golf course on which 2 Negroes had played without incident June 6, was re-segregated.

Hinds County grand jury, with one Negro among its 18 members, considered case of Byron Beckwith, accused of murdering Medgar Evers.

Negro clerical workers quietly placed in federal clerical and administrative positions in U. S. government offices here following an inspection in June.

Internal Revenue Service hired a Negro agent, Social Security a stenographer, and Veterans Administration one new clerical worker.

Jackson (Cont'd) (June 1-8)

City officials pleased by a federal court ruling upholding Jackson statutes under which nearly 1000 persons were arrested for participating in racial demonstrations. City attorney called decision significant victory.

July 9 - Negroes concentrating on a voter registration campaign found the registration books suddenly closed. Circuit clerk, who is also voter registrar, claimed his small office was over-burdened preparing for August 6 Democratic primary in which there will be 138 names on the ballot.

July 12 - The prosecution requested a mental test for Beckwith (accused murderer of Evers), but defense said it would oppose such a test.

Mississippi Supreme Court reversed itself and upheld the conviction of civil rights leader Aaron Henry on a morals charge. Court had overturned the conviction in June on grounds that police had illegally searched Henry's car. In July 12 decision, court said defense had failed to enter objections during trial. Five Negro policemen to be added to force on August 8.

NORTH CAROLINA:

Ahoskie -- June 28 - Water safety chairman, H. L. Beaman denied that a proposed Red Cross water safety course to be taught in July was cancelled because three Negroes signed up for course.

Albemarle and Stanley County-June 24 - A bi-racial committee was formed under sponsorship of Albemarle and Stanley County Chamber of Commerce, "to consider any future race problems."

Asheville -- June 13 - Total desegregation of all public and commercial facilities urged by City Council; also ordinance adopted repealing Article 23 of City Code, which makes it unlawful to sell property to Negroes in a predominantly white neighborhood.

Cabarrus County -- June 12 - Three political leaders issued statement which said in part, "We recommend that all citizens of Cabarrus County recognize that, legally, every individual is the equal of every other individual, and we recommend to all our citizens that they practice no discrimination based on race."

NORTH CAROLINA (Cont'd)

Charlotte -- June 29 - Four point hospital desegregation plan submitted by Negro Medical Society got cool reception from City Hall. Charlotte has had an active 29-member Mayor's bi-racial committee since early 1961, and as of July 8, reported that desegregation now includes practically all public facilities: library, parks, schools, police force, bus drivers, Chamber of Commerce, hotels, motels, restaurants, and theatres.

Chapel Hill -- June 26 - Demonstrations began with from 100 to 250 Negro and white demonstrators marching each day asking end of desegregation in business establishments. There was no disorder and no arrests for marches.

White picket was arrested for striking son of store manager - [illegible]

June 29 - Demonstration included singing of freedom songs in front of desegregated stores.

July 4 - Boycotts of 13 establishments began with marchers increased to 400 (more than 100 whites included).

July 7 - A white man was arrested for driving his car through a line of 200 white and Negro pickets.

Cleveland -- June 12 - A playground attack by 6 Negro youths on a white boy and girl touched off racial disorders, mainly by gangs of white persons, who pelted Negroes with rocks, bottles and other objects. The clashes continued for 3 nights and 50 white persons were arrested on charges of carrying concealed weapons or for intoxication. Disturbances subsided after the 6 Negroes were arrested.

Covington -- June 14 - A Negro minister urged city council to set up bi-racial commission to "take steps necessary for equal job opportunities" for Negroes and to study problems of integrating motels, restaurants, theatres, and other public facilities.

Durham -- In April some stores hired 15 Negroes in non-traditional jobs. The Rialto Theatre was desegregated.

In June, the Durham Junior Chamber of Commerce dropped its "white only" membership clause. All hotels and motels, most restaurants and many retail establishments have integrated.

NORTH CAROLINA (Cont'd)

Fayetteville --June 10 - Six Negro students quietly integrated only municipally owned swimming pool. Mayor Wilbur Clark issued statement, "If we don't make progress here [in desegregating entertainment and food services], we will greatly harm our prospects for attracting new industries and businesses and, secondly, we will have renewed demonstrations...which aggravate possibilities of ill will, economic loss, and public danger."

June 15 - Some restaurants, hotels, and lodging desegregated; demonstrations began few days later.

June 17 - State troopers called in to help local police. Broke up disturbance with tear gas; 17 arrested.

June 22-24 - Negroes arrested attempting to integrate Hotel Rose. Rain on June 23 slowed down demonstrations.

Gastonia -- June 10 - A prayer pilgrimage to city hall by 5 Negro ministers resulted in a meeting of 18-member bi-racial committee which announced its accomplishments: "colored" signs removed on city property; anti-discrimination in city hiring; desegregation of golf courses, lunch counters, library.

June 12 - Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association urged desegregation of all public facilities. Bi-racial committee announced theatre negotiations progressing, 8 restaurants desegregated, at least one motel desegregated, Negro nurses at city hospital.

June 14 - Committees began meeting with hospital, hotel-motel, and restaurant officials. Purpose of committee was changed "to promote integration of public facilities harmoniously." Ministers reassured; said no demonstrations planned.

Goldsboro -- June 8 - Between June 8 and 11, more than 100 demonstrators were arrested on trespassing charges for attempting to desegregate theatres and restaurants; all released without bond. Some demonstrators torn shirts were said to be result of rough handling by police and one demonstrator knocked down and bruised.
Demonstrations continued through June 28.

June 21 - Thirty-three were tried, given suspended sentences on 30-day good behavior; no fines levied. Cases appealed.

July 7 - A 16-member bi-racial committee, appointed previous week, took steps to begin gradual integration of public places; details of plans were not made public.

NORTH CAROLINA (Cont'd)

Grantville County -- June 29 - Bi-racial committee organized after recent rock and bottle throwing incident between Negroes and whites. Majority of drug counters and other downtown eating places desegregated, but 19-member committee (majority of members Negro) meeting daily with businessmen to discuss list of grievances.

Greensboro -- July 4 - Employment-practice questionnaires were distributed to merchants by bi-racial committee. Greensboro Housing Authority formally removed color bar from its 1,036 low-rent housing units, previously 400 units all-white and 636 units all Negro.

Greenville -- July 5 - About 200 mayors from all sections of state vowed unanimously to support Governor Sanford in efforts "to remove the indignities long suffered by Negroes."

Henderson -- June 10-29 - Mayor Horace Faulkner moved June 10 to integrate parks, but city council over-rulled him at night meeting later, and June 11 closed city's 3 parks rather than integrate them.

June 28 - Orderly Negro marches and picketing for equal employment opportunities began; no arrests. No mass demonstrations are planned. Mayor's bi-racial committee being appointed but so far only two whites willing to serve.

Hickory -- June 27 - Five area restaurants have adopted non-discrimination policy according to Hickory Community Relations Council at its second meeting since being appointed by Board of Alderman on June 6.

High Point -- June 12 - Most hotels, motels, and eating establishments integrated. Action endorsed by City Council and group of business leaders.

June 18 - Three Negroes filed a petition in U. S. Middle District Court asking for an injunction against City of High Point and Key Theatres, Inc., to permit them and all Negroes to attend local theatres.

Lexington -- Mayor C. V. Sink released letter from Davidson County NAACP urging desegregation of all public facilities, upgrading of Negroes on city jobs, equal job opportunities, and better communication. A total of 18 white persons arrested on charges of engaging in a riot.

June 28 - Three Negroes charged with death of white mechanic during June 6 riot bound over for trial without bail; 28 (18 white, 10 Negro) convicted last week of engaging in riot. Most cases appealed. Court meted out fines of $25 to $250 and jail terms of three to 16 months; jail terms suspended in most cases on payment on fines.

Monroe -- June 26 - Union County Sheriff Griffin said he found no evidence that white integration leader's car was shot at June 25 near Monroe. Monroe Apter of New York reported shot fired at him and 2 Monroe Negroes by 3 white men following in car.

Mount Airy-- July 5 - Negro leaders presented town commissioners with requests to end discrimination May 16.

June 24 - a 13-member bi-racial committee was formed of civic and business leaders to desegregate public facilities and open job opportunities. Before committee formed, 6 drug stores voluntarily dropped racial bars.

July 5 - Meetings of committee with restaurant, hotel-motel operators, held this week, also industrialists.

New Bern -- July 19 - Anti-segregation demonstration at drive-in restaurant, second in two days, resulted in arrests of 58 Negroes on trespass charges.

North Wilkesboro -June 29 - Mayor James M. Anderson announced formation of bi-racial committee to solve city's racial problems.

Oxford -- June 22 - Special bi-racial committee attempting to settle strife which began June 19 and resulted June 22, in rock and bottle throwing battle squelched by 70 state troopers. Some 300 Negroes and whites involved. During disturbance rifle shots fired into police car and one patrolman cut with knife. Demonstrations directed against theatre.

Raleigh -- June 7 - July 7 --Around 180 Negroes stood in front of business establishments several hours after 200 Negroes staged protest march downtown.

June 13 - Five hotels and motels, nine restaurants and all drive-in theatres desegregated. Demonstrations and "testing committees" continued.

June 20 - Downtown movie theatres integrated.

June 22 - Six Negro students with suitcases sat-in at entrance to Sir Walter Hotel after being refused rooms; arrested, charged with trespassing, and released The 6 joined by carloads of Negro youths with suitcases, returned. Four attempted to enter coffee shop and were arrested. Several white college students joined the 175 Negroes in marching (singing) around hotel for several hours; group then marched away towards Shaw University. Seventy-six businesses desegregated but names not available.

June 26 - Some 200 Negroes met at Old Capital at Gov. Sanford's invitation to state their views on civil rights; group defied Governor's plea for end to demonstrations. After meeting, 100 Negroes gathered outside to sing.

Raleigh (cont'd)

June 29 - City Council repealed last remaining segregation ordinance previous week requiring desegregated cemeteries.

July 7 - Militant state Negro anti-segregation leaders spurned personal plea of Governor Sanford at Raleigh meeting and vowed continued demonstrations all over state. Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association have opened their membership to Negroes.

Roxboro -- July 7 - Chairman of bi-racial committee announced that about 90% of town's motels and restaurants have integrated.

Sanford -- June 25 - First meeting of newly formed 11-member bi-racial commitee. One member, a restaurant operator, said he had called meeting of about 25 restaurant operators about five weeks ago to consider dropping racial bars.

Salisbury -- June 13 - July 2 -- After rumors of impending racial demonstrations, directors of Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association announced immediate appointment of bi-racial committee "to work for better community relations." Committee will supplement 1961 Community Service Committee.

July 2 - City Council voted to eliminate "race, color, or national origin" as factors in hiring city employees

Shelby -- June 12 - Mayor Harry S. Woodson and Mayor-elect Dr. Hubert Plaster named a Mayor's Advisory Committee on Human Relations, after June 4 vote for such a group by City Council.

Statesville--June 15 - More restaurants and some hotels desegregated: Merchants" Association voted to accept application from Negroes(as sales clerks).

Thomasville--June 3-July 17 Week of June 3 swimming pools integrated July 17 - Crowds of about 150 Negroes and 150 whites squared off in a parking lot beside City Hall and began hurling rocks at each other. Local and state police dispersed mobs. Negroes later demonstrated at city's only movie theatre, where 60-65 (mostly teenagers) Negroes were arrested. Charged with blocking entrance and violating fire ordinance.

Whiteville-- July 4 - First Negro policeman hired; to patrol Negro section.

Wilmington-- June 15 - Some restaurants and hotels desegregated. During May, all signs indicating segregation were removed from court house.

Williamston--July 1-Orderly demonstrations began and continued daily, with up to 500 marching on July 4.

July 2 - Seven Negroes served at drugstore lunch counter.
July 3 - 150 Negroes denied admission to municipal swimming pool leased to private operator, and pool closed July 4; lawsuit planned. About 500 Negroes demonstrated for five successive days and sought service at downtown restaurant; 36 arrested, but juveniles released and 18 jailed. Large crowds of whites assembled July 3 and violence narrowly averted. Mayor suggested bi-racial committee and urged end to demonstrations; request refused.

Wilson -- July 3 - Recently appointed Mayor's bi-racial Good Neighbor Council presented 3 requests to Wilson County Commissioners: 1) non-discrimination in hiring, 2) unified tax listing, and 3) removal of racial signs from county facilities.

Winston-Salem -- June 28-July 7 - During June, Forsyth County Medical Society announced it would admit Negro doctors to "scientific" membership .

June - 28 - Direct action protests resumed when three Negroes picketed cafeteria.

June 29 -Five leading restaurants announced desegregation on July 1.

July 2 - 22 orderlies and domestic workers at hospital petitioned for improved employment benefits and end to policy of addressing them by first names.

July 4 - Mayor's bi-racial committee polled area employers re elimination of discrimination in employment. Hotel-motel and restaurant committees agreed to work together to accomplish additional desegregation theatre committee announced progress but declined to name desegregated theatres.

July 6 - About 20 demonstrators (2 white) picketed for third day downtown cafeteria.

July 7 - Forsyth County Bar Association voted to admit Negro attorneys to membership.

A total of 46 restaurants have desegregated.

OKLAHOMA:

Oklahoma City -- June 23 - An amusement park where 51 persons were arrested in a racial demonstration opened today to both Negroes and whites. The owner said he had received numerous telephoned threats

SOUTH CAROLINA:

Anderson -- June 12 - City council repealed local ordinance prohibiting serving whites and Negroes at the same lunch counter, also agreed to hire Negro policemen and to the establishment of a bi-racial committee.

Charleston --July 3 - July 23 - An estimated 150 Negro demonstrators arrested on charges of obstructing traffic July 3 in the first mass arrest of anti-segregation demonstrators here in 1963.

Similar demonstrations had been occurring for more than a week, but this was first time Negroes had been marching at a slow step. Fire trucks were used July 16 to break up a crowd of 500 Negro demonstrators. Trucks called out after 4 policemen were injured by flying bricks in first racial violence during a month of protests; crowd scattered at sight of trucks and no fire hoses were used. S. C. Governor Donald Russell ordered state troopers into Charleston July 17, and alerted certain national guard units.

During a march by 175 Negroes through downtown area July 20, 3 Negro ministers and Wilhelmina Gantt, mother of Harvey Gantt, first Negro admitted to Clemson, were arrested. Meanwhile, white and Negro leaders reported that two bi-racial conferences held July 19, had proven helpful, though no settlement was reached. Sixty-two downtown merchants agreed July 23 to integrate their stores, but the move did not placate demonstration leaders who said the series of demonstrations which began 6 weeks ago would continue. "We don't know who these 62 merchants are," commented one leader, "they will have to let us know specifically who will integrate and who will not integrate."

In another development, it was announced June 27 that Catholic hospitals in Charleston and Columbia will accept Negro patients in the fall; all services will be available to them, hospital officials said. But Negro doctors will not be permitted to practice in these hospitals.

Columbia -- June 24-July 10 - The district office of the Internal Revenue Service here hired its fourth employee June 24. Governor Russell met with 5 white and 3 Negro members of the S. C. Advisory Committee to the Civil Rights Commission June 28. It was a closed door meeting, but 2 members indicated that a wide range of topics involving integration in S. C. was discussed.

July 7 - A white man began 30 days of hard labor for slapping a Negro girl who refused to move to the back of a bus.

Columbia (Cont'd)

July 10 - Federal Judge J. Robert Martin of Greenville S. C., ordered desegregation of all state parks.

Desegregation to take place 60 days hence. There is a possibility, however, that the parks will be closed; present state law forbids the operation of any park that is not segregated.

Florence -- June 30 - A 20-man bi-racial committee has been formed here to establish lines of communication between white and Negro leaders. Its formation was endorsed by 82 community leaders.

Greenville-- July 3 - The Greater Greenville Chamber of Commerce's board of directors urged the formation of a bi-racial committee, saying such a move should be taken in the best interests of local race relations.

Orangeburg-- June 28 - The president of the S. C. Municipal Association called upon Negroes to refrain from demonstrating and urged them to try to solve racial problems in each community in "good faith."

Richland County -- July 2 - Two Negroes were among 4 deputies hired by the Richland County sheriff's office. The 2 deputies are the first Negroes to be hired in Richland County.

Rock Hill June 12 - The Rock Hill Chamber of Commerce recommended immediate integration of all city businesses serving the general public; resolution passed unanimously by chamber's 15-member board of directors.

Sumter July 3 - The Carnegie Public Library here is now open to Negroes.

TENNESSEE:

Bolivar -- July 7 - A group of Hardeman County citizens met with Negroes from the County Improvement Assn. to discuss job opportunities and use of public facilities. Judge Max Frost told the group the jobs they were seeking are state and federal and that local citizens have no control over them.

Chattanooga--July 7-The Board of Directors of the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce unanimously issued an appeal to "the owners of the firms doing business with the general public to provide ...equal treatment of all people."
July 9 -Officials announced that most of the city's leading restaurants, about 70%, had been or would be desegregated. This move was the result of negotiations that have been underway for weeks.

Knoxville -- July 3 - Approximately 50 Knoxville restaurants and cafeterias have agreed to desegregate their facilities voluntarily. The desegregation move was worked out by an executive group of the Committee for peaceful and orderly desegregation.

TEXAS

Amarillo -- June 23 - Approximately 40 Negroes worshipped in five white churches.

June 26 - After about 30 Negroes demonstrated before two downtown movie theaters, manager suggested they seek admission in smaller groups. They did, and were admitted.

Austin -- During June - Chamber of Commerce issued resolution recommending businesses integrate public rooms. Sixty-two (85%) of city's restaurants desegregated.

July 1 - Austin Ice Place desegregated - site of much picketing.

Baytown-- June 13 - Mayor Lee Liggett appointed 12-man (7 whites, 5 Negroes) biracial committee.

Beaumont -- During June - white Human Relations Council met with Negro counterpart with aim of ending racial discrimination in jobs. Many trade and craft unions integrated, some with Negro officials.

June 28 - city pool desegregated.

July 16 - white pastor named to Negro Congregational Church. Nearby Bastrop State Park integrated all facilities except pool during month, becoming first Texas State Park to desegregate .

Commerce -- During June - attempts by Negroes to use city pool failed.

Corpus Christi -- During June - restaurant association recommended integration, most members followed. Further integration of hotels, motels, bowling alleys urged by Negro leaders.

Corsicana -- Week June 26 - municipal lake and lake park integrated. City has biracial committee.

Dallas -- June 24 - one downtown movie desegregated, all others followed suit during the week. Community Relations Committee is biracial (7 Negro members), urged desegregation of city park facilities, including pools, which took place in late June.

July 17 - one white congregation voted to admit Negro worshippers.

Denton -- June 28 - City Commission passed formal resolution declaring all public facilities integrated, including library and hospital (there are no pools).

Fort Worth -- June 22 - 3-man (1 Negro) race relations committee announced all downtown hotels, restaurants, movies, athletic contests desegregated.

July 2 - unsuccessful attempts by Negroes to use 2 bowling alleys.

Houston -- Early July - biracial committee established, restaurants, hotels, theatres largely desegregated.

Lubbock -- June 12 - 72 cafe owners reported they had integrated their businesses.

Marshall -- Reportedly has one of state's oldest biracial commissions, no integration.

San Angelo --Hotels and restaurants on a schedule to desegregate within the year.

San Antonio -- June 26 - Negro pickets at City Hall pressing desegration ordinance. A July 4 deadline for voluntary desegregation of accommodations asked by 19-man biracial committee. By July 12 - 92% of motel rooms, 95% of hotel and restaurant space in compliance. All theatres, lunch counters, bowling alleys integrated. Fashionable stores began hiring Negro retail clerks.

Sherman -- Biracial ministerial alliance has helped open communications on employment opportunities.

Texarkana -- June 12 - More than 200 anti-integration demonstrators gathered near campus of Texarkana Junior College, burned crosses, and were dispersed by police, when first two Negro students were admitted.

Texas City-- July 3 - City Commission appointed biracial committee.

Tyler -- Week July 1 - biracial committee appointed to discuss integration of parks and pools.

Waco -- Week June 17 - After Chamber of Commerce-appointed businessmen's committee met with Negro leaders, at least 4 leading restaurants desegregated. County (McLennan) has hired its first Negro deputy sheriff. At least two churches have publicly announced they are open to all.

VIRGINIA

Alexandria -- Two swimming pools were desegregated in May by City Council edict, and four movie theatres quietly desegregated at end of May, before court ruling on public accommodations June 27.

Arlington -- June 17 - Four movie theatres desegregated.

Charlottesville -- July 2-7 - stores have dropped color bar in employment; 8 restaurants and at least one theatre have desegregated.

Clifton Forge -- July 3 - City's only movie theatre integrated quietly at midnight showing.

Covington -- July 17 - formation of biracial committee postponed by City Council.

Danville -- July 3-20 - On July 3, the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth substituted for the Rev. M. L. King, Jr., and denounced temporary injunction against unruly demonstrations. He urged Negroes to test it with peaceful demonstrations.

July 5 - picketing began of stores, city hall, home of president of Dan River Mills and of Mayor and continued through 20th. 101 were arrested during height of demonstrations, July 10 - 13. Boycott of products of Dan River Mills announced.

July 11 - Mass demonstrations began with renewed fervor after address by Rev. M. L. King, Jr., and 106 Negroes registered to vote during two-day period. Positions on both sides of controversy hardened. City Council endorsed Mayor Stinson's refusal to appoint biracial committee and passed new parade ordinance to curb demonstrations.

July 14 - Negro paratrooper, in full uniform and carrying American flag, arrested for picketing Mayor Stinson's home; listed as AWOL at Ft. Bragg.

July 17 - In related action, the New York offices of Dan River Mills was picketed.

Meanwhile, families of jailed demonstrators began receiving food and clothing from as far away as California and New York. More than 200 had been arrested in past six weeks; 100 were still in jail. 11 who took part in demonstrations were declared ineligible for unemployment compensation; some others lost their jobs.

July 20-26 - more demonstrators were arrested following shooting incident involving patrol car night of July 19.

Legal Developments -- June 27 - July 19 - On June 27 Negro attorney Len W. Holt (of Norfolk) spent night in jail after arrest for inciting riot in recent demonstrations. His bond was set at $5,000. Mr. Holt was among 13 Negro leaders indicted by grand jury for participation in the riots; 11 are in jail. Bonds now total $146,450 for those arrested during demonstrations of past month. This figure does not include any bonds posted for cases in juvenile court.

On June 26 Harold J. Flannery, a Justice Department attorney, had conferred at length with Mayor Stinson seeking commitments on city employment of Negroes. Later, Stinson charged Flannery with "veiled threats and vague promises."

July 2 - The Justice Department supported more than 100 Negro citizens in seeking to transfer their trials from a Danville city court to the U. S. District Court in Charlottesville. Both attempted removal of the cases from local court and the decision to file a "friend of the court" brief strongly supporting this move were described by a government attorney as "without recent precedent." Negro leaders have charged that during recent racial tension Danville Judge Archibald M. Aiken has usually appeared in public with a large revolver at his belt, and has taken a personal hand in attempting to disperse crowds of Negroes. Negroes also have complained that Judge Aiken has lined his courtroom with as many as 40 uniformed policemen during trials of demonstrators, and that he has ordered Negro attorneys (both male and female) searched for weapons upon entering his court. Judge Thomas J.

Michie of the U. S. District Court for Western District of Virginia received the petition and was expected to announce his decision this week. Meanwhile, on same day, Judge Michie granted the city's request for a temporary restraining order against any acts of violence or violation of city laws over the July 4 weekend, when Rev. M. L. King Jr. is scheduled to address a rally. Michie said injunction did not bar rally to hear King speak; permit for a parade was withdrawn.

July 5 - City Judge Aiken extended his anti-demonstration injunction from July 6 to July 29.

July 10 - U. S. Judge Michie advised he would return cases to city court and would lift temporary order restraining demonstrations.

July 19 - City officials conferred with Gov. Harrison and state legal authorities.

July 23 - U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals notified City no ruling to be made before September 23 on injunction barring racial demonstrations. Municipal Court trials began for 12 persons.

Falls Church -- June 17 - a movie theatre desegregated.

Front Royal -- Howard Johnson's desegregated, mid-April.

Harrisonburg --Howard Johnson's desegregated, mid-April.

Leesburg -- June 25-July 1 - Orderly picketing of theatres began and continued several nights.

June 29 - Pitts Tally-ho Theatre opened its doors to Negroes and Casey's Diner (under construction in shopping center) announced it would serve all persons. Picketing continued at swimming pool.

July 1 - Bowling center desegregated recently.

Lynchburg -- July 17 - Negro group asked U. S. Justice Department to investigate charges of brutality by Lynchburg police in the arrest of 5 Negro girls July 13, and charged police with brutality in arrest of Negro woman on June 6. It was declared that metal "claws" were used during arrests and caused swollen areas on girls' arms.

Martinsville -- July 17 - City Council tabled proposal by Martinsville-Henry County Civil League for a biracial committee.

Newport News -- Biracial committee in operation since June.

Norfolk -- June 26-July 2 - Negro leaders indicated possibility of demonstrations in wake of Norfolk County Council's rejection of 4-point petition for broad racial integration. City Council designated 25-member biracial committee, originally charged with studying re-development and planning, as its biracial problems body.

July 2 - Ocean View Amusement Park desegregated. Citizens Advisory Committee invited Negro Leaders to present grievances. Subcommittees were appointed to deal with special problems.

Petersburg -- July 17 - City Council sanctioned formation of biracial commission; it has no official connection with city government.

Radford -- June 25-27 - member biracial committee named.

Richmond -- June 25-July 10 - On June 25 a Negro was wounded by a shot from a passing car; he said it was occupied by two white boys.

July 6 - Six of 28 fire companies to be integrated, and all-Negro unit dispersed.

July 7 - The Rev. Robert W. Hare (white) preached his first sermon as pastor of a Negro Presbyterian church.

July 10 - City Council approved formation of biracial committee and received proposed ordinance which could lower racial barriers at city's six park houses. Mayor Eleanor Sheppard promised to appoint committee "as quickly as possible." A Citizens Advisory Committee will discuss desegregation with motel and hotel operators.

Roanoke -- July 4 - City is considering hiring Negro firemen. Mayor M.A.Stroller said it appeared unlikely repairs could be made to Washington Park (Negro neighborhood)swimming pool in time for it to be used this summer.

Roanoke - continued

July 7-14 - firms voluntarily dropped discrimination in hiring policies.

July 17 - Mayor Stroller said he would move July 22 to have Roanoke's last ordinance requiring segregation stricken from books. The law required separate seating on buses.

Suffolk -- June 28 - The Rev. M. L. King spoke to cheering crowd of 5,000; no demonstrations occurred. Following day statewide pilgrimage to Danville announced for July 3 to protest arrests of demonstrators.

Virginia Beach -- June 29 - Majority of hotels, restaurants, motels, and movie theatres have quietly dropped racial barriers.

Waynesboro -- Howard Johnson's desegregated in mid-April.

Winchester -- June 25 - Negro leaders conducting public relations campaign for Negro job opportunities.

CITIES WHERE SOME DESEGREGATION HAS OCCURRED: JUNE 24 - JULY 24

ALABAMA:
- Birmingham
- Gadsden
- Huntsville

ARKANSAS:
- Hot Springs
- Pine Bluff

FLORIDA:
- Cocoa
- Fort Myers
- Gainesville
- Orlando
- St. Augustine
- Tallahassee
- Winter Park

GEORGIA:
- Atlanta
- Augusta
- Cordele
- Macon

LOUISIANA:
- New Orleans

KENTUCKY:
- Bowling Green
- Danville
- Frankfort
- Hopkinsville
- Paducah

MISSISSIPPI:
- Jackson

NORTH CAROLINA:
- Charlotte
- Durham
- Gastonia
- Greensboro
- Hickory
- Mount Airy
- Raleigh
- Roxboro
- Salisbury
- Winston-Salem

OKLAHOMA:
- Oklahoma City

SOUTH CAROLINA:
- Anderson
- Charleston

TENNESSEE:
- Chattanooga
- Knoxville

TEXAS:
- Amarillo
- Austin
- Beaumont
- Corpus Christi
- Corsicana
- Dallas
- Denton
- Fort Worth
- San Antonio
- Waco

VIRGINIA:
- Charlottesville
- Clifton Forge
- Leesburg
- Norfolk
- Richmond
- Roanoke
- Virginia Beach

SUMMARY

CITIES WHERE THERE HAS BEEN PROTEST ACTIVITY: JUNE 24 - JULY 24

ALABAMA:
- Talladega

ARKANSAS:
- Little Rock

FLORIDA:
- Bradenton
- Ocala
- St. Augustine
- St. Petersburg
- Tallahassee

GEORGIA:
- Albany
- Americus
- Atlanta
- Columbus
- Savannah

LOUISIANA:
- Baton Rouge
- Shreveport

MISSISSIPPI:
- Clarksdale
- Greenville
- Greenwood

NORTH CAROLINA:
- Chapel Hill
- Fayetteville
- Goldsboro
- Henderson
- New Bern
- Oxford
- Raleigh
- Thomasville
- Williamston
- Winston-Salem

SOUTH CAROLINA:
- Charleston

TEXAS:
- Amarillo
- Austin
- Commerce
- Fort Worth
- San Antonio

VIRGINIA:
- Danville
- Leesburg
- Lynchburg

ESTIMATED NUMBER OF ARRESTS IN 11SOUTHERN STATES SINCE JUNE 24:

1,323

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
September 5, 1963

THE CIVIL RIGHTS CRISIS: A SYNOPSIS OF RECENT DEVELOPMENT, III*

This synopsis of racial protest and reaction in the South covers the period of July 24-August 28, 1963. It also includes events since April 1, 1963, not carried in the first or second synopses, dated June 26, 1963, and July 26, 1963, respectively. It is neither a press release nor a detailed analysis of recent events. It is meant to serve only as background information. Additional data or corrections are invited.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

July 26 - Defense Secretary McNamara issued off-limits directive: "Every military commander has the responsibility to oppose discriminatory practices affecting his men and their dependents and to foster equal opportunity for them, not only in areas under his immediate control, but also in nearby communities where they may live or gather in off-duty hours." Local commanders must secure permission from the civilian service secretaries before invoking off-limits restrictions on racial grounds.

August 8 - The Defense Department made public a memorandum dated June 17 stating that all morticians holding armed forces contracts have been advised their contracts will not be valid in the event of racial discrimination.

August 28 - Police estimate 210,000 persons from a majority of the 50 states gathered in the Capitol to march briefly and hear leaders' speeches in affirmation of rights for Negroes.

---

* This is principally compiled from newspaper sources.

ALABAMA

Birmingham - July 24 - (The day following city's repeal of its segregation ordinances) Two Negro youths arrested for attempting to enter a movie theatre and refusing to leave when requested. July 30 - 6 downtown variety and department store lunch counters integrated. July 31 - 4 white men arrested protest-picketing desegregated lunch counters;and 7 stores in 3 suburban shopping centers integrated eating facilities.

August 6 - The American Guild of Variety Artists Shows for Freedom - an integrated cast and program - held benefit performance for integrated audience at Miles College (use of city auditorium denied).

August 15 - Homemade tear gas bomb explodes in recently integrated department store.

August 20 - Disorder in the streets between an estimated 2000 Negroes and police follows the bombing of a Negro Attorney's home.

Gadsden - Atmosphere of tense quiet reinforced by presence of 100 state troopers in town until July 19 when downtown marches resumed with 15 arrests, Negroes charging state troopers with harsh treatment of demonstrators during subsequent week. August 3 - Approximately 700 marchers staged city's largest anti-segregation demonstration to date, over 300 arrests and use of electric cattle prods reported. August 4 - Over 100 Negroes sang in protest outside city jail. August 5 - 14 arrested seeking lunch counter service.

August 22 - 4 Prominent actors (white) fly in for church rally. City buses reportedly desegregated since late July.

Huntsville - August 8 - Representatives of 40 industrial firms with government contracts form Association and issue statement in compliance with the Equal Employment Opportunity Program.

Linden - June 29 - Baptist pastor resigns his church rather than "tear it up" over his support of granting membership to Negroes, should they apply.

Macon County - August 17 - Hires its first Negro deputy sheriff.

Mobile - July 26 - Negro leaders charge in telegram to Justice Department that a Negro army sergeant was arrested and beaten for seeking lunch counter service the day before.

ALABAMA (Cont'd)

Mobile (cont'd) - August 15 - Negroes file a petition with City Commission asking desegregation of public facilities and passage of anti-discrimination public accommodation ordinance.

July 26 - State Supreme Court refused to review Alabama Court of Appeals conviction of 11 clergymen arrested during May, 1961, Freedom Rides. The 11 have alternative of submitting to sentence ($100 fine, 10 days in jail) or appeal before federal judiciary.

Montgomery - August 3 - Police Department announces plan to employ 3 Negro policewomen as school crossing guards.

Selma - August 2 - Voter registration worker arrested on "false identity" charge ($500 bond set) 6 days before scheduled to testify at Justice Department hearings on voter intimidation.

Tuskegee County - August 13 - Hires Negro deputy sheriff.

ARKANSAS

Fort Smith - Defense Department* telegraphed by local civil rights organization that city recreational facilities and public accommodations unavailable to Negro servicemen at nearby Fort Chaffee.

Hot Springs - Following 12 weeks of negotiations, as of July 17 most theatres, restaurants, and lunch counters desegregated. By August 3, additional facilities, including thermal bath houses, following suit.

Little Rock - July - Included in a White Citizens Council boycott of desegregated facilities has been the Arkansas Travellers (have a star Negro outfielder) baseball park. (Gov. Faubus attended opening.) August 6 - Parade of about 25 around a motel protesting wages, working conditions of Negro employees.

Marion - July 17 - Negro youth suspected of rape shot by whites; sheriff's office later reported no rape; as of July 27 FBI investigating death.

* Pertinent to Defense Department directive, see page 1.

ARKANSAS (Cont'd)

Pine Bluff - July 24 - small-scale demonstrations resumed by youths after 3-month truce. A cafeteria desegregated. July 28 - August 7 - at least 5 separate demonstrations at segregated drive-in hamburger stand resulted in 62 arrests.

August 1 - 25 arrested in protest at main library over refusal to issue cards (Negroes had used Negro branch, been permitted to borrow from main library only non-fiction unavailable at Negro branch). August 5 - library announces "open to all" policy.

August 4 - Approximately 25 anti-segregation demonstrators marched at Arkansas AM&N College during Governor Faubus' appearance.

FLORIDA

Clearwater - Although all the city's public facilities have desegregated, on at least three occasions in July (14 and 21) swimming parties of Negroes have been advised to leave the public beach when whites threatened disorders .

As of August 1 - at least 4 restaurants desegregated.

Fort Lauderdale -

August 3 - Announcement made of desegregation by 47 members of the Restaurant Association; also, theatres and drive-ins. Police Department actively recruiting Negro officer trainees. Has 22-man biracial committee appointed in late May.

Jacksonville - July 22 - Picketing for Negro employment begun at Southern Bell.

July 24 - Negro leaders considering mass demonstrations after a year of little action via Chamber of Commerce's Committee on racial relations.

August 3 - 12 department and clothing stores hire Negroes.

Miami - Week of July 8 - Roosevelt Savings and Loan Association (board of directors - 7 whites, 5 Negroes) opens, reportedly first state-chartered integrated institution of its kind in South.

July 28 - Police Department integrated as "Negro precinct" abolished.

Miami (cont'd) - August 1-3 - Picketing at drive-in theatre protesting fence between Negro and white entrances. Manager announces all entrances open to all.

August 10 - Picketing of ice cream stand results in its closing, pickets sued.

Miami Beach - July 21-26 - Orderly groups numbering 20-30 picketed National Governor's Conference with signs urging integration.

Ocala - July 20-21 - Total of 46 arrested demonstrating in protest over jailing of leader who had launched restaurant picketing June 29. During previous week a biracial committee automatically disbanded when mayor resigned. While 5 chain store lunch counters desegregated, further picketing recommenced July 23. On July 25 jailed leader charges police brutality; police request mental competency examination (found competent July 26). As picketing continued, on the night of July 27 a Negro leader's home was fired into with a shotgun. July 30 - 21 pickets arrested, adult leadership joins demonstrators for first time July 31, pledge to continue. Arrests total 111 after 2½ weeks.

Orlando - July 23 - City Commission (acting on recommendation of city's interracial committee) votes to desegregate all city owned facilities except pools.

Panama City - July 20 - Total of 35 arrested picketing motels and restaurants.

August 1 - Negro leadership notifies Defense Department* that local public accommodations are denied Negro service personnel from Tyndall Air Force Base and Navy Mine Defense Laboratory.

Pinellas County -

July 23 - Biracial Committee elected four standing subcommitties to deal with executive matters, education, employment, and public accommodations.

St. Augustine -

Demonstrations for integration of accommodations and facilities continuous and peaceful from late June until week of July 15 when police began arresting juveniles and refusing to release them in custody of parents if latter refused to prevent them from demonstrating; threatened sending them to deliquents' home.
July 23 - Crowd of 300 gathered at jail to protest action.

St. Augustine - (cont'd)

July 25 - Jail demonstration repeated, 5 arrested trying to force release of prisoners.

St. Petersburg -

July 30 - Theatre picketing suspended pending a attempt at negotiated desegregation. A cafe which serves Negroes through a side window but denies access to main entrance picketed.

Tampa - July 20 - Members of Merchants Association announce training course designed to prepare 30 Negro applicants for sales positions September 1. August 5-6 - peaceful picketing at cafeteria, 3 arrests.

GEORGIA

State Action - August 1 - First Negro admitted to National Guard since 1905.

Albany - July 23 - Bullets fired into headquarters of student civil rights group.

During July - An Episcopal church announced it is "a house of prayer for all people" and that Negroes have attended.

Week of July 26 - Negro railroad flagman shot in back by a white Marine. Federal Appeals Court ruled city police cannot enforce segregation in publicly owned or regulated facilities.

August 6 - Federal grand jury indicts 9 persons previously active in local protest nvolvement on charges of conspiring against a white grocer who as a juror had voted against a Negro plaintiff in a federal suit: 3 for obstructing justice; 6 for perjury.

Americus - July 26 - Protest - marchers singing attempts to enter - aimed at only downtown movie theatre (segregated) and some lunch counters have been continuous since mid-June, arrests steady. After an August 9 mass meeting Negroes marched downtown, there was some disorder, use of hoses. As of August 17, an estimated 120 had been arrested in a month, no solutions arrived at.

Athens - July 30 - Demonstrations protesting segregated movies commenced here and one theatre admitted Negroes, continued through August 2 when 2 restaurants, 2 hotels desegregated, 5 arrests.

Athens - (cont'd)

August 6 - 138 arrested in protest march on city hall. New city ordinance prohibits more than 5 Negroes in one block at one time. August 9 - 2 advisory committees (white-15, Negro-10) appointed by and meeting with mayor. August 25 - A Baptist and a Methodist church each admitted Negroes to worship. August 26 - Picketing recommenced with 6 arrests.

Atlanta - July 26 - Several weeks concentrated picketing one segregated restaurant climaxed with arrest of 13 who sat down in street, were fined and started serving sentences July 29, released August 2. August 2 - Fulton County Grand Jury, following charge of Fulton Superior Court judge, returned indictments on 75 arrested in violation of Georgia's anti-trespass law. Estimated sit-in arrests April 27 to date: 116. Anti-integration pickets appearing regularly at 3 or 4 restaurants. Some restaurants reportedly resegregated.

August 5 - Approximately 250 Negroes peacefully marched to city hall largely in protest over poor city maintenance facilities in Negro neighborhoods.

August 28 - White pastor arrested during attempts to integrate church in June receives maximum misdemeanor sentence.

Employment protests: picketing has been continuous at Southern Bell. Picketing of Coca Cola Company threatened, has not materialized. Picketing of 4 liquor stores halted altogether August 27 as owners agree to employ Negroes.

Baxley - July 28 - Mississippi Governor Barnett discussed civil rights at a beauty pageant.

Calhoun - August 10 - Hires first Negro policeman.

Columbus - July 18 - Negro leadership agrees to suspend demonstrations (previously at pools, parks, libraries, schools) pending negotiations. July 22 - City Commission created biracial advisory committee (6 Negroes, 14 whites). August 14 - City hires first Negro policeman in 5 years, announces future employment of 3 more. August 21 - Full library desegregation announced for September 1.

Decatur - July 28 - Christian Church minister preached "The time has come for every congregation in the Atlanta area to declare unequivocably that the church...must be open to all of God's children without restriction."

August 3 - Attempts to integrate lunch counters (successful) and movie (unsuccessful) and to swim at 2 DeKalb County pools. August 6 - Negro leaders met with County Commissioners to discuss grievances.

Fitzgerald - July 27 and 29 - Negroes attempted to use public library on 2 occasions, 21 arrests on the latter date.

Savannah - August 1 - Accord reached over October 1 desegregation of some motels, hotels, bowling alleys, and theatres and suspension of demonstrations for 60 days. Only one arrest made - August 7 - of demonstrators who reportedly eluded arrest during June-July protests. Also August 7-- 50 Negroes convicted on varying charges arising out of previous protests.

Terrell County -

August 19 - Demonstrators arrested in Americus (Sumter County) reportedly being held at Terrell County Work Camp, one of the state prison facilities officially closed following clean-up in May.

Valdosta - July 28 - 18 Negroes arrested protesting segregated movie theatre. July 29 - 2 carloads of white youths who tried to force a car of Negroes off the road sentenced in court. July 31 - Mayor plans to form biracial committee.

KENTUCKY -

Hazard - July 25 - Reports all its recreational facilities (pool closed since 1959) desegregated.

Henderson - July 26 - 5 of 13 pickets seeking restaurant desegregation arrested.

Lexington - July 24-August 2 - Several small scale demonstrations and a city hall march, all without incident, culminated on the latter date with the arrest of 9 sitting in a department store aisle protesting discriminatory employment. August 3 - Judge dismissed charges.

LOUISIANA -

Baton Rouge -

July 25, 26 - Picketing City Park and pool without incident until August 3 when some disorder in attempts to enter pool, 5 arrests.

Baton Rouge - (cont'd)

August 1 - 3 Negro policemen commence duties.

August 6 - Lunch counters at 13 downtown retail stores and in 2 suburban shopping plazas desegregated.

Belle Chasse -

August 10 - Plaquemines Parish Council president Leander Perez urges children of Navy personnel at nearby Collendar Field be barred from parish schools and adult personnel from parish public accommodations, in response to Defense Department directive (page 1).

Buras - August 27 - Catholic school which had attempted to integrate in fall, 1962, shattered by midnight explosion, its third.

Clinton - August 2 - White voter registration worker arrested at courthouse while assisting Negroes in registering.

New Iberia - August 3 - White man charged with kidnapping and intimidating 2 Negro employees of Sanitation Department (which had recently hired 3 Negroes for the first time).

New Orleans -

August 1 - Federal court orders desegregation of city's 106 recreational facilities and on August 8 upheld desegregation of the luxury restaurant and cocktail lounge at the airport (only coffee shop and snack bar previously integrated).

August 1- Firemen doused a burning cross on statue of former Supreme Court Chief Justice Edward Douglas White.

August 8 - Angry groups of whites and Negroes scuffling in parks dispersed twice by police.

July 21 - At nearby Lake Pontchartrain Beach 8 persons unsuccessfully sought access to private amusement park.

Plaquemine -

Mid-July - Start of fairly continuous chain store picketing. July 26 - White man arrested for tearing down "white" and "colored" signs at Iberville Parish courthouse restrooms and water fountains. July 29-August 3 - Week-long voter registration clinic.

August 11 - 25 arrested seeking desegregated seating aboard a Mississippi River ferryboat. August 19 - Police permitted one downtown march, turned tear gas on the second wave, and arrested 16. Downtown marches continued August 20-22, with over 200 arrests. City obtained anti-picketing injunction.

August 25 - 2 white churches admit Negroes, 2 turn them away.

Shreveport - July 20 - Following several days of lunch counter sit-ins, 12 arrests, police patrolled downtown, arrested 4. July 22 - Local Negro minister arrested (he had not participated in sit-ins). On August 6 Negroes presented city council with list of grievances, and second formal request for biracial committee.

Rayville - July 31-August 1 - During the night a total of 45 crosses burned throughout Richland Parish.

MISSISSIPPI -

Clarksdale -

July 30 - Largest protest demonstration to date results in arrest of 52, including Negro leader whose wife was dismissed in the past month from her teaching job with the Coahoma Board of Education. July 31 - 15 more marchers arrested. (In both cases, small groups were parading separately.)

August 8 - An interdenominational group of ministers from other parts of the country tried without success to call upon the city government, effect a resolution of differences.

Greenville -

July 17 - 4 sat-in at drugstore counter, without success or incident. July 20 - After obtaining parade permit, a group of 16 held orderly downtown march calling for boycott of stores on their placards. August 3 - 21 persons paraded again.

Greenwood - August 6 - A total of 50 Negroes staged a "vote-in": appearing at city hall in groups of 5, they filed affidavits protesting their omission from poll lists, and cast ballots.

Jackson - July 17 - In first anti-segregation in over a month, 12 Negro youths arrested attempting to integrate 2 city parks. July 19 - Over 150 attempted night march downtown, were stopped by police, who made no arrests. July 24 - 10 arrested parading before city hall. July 27 - 14 demonstrators arrested at 3 different sites.

August 9 - 5 additional Negro policemen hired (1 hired earlier). On same day 11 teenagers protesting before department stores arrested.

McComb - July 27 - Group of Negroes asked to leave white railroad station waiting room, refused lunch counter service in city's first racial demonstration since 1961.

Ruleville - August 6 - 3 Negroes arrested for "unlawfully attempting to procure registration."

NORTH CAROLINA

Ahoskie -- July 22-28 - Negro and white preachers jointly conduct week-long, nightly series of integrated services and meetings.

Asheboro -- August 2-5 - Two movies integrated on consecutive nights, following which loitering white (4) and Negro (4) youths involved in dispute, shotgun fired, all arrested. Police chief termed it "hoodlum trouble, not racial trouble."

Chapel Hill --July 14-August 9 -- Continuation of daily marches of 100 or more demonstrators resulting in first mass arrests (34 on July 19) in the city. Committee for Open Business is organizing marches and picketing to urge passage of public accommodations ordinance by town council. (14 stores maintain segregation.)

Charlotte -- July 22 - Municipal clerical staff integrated with hiring of Negro billing clerk.

Dunn -- July 17 - Bi-racial Human Relations Committee named by mayor held first meeting.

July 18, - Pickets at supermarket and funeral home reported struck by cars.

July 25 - One arrest for picketing without permit.

August 5 - Cross burned before business of Negro member of Committee.

August 7-16 - Twenty arrests (including local leader) for sit-ins and picketing at cafe, bakery.

Durham -- In July a school for retail sales clerks established as part of Negro training program.

Elizabeth City -- Week of July 8 - First two Negro policemen employed.

July 19 - Mayor appoints 18-member bi-racial committee.

Enfield -- August 7 - Restaurant picketed, 11 arrests. (Earlier anti-segregation demonstrations at town's only movie resulted in its closing.)

Goldsboro -- Early August - Demonstrations which were halted in late June pending action from bi-racial committee resumed, leaders charging some establishments had resegregated

August 7- Thirty-two arrests out of 300 demonstrators included personnel from nearby Seymour Johnson Air Force Base.

August 9-12 - At least 209 arrested during city's greatest display of protest (over 400 persons per march).

NORTH CAROLINA (Continued)

Greensboro -- July 25 - Announcement made of desegregation of 41 restaurants (25% of total seating capacity, 30 of 41 integrated prior to recent protests), 4 theatres, all bowling alleys.

July 30 - Human Relations Commission appointed 6 subcommittees on recreation, hotels and motels, employment, eating places, education, and progress and information.

Havelock -- July 25 - Approximately 95% of merchants agreed to desegregate, forestalling threatened demonstrations and following protest to Defense Department* (Havelock is near Cherry Point Marine Air Station).

Henderson -- July 17 - Vance County commissioners reject Negroes' petition for public accommodation ordinance and school and employment integration.

High Point -- July 27 - March protesting segregated movies cancelled when Mayor agrees to confer with theatre owners.

July 30 - Bi-racial Committee announces desegregation of all lunch counters (most motels, hotels and restaurants integrated early in July), public facilities including pools, and appointment of Negro to civic service commission to insure merit employment.

August 24 - During singing march of 50 persons, 15 arrested.

Hillsboro -- August 1 - Bi-racial committee (5 Negroes, 5 whites) held first meeting.

Lexington -- July 14-18 - After 200 staged protest march, swimming pool desegregated, then damaged by vandals unknown. Re-opened integrated when repaired.

August 1-10 - Daily picketing at movie theatre, 26 arrests.

August 20 - Three Negroes indicted on murder charges in connection with a death during June 6 riot. Police have several times dispersed crowds outside jail where the prisoners are held.

Monroe -- July 30 - Three integration leaders report their car was fired upon by four other cars.

Mount Airy -- August 3-4 - Thirty-Seven Negroes arrested in two sit-in protests at drugstore lunch counters, which are desegregated but will not serve groups of Negroes.

NORTH CAROLINA (Continued)

New Bern -- Late July demonstrations at segregated drive-in during which 9 Negro Marines (from nearby Cherry Point) were arrested prompted wires to Defense Department*, investigation by Justice Department, and mayor's plan to name bi-racial committee.

Oxford -- Early August - Picketing of firms protesting discriminatory hiring. Bi-racial committee is active.

Raleigh -- July 12 - Cross burned (second this summer in North Carolina), before home of woman assisting in interracial project.

July 27 - State's Young Democratic Club shifts summer meeting from segregated to desegregated hotel.

Rockingham -- July 13 - Mayor appoints City Council-approved, bi-racial Good Neighbor Committee (4 whites, 3 Negroes).

Rocky Mount --Week of July 8 - Restaurant picketing peaceful and simultaneous with Negro leaders-businessmen negotiations. Some restaurants and municipal facilities, including pools, desegregated.

Statesville --August 5-6 - Attempts by Negroes to use city pool prompt its closing.

Thomasville-- July 18 - Shot fired into Negro church during rally.

August 19 - First meeting of bi-racial committee held. Desegregation of movie theatre is principal demand.

Williamston --July 30-August 1 - Twenty-eight arrested during picketing and marches which climaxed a month of demonstrations (approximately 200 persons per day), aimed at restaurants, pool (now closed), and library.

August 2 - Arrival of Governor's race relations troubleshooter produced truce and talks between bi-racial committee and city leaders.

August 6 - City employment practices integrated and race signs removed from municipal facilities. Commissioners claim they lack authority to desegregate library (private) and pool (leased to private operator).

Wilmington -- During July - Pool integrated.

Wilson -- July 13 - City Commission agrees to remove race signs from municipal facilities.

NORTH CAROLINA (Continued)

Winston-Salem --July 13 - After arrest of 55 persons July 12, protesting at cafeterias,Negro leaders suspend demonstrations pending negotiated desegregation.

July 23 - August 4 - Picketing of cafeteria resumed and continued daily after one in the chain desegregated, with 50 arrests. On some evenings during this period there were singing marches through downtown to the jail.

August 6-7 - Nighttime prayer marches to city hall.

August 8 - Demonstrations suspended by Negroes to allow businesses to desegregate "without pressure."

OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City--July 24 - Private amusement park resegregated after a month of integrated operation.

August 24 - Negro youths attempted to attend Services at 20 churches and were turned away at 3.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Statewide -- August 20 - Forestry Commission announces all state parks to be closed September 8 in avoidance of court ordered integration by September 10.

Anderson -- July 31 - City had its first racial incident in 18 months when white men attacked 2 Negroes who were among 50 being served at 8 formerly segregated lunch counters.

Charleston --July 29 - Following some lapses in demonstrations while businessmen negotiated with Negro leaders, protests, currently over unwillingness of some merchants who will integrate to identify themselves, entered eighth week. By August 3, 107 merchants publically agreed to extend equal courtesies to Negro and white customers and commence equal hiring practices; selective picketing of others which have not has continued.

August 7 - USO announces it will integrate August 15, substituting arts and crafts, discussion groups, etc., for hostesses.

Columbia -- August 27 -Dynamite explosion at Henri Monteith's home.

Florence -- August 2 - City's month-old bi-racial committee and city officials under attack from Citizen's Council.

Orangeburg-- August 2-3 - Picketing of chain grocers and sit-ins at restaurants took place without arrests.

Sumter -- July 19 - The city which has been without racial demonstrations in 2 years witnessed prayer groups at city hall and courthouse.

Sumter (Continued) - July 22-26 - Chain and variety stores picketed all week, climaxed July 26 and July 27 by nighttime marches of 100 to 200 persons.

August 6 - Fifty-two downtown paraders arrested in the afternoon, 300 marched without incident in the evening. Mayor has announced he will name a liaison committee to meet with Negro representatives.

Whitmire -- August 9 - Mayor reports town has been placed off limits to nearby military personnel (Swift Strike III maneuvers) after several Negro soldiers refused to leave a poolroom when asked to.

TENNESSEE

Statewide -- July 30 - State parks' director discloses all state parks have been integrated without announcement during the summer season.

Brownsville-- August 3 - Twelve demonstrators routed from courthouse by police using fire hoses, 1 arrest. (Haywood County has bi-racial committee.)

Chattanooga --August 5 - When denied admission to pool owned by city and leased to private operater, 8 Negroes picketed the facility without incident.

Humboldt -- July 21 - Bi-racial Committee announces the library is desegregated.

August 1 - Thirty-six arrested during march.

Jackson -- July 21 - After unsuccessful presentation to 150 business leaders of Negroes' petition for desegregation of public facilities, integration leaders have urged a boycott.

Knoxville -- August 4 - Three hospitals (Baptist, Presbyterian, and Catholic) announced their simultaneous desegregation during previous week.

Nashville -- July 30 - Federal district court ruled against segregation in private businesses in government-financed renewal areas (case involved a Nashville motel which voluntarily desegregated a month ago).

August 15 - Druggist Association votes to integrate all drugstore lunch counters.

Oak Ridge -- July 27-28 - Laundromat which has denied service to Negroes picketed.

Somerville -- July 20-26 - Week of protest saw marches, sit-ins, 110 Negro students leaving school, 43 arrests, crowds dispersed by smoke bombs, and ended with establishment of 10:00 p. m. curfew.

TEXAS

Austin -- July 29 - Integration leader spent 24-hour vigil in Governor's office seeking appointment, which was granted. Conference fell through when other leaders wished to attend. Picketing of Governor's mansion continued through August 7. Negroes are protesting his anti-civil rights bill testimony.

Dallas -- July 20 - Negro attempting to be served in segregated cafe, slashed with broken bottle when he refused to leave.

August 4 - City's racially-mixed South Oak Cliff area launches (white sponsorship of 5 churches) neighborhood program to promote community development and inter-racial cooperation.

La Porte -- August 5 - City Council votes to establish bi-racial committee to study desegregation of public facilities.

Galveston --August 16 - County Commissioners appointing county-wide (Galveston) bi-racial committee to deal with desegregation in all unincorporated areas.

VIRGINIA

Statewide --August 6 - Commanders at Camp Pickett (Nottoway Co.), Camp A. P. Hill (Caroline Co.), and Ft. Lee (Prince George Co.) have been directed by Defense Department to report by August 30 what steps they have taken to comply with late July order that they advise military personnel of their legal right to send children to integrated schools.

Danville -- July 25 - August 28 - With minor exceptions demonstrations have subsided as last of jailed civil rights leaders released, 100 remain jailed, and over 300 await court hearing on charges of violating temporary anti-demonstration injunction.

July 28 - Seventy-seven were arrested during midtown march and observing newsmen threatened with jail if they did not leave scene.

July 29 - Negro leader arrested at 4:00 a. m. and brought to court barefoot and wearing bathrobe. Injunction, to have expired on this date, extended on day-to-day basis.

July 31 - 275 appear on appeal from lower court convictions.

August 2 - Court made permanent previous temporary injunction. Negro leaders have turned to pushing voter registration (400 registered July 11-August 5).

August 5 - Trials of demonstrators moved to 6 state courts outside Danville.

August 6 - Nine arrested for lying down in street.

August 7 - Trial of demonstrators declared mistrial.

Danville (Continued)

August 8 - Federal court enjoined city from trying demonstrators pending September ruling on validity of city law. City continues arrests, 7 on this date.

August 9 - City officials begin receiving "freedom"phone calls.

August 10 - Three picketed without incident.

August 13 - A city Councilman offers resolution for a bi-racial committee.

August 15 - Out of several groups of pickets, 6 arrested for not walking far enough apart.

Farmville --July 25-August 1 - First protest action since June sit-ins began with downtown march of 60, followed by daily demonstrations for a week with 33 arrests.

August 3 - Demonstrators paraded despite denial of permit, 12 arrested.

August 5 and 7 - 25-35 secured permit and picketed without incident.

August 10 - Fifty paraded with permit for area slightly outside downtown. Subsequent protests have followed same pattern

Fredericksburg -- August 6 - City Council names 4 Negroes, 4 whites to new bi-racial commission on race relations.

Lynchburg --August 1 - FBI clears city police of brutality charged in July 13 arrest of 5 sit-in demonstrators, who were given suspended sentences.

Manassas -- August 14 - Over 20 restaurants and the only theatre in the area agree to desegregate following Chamber of Commerce Committee's negotiations with owners.

Norfolk -- July 23 - Citizens Advisory Committee (bi-racial) announces that over 75% of motels and hotels agree to integrate.

Petersburg --August 8 - Police department hires first Negro patrolman.

Portsmouth--July 31 - Mayor intercepted group of Negroes enroute to sit-in at restaurant, promised further desegregation (10 establishments agreed to integrate previous week), from talks with businessmen, and denied need for bi-racial committee.

Richmond-- August 3 - Additional 17 restaurants desegregated, since June 18 (when 35 agreed to integrate).

August 6-9 - Picketing around city hall protesting discrimination in municipal employment climaxed by delivery of grievances petition to City Council.

Richmond -- (Continued) August 17 - Seven arrested during sit-in at segregated restaurant.

Staunton -- August 9 - Negro petition on grievances in housing, education, and public facilities and accommodations presented to 6-member (3 Negro) bi-racial Community Relations Committee.

Suffolk -- July 18 - City asked by Negroes to form bi-racial commission.

August 1 - County (Nansemond) asked to form joint bi-racial commission with city.

Waynesboro--August 2 - City hires first Negro policeman.

* *

CITIES WHERE DEMONSTRATIONS HAVE OCCURRED JULY 24 - AUGUST 28*

WASHINGTON, D.C.

ALABAMA
Birmingham
Gadsden
Mobile

ARKANSAS
Little Rock
Pine Bluff

FLORIDA
Jacksonville*
Miami
Miami Beach
Ocala
St. Augustine
St. Petersburg
Tampa

GEORGIA
Americus
Athens
Atlanta
Decatur
Fitzgerald
Valdosta

KENTUCKY
Henderson
Lexington

LOUISIANA
Baton Rouge
New Orleans
Plaquemine
Shreveport*

MISSISSIPPI
Clarksdale
Greenville
Greenwood
Jackson
McComb
Ruleville

NORTH CAROLINA
Chapel Hill
Dunn
Enfield
Goldsboro
High Point
Lexington
Mount Airy
New Bern

NORTH CAROLINA (Cont'd)
Oxford
Statesville
Williamston
Winston-Salem

SOUTH CAROLINA
Charleston
Orangeburg
Sumter

TENNESSEE
Brownsville
Chattanooga
Humboldt
Oak Ridge
Somerville

TEXAS
Austin

VIRGINIA
Danville
Farmville
Portsmouth
Richmond

---

*Cities starred had demonstrations or desegregation prior to July 24 not included in previous synopses. See text on preceeding pages for exact date.

CITIES WHERE SOME DESEGREGATION HAS OCCURRED JULY 24 - AUGUST 28

ALABAMA

Birmingham
Macon County

Montgomery
Tuskegee County

ARKANSAS

Hot Springs
Pine Bluff

FLORIDA

Clearwater
Fort Lauderdale
Miami
Orlando
Tampa

GEORGIA

Athens
Calhoun
Columbus
Savannah

KENTUCKY

Hazard

LOUISIANA

Baton Rouge
New Iberia

MISSISSIPPI

Jackson

NORTH CAROLINA

Asheboro
Charlotte
Durham
Elizabeth City
Greensboro
Havelock
High Point
Rocky Mount
Williamston
Wilmington*
Wilson*

SOUTH CAROLINA

Anderson
Charleston

TENNESSEE

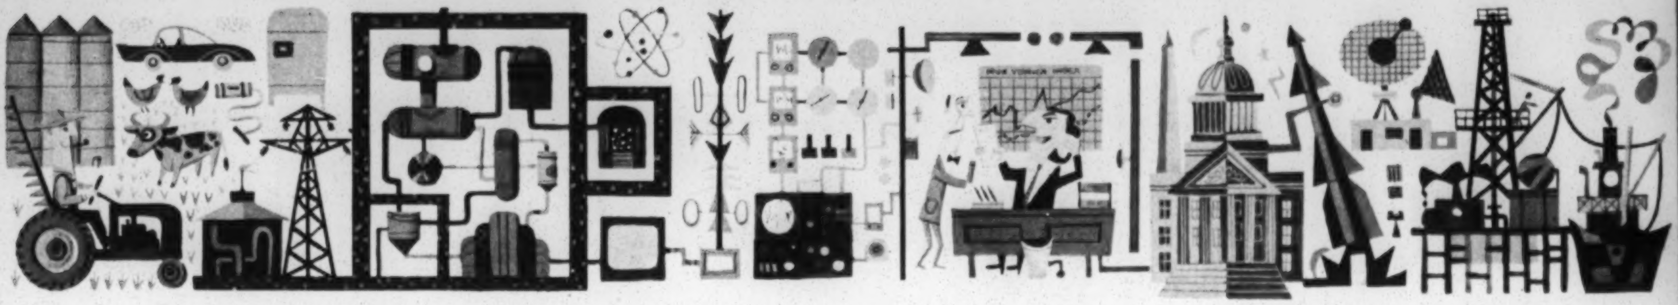
Humboldt*
Knoxville
Nashville

VIRGINIA

Manassas
Norfolk
Petersburg
Portsmouth
Richmond
Waynesburg

ESTIMATED NUMBER OF ARRESTS IN 11 SOUTHERN STATES SINCE JULY 24

2,043



FORTUNE

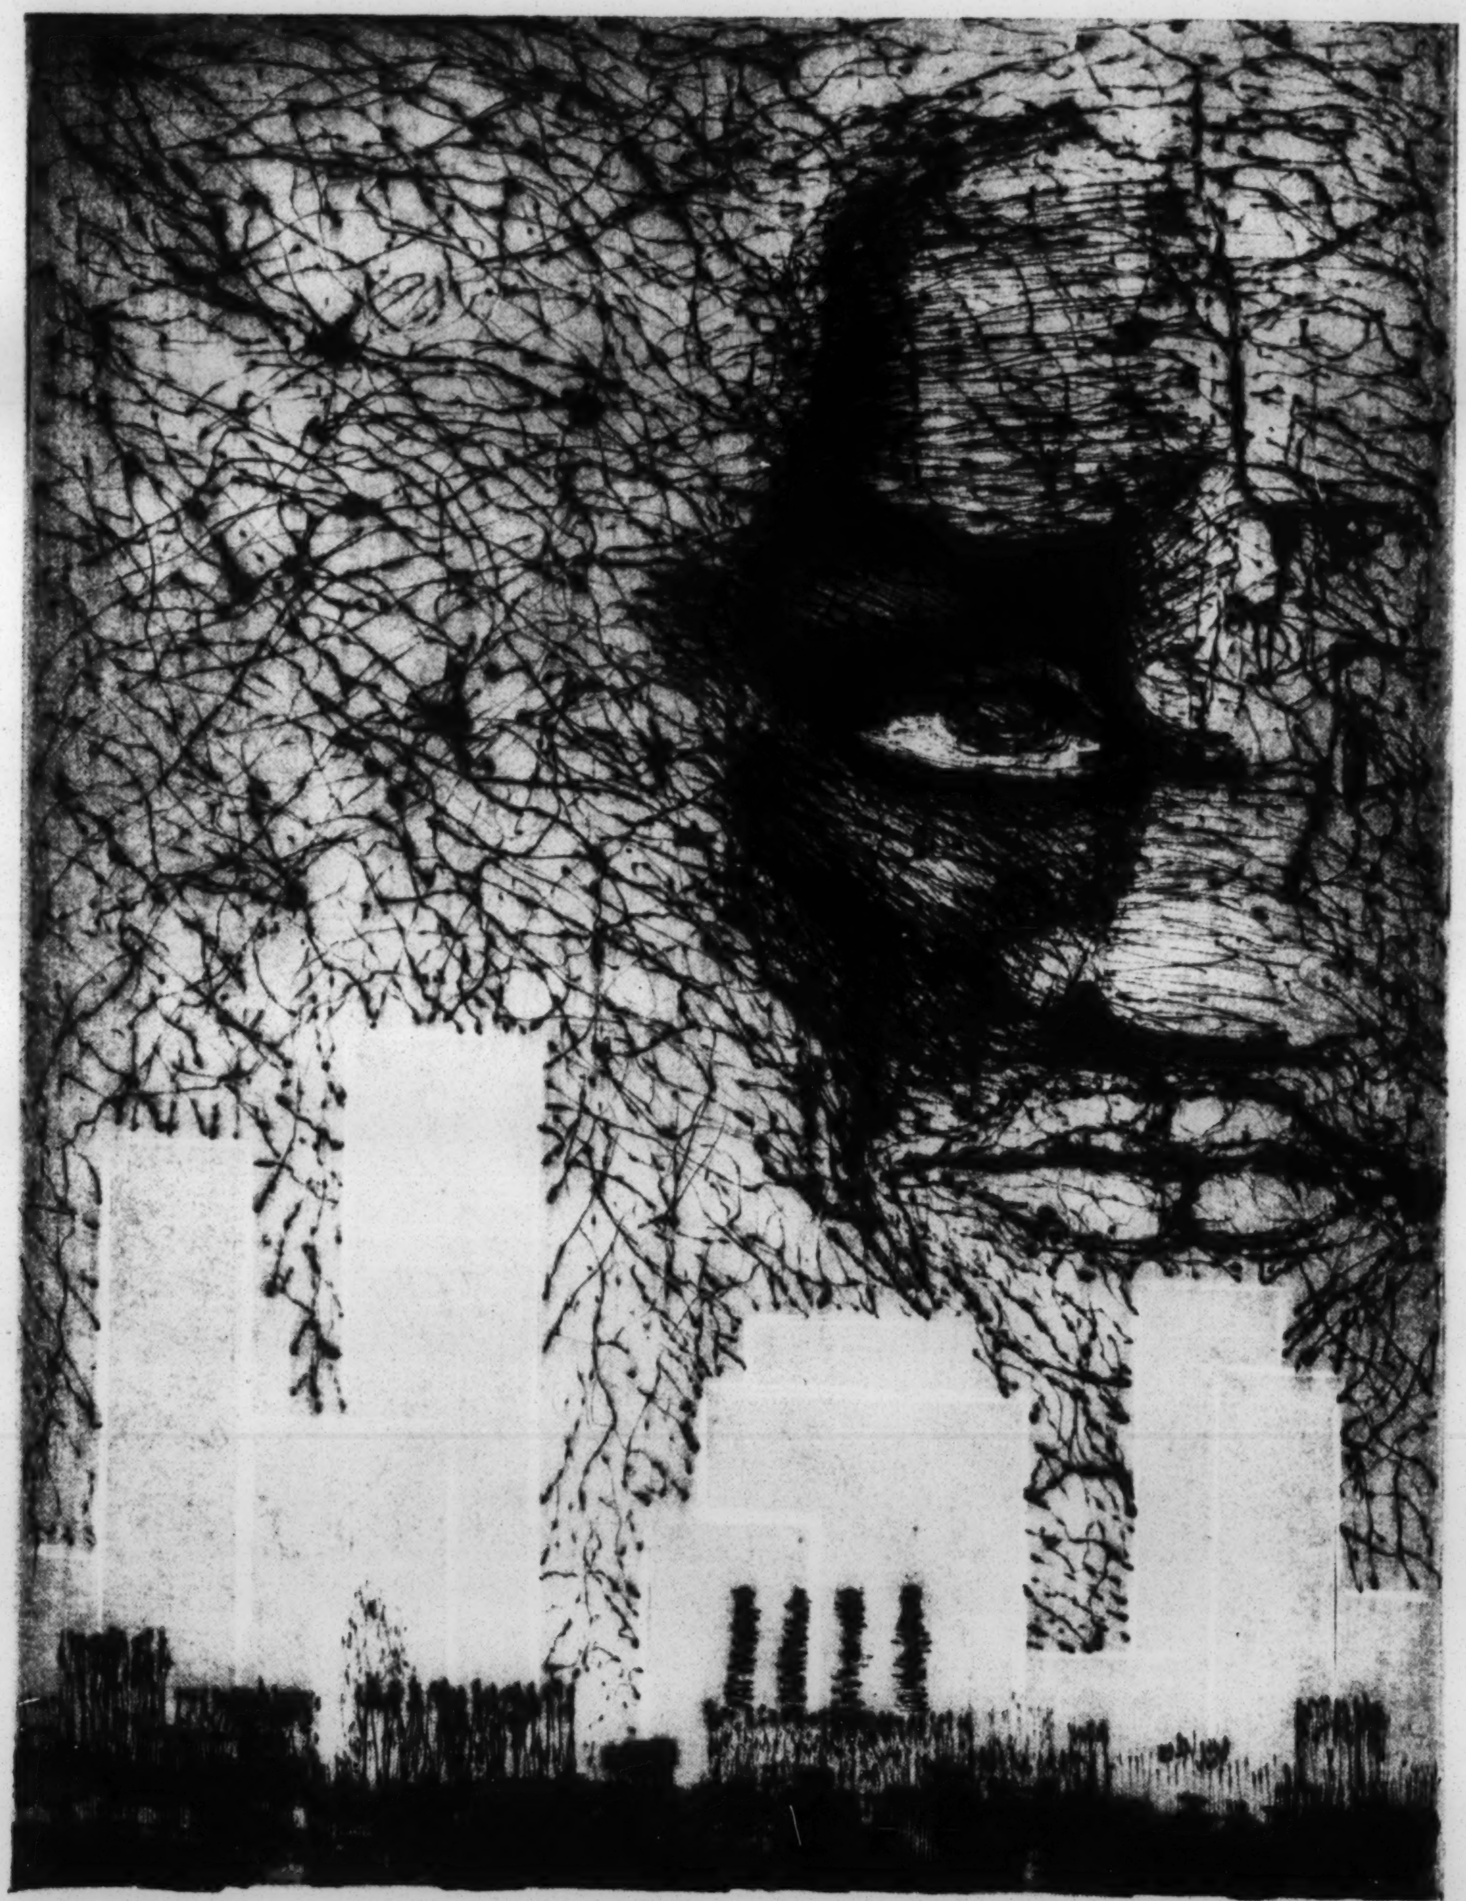
September 1963

The Businessman and the Negro

by Charles E. Silberman

Reprinted through the courtesy of the Editors of FORTUNE

© 1963 TIME INC.



Hammer imp. 1963

The Businessman and the Negro

by Charles E. Silberman

The events of this past spring and summer, beginning with the demonstrations in Birmingham in April and May, represent a major watershed in the history of U.S. race relations. Birmingham, and its aftermath in a hundred cities around the country, demonstrated, so that no one could doubt it any longer, the depth of Negro discontent, the extent of Negro anger and hate, and the ease with which it can flare into violence. Politics, churches, schools, and all aspects of American life will be affected by this anger. Businessmen in particular will be involved more deeply and painfully in the racial struggle.

To be sure, businessmen have been in the fray for some time. They have been the targets of Negro demands for the desegregation of lunch counters, washrooms, and other facilities in Atlanta, Georgia; Birmingham, Alabama; Greensboro, North Carolina, and countless other cities. And businessmen throughout the South—in Austin, Texas; Spartanburg, South Carolina; Knoxville, Tennessee, among others—have taken the initiative in urging the desegregation of public facilities.

The great mass of Negroes, however, are more concerned with where they work than with where they eat: winning the right to eat at a desegregated lunch counter is small consolation to men who can't afford the cost of the meal. The great majority of Negro Americans are still mired in poverty. Until the Birmingham crisis, however, these lower-class Negroes were imprisoned by apathy and despair, and they left the protesting to small, highly disciplined cadres of educated, middle-class Negroes. But when the police dogs were unleashed in Alabama, every Negro in America felt their fangs in the marrow of his bones. The explosion of anger and hatred that resulted broke through the traditional apathy of the poor and created an almost universal desire to act.

The entrance of the poor into the Negro protest movement has profoundly altered its direction and temper. Jobs, not civil rights, will be the key issue; boycotts, sit-ins, and mass picketing, not "moderation," will be the principal weapons; the streets, and not the courts, will be the major forum. Indeed, Negroes of every income level are now eager to demonstrate. They are increasingly intolerant of "moderation," and the poor, in particular, are contemptuous of the doctrine of nonviolence that has dominated the struggle so far. (Within a single week this summer, the Reverend Martin Luther King was pelted with eggs in Harlem, James Meredith was publicly rebuked for being a "moderate," and the Reverend Joseph H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention, largest Negro church group, was booed off the platform at an N.A.A.C.P. rally and threatened with bodily harm for having called for a halt to anti-segregation demonstrations.) The Negro rank and file are now bringing pressure to bear on their leaders, instead of the other way around. Indeed, the Negro leaders' position recalls Mahatma Gandhi's famous remark, "There go my people. I must catch them, for I am their leader."

Prints by Sid Hammer

The verge of crisis

Underlying this shift in goals and tactics is the fact that two out of three Negro households earn less than $4,000 a year, and that one Negro male in nine is out of work. This poverty and insecurity are particularly galling to the Negro, who sees the white society that surrounds him grow increasingly affluent while he remains tied to his slum. Contrary to popular impression, Negroes' economic position has actually deteriorated over the last ten years, relative to that of whites. Negroes did make enormous advances during World War II and the boom years that followed, for the shortage of labor drew them into factory and white-collar jobs that had always been barred to them. As a result, Negro income increased 80 percent faster than white income, and the median income of Negro families jumped from only 37 percent of white income in 1939 to 57 percent in 1952. But this escalation came to a halt with the slowdown of the economy after the end of the Korean war. As a result, the median income of Negro families dropped from its high of 57 percent of white income in 1952 to 53 percent in 1962.

The future is even bleaker than the present; it is no exaggeration to say that Negroes are on the verge of a major economic crisis, for the gap is widening between Negro education and training, on the one hand, and the requirements of the labor market, on the other. Automation, new management techniques, and changes in consumer spending patterns are all reducing the demand for unskilled and semiskilled labor and increasing employment in professional, managerial, clerical, and sales jobs, many of which require considerable education and training. These white-collar occupations account for no less than 97 percent of the total increase in employment that has occurred since 1947. The professionalization of the labor force accelerated during the mid-Fifties, and will pick up more momentum in the decade ahead. But Negroes are badly prepared for this change. Three Negro men in five now work in unskilled or semiskilled blue-collar jobs, compared to three out of ten white men, and more than half the Negro men over the age of twenty-five (vs. 21 percent of white men) have had less than a grammar-school education. Small wonder that in northern industrial centers one out of every three Negro workers has suffered unemployment in the last several years, or that in some Negro neighborhoods the unemployment rate may run as high as 40 percent.

But Negroes' lack of education and training and their concentration in unskilled occupations—conditions produced by past discrimination—do not entirely account for Negro poverty. On the contrary, the Negro unemployment rate is higher than the white rate in every major occupational group. Among craftsmen and foremen, for example, Negro unemployment runs to 9.7 percent, compared to 4.8 percent for whites; among clerical workers, 7.1 percent vs. 3.8 percent. While a great many Negroes can't find jobs because they lack the necessary skills, all too many Negroes who do have the education and training are unable to put their skills to work.

Many firms employ Negroes only in a few job classifications. In the South, employment of Negroes is limited by the tradition that Negroes not be permitted to work on an equal status with whites, and that they never be placed in a supervisory position over whites. In the North, exclusion of Negroes from the better jobs stems less from conscious corporate decisions to discriminate than from the conscious or unconscious biases of the personnel officers, the foremen, the executives, i.e., all those involved in hiring and promoting. At the heart of this kind of unconscious discrimination, management consultant John Perry has suggested, is the concept of "place"—i.e., the notion that certain jobs and certain situations are appropriate, others inappropriate, for Negroes. In almost every company, that is to say, whether through accident or choice, tradition has reserved some jobs almost exclusively for Negroes and some almost exclusively for whites ("Negroes wouldn't be happy there"; "Negroes wouldn't fit in there"; "I'm not prejudiced, but my customers might object").

Because discrimination is so endemic, Negro youngsters all too often see no point to finishing high school or going on to advanced training; they drop out at the first opportunity, and they shirk their studies while they are in school. "Education is a difficult enough process under any condition," Dr. Carl Hansen, Superintendent of Schools of Washington, D.C., has explained, "because educational effort is primarily an expression of hope on the part of the student . . . The Negro pupil is obliged to be more hopeful than the white student. He is asked to have faith and confidence which at the moment he is in school seems unreasonable and unjustifiable."

"The politics of repair"

Jobs are the fulcrum, therefore, on which Negro progress rests, and to which Negro protests will be directed. Businessmen will be in the thick of the fray. Corporations of every sort will be served with demands to hire more Negroes in non-menial positions and to train them for promotion. The pressure to open up job opportunities will encompass every level, from apprentice to foreman to the executive suite, though the emphasis will be on the broad middle range. The pressure will be at least as strong in the North as in the South; more than half the Negroes of the U.S. now live in the cities of the North and West, where they constitute a large and rapidly growing proportion of the population. The methods used will run the entire gamut from polite moral suasion to legal action to boycotts, mass picketing, and sit-ins.

Thus, the problem of race relations may become a major—at times the major—preoccupation of top management for a number of years to come. As J. W. Putsch, president of the National Restaurant Association, told his members in June, "American businessmen are now involved in something greater than a business problem."

Charles E. Silberman, a member of FORTUNE's board of editors, wrote "The City and the Negro" (FORTUNE, March, 1962). The present article is based on a chapter in his book, Crisis in Black and White, soon to be published by Random House.

They are, in fact, engaged in one of the most far-reaching and important changes in the nation's history: an attempt to liquidate, in one generation, the consequences of 250 years of slavery and 100 years of discrimination and neglect. To do so, needless to say, will require difficult and heroic decisions on the part of civic and political as well as business leaders; it will require changes in the behavior of Americans in every walk of life.

But businessmen occupy a peculiarly strategic position, and they may, as a result, be called upon to bear more than their proportionate share of the burden of change. In the opinion of Ray Eppert, president of Burroughs, however, businessmen "recognize both the justice and the inevitability of this movement" and are prepared to accept responsibility for carrying it along. But whether or not they recognize the justice of the changes, a good many businessmen are willing to grant their inevitability. "I'm no integrationist,", says Sidney Smyer, the real-estate executive who headed the white negotiating team in Birmingham, "but I'm not a goddam fool, either."

If businessmen are to do more than just float with the tide, if they are to play a constructive role, they will have to look beyond the usual rules and canons of business management. Pressed by demands from angry Negro activists on the one side and resistant white workers, trade unionists, and executives on the other, managers will find themselves involved in an unending process of accommodation, mediation, adjustment, and persuasion. Executives, in short, will need to learn the art of politics in the highest sense of that term, for they will be engaged in what has been called "the politics of repair." Businessmen like to think of themselves as conservatives; they now have a rare opportunity to conserve American society by repairing what has to be repaired and changing what has to be changed. The slow pace of desegregation since the Supreme Court's 1954 decision on public education has brought to the surface and magnified Negroes' basic distrust in the efficacy of law and in the integrity and good faith of white leadership. By acting on their own initiative to create jobs for Negroes, businessmen may be able to convert that distrust into some degree of confidence and so, in the phrase of Edmund Burke, "make the Revolution a parent of settlement and not a nursery of future revolutions."

"They mean something else"

So far, however, business has done little more than react to pressure from Negro groups. A few companies, to be sure, are making conscientious efforts on their own to break the color line—among them, R.C.A., I.B.M., American Telephone & Telegraph, and Thompson Ramo Wooldridge—and their experience is highly relevant. But in the aggregate, corporations' voluntary actions have fallen desperately short of what needs to be done to increase Negro employment. Indeed, the evidence suggests that despite management's preference for voluntary methods some form of compulsion is necessary to evoke a real change. The "Plans for Progress" program of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity provides a perfect case in point. Over 100 corporations have signed Plans for Progress, promising to "undertake a program of affirmative action" to recruit Negroes and train them for employment and promotion. The President's committee has the power to force compliance with the plans, but until very recently it emphasized the virtues of voluntary compliance.

The virtues are hard to find. While total employment of Negroes has increased since the program began, only a few contractors account for the bulk of the increase. Most firms have done very little to redeem their pledges. Last winter, for example, the highly respected Southern Regional Council studied the action taken by the Atlanta branches of some twenty-four Plans for Progress signers. Only seven of these firms could produce any meaningful evidence of compliance, and only three—Lockheed, Western Electric, Goodyear—had really gone out of their way to create job opportunities for Negroes. A FORTUNE survey in July of Plans for Progress signers in twelve cities around the country revealed the same pattern. In Detroit, FORTUNE's correspondent reported, "Businessmen regard President Kennedy's 'Plans for Progress' program as that big business integration program in the sky." They "applaud the lofty ideals and worthy goals of the program," but they haven't done very much to reach those goals. Nor have firms in other cities; the most common reaction FORTUNE received was that since the company had never really discriminated, the Plans for Progress agreement was a pure formality.

The fact that so few firms are carrying out their commitments under the Plans for Progress program does not necessarily imply that the signers are insincere; it does suggest a lack of realism on their part about what they have to do to carry out the program. "You can have all the talk in the White House or the front office you want," C. W. Robison, personnel director of Thompson Ramo Wooldridge in Cleveland, suggests, "but until you bring the message right down to the front line, you're just talking." (After T.R.W. had signed the Plan for Progress, Robison personally "hand-carried the message" to each one of the corporation's forty-two plants.) And in fact a good many of the cases of noncompliance reflect top management's failure to communicate its intent, or to take the sometimes drastic measures that are required to overcome inertia and prejudice along the line. Edgar Kaiser, for example, is a member of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity as well as a participant in the Plans for Progress program, and his good will is attested to by the most militant Negro leaders in Oakland, where Kaiser's home offices are located. Yet at the time of the Southern Regional Council study, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical's Atlanta office had made no attempt at all to open sales jobs to Negroes: "It would strike me as rather ridiculous to hire [a Negro] for an outside sales responsibility," the sales manager explained. "If we had a lot of Negro customers, we would have a Negro salesman." The personnel manager of Martin Marietta's Chicago branch told FORTUNE's correspondent that he'd never heard of Plans for Progress, and wondered why it should concern him, anyway. The manager of another company's branch in Atlanta was even more explicit. "I have other things to worry about, like selling merchandise, rather than what Mr. Kennedy says," he told the Southern Regional Council. When reminded that the president of his company had signed a pledge to create job opportunities for Negroes, he had a ready answer. "They don't mean regional divisions like us. They mean something else."

"They just don't apply"

Most executives contacted by FORTUNE had heard of the Plans for Progress program, however, and most seemed willing enough to hire more Negroes. The problem, they said, was that qualified Negroes just didn't seem to come around. "We would hire Negroes," the manager of Du Pont's sales office in Atlanta explained, "but we have no opportunity to do so. On the one occasion that we needed clerical help, we advertised, and our ad stated that we had signed the equal-opportunity agreement. But we had no Negro applicants. They just don't apply."

Of course they don't; the door has been closed too long. Three hundred and fifty years of exclusion from American society have persuaded Negroes that there's no point in applying, that "the man" (the white man) has stacked things so that Negroes can't get ahead, and that there is, consequently, no use in trying. Hence Negroes will assume that a firm discriminates until they get positive reassurance to the contrary.

Merely adding a "We Are An Equal Employment Opportunity Employer" tag line to a company's want ads, for example, will not persuade Negroes that the way is open to them. "Industry has to do more than just sit and wait for Negroes to come to their doors," J. J. Bricker, personnel vice president of I. B. M., argues. It has to beat the bushes to find them, by recruiting at Negro colleges, high schools, and employment agencies; by advertising in Negro newspapers and over Negro radio stations; and by using the employment services of the National Urban League, which has representatives in sixty-five cities.

A number of companies are doing just this. Thus, I. B. M. now visits seventeen Negro colleges to recruit engineers, mathematicians, scientists, and sales and management trainees. McDonnell Aircraft of St. Louis has developed a slide presentation for predominantly Negro high schools, showing Negroes working alongside whites at every job level. (McDonnell employs Negroes in 127 job classifications.)

The best recruiting in the world, however, would still leave corporations short of qualified Negro applicants; Negroes have had neither the incentive nor the opportunity to acquire the qualifications that business firms are now demanding. It would be unrealistic to assume that Negroes would be qualified. "White folks seemed always to expect you to know those things which they'd done everything they could think of to prevent you from knowing," Ralph Ellison sardonically remarks in Invisible Man, perhaps the best novel written by an American Negro.

A number of factors have conspired to keep Negroes from acquiring the education and skills they need for non-menial jobs:

▸ Negro high-school students in the South are generally offered vocational education only in traditional Negro occupations. In Houston, for example, the sole vocational high school, which is restricted to whites, offers three-year courses in air conditioning and refrigeration mechanics, automotive mechanics, drafting, machine shop, photography, printing, radio, television, and welding. None of these courses are given in the five Negro high schools. As school officials explain it, "It would be wasteful . . . to educate a student for admission to a craft or trade that is not open to him."

▸ Trade unions are equally culpable. In a number of occupations, workers can qualify for employment only by completing an apprenticeship-training program, which is usually controlled by the trade union involved. Negroes have generally been barred from access to apprenticeship programs run by the plumbers, sheet-metal workers, steam fitters, lathers and plasterers, and electricians, among others.

▸ At Hughes Tool in Houston, for example, Negro as well as white employees are now permitted to receive a tryout for promotion to skilled jobs that open up. But since Negroes, until now, have been restricted to menial jobs, like sweeping, very few qualify for better jobs. As FORTUNE's Houston correspondent put it, "The past practice of keeping Negroes from running the machines has proved effective in continuing to keep them from running the machines."

▸ Most important of all, years of slavery and the discrimination that followed destroyed Negroes' self-confidence, and thereby limited their aspirations and their willingness (and ability) to compete. They are understandably fearful about trying to "make it" in the white world, especially the impersonal world of business.

Are tests necessary?

To end this vicious circle that keeps Negroes untrained and unemployed will require patience and imagination, and, in many cases, a break with corporate tradition. How can it be done? I.B.M. now includes mathematics and science professors from Negro as well as white colleges in the summer programs it runs at several computer centers; the program explains to the professors the career opportunities that are available for their students and the requirements for those careers. Texas Instruments, the Dallas electronics manufacturer, has gone further. It helped establish guidance councils at two nearby Negro colleges where scientists, engineers, and executives from firms in the Dallas area* have been helping the colleges overhaul their obsolete curricula and beef up their inadequate placement services.

A few companies have tried modifying their employment and promotion procedures. When the Negro boycotts were under way in Philadelphia last year, for example, the president of one major corporation decided to take a look at his company's position in advance of any attack. He discovered that his Negro employees—200 out of 2,000—were all at the bottom rung, although the company had no overt biases. Upon further examination, it developed that Negroes stayed at the bottom because they never took the written exams which the company used to measure qualifications for promotion; they simply assumed that the tests were designed to give the company an excuse for not promoting them. Since the tests bore little relation to the job functions involved, the president ordered them replaced with job-performance tests and on-the-job training. As a result, seventy Negroes were upgraded. "I'm convinced that we'll have to do some innovating in order to hire more Negroes," says I.B.M.'s Bricker; re-examination of corporate testing procedures, in his view, is a good place to start. He feels that there are a great many positions where on-the-job training can be given Negroes who fail the usual qualifying tests.

If Negro employment is to be increased, moreover, firms will have to find substitutes or shortcuts for the experience they now demand as a prerequisite in certain jobs. A large merchandising chain, for example, recently asked the National Urban League for help in hiring Negroes for a number of jobs, including store managers. But there was an unintentional catch; the firm required ten years of merchandising experience with the chain as a condition for promotion to manager. Since it had never employed Negroes in merchandising jobs before, the requirement obviously made it impossible for them to qualify for at least another ten years. The Urban League suggested that the firm develop methods for testing managerial ability in a shorter time.

Including Ling-Temco-Vought, General Dynamics, Collins Radio, Bell Helicopter, Ford, G.M., and Procter & Gamble.*

The doctrine of the debt

All this sounds like a demand for special treatment for Negroes, and that is precisely what it is. Negroes are not content with equal opportunity any more; they are demanding preference, or "positive discrimination" in their favor. Negroes liken their position to that of a runner who is kept at the starting line until his opponents in the race are halfway to the finish line; merely "freeing him" to run will not enable him to catch up. More and more Negroes, therefore, are espousing "the doctrine of the debt," which holds that the U.S. owes the Negro something for 250 years of slavery and 100 years of discrimination. "If those who make the decisions in this country are really sincere about closing the gaps," Whitney Young, the brilliant young director of the National Urban League, argues, "they must go further than fine impartiality. We must have, in fact, special consideration if we are to compensate for the scars left by three hundred years of deprivation, which actually represented special consideration of another sort." Hence Young is demanding special priority in employment, suggesting as a precedent the ten-point preference given veterans on civil-service exams after World War II.

The Urban League is proposing that when a Negro and a white have equal qualifications for a job, the former should be given the preference. Militant Negro organizations are demanding considerably more; they are insisting, in effect, that business firms hire Negroes not because they are qualified but because they are Negroes. And they are developing a good deal of muscle to back up their demands for preferential hiring. The most widely used technique is the boycott, or "selective patronage campaign," as Negroes prefer to call it. "Don't buy where you can't work" campaigns were frequent during the 1930's, but they were sporadic and only occasionally effective. The contemporary use of the weapon began three years ago in Philadelphia. The campaign was organized and directed by a group of Negro ministers (some 400 ministers cooperated) with no formal organization. The ministers' technique is to approach one company at a time, usually a manufacturer or distributor of consumer products for which a number of competing brands are available—e.g., bakeries, dairies, oil companies, supermarket chains. If the company refuses to negotiate with the ministers, it is given an ultimatum to hire a specified number of Negroes in specified job classifications before a given date; if the demands are ignored, a boycott ensues. With 400 ministers using their pulpits to announce the boycott, a substantial portion of the Negro population takes part. A number of firms—e.g., Pepsi-Cola, Esso—have come to terms without a boycott. Others held out—but generally not for long; Gulf Oil capitulated in twelve days, Sun Oil in three months. All told, the ministers have won concessions from twenty-four firms so far. The technique has spread to Boston, New York, Atlanta, Detroit, and other cities, and is bound to be widely imitated. As the Reverend Ralph Abernathy, Martin Luther King's chief lieutenant, puts it, "Not every Negro is able to go to jail, but every Negro can stop buying a particular brand of bread or milk or gasoline."

Cracking the "power structure"

Now the boycott is being supplemented by the use of mass picketing, which is better suited to industries that do not make any consumer product. This summer, for example, a coalition of civil-rights groups has been picketing construction sites in New York City in an effort to enforce their demand that Negroes make up at least 25 percent of the work force on all governmentally financed construction projects.

Negroes are demanding more than jobs, however. Their leaders are determined that what they refer to as "the power structure" recognize them and negotiate with them—that business and civic leaders, in short, come to the bargaining table not as patrons but as equals. Negroes have long been rankled by the white "power structure's" traditional prerogative of picking the Negro leaders with whom it wants to deal. They are insisting that whites recognize the leaders selected by the Negro community, whoever they may be or however distasteful the whites may find them.

When businessmen (or civic and political leaders), as is their wont, talk to the eight or ten most prosperous or most politically sophisticated Negroes in town, they aren't really talking to the Negroes at all, and they can be badly misled as to the temper and desires of the Negro community. In Oakland, for example, failure to recognize the grass-roots Negro leadership is nullifying, and may very well destroy, a program that a group of local industrialists has been developing to expand Negro employment. The businessmen wanted to ease racial tensions and avoid Negro demonstrations and boycotts by developing a program in advance of Negro demands. But when it came time to sit down and discuss alternatives, the businessmen did not call upon those Negroes who would be most likely to organize a boycott or call out the pickets. "We didn't want any of those emotional fellows from the N.A.A.C.P.," one executive explained. "We wanted sound men who would be willing to ignore the past and just concentrate on the future, so we asked Mr. X to get a group together. He's a sound man," the executive added. "In fact, he's the whitest Negro we have in town."

The result was as predictable as it is unfortunate. The grass-roots Negro leaders in Oakland, all of whom are Democrats, interpreted the move not as an attempt to help Negroes, but as a plot by a group of businessmen to attract Negroes to the Republican party. For if the program works—if it does create job opportunities—Mr. X, "the whitest Negro in town," would replace D. G. Gibson, the Negro Democratic boss, as the man to see when a Negro was in trouble. Instead of gaining the support of the Negro leadership, therefore, the businessmen have aroused bitter anger and violent opposition.

Negroes' insistence on recognition is more than just a play for power; it is a crucial part of the struggle to overcome the devastation that the past 350 years have wrought on the Negro's personality. The apathy, the aimlessness, the lack of interest in education that characterize the Negro lower classes stem from their sense of dependency and powerlessness—their conviction that "Mr. Charlie" controls everything, and that he's stacked the cards so that Negroes can never win. Negroes must gain a sense of potency if they are to move into the mainstream of American life.

And power has to be taken; the nature of power is such that it can never be received as a gift. Hence when businessmen say they're willing to grant some of the Negro demands, "but not if we're pushed too hard," they're missing the point. Negroes want to achieve their aims by their own efforts, not as a result of white beneficence. Thus, the very militancy and stridency that whites find so upsetting is essential if the Negro is to shuck off his traditional dependency and become truly free and equal, if he is to learn to respect himself, and to be respected by whites.

The years ahead may be harsh and painful but a necessary prelude to the peace that will follow, it is to be hoped. But it would be fatuous to pretend that any set of policies adopted by business and government can bring racial peace within the next few years. For one thing, Negroes' impatience, bitterness, and anger are likely to increase the closer they come to full equality. This is not a quirk of Negro character but a characteristic of all disadvantaged groups: the closer they are to their goals, the harder it is to understand or justify the disparities that remain. Indeed, it is a commonplace of history that revolutions (and the Negro protest movement resembles a revolution in many ways) stem from hope, not despair; from progress, not stalemate. And the nearer to triumph the revolutionaries get, the tougher they usually become. Corporations will find, therefore, that there is no magic formula, no safe and sure way of buying immunity from racial conflict. Indeed, firms that have taken the initiative in employing Negroes may still find themselves the object of attack, perhaps the victim of internecine warfare between competing Negro groups.

Redressing the injuries done to Negroes in the past, moreover, will involve some heavy costs in the present. Granting Negro demands for more jobs, for example, may mean fewer jobs for whites, or at the very least, an end to the monopoly that white employees have thus far enjoyed in many job classifications. Executives can expect to be attacked from both sides, therefore; they will need all the political art they can muster to persuade white employees that "reverse discrimination" is socially necessary and for the greater good. And businessmen may find, to their surprise, that they actually want an F.E.P.C. law forbidding all businesses to discriminate in employment or in customer service; such a law would protect them against employees, trade unions, and hostile elements in their communities.

The cost will be high

Efficiency may be lowered by the costs of hiring unqualified Negroes and training them on the job. Even more damage to efficiency may be done by the blow to the morale (and consequently to the productivity) of white employees when firms begin to discriminate in favor of Negroes.

To be sure, no corporation is completely consistent in its adherence to the principle of merit; all kinds of subjective and irrational judgments enter into the selection and promotion of employees. But deliberately departing from the merit principle is something else again, and there is no point in pretending that corporations won't pay a heavy price for doing so. The cost of not discriminating in favor of Negroes, however, will be considerably greater, both to business and to the community at large. "Make no mistake about it, we're going to have to subsidize Negro employment for some time," one industrialist told FORTUNE. "But it will be a lot cheaper to do that than to pay it out in welfare"—or in the cost to the community of racial violence.

It will be far easier to do these things, of course, if the present business expansion continues and the economy returns to full employment. During the labor shortages of World War II, and again during the Korean war, business learned that it can put "unqualified" men and women to work by teaching them on the job, reorganizing the work where necessary to require less skill.

During World War II, for example, U.S. optical manufacturers assured naval procurement officers that it was impossible to manufacture more than a few thousand prism binoculars a year; there was a shortage of lens grinders, and it took a number of years to train one. By breaking the lens-grinding operation into several steps, however, the Navy was able to get the training time down to a few weeks—and to get output up to a half-million binoculars a year. More recently, industry has had to meet its need for engineers through on-the-job training and upgrading. Between 1954 and 1957, for example, industry increased its employment of engineers by 100,000, or 27 percent. In the same period only 70,000 engineers were graduated by all American colleges, and not all of them went to work for industry. Clearly, corporations supplied the difference through upgrading, promotions, and transfers from other work.

Some U.S. corporations that operate in the underdeveloped nations have had to be even more ingenious in upgrading unqualified workers; employing native workers may be the price of staying in the country for any length of time. Aramco, for example, used to import virtually its entire labor force from the U.S.; it seemed "obvious" that illiterate Saudi peasants could never cope with the complex technology of oil drilling and transportation. Faced with the long-range danger of expropriation, however, Aramco discovered that the Saudis could be taught after all. The company now uses Saudi drilling crews directed by Saudi foremen; roughly one-quarter of the labor time Aramco pays for is spent in education and training of some sort.

Broadening the labor pool

Negro Americans, needless to say—even those from the rural South—are quite a few notches above the Saudi tribesmen. If given the chance, they can learn as well as whites; the expense of training them represents a cost of broadening the labor pool. There are present or potential shortages in a good many skilled jobs, partly because of skyrocketing demand, but in good measure because union training regulations artificially restrict the supply. The pressure to hire more Negroes in skilled jobs may give industry the opportunity to take a fresh look at obsolete training requirements.

There are other precedents for the actions business is being urged to take. In many ways, the current racial conflict resembles the conflict over trade-unionism during the 1930's. (The analogy can be pressed too far, of course; there are important differences, the main one being that trade unions could purport to speak for most of a firm's employees, whereas Negro organizations speak only for a minority.) Businessmen then resented the unionists' demands to share in managerial power; but the U.S. averted class warfare because large corporations gradually came to accommodate themselves to trade-union power, i.e., to negotiate with it.

When all is said and done, however, business must take the initiative not because it is expedient, nor even because it is necessary, but because it is right. "I tremble for my country," Thomas Jefferson wrote, "when I reflect that God is just." Nor can there be any question about the moral issue involved, unless we are to discard the Judaeo-Christian tradition altogether. "Unlike any other social problem religion has ever had to come to grips with," the Reverend Will D. Campbell of the National Council of Churches has written, "here is one on which there is no room for argument . . . It was settled for the Jews in the wilderness when they were admonished to accept the Ger, the sojourner, the stranger within their gates . . . and it was settled for Christendom at Pentecost when members of every race and nation and tongue were 'altogether in one place hearing the mighty works of God.' " The question, therefore, is no longer what to do, but whether there is still time in which to do it. END

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

First Class
Permit No. 22
Chicago, Ill.

BUSINESS REPLY MAIL
No Postage Stamp Necessary if Mailed in the United States

postage will be paid by

FORTUNE

540 N. Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois 60611

FORTUNE

Did you find this article good reading? Why not read Fortune regularly....

We cordially invite you to subscribe at this special introductory rate →

FORTUNE each month brings a wealth of information: Corporation stories... Industry situation stories... Economic forecasting... Technology... Marketing... Management problems

FORTUNE

Covers the Art of Management: Profit

Please send me Fortune for 18 months at the special introductory rate of only $11.75

18 months only $11⁷⁵

This saves you $10.75 of the newsstand price.

INFORMATION DESIRED

PLEASE PRINT

title

name

company name

address

kind of business

city zone state

☐ I ENCLOSE PAYMENT ☐ BILL ME

F-9152

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
December 31, 1963

CIVIL RIGHTS: YEAR-END SUMMARY

During 1963 an estimated 930 individual public protest demonstrations took place in at least 115 cities in the 11 southern states.

More than 20,083 of the persons, Negro and white, who have so demonstrated have been arrested.

Ten persons have died under circumstances directly related to racial protests.

And 35 known bombings have occurred.

On the positive side some progress toward integration has taken in an estimated 186 localities in the 11 southern states. In an estimated 102 of these cities, towns, and counties biracial committees with varying degrees of official sanction are currently working toward the achievement of further integration.

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
December 31, 1963

THE CIVIL RIGHTS CRISIS: A SYNOPSIS OF RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IV*

(This is a synopsis of racial protest and reaction in the South from September 1963 through November 1963. It is principally compiled from newspaper sources. It is neither a press release nor a detailed analysis of recent events. It is meant to serve only as background information. Additional data or corrections are invited.)

ALABAMA. (Statewide)

September 6 - Legislature appropriated $25,000 for two years to its joint Commission to Maintain the Peace, created earlier in the year to investigate subversive elements in racial disturbances.

Anniston: September 15-16 - Two Negro ministers beaten by over 25 whites during attempt to use library; following day they were escorted by city officials to the Anniston library, which then integrated.

Atmore: August 18 & 30 - Six separate attacks committed upon Negroe By September 20, six whites, aged 18 to 23, from Florida charged with assault with intent to murder.

Birmingham: September 4 - Bombing of Arthur D. Shores home set off riot in which one Negro was killed.

September 8 - A. G. Gaston home bombed.

September 15- Sixteenth Street Baptist Church bombed, killing 4 Negro girls; two Negroes killed in subsequent clashes.

September 18 - Brief, 3-block long demonstration halted during funeral for 3 of the 4 dead.

September 25 - Two consecutive bombs exploded in early morning on street of Negro residential area.

President Kennedy met with separate Negro and white delegations in Washington, sent his own mediators to city. No further Negro demands - employment of Negro police, desegregation of facilities - have been met. There have been no bombing convictions. No further demonstrations. A biracial subcommittee has held meetings.

October 3 - Bombing of Negro store front admitted by Negro.

Florence: In October - city government approved plans to hire first Negro police, none hired as yet.

Gadsden: In September - Negroes filed suit in Federal District Court seeking integration of municipal building, auditorium, tennis courts, swimming pools, recreation center, schools. September 13 - Grand Jury did not bring indictment against grocer held in slaying of Freedom Walker William Moore. November - Store hired 2 Negro butchers and a cashier following economic pressure from community.

---

*(Includes events prior to August 29, 1963, which were not reported in previous chronologies. Does not deal with school desegregation.)

ALABAMA(Cont'd).

Huntsville:	August 31 - City Council approved 9-man bi-racial committee.
	September 29 - Seven motels and a leading hotel integrated.
Mobile:	Mid-November - City's picketing ordinance ruled unconstitutional by circuit judge.
Montgomery:	September 5 - One of 3 Negro members of 50-man integrated Kansas high school drum and bugle corps en route to Florida beaten by two unidentified white men in lunbh counter of Trailways Bus terminal.
	September 15 - Clash of whites & Negroes outside segregated movie controlled by police, with no arrests.
Selma:	September 16 - October 16 -- Demonstrations began September 16 when high school students cut classes, attempted sit-ins, marched downtown, 67 were arrested. Protests originated over Birmingham bombing, then focused early on voter registration and segregated facilities.
	September 17 - Twelve arrested.
	September 23 - Fifteen arrested, parade attempt halted.
	September 24-- 132 arrested during two marches and kneeling at housing project. Justice Department lawyers arrived.
	September 25-- 28 arrested picketing court house.
	September 29 - Four Negro women integrated First Presbyterian Church.
	October 1-2 - Six pickets at court house and post office arrested.
	October 7 - Over 200 Negroes stood in line all day to register (under 40 applications processed). Two Negroes attempting to take sandwiches to registrants arrested and two newsmen received rough treatment from state troopers and police.
	October 15-16 - Smaller groups of Negroes attempted to register.
	White leadership has refused negotiation. Charges were parading without permit (permits applied for have been denied), truancy, contributing to delinquency of minor, unlawful assembly, interfering with officer, picketing without license, disorderly conduct.
Tuscaloosa:	September 10-- 3 Ghanaian students, a white student, and a white minister from out of state driving through the city were taken into custody by police, released, later stopped on highway and beaten.
	November 17,18,19 - 3 Separate bombings, 2 of them near University of Alabama.

ARKANSAS.

Benton and Conway:	September - Drive-in movies integrated.

ARKANSAS(Cont'd).

Fayetteville: Summer - Theatres, some motels, most restaurants, and municipal swimming pool integrated.

Fort Smith: August 12 - Negroes picketed supermarket without incident, seeking employment.

Helena: November 16 - 32 arrested during drugstore and restaurant sit-ins, reportedly town's first demonstration.

FLORIDA.(Statewide)

A 1957 statute (Section of the Hotel and Restaurant Commission Act) declaring public lodgings and food service establishments "private enterprises" found to block passage of municipal "open" public accommodation ordinances.

Late October - Florida National Guard integrated by first Negro member.

Bradenton: Since Summer - has formed bi-racial committee.

Clearwater: September 9 - Movies integrated, with one exception.

Jacksonville: October 5 - Over 1,000 staged peaceful march asking jobs, bi-racial committee, desegregation of accommodations. (On September 5 all but two restaurants pledged open policy, but no integration to date.)

Miami: September 15 - Over 1,000 marched in Birmingham memorial procession.

Ocala: September 21 - The Florida Advisory Committee to the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, holding hearings, was refused motel accommodations, heard testimony on harassment of Negroes advocating integration.

St. Augustine: July 23-October 25 - Demonstrations which began in June have gradually come to a standstill. Police dispersed a Labor Day protest march in the tourist section, have permitted some subsequent picketing. A few lunch counters and one restaurant have integrated. Mayor refuses to name bi-racial committee. Four juveniles arrested July 23 during drugstore sit-in are still held in state reform school. An atmosphere of unrest has been accentuated by some violent incidents, including 2 Negro homes and 2 Negro juke joints shot into, car tires slashed and cars turned over.

August 31 - Eight arrested during drugstore sit-in. September 2 - Thirty-two arrested in city park for holding a public meeting without a permit.

September 12 - City manager issued indefinite ban on parades and open air mass meetings.

September 19 - Four integration leaders severely beaten at Ku Klux Klan rally (which was held in the open air). (Charges against one of the Negroes dismissed in November after complaining Klan witnesses twice failed to appear.)

Week of October 21 - Four bombs thrown at integration leader's home.

October 25 - One of 4 white men driving with a rifle through a Negro neighborhood slain.

November 7 - Two Negroes arrested in connection with shotgun deaths of 2 whites, including October 25 incident.

Sarasota: Since Summer - has formed bi-racial committee.

Tallahassee: September 13-16 -- 248 college students arrested in renewed picketing (after 2 month lay-off) of movie theatre. Approximately 475 marched to jail protesting arrests and 104 of those arrested in their effort to pack jail.

November 7 - Negro student at Florida A & M University shot in arm while walking near campus.

Mid-November - Students have been picketing restaurants adjoining Florida State University campus. One has subsequently served Negroes.

Tampa: September 9 - All movies integrated.

GEORGIA:

Albany: Library recently integrated on stand-up basis.

Americus: August 8 - November 2 -- Four workers in the efforts of voter registration and integration of library,movies and municipal facilities arrested August 8 and 17, charged with insurrection, held 70 days until November 2, until suit brought in Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals secured their release and prohibited further prosecution under the capital charge.
October 22 - Two arrested for picketing movie in only overt protest activity since August.

The 20-man Urban Renewal Committee has 5 Negro members.

Atlanta: September 7 - State Senator Leroy Johnson's office picketed.

As of October 1 - Most drive-in movies integrated after previous 30-day test period.

October 7 - An estimated 500 Negroes picketed Governor Wallace's sppech.

October 21 - 25 picketed First Baptist Church.

October 29 - Mayor named bi-racial panel to study Negro municipal employment.

November 3 - Atlanta Summer Leadership Conference (9 organizations which united in October) asked negotiation of Negro goals with no threat of demonstration.

Week of November 11 -- Lovett School picketed.

November 13 - Negro leadership met with Chamber of Commerce and Board of Aldermen. Chamber issued public statement urging end to discrimination in business and employment.

A Sierra Leone visitor, State Department official, and two Atlantans refused service at one restaurant, police called when they refused to leave.

Atlanta (Cont'd)

November 14 - Board of Aldermen refused to permit Mayor to speak, refused to endorse resolution for voluntary desegregation.

November 19 - Retail Merchants Association joined Chamber of Commerce in endorsing voluntary end to discrimination in public accommodations.

November 21 - Approximately 400 Negroes picketed Rich's seeking employment of Negroes among extra holiday sales personnel. Negro leaders and hotel owners conferred.

Augusta: During late summer - Mayor appointed bi-racial advisory commission. Parks and library integrated. A Negro bus driver hired.

Late September - Merchants began hiring Negroes in non-traditional jobs.

October 9 - Polling places integrated for Mayor's election.

Columbus: September 2 - Library integrated

September 4 - 25-Member (15 whites, 10 Negroes), bi-racial committee named by City Commission.

During October - Movies integrated.

Decatur: During October Municipal Recreation Center used for first time by integrated group (had previously been integrated in principle).

DeKalb Co.: During September an unofficial bi-racial study committee organized to stimulate voter registration.

Fort Valley: November 12 - Negro community formally requested open public accommodation ordinance and integration of municipal facilities.

Griffin: November 9 - Integrated group of 21 Peace Marchers arrested. Main library has integrated recently.

Jekyll Island: September 24 - Suit filed for integration of state park facilities here.

Macon: September 22 - Vineville Baptist Church admitted Negro to church membership; is reportedly first Southern Baptist congregation to do so.

As of October - More than a token number of Negroes have been employed in mercantile jobs. Library integrated recently.

Rome: September 24 - Sorority cancelled scheduled October Air Force Band concert. (Earlier in month Air Force barred its personnel's participation in events before segregated audiences.) Defense Department announced other service arms were doing likewise.

Library recently integrated.

GEORGIA (Cont'd)

Savannah: October 2 - Two motels, two hotels, and three downtown movies integrated.

A Negro delegation to the City Council officially protested five fatal shootings of Negroes by police during the year. (In addition, one Negro woman's home has been shot into seven times within year with no convictions made.)

October 29 - One integrated movie tear-gas-bombed simultaneous with picketing by 15 Klansmen.

Tifton: Library recently integrated.

Valdosta: September 5 - Mayor appointed bi-racial (14 white, 10 Negro members) committee held first meeting. Library subsequently integrated.

Warner-Robbins: September 5 - Integration requests formally presented to mayor by Negro committee.

During October - Although city recently passed a picket-proscribing ordinance, a supermarket has been regularly picketed without incident.

October 19 - Seventeen arrested during drugstore sit-in.

KENTUCKY.

Hopkinsville: Late August - Many restaurants, movies, and bowling alleys voluntarily integrated.

Lexington: August 31 - Over 250 demonstrators marched downtown carrying signs saying newspapers discriminate.

During August - 4 private businesses and secretarial schools integrated.

Louisville: September 12 - Ordinance prohibiting discrimination in places of public accommodations went into operation; carries fines up to $100 for violation, injunction for public nuisance after 3 convictions. Bowling alleys have all publicly announced compliance. Tavern owners have brought suit challenging ordinance's constitutionality.

By September 15 - Negro leaders reported tests showed 80 restaurants integrated.

LOUISIANA.

Baton Rouge: October 1 - 4th Negro policemen (3 hired in August), joined force.

Large number picketed food store where clerk allegedly threatened 2 Negroes with gun.

Clinton: October 12-13 -- Twenty-six arrested for picketing. At the city's request, a state court issued injunction banning racial demonstrations.

October 22 - Federal Court extended indefinitely a stay of injunction.

Gonzalez: Late August - A Negro arrested for disturbing the peace when refused restaurant service in bus station.

LOUISIANA (Cont'd).

Hammond: September 5 - Approximately 275 marched to City Hall, attempted 2 sit-ins, in city's first racial demonstration. School suspended for a week participating students (who had cut classes).

September 7 - Mayor met with Negro leaders.

September 8 - Some students returned to school and accepted work penalties in lieu of suspension.

September 9 - Students picketed their school protesting suspension. Mayor agreed to name bi-racial committee and Negro leaders to no further demonstrations.

September 17 - Commission Council passed resolution creating bi-racial committee on community relations (8 whites, 8 Negroes), reportedly second such committee in state (other in Baton Rouge).

September 18 - Committee held first meeting.

Newly formed Association for Preservation of Constitutional Government began efforts (meeting with 115 attendance) to have Mayor recalled.

Jena: September 29 - A KKK rally of 5,000 in a pasture.

New Orleans: August 13 - 10 Negroes hired by Sanitation Department as garbage collectors (job previously unavailable to Negroes).

September 4 - A Methodist church made public announcement that worship services were open to "any and all."

September 10 - 3 leading hotels and 1 motel agreed to accept Negroes as convention delegates.

September 18 - City announced it will appeal July 1 Federal Court order to integrate Municipal Auditorium.

September 19-20 - Students marched before City Hall protesting discriminatory voter registration practices. 83 arrested on the 20th.

September 30 - Parade permit and police protection granted City Hall march of approximately 5,000.

November 4 - Three arrested at City Hall cafeteria (sit-ins have been held here regularly).

November 5 - Five arrested outside Mayor's office and 4 arrested in restaurant protesting segregation.

November 7 - Six arrested in City Hall cafeteria included a Negro Catholic nun.

Opelousas: September 3 - Approximately 300 attended meeting decrying Negro "second class treatment," asking negotiation with city government.

Plaquemine: September - Demonstrations began here August 19 when annexation to the city of 2 Negro neighborhoods (one of which is nearly surrounded by the City) and bi-racial committee denied. A second temporary restraining order

LOUISIANA (Cont'd).

Plaquemine (Cont'd):

(first was stayed by 5th Circuit) issued by U. S. District Court judge on September 1 failed to halt demonstration that night in which 68 were arrested protesting alleged police brutality in smaller protest the night before. Tear gas, electric cattle prods, fire hoses, and mounted police were used to drive retreating demonstrators, including 6 ministers, from a church.

Negro students refused to eat in school cafeteria in protest over firing of lunchroom worker who participated in demonstrations.

September 26 - In response to Negro suit, Federal District judge did not lift, but extended, demonstration ban through October 10.

October 4 - Approximately 500 students held "freedom song" demonstration in high school; 35 students suspended indefinitely.

October 7 - Protesting suspensions, 400 students attempted to protest at school board office, met road barricades and tear gas.

October 8 - Sixty students dispersed from attempted sit-down at white school.

October 9 - A tear gas grenade thrown into a Negro church during protest meeting.

October 10 - Approximately 40 students dispersed from a demonstration at their own school with tear gas; 2 arrests. Nine students dispersed from restaurant sit-in with cattle prods.

October 11 - Individual students served with copies of the anti-demonstration injunction.

October 26 - A scheduled civil rights meeting broken up when arriving participants met at church by armed police.

In long-range efforts, Negroes are attempting to do most of their buying in 20-mile distant Baton Rouge; have offered a full slate of city and parish candidates for December 7 primary.

Pointe a la Hache:

October 10 - Plaquemine's Parish Council authorized Leander Perez to lease an old fort as a stockade for racial demonstrators, and to take Martin Luther King, Jr., into custody should he "visit the Parish."

Shreveport: September 22 - Parade permit denied for a Birmingham (church bombing) memorial march. (By contrast, large marches took place in North Little Rock, Ark., Miami, Fla., Columbia, S. C., and Raleigh, N. C., to name a few places.) When some Negroes attempted to march, police dispersed them with tear gas, arrested one teacher and one student after group took refuge in a school.

October 9 - Four Negroes arrested attempting to register at motel.

MISSISSIPPI.

Indianola: October 22 - Fourteen youths, including 2 Yale students, arrested for distributing literature without a city permit during write-in election drive for Mississippi Negro leader Aaron Henry for governor.

Jackson: October & November - City has been the scene of repeated attempts by integrated groups to worship at white churches, only 2 of which (Catholic and Episcopal) have admitted them.

October 6 - Two Negro and 1 white Tougaloo female students arrested on charges of disturbing public worship at Capitol Street Methodist Church.

October 12 - National Council of Churches, on coeds' behalf, filed suit contesting law which permits arrest of persons trying to integrate church services.

October 13 - Same 3, with a white minister, turned away at same church; no arrests.

October 20 - Twelve arrested at 2 churches.

October 27 - Two ministers arrested when, after police had turned them away from church, they knelt on sidewalk.

November 17 - Ten, including 5 clergymen, 3 of them white, arrested at 4 churches.

Other events have included:

September 4 - U. S. District Court judge released the city as defendant in suit seeking to enjoin it from enforcing segregation under state and city laws.

September 7 - U. S. District Court judge ordered city to remove segregation signs outside 3 terminals. (The 2 bus and 1 railroad company had already removed their own signs inside building. Also, the same judge had earlier refused so to order the city, but his decision was overturned by 5th Circuit.)

September 17 - Two Negroes served on trial juries, reportedly for first time in state in recent years.

October 15 - A Negro shot to death a white service station attendant in argument over use of "White only" drinking fountain.

November 19 - Two white youths arrested for setting fire to drive-in restaurant because owner recently employed Negro car hops and waitresses.

During November - Three Negro girls drew irate crowd of students when they integrated Millsaps College's Christian Center for a play performance.

MISSISSIPPI (Cont'd)

Meridian: August 30 - Three busloads of Negroes, returning from Washington March, refused service at "white only" bus station facilities; some beaten by white bystanders.

October 5 - Four additional Negro policemen hired (previously one on force).

Natchez: August 30 - One Negro arrested for using "white only" service station restroom; complained to Justice Department he was beaten by sheriff's deputies.

Winona: September 9 - Justice Department brought suit charging police with brutality in custody of 5 who sought bus terminal restaurant service last July.

Yazoo City: November 5 - Police met and dispersed election workers, warning them of ordinance against circulating handbills without a permit.

NORTH CAROLINA. (Statewide)

Governor Sanford keeps personally informed of racial demonstrations via statewide telephone reports from State Highway Patrol every 24 hours.

Ahoskie: September 10 - Town Council passed ordinance regulating picketing.

Charlotte: November 22 - All 14 (a 15th is all-Negro St. Andrew's) white Lutheran churches announced January publication of a self-study asserting the churches are open to all.

Concord: September 10 - Negro youths demonstrated before 2 movies, staged a subsequent protest, and on third day, Nov. 16, drew a crowd of 500 hostile whites whom police dispersed.

September 19 - Mayor dissolved 2-month old bi-racial committee saying the demonstrations violated the terms of its formation. Negro members of the committee denied any agreement not to demonstrate.

Dunn: September 20 - Bi-racial Human Relations Committee issued progress report of desegregation, cited integrated drugstore lunch counters and agreement of 11 firms to commence merit hiring. An official truce had been in effect, August 13 through November 13.

November 26 - Negro leadership denied "anything concrete" accomplished in 90-day period.

Elizabeth City: September 14 - Approximately 250 students staged orderly anti-segregation march in reportedly city's first protest of the year.

September 15 - Approximately 450 participated in peaceful prayer march to courthouse.

September 16 - Another march of 150-200, without incident.

September 20 - Negroes made formal announcement of objectives; integration in churches, schools, employment, public

NORTH CAROLINA (CONT'D)

Elizabeth City (Cont'd): accommodations and municipal facilities.

September 25 - Mayor's bi-racial Committee on Human Relations agreed to negotiation with suspension of demonstrations through November 9.

Enfield: August 31 - 1,200 demonstrations clashed with police as violence erupted over failure of bi-racial committee's negotiations and passage of picket-regulating ordinance.

September 4 - Governor's race relations aide visited city but failed to break deadlock.

September 7 - Department store pickets protesting discriminatory hiring arrested as fast as they appeared until jail was filled.

Gatlinburg: October 15 - AFL-CIO's Southern Advisory Committee on Civil Rights meeting here noted all leading motels, hotels, and restaurants are integrated.

Gastonia: During November - Protests initiated asking integration of movie theatres.

Goldsboro: November 18 - Bi-racial Council announces formation of also bi-racial Woman's Good Will Committee to improve communication across race lines.

High Point: Demonstrations which began in mid-August, and reached a crescendo in early September have centered on public accommodations and employment and resulted in the arrest of over 1,000 by September 10.

September 1 - Seventy-five Negroes marched through downtown and converged on segregated drive-in restaurant.

September 2 - Three leaders of singing march of approximately 120 arrested.

September 3 - Nearly 50 of 200 demonstrators arrested in 3rd consecutive night at drive-in.

September 4 - 225 marching on drive-in met by about 800 angry whites, 2 of whom were arrested for inciting to riot.

September 6 & 7 - Cafeteria, 2 movie theatres, & drive-in picketed.

September 8 - Mass meeting of 900 at City-County Building and downtown march of 380.

September 9 - 363 arrested in 3 waves of theatre-restaurant protest.

September 10 - Mayor requested, Negro leaders rejected moratorium on demonstrations, pending negotiations, 10 of 700 marchers arrested as police restrained 2,000 onlookers from near clashes. To date police had kept order, drawn praise from Negro leaders.

N. C., High Point (Cont'd)

September 11 - A hail of rocks, eggs, and tomatoes thrown from crowd of 3,000 at approximately 500 marchers caught some innocents in crossfire; police used tear gas to keep order, arrested 9 for trespass.

September 12 - Negro leaders agreed to 90-day (through December 6) suspension of protest actions and City Council deferred passage of severe anti-demonstration ordinance. A permament 11-member human relations commission planned to replace bi-racial committee.

September 30 - Women's Good Will Committee held integrated luncheon.

November - Two Negro firemen hired in recent weeks and negotiations with bowling alley owners in progress.

Kenansville: November 8 - Two Negroes served on Superior Court jury in criminal trial (burglary and rape) of a Negro.

Kinston: October - Two Negro firemen hired.

Laurinberg: October 15 - First Negro policeman hired.

Monroe: September 4 - Approximately 125 marched around county courthouse protesting school segregation.

Murfreesboro: During September - Board of Commissioners approved naming of Advisory Committee on Bi-racial Affairs.

Raleigh: During September - A permanent Community Relations Committee succeeded temporary group named in May.

Southern Pines: September 1 - Town's first Negro policeman hired.

Statesville: September 19 - Voters in recall election elected 6 new city councilmen pledged to holdrreferendum on status of swimming pool integrated during summer.

November 19 - Mayor named additional members to expanded bi-racial human relations committee.

Wadesboro: September - Negro community formed its own Economic Development Corporation, established shirt factory providing new skilled jobs.

Washington: September - Bi-racial committee established and second Negro policeman hired.

Williamston: August 29 - After a week-long truce and city's enacting an anti-picketing ordinance, 11 were jailed in violation of it.

August 30 - Approximately 400 Negroes, protesting previous arrests, met phalanx of police. All in all, demonstrations had been held almost daily for 32 days through....

October 15 - When Negro leaders telegraphed the governor to intervene, staged a peaceful march of about 100 persons.

November 17 - Fifteen white ministers from Boston area arrested while protesting with local citizens and jailed in Greenville and Washington (N.C.) where Williamstonians regrouped and protested November 18.

N.C. Williamston (Cont'd):

November 21 - Seventy Negroes, 11 white ministers, and several white seminarians marched in protest despite Superior Court restraining order issued in the morning.

November 22 - Further demonstrations planned for weekend cancelled because of President's death.

Wilmington: October 2 - Approximately 100 arrested demonstrating at movie theatre.

November 16 - An estimated 1,000 persons attended Ku Klux Klan rally 6 miles from city.

Wilson: September 1 - Negroes assembled to sing on courthouse steps; whites formed a counter demonstration with some minor incidents, 5 arrests.

September 2 - Two downtown marches of approximately 125 persons each before movie theatres conducted peacefully.

Winston-Salem: September 3 - Picketing resumed (first since August 28 Washington March) at downtown cafeteria without incident. Bi-racial committee appointed sub-committee to evaluate integration; Negroes claim restaurants are foot-dragging.

September 7 & 8 - Drive-in restaurants with heavy Negro patronage picketed with demands for Negro employment.

September 10 & 11 -- Cafeteria and drive-in picketed, 2 arrests.

September 12 - Largest demonstration - 55 persons - since August as pickets sang in front of cafeteria.

SOUTH CAROLINA. (Statewide).

September-October -- A legislative committee chaired by Representative James C. Arrants held 11 hearings throughout state to take testimony on whether state should maintain open or closed its 26 state parks after federal court ordered integration (parks closed indefinitely by Forestry Commission on September 8). The consensus was for open parks. The Arrants committee will make its recommendations to the General Assembly in January.

Anderson: November 28 - The Ministerial Association, sponsor in past years of the Annual Thanksgiving Day ceremony at the city's recreation center, asked the City Council for permission to hold an integrated program. When the request was denied, the Association, which this year admitted 6 Negro clergymen, withdrew its sponsorship.

Charleston: August 30 - A supermarket and automobile company picketed by approximately 25 Negroes.

September 1 - Picketing. It was announced by Negro leaders on September 7 that this and other demonstrations would be discontinued indefinitely. Unpublicized negotiations reportedly taking place with the bi-racial committee.

S. C. (Cont'd)

Columbia: September 9 - City's first anti-segregation demonstration of the year was a 4-block, few minutes march of 17 youths. Later, on two occasions, at noon and in late afternoon, 23 were arrested trying to integrate movie theatres.

September 10 - Fifty-two participated in theatre demonstration; no arrests.

September 14 - One youth arrested at theatre aroused 20 marchers to sing before jail.

Florence: September 16 - Twenty-member Bi-racial Community Relations Committee under fire from Citizen's Council, drew declaration of unequal support from City Council.

Greenville and Newberry: Bi-racial committees have been formed.

Orangeburg: Communications lapsed here following an August 20 formal presentation of 10-point integration program by Negro leaders to city officials.

September 28 & 29 - Three downtown marches comprising about 200 persons each - 1 on Saturday and 2 on Sunday - resulted in arrest of nearly 500. State law officers and highway patrolmen reinforced local police in city's first large protest action since 1960. (To date this year there had been intermittent sit-ins, fewer than 50 arrests on trespass charges.)

September 30 - During the morning 12 arrested at restaurant sit-ins as 190 paraded downtown and were also taken into custody. During afternoon, 130 marched by jail without incident.

October 1 - 262 demonstrators arrested attempting a second parade. Police had permitted a march of over 100 earlier in day but warned against repetition.

October 2 - With approximately 1,000 arrested in less than a week, Negro leaders met with city officials. Mass demonstrations halted, but single pickets were out.

October 10 - Approximately 80 arrested picketing schools, where partial boycott of classes continued for several days and one teacher was dismissed for protest activities.

October 23 - After a two-week lull, 50 youths arrested during march to police station to register for picketing as required by new ordinance.

By November - Arrests in 2 months of protest have surpassed 1,500 and there has been no resolution of problems.

Seneca: During September - A movie theatre and some lunch counters integrated. A bi-racial committee was formed earlier in summer.

Sumter: August 19 - Two Negro women attempted to integrate a courtroom during trial of 6 ministers charged with trespass for sit-ins. The two served 12 hours in jail on contempt charges rather than pay fine.

S. C. (Sumter Cont'd)

October 6 - Forty-four arrested during attempted prayer gathering at courthouse in memorial of Birmingham bombing.

October 13 - 102 who were singing and hand-clapping arrested in protest march. Similar but silent marches have occurred in recent weeks without incident.

TENNESSEE.

Chattanooga: Mid-September -- Mayor and City Commission formally declared Chattanooga an "open"city.

October 8 - A vacant house in a predominantly white neighborhood which had been shown to prospective Negro buyers wrecked by dynamite.

Franklin: During August - Bi-racial committee established.

Jackson: November 4 - Seven Negroes arrested in attempted restaurant sit-in.

November 23 - Twenty-five, including 4 white students, arrested in attempt to be served at 4 different restaurants.

Johnson City: September 5 - Members of the City Commission and Chamber of Commerce, as individuals, signed and circulated for public approval a resolution calling for complete integration of public facilities.

Memphis: August 31 - Approximately 400 Negroes marched downtown protesting double shift school day.

September 12 - Sit-in at segregated, privately leased restaurant in railroad terminal.

Smithville: September 3 - Shotgun and pistol fired into home and car of Negro family whose two children integrated the elementary school. Sheriff and a former sheriff arrested on warrant sworn out by the parent. Charges dismissed September 9.

TEXAS.

Austin: August 28 - Eleven persons reportedly paraded in White Citizens' Council counter-protest to civil rights march which took place later in day with several 100 participants.

During October - City Council took under advisement a public accommodations ordinance.

Dallas: October 1 - A Marine color guard scheduled to participate in woman's club meeting did not attend because of armed services directive against participation in segregated gatherings.

Galveston County: September 4 - Fourteen members appointed to bi-racial committee to deal with racial problems in county government employment, service at county hospital, and in public accommodations in unincorporated areas.

Marlin: August - Established a bi-racial committee.

Prairie View: November 9 - Boycott of football game and home-coming requested by students of the Prairie View A & M student body and alumni to support efforts to integrate nearby Hempstead effective as about 100 persons attended (attendance in previous years: 9,000).

November 15-16--White ministers joined students picketing restaurants in Hempstead.

VIRGINIA

Statewide: Oct. 15 - Two Negro applicants passed examinations for National Guard but have not been inducted to date.

Charlottesville: Sept. 22 - Peaceful Birmingham memorial march.

Covington: Sept. 3 - First Negro policeman hired.

Danville: August 30 - Twenty-five arrested for parading without permit.

September 1 - An Episcopal church Holy Communion service integrated.

September 17 - More than 80 participated in peaceful public prayer meeting (for those who died in Birmingham) on Post Office Building steps.

October 16 - First Negro policeman hired.

November 21 - A League of over 200 white citizens petitioned mayor to approve a biracial committee.

Eastville: September 5 - Negro ministers from state's two eastern shore counties, Accomack and Northampton, formally requested biracial committee in first such action in area.

Farmville: September 5 - Picketing and selective buying had been fairly continuous to date when three merchants pledged to employ Negro sales personnel.

September 7 - Fifty staged singing protest before movie theatre without incident.

September 12 - A fourth merchant agreed to open jobs. Picketing continued before those who have not agreed.

Fort Lee: During September - A biracial committee and an equal employment opportunity committee formed.

Fredericksburg: October 11 - Biracial Commission reported several large motels and hotels in the area have integrated eating and sleeping accommodations.

Virginia cont'd

Hopewell: September 18 - City's first Negro policewoman hired as school guard.

Martinsville: During August - A bi-racial committee established. First Negro policeman joined force thereafter.

Norfolk: September 19 - More than 2,000 Negro students paraded before Norfolk School Administration Building and a student delegation presented list of grievances about the city's only Negro high school to the school superintendent.

Petersburg: September 19 - Over 1,000 Virginia State College students marched 8 miles carrying coffin labeled "Birmingham Justice."

Portsmouth: November 20 - Full integration of hospital medical staff to be recommended at hospital board meeting in December as a result of meeting with Negro leaders. No action taken on request for integration of facilities.

Radford: A bi-racial committee has been established.

October 1 - Public roller skating facilities integrated and Recreation Department announced its basketball program would in integrated at season's opening in December.

Richmond: September 4 - Twelve-member Bi-racial committee held its first meeting.

Staunton: September 28 - Hired first regular Negro policeman.

Tappahannock: A 12-member bi-racial committee has been established.

* *

CITIES WHERE DEMONSTRATIONS HAVE OCCURRED SEPTEMBER - NOVEMBER, 1963

ALABAMA

Anniston
Birmingham
Selma

FLORIDA

Jacksonville
Miami
St. Augustine
Tallahassee

GEORGIA

Americus
Atlanta
Warner Robins

LOUISIANA

Baton Rouge
Clinton
Hammond
New Orleans
Plaquemine
Shreveport

MISSISSIPPI

Jackson

NORTH CAROLINA

Concord
Elizabeth City
Enfield
Gastonia
High Point
Monroe
Washington
Williamston
Wilmington
Wilson
Winston-Salem

SOUTH CAROLINA

Charleston
Columbia
Orangeburg
Sumter

TENNESSEE

Jackson
Memphis

TEXAS

Austin
Hempstead

VIRGINIA

Charlottesville
Danville
Farmville
Norfolk
Petersburg

* *

CITIES WHERE SOME PROGRESS TOWARD INTEGRATION HAS OCCURRED

ALABAMA

Anniston
Florence
Huntsville

ARKANSAS

Benton
Conway

FLORIDA

Bradenton
Clearwater
St. Augustine
Sarasota
Tampa

GEORGIA

Atlanta
Augusta
Columbus
Decatur
Macon
Savannah
Valdosta

KENTUCKY

Louisville

LOUISIANA

Baton Rouge
Hammond
New Orleans

MISSISSIPPI

Jackson
Meridian

NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte
Dunn
Gastonia
High Point
Laurinberg
Murfreesboro
Southern Pines
Washington

SOUTH CAROLINA

Anderson
Greenville
Newberry
Seneca

TENNESSEE

Franklin
Johnson City

TEXAS

Galveston County
Marlin

VIRGINIA

Covington
Danville
Farmville
Ft. Lee
Fredericksburg
Hopewell
Martinsville
Radford
Richmond
Staunton
Tappahannock

Estimated number of arrests in 11 Southern states since August 28, 5,125.

The Civil Rights Crisis: A Synopsis of Recent Developments, V

This synopsis covers the period December 1-23, 1963.

ALABAMA - In Birmingham on December 9 a meeting of the National States Rights Party called off when only 12 persons attended. On December 10 a window in the home of a Negro civil rights attorney was smashed by a steel ball. On December 12 a U.S. District Court judge ordered integration of the Birmingham Airport Motel.

In Tuscaloosa on December 19 and 20 five National Guardsmen were arrested on charge of setting off three November explosions near the University of Alabama.

ARKANSAS - In Helena on December 6 three integration workers were arrested.

FLORIDA - In Ocala on December 7 12 white students and teachers who were picketing with Negroes (who were permitted to continue) were arrested.

In Tallahassee on December 12 a petition signed by 116 Florida State University faculty members asking integration of off-campus restaurants ran as a full-page ad in FSU student newspaper.

GEORGIA - In Americus on December 5 one of the four rights workers who had been held and later released on insurrection charge was convicted of assault with intent to murder.

In Atlanta there was considerable activity highlighted by the following:
-Dec. 3 - Board of Aldermen voted 10-4 in favor of open public accommodations resolution;
-Dec. 9 - Federal suit filed by Negroes against segregated motel built in Urban Renewal area;
-Dec. 15 - Outdoor civil rights rally of approximately 2,500;
-Dec. 16 - City's remaining segregation statutes invalidated by Board of Aldermen;
Dec. 21 & 22 - A total of 21 arrested in two restaurant sit-ins;
-Dec. 22 - First Baptist Church congregation voted to admit Negroes to worship.

In Dawson at about midnight on December 8 a Negro home which had been used by registration workers was shot into and bombed.

LOUISIANA - In Baton Rouge on December 12 a Negro integration leader from nearby Plaquemine was convicted on a bad check charge. A suit seeking the integration of the city's Parks and Recreation Commission's facilities is pending; to be heard January 17.

In Clinton on December 4, 5, & 6 a total of seven pickets at segregated businesses were arrested.

In Monroe on December 13 a resolution calling on state's Congressional delegation to oppose civil rights legislation introduced at meeting of the state bar association's house of delegates.

MISSISSIPPI - In Jackson the following events occurred:

-Dec. 11 - Six Negro housewives were fined $500 each and sentenced to six months in jail on charges stemming from their picketing a downtown store December 6;

-Dec. 13 - Citizens Council advocated a $6,000 a year raise for mayor for "a job well done" on racial problems;

-Dec. 15 - Two Negro and two white ministers arrested attempting to enter Methodist churches.

Also, during the month, Britain's Manchester Guardian criticized conductor Sir Malcolm Sargent and revealed a white British student was arrested for attempting to attend a segregated Royal Philharmonic concert here with a Negro.

NORTH CAROLINA - North Carolina Good Neighbor Council on December 10 reported increase of Negroes in non-traditional jobs, both commercial and municipal, in Asheville and Buncombe County, High Point, Gastonia, Winston-Salem, Ahoskie, Alamance County, Goldsboro, Laurinberg, Fayetteville, Greensboro, and Rocky Mount.

Alamance County Board of Commissioners on December 13 refused to give county's human relations council power to negotiate with local businessmen and other groups, but agreed to increase council's membership from 24 to 28.

Goldsboro in early December reported more than 100 Negroes had been employed by local stores, 92 (including three policemen) by city itself, and 121 by a local manufacturing firm employing a total of 383 workers.

Wayne County appointed its first Negro deputy sheriff December 12.

In Winston-Salem on December 9 three sat-in at a coffee shop; left when owner called police.

OKLAHOMA - In Tulsa public hearings on a proposed public accommodations ordinance ended December 12. Fifty person spoke in favor of it; 33 against.

SOUTH CAROLINA - In Columbia Main Street movie theatres and a luxury motel quietly integrated in late November. A biracial drive to integrate all local motels, hotels, and restaurants launched in early December. Dec. 16 - Over 100 marchers arrested.

TENNESSEE - Nashville's Metropolitan government adopted a nondiscriminatory hiring policy for all local government workers in December.

TEXAS - In Austin on December 20 20 students picketed Lynda Bird Johnson's dormitory at the University of Texas protesting segregation of coed dorms.

The Dallas News reported on December 12 that the hiring of Negroes has "become normal employment practice in a broad spectrum of Dallas stores."

VIRGINIA - In Danville on December 10 9 of 20 demonstrators were arrested at a theatre and restaurant in city's first racial incident since last summer. Fifteen more demonstrators were arrested December 11 and 12. A fair employment ordinance prohibiting discrimination in hiring of city employees was passed by city council on December 10.

VIRGINIA cont'd.

In Norfolk the Virginian-Pilot reported December 13 that two Negro leaders are expected to run for the city council next June.

In Roanoke two Negro firemen were hired during December.

Excerpt from remarks of Roy Wilkins of New York City, Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
At the annual dinner of the Southern Regional Council,
Atlanta, Georgia, January 29, 1964, 8:00 P.M.

We cannot have meaningful change in human relations, especially if these involve the revision of laws and the uprooting of tradition, without confrontation, tension and occasional strife. Thoughtful students of the national scene have marked the frank talk and direct negotiations of the Sixties as a most significant gain in the assault upon citizenship inequities based upon race.

In no quarter has the value of supplementary direct action and individual involvement been acknowledged more readily and with more warmth than among those who had employed other approaches and had found these, in and of themselves, agonizingly slow in producing the results desired.

But a program of conciliation alone (such as the early Interracial Commissions) or court action alone (such as the 1917 decision against municipally-established ghettos) or legislation alone (such as certain of the state and municipal civil rights laws) did not meet our varied needs and situations.

Events in both the North and the South would seem to suggest that today we need to study the efficacy of the exclusive direct action approach. Such a study should recognize the very obvious fact that circumstances may differ even when they appear similar. For example, is any different procedure indicated in a city at a time when desegregation is underway than at the time when the segregation front was solid?

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

If the problem in a public school system is the junior high school feeder system, is a city-wide, all-level pupil boycott the effective tactic to achieve the end desired? If a neighborhood selective buying campaign can win the employment of supermarket checkout cashiers, can the same tactic win jobs for unemployed laborers as electricians or sheeet metal workers?

Negro doctors last year staged a dramatically informative and persuasive picketing of the American Medical Association. They do not expect, however, that a picket line will solve the intricate, tradition-and-income-and prestige encrusted problem of hospital staff appointments, among other problems.

It may be that the time has now arrived when the civil rights forces need to go to a quarterback clinic. The goal of a football team is to make points enough to win the game. If points cannot be made with touchdowns, field goals can be called upon. If the line of the opposition is unyielding, end runs or forward passes are tried. No quarterback worth his salt keeps pounding away with line ~~backs~~ bucks that yield at best a yard or, worse still, a yardage loss.

The enterprise that engages us is not one against a single restaurant in Atlanta, Ga., or a single school board in Malverne, N.Y., or an employment policy in St. Louis, Mo., or police action in Plaquemine, La., or a single hotel in Salt Lake City, Utah. We are engaged in a comprehensive campaign for the civil rights of 18 million citizens scattered in 50 states, living under varied economic, social and political conditions and functioning with a variety of education and technical knowledge, training and skill.

The 18 millions are a minority in 186 millions of citizens. Thus even elementary reasoning would seem to indicate that allies among the majority must be won and held if the minority's efforts are not to end in frustration and failure.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Craven tactics do not win allies; instead, they pile up contempt. Unending patience, ultra-conservatism and continuous conciliation win nothing except an occasional crumb or bone and the deeper entrenchment of the status quo.

But uni-racial assaults, brave and dedicated though they may be, which are rooted in one tactic and in no critical appraisal of pertinent factors in a particular encounter, could not only fail in their immediate objective, but could set back the whole civil rights army across the entire action front.

Is it too old-fashioned to suggest that we may need more flexibility in our campaign? Where our opponents have been most inflexible, they have been most vulnerable and we have won undisputed psychological victories, even though practical advances may have been delayed. When the Trojans formed a frontal assault, ineffective, they used a wooden horse. Hannibal surprised the Romans by bringing elephants the back way across the Alps.

David spurned the traditional sword against Goliath and used a slingshot. The females added Stuka dive bombers and V-2 rockets in World War II, and the Japanese went one better with their suicide pilots.

A bulldozer can excavate for a foundation, but a block and tackle is required to get a piano into the ninth floor.

Let us not become so inflexible in thought and method that we, too, become vulnerable. In some places outside the South some of our tactics are causing questions to be raised about our campaign among, not our expected opponents, but among some of our own people and our potential allies.

Here in the South some procedures are undermining those persons in strategic positions who have supported us. These procedures are also reviving hard-core opponents who had been repudiated and all but forgotten in the struggle. And, most seriously, some tactics have won support for the segregationists from that reservoir of public opinion that might well have been won--or neutralized--by us.

The plain lesson is that we must use every method, every technique, every tool available. We need to devise new tools. Our attack must be across the board and must be leveled at all forms and degrees of second class citizenship. Where one weapon is sufficient, let it be employed. Where a combination is required, let it be used. Where variations in timing and methods will be effective, by all means let us employ these. But let none of us, in the North or in the South, "activists" or not, fall into the trap, at this crucial stage, of attempting to solve all problems everywhere by a single method.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

If Negro citizens today need to re-examine their position, white people are under no less obligation to review theirs. Despite the bitter-enders, the question of the day is not whether racial inequality and its principal tool, segregation, shall survive. The question is only on the means and the pace of eliminating it. Die-hard opposition will but delay matters; it cannot win.

The Panama crisis came to a head because of many factors, but it was given emotional drive by the arrogant and contemptuous "white colonialism" of many Americans in the Canal Zone. The lid over the cauldron was kicked off by American high school youngsters who believed their parents' assertion that Washington agreements with the government of Panama did not affect their little racial empire. How like our states' rights "arguments"!

American Negro citizens are a unit in insisting that the Constitution of the United States guarantees protection of their citizenship rights against the abridgements and denials of any racist doctrine or practice, in Atlanta or in Spokane.

In 1964 they expect to move at an accelerated pace toward the practical realization of that goal. Peaceful, mutually respectful and brisk progress can result if the white majority will acknowledge the realities of the day and not persist in using turn-of-the-century blinders.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mary Godwin

ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
OF THE
SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

A REVIEW OF PROGRAM ACTIVITIES DURING 1963
FEBRUARY 1964

NOT FOR PUBLICATION
OR QUOTATION
WITHOUT PERMISSION

OFFICERS, COMMITTEES, AND STAFF

1963

PRESIDENT

James McBride Dabbs*

VICE PRESIDENTS

Albert W. Dent*
Miss Josephine Wilkins*
Rufus E. Clement*
Marion A. Wright*

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

John H. Wheeler, Chairman

Paul R. Christopher
John A. Griffin
Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton
John P. Nelson, Jr.
Raymond Wheeler
H. Franklin Williams
Stephen J. Wright
Thomas W. Young

Legal Counsel:
Joseph F. Haas*
Personnel Committee:
John H. Wheeler, Chairman

Finance Committee:
L. D. Milton, Chairman
Nominating Committee:
Irving E. Carlyle, Chairman

STAFF

Executive Director - Leslie W. Dunbar
Director of Women's Work - Mrs. M. E. Tilly
Secretary-Treasurer - Mrs. Ruth House Alexander
Director of Field Activities - Paul Anthony
Director, Southern Leadership Project - Benjamin Muse
Editor, New South - Miss Margaret Long
Director, Voter Education Project - Wiley A. Branton
Director of Research - Staige D. Blackford
Assistant to the Director - Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.
Director of Information - Pat Watters

*ex-officio members of Executive Committee

REPORT OF PROGRAM ACTIVITIES
1963

The Southern Regional Council was completing during 1963 its twentieth year of work and, we believe, good service. The "new South," so long heralded, must finally have arrived, and what is "new" about it is not only its almost bewildering complexity but its new-found self-direction. In the past, things happened to the South -- the importation of slaves, the cotton gin, Reconstruction, the boll weevil, the depression of the 30's, Brown v. Topeka --, and the South reacted to them and was thereby changed.

Now the South with new leadership -- principally Negro -- is revising itself, its institutions, and its ideas. Race relations remain its core issue, and though we can be optimistic we cannot be certain what they may become. We can, however, know with sureness this: southern race relations of the next decade and beyond will not repeat the northern experience of de facto segregation and discrimination. For that had grown up like Topsy, unplanned and unchosen though within an antagonistic environment. Whatever race relations there may lie ahead in the South (or, for that matter, in the nation at large), whether they may be good or poor, they will be, primarily, the result of conscious choice and policy. Both human drift and social custom are irrelevant; we are choosing where we shall go, and what we shall be.

Appropriately, therefore, the Council in this time of new decisions has elected a new President. I believe many members of the Council, including its incoming-President, might have wished James McBride Dabbs could serve forever, so perfectly did he represent the thoughts and the hopes of us all. Indeed, this might have been his fate, had not he himself firmly urged otherwise.

A no less representative Southerner is John H. Wheeler, the Council's fifth President since its founding. From the time in 1942 when he took part in the Durham Conference -- the first stepping stone in the formation of the Council -- John Wheeler has been a devoted member and leader. As Chairman of the Executive Committee since 1961, he has given policy guidance during demanding years. I have worked under his supervision in that capacity, and to him and to Mr. Dabbs, president throughout my tenure, I am deeply indebted for support and for instruction.

This time last year, in the 1962 Annual Report, I wrote that "it would be hard to exaggerate the seriousness and probable effects of the Birmingham ordeal which lies ahead." Successful prophecies of this sort are distinctly unwanted; I was, besides, looking ahead to a school desegregation crisis. That came, and with it ugly tremors, and then the horror of September 15 when, in an ultimate frenzy of hate, six Negroes were murdered.

This followed by three months and more the Birmingham street events which had fired the Negro revolt as nothing before had.

Birmingham was of the pattern of Albany. Mass demonstrations were hurled in protest against an iniquitous system, and without the pin-point focus of the earlier sit-ins nor with their incredibly exemplary deportment. Like Albany too, whose Negro community today is defeated and almost hopeless, in Birmingham little local change resulted. Unlike Albany, Birmingham met the demonstrators not with slick, sophisticated police suppression but with ferocity. And this, if anything did, made the difference. A national administration, which had had no prior intention of seriously sponsoring civil rights legislation in 1963, mobilized its thinking and its supporters and put before Congress a far-reaching civil rights bill, and yet one which the key Congressional Committee (House Judiciary) refused to report out until it was further strengthened. A tidal wave of demonstrations swept through the South,* and in its wake much was changed where change had earlier begun, though little change was started where none or but the smallest had earlier occurred. Even more important, the northern cities came apart, for the first time since the race riots of the forties, ripped by demonstrations against non-legal and even non-acknowledged, but equally impenetrable, segregation. It is reasonable to suppose, and the polls confirm, that many northern whites learned a new determination to establish justice, while many others learned a new or renewed, if usually silently held, antipathy to racial equality.

---

*According to our count, demonstrations occurred in at least 115 southern cities during 1963. More than 20,000 arrests of demonstrators were made. Ten persons died; at least 35 bombings occurred.

There was more, even, than this. Upheavals within the ranks of Negro leadership, nationally and in all parts of the country, were marked, as the spirit of revolt ran too fast for some to be able to keep up, or to want to. Many liberals, both Negro and white and South and North, worried sincerely with the problem of demonstrating methods which sometimes obscured the rightness of the underlying cause. But there were also intellectual stirrings within the revolt's vanguard, reappraising the efficacy of demonstrations and examining the need to identify the aims of Negroes with those of other disadvantaged elements of the economy.

Revolutions throughout history have been more frequently justified in cause than beneficial in result. America's good luck is that the Negro drive -- which is genuinely revolutionary -- has been carried on through methods which have had the wondrous quality of relaxing rather than deepening hostilities or breeding new ones. America has been profoundly lucky too that the goal of the revolt has been and is integration or, to put it in different words, has been to make the community whole by knitting it more firmly together. The true dangers of the future are not those which the segregationists fear, which are what Negroes will do to the community when they have been admitted into it. The true danger, and I think it is a real and threatening one, is to keep large segments of the white population from flying out of the national consensus as Negroes come in. It is not, unfortunately, inconceivable that integration will, for example, greatly accelerate the polarization of political opinions within the electorate, and if that happens widely enough to affect the behavior of the political parties at local, state, or national levels our governmental institutions would be under heavy difficulty.

THE VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT

The Voter Education Project seeks another end. It is approaching its third and final year. As of December 31, 1963 it had received grants totaling $584,733 and had granted out to cooperating agencies $382,003 to sustain voter registration work. The Project began April 1, 1962, and by the end of 1963 -- 21 months later -- 327,588 new voters had been registered through its programs. With these, the number of Negro voters in the eleven southern states has reached 1,752,000. During the pre-election months of 1964, we expect that the total will finally go well beyond two million.

The Voter Education Project does none of the actual registration work. Its purpose is to study what others do and the problems they encounter in seeking to broaden the southern electorate. It is experimental research, which provides us the unparalleled opportunity of studying registration methods and organizations in close-up detail.

Under the forceful direction of Wiley A. Branton, VEP receives proposals from non-partisan agencies interested in registration work, decides which it can support within already determined geographic criteria, allocates funds, and thereafter observes the work closely.

VEP is our largest present program by far. To administer it has been a tremendous trust and a steady challenge to our ability to work cooperatively with other agencies and people. We intend to do all we possibly can to publish from the Project's records and findings a lastingly valuable study. The Project, has moreover, given us the privilege of planning and guiding the largest effort ever made to make real the Fifteenth Amendment.

THE COUNCILS ON HUMAN RELATIONS

The Voter Education Project is concerned with the enlargement of our democracy. The Councils on Human Relations seek to strengthen its quality.

Membership in the state and local Councils was 8,257 in 1963, an increase of nearly two thousand over 1962. Funds raised locally (exclusive of any foundation grants or SRC grants-in-aid) were $65,525, an increase of $9,186 over 1962. Especially noteworthy was the record of the Florida Council, which during the year re-built itself, under first-rate lay and staff direction, to a strength of 1,200 members, with 14 active local Councils.

As I said at Annual Meeting, 1963 seems to me the year in which the Council on Human Relations movement began to shift to high gear. Happily, there is one -- Virginia -- already in high, and we think it can be and will be in 1964 joined by one or two others. Everywhere there is a growing awareness that numbers do count, that the once prevalent notion of a small band of good people quietly doing good is outmoded, and that the Councils on Human Relations -- virtually the only southern instrument of bi-racial programming -- have unique opportunities, and therefore responsibilities, for program accomplishments.

OTHER FIELD ACTIVITIES

Especially in Mobile, but also in Birmingham and Jacksonville, staff and consultants worked during the Summer with local citizen groups concerned with effecting peaceful, orderly school desegregation. As a future help to us, and also to other agencies working in such local situations, we had prepared, under the supervision of Paul Anthony, Director of Field Activities, a hefty manual of advice and shared experience. Transition Without Tragedy, by Florence Robin, is not a publication for general circulation, but in the quiet use for which it is intended it should be of considerable practical value.

Completion of his writing assignment enabled Benjamin Muse, Director of the Southern Leadership Project, to return to the field in late 1963; he was especially active and helpful in Danville. His associate in the field work of the Southern Leadership Project for three years, Public School Consultant J. J. Brewbaker, retired in mid-1963 for personal and family reasons. In the final months of his work, Mr. Brewbaker was engaged in conferences with school authorities in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, and Virginia. During his three years with SRC, Mr. Brewbaker gave excellent professional service, and we miss him badly.

We continued our cooperative program with the National Council of Churches, planned to aid the clergy of the rural Deep South in their awesomely delicate ministry. And through our own Fellowship of the Concerned, inspiringly led by Mrs. M. E. Tilly, we maintained our long working association with churchwomen all over the South. The Fellowship's annual meeting in October was, in a word, magnificent; through it and from it came a vital partnership with the White House initiated National Women's Committee for Civil Rights.

As in the past, SRC acted as secretariat for the Southern Interagency Conference. And as always, our office has been the meeting place and the crossroads for nearly every agency and person engaged in human relations work in the South.

RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS

In 1962 we undertook to write the political history of the South's reaction to Brown v. Topeka, and contracted with Viking Press for publication. Benjamin Muse was assigned to the writing, which he completed in the Fall of 1963. The book, titled Ten Years of Prelude, will be published May 17, 1964.

James McBride Dabbs completed a study of southern character, begun and researched as an SRC project. The book will be published by McGraw-Hill in late 1964.

Dr. M. Robert Coles's psychiatric studies under our Research in Student Adjustment Project culminated in several publications during the year, including a paper read before the American Psychiatric Association and subsequently published in its journal. Dr. Coles continues his research, and, though his sponsor is now Harvard University, we enjoy his association still.

Our research publications for the year were:

Pamphlets:

J. Kenneth Morland, Southern Schools: Token Desegregation and Beyond.

Robert Coles, The Desegregation of Southern Schools: A Psychiatric Study.

Vivian W. Henderson, The Economic Status of Negroes: In the Nation and in the South.

Special Reports:

Plans for Progress: Atlanta Survey

Special Issues of NEW SOUTH:

"March on Washington," September 1963

"Direct Action in the South," October-November 1963

Miscellaneous:

The City and Minority Groups (jointly prepared with the Potomac Institute and the International City Managers Association, and published by the latter)

The Civil Rights Crisis: A Synopsis of Recent Developments in four parts: I. April-June 24, 1963; II. June 24-July 24, 1963; III. July 24-August 28, 1963; IV. August 28-November 30, 1963.

L-Reports:

L-41 "Excerpts from Speeches of Governor Bert Combs of Kentucky and Secretary of Commerce Luther T. Hodges."

L-42 "Speech by Edward J. Meehan, Editor Emeritus of Memphis Press-Scimitar."

L-Reports (continued)

L-43	"Businessmen Point the Way."
L-44	"Charlotte Has Built Its Integration Road: A Different Way."
L-45	"Public Education in Mississippi."
L-46	"Voice of the People: 'At This Very Late Hour'"

Reception of these publications was gratifying. The Morland, Coles, and Henderson pamphlets received widespread press attention, and all three, especially the Henderson economic study, have been heavily ordered in group lots. We assess the response to our publications not only, however, by volume of press clippings and orders, but by the comments which come from discerning sources. Such, for example, as that from the editor of one of the South's largest dailies regarding Margaret Long's beautiful March on Washington: "The New South issue with your Washington report in it will live. It's a great job.... the definitive work on that day"; and a federal judge's statement regarding Direct Action in the South: "It is the best thing I have seen for putting events of the last three years in significant focus."

Plans for Progress: Atlanta Survey, a fairly simple and unassuming report, had an unusual history. We gave it no press release, and it received no news attention until we and the press learned that it was being read and reacted to in very high Washington quarters. I think we can accurately say that nothing SRC has ever published produced more immediate governmental action, nor more quickly affected governmental policies. Washington's response was rather baffling, because while vigorously and most commendably acting upon the report's findings (which were confirmed by the government's own investigators), it simultaneously was questioning that any problem existed and was undermining through news leaks and authoritative gossip acceptance of the report's reliability. The matter roiled over before a Congressional committee, and shortly thereafter subsided. We were nevertheless, gratified that Fortune magazine, after an independent check of its own, confirmed our conclusions in its September issue. All in all, it was an interesting experience.

New South during the year ran articles by such persons as Eric Lincoln, Charles Hartshorne, Fred Powledge, Wyatt Tee Walker, Horace Mann Bond, and James McBride Dabbs, whose final presidential address, printed in the December issue, was a thing of joy.

Pat Watters, former city editor and editorial page columnist for the Atlanta Journal, joined our staff in November as Director of Information. He brings us excellent skills and good judgment, and we are delighted to have him.

SOME OTHER ACTIVITIES

Messrs. Wheeler, Branton, and Dunbar were among the 17 persons invited by the Notre Dame University Law School to a conference on federal civil rights legislation; recommendations of the conference were published in the Notre Dame Lawyer of June 1963. Mr. Branton was a principal speaker at the CORE national convention, as was I at the annual meetings of the Civil Liberties Clearing House and of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials. In August the Senate Subcommittee on Employment and Manpower called me to testify as an "expert" on pending job discrimination legislation.

In early November, Professor James Silver electrified his audience at the Southern Historical Association and news readers everywhere with his description and indictment of "Mississippi, The Closed Society." We had worked closely with Professor Silver in preparing this and the expanded version which is soon to be published as a book. We have also distributed more than 1,200 copies of the address.

During the year, the Council was host to 105 foreign visitors, sent to us by federal offices. Of these, 21 came from Africa, seven from the Caribbean islands, ten from Central America, nine from the Far East, 53 from Europe, and five from South America. For these we were official sponsor. Another 67 foreign visitors, sponsored by other Atlanta based organizations, came to our offices for discussions and briefings about the South. In addition to both these groups, foreign news reporters visited us from time to time.

ORGANIZATIONAL MATTERS AND FINANCES

Two long-time and devoted members of the Council died during the year: Mr. Charles Shaw of Houston and Dr. H. Councill Trenholm of Montgomery. Their passing saddened us all. We lost in the same humbling way the comradeship of Mr. Harry Jones, director of the North Carolina Council on Human Relations.

New members elected at the 1963 Annual Meeting, all for the Class of 1967 unless otherwise noted, were: Mrs. Lawrence Coe, Memphis; Mrs. Mary Sands, New Orleans; Mrs. Jane Schutt, Jackson (Miss.); Ralph M. Dreger, Jacksonville; S. E. Duncan, Salisbury (N.C.); Paul Johnston, Birmingham; the Rev. Powers McLeod, Auburn (Ala. - Class of 1964); Sylvan Meyer, Gainesville (Ga.); Samuel M. Nabrit, Houston (Class of 1966); C. H. Parrish, Louisville; Jack Young, Jackson (Miss.); James Youngdahl, Little Rock. This is a distinguished group of people, and we welcome them most warmly.

The Council terms of Dr. Crawford Brock of Rome (Ga.), Mrs. E. M. Sparling of Hot Springs (Ark.), Mr. Charles Steele of Louisville, and Miss Florence Sytz of New Orleans ended: their colleagues reluctantly saw them leave our membership, but not our continued association in southern progress.

Dr. C. G. Gomillion of Tuskegee was elected to the Executive Committee, filling the place which Dr. John A. Griffin of Tallahassee has held so long and well. In place of John H. Wheeler, elevated to the Presidency, ex-President Dabbs was voted onto the Committee!

Mrs. M. E. Tilly was, by the admiring membership of the Council, elected a Life Fellow, even though she continues as a full-time staff worker.

The 1963 Annual Meeting, scheduled for November 25 - 26, was postponed to January 29 - 30, 1964 because of the assassination. John Fitzgerald Kennedy's death, coming after all the other cruelties of 1963, must have caused many of us to wonder what kind of a people we are, or have become. The guest speaker at SRC's meeting was Mr. Roy Wilkins, Executive Secretary of the NAACP. He was an ideal choice for this stunned year, because he is a man, like Mr. Kennedy, who has never lost faith in the people or in the human mind.

Expenditures for 1963 were slightly below budgeted amounts, but, alas, income was also, and more so: so we ended the year with a deficit of $5,382.76. It must not happen again.

In all matters of finances, I would like to acknowledge my continuing debt to SRC's exacting Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Ruth House Alexander.

Two internal activities of the year deserve special remark.

First, we carried through a reorganization of staff assignments, including the writing of job descriptions and the establishment of revised salary scales for each position.*

Second, we undertook and completed a thorough study of all SRC programs and opportunities for program. So much work went into this, and now there seems little to say except that it is done, and it was worth doing. The process itself, which involved Council members, staff, and outside friends, was an education. The "Program Review and Evaluation," as the final document was called, was approved by both the Executive Committee and the Annual Meeting, and its recommendations are being put into effect during 1964. Principal staff responsibility for the self-examination was discharged by Professor Henry Clark, of Union Theological Seminary (N.Y.), who worked with us during the Summer.

---

*I would like to acknowledge the help given here by our friend John Feild, former executive director of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and a man of many other distinctions. Mr. Feild gave freely and generously his highly valued time to advise me at crucial steps of the reorganization.

Finally, the disposition of the Executive Director was remarkably improved after June 1963, when Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., came with us as Assistant to the Director. Mr. Jordan, formerly Georgia field director for the NAACP, brought with him, and put to our use, judgment, versatility, and good spirits.

A POINT OF VIEW

Twice during the year, the Executive Committee took the unusual step, for it, of issuing public statements. In May it said, with reference to the Supreme Court's "sit-in" decision:

> These decisions confront the South again with an historic choice. They set before us a renewed opportunity for the kind of magnanimity -- and intelligence -- which we turned our backs on in 1954. The South nine years ago was called on by the national will for greatness; instead, it responded with a self-blighting display of malice and futility. The recent events in Birmingham are only the latest episode of this impoverishing of the regional spirit.

In a longer and important statement of December 30, the Executive Committee said:

> We believe that the South, difficult as are its present problems and unhappy as its history has been, can, nevertheless, make a new social life that is richly humane, because it will have grown out of the honestly faced and concrete necessities of a common life. As today's immediate challenge is civil rights, so tomorrow's will be full integration. We are optimistic that a new South, born of struggle, will, with courage and intelligence, re-shape its economic and educational practices as needed to integrate all its people into a society that serves the free and full development of each individual.

That "courage and intelligence" to which the Committee referred were the hallmark of the life and the tragedy of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Over all our remembrance of the nation-shaking events of 1963, his presence and his departure dominates. I was in Cleveland (Ohio) the day of his death, and that night was asked to give a brief testimonial before a large gathering. I was asked to do so as a representative of the Southern Regional Council, and I tried to speak its sense, not only of loss, but of loyalty to the rational and good cause which that day had been assaulted by the senseless evil which always dwells within us:

> It is a hard thing for a people to lose its chief. The President of the United States is President of all Americans, and the man so cruelly taken from us today tried diligently to represent the whole of this nation. The endless variety of America includes even the wicked man who murdered him, who also, we must confess, was a son of this land. America's history has been a boundless quest to give opportunity: for the multitude, an opportunity for happiness; for the person, an opportunity for liberty. Mr. Kennedy knew this, and believed in the magic of the American adventure. May God give comfort to his family, a clear mind and a sturdy faith to President Johnson; and to all of us who go on with the unfinished and never to be finished adventure which is America, and which is the life of humanity freeing itself from burdens to the spirit, may He give us brave souls.

Leslie W. Dunbar

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

March 1964

OFFICERS*

PRESIDENT

John H. Wheeler

VICE-PRESIDENTS

Albert W. Dent
Marion A. Wright
Miss Josephine Wilkins
Rufus E. Clement

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Paul R. Christopher
James McBride Dabbs
C. G. Gomillion
Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton
John P. Nelson, Jr.
Raymond Wheeler
H. Franklin Williams
Stephen J. Wright
Thomas W. Young

LEGAL COUNSEL

Joseph F. Haas

---

*Addresses of the officers are given in the attached list of the members of the Council. All organizations and positions are shown for identification purposes only.

Class of 1964

Fred D. Alexander
Realtor
2140 Senior Drive
Charlotte 8, North Carolina

The Rev. Hubert Beckwith
Congregational Christian Church
of Fairfax County
P. O. Box 186
Annandale, Virginia

B. R. Brazeal
Academic Dean
Morehouse College
Atlanta 14, Georgia

The Rev. W. C. Brooke
St. Elizabeth's Episcopal Church
P. O. Box 4211
Roanoke, Virginia

The Most Rev. Joseph B. Brunini
Auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of Natchez-Jackson
The Catholic Church
123 North West Street
Jackson, Mississippi

I. H. Burney
Insurance Executive
101 E. Union Street
Jacksonville, Florida

Irving E. Carlyle
Attorney
Wachovia Bank Building
Winston-Salem, North Carolina

Hodding Carter, Jr.
Editor and Publisher
Delta-Democrat Times
Greenville, Mississippi

Paul R. Christopher
Regional Director, AFL-CIO
216 Flatiron Building
Knoxville, Tennessee

Rufus E. Clement
President
Atlanta University
Atlanta 14, Georgia

James A. Colston
President
Knoxville College
Knoxville, Tennessee

Mrs. James S. Crate
8510 Ferris Street
Houston 35, Texas

Jerome Crossman
President
Ryan Consolidated Petroleum Corporation
3400 Republic National Bank
Building
Dallas, Texas

James McBride Dabbs
Planter, Author
Rip Raps Plantation
Mayesville, South Carolina

Herbert M. Davidson
Editor and Publisher
Daytona Beach News-Journal
Daytona Beach, Florida

Albert W. Dent
President
Dillard University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Frank P. Graham
(United Nations staff,
New York)
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Douglas Jackson
Perkins School of Theology
Southern Methodist University
Dallas, Texas

The Rev. Powers McLeod
Auburn Methodist Church
Box 1290
Auburn, Alabama

Mrs. Charles White
Member, School Board
2209 Southmore Boulevard
Houston 4, Texas

Class of 1965

A. D. Beittel
President
Tougaloo Southern Christian College
Tougaloo, Mississippi

Mrs. Joe R. Brewer
Box 314, Route 1
Scott, Arkansas

Mrs. Moise Cahn
40 Versailles Boulevard
New Orleans, Louisiana

The Rev. Caxton Doggett
First Methodist Church
504 South Lake Avenue
Lakeland, Florida

Luther H. Foster
President
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee, Alabama

C. G. Gomillion
Chairman
Division of Social Sciences
Tuskegee Institute
Tuskegee, Alabama

Paul E. Green
Playwright, Novelist
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

John A. Griffin
Director
Division of University Relations
Florida State University
Tallahassee, Florida

Joseph F. Haas
Attorney
1116 First National Bank Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Mrs. Grace T. Hamilton
582 University Place, S. W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia

The Rt. Rev. John E. Hines
Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Texas
520 San Jacinto Street
Houston 2, Texas

The Rev. Duncan Hunter
District Superintendent
The Methodist Church
8705 Camille Drive, S. E.
Huntsville, Alabama

Guy B. Johnson
Research Professor of Sociology and Anthropology
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

E. T. Kehrer
Director
Southeastern Region, ILGWU
1065 Gordon Street, S. W.
Atlanta, Georgia

Mrs. Austin Kimball
3131 S. W. First Avenue
Gainesville, Florida

Z. A. Looby
Attorney and City Councilman
327 Charlotte Avenue
Nashville, Tennessee

Rabbi Charles Mantinband
Temple Emanuel
Box 1502
Longview, Texas

Mrs. Vivian Carter Mason
2630 Chesterfield Blvd.
Norfolk, Virginia

The Rev. M. D. McCollom
District Superintendent
The Methodist Church
P. O. Box 423
Walterboro, South Carolina

John P. Nelson, Jr.
Attorney
702 Gravier Building
535 Gravier Street
New Orleans 12, Louisiana

Lucius Pitts
President
Miles College
Birmingham, Alabama

David H. Scull
President
Turnpike Press
Annandale, Virginia

Andrew M. Secrest
Editor
The Cheraw Chronicle
Cheraw, South Carolina

The Rev. Kelly M. Smith
First Baptist Church
318 Eighth Avenue, North
Nashville, Tennessee

McNeill Smith
Attorney
700 Jefferson Street Bldg.
Greensboro, North Carolina

Class of 1966

Roosevelt D. Crockett
President
Philander Smith College
Little Rock, Arkansas

The Rev. Theodore R. Gibson
Christ Episcopal Church
3841 Hibiscus Street
Miami 33, Florida

Edward E. Haddock
Physician and State Legislator
1133 West Franklin Street
Richmond 20, Virginia

Robert J. Harris
Dean
Division of Arts & Sciences
University of Virginia
Charlottesville, Virginia

Mrs. Martin Harvey
415 N. Farish Street
Jackson 2, Mississippi

John G. Lewis
Regional Masonic Executive
P. O. Box 2110
Baton Rouge, Louisiana

Benjamin E. Mays
President
Morehouse College
Atlanta 14, Georgia

Francis Pickens Miller
(U. S. Department of State
Washington, D. C.)
Charlottesville, Virginia

L. D. Milton
President
Citizens Trust Company
212 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Riley B. Montgomery
President
College of the Bible
Lexington, Kentucky

Samuel Nabrit
President
Texas Southern University
Houston, Texas

J. Rupert Picott
Executive Secretary
Virginia Teachers Assn.
316 Clay Street
Richmond, Virginia

Samuel Proctor
President
North Carolina A. & T. College
Greensboro, North Carolina

Mrs. J. N. Rayzor
3207 Groveland Lane
Houston, Texas

J. M. Richards
President
Columbia Theological Seminary
Decatur, Georgia

Dr. Harry V. Richardson
President
Interdenominational Theological Seminary
671 Beckwith Street, S. W.
Atlanta 14, Georgia

Rabbi Jacob Rothschild
The Temple
1589 Peachtree Street, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Miss Dorcas Ruthenburg
2215 Bonnycastle Avenue
Louisville 5, Kentucky

Walter Sharp
Route 2, Beech Creek Road
Brentwood, Tennessee

Courtney Siceloff
Director
Penn Community Services
St. Helena Island
Frogmore, South Carolina

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Alexander O. Sigur
P. O. Box 532
U. S. L. Station
Lafayette, Louisiana

J. Ray Shute
317 E. Windsor Street
Monroe, North Carolina

Moreland G. Smith
Architect
3236 Bankhead Avenue
Montgomery 6, Alabama

William H. Townsend
Optometrist
507 W. 31st Street
Little Rock, Arkansas

Nat Welch
Federal Representative, Southern Interstate Nuclear Board
Box 1192
Auburn, Alabama

Class of 1967

Mrs. Lawrence Coe
Member, School Board
3580 Watauga Avenue
Memphis, Tennessee

Ralph Dreger
Professor of Psychology
University of Jacksonville
Jacksonville, Florida

S. E. Duncan
President
Livingstone College
Salisbury, North Carolina

Paul Johnston
Attorney
First National Building
Birmingham, Alabama

Sylvan Meyer
Editor
The Daily Times
Gainesville, Georgia

C. H. Parrish
Professor of Sociology
University of Louisville
Louisville, Kentucky

Mrs. Mary Sands
1447 Granada Street
New Orleans, Louisiana

Mrs. Jane Schutt
955 Pecan Boulevard
Jackson, Mississippi

W. E. Solomon
Executive Secretary
Palmetto State Teachers Association
1719 Taylor Street
Columbia, South Carolina

James E. Stewart
Businessman and Newspaper Columnist
548 N. E. Fourth Street
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

James Stokely
Author, Poet
405 Clifton Heights
Newport, Tennessee

Lee B. Thomas, Jr.
Executive Vice-President
Vermont American Corporation
500 East Main Street
Louisville 2, Kentucky

The Rev. Thomas Thrasher
Chapel of the Cross
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Mrs. J. F. Tillman
President, Woman's Division of Christian Service
Board of Missions, The Methodist Church
Palmetto Farm, RFD 1
Lewisburg, Tennessee

John H. Wheeler
President
Mechanics and Farmers Bank
Box 1932
Durham, North Carolina

Raymond Wheeler
Physician
1900 Brunswick Avenue
Charlotte, North Carolina

Bell I. Wiley
Professor of History
Emory University
Atlanta 22, Georgia

Miss Josephine Wilkins
387 South Milledge Avenue
Athens, Georgia

H. Franklin Williams
Vice President
The University of Miami
Coral Gables, Florida

Paul D. Williams
Publisher
3320 Gloucester Road
Richmond, Virginia

Marion A. Wright
Attorney
Top Knot
Linville Falls, North Carolina

Stephen J. Wright
President
Fisk University
Nashville, Tennessee

Jack Young
Attorney
The Redmond Building
North Farish Street
Jackson, Mississippi

Thomas W. Young
Editor
The Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

James Youngdahl
Attorney
The Tower Building
Little Rock, Arkansas

Life Fellows

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames
The Wren's Nest
P. O. Box 626
Tryon, North Carolina

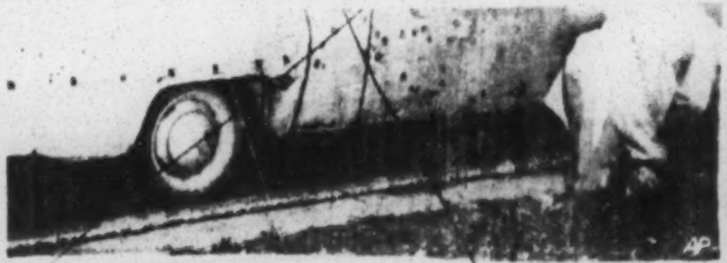
Leonard Haas
Attorney
601 Haas-Howell Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Gordon B. Hancock
Educator and Newspaper Columnist
P. O. Box 6056
Richmond 22, Virginia

The Rev. M. LaFayette Harris
Resident Bishop, Atlantic Coast Area
The Methodist Church
250 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Edward A. McDowell
Southern Baptist Theological Seminary
Wake Forest, North Carolina

Mrs. M. E. Tilly
Director of Women's Work
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia



HE HAD TO SHOOT SOMETHING—Herbert Schmidt of Chicago had an explanation when police questioned him about bullet holes in his car. He went hunting last year, said Schmidt, didn't bag a thing. So he used his car for target practice. A detective looks over the vehicle, counting 300 bullet holes.

SERS NOV 9 1955
Library

TX

5-0072

Ministers Decide To Invite Negroes To Consider Merger

C.L.

By ROY COVINGTON

Observer Staff Writer

Heeding the recommendations of its interracial committee, the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Ministerial Association moved Tuesday toward joining together the "split personality within our Christian family."

By a count of 44 to 14, the all-white ministerial association voted to invite the all-Negro Charlotte Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance to consider a merger of the two organizations.

Covington

A prayer for "Divine guidance," almost two hours of discussion and the rejection of two substitute motions preceded the association's decision.

Although such a merger likely will be effected, its organization rests upon joint action of the white and Negro group.

Specifically, the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Ministerial Association voted to:

1. Extend an invitation to the Interdenomination Ministerial Alliance of Charlotte and vicinity to consider merging the two organizations, and

2. To appoint "a committee to present this invitation to them and to meet with their representatives to consider this matter and bring back a report of ways and means to accomplish

(over)

J15.5286
Nov 9, 1955

J15 5287

Continued From Page 1

this morning of the organizations. 5 -0073

Informed of the white association's action, the Rev. Thomas Jenkins, president of the [illegible] Alliance said, "We will welcome the possibility to consider such a merger."

[illegible]

Christian brethren," but noting "we are caught between principle and practice." Dr. W. M. [illegible] moved for the establishment of a Charlotte Congress of Churches.

His motion, defeated 17 to 18, called for attempts to organize an association which would bring together "professional leaders" of all churches including Catholics and Jews.

[illegible]

He branded the Supreme Court decision as the greatest act of [illegible] ever perpetrated upon our people.

[illegible]

groes and whites [illegible] in both the North and South to fight the decision because it is so far out of line.

Saying there is "no basis in the Bible for the conclusion that segregation is not Christian," Dr. McClure [illegible] the merger [illegible] nonsense.

In defending the action of [illegible] committee, Dr. [illegible] said, "We did not [illegible] this suggestion because of the Supreme Court decision or because of pressure.

[illegible]

"As Christian ministers we feel we have something in common with Negro Christian ministers. As it stands now there is a split personality in our Christian family."

At present there [illegible] for white and Negro ministers to discuss common problems, he said.

[illegible]

—May See Us Tonight

[illegible]

HONEY

Continued From Page

[illegible]

On the other hand, Honey, you'll be glad to know that [illegible] of all. Only [illegible] per cent of the [illegible] from the marital path.

Those Yankees [illegible] 25 per cent of the time, while 18 per cent of the [illegible] have left mama's bed and board.

Only one thing: Sugar. That Yankee department [illegible]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Report No. L-44
August 1, 1963

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St., N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

(Reprinted from The Charlotte Observer, July 14, 1963, with permission)
Sunday, July 14, 1963 The Charlotte Observer . . .

A DIFFERENT WAY

Charlotte Has Built Its Integration Road

While Negroes paraded, staged sit-ins, actually fought battles elsewhere in the country, many of Charlotte's public accommodations firms quietly desegregated.

It was done through a highly organized plan. The arrangements had been worked out carefully behind closed doors. Reporters were given few details.

White leaders and Negro leaders, prearranged schedule, began having lunch together. Negroes, on schedule, began going to downtown movies.

Far off in other parts of the country, people began reading about the Charlotte plan. How could it be done? Who did the arranging? Was this a model for the rest of the South?

A SPECIAL REPORT
By L. M. WRIGHT, JR.
Observer City Editor

Cool Heads Behind Closed Doors Thought, Planned And Convinced

Charlotte chose a different way.

In Birmingham, hundreds were marching in the streets.

Closer to home, protesters sat all day in the mayor's office in Greensboro and were carried out by police when the time came to close the office for the day.

In Raleigh and Durham they marched, and they were arrested. In Wilmington, in Fayetteville . . . in Lexington . . . they protested.

But Charlotte chose a different way.

"I was talking to the Mayor that Sunday, and we thought we'd get the executive committee together that week and see what we could do about it."

The man talking was J. Ed Burnside, Sr. He is president of the Chamber of Commerce of Charlotte. He is also president of one of the city's leading financial institutions and, incidentally, a former South Carolinian.

The Sunday he was talking about was May 19. The mayor he was talking to was Stan R. Brookshire. The executive committee was the central governing group of the 4,500-member Charlotte Chamber of Commerce.

First Steps Were Quickly Taken

The subject of their discussion? Race relations in general in Charlotte and, more specifically, the fact that virtually no public accommodations — hotels, motels, theaters and restaurants — accepted Negroes as patrons.

"We went into the meeting without anyone knowing what was coming off," Burnside said. "I had used no one for a sounding board. It went around the room. They all said how they felt. I was surprised. It was unanimous. . . . Finally, Dwight Phillips said, 'Why don't we go ahead and do it?'"

C. A. McKnight, editor of The Observer, Joe H. Robinson, vice president of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., and J. M. Wasson, general manager of Southern Bell, were asked to write a brief resolution for the consideration of the full board of directors.

By this time, it was Wednesday, May 22. The executive committee, with 11 of its 15 members present, had already acted.

But other things had happened, too. On Monday, Brookshire had asked Charles Crawford, executive vice president of the Chamber, to invite a representative group of hotel, motel, theater and restaurant owners and managers to a meeting at the Chamber on Thursday, May 23. They were not told what the subject would be. They were asked to come to discuss a matter of vital concern to the city and its development.

When the invitation went out Monday, the original plan had been for the Chamber's executive committee to meet privately Wednesday, then meet privately Thursday with the business men to let them know that the Chamber stood ready to back them in a move toward desegregation.

But at the executive committee session Wednesday another idea developed. And promptly, a called meeting of the full board of directors with its 39 members was set for Thursday noon.

"If I had had to bet," said Burnside, "on the day before, I would have bet on some opposition. Maybe two or three votes, at least."

Twenty-four of 39 directors came. Reading the list is like reading a Who's Who of Charlotte: Beatty, Blythe, Broadrick, Brookshire, Burnside, Covington, Dickson, Duncan, Flintom, Gluck, Harris, Matthews, McKnight, Pease, Phillips, Robinson, Sloan, Smith, Vinson, Walker, Wasson, Wayne, Whelchel, Younts. Many of them names long associated with the leadership of Charlotte, all of them names of significance in the direction of the city's future and fortunes.

The committee that had gone out the day before to write the resolution came in with one sentence. Wasson read it: "We, the directors of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce, recommend that all businesses in this community catering to the general public be opened immediately to all customers without regard to race, creed or color."

Burnside called for discussion. There was none. The voice vote was uanimous. "This means that every man in this room thinks we have taken the right step," said Burnside.

Later, he said he added that remark to encourage any possible dissent, to make sure that no one was cut off, to emphasize the importance of what he understood to be happening.

Still later, Burnside said again: "It was unanimous. I was shocked. I wanted to be sure."

Leadership Speaks

But the leadership had spoken. The public knew how these men felt. And with that, the public sessions were ended.

And, at that point, there began the real work: how, what, when and where to desegregate?

Within two hours of the luncheon session, the meeting to which representative businessmen had been invited began.

It's one thing to meet at lunch and pass a resolution. It's something entirely different to sit down in a private room with men who own the businesses and begin the task of discussing, persuading, negotiating—to begin to make the actual changes.

Three or four hotel and motel men were there. Four theater men had come. A spokesman for restaurants was present, too.

What is said at a meeting of this sort? Who moves first? What is the atmosphere?

Altogether, about 30 people sat around the table. Significantly, although no ministers had been closely associated with the decisions up to that point, there were at least four ministers at the first closed session.

"We wanted them to know that the business leadership of this community felt that this was the right thing to do," said Chamber Vice President Crawford, a man who observed many of the sessions.

An Obligation

Burnside told the businessmen simply that he thought it was "the right thing to do." He spoke of the economic consequences of not making a change. But he emphasized the moral obligations.

"These were Southern men," another participant recalled. "These were hard choices. But this was too good a town to have it ruined, and they just weren't going to have it. They thought the time was right. They thought the community was ready."

Every man at the session was asked to stand, identify himself, his business, and give his views. To a man, they said the change should be made.

"No one seemed to know how," it is recalled. "All of them said they would be willing. But no one was willing to do it alone."

How To Change?

How to do it? It was decided in that session—it lasted more than two hours—that the businessmen would meet in groups according to their business to see if specific plans could be made.

Two other things of importance came out, too.

So rapidly had the Chamber moved in that week that there had been no real coordination between the Chamber and the already existing and functioning Mayor's Committee on Community Relations. Dr. John R. Cunningham, chairman of the committee, did not know of the Chamber's plans until the day the resolution was passed.

The second thing was that the Chamber officials themselves made a commitment to participate in the desegregation personally. A restaurant representative had asked: "If I desegregate, will you come to my place and bring a Negro guest?" Ed Burnside had said yes, and so had the mayor and a councilman and an editor and a minister and a banker.

Hotel and motel men met again on Friday, May 24. There was some hesitancy, of course. No one denies that. But the idea was not totally strange. There had been a tentative agreement for some desegregation in some hotels and motels back in April in connection with the trade fair. Demonstrations had been threatened. The agreement had not lasted, however. Actually, most of the hotel and motel men were ready to go. Two or three never had considered doing anything else. But without some of the really big ones, the change would have less meaning.

Here, as in many other areas, concern about the possible loss of white customers, concern about a possible incident seemed to be the delaying factors.

The handful of hotel men went away to hold their own meeting, away from any outside committees. Seven establishments had been involved, at first. The hotel men invited 40 to their own meeting. And out of that group, one more joined the desegregation movement. The others would wait.

In A Week

In a week, the others moved. It was done, over and announced. The hotel men agreed to desegregate their dining rooms first. Five of them had dining rooms: the Manger, the Queen Charlotte, the Sheraton-Barringer Motor Inn, the Heart of Charlotte and the Downtowner.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May 29, 30 and 31, the white directors of the Chamber of Commerce and several other leading business, civic and government leaders went to lunch with Negroes as guests.

Ed Burnside and three other members of his firm took two Negroes, Dr. G. A. Lowe and James K. Polk, to lunch at the Sheraton-Barringer. Mayor Brookshire and Cunning had lunch at the Manger with Fred Alexander, manager of Double Oaks apartments, and Moses Belton, director of public relations for Johnson C. Smith University. On another day, Editor C. A. McKnight and Commissioner Charles M. Lowe sat across the table from Dr. R. A. Hawkins and lawyer Thomas H. Wyche. Councilman James B. Whittington and Bishop Herbert Spaugh were at the Queen Charlotte with funeral home owner Arthur Grier and businessman Bishop Dale.

There were others. For three days, in groups of two, four and six, they went by appointment. There was no publicity. Once, when an out-of-town newsman sought to take pictures for national television at one restaurant, Crawford of the Chamber, who planned the groups, switched them to another restaurant so that the agreement not to take pictures, not to create abnormal public attention would remain unbroken.

"Getting 12 to 15 people a day lined up for lunch isn't easy," Crawford recalled. What was the biggest problem? "They really didn't know each other," Crawford said. And the fact that a lot of these people didn't know each other came home quickly to Crawford when he and a Duke Power executive took banker A. E. Spears and Dr. E. L. Rann to lunch. Said Crawford: "I knew Mr. Spears, but I had never met Dr. Rann."

That phase of the effort went well enough so that on Saturday, June 1, the names of the five hotels whose restaurants had desegregated after the three-day test period were announced. Further, their rooms were desegregated, and so were those at the Coliseum Motor Court, the James Lee Motor Inn and the Alamo Plaza Hotel Courts.

Though not by design, nor really even by expectation, the theaters came next.

Theaters Different

Theaters, somehow, are different. From the beginning, those participating in the planning of the changes had thought the gravest problem would be here. The themes of some movies create tensions and emotions that are quite different from what is encountered, say, in a restaurant during lunch. Theaters are dark, too, while hotels, motels or restaurants are open, public, well-lighted.

Whatever fears there were about the other changes certainly existed for all concerned about the change of policy for theaters—and more so.

Like the hotel and restaurant men, the theater men wanted no publicity. They agreed to accept Negro patrons, by appointment and reservations, for a limited time to see how it worked.

While things had moved rapidly enough with the hotel and motel operators so that there had been little time for the members of the Mayor's Committee under Dr. Cunningham even to enter the negotiations and assist in the planning, the participants now began to shift, and the Chambers officials, as active participants in negotiating sessions, began to take a back seat and let the mayor's committee perform some of the functions for which it was intended.

For the theaters, though Cunningham personally participated, much of the negotiation was done by half a dozen Negroes, all members of the mayor's committee, and the theater owners. The Negroes included Fred Alexander, A. E. Spears, Rev. J. F. Wertz, Rev. K. Melvin Taylor, Moses Belton and James K. Polk.

A Beginning

It took a couple of meetings to work out a plan for the beginning. It came on Tuesday, June 11. The hotels and motels had begun accepting Negroes six days after the Chamber resolution and had announced that their doors were open to all nine days after the resolution.

The theaters took their first Negro patrons 19 days after the resolution. The trial period ran nearly three weeks, until July 1. Now, all major indoor theaters are following a policy of admitting Negroes who choose to come. The theaters are the Carolina, Center, Charlotte, Dilworth, Imperial, Manor, Plaza and Visulite. A couple of neighborhood theaters are not included in the agreement, nor are any of the half dozen or so drive-in theaters.

The task of arranging for theater trips during the test period was larger than had been Crawford's task at the Chamber during the trial period for the hotel-related restaurants.

"It kept two or three people a day busy getting people lined up," said Polk, the man who coordinated the effort for the mayor's committee and for the Negroes.

"You had to start by calling someone you thought would be interested, explaining that the control plan was in effect, and then asking if he wanted to go to the movie."

By Reservation

Negroes, generally, were admitted only by reservation, by name. At the end of the first week, some of the theater managers were letting in a few Negroes who did not have reservations while others were not.

At each weekly session, the mayor's committee suggested that reservations were no longer necessary, that all the phoning was an unnecessary bother. But some of the theater owners wanted a longer test period—and they got it.

Altogether, 30 to 50 Negroes a day were formally attending all-white movies at the eight Charlotte theaters. Usually they came in twos or fours. Usually there were Negroes at both afternoon and evening showings.

And while the experiment went on, with apparent smoothness, everyone aware of it watched closely.

"I think we all have some bias," said one theater man. "However, these things were not involved. A year ago, nobody thought they would do this in their lifetime. . . . I think a lot of people are staying away from the movies. . . . It depends on how the Negroes handle it."

As everyone thought, there was apprehension about the theaters beyond the apprehension encountered elsewhere.

Theater managers and all others involved have made it clear that they think restraint will be the best approach for some time. Attendance at some theaters has been as high as 20 Negroes on a single day, but these 20 were not in a group, and groups are not being encouraged.

"In the same way that they find out about desegregation (by word of mouth, at first), it should be made clear that they need to be even more circumspect than the whites," one owner suggested.

"White people are in the process of making up their minds whether they are going to like it or not."

Complaints have come, of course, though the number has been limited. "We must say we've already done it, we did it last week. Even though they object, they go in there and see two or three well-behaved Negroes. They think maybe they ought not to raise a stink about it."

Theaters are in, then. And on July 1—39 days away from the Chamber resolution—admission to eight downtown theaters was available without reservation or prior arrangement to Negroes.

"To tell the truth," said one man, "I'm right proud of this town, the Mayor's Committee and those Negroes we've dealt with.

"The town seemed to be ready for it."

Restaurant

The third area in which desegregation was being sought was one in which some had already taken place—some time ago. This was the restaurants.

There are 466 licensed food handlers and sellers in Mecklenburg County. They range from the city's finer restaurants to some that are no more than stand-up snack bars. Many of those who hold licenses from the Health Department do not serve the public; they are private clubs, food processors or cafeterias in private businesses serving only employes of a company.

It was two years ago that Charlotte's first sustained desegregation demonstrations came, and they were aimed primarily at restaurants in the downtown area and at theaters.

Students from Johnson C. Smith University, assisted and at times led by Dr. R. A. Hawkins, Negro dentist and political leader, demonstrated over a period of months in the spring of 1961. The mayor's committee did some of its first negotiating between demonstrators and business owners at that time.

As a result, most lunch counters in variety and drug stores in the downtown area desegregated. So did restaurants at Belk's and Ivey's.

There was a brief effort at demonstrating later in the summer of 1961, largely at theaters, but no gains resulted for Negroes.

Pressure

But those demonstrations probably contributed to a buildup of sentiments. In May and June of this year, when other cities got into trouble, these sentiments were strong enough to make many believe that the time had come for Charlotte to make some changes.

Demonstrations had been threatened here in April in connection with trade fair desegregation requests. There was a peaceful march of about 75 Negroes (again led by Dr. Hawkins) on May 20 (Mecklenburg Declaration Day; of this year. Though the march did not prompt the Chamber resolution that came three days later, few will deny that the continuing possibility of demonstrations was a factor, though perhaps not the mayor factor, in the moves made in late May and June.

Another significant factor, too, is that Dr. Hawkins, the identified leader of the demonstrators, has not been a party to the negotiations that have led to the changes.

Mayor Brookshire, in a recent public statement on the work of his Community Relations Committee, noted that he and others had made a deliberate choice to leave advocates of extreme points of view on either side off the committee in an effort to avoid any possibility of having the members of the committee in a position of bargaining among themselves.

Few Came

Restaurants, then, had made a start. But for nearly two years no significant changes had been made.

After the Chamber resolution of May 23, when the first negotiating session was held, there were representatives of theaters and hotels present, but only one restaurant operator. About half a dozen had been invited, but they did not come.

From that meeting the word went out, though there was difficulty in spreading it very far because of the large number of restaurants in contrast to the number of hotels, motels and theaters.

In any event, in a few days, 15 to 20 of the restaurant owners had been contacted. In general, they said the same thing: We will desegregate when Frank O. Sherrill desegregates the S&W cafeterias.

Sherrill, invited to that first meeting, had not come. But he was having demonstrations at his cafeterias in Greensboro and Durham.

After telephone calls to many operators, about 20 had given assurances that they would desegregate. But meetings, effective meetings with the operators to make specific plans to act together, were almost impossible. A typical situation: Of seven operators who said they would desegregate, four said they had no objection to a public announcement of that fact or to accepting Negroes immediately. But three others wanted no publicity. They simply agreed not to turn Negroes away if they came.

It is important here to understand the nature of the restaurant association through which the mayor's committee was attempting to deal. James W. Claiborne of the Barclay Cafeteria is president, and he is the first to admit that it is not an effective association for the 466 licensed food handlers in the county. Average attendance at a meeting is between 20 and 25.

Division Shows

About two weeks after the Chamber resolution, nine restaurant operators met one night to see how things were. The purpose of the meeting was to turn those operators present into a committee whose members would divide up the county and begin contacting other restaurant owners about desegregating. But four of those present didn't want to go in that direction and four did.

"We broke up in a state of confusion and shock," said one man who was present, for it had been assumed that some positive steps could be taken, at least among the leading restaurant owners.

By then, it was apparent that if all restaurants were to desegregate at one time it would take quite a long time to do the necessary organizing.

Meanwhile, meetings were continuing with representatives of the mayor's committee. They were asking for a list of desegregated restaurants.

"Why make up a list of some," asked one leader, "when you haven't even contacted the majority to ask them what they are doing?"

But things did happen.

Charles J. Edwards of the Plantation on Wilkinson Boulevard decided desegregation was the right thing to do. He was ready.

A Break Comes

And on one dramatic Monday morning, with the operator of Bailey's cafeterias and the Barclay Cafeteria sitting in his office, Sherrill of the S&W announced the desegregation of his chain as fast as individual community problems could be worked out.

Though there had been no evidence of it here, reliable sources elsewhere had reported minor attempts at sabotage in some restaurants. White pepper in mashed potatoes, salt in coffee, particularly during a rush hour, will play havoc with a restaurant's business for a day—and may cost it some customers permanently.

Working with an almost non-existent organization, then, restaurant owners were willing on June 19 to announce that they would accept Negroes. Eight leading restaurants said they would take Negroes under the previously used control plan for three days to see how it worked. These eight included three S&W cafeterias, two Bailey cafeterias, the Barclay, two Shoney's restaurants and drive-ins.

The plan went into effect. It worked, just as it had worked at theaters, at hotel and motel restaurants.

Thus, 27 days away from the Chamber resolution, a start had been made among restaurants that had not changed their policy two years earlier.

The Drive-Ins

Attention was turned, then, to drive-in restaurants. And the next few days were crucial.

Meetings and telephone calls had brought an agreement for 21 drive-ins to begin accepting Negroes, two groups a night, for three nights beginning June 24. After that, it was hoped, general desegregation would be announced.

In a letter to Dr. Cunningham of the mayor's committee, Claiborne of the restaurant association gave a list of 18 drive-ins that requested Negro patrons under the control plan.

On Friday, June 21, Negro members of the mayor's committee again started making their reservation calls, lining up groups to go to the drive-ins.

But something that can never be predicted or planned for happened over the weekend. There was a big social affair on Sunday that involved several restaurant owners. Some of the dining-room owners chided some of the drive-in owners about their plans to desegregate.

And by Monday, June 24, several of them, with telephone calls going all over town, had changed their minds. When the Negro groups showed up that Monday night, they were turned away at 11 places.

Misunderstanding

And there was what some thought was an incident at one.

Negroes in one car had already been served. Two white boys walked by the car and one said to the other: "I think they are taking this integration too far."

The one Negro in the car who heard the remark did not believe it had been directed at him and continued to eat.

But a waitress did hear the remark. The word moved to the manager. The story got mangled. A police car showed up, drove through the parking area, saw nothing and left.

What is significant here, is that, despite a request for police protection made the previous Thursday, there is no indication that the police department had been informed in detail of what was to happen that Monday night at the drive-ins. Thus, when the patrol car did show up, police had no reason to make more than a routine check, for the police on duty did not know about the desegregation.

By morning the story had grown to include reports of guns in a car and an outright assault or serious threat of assault on the Negroes involved.

That story, though false, spread to many other restaurant operators, and doubts rose rapidly.

It was not until later that week, when a member of the mayor's committee took one of the Negroes that had been in the car to talk with the manager of the drive-in, that the record was straightened. Once that happened, the manager agreed to continue to serve Negroes, incidentally.

Meanwhile, more efforts were being made to hold a large meeting of restaurant owners. Invitations went out from the Chamber and the mayor's committee for a major meeting on July 1.

A Meeting

A total of 130 owners were invited. Seven came. Six of these had already desegregated. The seventh man there agreed to.

But it was a session at which some decisions were made by Mayor Brookshire, Dr. Cunningham and other members of his committee.

One participant of that session understood that those present had agreed to draw up a partial list of the desegregated restaurants. It would go in a formal letter to all restaurant owners and operators in the county who would be asked about their policy, asked to change it if they were still segregating, and asked to reply in writing to the committee. That was July 1.

The partial list has been drawn up. It includes:

Babe Maloy Drive-In, two Bailey's cafeterias, Bar-B-Q-King, Barclay Cafeteria, Belk's, two Bell's Hamburgers, Big Chief Drive-In, dime stores, Downtowner, Heart of Charlotte, three Howard Johnsons, Ivey's, Jerry's, McDonald's, Manger Motor Inn, Oriental, Plantation Grill, Queen Charlotte, three S&W cafeterias, Sheraton-Barringer Motor Inn, two Shoneys', three Stork restaurants.

That's the list. The letter to the restaurant owners has not been sent. Checks late last week at the Chamber and with the restaurant association disclosed no plans for a letter there. Cunningham was out of town for two weeks on a previously planned trip.

Thus it is not clear when such a letter may be sent.

Today is the 52nd day since the Chamber resolution. The best estimate of the situation among restaurants available from several sources is this:

Of the 466 licensed food handlers in the county, about 180 should be set aside from consideration because they are in private clubs, businesses or are food handlers who do not serve the public directly. This number also includes an estimate of the Negro restaurants.

This leaves a potential of 286 of what would be regarded as white restaurants that might change their policy.

About 110 restaurants are believed to be serving Negroes, and about 50 of these are believed to have changed their policy during the month of June.

Of the 176 left, about three-fourths have not been contacted in any way by any representative of the association, the mayor's committee or the Chamber.

Why? How?

These things, then, have been done. Eight major motels and hotels, eight major downtown theaters, more than 100 restaurants over town have desegregated. Why were these things done? How was it possible to do them in this town at this time with these people?

Many of the answers are here. Some observations by some more of the participants provide more insight:

"I think our consciences have been pricked," said Mayor Brookshire. "We've been close enough to some of the fires to feel the heat. It gives a sense of urgency. . . . Birmingham, Cambridge, Durham, Greensboro. . . . Are we going to recognize the pressures which are elsewhere and could come here and go do the things we think are just and right?

"The people have a tremendous pride in Charlotte. They believe that our people can do things which really are in the best interests of the city. It gives Charlotte stature and leadership among cities. People just didn't want it (trouble) to happen here. This city has gained. Its image has been developed all over the country . . . all over the world.

"I had no idea of the national significance of the situation here. People called me from Philadelphia, from Texas. I heard from them in California. 'I saw you on TV,' they said.

"Some of my friends just think I've gone overboard. But they accept it as the best alternative.

"But there is danger in moving too fast. Some of the protest leaders sometimes seem to be playing at a game. . . . Education and economic opportunity are next. I don't know whether we can move as fast. But protest leaders could jeopardize peaceful, friendly cooperation in this area."

Brookshire is especially concerned about the possibility of demonstrations and feels strongly that much of what has been done in this fast-paced month of June could be undone by demonstrations.

He hopes they won't come here.

Demonstrations

While possible demonstrations are always in the background, it is clear that the Negro leadership that has emerged in the changes in June is ready and willing to continue for a while to try the methods that apparently have worked peacefully.

Whether the entire Negro community will follow this pattern is, at best, a matter for speculation.

One Negro leader discussed the general situation:

"Without a resolution, it could not have come as fast. Any time the power structure speaks out, these changes can occur. Why did the change come here, now?: Birmingham and the others. Charlotte wants to be recognized as a forward-moving city. They are willing to go ahead. I think they were wise in their decision. Things could have happened here. This could have been another Birmingham. It wasn't. This, to me, is just good, sound leadership.

"Leadership? In Charlotte, the Chamber definitely is it. A good many Negroes regard the Chamber as the power structure. Negroes learn about power fast. White people just don't know where you touch these people who can make a change.

"Negroes have a gap . . . nothing comes next under the leadership. It would make you sick on your stomach to see some of the conditions under which they live.

"These changes aren't helping anybody get a job. But it does make a lot of people who didn't, feel like somebody. They'll try, now. You can't go to the Imperial or the Carolina for the same price you can go to the Grand. A large number of Negroes just don't have the money to attend."

Are these things only status symbols? "Really, I think we are attacking the whole structure. We are going to have to change the whole pattern. But this is motivation for any Negro to do better. . . . To attend a movie, stay in a hotel, you need a better job and you have to prepare for that. You can't live down at the Manger making $30 a week. . . .

"I would like to say that there were moral motives (for the changes). I can't. There is some interested Christian leadership. But for most, I think they were looking at this thing in cold turkey, good business sense.

"Charlotte needs this good image to bring new industry.

". . . And Birmingham is in the back of all this. This is what could happen here. But what did is one of the greatest things that ever happened . . . it all continues to make America great."

There are other retrospective views:

Chamber President Burnside recalls that when the first meeting took place, a prominent minister was taken with surprise that the Chamber directors had already acted, that the question was how or when, not whether. "I was amazed at the national attention this thing got. People called me . . . all the way from Orlando . . . most of them to congratulate. . . . One local minister called. . . ."

C. A. McKnight of The Observer: "Pride in this community and its reputation is important . . . probably the most important single factor . . . as far as the Chamber was concerned. A dominating factor is hard to find. The moral issue . . . well, not lacking, but not dominant. . . . It's important that this community understand that there are Negro leaders, responsible and sober, like James K Polk and Moses Belton, who can do something in this area . . . who can get something done.

Cunningham: "A Miami banker wants to know how our committee is organized, how many employes, where it gets its budget. . . . I'll tell him. . . . There's no budget and it's all volunteer. . . . Why now? Why here? It was happening in Greensboro, Durham, Jackson, Miss., and all up in the East. . . .

"I believe Charlotte businessmen were impressed by the fact that that kind of thing hurts a city. . . . They travel a lot. They see Negroes in restaurants and hotels, eating on airplanes. Charlotte's leadership is big enough to see that it would be cutting off its nose to spite its face to let it happen here. . . . I believe that the moral obligation was stronger (than the economic pressures). . . . When the meetings started, we never had any question of whether, just how."

Why Charlotte? Why June, 1963? Why change?

There were men with moral obligations, the pricked consciences that the mayor mentions. There were men concerned about making a living, the cold turkey, good business sense that Polk, the funeral home president, mentioned. There were men proud of their community, the good reputation that Editor McKnight pointed to.

And together, they decided to see that "it won't happen here."

These men are Charlotte. They chose a different way.

File : Brunswick

November 27, 1964

Mr. Altin Perlmutter
National Education Television
10 Columbus Circle
New York, N. Y.

Dear Al:

I checked with a couple of Brunswick sources on prospects of your getting interviews with industry people; they seemed to think you would have no trouble. But they were short on names. Best suggestion seemed to be to write or call the local managers (or p.r. or personell officials) of:

Thiokol Chemical Corp. Space Booster Plant, 1609 Newcastle St., Brunswick, Phone 265-0180.

Brunswick Pulp and Paper Co. (this is Scott), Southern Docks, Brunswick, Phone Am 5-5780.

Hercules Powder Co., Brunswick, Phone AM 5-3550.

Solvay Process Division of Allied Chemical and Dye Corp., Brunswick, Phone AM 5-8560.

Bestwall Gypsum Co., South Yards, Brunswick, Phone AM 5-1700.

Babcock & Wilcox Co., South Albany St., Brunswick, Phone 265-0510.

One of the two local bankers is Mr. Harrison Aiken Jr., president, American National Bank, 710 Gloucester St., Brunswick, Phone AM 5-4960. The other bank is the First National, 510 Gloucester St., Brunswick, Phone AM 5-02 60. Sources couldn't recollect name of president of this one, but all things considered, he probably should be your first choice.

Sig Kaufman, the defected newspaperman Bob expressed an interest in, would probably best be traced by just calling the Brunswick News and ask them where he is. The address I have for Bessie Jones of the Sea Island Singers (authentic slave songs and dances) is Box 22, Harlem Lane, St. Simons Island, Ga. Lois was interested in them.

Looking back over the outline, I was struck by how the Brunswick interviews should cover just about every important aspect of the current, post-civil rights law situation in the South:

1. How big the change it made was for the South-- with the accomplishments everyone down in Brunswick was so proud of achieving through negotiation entirely overshadowed by the gains of the law.

2. How the era of power structure manipulation for civil rights progress is ending, and a new era of decision by the masses of people is upon us, with a great need still to overcome prejudice among many whites, or at least to reconcile them to the coming changes.

3. The emphasis on political action along with, or even supplanting, direct action in the Negro movement.

4. The rise of the radical right as a political force in the South.

5. The emphasis in civil rights now on jobs, education, housing. (On the latter, you might check with Dr. Wilkes and Judge Hartley about the likelihood that the Wilkes home on Jekyll Island will soon have white neighbors.

6. The importance still of realistic negotiations in good faith, with Brunswick a southern small-town pioneer in setting up and using machinery for same.

Among Jekyll Island motels, Stuckey's Carriage Inn is recommended by the sources, particularly if your crew is integrated. Reservations should be made soon as possible. Hope this takes care of all the loose-ends. If not call. I'll be out of town probably through Wednesday, but the others here will be glad to help. Let me know if you want me to come down. Forgive typing, spelling, etc.; I'm rushing to get out of town. My regards to the others.

Yours truly,

P.S. Expense statement attached.

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

RALEIGH NEWS AND
OBSERVER (N. C.)
p.3
Date: APR 20 1963

Pub. Accomm
NC

Charlotte Facing Picketing Threat

3

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Proprietors of segregated hostels, restaurants and theaters here have been warned they face mass picketing unless a breakthrough in racial integration comes by 1 p.m. Saturday.

Dr. R. A. Hawkins, Charlotte Negro dentist and a Presbyterian miniser, said the picketing will affect all places of public accomodations that are not open to Negroes, but will be aimed at hotels, motels, restaurants and theaters.

A final decision is to be announced at a news conference Saturday.

The picketing, planned by the coordinating committee of the Mecklenburg (County) Organization on Political Affairs, would be mostly by students. Dr. Hawkins, who heads the committee, said some white adults also have agreed to participate.

Proprietors of the segregated establishments have been informed of the proposed picketing, Dr. Hawkins said. Lettrs also were sent to Gov. Terry Sanford and the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce.

"If we are to really bring an international trade fair to Charlotte," Dr. Hawkins said in a statement Friday, "public accomodations cannot be denied to a segment of the people of the community."

The North Carolina International Trade Fair is scheduled here April 27-May 4.

Dr. Hawkins also said national organizations are being asked to boycott national chain stores with outlets in Charlotte who do not serve Negroes locally.

"We started two years ago when the first trade fair was held here," Dr. Hawkins said. We sent letters to the governor and the Chamber of Commerce, notified hotel and restaurant people that we felt if we were to really bring an international trade fair to Charlotte we cannot deny public accommodations to a segment of the economy.

"We have been in direct contact with these people (the proprietors of the places to be picketed) for a month and a half, but they have issued no policy statement. We hope this action will force a policy statement. We are trying to point up the inequity in this community."

Charlotte police said they had been notified of the demonstration plans but that the department anticipates no activity in connection with it.

MOPA is a Negro organization which has claimed credit for cafeterias in the city's two largest department stores and for bringing about a federal investigation which resulted in the opening of dental and maternity out-patient clinics at city-owned Memorial Hospital.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm-NC

SERS Library E

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 2B
Date APR 26 1963

City Takes A Firm Step Forward

The decision by several Charlotte hotels and motels to accept guests without regard to race is an example of what can be accomplished where negotiations are carried out calmly in a community which has made the decision not to cling blindly to tradition.

This step could not have been made without responsible leadership in Charlotte. Nor could it have been made without the citizenry's calm and intelligent acceptance of earlier racial progress. It could not have been made easily by the management of the hotels and motels in the face of extensive racial demonstrations which might only have hardened traditional lines of resistance.

Once again the Mayor's Community Relations Committee headed by Dr. John R. Cunningham has proved its worth, both as a buffer where racial conflict threatens and as an agency of persuasion against the status quo.

Racial discrimination at places of lodging has for many years been an accomodation to the traditions and preferences of a majority of the clientele of these places. A voluntary decision to eliminate racial barriers was difficult for a single establishment, since the attention of those opposed would have polarized at that spot to the probable detriment of business.

But in this instance three factors were present which made the decision possible. One was a growing acceptance in Charlotte of the idea that people, regardless of race, should be treated as individuals. Another was that several of the establishments agreed to act in concert to remove the barriers. A third, of course, was the desire to maintain a favorable image of Charlotte as a place where hospitality is not based on race or national origin, especially with an international trade fair as a local drawing card.

Critics may say that the decision was an expedient because of Charlotte's commercial appetite. There is no doubt this had some influence. But this in itself would not have brought the change if a majority of the people of Charlotte had not accepted other changes gracefully, and if the Negro population had not conducted itself responsibly after other barriers were dropped in the community.

Neither this decision nor preceding ones regarding race in Charlotte mean that a racial utopia has been constructed here. It simply means that we're making an active and honest effort to treat people on the basis of their individual dignity and merit.

It's a highly desirable goal, not easily obtained. But every voluntary decision of the kind reached by the hotels and motels moves us closer. Every success brought about by responsible conduct in both races will make subsequent decisions less painful.

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 17A
Date: MAY 1 0 1963

Pub. Accomm
Gen.

Desegregated Hotels, Motels Say New Policy Working Out

Managers of eight recently desegregated hotels and motels in four southern states have told a Charlotte Negro doctor that they are pleased with the results of their change of policy.

The managers reported that in general, there are no noticeable differences in the behavior of white and Negro guests or in their spending habits. One said that Negroes behave better and are better tippers.

Only one hotel — in Atlanta reported any loss of business due to admission of Negroes. The manager there said his hotel's business now is recovering.

Dr. Emery L. Rann, the local doctor, conducted the informal poll in an attempt to show that local motels and hotels have nothing to fear in accepting Negro guests.

Rann wrote to 12 hotels and motels that he knew had recently dropped their "white-only" policies. Eight replied to his questionnaire, including two in Greensboro and one each in High Point, Salisbury, Chapel Hill, Atlanta, Ga., Norfolk, Va., and Louisville, Ky.

The facilities, which ranged in size from 29 to 400 rooms, reported housing from four to 300 Negro guests over the past three months.

Asked about the attitude of white guests, seven managers reported that the Negroes were accepted without comment.

Only the Atlanta manager reported unfavorable reaction from some whites. The same hotel was the only one noting any loss of business since desegregation. Originally, business was off by one-half, but now is returning to normal, according to the manager.

By
James K. Batten
Observer Staff Writer

Seven managers reported no difference in spending habits or conduct of whites and Negroes, while the Norfolk manager said that Negroes ranked better on both counts.

The final question on Rann's questionnaire asked, "Are you pleased, from a business point of view, that the step was taken in admitting Negroes to your facility?"

All eight replied affirmatively, and two wrote in additional comments.

The Atlanta manager, who apparently had more troubles than the others, reported, "Despite immediate loss the patronage is returning. I expected the repercussions but I have no regrets. In fact, I'm proud of it."

The Norfolk manager wrote, "We have never had an unpleasant incident involving any Negro guest. We have had some bad reactions from entertaining groups due to their beatnik dress, actions, etc., (but) this is true of white groups also . . . . People from the north and particularly Washington object more to our policy than Virginians."

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 7A
Date: MAY 10 1963

Pub. Accomm
NC

Manger Is Target Of Integrationists

By CHARLES ROBSON
Observer Staff Writer

Charlotte integration leader Dr. R. A. Hawkins and attorney Thomas H. Wyche sought to obtain a warrant Tuesday against Abel M. Girault, manager of the Manger Motor Inn, who they said refused to serve them at the motel's Hearth and Embers restaurant on May 2.

They contended that Girault was in violation of state law requiring that "every innkeeper shall at all times provide suitable food, rooms, beds and bedding for strangers and travelers whom he may accept as guests in his inn or hotel."

Hawkins and Wyche met with City Recorder's Court Solicitor William H. Scarborough Thursday morning, and asked him to decide whether Girault's refusal, as stated by Hawkins, constitues a violation of criminal law.

Scarborough agreed to write to N.C. Attorney General Wade Burton for a ruling in the matter. He sent the letter Thursday afternoon and expects an answer next week.

Scarborough told Hawkins, a Negro dentist who has led the movement to desegregate downtown hotels and restaurants, and Wyche that, in his personal opinion, the law was not a criminal statute.

The law is the first section of Chapter 72 of the N.C. General Statutes. The chapter deals with inns, hotels and restaurants.

Scarborough pointed out that sections of the chapter prohibiting the keeping of dogs in rooms and setting health standards set out specific criminal punishments.

He suggested that the proper remedy to a violation of the law would be a civil injunction, filed in Superior Court, seeking affirmative relief in the form of a court order that the Manger either serve all persons or lose its license as an inn.

But Hawkins said that if he could not get a criminal warrant against Girault his Mecklenburg Organization for Political Affairs would picket the Manger and seek service for Negroes on a mass basis.

He complained that Girault had agreed to a plan for desegregating downtown restaurant and hotel facilities before the N.C. Trade Fair opened and had now backed out of it.

Hawkins and Wyche said that they were told at the Hearth and Embers that all tables were filled and that those that were empty were reserved for guests at the motel, although people were coming in off the streets and being allowed to fill them.

When he tried to register at the motel, Hawkins said, Girault again refused him. "And he knew I had a credit card from Manger Hotels Inc.," Hawkins said.

"They solicited me for the credit card as one of the leading citizens of Charlotte when they built their motel here," he said.

"I've stayed at Manger hotels in other cities, and the card says it entitles me to charge at all Manger hotels and motor inns and even lists the one in Charlotte on it."

Wyche said a civil remedy would not be sought until all other possibilities were exhausted because, "We're trying to speed it up."

He pointed out that another case involving the trespass conviction of a Negro minister in Durham who asked to be served in the white section of an ice cream parlor, was still being contended after more than five years.

Wyche said he, too, had been issued a credit card by Manger Hotels Inc.

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 11A
Date MAY 15 1963

Pub. Accomm.
NC

Attorney General Thinks Law Not Broken By Motel Boss

11A

By CHARLES ROBSON
Observer Staff Writer

The N.C. attorney general believes that a Charlotte motel manager did not violate the criminal law when he refused to serve local Negroes at the motel restaurant.

On being informed of the opinion Tuesday Dr. R. A. Hawkins, Charlotte integration leader, said that his organization would consider whether to demonstrate at the motel or start a civil suit.

The opinion came in a letter from Assistant Attorney General Ralph Moody to City Recorder's Court Solicitor William H. Scarborough.

Hawkins and attorney Thomas H. Wyche had asked Scarborough to have Abel M. Girault, manager of the Manger Motel Inn, arrested for refusing to let them eat at the motel's Hearth and Embers restaurant on May 2.

Scarborough had written Attorney General Wade Bruton Thursday at the request of Hawkins and Wyche. He said Tuesday that, in view of the reply from Bruton's office, he would inform city police desk sergeants not to issue a warrant

"You can be sure some action will be taken," Hawkins, head of the Mecklenburg Organization for Political Affairs (MOPA), promised.

"We'll have to discuss taking civil court action, but we're certainty considering peaceful demonstrations at these motels and hotels."

He was referring to five motels and hotels he has accused of backing out of a desegregation with them the week before the N.C. Trade Fair opened.

He would not say exactly what form the demonstrations would take nor when they might be expected to begin.

"We have been testing these places to see if they would serve Negroes," he said, "and we've found that they've reneged on the agreement.

"We want to show that they have a moral and legal responsibility to live up to it."

Hawkins said that of the seven hotels and motels participating in the original agreement only two, the Queen Charlotte hotel and the Sheraton-Barringer were accepting Negroes as guests.

Hawkins and Wyche had asked for criminal prosecution of the Manger manager under a state law requiring that, "Every innkeeper shall at all times provide suitable food, rooms, beds and bedding for strangers and travelers whom he may accept as guests in his inn or hotel."

The assisant attorney general's letter said: ". . . this statute in my opinion changes the common law and leaves it up to the judgment of the innkeeper as to whether he will accept any guest or lodger or refuse to do so."

Moody, civil rights specialist for the attorney general, said that he thought the refusal of service was governed by State vs. Avent, a case invotving tespassing at a Kress' store by Negroes in Durham.

The conviction of Avent for trespassing was upheld by the N.C. Supreme Court and is now under consideration by the U.S, Supreme Court.

Hawkins, a dentist, expressed dissatisfaction with Moody's citation of this case.

"It seems like everybody is waiting on the trespass law," he said. "But we're confident we're going to win that case. The attorney general is hiding behind it."

Attorney Wyche said that other cases that might have bearing on the criminal nature of the innkeeper's statute had been referred to the attorney general but that the letter, mailed Friday, apparently had not erached him when he answered Scarborough's original request.

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 1 B

Date: MAY 21 1963

Pub. Accomm N.C

Charlotte Negroes March In 1st Protest Since August

By JAMES K. BATTEN
Observer Staff Writer

A spirited but orderly band of singing, hand-clapping Negro students marched through downtown Charlotte Monday afternoon in the first public protest against segregation here since August.

The group about 65 strong and made up largely of Negro students from Johnson C. Smith University, walked the two miles from the campus to the Mecklenburg County Courthouse without incident.

Led by two boys carrying the American and Christian flags, the procession arrived at the steps of the courthouse about 1:45 p.m. and cheered as a Negro leader asserted that the time for action has come.

"We are not going to cooperate any more with segregation," shouted Dr. R. A. Hawkins, the organizer of the march. "Segregation is a sin and we cannot compromise with this sin."

The youngsters and a few adults greeted Hawkins' words with approving choruses of "Yeah!" and "No!"

At one point, the Negro speaker said, "We shall not be pacified with gradualism; we shall not be satisfied with tokenism. We want freedom and we want it now."

The Negroes picked the anniversary of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence in 1775 for their first anti - segregation demonstration since late last summer.

The theme of the 15-minute rally at the courthouse was that Negro citizens had not shared in the freedom demanded from the British by Mecklenburg residents nearly 190 years ago.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm - N.C.

SERS Library E

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 1C
Date: MAY 22 1963

Charlotte Needs No 'D-Day' To Combat Discrimination

Charlotte's first anti-segregation demonstration since last summer, a march from Johnson C. Smith University followed by a 15-minute rally at the courthouse on Mecklenburg Independence Day, was concluded by a Negro spokesman's statement that "any day might be D-Day" for an intensified protest movement here.

"They can either make this an open and democratic city or there is going to be a long siege," declared Dr. R. A. Hawkins. "They can choose which way it's going to be."

Let us hope that the kind of experience that has come in recent days to Raleigh and Greensboro, though far less abrasive than that in Birmingham, is not going to be Charlotte's lot.

Now is the time to link reasonable patience to sincere effort by white and Negro leaders to remove sources of racial discrimination to the degree that they can be removed by compliance with law and voluntary action.

★ ★ ★

Dr. Hawkins' use of "they" refers, by his own definition, to the political and economic "power structure" in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County. This is a force which has had and will continue to have a great amount of influence in shaping community acceptance of change.

There has been a great deal of orderly progress in lowering racial bars here in recent years. More needs to be done, but it will be in the interest of the entire community if further advances are achieved with a minimum of friction and misunderstanding.

The immediate goal of Hawkins and those who support his campaign is the acceptance of Negro patronage in businesses catering to the general public, including theaters, restaurants, hotels and motels. He is also asking non-discriminatory policies of admission and treatment in hospitals, and geographical assignment of children to the public schools.

Some Charlotte eating places have already adopted a policy of serving patrons without regard to race. There appeared to be a breakthrough in the hotel and motel field during the Trade Fair, but this agreement was reported to have collapsed with charges of "bad faith" on both sides. There has been a relaxation of segregation practices at Memorial Hospital and a first step toward school assignments on a geographical basis.

None of these advances satisfy the demand by Monday's marchers for "the elimination of all segregation" in public facilities or places of business serving the public. The political and economic "power structure," even admitting its strength, runs head-long into private property rights in trying to obtain a uniform policy of non-discrimination.

Hawkins would have the city council pass a city ordinance, using its licensing and permit power to forbid racial discrimination in all places of public accommodation. He cites Baltimore and St. Louis as cities among 70 or so in the country adopting such an ordinance, and says Charlotte should do the same.

Here, however, the Supreme Court itself has hesitated to abrogate one traditional right to serve another. The city council has been understandably reluctant to take such action. Such an ordinance would be a poor substitute, at any rate, for voluntary action that would not merely paper over the problem of discrimination, as is the case in most cities with such a law on the books.

★ ★ ★

Certainly, resolutions from the Chamber of Commerce, the Charlotte Merchants Association and other civic groups would be helpful, as in Raleigh and Greensboro, in setting the general tone of the anti-discrimination movement. Meanwhile, the Mayor's Community Relations Committee must use all of its persuasive power to gain agreements that will maintain this community's progress and equilibrium.

Charlotte has managed, peaceably, to be a leader in this part of the country in desegregating schools, libraries, and recreational and other public facilities.

Our people have accepted and followed wise and moderate leadership. There is no evidence that they are any less ready to follow it now.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
P 2A
Date: MAY 24 1963

3-YEAR HISTORY

2A

Chamber's Action A Significant One

By DOUGLAS CONNAH Jr.
Observer Staff Writer

The resolution adopted by the Chamber of Commerce directors Thursday was one of the more significant events since pressure to desegregate public business establishments began here more than three years ago.

The chamber's resolution is not in any way binding on local businessmen who operate restaurants, hotels and motels, theaters and other businesses serving the general public.

But the chamber has widespread influence in Charlotte that has been used many times in the past.

The Negro protest movement began here on Feb. 9, 1960, when more than 200 Johnson C. Smith University students opened sit-in demonstrations at the lunch counters of eight downtown stores.

They were using a technique first employed in Greensboro a week earlier.

Students demonstrated against Belk's, Ivey's, Liggett's Drug Co., S. H. Krss Co., F. W. Woolworth Co., W. T. Grant Co., McLellan's and Sears, Roebuck.

Rather than desegregate, store managers closed the lunch counters.

The sit-ins continuedoff and on until that April, when Mayor James S. Smith announced that he would form a biracial Friendly Relations Committee to mediate a settlement as well as work on other continuing racial problems.

On June 22 the students reopened the demonstrations because, they said, the merchants had refused invitations to appear before the mayor's committee.

The sit-ins and picketings lasted until July 9, when seven of the stores — all but Sears — desegregated their lunch counters after negotiations with the mayor's committee. Several months later Sears desegregated its lunchroom.

For more than a year the direct - action movement lay dormant, with only occasional, isolated demonstrations. Some of the downtown stores extended desegregation to their suburban branches.

Then, on Nov. 30, 1961, the students returned to downtown, seeking service in a hotel and motel, two theaters and some restaurants.

Mayor Stan R. Brookshire's Community Relations Committee, a new version of the old Friendly Relations Committee, was called into action, and Belk's basement cafeteria and Ivey's Tulip Terrace soon were opened to Negroes.

Some other desegregation efforts have failed — demonstrations have been directed unsuccessfully at the S & W Cafeterias, at theaters, the Manger Motor Inn and elsewhere.

Last summer the Congress of Racial Equality sponsored a massive "Freedom Highways" movement throughout the South, with Negroes seeking service at branches of Howard Johnson's, the Holiday Inn and other chains.

Locally, the "Freedom Highways" protests had little effect — Charlotte's three Howard Johnson's restaurants still are segregated. More than 40 Negroes were arrested for trespassing and the movement petered out when the school year began.

Just last month the mayor's committee announced that several unnamed hotels and motels would desegregate.

Negro leaders have since charged, however, that only two hotels lived up to the bargain.

In the past few weeks it appeared likely that Charlotte would be in for renewed large-scale demonstrations unless somebody did something.

Events in Birmingham, Nashville, Greensboro, Durham and Raleigh intensified this feeling.

Thursday the Chamber of Commerce did something.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

SERS Library 8

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p 2C
Date: MAY 24 1963

A Handhold On Civic Greatness 2C

Thursday, May 23, 1963, could be the day leading to a major breakthrough in human relationships for the Queen City and the Carolinas. A failure to follow through on the resolution adopted without dissent by the Chamber of Commerce board of directors would mark it just as distinctly as the date on which we momentarily had an opportunity in our grasp, and muffed it.

The Chamber directors were not merely being economically pragmatic when they asked all businesses soliciting the patronage of the general public to adopt a policy of color blindness.

There was enlightened self-interest to be sure. But it goes deeper than that.

These men want a policy of openness for Charlotte because they believe it to be the right, the humane, the sensible, the religious and the American thing to do. They reason rightly that the city, the region and the nation move now with halting steps when steady cadence is needed to drown the sounds of racial discord in our land.

There is moral force in this resolution. It is a simple, clear statement of conviction that has ever been the forte of strong and enlightened leadership.

There is also much economic common sense.

To be implemented, this resolution must have the understanding of all who come within its reach.

There must be an answer in kind from those who have been discriminated against. They must help by their understanding and patience if every obstacle is not moved overnight. They must be sensible as well as sensitive in the knowledge that once the leadership of this community has set its course, regardless of the individual problems encountered, it will not swerve from it until all citizens can breathe free in the public ways.

There must be a response of support from the white community as individual judgment moves into the area where group decision once held sway. Every influence must be brought to bear on the people of Charlotte and our visitors to evolve a pattern of tolerance and understanding.

Charlotte must set its sights on becoming a city of good human relations, not mere race relations. The human aspect must not be lost sight of, for in its potential of sincerity and spontaneity lie the seeds which distinguish a great community from one which deals in expediency.

To change long established customs and respond to all citizens as individuals will not be easy, but it can be done with the effort required for any significant human accomplishment.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

SERS Library

RALEIGH NEWS AND
OBSERVER (N. C.)
Date: MAY 24 1963 p. 1

arlotte Acts to Lift Racial Ban

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Chamber of Commerce recommended Thursday the immediate integration of all business firms in Charlotte, largest city in North Carolina.

"We are facing a fact we have known," Mayor Stan Brookshire said after the meeting. "Without pressure, we are taking this step." The chamber apparently was not aware a Negro integrationist leader Thursday promised massive Charlotte demonstrations.

Elsewhere in North Carolina:

The acting president of North Carolina Agricultural & Technical College at Greensboro warned all A&T students to remain on campus because "serious negotiations are under way at this moment." A&T students have comprised the bulk of demonstrators who have marched for 12 consecutive nights through downtown Greensboro.

A mass march protesting segregation was called for Friday night in High Point, furniture-making city near Greensboro. John W. Langford of the High Point chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) said James Farmer of New York, national CORE director, will speak at a meeting preceding the demonstration.

In Durham, where a truce prevails while a bi-racial committee named by Mayor R. Wense Grabarek seeks a solution, Negro leaders thanked Grabarek for his "diligent efforts"—but said demonstrations may resume at any time unless there is "noticeable progress."

The Charlotte Chamber of Commerce resolution, which followed similar action by business groups in Greensboro, was adopted by the Board of Directors without a dissenting vote.

There have been only intermittent demonstrations in Charlotte. But Dr. R. A. Hawkins, Negro integration leader, said Thursday mass demonstrations will come "very soon" unless public facilities are integrated.

"The broadside attack of the demonstrations will be patterned after the recent demonstrations in Birmingham, Greensboro, Raleigh and Durham," Dr. Hawkins said. "These others will be small by comparison."

A&T students at Greensboro were told they will be dismissed from college if they do not remain on campus.

Dr. L. C. Dowdy, acting president of the state-supported college for Negroes, said in a letter to the students:

"Serious negotiations are under way at this moment. It is requested and urged that all students remain on the college campus nuitl further notice. Violation of this request will result in the dismissal from college."

James Farmer, the CORE director, declined to comment on the letter, but he said downtown demonstrations wil be continued.

"We expect a full following," Farmer said.

More than 1,000 A&T College students were arrested in previous demonstrations. About 900 were released from jail Wednesday morning in custody of Dr. Dowdy.

Meanwhile, Greensboro Mayor David Schenck said at a news conference that he believes complete integration of restaurants and theaters will be required before the racial unrest here can be ended.

Pattern Established.

Schenck said, "I think the pattern is well established. The trend is toward integration, and I think it will continue."

He warned that any action taken by a special Human Relations Committee studying the problem must be approved by individual merchants before it can be effective. Managers of the four biggest targets of recent integration attempts have stated they will not serve Negroes.

After the Charlotte chamber adopted its integrate-now resolution, Chamber president J. Ed Burnside said:

"We do not want to tell any man what to do or what not to do. We only wish to state what we think is the right principle." He emphasized the action was "at the request of no organization and entirely of our own volition."

Mayor Brookshire, saying the chamber represents Charlotte's business, church and civic leadership, declared, "I feel the total city will follow this leadership." He expressed hope the move will ensure harmony in Charlotte and "be an example for other cities."

Meanwhile, Negro students continued demonstrations against segregation policies of local businesses Thursday for the fourth consecutive day. An estimated 500 marched through the downtown section, singing and clapping hands. No attempts to enter segregated theaters and restaurants were made. Several businesses continued their policy of closing their doors during the demonstration.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p 38
Date: MAY 28 1963

Board Backs Integration Resolution

3"

A Chamber of Commerce resolution that asks local business establishments to serve people of all races was endorsed Monday by the Board of County Commissioners.

Chairman Charles M. Lowe said Monday he felt the commissioners should take note of and approve the chamber's action of Thursday.

Commissioner Henry B. Wilmer made the motion, saying "that we are appreciative and glad to see the action they have taken . . . and that we are happy to endorse their thinking."

Commissioner J. Frank Blythe asked what was included in the chamber's resolution. Lowe said it would affect primarily hotels, motels, restaurants and theaters.

"And the thinking was that this be done on a voluntary basis," he said, "without sit-ins, parades, economic boycotts and the like on the part of Negroes."

Blythe seconded the motion and it passed unanimously.

In other action, Monday the commissioners appointed J. B. Watts of York Road to the City-County Planning Commission. He is vice president of Winchester Surgical Supply Co.

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 1
Date: MAY 30 1963

8 Hotels, Motels Will Desegregate

By JAMES K. BATTEN
Observer Staff Writer

Small groups of prominent white and Negro leaders lunched together at five leading Charlotte hotels and motels Wednesday as a prelude to complete desegregation of these and other establishments this weekend.

Wednesday's development, announced at a 4 p.m. press conference at City Hall, climaxed six days of intensive negotiations between white leaders and representatives of at least eight hotels and motels.

According to the terms of the agreement the identity of the establishments involved will not be announced until Friday.

Mayor Stan R. Brookshire, who made the announcement along with Dr. John R. Cunningham who heads the Mayor's Community Relations Committee, had this to say:

"This community is voluntarily facing up to what it thinks is right and in the best interest of continued progress, prosperity and racial harmony. This action represents acceptance of the principle that discrimination based on the color of a man's skin is legally and morally wrong and economically unsound."

As Brookshire and Cunningham explained it, the agreement would work this way:

Negro and white citizens, in groups of two to six, were to lunch together on Wednesday, today and Friday at five unnamed hotels and motels that have restaurants on their premises.

On Friday three other motels that operate no dining facilities will join with the orginal five in declaring publicly that, beginning Saturday, they will be open to all persons regardless of race.

Both Cunningham and Brookshire said they hoped that more motels and hotels would add their names to the desegregated list before publication Friday.

The new agreement came less than a week after the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution last Thursday urging managers of places of public accommodation to open their doors to Negroes.

Meetings between White leaders and the hotel and motel managers have been held almost daily since Thursday.

Among those involved in the bargaining, in addition to the mayor and Cunningham, was J. Ed Burnside, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

While Wednesday's announcement stressed the voluntary nature of the desegregation move, it was no secret that community leaders had been gravely concerned by the prospect of Negro demonstrations in Charlotte.

While other cities in North Carolina and the South have been plagued this spring by demonstrations and racial violence, Charlotte has had only one indication of impatience by local Negroes.

That came on May 20, when Negro leader Dr. R. A. Hawkins led a youthful crowd of about 65 Negroes on a two-mile march from Johnson C. Smith University to the Mecklenburg County Courthouse.

Hawkins praised Wednesday's announcements as "a step in the direction we have been asking for," and said that demontrations planned for Friday had een canceled.

While talks have been in progress with restaurant and theater wners, there apparently has een no agreement. Cunningham aid in his prepared statement, however, that "progress seems likely" in both areas "in the near future."

Dr. Rufus P. Perry, the president of Johnson C. Smith University, was one of the Negroes who lunched Wednesday in a local hotel with three clergymen.

"I don't think anybody even looked at us," Perry said. "Nobody paid any attention; I imagine some people never saw us."

The college president said his nch of shrimp and crab in eam sauce was "very good."

"It would compare favorably ith those I've had at the Walorf-Astoria and the Hilton ain," he said.

Both Brookshire and Cunningam, a noted Southern Presbyrian leader, joined mixed oups for lunch Wednesday. nningham estimated that out 30 whites and 20 Negroes ould be involved over the threey period.

The text of the mayor's statement follows:

"This community is voluntarily facing up to what it thinks is right and in the best interest of continued progress, prosperity and racial harmony.

"This action represents acceptance of the principle that discrimination based on the color of a man's skin is legally and morally wrong and economically unsound.

"I commend the earnest and effective efforts of the mayor's biracial Community Relations Committee, under the able guidance of Dr. John Cunningham, for establishing a climate of understanding and good will which makes this progressive step possible. I am appreciative of the efforts and patience of our Negro leaders and the splendid manner in which they have cooperated. I applaud the wisdom and courage of those business firms in their actions in dropping the bars of discrimination among our citizens.

"I am also appreciative of the splendid support of business, civic, and church leadership of our city as represented by recent action of the Chamber of Commerce board.

"I sincerely hope and believe that our community will accept and support the measures that have been taken here to provide equal rights and opportunities for all of our citizens.

"I urge all citizens to accept individual responsibility as the price that must be paid for the benefits of a free society."

Dr. Cunningham's statement:

"As of today a group of five of the leading hotels and motels of Charlotte began a program of desegregating both their rooms and dining rooms according to a plan which had previously been agreed upon by the managements of these establishments and the Mayor's Committee on Community Relations and the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce. These groups represent a broad cross section of the businesses, educational groups and churches of the city.

"In addition, three leading motels which do not have restaurants are opening their facilities along with the other establishments to the patrons of both races after the conclusion which is to terminate on Friday, May 31st. During this three-day period white and Negro business and Church leaders are lunching together at the five establishments.

"These developments have had the cooperation and leadership of the Mayor's Committee for the past three years. This is the latest in a series of steps which have led to the desegregation of buses, public libraries, public parks, swimming pools, lunch counters, public hospitals, the police force and a number of churches in the community.

"Talks are continuing at the present time with the restaurant picture shows. Progress seems likely in both of these fields in the near future.

"Special credit is due Mayor Stanford Brookshire who has given sincere and constructive leadership to these efforts at every level for the past two years during which he has been in office. Action taken last week by the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, under the leadership of the President, Mr. J. E. Burnside, was also a major factor."

Microfilm Code No.

SERS Library

WINSTON - SALEM
JOURNAL (N.C.)
p. 1

Date: MAY 30 1963

Pub. Accomm. N.C.

Biracial Groups Eat Together At Five Charlotte Hostelries

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Negroes and whites for the first time sat down to lunch together Wednesday in five leading Charlotte hotels and motels.

The five hostelries also are beginning a program of opening their sleeping accommodations to both races, announced Dr. John R. Cunningham, chairman of a biracial committee named by Mayor Stan Brookshire.

Dr. Cunningham did not identify the five establishments. He said selected groups of whites and Negroes will patronize the five places for three days of "adjustment" and they will be identified Friday.

The committee chairman said three additional motels which do not have restaurants also are beginning a program of opening their rooms to both races. He did not name them.

Dr. Cunningham said the desegregation program began after having been "previously agreed upon by the managements of these establishments and the mayor's committee on community relations and the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce."

The integration came only six days after chamber directors unanimously recommended that businesses serving the general public serve "all customers without regard to race, creed or color."

After Wednesday's visit to the hotels and motels by the biracial group, Mayor Brookshire said:

"This community is voluntarily facing up to what it thinks is right, and in the best interests of continued progress, prosperity and racial harmony. This action represents acceptance of the principle that discrimination based on the color of a man's skin is legally and morally wrong, and economically unsound."

Charlotte has had only intermittent integration demonstrations. But a Negro spokesman recently promised massive demonstrations unless establishments serving the public lower racial bars.

Asked how the Negroes were received in Wednesday's integration moves, Dr. Cunningham quoted one of them as saying, "Not a soul seemed to pay any attention." Dr. Cunningham said management personnel "met us at the door" and there was no adverse reaction from other patrons.

Waitresses, he added, were "very nice."

Dr. Cunningham, former president of Davidson College near Charlotte, said "this is the latest in a series of steps which have led to the desegregation of buses, public libraries, public parks, swimming pools, lunch counters, public hospitals, the police force and a number of churches in the community."

He said talks are continuing with operators of theaters in this largest city in North Carolina and "progress seems likely."

No cafeteries or restaurants, except those in the five hotels and motels, were involved in Wednesday's announcement. Dr. Cunningham said efforts were being made to work out a desegregation program within the Charlotte restaurant association.

About 50 persons, including about 20 Negroes, will participate in the series of visits through Friday to the five establishments involved in the agreement. The mayor and Dr. Cunningham would not name the persons involved, but said they were leaders in the community.

Both spokesmen said they hoped there would be no incidents during the three-day period. Brookshire said, "There is general agreement among the Negro leadership" to try to avoid any incidents.

They said Dr. R. A. Hawkins, a Charlotte Negro integration leader, was "filled in" on the developments. Dr. Hawkins is not a member of the biracial committee. Last week Dr. Hawkins said massive demonstrations would be launched unless public facilities were desegregated.

Brookshire commended Dr. Cunningham's biracial committee. He said the committee had established "a climate of understanding and goodwill which makes this progressive step possible."

"I am appreciative of the efforts and patience of our Negro leaders and the splendid manner in which they have cooperated. I applaud the wisdom and courage of those business firms in their actions in dropping the bars of discrimination among our citizens," the mayor continued.

"I sincerely hope and believe our community will accept and support the measures that have been taken," Brookshire continued. "I urge all citizens to accept individual responsibility as the price that must be paid for the benefits of a free society."

Before meeting with newsmen, Brookshire said, "Today is a very significant day in the history of Charlotte." He added, "I would say the Chamber of Commerce meeting last Thursday (which called for integration of public establishments) was responsible for a great deal of thought and consideration" in the community.

SERS Library

good

CHARLESTON NEWS
AND COURIER (S.C.)
p1
Date: MAY 31 1963

#1

Pub Accom - NC

Racial Woes Plague Ten N.C. Cities

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Racial unrest is beginning to become evident in South Carolina's sister state to the North. To cover the changing pattern of race relations there, The News and Courier has sent one of its top reporters, Leverne Prosser, a native of South Carolina and a graduate of the University of South Carolina, to give a report in depth on the situation. This is the first of these reports.)

By LEVERNE PROSSER
Roving Reporter

CHARLOTTE — An uneasy mixture of fear and resentment — spawned by ominous threats of massive demonstrations by thousands of impatient Negroes — haunted 10 North Carolina cities Thursday.

The uneasiness has spread through High Point, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Raleigh, Durham, Thomasville, Edenton, Greensboro, Winston Salem and Charlotte.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and Congress for Racial Equality (CORE) have stepped up calculated efforts to force reluctant white North Carolinians to completely swallow what a Charlotte Negro calls "the integration pill they've only been nibbling at."

The middle-aged Negro, operator of a cafe within the shadow of Charlotte's Tryon Street skyscrapers, contends government and business officials throughout the state "have plenty to be scared about." He said Negroes "have passed the state of caring whether or not white people resent integration moves."

After getting assurances his request for anonymity would be honored, he boasted: "The odds are all in the favor of the Negro. He has the federal court, President Kennedy and his brother Robert and responsible North Carolina leaders on his side when he warns of demonstrations if racial barriers are not "completely erased."

There is apparently a high degree of truth in the businessman's comment. He has to look no further than the Charlotte City Hall and Chamber of Commerce to support his theory "Threats of demonstrations may be all that's needed to wipe out segregation in North Carolina."

Ironically, threats of freedom marches, sit-ins and boycotts seem out of place when considering the almost frantic efforts being made by Charlotte Mayor Stan R. Brookshire and Chamber of Commerce President J. E. Burnside to integrate all lodging, dining and shopping facilities in the Carolinas' biggest city.

Charlotte's public schools and other governmental facilities were desegregated in 1957. Since that time, city officials have pressed for removal of all racial bars throughout Mecklenburg County.

City and business officials made it no secret here yesterday — in spite of what Mayor Brookshire regards "outstanding progress made in racial relations"—they are gravely concerned over the prospect of NAACP and CORE-inspired demonstrations in Charlotte.

Negro Leader Dr. R. A. Hawkins and about 70 young marchers sparked the concern May 20 when they trekked two miles from Johnson C. Smith University to the Mecklenburg Courthouse and promised "bigger marches involving hundreds and thousands" if the city's motels, hotels and restaurants failed to desegregate their facilities.

Demonstrations set for this week by Dr. Hawkins were delayed when Mayor Brookshire announced five restaurants operated by motels and hotels would be used in a program to integrate all such facilities

Microfilm Code No.

Public Accom - N.C

SERS Library E

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 2C

Date: JUN 2 1963

2-C

The Dialogue Must Be Continued

Charlotte has taken another firm step toward achieving equality of treatment for its citizens and its visitors, regardless of race, in an unusual approach to the desegregation of eight hotels and motels.

During a three-day trial period ending Friday, without an adverse incident of any description, white and Negro leaders of this community went to lunch together in the dining rooms of five of these establishments. There were approximately 50 persons involved.

This quiet affirmation of Charlotte's determination to create an atmosphere in which the individual ranks first in importance could have an influence for good over a span of many generations. The climate in which "beginnings" are made can spell the difference between triumph and tragedy.

And this was a "beginning" of the highest importance. This plan brought about an entirely new experience for many men who had lived together in this community all their lives, but who had never really enjoyed fellowship or communicated effectively. The sole barrier had been public opinion derived from a prejudice against skin color.

There may have been a collective sigh of relief as the first stage plan ended uneventfully with desegregation for lodging and meals at five establishments, and for lodging at three others which do not operate their own restaurants. But no one could truthfully say that there has been any more than a beginning.

The real test of the success of this venture lies ahead of us. If this mutually beneficial contact is categorized only as a three-day wonder, if it merely becomes window dressing to distract the community's attention at a crucial moment, it will have failed.

Only the first words have been spoken in a dialogue that must continue. Three months from now and six months from now, if there is to be effective communication between the races and individuals, white and Negro business and professional men should still be talking together over lunch about the things which concern all residents of Charlotte.

We commend all those men who pushed the bugaboo of race behind them in helping this community to find its way in human relations. They have sounded a sane and calming note which rings clearly over the discord in much of the land.

Microfilm Code No.

Pub. Accom. - N.C.

SERS Library

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N. C.)
p. 17 A

Date: JUN 12 1963

Theaters To Admit Negroes

Charlotte took another major step to eliminate sources of racial unrest Tuesday when its indoor movie theaters began a desegregation plan worked out by the Mayor's Community Relations Committee.

Under the plan, Negro patrons designated by members of the committee will attend the local theaters in limited numbers during an interim period.

•

Full desegregation is expected "in the near future," Dr. John R. Cunningham, chairman of the committee, said.

The step was announced Tuesday night in this formal statement by Cunningham:

"Effective yesterday, a number of indoor theaters in Charlotte began admitting Negro patrons under a plan worked out by the managers and the Mayor's Community Relations Committee.

"In the near future, we will survey the results. If there have been no problems . . . and I anticipate none . . . the theaters will then be opened to the general patronage of our Negro citizens.

"I am gratified that the theater owners, like the hotel and motel operators, have been so cooperative in working with our committee. I know that the citizens of our community will accept this plan with tolerance and good will."

Cunningham's statement did not identify the theaters.

He explained that representatives of his committee had held several meetings with the theater owners and managers since the Chamber of Commerce board of directors adopted on May 23 a resolution recommending the desegregation of business establishments catering to the general public.

He added that the plan did not include outdoor drive-in theaters at this time.

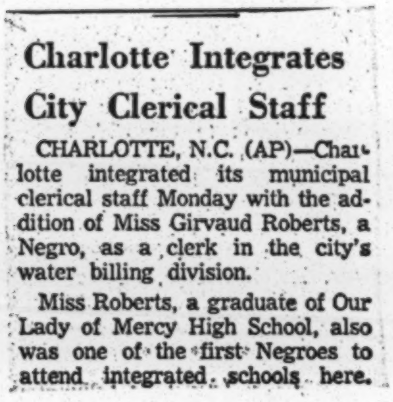
Microfilm Code No.

Pub Accom - NC

SERS Library

THE STATE
(Columbia, S.C.)
P 3A

Date: JUL 23 1963



Charlotte Integrates City Clerical Staff

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Charlotte integrated its municipal clerical staff Monday with the addition of Miss Girvaud Roberts, a Negro, as a clerk in the city's water billing division.

Miss Roberts, a graduate of Our Lady of Mercy High School, also was one of the first Negroes to attend integrated schools here.

Microfilm Code No.
~~Reapportionment - State~~

SERS Library Pub Accom - N.C.

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N.C.) p. 1C

Date OCT 6 1963

Public Hearings Set On Three S.C. Issues

1c

By AL LANIER

COLUMBIA, S.C.—(AP)—Three South Carolina legislative committees will crowd into the State House Wednesday for important public hearings on three touchy issues.

Interested persons will have an opportunity to give their views on controversies ranging from integration of state parks reshuffling of congressional districts and operations of the State Tax Commission.

The separate hearings will climax weeks of open meetings and behind-the-scenes investigative work by the three legislative groups.

A six-member House committee looking into allegations involving the integrity of the tax commission officials begins its hearing during the morning.

Rep. Wade Weatherford

The committee, headed by Rep. Wade Weatherford of Cherokee, will listen to scheduled witnesses in the morning session and will hear any others wishing to testify during the afternoon.

Afternoon sessions only will be conducted by the state parks group and the congressional redistricting committee.

Thus far the Weatherford committee has heard testimony that a few tax commission agents have accepted gifts of liquor from persons whose business operations they check.

However, the committee was told such incidents were isolated and did not sway the tax officials in performance of their duty.

The state parks committee, headed by Rep. J. C. Arrants of Kershaw, has held a series of public hearings throughout the state to sound out public sentiment. The assembly, which meets in January, will decide if the parks will be kept closed or if they will be integrated to conform with a federal court order.

Sentiment expressed at the previous hearings has been mostly for reopening the parks on at least a limited basis for sight-seeing only, despite integration. Swimming and other close-contact activities would be banned under the limited plan.

The congressional redistricting committee has before it a controversial reshuffling plan proposed by its chairman, Rep. B. W. Baker of Aiken.

Under Baker's plan, counties within all six congressional districts would be rearranged to even out population within each district and thus give individual voters more equal representation in the U. S. House of Representatives.

Microfilm Code No.
Pub Accom-NC

SERS Library L

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N.C.) P.2B

Date: OCT 16 1963

THE OBSERVER FORUM

Contest Setback For City

VB

The writer is a dramatics instructor in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School System.

RECENTLY, several Charlotte teen-age girls were sadly deluded of the American dream.

The Miss Teen-Age Charlotte contest sponsored by WSOC-TV was a striking setback for the city of Charlotte, now recognized as a leader in the cause for human dignity and equal liberties.

We cannot afford to pay the price for the remnants of natural and belated rights while the threads go lacking and overlooked. It is these threads that piece together the quilt of society.

JUST AS SPORTS in Negro high schools are deprived of equal, not just adequate news and photographic coverage in the local newspapers, so the Negro teen-age girls were deprived of the right to be in the Miss Teen-Age Charlotte contest.

The preliminary procedures leading up to the event were even more tragic. Application blanks were sent to Negro high schools inviting participation. Some of the girls even obtained blanks in person from WSOC-TV.

Under the illusion that they had been formally invited as "Charlotteens" to participate in what would eventually lead to the Miss Teen-Age "America" contest, the anxious youth began to work fervently on their talent presentation numbers to be done on TV.

PREREQUISITE to being accepted was a personality test of which the applicants were to be informed of the time of administration. None of the Negro girls was informed and much to their dismay, after hours of rehearsals, they became aware of the obvious fact that they were being excluded.

Call it a mistake, misinformation, or "technical difficulties," but the coaxial cable of communication has been irreparably damaged and the engineers are at fault in the human equation.

H. B. CAPLE
Charlotte

Promotion Manager Jon Caudle of WSOC-TV, upon notification of Mr. Caple's complaint, denied emphatically that there was any discrimination intended against Negro contestants. He pointed out, first, that Negro students would not have been asked to participate if the station had intended to attach racial limitations to the contest.

Mr. Caudle explained that this was a promotion of Teen-age Associates, Inc., of Dallas, Texas, with local rights to the contest purchased by WSOC-TV. The entry blank was furnished by Teen-Age Associates. It provided for information about the individual contestant, including a resume of current high school grades, and a photo was to accompany each application.

Personal interviews and talent tests were accorded only if contestants survived preliminary judging, which was based on the application blank data and photos of the applicants. Some 150 entries were received and 30 girls were selected from that group.

"We have no doubt," he said, "that talented white girls with attractive personalities were eliminated along with Negro girls in preliminary judging. It is not entirely satisfactory to use applications and photos in preliminary eliminations. But we endeavored to be just as fair as it was humanly possible to be."

Mr. Caudle added that the station management has made every effort, through its "Hour of Opportunity" program and other means, to serve its Negro viewers and build better race relations in the Charlotte area. The station will, he said, stand on its over-all record of performance as a defense against charges that it was not sincere in inviting Negro participation in the Miss Teen-Age Charlotte contest. Editors, The Observer.

GREENSBORO (N.C.)
DAILY NEWS p. 1B
Date NOV 16 1963

SERS Library Pub Accom - N.C.

Integration Of Business Evaluated

16

Reports Made By Committees

Leaders of bi-racial committees in Charlotte, Durham and Winston-Salem said yesterday that hotels, motels, restaurants and theaters in those cities have not lost business as a result of integrating.

Dr. John R. Cunningham, J. Ed Burnside and Mayor Stan Brookshire, all of Charlotte, and George Watts Hill Sr. of Durham and P. T. Melitas of Winston-Salem described what their cities have done in the way of public accommodations for Negroes. They spoke at a meeting of the Greensboro Commission on Human Relations in the Municipal Building.

All five speakers said that desegregation of public accomodations has to be done voluntarily if it is to work. They emphasized the necessity of cooperation between the power elite of both races and said newspaper and television publicity just aggravates the situation and makes it harder to negotiate.

About 50 Greensboro operators of eating places, hotels, motels and theaters attended the meeting. None of them asked any questions of the visiting speakers, although questions from the audience were permitted.

Claim Wide Open Towns

According to the speakers, public accommodations are wide open to Negroes in Charlotte, Durham and Winston-Salem as compared with Greensboro.

Dr. Cunningham, chairman of the Charlotte Bi-Racial Committee and a former president of Davidson College, said Charlotte is "completely" integrated as to lunch counters, public libraries, Chamber of Commerce membership, hospitals, schools, police force, hotels, motels, restaurants and most theaters.

Hill, a Durham banker, reported that city's leading hotel, all 11 of its motels and 95 per cent of the eating places have integrated since last May, when over 1,400 persons were arrested during Negro demonstrations.

"Those who desegregated have not suffered," Hill said. "There's always a big hullabaloo for three or four days after a place integrates, but then the customers begin to drift back."

Forsyth Situation

Melitas, a member of the Winston-Salem Bi-Racial Committee and president of the Forsyth County Innkeepers Association, said "a majority" of public accommodations have integrated in Winston-Salem without any serious fracases or mass demonstrations.

Melitas said about 45 eating places in the city are integrated and said motels with a total of 800 rooms now accept Negroes. He said several hundred Negroes in Winston-Salem recently for the Winston-Salem Teachers College Home-coming stayed in motels and ate in downtown restaurants without incident.

In Durham and Winston-Salem there was no public announcement about the places that were preparing to integrate. Hill said Durham has found the "voluntary approach without publication of names" is the best way to meet the problem.

W. O. Conrad, chairman of the Greensboro commission, asked Hill about rumors that former patrons of Durham hotels and motels now drive on to Raleigh.

"Nothing to it; our motels are full," Hill said.

Warns Of Demonstrations

Hill said the public in Durham has accepted desegregation in public accommodations, but he warned a resumption of demonstrations may change all that.

"I feel that if we have another outbreak of demonstrations, we will lose most of the progress we've made," he said.

Charlotteans also have accepted desegregated public accommodations, Mayor Brookshire said.

"Our experience in dropping discrimination has not produced any incidents," Brookshire said.

The procedure for desegregat- the public accommodations in the three cities, as outlined by the speakers, went about like this:

Appoint a committee to negotiate with the more militant Negroes on one hand and with the innkeepers, restaurateurs and movie operators on the other. Then try to persuade the demonstrators to tone down their demands and simultaneously try to convince the operators of public accommodation places that integration won't bankrupt them.

Microfilm Code No.
Dem

SERS Library

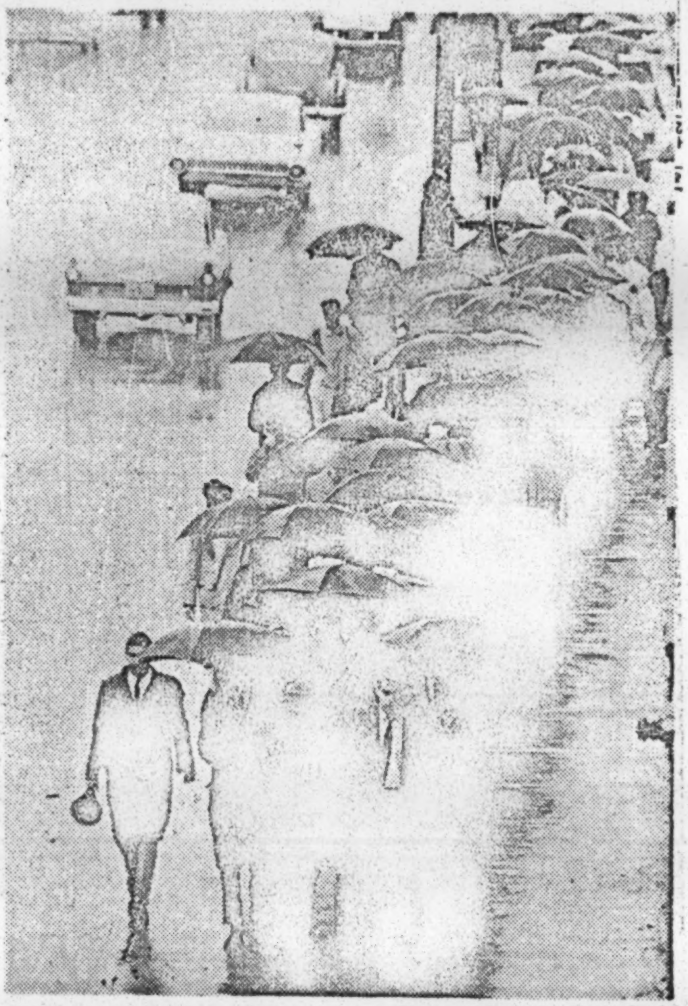
PN03

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER
(N.C.) p. 1D
Date: MAR 15 1964

File Charlotte

IN CHARLOTTE

1D



Observer Photo by Hank Daniel

Civil Rights marchers as they neared Charlotte Post Offic

Petitions Mailed To LBJ

By JAMES K. BATTEN
Observer Staff Writer

Five hundred fired-up college students, many of them white, marched a mile through a steady downpour Saturday afternoon to affirm to the world their belief in equality for the Negro.

The singing, sodden cavalcade wound its way down West Trade Street from the Johnson C. Smith University campus to the Main Post Office, where the marchers formed a big semicircle.

Then, at about 4:30 p.m., representatives of the nine participating colleges filed up to a red, white and blue mail box and dropped in petitions addressed to President Johnson urging him to push for a strong civil rights bill.

Joe Howell, a Davidson College senior from Nashville, Tenn. and organizer of the march, said that 2,300 students and faculty members had signed the petitions.

In addition to Davidson and Johnson C. Smith, colleges represented were Catawba, Livingston, Queens, Belmont Abbey, Charlotte College, Lenoir Rhyne and Pfeiffer. About 200 of the 500 marchers were white.

The march from the campus and back, which took nearly two hours, was watched by curious but generally silent onlookers.

About 10 city policemen were assigned to the march, mostly to handle traffic at intersections. No extra men were used.

There were a few taunts from white bystanders, but one elated Davidson student reported: "One white fellow came out of a slum house and congratulated us."

The day's events began at 3 p.m. with a high-spirited rally in Biddle Hall on the Johnson C. Smith campus. Each college's delegation stood to be recognized and was greeted by thunderous applause.

Pillars in the old, high-ceilinged auditorium had huge cardboard signs bearing civil rights slogans: "First Class Citizenship Now," "Liberty and Justice for All," and "FK's Dream Come True . . . Freedom."

A White Lawyer's Intimate Story

'My People Is The Enemy'

BY WILLIAM STRINGFELLOW

For a reconciliation between the races, white people "must give up the idea that they have and should continue indefinitely to have the prerogatives of white supremacy"

(From My People Is The Enemy, by William Stringfellow, Copyright © 1964 by William Stringfellow, and reprinted by permission of Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc.)

On one of those steaming, stinking, stifling nights that each summer brings to Harlem tenements, I had a dream:

> In the dream, I was walking in Harlem on 125th Street, in broad daylight. I seemed to be the only white man in sight. The passers-by stared at me, ruefully. Then two Negroes stopped me and asked for a light. While I searched my pockets for a match, one of them sank a knife into my belly. I fell. I bled. After a while, I died.

I woke quickly.

I felt my stomach; there wasn't any blood.
I smoked a cigarette and thought about the dream:

> The assault in the dream seemed unprovoked and vicious. The death in the dream seemed useless and, therefore, all the more expensive. The victim in the dream seemed innocent of offense against those who murdered him. Except, the victim was a white man. The victim was murdered by the black men because he was a white man. The murder was retribution. The motive was revenge.
> No white man is innocent.
> I am not innocent.

Then I cried.

DECEPTION is more humiliating than rejection. Exploitation is more inhuman than exclusion. Indifference is more embittering than open hostility. Condescension is more provocative than hate.

The estrangement of the races in the North is more volatile, more apt to explode into violence, as far as I can discern, than is the segregation of the races in the South. The alienation of the races in New York City or Chicago may turn out to be more calamitous than whatever happens in Jackson or Birmingham. For Negroes in the urban North, revenge may seem sweeter than equality, and violence more decisive than patience, and both more honorable than the tolerance of further appeasements and postponements.

Of course, I say this out of my own experience in New York—in Harlem—and from a good deal of contact with the people of the ghettos of some of the other Northern cities—Chicago, Boston, and Detroit, especially. But I assert it also in the perspective of some exposure to and experience in the South. During the years I lived and worked in Harlem I had occasion to visit the South a good many times. Sometimes, in Mississippi and in Louisiana, the Southern visits involved legal cases, but there were also trips to Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, Florida, and Arkansas, to lecture at law schools and colleges and to visit some of the churches of the South. There were opportunities to give legal counsel to those involved in the sit-ins and Freedom Rides and other demonstrations, both in the South and the North.

Indeed, I myself was involved in what must have been one of the original sit-ins—back in 1943—when I was in college in Maine. Some of us had observed that Negroes were not served at a certain hotel and that discrimination existed and was practiced in some other public accommodations, although it must be said that the issue was hardly noticed publicly in Maine because there were comparatively few Negroes in the state. There was, however, discrimination in some places against French Canadians who had migrated to Maine. A bill was introduced into the legislature that condemned racial or ethnic discrimination, and sought to establish a commission against discrimination. Several of us were working for the bill's enactment. One day the legislator who had sponsored the measure, a man of French extraction, came to see us to report that the legislation had almost no chance to pass, since there was so little public interest in the issue. After long discussion, it was decided that three of us would go with a Negro to the hotel which barred Negroes and ask to be served. It was arranged in advance that the legislator would be dining in the same hotel that evening and would have with him a newspaperman. The expectation was that we would ask to be served, and, as had been the custom in the hotel, be refused. We would protest, and the legislator, having noticed the incident, would intervene in our behalf while the newspaperman took photographs and got a story. The publicity of the incident was supposed to enhance the prospects for the passage of the bill. At the appointed hour, our party arrived at the hotel and went into the dining room. The senator and the reporter were halfway through their entrées. After we had been sitting at the table for several minutes, we noticed that the waiter had gone to speak to the manager. We could not hear their conversation, but soon the waiter came and asked to take our order. We had to order something of course. Ironically, we had already eaten at the college, so sure we were that the hotel would not serve us. Among the four of us we had only about five dollars, so the unfortunate senator ended up paying the check—for our second dinner of the evening! That was the result achieved in this pioneer sit-in.

It is against the background not only of Harlem, but of a bit broader involvement than that, that I conclude that the decisive front in the racial crisis in America is the urban North, and not the South. I have immense admiration for the restraint, dignity, and resourcefulness of the civil rights movement in the South, but the case remains that the immediate and stated objectives of that movement in the Southern jurisdictions are goals that have already been substantially achieved in the Northern cities, at least so far as court decisions and legislation are concerned, and also, to a significant degree, so far as integration in public transportation, hotels, restaurants, and the like are concerned. These things were attained in the North for the most part in the years after the Second World War, and what is to be seen, when one looks now at the Northern city, is what happens after these legal rights and remedies, which the Southern demonstrations seek to win, have been won. The Northern city, in other words, is setting the precedent for what is in store for the Southern cities, once the legal struggle to vindicate the civil rights of Negroes has been concluded. And if, in the days that lie immediately ahead, the relations between the races are not somehow resolved peacefully, then the whole nation is in for an ominous and dreadful holocaust.

Let no man take comfort in the racial troubles of the Northern cities, least of all any white man from the South, any more than any white Northerner can appease his conscience or rationalize his indifference by the racial strife in the South. No man is made innocent by the mere culpability of another man.

The Lost Frontier

Harlem had considered itself for a long time to be the pioneer Negro community, not only in the United States, but in the world. That seems a not unjustified pride. After all, New York City had been the place where the great succession of peoples of different tongues, nations, religions, and customs had come and found, albeit after patience and travail, mutual accommodation, a general acceptance, and a share in the prosperity, culture, political power, and common life of the city. New York City represented the hospitality of American democracy to each man and to all men. Surely the American Negro migrating from the South, and the West Indian Negro immigrating to the continent could find here, if anywhere, welcome, opportunity, dignity, and hope. Surely the Negroes of New York would become and be here the pioneers of their race, an example and encouragement and enhancement to all Negroes everywhere.

This pioneer psychology in Harlem was fed for years by the accumulation of civil rights laws and statutory disclaimers of racial discrimination, by the ceremonial use of Negroes in public affairs, by the praise of social equality for Negroes heard in the churches downtown, by the integration—although here it was from the outset the most obvious economic necessity—of public transportation and accommodations, by the gradual, if begrudged, inroads of Negroes into the lower echelons of public and quasi-public employment, by the notoriety that some few Negroes achieved in white society, particularly in athletics and entertainment.

Harlem was the leader, so long as the African nations remained largely colonial. Harlem was the pioneer, so long as the South remained segregated.

But now, under the impact of the events in Africa—the emergence of the new nations there and the increasingly decisive power of Africans in the United Nations—and with the disruption and accelerating disintegration of Southern segregation, Harlem frets over its destiny. Harlem wonders whether it has lost its pioneer initiative, and suspects that every achievement of Negroes in New York City and every opportunity of Negroes in New York City is illusory or fraudulent or guileful.

No wonder.

A few years ago, legislation was enacted in New York City barring discrimination in private multiple-dwelling units, a law much celebrated by the local politicians as a milestone for Negroes and other so-called minority groups in the city. Yet, few Negroes look for housing outside of Harlem without encountering discrimination, in one guise or another. And even where the discriminating circumstances are such as to legally justify filing a complaint, the procedure for administration of the law is so cumbersome as to be of practical consequence in only a handful of cases.

The new construction and renovation of housing in New York have been an efficient instrument of segregation. The East Side of Manhattan, for instance, from Yorkville to Gramercy Park, is more effectually segregated today than it was fifteen years ago because the vast reconstruction of that sector of the city has made the rental or purchase of housing beyond the means of most Harlem Negroes. Yet, at the same time, I have been offered an apartment in Yorkville "for pretty much whatever you want to pay" by a landlord who "wants to keep the building white."

And if a Negro family wants to move out of Harlem and to Queens, say, and purchase a house there, they will find that the banks are helping to resist such moves by charging both the seller and the buyer "placing fees" in order to merely receive a mortgage application. Insofar as Negroes disperse in the city, both the Negroes and those willing to sell housing to Negroes have to pay a penalty for it.

The effect of factors such as these, despite the legislative denunciations of discrimination, is to induce the formation of new ghettos for Negroes in the places in the Bronx or Queens or Brooklyn or Beacon or Newburgh to which Negroes move from the Harlem ghetto. As the Negro population increases, new Harlems are spawned, which suffer the same isolation from the rest of the city that the old Harlem has known for more than a half a century.

Housing is crucial, of course, because of the vicinity of neighborhood life and the importance of neighborhood institutions in the city. If housing is segregated, then there will also be, and is, de facto segregation of schools, hospitals, political clubs, taverns, stores, and churches, even without other considerations that favor segregation in education, religion, politics, and the like.

Where slums have been displaced by public housing projects in areas like Harlem, the people have often been exploited by private businessmen to take advantage of the ignorance of people with regard to their rights. One of the common frauds is the furniture dealer who visits a family which has been accepted for public housing, to inform them that a prerequisite for moving into their new apartment is that they have new furniture. Such transactions typically result in the commitment of the family to a heavily mortgaged purchase of furniture of indifferent or inferior quality, with such small installment payments that they pay many times over the true value of the goods and are lucky if the furniture lasts as long as the payments. Of course, default in the payments entitles the seller to repossess the property.

Ironically, many of these sales based upon misrepresentation are foisted on families who have been admitted to public housing because they are "good rent risks," that is, because they have a stable (if low) and steady (if insufficient) income. Some could, in fact, qualify for credit in reputable downtown department stores, but, as in the case of shopping for food, are reluctant to leave the neighborhood, feeling that their business is unwelcome in the "white" stores, and fearing rejection, because they are Negroes, if they apply for credit.

Negroes have too much and too long been not only the victims of such charlatan businessmen, but also have suffered exclusion both from employment in and ownership of business enterprises even within the ghetto. This is the situation which gives rise to efforts to boycott liquor stores, furniture stores, and other businesses in Harlem itself, and to campaigns to "buy black."

During the demonstrations of the summer of 1963 in one section of the city protesting discriminatory hiring practices of a certain restaurant chain, in which scores of arrests were made, it turned out that the strongest opposition to the demonstrations within the business community of that section was the crime syndicate. The businessmen of organized crime were distressed by the demonstrations because they caused a substantial increase in the numbers of policemen assigned to the area and thus made it more dangerous and difficult for drugs to be peddled and for the numbers racket to operate. It is also likely that the syndicate fears integration in business because it might eventually require admitting Negroes to the rackets as well as to legitimate businesses. The sanction invoked by the syndicate to line up the opposition of businessmen and others in the area was to threaten to call in and collect loans made by the syndicate to otherwise legitimate businessmen who might be ready to go along with integration in public accommodations, stores, and the like.

Or take hospitals. Not long ago I had a Negro client who had taken her child one Sunday to a public playground. The child, who was five years old, fell at the playground, hitting his head on the concrete surface. A few blocks away there is a private hospital, related, by the way, to one of the churches. The mother took her child there, and after waiting nearly an hour in the so-called emergency reception section, was finally interviewed by a doctor who explained that the mother would have to take the child to a public hospital, since she could not afford care at this institution and since that's what the public hospitals are for. Actually, of course, the private hospital could have been reimbursed by public welfare for any care given to the child, although at rates set by the welfare authorities rather than by the hospital administration. The nearest public hospital was four miles away, so, after having been turned away, the mother took the child there, walking part of the way, and going by bus part of the way, since she had no money for a taxi. After a further wait at the public hospital, the child was examined and it was found that he had suffered a serious injury which might permanently disable him. The doctors say that if the child had received prompt attention, the consequences of the injury would likely have been much less serious.

The mother in the case worked as a domestic. She told her employer about the matter, and he in turn reported it to me. It seemed likely that the reason the child had not been admitted to the private hospital was either because the family was poor or Negro, or, most likely, both. The mother, however, refused to make any formal complaint against the doctor and private hospital because, as she explained, she had no hope whatever that she could prevail. After all, why should she, a Negro, expect to be treated fairly or humanely by the law, any more than she had been by the private hospital, and, besides, the prosecution of the complaint would not heal her child. While the matter was being discussed, I called a friend of mine who is a reporter on one of the major New York newspapers, one which professes a great concern for human rights. I told him what had happened and suggested that it might be worthwhile publicizing this incident to call attention to discrimination in the private hospitals of the city. But he said that the incident was not newsworthy and that his paper received as many as a dozen reports a day of similar cases. "It's only a story for us," he said, "if the kid dies or if the injury is really grotesque!"

One of the uglier incidents, which was thought to be newsworthy, happened a few years ago in Harlem. A baby—just over two years old—developed a high fever, and his mother, a Negro, took him to a public hospital. The interne who examined the child told the mother that it was a minor respiratory infection, and prescribed some medicine. The mother took the child home, administered the medicine, but found in the next day or two that the fever did not abate. They returned to the hospital. This time a different interne was on duty, and he sent the mother and baby to the tuberculosis ward, saying that he suspected that this was the ailment. Testing there indicated that it was not, and again the mother and baby were discharged, after having been given some additional medicine. Three days later, when the baby's fever and discomfort persisted, the mother for the third time went to the hospital, waited her turn and, while the child was being examined by the doctor, it died. An autopsy subsequently established that the child had died, not from a respiratory infection, not from incipient tuberculosis, but from an infection caused by the bite of a rat. That's the sort of story that makes the newspapers. And that is the sort of incident—along with the playground case—that causes many Negroes to conclude that they can expect little care from hospitals or at least little competent care.

In short, in virtually every sector of the city's life—housing, education, and medical care, in business, politics, and employment, in the welfare administration and the enforcement of the law—Negroes still suffer discrimination and segregation, despite the legislative disclaimers of discrimination and the public promises of the politicians.

The tragedy and irony of Harlem is that while Negroes have been lost in fondness for the image of Harlem as the pioneer for all Negroes, Harlem has remained the place and symbol of persistent, if sometimes subtle, discrimination: excluded from the housing, politics, lawful protection, commercial enterprise, common culture, education, economic opportunity, sanitation, and free access characteristic of the rest of the city and taken for granted by the white people downtown.

The great affront to Harlem's pioneer destiny is that Harlem still exists.

The Passion for Revenge

This is no report, by the way, about the extreme racists within the Negro community, about the Black Muslims or the Black Nationalists, although both exist and increasingly thrive in Harlem and in the other great urban ghettos of the North, and they are by no means to be discounted or underestimated.

Indeed, as far as the Muslims are concerned, they are well financed—some say with funds from the Arab sources—and apparently they are congenial with the white racists of the American Nazi Party; at least I myself have seen some proof of their association with the American Nazi. But these extremists—the Muslims—seem to have made a fatal tactical mistake in their attempts to exploit the unrest and frustration and sentiment for revenge among American Negroes, especially in the North. They have required their adherents, not just to hate white men, though that is their central doctrine and essential appeal; they also require that their members renounce their religious inheritance—which in Harlem is either the Gospel tradition in Protestantism or, in the case of West Indian immigrants, Roman Catholicism—and embrace the indoctrination of a new and strange and unfamiliar religion (which, incidentally, bears little truthful resemblance to historic Islam), and to further submit to the discipline and rigorous piety of the new faith with respect to practical behavior from day to day. The Muslims have made hate too complicated and difficult and much too contingent upon a peculiar moralism to become a movement that receives mass support. Or so it seems to me, simply as an observer. Yet there is no doubt that the central emphasis of the extremists—like the Muslims—in the Negro communities of the North upon the simple hatred and rejection of white men because they are white men has enormous and increasing appeal among the Negroes of the city ghettos.

The great danger, for both Negroes and whites, is that some leader will emerge who will turn to his people and preach a blunt doctrine of hate and revenge. Because the ground has been so well prepared by extremists of both races, it will be difficult to organize long-suppressed emotion and legitimate grievances into a powerful movement. If that comes to pass, the peaceful demonstrations in the streets will cease and the revolution will become an insurrection.

If that does happen, if there is a violent and bloody calamity, perhaps white men will then recognize that the incumbent leadership of the Negro revolt—notably Martin Luther King, with his great dignity and discipline and restraint—has been the best friend of white Americans, both in the North and the South.

Each day of die-hard indifference of white people in the North, each day of die-hard segregation in the South, invites disaster by making it more difficult for the Negro leadership favoring and practicing nonviolent protest to maintain its leadership. The nonviolent demonstrations have, after all, been going on for about five years on a significant scale, and reached a climax in the March on Washington in August of 1963. If from these demonstrations there is not some tangible result to which the present Negro leadership can point, it may be expected with certainty that the patience of Negroes will be exhausted and they will turn to other leaders and to other tactics, and turn from seeking redress of their grievances to taking revenge for the indignities they have suffered through three hundred years of slavery and segregation.

No account is given here of the extremists in Harlem, but the danger is that Harlem—along with each of the little Harlems of the nation—is driven to extremity.

One sign of how much racism tempts Negroes is the degree to which some leaders among them, who are not Muslims or Nationalists, feel constrained to imitate and recite racist doctrines. Some of the statements of Congressman Adam Clayton Powell reflect this change in the mood and militancy of Harlem. I recall, for another instance, attending a rally in Harlem some time ago, protesting police brutality. One of the speakers was a certain Negro minister whom I know well and who has been very moderate. It happens that this man is of very fair complexion and could easily "pass" for a white man. When he began his speech he apologized for his light color, whereupon he was booed by the crowd. He persisted in his apology and said that though he was light he knew the full burden of being a Negro in America. More booing. He changed his tactic and launched into the most provocative and virulent racist speech I think I have ever heard, advocating, among other things, black supremacy and resort to violence to oppose the violence of the police. This time the crowd was with him. He had sensed the depth of their hostility and had appeased it.

But there is a sequel to the incident. After the rally I went to Greenwich Village where I had a date to have a drink with a white student who had just returned to the city from a Freedom Ride in Mississippi. As we sat in the restaurant, who should come in but the minister who had given the racist address at the rally. And guess who was with him? A white girl.

The important thing, so far as I am concerned, is not the duplicity of the minister—that is a problem he must live with all alone—but, rather, that he had felt that black supremacy and revenge had become so much the spirit of Harlem that he had to identify with it. He tried, first of all, to do that in his pitiful apology for his light skin, and, when that failed, he succeeded in gaining the crowd by outdoing even the professional racists in Harlem.

A particularly ominous sign of the extremisties of Negro animosity is the emergence in the open of Negro anti-Semitism. It is a complex phenomenon, and one which has, as far as I can observe, been spawned over a very long time. Part of the picture is a sense of the uniqueness of the Negro cause as such, and a reluctance among Negroes to identify their cause with that of other minorities, not only the Jews, but also, for example, Puerto Ricans. This sentiment much prevails, in spite of the historic interest of the Jews in America in the civil rights of all citizens; and, in the case of the Puerto Ricans, in spite of their common problems. Negroes do not want to be lumped together with other minorities, but there is evidence of particular resentment at being associated with the Jews.

One reason for this is the direct competition now between Negroes and Jews in politics. In New York, in the succession of migrations and immigrations of the different ethnic groups, there has been a succession to political power that roughly parallels the order of the immigrations. For a while the Germans were politically powerful, but they were displaced by the Irish, and the Irish in time, by the Italians as the dominant group. But in this succession, the Jews did not receive their turn. They were not welcome in politics, although their numbers justified political recognition. It is only comparatively recently, through the device of a third party with preponderantly Jewish leadership and membership and through the so-called reform movement in the Democratic Party, that the Jews have received something like the political recognition and patronage status that their numbers and social and economic influence would have brought to other groups long since. The problem is that the Jews have belatedly emerged in great strength in city politics at just the time when the Negro demand for political power and patronage has become insistent. Consequently, the two minorities which have suffered the most harsh discrimination in city politics are now in the position of competing with each other for political power and patronage rather than being united in a common political cause.

But politics is not the only cause of Negro anti-Semitism. There are unfortunate instances in which Negroes have endured ill-treatment at the hands of individual Jews. A typical instance is when tenants live in slums where the landlord happens to be Jewish. I have had two cases where the landlords of abominable slums were rabbis—which hardly improves the image of the Jews in the eyes of Negroes. The fact is, too, that some of the furniture dealers who have victimized Negroes moving into new housing have been Jewish, and this further feeds anti-Semitism.

Even the substantial philanthropy of Jews for the civil rights struggle and their sincere sympathy for the plight of the Negroes are greeted with suspicion and resentment. "Who are they to speak for us?" is a common form which this hostility takes. "Nobody but a Negro can know what it means to be a Negro" is the sentiment which rejects identification on the part of Jews with the Negro cause.

Yet, the overriding reason for Negro anti-Semitism, as far as I can discern, is that it is some awful emulation of the anti-Semitism so long prevalent and so unyielding among middle- and upper-class white Protestants and Catholics. For generations, these citizens, who have been ascendant in American society, have made anti-Semitism a mark of social and political status, something which, while it seldom took the form of open persecution, was, and still too much remains, an accepted attitude and practice.

Insofar as this is the basis of Negro anti-Semitism, it places white

Christians in an excruciating position. On one hand, they must now stand beside the Jews and share with the Jews the hostility of Negroes toward all white people, but, at the same time, they themselves are authors of one form of that very hostility—the anti-Semitism of Negroes which imitates the anti-Semitism of white Protestants and Catholics. Such is the economy of judgment.

In any event, now it is at least in the open, no longer latent and snide and festering, but brought into the open by the boycotts of Jewish merchants in Harlem, the rent strikes against some Jewish landlords, and the attempts to integrate some unions and industries that have heretofore been predominantly white and Jewish. Now that it is in the open, perhaps it can and will be dealt with in a way which both affirms the uniqueness of the Negro and the grandeur of the Negro's struggle, and also in some way works a reconciliation among Negroes and Jews and white Christians.

The spirit of revenge which stalks the streets of Harlem and the other urban ghettos is one which increasingly regards any association in public between Negro and white as suspect as a guilty association, one which calls into question the loyalty and racial pride of the Negro, one in which the Negro is thought to be tempted or intimidated or cajoled or purchased into some compromise of his integrity and identity as a Negro.

An event like the censure of A. Philip Randolph, the distinguished leader of the American Negro Labor Council, and virtually the patriarch of Harlem, by the Executive Council of the AFL-CIO for his exposure of racial discrimination in the unions—the proof of which has been amply documented—abets the suspicion that when a Negro tries to negotiate or collaborate with whites—even those who protest most that they are liberals—he must either betray himself and his people or suffer humiliation.

Even the word "Negro" is dropping from usage, in favor of the term "black man," in order to express the pride a man who is black should have in being black, and the disdain that black men should have toward white men.

There was a time, for example, when prostitution in New York involved supplying Negro girls to white patrons from downtown, and when some brothels in Harlem catered largely to white customers. Those days are gone. A Negro prostitute does not have white customers any more, no matter what the price, because to associate with white people is a disloyalty to her race and people and their cause, just as much for a prostitute as for any Uncle Tom in politics or the churches.

The intensity of the rejection of association with white people apparent among Negroes should be enough to put to rest the red herring in the civil rights crisis regarding intermarriage. The fact is, bluntly, that most Negroes hate white people. When there is, as there will surely be, integration in public life in America—housing and education and politics and jobs and public accommodations—there will not suddenly be a great increase in marriages between the races. At least I have detected no greater interest in the subject among Negroes than among whites. And why should there be much interest in the subject? Nobody is interested in marriage in the abstract. Marriage is a personal issue and decision, and it remains that with respect to marriages between the races, if marriage in a serious and responsible sense is being contemplated. The intermarriage issue is empirically baseless and, where advanced as an obstacle to the right of Negroes to be received and welcomed as citizens in public life, represents a gross, irrational, and stupid vanity on the part of white people.

And it is, aptly, the subject of ridicule.

I know a seminary professor, a native white Southerner, who is a strong advocate of the Negro cause. Long before the present crisis, he was an eloquent and effective witness in the South for civil rights. He has a very attractive daughter, eligible for marriage. He tells me that he is invariably asked, after giving a speech in support of civil rights, what he himself would do if a Negro proposed to his daughter. His stock answer to this query is to say: "First of all I would ask him whether he was a Protestant, a Catholic, or a Jew!"

Or, to show how ridiculous this intermarriage issue is from another point of view, I recollect recently being in the South and meeting an elderly Negro gentleman. He, as it happens—and as is the case with many Negroes of slave ancestry in this country—had a white father. Asked one day by a white Southerner about this, he replied that he indeed had a white father. The conversation was overheard by another Negro, who, after the white Southerner had departed, approached my friend and said: "Tom, don't you ever, ever do that again. Don't you ever admit to a white Southerner that your father was a white man—you tell 'em that it was your mother who was white!"

In other words, intermarriage, when posed as an abstract and impersonal issue, is irrelevant to the civil rights of Negro citizens. There is no serious evidence of any significant interest, abstractly and impersonally, in intermarriage among either whites or Negroes, whereas there is plenty of evidence of the slavery era having fostered many, many interracial liaisons, and later on, evidence of Negro prostitution for white customers. So let the specter of intermarriage be put to rest. The issue it really raises is the sexual ethics of white men outside of marriage, both in the days of slavery and in the days of the traveling salesman. And let two people fall in love and marry if they are given the gift of love, even though they be of different races, though they be different in any other way. They will have, and probably will continue to have for a long time, more difficulties than most marriages in this society. But the issue, then, is not so much society's as theirs, and if under the burdens which this society adds to any interracial marriage, they survive and prosper as man and wife and as a family, that only enhances the dignity and maturity of their love. It is, in any case, no reason to oppose or deny any Negro his place and his prerogatives as an American citizen.

Ironically, though the passion for revenge is active and, I fear, increasing within the Negro community, especially in the urban North, that which has subdued and controlled this passion is the same thing which, in the end, may be the proximate cause of vengeance and violence. What has mainly quieted the advocates of violence and counseled extraordinary restraint in the Negro revolution has been the leadership crisis within the Negro community itself. If any proof were needed—which none is—of the profound humanity of Negroes, it is supplied by the infighting and pettiness and personality conflicts, the competitiveness an throat-cutting within the Negro "establishment" itself. They are just like white people: scrapping and fighting and destroying each other. In all this maneuvering and internal struggle for leadership of the Negro revolution, the rest of the nation has gained some time to acknowledge and respond to the revolution. But now, that time is running out, and if the Negro leadership crisis (among CORE, NAACP, SCLC, the Urban League, the student movements, the black racists, and the remaining Uncle Toms) is not resolved, then racial chaos is urely in store for America. The masses of Negro people have, at last, been moved. They will not wait long for a leader, nor dally about who the leader is; they will move by themselves, if need be, without a leader, and the revolution will become an insurrection. They are tired, they are frustrated, they are angry, they are impatient, they are aggressive, they are ready for a leader, but—I think—they are also ready to go into the streets without a leader, all by themselves, as other men have had to do from time to time to defend and vindicate their own humanity.

The Depths of Estrangement

If one looks today at the cities of the North, where the decisive struggle in the Negro revolution is taking shape, the conclusion is inescapable that the estrangement between the races in the North is virtually complete. Despite the Northern civil rights legislation, despite the commissions on human rights, despite the ceremonial presence of Negroes in public life, despite the liberalism of many white Northerns, despite good intentions and naïve sincerity, racism has not been exorcised; indeed, racism increases. It not only becomes more evident and intransigent among white people, as Negroes press their claims with greater vigor and determination, but, latent in Negroes, it begins to emerge and flourish among them.

The truth is that in the years since the beginning of substantial migration of Negroes from the South to the northern cities, and of the immigration of Negroes from the West Indies to the Northern cities, there has been precious little honest, honorable, or significant communication between the races. The platitudes of tolerance, it turns out, conceal the practice of discrimination, for the American idea of tolerance—though it be less vehement than South Africa's apartheid—is, after all, a generically similar doctrine of racial coexistence. The promises of acceptance, freedom, and society in the Northern city have not been validated in education, jobs, housing, politics, or the equal protection of the law. Everything seemed fine for many years, but the condition of that tranquillity was the acquiescence of Negro citizens in a second-class status and a ghetto existence, separated from the comforts, mobility, and opportunities of life in the outer city.

The platitudes and promises, the liberalism and benign intentions of Northern white society during the last fifty years in which the Negro migration to the cities has taken place mean little when it remains true to this day that eighty-five per cent of all Negroes in metropolitan New York, for example, live in one or another of five neighborhoods which are virtually entirely black, and, in consequence, send their children to black schools, worship in black churches, dine at black restaurants, attend black movies theaters, and, in all the ordinary facets of community life, associate almost entirely with their fellow Negroes. The main contact with the white people for the multitude of Northern Negroes has been when some Negro has left Harlem to go to work—as a domestic in an East Side penthouse, as a Sanitation Department employee to collect the waste of the rest of the city, or to wait on tables in a downtown restaurant which seldom has a Negro customer, to scrub the floors of empty offices late at night, to sell body and dignity to a white businessman for a night, or to entertain white people in a club or bar.

Of course, in all this time, some Negroes have made the grade and have achieved a certain acceptance in and access to white society. Some have made it, as has been earlier mentioned, by becoming quislings. Only a few have made it without that humiliation. One is Dr. Anna Arnold Hedgeman. Despite the eminence she achieved, it is constructive to see how she constantly had to resist being "used" by white society.

Dr. Hedgeman began her professional career as a school teacher in the dark regions of Mississippi, but later, after some years of community work in the Midwest, moved to New York, where she was an executive with the Harlem Y.W.C.A., engaged in a multitude of efforts to raise the educational, occupational, and cultural level of Harlem. Long before the present sit-ins, and demonstrations—indeed before some of the leaders of the present Negro revolution were born—she and others, including A. Philip Randolph, were engaged in trying to qualify Negroes for jobs in urban society and then in trying to secure jobs for them. The reason the major department stores in New York have Negro salespeople today is a credit to Anna Hedgeman's pioneering work twenty years ago. From her baptism in teaching and community work, she went to Washington as the Executive Director of the National Council for a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission. She led the effort to enact legislation to make the wartime FEPC permanent. President Truman's support of this legislation motivated Mrs. Hedgeman to campaign and to raise funds from Negroes across the country for Truman's re-election in 1948. As a result she was appointed Assistant to Oscar Ewing, the head of the Federal Security Agency.

Mrs. Hedgeman later returned to New York City, was an assistant manager in the first campaign of Robert Wagner for Mayor of New York, and after his election, was invited to join his administration. It soon developed that this was an invitation to become an Uncle Tom. It was an invitation to have a Negro presence adorn the city administration but not engage in any serious work or exercise any significant influence on the policies of the administration.

Three different jobs were offered to Mrs. Hedgeman. One was a post already held by a Negro. She refused this on the grounds that it represented no gain for her people or recognition for her if she simply replaced another Negro in a position that had already been allocated to Negroes, in accordance with the de facto ethnic quota system which prevails in so much of New York politics.

Then she was asked if she would become a seventh deputy police commissioner, again replacing a Negro. Mrs. Hedgeman had no specific qualifications for such a position and would have been consigned there to a merely ceremonial role. She would have no part of that, in spite of the salary, prestige, and publicity to be gained by accepting.

Finally, she was tendered an office in the Mayor's Cabinet, which she did accept. In the Mayor's Cabinet in New York, there are several positions of ministers without portfolio, often acting as trouble shooters in city affairs, reporting and directly responsible to the Mayor without going through departmental channels. In practice, these offices are dispensed in a way that insures the ethnic balance the Mayor's administration needs to attract and hold support from the various ethnic blocs in the city's voting population. In appointing Mrs. Hedgeman, Mayor Wagner may have felt especially inspired, for here he had a representative of three of the city's neglected minorities: Mrs. Hedgeman was not only a Negro, but a woman and a Protestant!

The day of the inauguration came and, with suitable fanfare, the Cabinet was sworn in. It was not long before Mrs. Hedgeman discovered that she was not expected to show up at City Hall or to maintain an office there. Her function was to decorate occasions when it seemed important for the image of the administration to have a Negro or a woman or a Protestant, or some combination thereof, on the scene. Even after being sworn in as Assistant to the Mayor, she was again unsuccessfully offiered the police assignment—an inept attempt to relegate her to a nominal and vassal role. There was some consternation at City Hall in the davs and weeks that followed, because of Mrs. Hedgeman's insistence that she wanted to be a functioning, working member of the administration, not a ceremonial, occasional officer. It became clear that she was not interested in patronage for herself, but in accomplishing something for her people.

Eventually, as might have been predicted, Anna Hedgeman resigned from the Wagner administration. Her life of authentic concern shows her to have been a pioneer in the present civil rights demonstrations which have now forever established that Negroes will no longer be appeased by promises, platitudes, and nominal recognition.

It was Anna Hedgeman who, years ago had foreseen, before almost anyone else, either black or white, the gravity of the estrangement between Negroes and whites in American society, especially in the urban North. One afternoon she said to me: "Very few Negroes and white people are in real communication with each other. Those of us who can and do speak honestly, as you and I do, must keep in touch and help others to learn the quality of communication necessary if the races are to be reconciled. This will be very hard and will become more difficult as the crisis deepens, but that just makes it all the more important that we keep in touch."

I remember, not long ago, spending hours on the telephone receiving calls, in turn, from some of the Negro leaders in the civil rights struggle, and then from some of the white church leaders who had, somewhat belatedly and somewhat suddenly, become committed to direct action in the struggle. The calls were distressing because they showed how radical the estrangement of the races is, even (perchance especially) in the churches. There were two sorts of calls, on the occasion that I recollect: One kind came from white ecclesiastical officers who reported that the churches had decided to enter into direct action in support of the civil rights of Negroes, but they wanted to know whether this or that Negro was the one with whom to discuss the matter. The other kind of call came from Negroes who, having received inquiries from the white ecclesiastics, wanted to know if they should bother to meet with them, because they were not really sure that those who had called them could be trusted, and they wanted to know if I trusted the white people who had been involved in such overtures. This is not only proof of how wide the alienation between the races has become—it is not even widely known who to begin to try to talk with—but it is also evidence of how fragile and inadequate the avenues of tolerance and humanism are for serious and candid communication between the races.

I remember, also (this is another type of example), being invited more than two years ago to lecture at Columbia Law School on the racial crisis in the city, especially as it pertained to politics. I spoke before an audience of bright, young, white law students. They listened to the lecture, I thought, in a rather sullen way. The burden of the lecture is the burden of this chapter of my book—that one who becomes somehow immersed in some of the visceral and brutal realities of the racial crisis cannot escape a premonition of chaos and imminent disaster.

What I had to report that night was later to become the substance of an article "Race, Religion and Revenge," published by The Christian Century in their issue of February 14, 1962, pages 192 to 194. I gave the speech and said, I trust, what, as nearly as I could figure out as a white man, was and is the truth about the relations between races in the Northern cities. When I finished, there were a lot of comments from the law students. They fell, roughly, into two categories. The first alleged that I had been too harsh and "pessimistic" about the relations between the races in America, and these assertions were documented by the experiences of some of the students themselves, such as the fact that several of them had been exposed to Negroes in New York—taxi drivers and waiters and the like—and had been treated by them, in these situations, with civility and courtesy. After further discussion, it soon became apparent to the students that the casual contacts they had experienced with taxi drivers, elevator operators, waiters, and so on, did not constitute significant, nor even honest and honorable, communication with Negroes in the city. So that line of attack on my paper was abandoned. The line which took its place was much more revealing. They said, in effect, "Well, the trouble with you, Stringfellow, is that you have lived so long among them that you have begun to think like they do!" Their objection, finally, as far as I could comprehend it, was that I, by living and working those years in Harlem, had somehow ceased to be a white man, or at least had lost the capacity and authority to speak as a white man—through, I suppose, overexposure to Negroes.

If that be the case, let it be.

All this time I had thought that there is something unique about being a human being, something which transcends all of our human differences and diversities, whether of race or age or class or profession or sex or wealth or whatever. And if it must come to pass, in the agonizing tensions and fears which characterize the racial crisis, that any white man regards me—or any one of a number of other white men—as traitors to our race and heritage, then let that be. It can only prove how deep and pathetic the estrangement of the races has become in this society, so fond of boasting of its democracy and regard for humanity.

The estrangement is almost complete. The proof of that is in the so-called white liberals of the North, as much as, or perhaps more than, in the white segregationists of the South. For these white Northerners, in the professions of liberalism toward the Negroes, suffer from a mentality which still assumes that white men retain the initiative in the racial crisis and that white men have, and should continue to have, the prerogative of determining the pace of the Negro's emancipation and the terms of his reception into full citizenship. "What do the Negroes want?" they ask, not discerning that this very question embodies the essence of white supremacy, even though perhaps it be a more subtle and more genteel white supremacy than that characteristic of the irrational and crude segregationists of the Deep South.

That question—"What do the Negroes want?"—presupposes that what the Negroes want is for the whites to give, as if, in this society, the whites retain some right to dispense to the Negroes or to anybody else what is theirs by birthright and citizenship and, in truth, by their common humanity. White men have no authority—legally or morally—to rule upon any demands of Negroes. White men have only to acknowledge and honor at last the same civil and human rights for Negroes that they treasure for themselves.

Yet, the condescension among Northern whites is still conspicuous and, one might add, obnoxious. It is, in its own fashion, much more embittering and provocative, much more incitive and die-hard than the rabid, traditional, and sometimes pathological racism of the South. It not only assumes that whites hold the initiative in the resolution of the racial crisis, which is a fantasy, since the initiative has now conclusively passed into the hands of the Negroes, as the past few years attest; but it also still treats participation by white citizens in the civil rights struggle as a "good cause"—as a cause that ought to be supported by people of principle and conscience, just as aid to refugees might also be supported with time and money, or just as the work of the United Nations might be upheld with words and occasional actions.

The only thing is that this is no "good cause." Not at least in the sense that refugee assistance or apologetics for the United Nations may be. The Negro revolution is no ordinary charity to which enlightened whites should give their donations and their names. The Negro revolution is, rather, an authentic revolution, in which the whole prevailing social order of the nation is being overturned in the face of three hundred years of slavery, segregation, discrimination, and de facto racism throughout the country. Every important institution in the public life of the nation—education, employment, unions, churches, entertainment, housing, politics, commerce, investment, welfare, transportation, public accommodations—is immediately affected by this revolution, and this revolution will not spend its course until every such institution surrenders to its objectives. The only real question is the means by which the inevitable integration of American public life will take place peaceably or violently, realistically or obstinately, today or tomorrow.

This is no "good cause," in the conventional sense of the term. And to treat it as such—as so many Northern liberals still do—is in itself condescending and stupid. How, then, should white people, especially those in the North, treat this issue?

First of all, they must surrender their prerogative of decision. First of all, they must face the fact that the real decisions determining how the racial crisis will be resolved are for the Negroes to make. First of all, they must give up the idea that they have and should continue indefinitely to have the prerogatives of white supremacy. First, white people must die to that mentality by suffering the hostility and rejection of Negroes and by risking their lives and the future of this society in the hands of the Negroes.

That is the preface to reconciliation between black men and white men.

* * *

William Stringfellow, a New York lawyer and Episcopal layman, spent seven years as a Harlem resident, living among the slum-and-shanty-bred people whom he wanted to serve. It was a long way—socially and economically—from Northampton, Massachusetts, the middle-class suburb where he grew up. The essay published here is a chapter from his book, My People Is The Enemy, published in May by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. Subtitled, "An Autobiographical Polemic," the book is Mr. Stringfellow's account of his personal experiences among the poor and alienated of New York, but it is much more than that: it is a passionate plea for a rich and fortunate nation to seize its opportunities for human enrichment before it is too late.

The hypocrital judge in Miss. Like Pilate he will wash his hands
! Remember man
Thou art dust

Mike Royko

A Lot of Garbage Today, but It's Time for Cleanup

Letters, phone calls, complaints, threats and great thoughts from readers:

"Note from our stationery that we also are in the fertilizer business.

"Having read your column steadily for the past year, I feel that I must bring certain things to your attention.

"Before subscribing to The Chicago Daily News, we wrapped our fertilizer in a variety of newspapers. Business was bad. In fact, it stunk.

"Presently we are wrapping our product in The Chicago Daily News with your column on the outside.

"Business has never been better. It created an interest. People thought that we were having your column written especially to cover our product.

"Continue your good work. Your column may not increase the circulation of your newspaper, but it does wonders for the growth of plants, flowers and various hard grains.

"I am afraid to sign my name, so you can know me only as Constant Reader."

COMMENT: I am glad to help. Write again, next time you wash your hands.

MIKE ROYKO

ROBERT GRAHAM, Liberty, Miss. — "A friend of mine send me a column you wrote about Mississippi.

"I am a retired corn products worker from Argo and I love Illinois but chose to retire in Mississippi due to the weather.

"I deem it a privilege to live in Mississippi and one thing I can say is, these people have guts.

"If the overeducated Goof Balls got a job and stayed at home, a lot of trouble would never be started.

"Lazy, irresponsible people love to be told how badly they are treated. I guess that is natural.

"I am not about to apologize for some of the bad things that has happened in Miss but it all goes back to the old saying, if you hunt trouble, it is bound to show its head.

"If you can get down our way, stop over with us. We have lots of room and you will be welcomed by us and other good people."

COMMENT: Thank you, but I prefer to vacation where people sleep on sheets instead of wearing them.

ANONYMOUS—"Some day you will regret writing the way you did about Elijah Muhammad. If you were not already afraid of him, you and the other reporters would not have come from all over the world to hear him speak."

COMMENT: It is true that the press came from nearly everywhere for Elijah's meeting. But not because they were interested in hearing his inside stories on nine-foot men running around Mars. This kind of information is readily available behind the fences of many state institutions. Frankly, most of us were there because of the possibility that someone would try to turn the Coliseum into a shooting range. As it turned out, the only shooting that occurred was of the well-known bull.

FRD & FAMILY—"After reading your column for some time, we are curious about your politics. Are you a Republican or a Democrat? Or an independent?"

COMMENT: It depends. Sometimes I vote for one party. Sometimes for the other. It all depends on which precinct captain hands me a pint of wine.

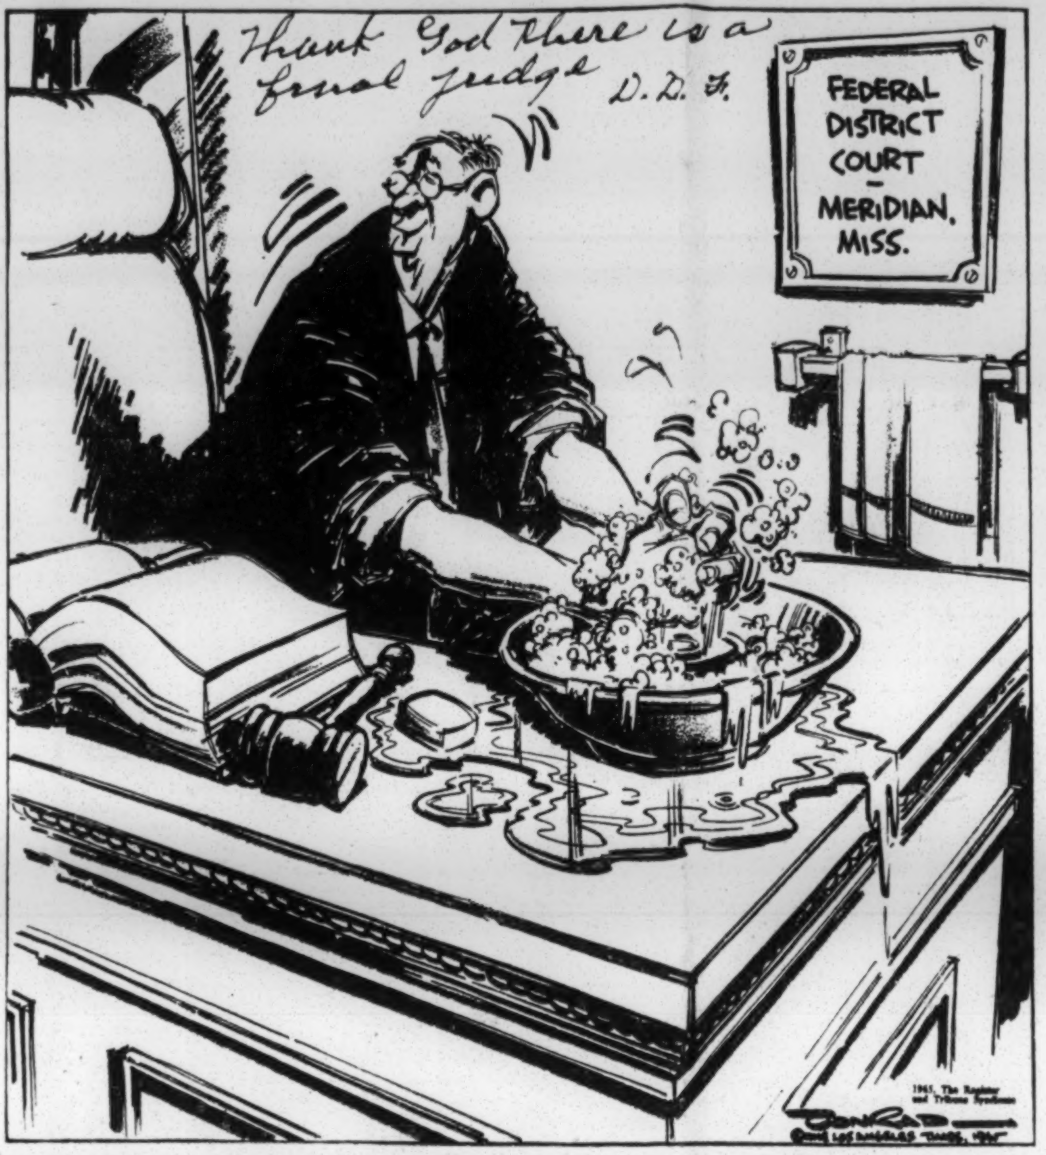
PAUL EGAN, AURORA—"Dear Mika: Frsh norghs abd wrnks withnrb. Brnti wisherf neber hrts anbdyl griezek. Right? Etc."

COMMENT: You still have my endorsement for mayor of Aurora, but you have the worst handwriting in the world. I would be grateful if you would call and tell me what your recent letters are supposed to say, or else stop writing with your toes. The only thing I understood was the printing on the envelope which clearly said: "Postage Due."

MRS. C. K.: "Why do you always take the side of drunken husbands in your stories? You don't come right out and say that you are on their side, but the impression comes through."

COMMENT: In the future I'll try to be impartial. I will take the side of drunken wives.

"The Indictment Surely States a Heinous Crime Against the State of Mississippi, But Not Against the United States"



FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT — MERIDIAN, MISS.
CONRAD
© 1965 LOS ANGELES TIMES

Thank God there is a final judge D.D.F.

1965, The Register and Tribune Syndicate

Norman Ross

Accomplishments of Negroes Get Spotlight at Rockford

"I read your column on Malcolm X and the Muslims the other day," the cab driver said. Because he was Negro, I thought perhaps he was going to tell me that it was white intolerance not Negro resentment that had spawned this movement whose members are "spooky with hate" as one of Malcolm X's followers put it in the wake of his assassination.

Or that Malcolm X had indeed been a racist but that there were signs his trip to Islam had induced a change of heart in him which in time might have brought him into the mainstream of Negro thinking and maybe justified Negro actor Ossie Davis' funeral oration in which it was claimed that Malcolm X "represented the living black manhood of the Negro."

Instead the driver said: "Doesn't the press exaggerate the importance of these extremist splinter groups, and make them stronger by publicizing them so that many Negroes who otherwise would never have heard of them are enticed into joining?"

He pointed to one of the press's eternal dilemmas, of course.

It was a two-part TV documentary that first launched Malcolm into notoriety, and all media amply covered each subsequent anti-white tirade of his sensational career.

PERHAPS, unpublicized, Elijah would not have attracted the thousands he did attract, or Malcolm the hundreds, and the words spoken by one Harlem resident after Malcolm's death might have come true without widespread public notice. "I would say these cats are going to be scratching until there's not but one of them left," he said.

On the other hand, publicity about Elijah's shadowy connections with the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazis, the seven collections he took up at meetings until security needs prevented him from doing so at last weekend's sparsely attended convention, and the paternity suits in which he has become involved has doubtless been a factor in the sizable defections from his movement.

And whites, it may be hoped, have been given new insight into the extent of the alienation felt by many among the 20,000,000 Negroes in our country, and a new sense of urgency about the need to assimilate them into the mainstream of our common culture.

One excellent way to accelerate this would be for more whites to realize how vast has been the contribution of the Negro to our country already.

NEGROES fought at Bunker Hill and were with Washington as he crossed the Delaware. A Negro was the first man to be killed in the American Revolution.

The second book published by an American woman was that of Phyllis Wheatley, who came to our country in a slave ship, learned English in 12 months, and 12 years later wrote a book of poetry that was to be distributed internationally.

There's an interesting parallel in her career to that of Chicago's Pulitzer Prize winning poet, Gwendolyn Brooks, who wrote an indelible poem on the death of President Kennedy. Phyllis Wheatley wrote a poem about George Washington, and he sent her a long, gracious reply.

In this same period lived Benjamin Banneker, a free Negro of Maryland, who was an astronomer, zoologist, botanist and surveyor and helped lay out the city of Washington.

Lerone Bennett Jr., senior editor of Ebony magazine, and an author, poet and social historian of note, reminds us that perhaps the first surgery on the human heart was done before the turn of the century in the old Provident Hospital in Chicago by Dr. Daniel Hale Williams, a Negro surgeon.

AND THERE are so many more contributions. A Negro chemist was a pioneer in the development of cortisone. A Negro doctor organized the first blood bank. And on this eve of Chicago's 128th birthday, we would be remiss if we failed to recall that Chicago's founder and first permanent settler was a Negro, Jean Baptiste du Sable.

Rockford College begins today a unique five day festival entitled "Creativity and the Negro" to which the public is invited. Among the participants are some 40 Negroes who have distinguished themselves in the various arts and sciences. They include William Warfield, Josh White, and the cast of "In White America." This weekend in Rockford should be a most effective antidote to last weekend's Muslim convention in Chicago.

Listen to the Norman Ross commentary on WLS radio (890 on your dial) each weekday, 6:45 p.m.

KENISTON'S COUNTDOWN

BY DAVE KENISTON

Safety experts who say women are good drivers should see them steering supermarket carts.

◆

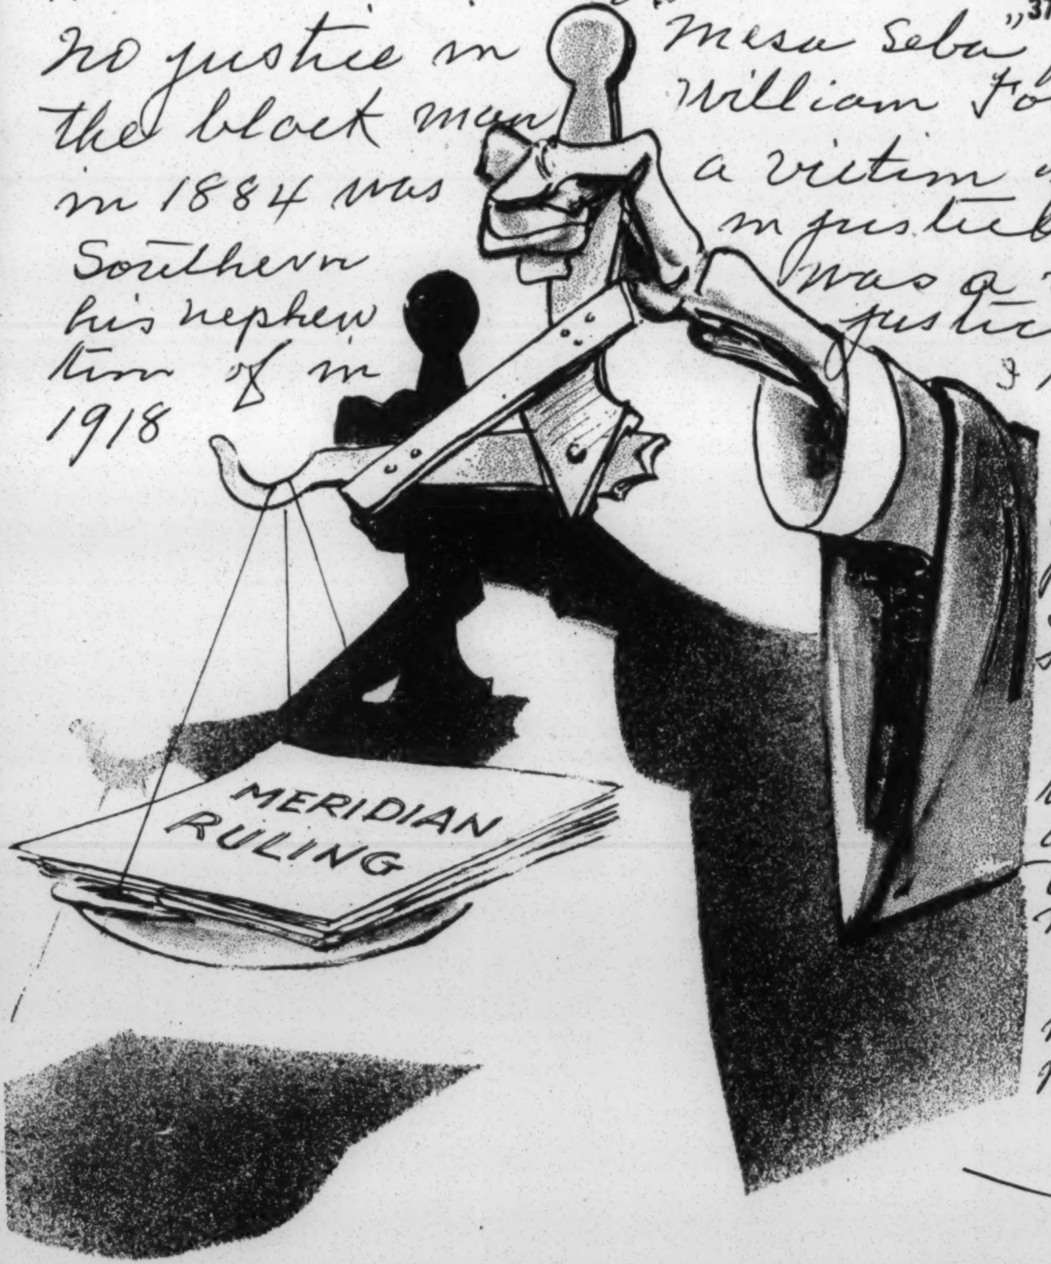
The way international crises develop, you might think the safety valve had never been invented.

◆

The guitar has become the nation's most popular instrument. Everything worthwhile these days has strings attached.

The scales are fixed - there is no justice in "Mesa Seba" for the black man William Foote in 1884 was a victim of Southern injustice and his nephew was a viction of injustice in 1918

I was not a bit surprised in Judge Cox's ruling on the murder case in Meridian



3/4 1965, CHICAGO SUN-TIMES Burck

Mississippi Justice

WEDNESDAY CHICAGO SUN-TIMES MARCH 10, 1965

Naziism In Alabama

The sickening and shocking brutality that erupted in Selma, Ala., was like a nightmare scene from a different world and a different time from the United States of 1965. The mass attack by heavily armed state troopers on citizens gathered to meet in peaceful protest to denial of their rights as Americans must be compared with the actions of Hitler's storm troopers.

In Germany, Nazi racist theories ultimately resulted in bestial treatment of fellow humans, and the degradation of those who believed they were of a superior strain. In Alabama, the theory that Negroes are unworthy of participating in the working of government through the ballot box was at the root of the inhumanity that wounded all America last Sunday.

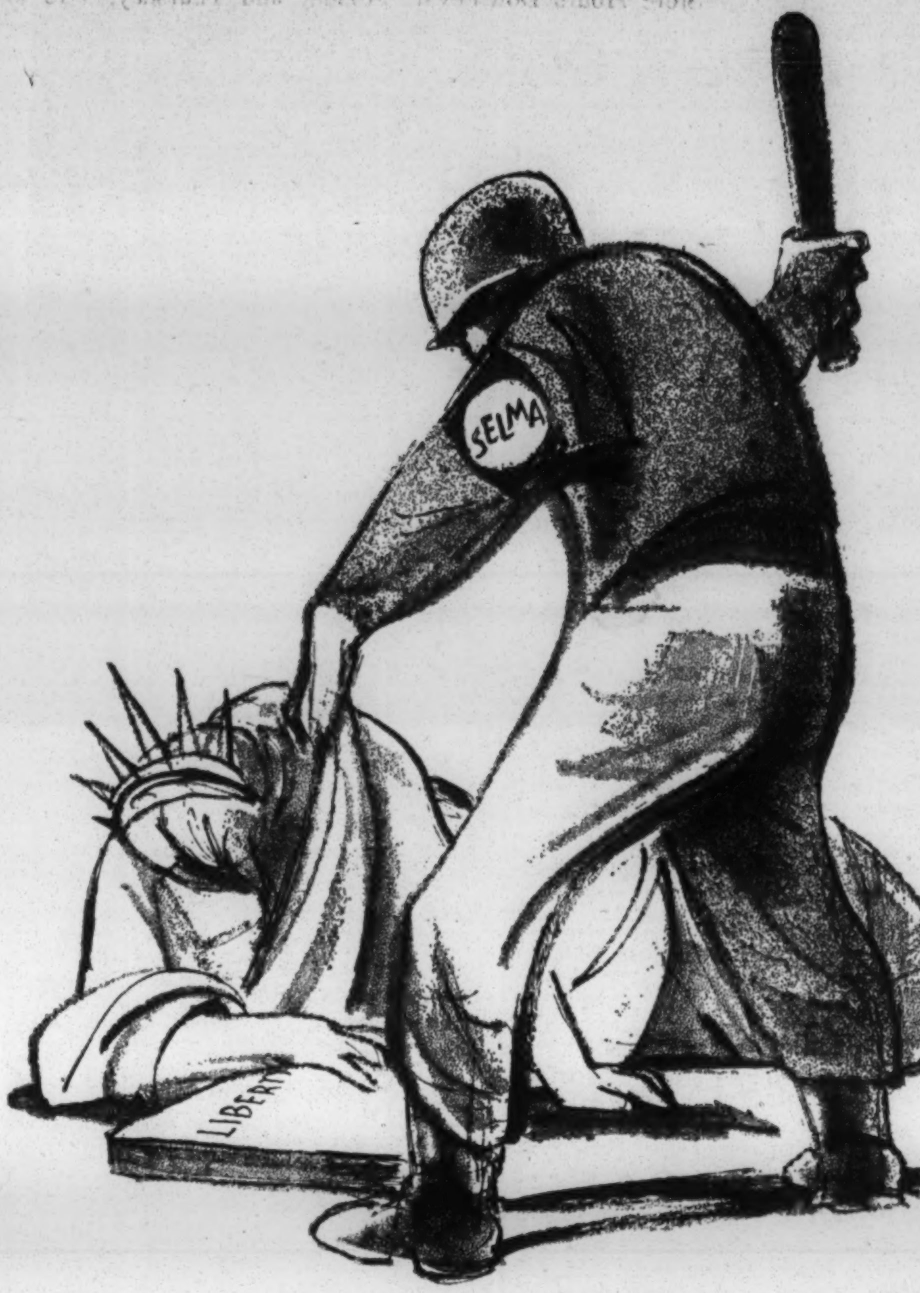
Peace of sorts has returned to bloody Selma and a federal judge has ordered the protesters to refrain from trying to march the 50 miles to Montgomery, the state capital. The judge had been asked to bar police interference with the right of citizens peaceably to assemble as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. He banned the march temporarily so as to have "a reasonable opportunity to make a judicial determination as to the respective rights of the parties in this case." His reason was different from that of Gov. Wallace.

It would be useful to have a judicial decision on the right of the citizens of Selma, Negro or white, to assemble peaceably and to march down a highway to signal their protest against the denial by public officials of the right to vote. It is pertinent to raise the question whether a march by white persons would have been forbidden by the governor and would have evoked such an outburst of malicious bloodletting as the Negro march brought on. As hundreds of white ministers from around the nation were preparing to join the Negroes in a new march, it was rumored that Gov. George Wallace had issued new orders to troopers to refrain from clubbing citizens. Late yesterday marchers were turned back without violence.

Gov. Wallace had forbidden the three-day hike to Montgomery on the ground that it would interfere with highway traffic. This conclusion is open to argument. Properly arranged and protected by state police, the march could have been staged without interfering with traffic.

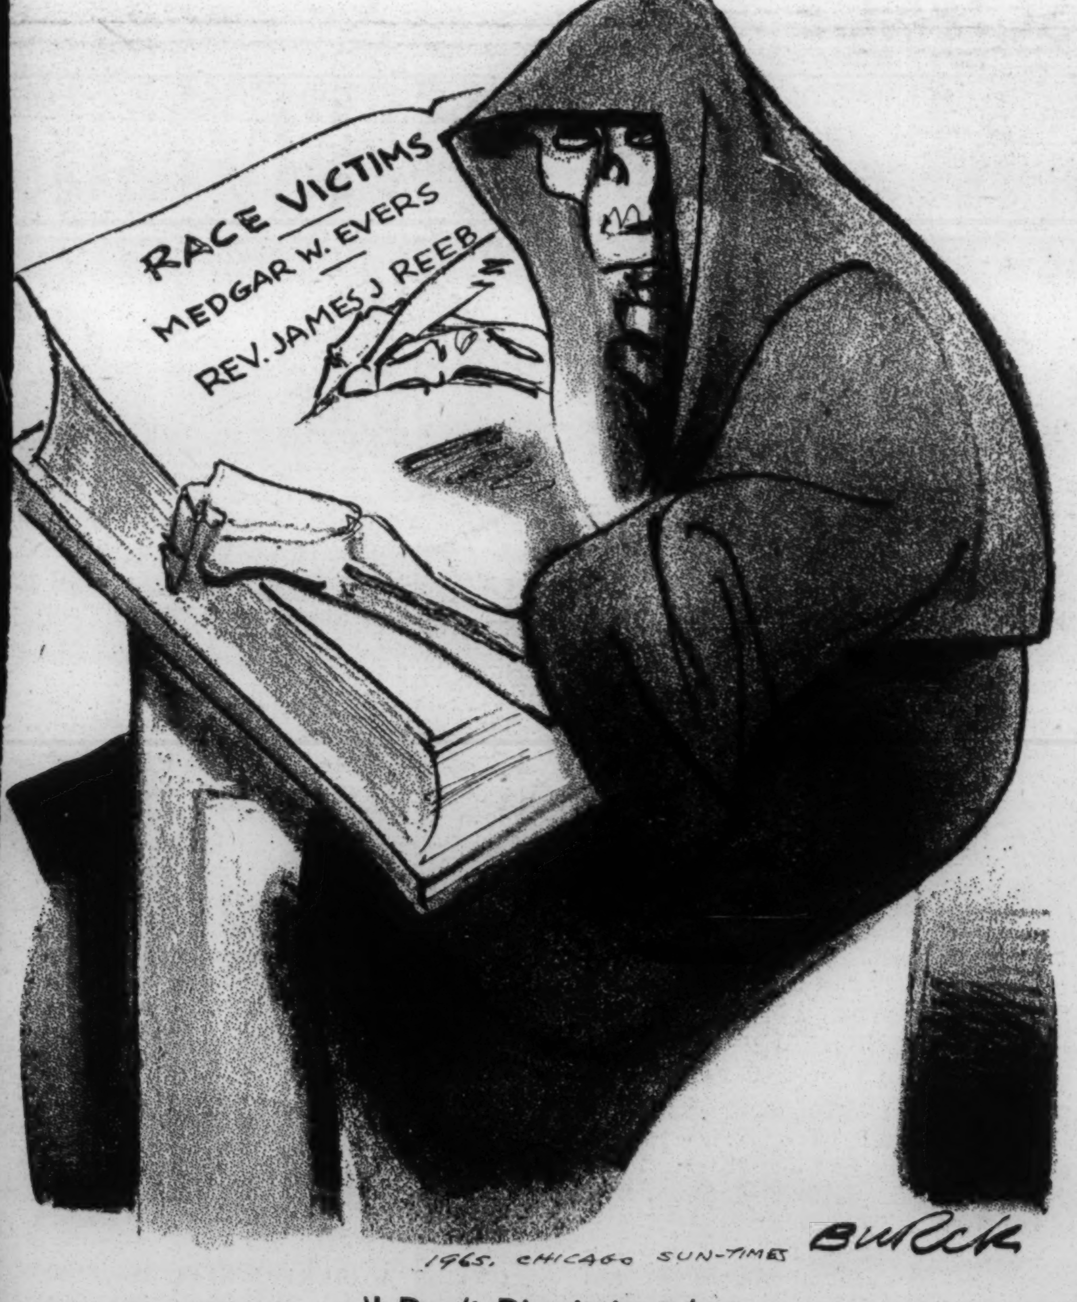
No, it must be assumed Gov. Wallace was motivated by his zeal to put Negroes in their place. There would be no need for the march of protest if Negroes were accorded their right to register and to vote as citizens in the first place.

Thus the awful consequences of racism in public office are brought home to a shocked nation. The denial of the right to vote leads to denial of the right to peaceable assembly. Next comes bloody, physical repression. What happened in Selma has outraged the rest of America, particularly those decent, God-fearing Southerners who have some knowledge of history and human affairs. They realize the degrading consequences of an un-Christian official state policy based on racial discrimination, or, in the case of the Nazis, religious discrimination.



1965, CHICAGO SUN-TIMES BURCK

It CAN Happen Here



1965. CHICAGO SUN-TIMES BURCK

'I Don't Discriminate'

Chicago's AMERICAN
Always On Top Of The News
EDITORIAL PAGE
STUART LIST, Publisher
LLOYD WENDT, Editor
Largest Evening Home Delivered
Circulation in Chicago and Suburbs
8 TUESDAY, MARCH 16, 1965

The Third Milestone

THE TWO GREAT MILESTONES in the Negro rights movement so far have been the Supreme court's school desegregation decision of 1954 and the passage of last year's civil rights act. The third was announced to the nation last night by President Johnson. It is the voting-rights bill which he is sending to Congress tomorrow, and its effects—at least as far as the south is concerned—could well be the most far-reaching of all.

The bill would attempt what neither of the previous great decisions could do: Give the Negro an active part of the south's political life, and make it impossible for Dixie's state governments, legislators, and courts to act as tho they had only white constituents.

And what a turnabout that would be! Officeholders and candidates would have to make some appeal to the Negro voter, instead of scrambling for white-supremacy support. Programs and platforms would have to take into account what Negro citizens actually want, not what substitutes can be devised to keep them quiet. The bill would reaffirm and enforce a basic constitutional idea—that all citizens are entitled to a voice in the political decisions that affect them. Basic or not, that idea has never been put into effect in the deep south; and putting it into effect will work some mighty changes.

In its present form, the administration's bill would take effect in all states and counties where less than 50 per cent of the voting-age population has been registered. Specifically, that would mean Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, plus a number of counties in other states. It would abolish all bars to voting except those based on age, residence requirements, felony convictions or mental disorder, and would apply to all elections for federal, state, or local offices. Federal registrars would register citizens wrongly turned away by state officers, and broader criminal penalties would be provided for interfering with voting rights.

The bill will undoubtedly set off a new marathon wrangle and possibly another filibuster [which may cause some senators to regret that they didn't change the filibuster rules when they had a chance]. But we can imagine no convincing argument against it. With the example of Selma before us, who can honestly contend that the bill isn't needed, or that Negroes' voting rights should not be protected, or that the right to vote is not a federal concern?

The President said last night that the "oldest and most basic mission" of this country is to right wrong. We have lived with this wrong for too many years; we can live with it no longer.

MILBURN P. AKERS

A Difficult Road —Right To Vote

THE 50 MILES between Selma and Montgomery are but a section of a road over which the American people have been traveling since the American Revolution. For the white man, no less than the Negro, has had to overcome restrictions on his right to vote.

Universal manhood suffrage was not the order of the day when the colonies, emerging from the Revolution, bound themselves together in the Articles of Confederation. Neither was it when they cast aside the Articles and substituted the Constitution. Property qualifications prevented many from taking part in elections. Nearly 50 years elapsed before most states had removed such restrictive measures.

KING

The efforts to win the ballot for white men not possessed of property (the amount required varied by states) culminated in what historian refer to as the Jacksonian revolution. The property qualification crumbled in state after state along the Atlantic seaboard as new states to the west of the Alleghenies were admitted.

EARLY SETTLERS IN SUCH states, having been largely deprived of the ballot in their former homes, saw to it that such prohibitions were not contained in the constitutions they wrote in their new homes. It was the use they made of their ballots which resulted in the election of Andrew Jackson as President.

The founding fathers, who had accepted the principle of Negro slavery in the Constitution, are widely credited with democratic concepts they did not possess. They contemplated a government by the elite; a republic in the classical definition of the term. U.S. senators were to be elected by state legislatures, members of which had been elected by men of property. The Electoral College, as originally conceived, was another of their efforts to achieve government by the elite. The founding fathers did not have the veneration for the common man many ascribe to them today.

THE 14TH AMENDMENT, adopted in the wake of the Civil War, was intended to extend the franchise to Negro men. But it wasn't until 1920, when the 19th Amendment was adopted, that the right to vote was extended to women, white or black. It was seven years earlier, 1913, when the 17th Amendment, which provided for the election of U.S. senators by the people, was adopted.

The Jacksonian revolution, as the struggle for universal suffrage for the white man came to be known, was only the beginning of a long struggle for universal suffrage.

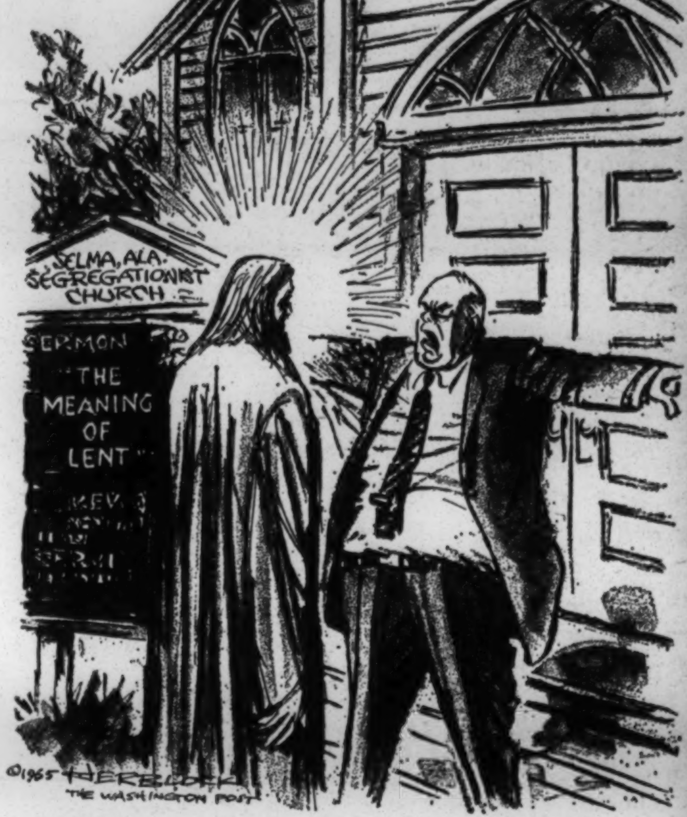
The efforts to restrict suffrage have been many. They do not all have to do directly with the right to cast a ballot. Equally involved is the right to have ballots counted exactly as cast. So is the principle of equal representation, a principle many times frustrated by gerrymanders.

THE RECENT ONE-MAN-ONE-VOTE decision of the U.S. Supreme Court was intended to prevent disenfranchisement, in effect, of some sections of the voting public in election of legislators.

AKERS

Supposedly basic in the American democracy are the right to vote, the right to have that vote counted exactly as cast, and the right to have that vote possess a weight equal to that of any other vote. The struggle to achieve these rights has been going on since the Union was established. The march of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his followers from Selma to Montgomery reflects one facet of that struggle; a facet in which abuse of the right to vote has been especially glaring. Pending legislation may correct that abuse.

But there are many other areas in which correction is needed if universal suffrage, in the fullest meaning of the term, is to become a reality.



SELMA, ALA. SEGREGATIONIST CHURCH
SERMON "THE MEANING OF LENT"
©1965 HERBLOCK THE WASHINGTON POST

"We don't want any outside agitators"

OPLE •

words. Give full names
e for letters is obviously to condense letters is
THE TRIBUNE.

'THE WRONG WAY'

Chicago, March 23—So adroit a summary of the whole "go slow" argument as the David Lawrence piece on the civil rights situation, reprinted in THE TRIBUNE March 19, cries for critical comment.

Law

Unfortunately, the superficial plausibility of this line still has the power to deceive too many and sets up a sort of rallying cry for the forces which still want to extend, indefinitely, a century of things as they were.

Lawrence presents the civil rights activities in the south as "troublemaking, trumped-up" acts of irresponsible leaders. But surely he himself must know that these acts are an effect and not a cause.

The heart of the matter is that Selma and similar points in recent history must be recognized as the inevitable product of long provocation, and highly preferable to other possible reactions. On that basis, they deserve the highest praise. This is exactly what the President of the United States told the nation the other day.

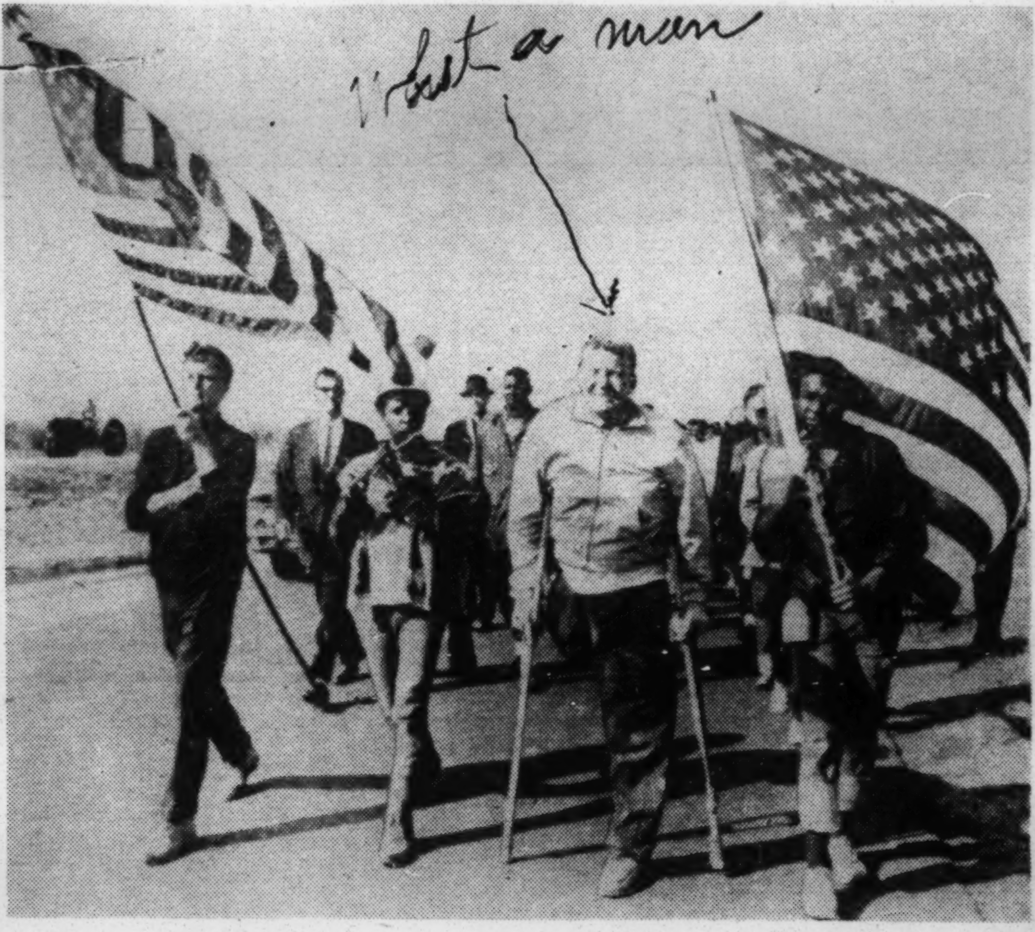
Lawrence reveals the fallacy of his attack on the Alabama demonstrators when he talks about violence. Disregarding the facts, he presents the club-swinging troopers, the teargassers, and the murdering bombers not as the violent ones, but as the victims. He speaks of amazingly controled nonviolent action as "mobs in the street." In his effort to avoid the fact that the violence has been perpetrated by those he paints as victims, he sprinkles his writing with loaded words such as "intimidation," "mobocracy," "passion," "bitterness," "threats of physical force," "fanatics," "defiance of the law," etc.

The remedy which Lawrence offers doesn't do him much credit. He demands that the civil rights effort be limited to channels which he specifies as "the public forum, the printed word, dispassionate discussion," etc. Just where has Mr. Lawrence been all these years? The methods he calls for are exactly those which a great number of people like me have been working with for decades. We've been reasonable. We have educated, printed, broadcast, taught, persuaded, coöperated — and worked our hearts out at it. But it took Birmingham, Jackson, and Selma to make enough people respond to our more "respectable" presentation.

It's true that the methods of the Urban league and like-minded groups are now producing remarkably accelerated results. Why? Chiefly because it took more spectacular methods to bring about the great awakening. The nation had to have the manifestations in the streets. People had to have the TV screen confront them with Alabama "police work." So it took Martin Luther King's demonstrations to produce the necessary rate of progress.

Let's see these southern manifestations in their true light. Mr. Lawrence, after all, is another Gov. Wallace in better dress. He needs to be seen that way.

H. B. LAW
Chairman, executive committee,
Chicago Urban league



What a man

In a scene reminiscent of the American Revolution's spirit of '76, civil rights marchers play flute and carry flags Wednesday as they approach their goal of Montgomery, Ala. They are (l. to r.) Dick Jackman of New York; Len Chandler of New York, playing the flute; Jim Leatherer on crutches, of Saginaw, Mich., and Louis Marshall of Selma, Ala. (AP)

EWS, Friday, March 26, 1965

~~NEVER~~ EVENTUALLY
ALABAMA
STATE TROOPERS

1965, The Register and Tribune Syndicate

CONRAD

© THE LOS ANGELES TIMES, 1965.

Feminine Angle

Society Fashion Ann Landers Your Home

CHICAGO SUNDAY
SUN-TIMES
MAY 16, 1965
Section Five

A LITTLE BOY ASKS:

'WHY AM I DIFFERENT?'

By Nina Flemister Jones

ONE OF THE most difficult tasks in the world is to be a "good parent." There are no hard and fast rules of parenthood; the psychologists do not agree, child-guidance experts express differences of opinion, and there is no second chance with the same child. Parenthood can be compared to composing a song with a limited knowledge of music. As one looks at his offspring at adulthood and attempts to evaluate the job that has been done, too often mistakes that have been made are remembered, and alas, it is too late — the damage is irrevocable.

We are a middle class family with a better than average income (over $20,000 a year), a better than average education (both have master's degrees and he is earning his Ph.D.), and perhaps too much love for our two sons who are two years apart in age. Perhaps we love and appreciate them just a little bit more than many parents would because a physician had told us that we would never have children. They have been considered a special blessing. They have brought much joy—and heartache—to us.

FROM THE MOMENT that the boys began to talk, the questions tumbled forth. Sometimes they were satisfied with a simple answer, sometimes the answers have been so very difficult.

"Mommy, where is God?"

"Where does the rain come from?"

"Who made me?"

"Where do babies come from?"

These are questions that most parents hear. Parents give an answer that pacifies momentarily, and the child will quickly scurry off to play.

Then there are the really tough queestions—the ones for which you can find NO answer. How can a mother answer some questions? What are the answers to some questions?

"Mommy, why don't they like me? Why can't I go to Johnny's party? Why can't I call Mary? Why am I different?"

These questions may not seem so difficult to you, but for me they have been devastating because the correct answer would destroy the child's feeling of self-worth.

BILL WAS 4 when he came home from nursery school and said in his sweet innocence, "Mommy, a new girl came to nursery school today. She's colored. She's the first colored person in our school."

Before I thought, I blurted, "But, darling, you're colored."

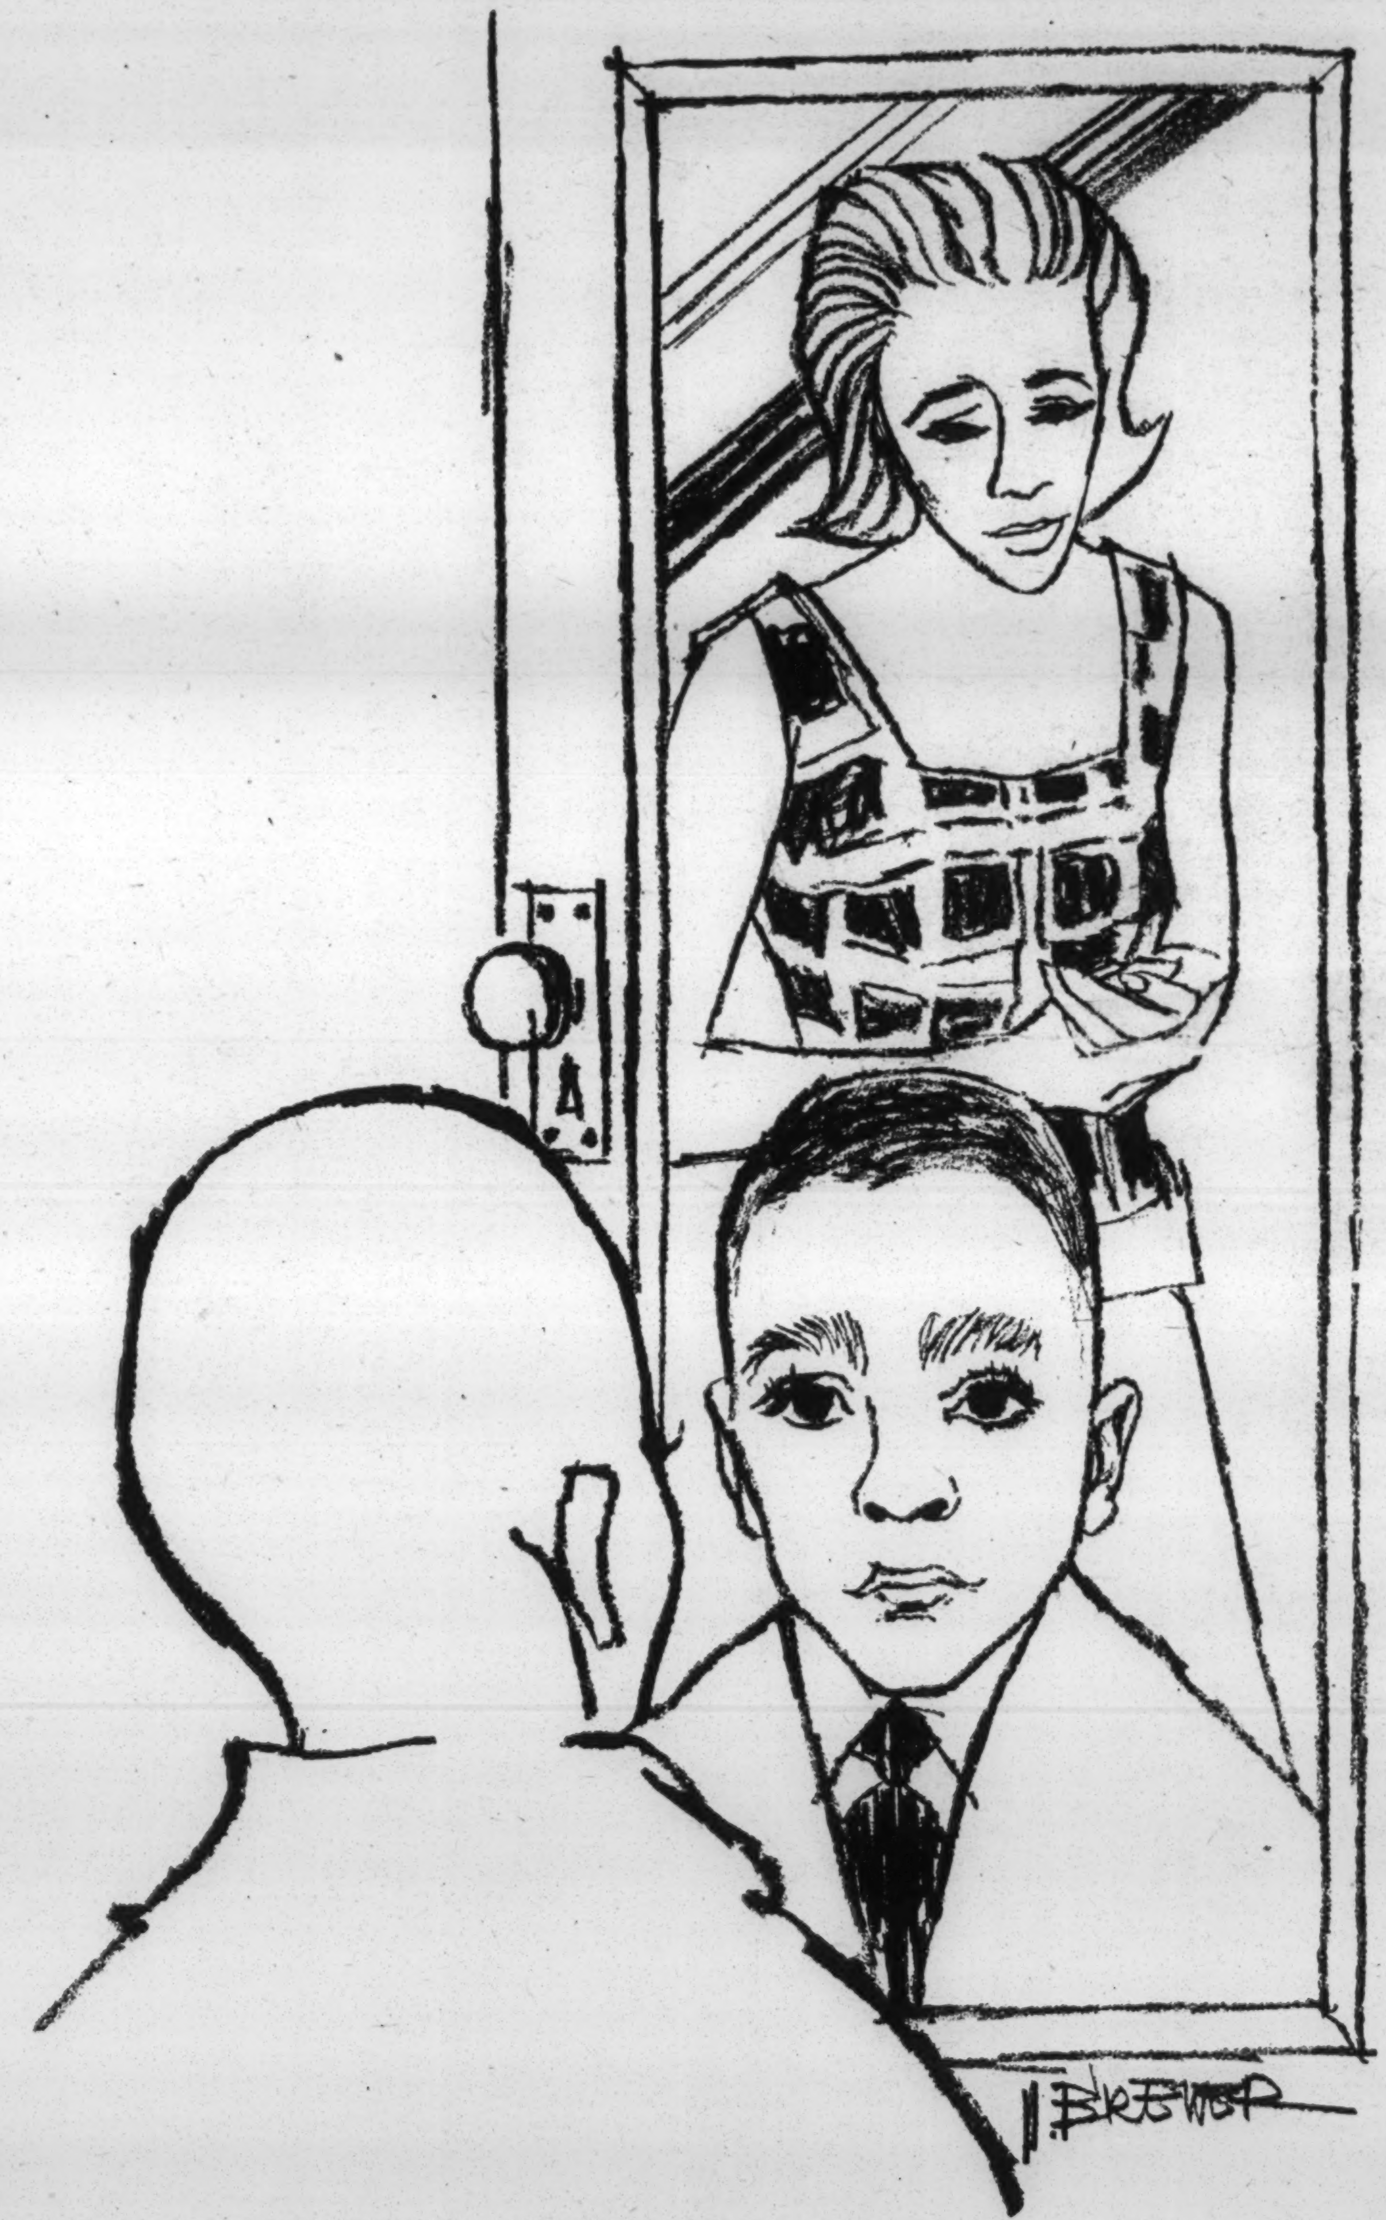
He looked at me and shook his head, "I'm not colored."

For a moment I held my breath as the shocking realization struck me that my son did not realize that he was a Negro. Quickly recovering my composure, I marched him gently over to the long glass mirror on the closet door.

"Bill, who is that in the mirror?"

"Mommy, you know that's me," he answered as if he

Turn to Page 15, This Section



Ways To Finance College Education

See Your Purse Strings,
Page 26, This Section

Boy Hears 'Southern Facts Of Life'

Continued from Page 15,
This section

difference had not been clarified to his satisfaction.

"Doesn't the water come from the same place?" he kept repeating.

On the return trip home, a filling station had three signs on the rest rooms: LADIES, GENTLEMEN, COLORED.

"Mommy, aren't you a lady? Why can't you go into the one that says 'Ladies'?"

OR TAKE that experience in a Southern state on the way home from Mexico by auto. We were so tired by 9 o'clock, we decided to see if one of the motels would take us in. I experienced much anxiety while my husband went into the office. Both boys were dozing on the back seat. I was so relieved when my husband returned to the car and held up a key. He drove the car into the proper place. Bill, our older boy, jumped out and started undressing as soon as he got into his room. He was always the first one into the shower. We had just gotten the last bags inside when there came a knock on the door. The wife of the motel owner had decided that she had a reservation for this unit and asked us to leave. Yet, there seemed to be at least ten other vacant units.

"Why do we have to leave, Daddy?"

"Can't we pay? I saw some traveler's checks in your pocket."

"Can't I take my shower, Mommy? I'm already undressed."

That night we were hard pressed to explain the "Southern facts of life" as we locked our car on a dim street and tried to sleep.

Very early the next morning we started home and took turns behind the wheel and only stopped for gas until we reached our own garage. We tried to explain without too much bitterness.

OR TAKE the time when Bill asked, "Mom, why didn't Tommy invite me to his party? I thought that we were friends."

It is difficult to explain that now that the children are at the dancing age, or "post office" age, he won't be welcome at Tommy's parties. You watch with fear the look on his face and wish that you could make it easier for him to accept—that he is different. You grope for the right words and sometimes they do not come. You do not want your children to suffer, to hate, to feel reviled. Yet, they cannot escape.

Our 10-year-old son, Steve came to us looking very serious. "Mom and Dad, Mr. Sanders, the principal, called me into his office today."

"Steve, what have you done?" I injected hastily.

"Nothing, but make a phone call," he answered with his head down.

"Who did you call son?" his father asked calmly.

"I called Nancy Olson yesterday afternoon. She's a girl in my class. I forgot the homework assignment. I just wanted to check with her. Her father answered because Nancy wasn't at home. I told her father my name. Today, he came to school and talked to Mr. Sanders."

I TRIED to interrupt, but my husband restrained me.

"Go on, Steve," he said.

"Mr. Sanders told me that I shouldn't have called Nancy. He said that I should call my own kind of girls. Dad, why doesn't Mr. Sanders like me? What did I do wrong? All I wanted was the homework assignment."

"Steve, you must ask permission before you make any more phone calls," his father said as he put his arm around the boy's shoulder. "Mr. Sanders doesn't dislike you." He was making an extreme effort to remain calm.

WE BOTH TRIED to maintain a calm facade in front of the boy, but we seethed. We were tempted to commit a number of rash acts. We talked about it until early in the morning and finally decided that we would do nothing—except to continue to try to help our boys grow up to be good citizens of our country.

Are we good parents? Am I a good mother? I don't know. I am trying to be a good mother. I work at it. I love my sons. I want them to grow up to be fine men..

Do you think that it is difficult to be a good parent? It is even more difficult to be a good Negro parent. Ask one.

Boy Comes Home Sobbing

Continued From Page 1,
This Section

wondered why I didn't know him.

"Darling, look at your face. It's brown. Look at your hands. They're brown. Look at me. I'm brown. Daddy's brown. We're all Negroes—and colored. You are a Negro—and colored."

"But I don't want to be colored," he countered vehemently. "I want to be white."

After Bill had gone to bed, we joked over the fact that Bill didn't want to be what he was. We also realized that we should have prepared him. We had taken for granted that he understood.

We have a very comfortable home ($35,000 class) in an integrated (that time between the time that the first nonwhite family moves into a community and the last white family moves out) community. We go to the community Presbyterian Church, keep our lawn well clipped, cook out on our patio, and claim as "friends" people of all races, religions and creeds.

From that day forward, my husband and I made it our business in many ways, subtle and direct, to have our boys understand that they were Negroes. We talked about their grandparents as we went through the family picture album. We taught them honesty, the value of work, and respect for authority. We tried to help them feel a sense of accomplishment when they have done worth, pride, and love of God, love of country, and love for all of their fellow men.

Where does the heartbreak come? The years bring experiences that tear down so much of what you try to build. One day Steve came home sobbing hysterically He had been called a string of vile racial epithets by other children.

ON AN AUTO trip to Atlanta to visit the boys' great-grandmother who had never seen them, Bill jumped out of the car and ran to the water fountains. He started to drink from the "wrong" fountain. As I reached him, I guided him to the "right" fountain. Thirty minutes and 30 miles later the

Turn to Page 20,
This section

A Solomon of to day

Dr. King Upholds Code Of Nonviolent Resistance Here

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. speaks at Palmer House.

By Dolores McCahill

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. reaffirmed his conviction Tuesday night that nonviolent resistance is the most potent instrument the Negro can use to win total emancipation.

Addressing 2,000 persons at the fifth general synod of the United Church of Christ at the Palmer House, Dr. King said:

"The challenge that faces the church is to lead men along the path of true integration, something the law cannot do. We will not have true integration until men are obedient to that which cannot be enforced by laws.

"Man-made laws assure justice but a higher law produces love.

'Mighty Struggle'

"Today a mighty struggle is taking place to conquer the reign of an evil monster called segregation and its inseparable twin called discrimination.

"This monster has stripped millions of Negro people of their sense of dignity and robbed them of their birthright of freedom."

Dr. King said again and again that legislation and judicial decrees can play only a minor role in solving the problems of the Negro.

"Morality cannot be legislated," he said, "but behavior can be regulated. Judicial rulings may not change the heart but they can restrain the heartless.

Ultimate Solution

"Let us not be mislead by those who argue that segregation cannot be ended by the force of law, but let us realize that the ultimate solution to the race problem lies in the willingness of men to obey the unenforceable.

"True integration will be achieved by men who are willingly obedient to unenforceable obligations."

Earlier the synod adopted a resolution that started in part:

"We declare ourselves committed to integrated quality education in all public schools both North and South.

"We declare that de facto segregation by custom, intention, chance or community acquiescence is undesirable, unfair and unacceptable to American ideals and goals.

Affects All Society

"We further declare that such de facto segregation affects not only our Negro brethren but also other economically and culturally deprived members of our society and all the rest of society."

The general synod also adopted a mildly worded resolution supporting "only political and diplomatic methods of negotiations" to solve Viet Nam turmoil.

The resolution said:

"The general synod rejoices in President Johnson's oft-repeated willingness to take the Viet Nam problem to the conference table without precondi-

Turn to Page 36

STAY HILTON

Bond's

7/13/65

No more shall the war
cry sever,
Or the winding rivers
be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of our dead;
Under the sod and
the dew,
Waiting the judgement
day; +
Love and tears for the Blue
Tears and love for the Gray

Francis M. Finch

The spirit that should prevail to day-
not the spirit of the K.K.K.

WALTER LIPPMANN

Selma—A Showing Of Contempt Of U.S.

WASHINGTON—The state of Alabama as ruled by Gov. George Wallace is in open defiance and contempt of the United States. There is no possible doubt that a very large part of the Negro citizens of Alabama are deliberately denied the right to vote.

In Selma, with the connivance of the governor and by the brutal actions of state troopers, American citizens have been denied their constitutional right to assemble and their constitutional right to petition and protest against the denial of the right to vote.

The issue between the state of Alabama and the United States is clearly and sharply drawn. Shall the law be defied?

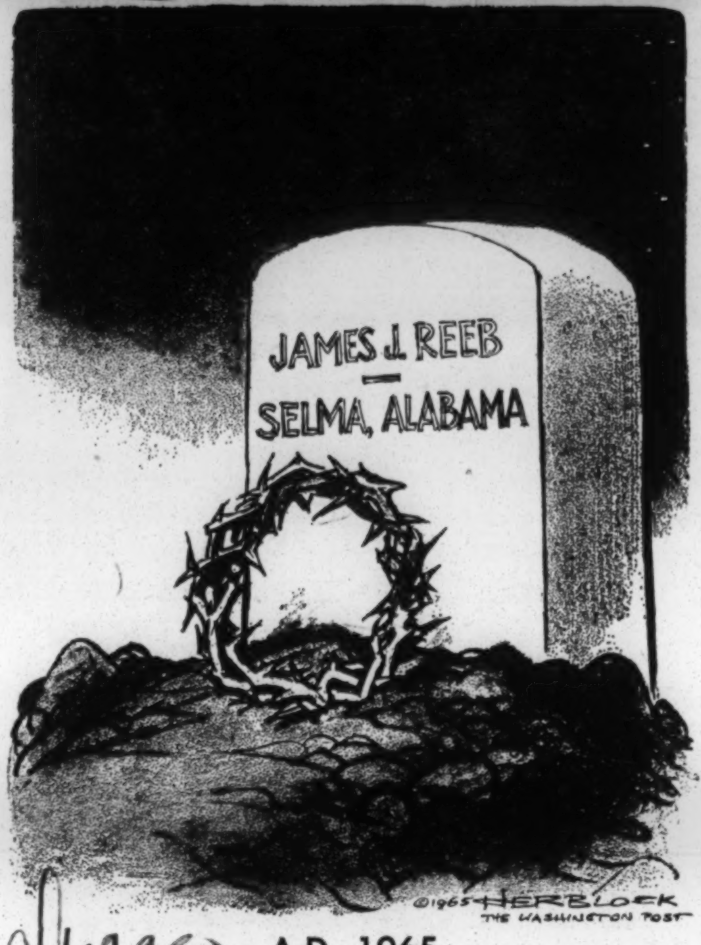
No one, no leader of either political party, is raising the question of whether the decision to compel the state of Alabama to obey the law is an invasion of the rights of the state. It is evident and obvious to all that there can be no right of any state to nullify the Constitution of the Union to which it belongs, or to abrogate the Bill of Rights.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that the Congress will support overwhelmingly President Johnson's call for legislation to put an end to the widespread disfranchisement of Negro citizens.

What is more, the country will support overwhelmingly the enforcement of that law. For the enforcement of that law will be equivalent to putting down a rebellion against the United States.

This time and in this case the issue of civil rights is clear as crystal. There are no fuzzy edges as there were and are on the problem of the desegregation of the schools and of public accommodations. On the question of the right to vote, all the leading Republicans, including Former Sen. Barry Goldwater, are against Gov. Wallace. Today he stands alone. Only the unabashed white supremacists even profess to support him.

BECAUSE THE BASIC ISSUE is so clear-cut, the human reaction of the American people to the outrage in Selma is not sicklied o'er with any pale cast of intellectual doubt.



Chicago A.D. 1965

Selma is not only an American tragedy. It is an American disgrace and a profound humiliation.

Selma is what happened in a country which is engaged in defending freedom throughout the world! Selma is what has happened in a country which is talking about freedom in Asia and Africa and the Americas!

Unless Selma is expunged by a mighty national act of repentance and reparation, how shall Americans look themselves in the face when they get up in the morning?

JOSEPH ALSOP

Sacrifice At Selma Will Bring Results

WASHINGTON—No verse written in this country has been more often or more fatuously quoted than "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." But in memory of James Reeb, the young clergyman murdered in Selma, Ala., it is entirely appropriate to recall the lines:

> As He died to make men holy,
> Let us die to make men free!

For James Reeb did die to make men free, much more consciously indeed than most of those who fell to the Union at Bull Run and Gettysburg, at Cold Harbor and the Wilderness. He joins the Union dead and, like the Union dead, thank God, he has not fallen in vain.

His martyrdom—for that is the right word—was not, of course, anything more than the climactic episode. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the others who have been symbolically hammering on the closed doors of the Selma registrar's office had their own major role to play, and they played it to the hilt.

THE RESULT HAS BEEN one of the most rapid, hopeful chains of cause and effect that has been seen in American public life for a great many years. Until the events in Selma pricked the conscience of political Washington, it was by no means clear that a Negro registration bill would be given a high priority this year.

Then came the events in Selma. By midweek, the wise old bellwether, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (Ill.) was telling his Republican flock about Negro voting rights: "We cannot have this problem coming before us year after year; we must now pass a law that is easily enforceable and will get results."

On Friday, President Johnson, Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach and most of the important White House staff members spent the day canvassing possible courses of action.

The right course is clearly indicated by Dirksen's phrase —"a law that is easily enforceable and will get results." Each of the civil rights bills has had something to say about voting rights, but in practice none of the voting provisions has been enforceable. Hence they have got almost no results.

THE LOCAL ALABAMA CLIMATE is reflected by the argument that has been made by Dallas County's Circuit Court judge, James Hare, to show why the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments should not apply in his county. The judge alleges the slave traders were scraping the bottom of the barrel by the time they got around to supply the county's needs. Therefore, according to the judge, "the blue-gummed Ibos" who were supplied to Dallas County are not a tribe for whom the Constitution's writ should run.

If the temper of this city means anything, however, Judge Hare's hour has struck. Patience is exhausted. One may now predict with confidence that an effective voting-rights bill will be passed this year. The details of the bill are secondary. Dirksen has summed up what needs doing. One way or another, it will almost certainly be done.

The Ku Klux Klan and other racist groups which would trample upon the rights of their fellow men deserve the contempt of every American.

Do not be taken in by their emotional appeals. Instead, take a long, hard look at the terrible acts of violence which have occurred in certain of our Southern states in recent months and know them for what they really are.

There is nothing honorable or patriotic about any organization which condones lawlessness and intimidation. The law is above any individual or group of individuals and we must be constantly on guard against those who would shortcut or use the law to achieve their own ends.

America's young people are its future, the key to continued greatness. The extremists know this, and they also believe that youth is America's Achilles' heel through which they can effectively strike at our unity.

Their campaigns to divide and subvert are in full swing. But this duplicity will surely fail if our young citizens stand up to be counted for the future, if they articulate their pride in our traditions and ideals and shoulder the responsibilities of their heritage.

J. Edgar Hoover

A current major program which the Communist Party is directing against young people is the W.E.B. Dubois Clubs of America. This party-oriented youth organization, founded in June 1964, at a convention in California dominated and controlled by the Communists, has as its basic aim the promotion of Marxism-Leninism. Centered on college campuses, the Dubois Clubs represent a soft-sell approach which the Marxists believe has great promise in reaching American youth.

The party is also trying to contact young people through a massive campus speech program. This is a propaganda campaign concerned with attempting to influence student opinion at American colleges and universities to accept the party as a legitimate organization within our democratic tradition—which it is not.

Zealots of the extreme right are no less eager to win the support of young people than those on the left. Lacking the subtlety of the Communist approach, these radicals have nevertheless enjoyed considerable recent success in their efforts to broaden their influence.

J. Edgar Hoover

Patriotic disguise

Emotion, not reason, controls the fanatical right and it is on this level that they make their pitch. They may clothe their rantings in patriotic garb, passing themselves off as defenders of the Constitution or protectors of religion. They know such devices have much appeal for impressionable youths.

But look behind this thin disguise and their true character can clearly be seen. Terrorism and violence mark the activities of these groups, and it is a tenet of their cowardly philosophy that they attack only the weak and outnumbered.

J. Edgar Hoover

LAST STAND FOR OLD SOUTH

Selma—the Perfect Place

Last of Two Articles

BY LLOYD WENDT

Editor, CHICAGO'S AMERICAN

SELMA, Ala. — "Selma is the place where there had to be a showdown ultimately," said Elbert Jean, a white churchman. "Both sides agree it is the perfect place, the toughest place, the last stand of the Old South."

Jean describes himself as a consultant of the Methodist church. He spent his adult life traveling thru 17 southern states. Spokesmen on both sides of the civil rights and race controversy agree that what Jean says it true—Selma is the "perfect" place.

"Where could you find a better spot," demanded a Negro writer who supports the demonstration here. "The Rev. Martin Luther King had to have action to keep control of his nonviolence movement, to keep it together. Where but in Selma could he find a perfect villain like Sheriff James Clark? Where could he find a governor like George Wallace, who also has a boss of troopers like Col. Al Lingo?

"We couldn't have found a better setting or written a better script ourselves — Lingo and his men did exactly what was needed.

"WHEN THE troopers trampled and clubbed our people it aroused the whole nation. It brought in the white ministers and one of them was killed.

"I am sorry for him. I am sorry for his family. But he is dead and I must state a fact. His death has aroused the whole world. He has moved our cause months, and maybe even years, nearer to victory.

"We couldn't have done it by ourselves. It took a Clark, a Lingo, a Wallace, and finally a martyr, the Rev. James Reeb, to do it for us."

A southern newsman agreed wryly. "It looks like the script for Selma, Alabama, was written by Harriet Beecher Stowe," he commented. "King knew just where to go for a public official who would play Simon Legree to his Liza."

Why was Selma picked? The white people of Selma who will talk say that the Selma Negroes had little to do with launching the demonstration. They point out that Alabama does better than many other southern states in the registration of Negroes. Alabama has registered 26.2 per cent, Texas only 11.7 per cent, they noted. "Why not a demonstration in Texas, the President's state," they asked.

"DON'T Be deceived," King followers reply. "Some more 'liberal' cities of Alabama may register more than 26 per cent, but not Selma. A Negro school teacher here tried to vote for 9 years, but they said she couldn't pass

[Continued on page 6, col. 7]

The Road Beyond Montgomery

When the civil rights demonstrators crossed into Montgomery Wednesday afternoon, the marchers sang "We Have Overcome." This would have been a good ending if the event were a drama, but it is life, and life goes on. Always there is tomorrow. President Johnson knows this. Asking Congress to insure the right to vote—the objective of the Selma march—he said, "We must remember that . . . after the police and the marshals have gone—after this bill is passed—the people of Selma must still live and work together."

Some of the marchers wanted to march around the Montgomery Capitol grounds, like Joshua's Israelites around Jericho. Dr. Martin Luther King decided no, and wisely, for the walls that must now be removed will not fall to the sound of trumpets. They are in the hearts of men and women and children of all races in all parts of the country.

Leslie Dunbar, director of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta, said that demonstrations "seek, above all, to produce national action and they certainly have done so. . . . But these demonstrations do seem to deeply wound the localities in which they occur." As it was in 1865, so is it in 1965: Not malice but only charity can heal the wounds of the nation and give strength to carry on the work it is in.

The aftermath of the 1963 civil rights victories in Birmingham revealed another limitation to demonstrations. When certain employment opportunities finally opened to Negroes in that city, none were found who were qualified or willing to take them.

Kipling's prayer might well apply to all Americans today:

The tumult and the shouting dies—
The Captains and the Kings depart—
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.

Humility and contrition and education —above all, education that gives needed skills as well as human values—these are the requirements, not just in Selma but in Chicago and elsewhere also, to cope with what President Johnson correctly called an American problem.

Selma—the Perfect Place for Last Stand by Southern Whites

[Continued from page 1]

the literacy test. I defy anyone to pass it if they don't want you to."

Regardless of why the Rev. Martin Luther King picked Selma, the whites here who will comment at all to an outsider agreed that he chose well.

"I think that everyone thruout the south knows how this must end," said a white citizen who preferred anonymity. "The young black man here refuses any longer to be a 'nigger.' He rejects paternalism. He wants freedom more than security. There are some whites that don't believe this but most are coming to realize it.

"I think most whites in the south are now ready to give up what they must to the nigger—as little as we can. The sooner we give up something, the better off we'll be."

"We could have settled this without trouble and without bloodshed," said another white man bitterly. "We know how to deal with our niggers. They weren't complaining until King and you northerners came in to stir up trouble."

"NOT complaining?" asked a young Selma Negro who is equally bitter. "We complained all right. It is true we didn't do anything. We didn't dare."

It is obvious to the observer that most Selma demonstrators are not now Selma citizens, whatever they may have been at the start.

Probably every white beyond the police barricade is from outside Alabama. Many white demonstrators agree. None denied it.

Neither did they know whether the Negroes are from Selma. Ask many Negroes directions about Selma and you get no answer. Maybe they don't know or they just aren't talking. But it is equally clear that many of the Negroes are Selma residents.

So the confusion goes. Yet newspaper, the Birmingham News, in a front page editorial, says it's up to Alabama to do something now.

"Alabama is in gravest danger of being 'blackmailed' by thinking, responsible citizens and leadership thruout the nation," said the News. "This grows out of two things . . . repetitive violence . . . and the present situation that in numerous cases Alabama white officials have not made good enough effort to deal fairly with Negroes seeking to vote. We have voter tests behind closed doors. We have prepared VERY hard questions [emphasis theirs] for anyone, white or Negro, to try to answer.

"THE NEWS understands the concern of whites in Negro-heavy counties. BUT NEGROES ARE CITIZENS [capitals theirs] . . . It is because Negroes know the Alabama record of hold-back on the voter better than any whites that BOTH [capitals theirs] local and so-called "outside" Negroes have mounted public demonstration campaigns. . . .

"This may be the greatest crisis Alabama has ever faced. . . . We Alabamans are part of the reason, and we must therefore be part of the solution."

That was one of Alabama's most powerful newspapers speaking under this page one headline: "Alabama—Look in the Mirror."

Whatever Selma citizens may think of the editorial, they're not talking about it to strangers. It seems clear that right now the north is hated here probably as much as the day in 1865 when downtown Selma was burned to the ground by federal troops.

"I wish I could hope that you would tell the truth," said a Selma business man candidly. "But I know you won't. Nobody from the northern cities will tell the truth about us."

have been at the start.

Probably every white beyond the police barricade is from outside Alabama. Many white demonstrators agree. None denied it.

Neither did they know whether the Negroes are from Selma. Ask many Negroes directions about Selma and you get no answer. Maybe they don't know or they just aren't talking. But it is equally clear that many of the Negroes are Selma residents.

So the confusion goes. Yet the Rev. C. T. Vivian, the Rev. James Bevel, and Andy Young, King's first assistants here, are praised as tough, efficient, dedicated organizers, and the demonstrations go on 24 hours a day.

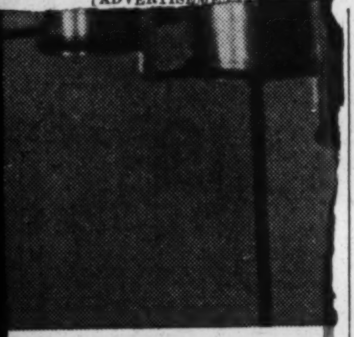
HUNDREDS of young people, and a few old, pour in from all parts of the country. Pale nuns, priests, and ministers are recruited, or volunteer—there can be no doubt of their dedication.

The people of Selma insist their own Negroes are really not "to blame" for all the trouble. They are sure outsiders contrived it all.

"We are sick and tired of all this," a housewife told a southern reporter. "We feel awful about the beating of Rev. Reeb. We can talk of nothing but our troubles. We were such a quiet little town. Why don't the outsiders leave us alone?"

But a leading Alabama

[ADVERTISEMENT]



Whatever Selma citizens may think of the editorial, they're not talking about it to strangers. It seems clear that right now the north is hated here probably as much as the day in 1865 when downtown Selma was burned to the ground by federal troops.

"I wish I could hope that you would tell the truth," said a Selma business man candidly. "But I know you won't. Nobody from the northern cities will tell the truth about us."

IT IS pointless to tell this hospitable, coöperative, but bitter business man, that a visiting reporter finds few sources of exact, clear truth, and almost no one locally who will be quoted by name on anything, outside officialdom.

The reporter can look at a most attractive and progressive white section of Selma and at the wholesome appearing people, and agree it will match a progressive town or suburb anywhere in the north.

He also can see the vast underprivileged Negro section spreading beyond the railway yards, factory areas, and river lowlands. There are many reasons why most of the Negroes live in unpainted shacks, just as there are reasons why Negroes live in ghettoes in Chicago.

The point now appears to be that thousands of young Negroes are determined to change many things, and in Selma today they are beginning by demanding their rights under the federal laws.

King, after all, got his start in nearby Montgomery. His Southern Christian Leadership conference was founded there and Mrs. King was born in the Selma area.

WHETHER OR NOT King and his chiefs are alien to Selma, they are definitely alien to its ideas and few here contemplate an early peace. New, tough talk at the city hall on Sunday was met by tougher talk in a late rally at Brown's chapel A. M. E. church.

The outlook ahead seems as mixed as the people involved.

"A Negro spokesman told me that it is too bad about the Rev. Reeb, but his death did advance the cause by months or years," I told a white demonstrator from Boston.

The young man, son of a noted church administrator, took it in stride. "When you are a general and call out your troops, you know someone may be killed. If it happens you make best possible use of the sacrifice."

Not all demonstrators are this tough. "I couldn't stand to march to Montgomery—50 miles," a white youth said. "But I'll be there to help with the demonstration when they finish." While other demonstrators sleep in the streets of Selma, he commutes to a hotel in Montgomery.

HOKE NORRIS

Critic At-Large

ON WILLARD MOTLEY

Willard Motley died in Mexico City the other day, and a friend, feeling an understandable compulsion to write about him, wonders what to say, and how to say it. Eulogies almost always obey so strictly the injunction that one must speak no evil of the dead that they often defeat their very purpose: No man, the reader knows, could be so good, so kind, so sweet. One reads such praise without believing, and the man we would remember is dulled and diminished.

Well, I know of no evil any man could speak of Willard Motley. He was a gentleman, he was a writer, he was a humanitarian, he was a small neat man with a small neat moustache and a soft voice, and he was a sweet guy. He wrote three big books and could have written more—was in fact writing them—and he was only 52 years old. It's always the wrong one. But what else to say?

Willard wrote about himself, occasionally, in his modest, innocent fashion. Let us, today, see what he said about himself. He said it better than anybody could say it for him.

It was Christmas, 1944, and Willard was working on his first novel, "Knock on Any Door," which would be published in 1947. He was living on a fellowship from Newberry Library, and wandering the streets of home. "My neighborhood, Halsted St. near Maxwell," he wrote in The Sun during that December, "is a little different—not much—but a little different on Christmas Eve from what it is during the rest of the year. As usual, people come on the street, a formless, rabble rank of shapeless bodies, hunched shoulders. . . . Christmas Eve. . . . In a basement window a vigil candle burns in a blessed cup, a little hand of light before a plaster Christ. . . . A little boy comes to the street. He looks up at the sky. It is black, very black. A few snowflakes start now. And more and more, swirling through the sky until soon whiteness will cover the neighborhood. Will hide the grim little houses. The boy looks up."

He Watched The Lives Of Men . . .

WILLARD MOTLEY heard the voices and saw the lives of human beings without ever seeing the color of their faces. "My friends," he wrote, in The Sun-Times of Aug. 11, 1963, "have been of every color and temperament, of every religion and no religion (I have found the last the least prejudiced on all scores). Born in Chicago—and my experiences therefore somewhat different from that of the average Negro—I have never lived in a Negro neighborhood, though I have lived in four Chicago neighborhoods. My family came to Chicago something like 60 years ago and have lived in the same house there for almost as long. They came to a white neighborhood and lived in an apartment building, my mother on Saturdays lighting the fire for the Jewish woman who lived upstairs; then, in another neighborhood they found the home my father, a Pullman porter, bought out of nickel-and-dime-and-quarter tips and where the family still lives. . . . I was born in a private white hospital and two weeks later baptized in the cathedral. . . . The only Negro boy in my grammar school to graduate the year before I did was cast in the school play as George Washington. The next year I, then the only Negro in the graduation class, was somewhat a 'teacher's pet.' She knew I was reading Dickens in a seat near the back of the room and, surrounded by girls, was writing short stories."

a Pullman porter, bought out of nickel-and-dime-and-quarter tips and where the family still lives. . . . I was born in a private white hospital and two weeks later baptized in the cathedral. . . . The only Negro boy in my grammar school to graduate the year before I did was cast in the school play as George Washington. The next year I, then the only Negro in the graduation class, was somewhat a 'teacher's pet.' She knew I was reading Dickens in a seat near the back of the room and, surrounded by girls, was writing short stories."

. . . Without Seeing Their Color . . .

WILLARD was never—and in his home neighborhoods seldom had reason to become—bitter as some Negroes understandably are. "I never think of color until the subject is forced upon me," he wrote in that 1963 article, "never think of the man sitting across from me—he's white! He's a Negro just like me! He's Japanese!—but think of his personality and what he has to say. Nor will I ever be able to understand how the color of a man's skin is any more important than the color of his eyes or hair. . . . If there is such a thing as 'my people' and 'your people'—which is one of our greatest myths, whether it apply to race or religion —I think it is high time that all men sat down together and talked, rising up hands clasped."

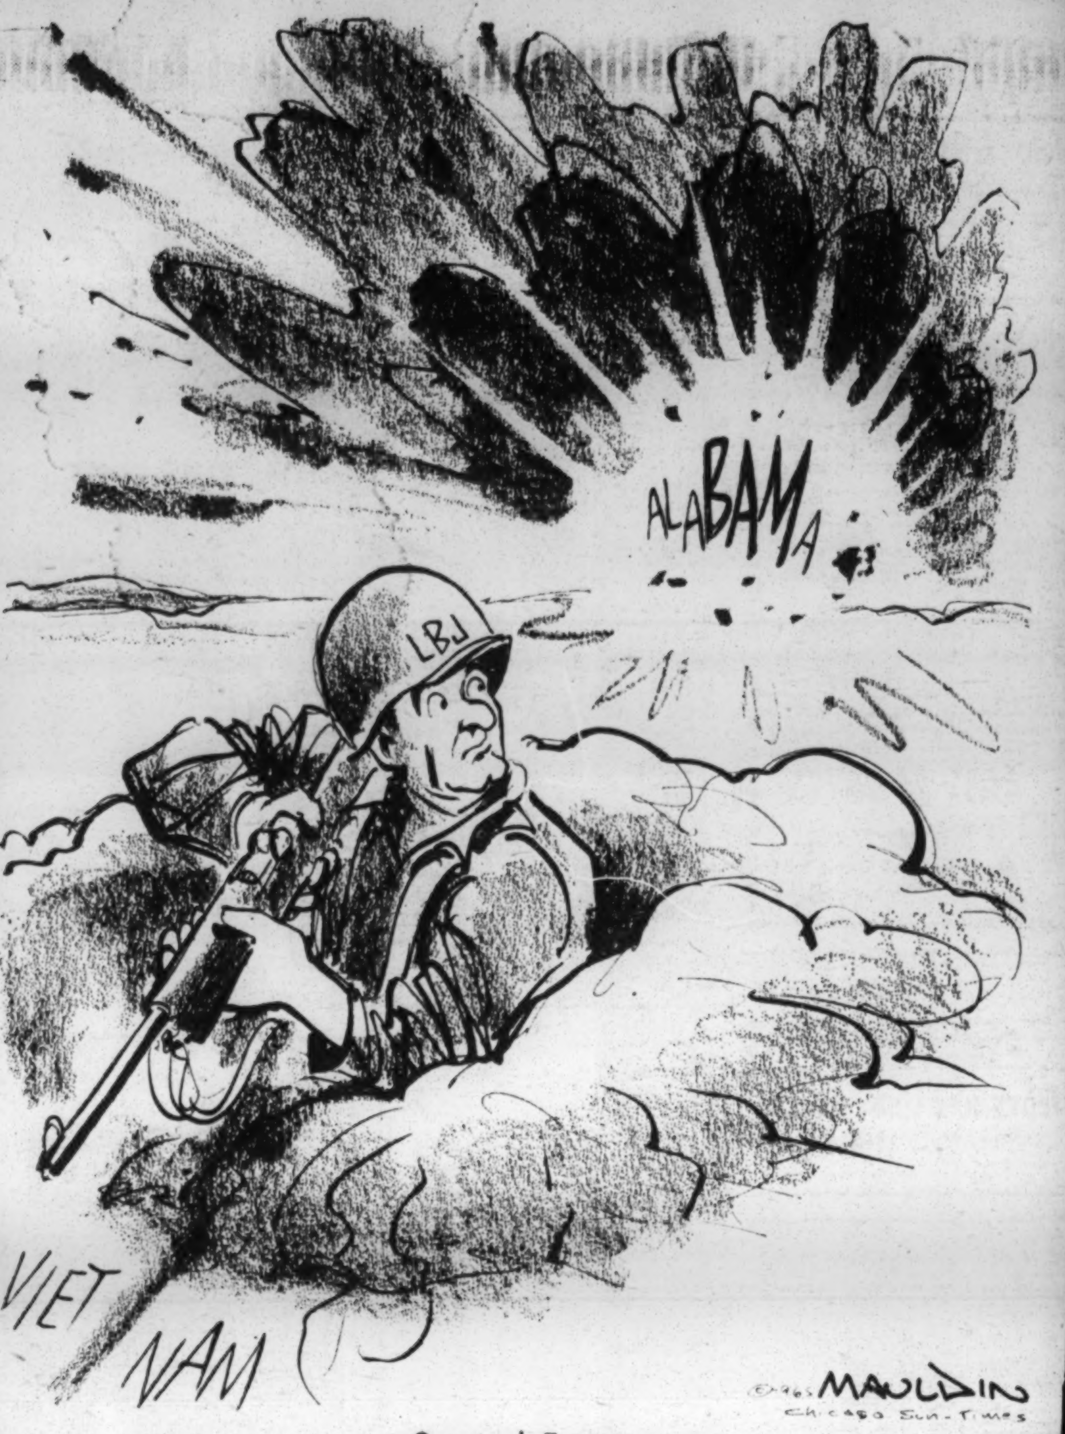
Somehow, when you were with Willard Motley, you sensed this color blindness. You had to be color-blind too, or get out of his presence. His beautiful, innocent view of your face would make a fool of you, unless you too looked back without seeing color. "A Negro, an American, but long before that and certainly forever after, just one of almost 3 billion people on this small, unhappy planet, I feel less like a Negro, an American, than I do like just one of the 3 billion and that where wrong is, there I should be in heart and at home; it is hard to identify with a race—but only against an injustice."

. . . But He Heard Poetry Of The Poor

AND SO identifying himself not with race or nation but with humanity, he was able to write, in The Sun-Times of Dec. 31, 1961: "In my own experience I have found that among the lowly, the poor, the uneducated, those of minority groups (almost always the lowly and poor) there is a language of beauty, if you wait for it and listen with rabbit-alert ear. I choose to call it the poetry of the poor. . . .

"So many reviewers like to say about this or that book, 'Not for the squeamish.' They would surely say it about this book (he was reviewing Oscar Lewis' "The Children of Sanchez"). I feel just the opposite—that this IS a book for the squeamish . . . well-meaning, not accustomed to the raw and real life of some strata below their own, given to thinking and reading about the 'better' or 'higher' things of life, easily evading the 'crude' or realistic, . . . people of kind hearts who, so exposed to the raw, rough, hungry lives of so many millions in the world, would learn a lot and, in the learning, try doing something about their fellow man's plight—lives like those in 'The Children of Sanchez' being lived only 20 or 30 blocks from their homes. Into the hands and minds of the 'squeamish' this book should surely be passed."

Willard Motley last visited Chicago in October. He talked to many friends, and went to many parties. He slept little, and traveled much. He became, in the phrase, tired but happy. Then he returned to his new home, without knowing, to die. His last book was called "Let No Man Write My Epitaph." Perhaps no man will, except as Willard himself, like all writers, wrote his own. "I think that any fairly intelligent person could write," he said to a reporter before he left, "provided the fact that he has broken through the barrier and become a human being with compassion."



Second Front

CHARLES BARTLETT

GOP Moderation In South

ATLANTA—A moderate in Southern Republican politics is a man who believes that his party must reach for the Negro vote. This practical spirit is significantly on the rise.

The reactionaries who utilized the popularity of Barry Goldwater to capture the party machinery in many Southern states are still vocal and in control. But moderates in increasing numbers are challenging their anachronistic concept of a white man's party.

Making his first postelection appearance in the South at Columbus, Ga., last Saturday night, Goldwater linked himself with the moderate position by asserting that the Negroes' rejection of his candidacy did not fairly reflect his Arizona record on civil rights.

BARTLETT

This concern with the Negro vote is not shared by the men who were Goldwater's leaders in Georgia. Roscoe Pickett, now national committeeman, is an avid segregationist who was quieted by a bad beating in a congressional race last November. But the new state chairman, Joseph Tribble of Savannah, takes a public position that his party should not dedicate its energy and resources to enlisting Negroes.

Tribble is one of nine Republicans in the Georgia Senate. As many as seven of these colleagues take issue with Tribble in arguing that Negro support is essential to Republicanism in Georgia.

They are not merely concerned with the numerical weight of the Negro vote. They know their party will only prosper if it attracts the open support and participation of the white business leaders who constitute the Georgia establishment. But these pivotal citizens will not lend their respectability to a political movement that smacks of racism.

THE SEVEN SENATORS know that some important Georgians declined last year to run for Congress and other offices as Republicans because they could not afford to be linked with the segregationists. They realize that their dream of persuading an eminent Georgian to run for governor as a Republican in 1966 will require a mature party stand on race issues.

Howard Calloway, a member of the Georgia establishment who did get elected to Congress as a Republican last November, has already begun to construct a working relationship with Negro leaders in his district. He has told them that he wants to represent both races despite the fact that few Negroes voted for him. Almost all the young Southern Republicans in Congress are reported to agree with Calloway that this course of mollification is wise.

THE EISENHOWER ELECTION of 1956 and even the 1960 race by Richard M. Nixon, who did not ask for the Negro vote, showed that Southern Negroes are still capable of voting heavily for the party of their fathers. Their preference has been Democratic since Franklin D. Roosevelt, but they are unready at this critical juncture to become captives of either party.

Prejudice, against Roman Catholics in 1928 and against Negroes in recent years, has speeded the emergence of the Republican Party in the South. The leaders who look beyond the present racial ferment are unwilling to chain themselves and their party to a future limited by prejudice.

With the practical forces on their side, the moderates will ultimately dominate the reactionaries on the Negro issue.

OPINION OF THE

For Capital Punishment

I strongly oppose efforts to abolish capital punishment in the State of Illinois. I have carefully searched my conscience realizing the moral issue involved.

We are counseled not to "appease the aggressor" in respect to our struggle with the Communists. We stand ready to kill in defense of our liberties. Yet, on the other hand, we are beseeched to spare convicted killers. The American criminal is a greater threat to our liberties than the Communist threat. The criminal strikes without warning and then hides in our very midst while preparing to strike again.

We are constantly passing new laws designed to protect our society and its law-abiding citizens. The law-abiding citizens do not need additional laws for their protection. The law-abiding citizens only need the rigid enforcement of existing laws. We need prosecutors, judges, and a government that realize their first, and only, obligation is to provide safety for each and every law-abiding citizen.

Let the troubled conscience be the sole burden of those that associated with the convicted killer and of the killer himself. My conscience troubles me only when I realize that we are being subjected to pressures to continually negotiate with the criminal element. An element that breeds like a cancer, expecting and demanding ever more for each concession given.

The defense for the law-abiding citizen must be laws so rigidly enforced that they resemble natural laws. If, within prescribed bounds, a person is convicted of taking another's life, then the death sentence must be fulfilled. Death for a convicted killer should be as certain as death resulting from coming into contact with high-voltage electrical current.

The death penalty has become ineffective only because of the interference from criminal-sponsored elements and the meddling of well-meaning "do gooders." Does the fact that a criminal is an American citizen make him any less dangerous than the Communist aggressor?

amen Charles R. Bailey

I agree

The Reaction: Deep Anger

BY EDMUND J. ROONEY

Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—"We're going to have to march again to get this state to stop killing people and nothing being done about it."

This was the reaction of the Rev. James Bevel, one of the Alabama civil rights march's top leaders, to the death of Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo, 39, of Detroit.

Bevel has been a top aide to Dr. Martin Luther King, and has served as Alabama project director for King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"It's going to take a second civil war before these white people down here will give up segregation," commented Hosea Williams, 38, a SCLC staff worker. "This is three killed in about four weeks."

Jimmie Lee Jackson, 26, a Selma Negro died in a Selma hospital Feb. 26 after having been shot by a state trooper. The Rev. James J, Reeb, 38, a white Boston minister, was attacked and beaten by several white men in Selma March 9 and died two days later.

IT WAS WILLIAMS who notified Mrs. Liuzzo's husband, Anthony, 51, by telephone of the death of his wife.

"There wasn't anything I could say to him," Williams said. "He immediately sobbed and became incoherent."

Williams made his heart-breaking call from the Dexter Av. Baptist Church, in the shadow of the Alabama state capitol in Montgomery.

It was the church where King held his first pulpit. It had also been serving as headquarters of the march committee.

"When you're in this movement you have to expect to have people killed," commented James Foreman, executive director of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

"She was a white woman riding alone in an automobile with a Negro. This is racist country. This is an example of the things that can happen."

MRS. VIOLA GREGG LIUZZO

The Right to Live Awaits Defender

BY JOHN M. JOHNSTON

In the Nuremberg trials of Nazi war criminals, many people had deep misgivings about the law that was utilized. The objections were muted by the general belief that justice was done, and might not have been except for the extraordinary procedure.

JOHNSTON

But law contrived after the fact to meet a special situation clashes with the concept of law as a known and immutable rule. No doubt many lynching victims were guilty. The evil is not in doing justice, but in bending legal procedure, which always holds the threat of terrible injustice.

A condition in Mississippi poses something of the same situation that brought the Nazi trials. There was widespread disappointment when U.S. District Judge W. H. Cox dismissed felony charges against 17 men in connection with the murder of three civil rights workers.

FEDERAL law does not cover murder, unless committed on federal property. But because it distrusts Mississippi justice, the U.S. Justice Dept. obtained indictments charging that the 17 conspired to violate the civil rights of the three slain youths to life and liberty.

The legal basis for the charge was an 1870 statute, passed to implement the 14th Amendment, which gave full citizenship to former slaves.

The 14th Amendment, however, prescribes that "No state shall make or enforce. . ." any abridgement of the right of all to life and liberty. To convict the 17, therefore, seemed to require proof that the 17 men were acting "under color of law" of the State of Mississippi.

The indictment charged that the three young men were held in jail at Philadelphia, Miss., by the sheriff and his deputy until nightfall, and then were followed as they left town, intercepted, and shot. The official position of two of the alleged conspirators was presumed to strengthen the government's case that the murder had been perpetrated under the cover of legal procedure.

Judge Cox held that the indictment did not allege this action "under color of law," but only murder. A person's right not to be deprived of his life without due process of law was not established by the Constitution, he held, but merely guaranteed therein. The protection of this right is vested in the states, he said.

THIS WAS frustrating to federal authorities, who have been reluctant to turn over evidence gathered by the FBI in view of past state failures to act. Judge Cox's ruling, however, was similar to one returned in Georgia by U.S. Judge William A. Bootle, whose personal attitude on civil rights matters is regarded as exemplary.

The Georgia case was that of Ku Klux Klan members accused of murdering Lemuel Penn, a Negro educator of Washington. The charge was that his right to travel safely on interstate highways had been violated. The Georgia ruling is being appealed, and the ruling in that case would apply to the issue in Mississippi.

The prospect that the federal government might be able to make a civil rights case out of any instance of violence that it chose is not an agreeable one. It is not endurable, however, when local authorities, by inaction, condone murder.

The Supreme Court has been accused of legislating, which is a fair description of decisions which in effect create new law. Here is a situation in which we can watch it happen.

Somehow, the Nuremberg principle is going to be applied to these flagrant crimes. The need is too great to go unmet.

Guest Editorial

THE WRONG WAY

[David Lawrence in U. S. News & World Report]

There is a right way and a wrong way to try to achieve reform, whether it be in the realm of government or in the social life of our nation.

We pride ourselves on a belief in democracy—on the exercise of a rule of reason in our national life.

We have rejected mobocracy as the manifestation of anger, of bitterness, and of unwillingness to let the rule of reason and the processes of law prevail.

The American people have been witnessing in recent events in Alabama a failure to rely on the normal functioning of a democracy.

Whatever the provocation, the fact is that passion and threats of physical force have never bred a spirit of confidence in any constitutional system.

Unfortunately, the "demonstrations" have been led by men who should know better. The leaders have included not merely protagonists for meritorious causes, but clergymen who, while preaching nonviolence, have closed their eyes to the incitement to violence which results from street "demonstrations" and, in some cases, from defiance of the law itself.

It has been argued that the police in the south are prejudiced. But how can we explain the outbreaks in cities like Chicago and New York, where the officers of the law have been attacked and, indeed, where the cry of police "brutality" has been raised? Yet the handling of disorders and incidents that may lead to violence is the duty of the local police. We cannot delegate it to a national police force.

Understandably, "demonstrations" get publicity from coast to coast and are designed to mobilize public opinion behind worthy causes. But does this mean that we cannot utilize effectively the public forum, the printed word of the press, and the spoken word of radio and television? Cannot a righteous cause be successfully or persuasively espoused except by mobs in street "demonstrations" or by fanatics who have carried their campaign of intimidation even to the inside of the White House, only to be dragged out by police and arrested when they ignored requests to leave.

Have we had a dispassionate discussion of the race problem itself? Have we endeavored to make people on both sides of the controversy in other sections of the country, as well as in the south, aware of the complex nature of a social problem of this kind?

Essentially, the prejudices that are expressed on racial issues are not really based upon ethnic differences. They are based on the differences between man and man. Segregation has reflected a custom—a habit of our people—not merely in the south but also in the north. Gradually, the laws have decreed that the principle of segregation is invalid.

But can the principle of integration be applied by law to the satisfaction of all who have felt the sting of discrimination? Isn't there also a problem in human relationships, in educating individuals, and in paving the way for better understanding between all groups in the nation? And can this be accomplished better by mob violence than by the processes of reason?

Does anyone who is familiar with life in a southern community believe that there is hate in the hearts of a preponderant number of the citizens toward any race or population group? Even in the days of rigid segregation, whether in railroad stations or in hotels or in restaurants or in schools, the relations between whites and Negroes were far better in many parts of the south than they have become in recent years in the north.

The key to a solution of the racial problem in community life lies in a better understanding of human nature. Does anyone who has studied this problem in the south or elsewhere think for a moment that white people who have known Negroes over the years and have had personal and business relations with them are bent on inflicting hardships upon them, such as a denial of facilities for travel or of hotel accommodations or of an opportunity to get a job?

One finds that the responsible individual, irrespective of race, who is able to conduct himself or herself honestly and with due regard for the rights of others invariably wins friends who remain true to that friendship, not for just a few years but thruout their lives. Why is it that we cannot widen this relationship to that of a community? Ministers of the gospel might better devote themselves to this task than to participation in street riots.

The race question will never be solved with a policeman's club any more than by "sit-ins" or other incitement to disorder and mob violence.

We are dealing with the facts of life. Some of the "demonstrations" have turned out to be a form of organized tragedy—a way of inflaming rather than cooling passions. If this is continued, the end result can only be a retrogression, an emergence of hate and bitterness on a wide scale, with the ultimate loss of the objective itself.

There is a right way and a wrong way. The rule of reason is the right way. "Demonstrations" provocative of violence are the wrong way.

The Outspoken Mr. Stone

By Terry Turner

A BEER company, seeking information about the use of ultra-high-frequency television sets in Chicago, authorized special surveys on the city's West and South sides in late January.

Of 375 Negroes questioned, the remarkably high figure of 143 said they had TV sets which can receive UHF signals.

A producer at WCIU, Channel 26 on the UHF television dial, conducted a quick survey at the Lake Meadows shopping center in February, interviewing 150 Negroes selected at random to see who was watching his show—a news-commentary offered at 6:30 p.m. weekdays.

Among the 150, 83 said they had UHF sets (with most of those watching his show, incidentally.)

A few surveys involving a few hundred people do not a fact make. Yet, it seems apparent that Chicago Negroes have a remarkably high interest in UHF television, with from 38 to 55 per cent interested enough to invest their money to receive the UHF signals. That's more than twice the general proportion in Chicago.

There can be many reasons for the popularity of UHF among the city's Negroes. Special sales promotions by giant merchandisers account for many sales. The merchandisers make it awfully easy to buy a new TV set . . . and all new TV sets are equipped, under law, to receive UHF stations as well as the more familiar channels 2 and 5 and 7 and 9 and 11.

But some of the credit must go to the toughest, most outspoken commentator on the Chicago television scene, C. Sumner Stone, former newspaper editor, the first Negro television commentator in America.

CHUCK Stone was fired from his editor's job at The Defender, he says, because he dared to attack Negroes in front-page columns of the Negro daily newspaper.

He attacks whites with the same blithe disregard for the consequences. He'll attack anyone and any organization and praise anyone or any organization, depending solely on how he, himself, sees the subject.

He'll call the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. "brilliant" in one program and in the next point out that nonviolence inevitably breeds violence.

He'll attack Mayor Daley, praise President Johnson, criticize President Johnson, praise police superintendent O. W. Wilson, sneer at the Urban League of Chicago, make a derisive remark about the NAACP, tell a racial joke, become furious at school superintendent Benjamin Willis, laud Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, have a kind word for the late Malcolm X while arguing with Malcolm's methods.

It is provocative commentary that invariably will cause the audience — white or black — to cheer one day and snarl with fury the next.

In other words, it is commentary — something almost impossible to find on television in the United States of America, home of free speech.

Speaking at a South Side public school, he'll put himself on, emphasizing a drawl and slurring his words, grinning at the kids and saying:

"Mr. Charlie (the white man), he gonna call you a nigger. That's all right. Be a nigger. But be a SWINGIN' nigger. Stand tall. Be proud."

They'll give him a standing ovation.

Speaking on the North Shore, he'll say:

"As white liberals, you're going to be asked, 'Yes, but would you want your daughter to marry one?' That's all right. Say no. There's still room for both of us in the American society."

And they'll give him an ovation.

"IF I COULD just make 20,000 Negroes feel pride in themselves, so they'll go out and act as first-class citizens," Stone said recently during a lunch, "that's all I could want. I don't want them to debilitate themselves by being second-class citizens, by going on welfare, by taking the easy way out.

"The Bible says to love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, and all thy soul, and all thy mind . . . and thy neighbor as thyself. But the trouble with the Negro is that he doesn't love himself. How can you love your neighbor if you don't love yourself? They should believe in themselves first, not just in integration. We should seek first a quality education, not merely integrated education."

Stone's education, incidentally, is of high quality. He has a master's degree, in sociology, from the University of Chicago.

He was the first Negro hired by Carson Pirie Scott & Co., was editor of the New York Age, associate editor of the Pittsburgh Courier and editor of the Washington (D.C.) Afro-American before coming back to Chicago in August of 1963 for a 15-month stint as editor-in-chief of The Chicago Defender. All are Negro newspapers.

Since early January of this year, he has been delivering five commentaries a week at WCIU, appearing first with the easy-going news announcer, Lou House, and currently with the crisp John Evans Grigsby.

HERE are some of the things Chuck Stone has been saying to the 80,000 homes estimated to be his television audience:

"The War on Poverty can become a big fake, with the brother (Negroes) about to be shafted by somebody who was supposed to help him."

On Viet Nam: "America is trying to save a people who aren't enthusiastic about being saved. We have turned them into emotional paraplegics."

On women in politics: "Women marry us. They rear our children. They run our homes. It might not be a bad idea for them to start helping us run the country. Certainly they can do no worse than many of the idiots now in charge of our political institutions."

On Brotherhood Week: "The very same people who created America's racial problems are the same people who now find it expedient to go on a Brotherhood Week binge as if their ticket to heaven depended on it.

"Presumably they're thinking of the story about a Negro-hating Southern sheriff who had killed and beaten up Negroes and he finally died and went to heaven. When the sheriff arrived, he pounded on the Pearly Gates, seeking admission.

"A deep voice boomed out from within: 'Dis is de Lawd. Who's out dere?'

"And the Southern sheriff shrugged his shoulders, turned around and said: 'That's all right. Forget it.' "

ON THE death of Malcolm X: "Malcolm X's death was tragedy because all deaths by violence are tragedy. It proved once again that violence solves nothing, whether it is used between the races or within a race."

On slums: "Slums grow and exist for only one reason — a city permits them to exist. There is no other reason for slums."

On Washington, D.C.: "D.C. residents are the last colonials in a world where colonialism is going out of style fast. . . . Washington, D.C., is the only major city in America which has a Negro majority. In a way, this is a kind of perverse tribute to American democracy that this predominantly white country should have a capital with a Negro majority."

On juvenile delinquency among Negroes: "For the thousands . . . there is little incentive to learn, almost no motivation to succeed. Many in their miserable circumstances do overcome and live useful lives.

"But far too many slide into despair, turning to crime or a life of sheer laziness and perpetual unemployment. They become . . . the unreachables. Why? Because nobody is reaching them — the churches, the politicians, the civil rights groups, the schools, the youth agencies, the social welfare agencies. The Negro community is particularly guilty."

On Chicago politics: "Because Republicans in Chicago have turned up their noses at the Negro vote, Negroes have had no place to go but the Democratic party. The Democratic machine, of course, is aware of this dilemma and has treated Negroes like crippled stepchildren."

And, finally, on the senseless violence among the young: "Whom do we blame — the families for not raising them right? The schools for not teaching them properly? The churches for not reaching them with ethical standards? Or the city administration for worrying more about urban renewal than human renewal? Or do we look to ourselves? There are a few lines from Kahlil Gibran's moving work of poetic beauty, 'The Prophet,' that fixes the blame . . . The lines read:

" 'Oftentimes have I heard you speak of one who commits a wrong as though he were not one of you, but a stranger unto you and an intruder upon your world.

" 'But I say that even as the holy and the righteous cannot rise beyond the highest which is in each one of you,

" 'So the wicked and the weak cannot fall lower than the lowest which is in you also.

" 'And as a single leaf turns not yellow but with the silent knowledge of the whole tree,

" 'So the wrong-doer cannot do wrong without the hidden will of you all.' "

SPECIAL REPORT

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

SANCTUARIES FOR TRADITION: VIRGINIA'S NEW PRIVATE SCHOOLS

mary ellen goodman

SRC: 19
February 8, 1961

No. 45627. B-1
June 9, 1963
Reidsville, Ga.

Dear Miss Young.

I received your letter and I was so glad to hear and also glad to know that you all is trying to help me and I do appriciate it very much. and since I wrote you the other letter and I also ~~try~~ tried to get the Court minutes of my trail and I fail to get them and I am also sending you two copies along with this letter, and I also filed a petition to the Superior Court for a hablas Writ and also I fail to do any good, and this is the answer I received from the Judge of the Superior Court. And I am asking you to please turn these papers over to Mr. Mayes they might be some help to him and also to me. And I will apperciate anything that you all can do for me.

May God bless you all.

Yours Truly
Benny Frank Young

State Board of Corrections

C. O. NIXON, CHAIRMAN
W. B. MORRISON, VICE-CHAIRMAN
LYNN J. NORRIS, SR., SECRETARY
JOHN B. STANLEY, MEMBER
RICHARD W. WATKINS, JR., MEMBER

Fred Hallford, Director
Atlanta, Georgia

J. B. HATCHETT
ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR
GENERAL ADMINISTRATION
ROBERT J. CARTER
ASSISTANT DIRECTOR
CLASSIFICATION AND CUSTODY
M. H. DOYLE
ASSISTANT DIRECTOR
FINANCE AND PURCHASING
WILLIAM C. HARRIS
ASSISTANT DIRECTOR
WELFARE AND EDUCATION

June 14, 1963

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

ATTENTION: Mary Godwin

Re: Bennie F. Young, A-54357

Gentlemen:

In reply to your letter of recent date you are advised that the above named was given six 12 months sentences, said six sentences are consecutive with each other. These 12 month sentences are penitentiary sentences. Young also received six 6 months jail sentences to be served consecutively with each other making a total of thirty-six months to be served in jail. Young also received a 2-3 year sentence to follow at the expiration of all of the sentences mentioned previously.

As this case now stands, Young is tentatively scheduled to complete his first six 12 months sentences in the penitentiary system on June 22, 1966, giving him credit for statutory and extra good time allowance. On that date he will be returned to the Richmond County Jail to serve the six 6 months jail sentences. After he completes the jail sentences, he will be returned to the penitentiary system to complete the last 2-3 years, which was imposed on him.

The alleged escape which you mentioned in your letter was not alleged, but actually happened. This individual escaped from the Richmond County Public Work Camp on August 30, 1955, and was not returned to the Georgia penitentiary system until November 1, 1962.

Trusting this is the information desired, I am

Very truly yours,

Carter

Robert J. Carter, Assistant Director

RJC:bwc

HENRY H. DURRENCE
Judge Superior Courts
ATLANTIC JUDICIAL CIRCUIT
CLAXTON GEORGIA

May 30th 1963

Mr. Bennie F.Young
Box No. 45627 C-1
Reidsville, Georgia

Dear Sir:

In re: Your seven (7) page petition for habeas corpus against R.P.Balkcom, Jr., Warden, sworn to by you on May 26, 1963, together with copy thereof,

The above captioned petition for habeas corpus was received by me on May 29, 1963.

I have carefully examined the same and the same fails, in my opinion, to set forth any allegations or contentions that would authorize the issueance of the writ or your discharge if a hearing was authorized.

You failed to attach to your petition a copy of any of the court proceedings about which you complain, such as the indictments or criminal informations, pleas, sentences and the like, to corroberate or substantiate your contentions. Further, the matters about which you complain tould have been taken legal advantage of by timely and appropriate appeal to the appellate courts of Georgia, which you apparently failed to do.

Accordingly, I am herewith returning to you both the original and copy of your petition for habeas corpus without sanction.

Yours very truly,

Henry H Durrence

Henry H. Durrence, Judge Superior Court, Tattnall County, Georgia.

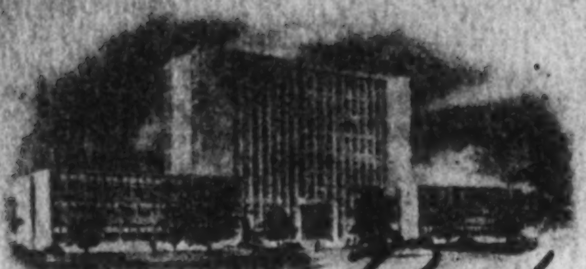
FEB. 14 1955

JUL 12 1963
1129



Richmond County, Georgia

HILLARY H. MANGUM, CLERK

MRS. HELEN M. SPELTZ, CHIEF DEPUTY
MISS JULIA F. BRODIE, DEPUTY CLERK
MRS. BELLE GLISSON, DEPUTY CLERK

CLERK SUPERIOR AND CITY COURTS
AUGUSTA-RICHMOND COUNTY MUNICIPAL BUILDING
8TH FLOOR AUGUSTA, GEORGIA

April 16th, 1963

Bennie F. Young
Box 45627 B-1
Reidsville, Georgia

Re: Bennie F. Young
Simple Larceny

Dear Sir:

In order to search the records in this office for the above stated case an approximate date must be provided. Also, it is requested that someone in authority at the prison sanction your request for copies.

Very truly yours,

Hillary H. Mangum
Clerk

HHM/ltf

Bennie Frank Young

State Board of Corrections

Atlanta, Georgia

PRISONER'S RECORD SHEET—

Re: [illegible] Young No. M-66477

Alias

Color Colored Age 46

Convicted of Simple Larceny (6 cases)

in Richmond County on the 14th day of February, 1955 and received a sentence of 12 months (6) consec.; 6 months Jail (6) consec.

and has been assigned to the Richmond County Public Works Camp
Name of Institution

Minimum sentence without extra good time expires on __________, and maximum sentence without extra good time expires 7-23-67. If you maintain a good record you will become eligible for parole consideration in __________, 19____. If you are serving a life sentence you will become eligible for parole consideration after completing seven (7) years in the penitent[illegible] system.

In computing this time you have been allowed 8 mos. & 22 days; forfeit 26 days statutory good time as provided by law.

In addition to statutory good time, you will be allowed to earn extra good time by maintaining a good work and conduct record. This extra good time will be credited as follows: 6 days off per month.

This the 9th day of November, 19 62

NEW RECORD SHEET

Director

ESCAPED 3-31-55;
RECAPTURED 11-1-62

STATE BOARD OF CORRECTIONS

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr Benny Frank young
45627. CQ
Reidvill .GA.

Dear Miss Margery Long I'm writeing you in the Regard of my Case an hope that you Com Would be able to Recommen me to your Or Regional ine. for legion help or a Counsel I will explain detaile Comton the fall in my Case to which I was Convicted 6 Count of Simila lostion or Break, ines to Witch I was not offen or a lawer an send I found out I ~~fo~~ was not Prover, ~~Rea~~ RepZent to a Counsel, I will apperatoke if you Could appointme me a lawer, from your organition to look into my Case an see is their anything in my Favor if I Not I will hozhly appertake anyone to Recommen me to give me some help so I will Close at this time an truly hope to get a Reply from you Concerning this letter, Yours truly Sincerly Mr Benny Frank Young,

Miss Morrgorer Long,

Mr Benny Frank young
CQ, 45627, -.45627.

①

[redacted]

Bennie Frank Young
No 45627-B1
Reidsville Ga

Dear Miss Lang

I am Answering you Letter that I recived on febuary 6-63 an you Ask me to rite more about my Case So I am Sending you the Whole Detail of it the best that I Can I Could Explain it more better if I Had Some one to talk to face to face Listen in 1954 I Dont Rember the Date that I Was Caught buy the City Police of Augusta Ga With 6 used Car tires Wich Supose to ben one Pettie-Larceny Case because all Six of the tires Came from the Same Place an they used brutality buy force for me to for me to Singe Papers Witch I Did Not Knew What The Papers Was as you Under Stand that I am a unedgecated Colored Man an the Papers Witch I Singe Was Change to 6 Cases of Breaking and Entring an on febuary 14-1955 in Richmond County Court I Was Carried Before the County Judge an at the very Last Minaut the Judge Painted me a Lawer an the Case Was Not thurly Inveastey[illegible]ed buy the Lawer because He did Not Have time and You Can See I Was Given Six 12 Months Sentence and Six 6 Months Sentence and then it was Change to Simple Larceny 6 Cases in Wich my Constatian Righten Have ben taking because I Did No get Justice in Court and I am very Sorry that I took the Wrong Step on August 31- in 1955 Wich Was the day that I Escaped an Was ReCaptured on November 1-1962 and on November 16-1962 I Was tried for Escape and Given a one to two Year Sentence Running Seperd from the time

That I already Had and Wich I Did Not Get Justice in That Case I Could Explain it more better if I Had Some one to talk to face to face So I Hope you Can Understand ~~[illegible]~~ How my Situation is and I am very Glad that you Have my Sympathy an Will try to Get Some one to Help me Sister Miss Lang I am Sending you my time Sheet an it might be Some Help to you on my Case and When you are finish With it Please Send it Back to me I Will appriSheate it very much if there is any Help that I Can Get on it if I Cant be able to Gain my freedom I am Sure that it Could be Some Way that I Could Have Justice the Lawer that you Was Speaking of I am Sure that they Can do Something So I Will be Looking to Hear from you very Soon

Sincerley
Bernie Frank Young

Effective September 1, 1958

VISITING REGULATIONS

Georgia State Prison
Reidsville, Georgia

White Inmates: 1st and 3rd weekend of each month

Colored Inmates: 2nd and 4th weekend of each month

Visiting Hours:

Saturday	8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.	1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Sunday	8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.	1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Inasmuch as the major portion of visiting is done on Sundays, a week end is determined by the Sundays of the calendar. For example, the first and third week end would be the first and third Sundays, the second and fourth week end would be the second and fourth Sundays. Fifth Sunday is fifth week end and is open for all visiting. Holiday visiting is permitted as follows: New Year's Day, July 4th, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

[illegible] 12 1963

1129

B. J. Perry

June 25, 1963
42677-B-4
Reidsville, Ga

Dear Mrs Long:

I am extremly sorry to have waited so long to write and let you know what my "out-come" has been, but the truth is I have been so upset and disgusted I have been hardly able to do anything.

Listen Mrs Long just as soon as we get the necessary postage we shall sent you the copy of the Honorable Judge Durrence Answer to my writ. Although I did appear before him on the date stated in the letter I sent you. And did explain the facts of my case as I have written to you in part. Also the documents of my trail fully attest to my statements and writ. ..

In the light of all I have been able to show – I am sure it is quite obvious to them, that I am innocent. And have been greaviously wronged by the court in Mitchell county (They have unmistakably indicated as much) but the fact remain that I am not able to demand or assert my legal rights.

I am still hoping that you will be able to help me. In the mean while I am trying to get a hearing in the Federal court. please write me soon – so that I will know you heard from me. B.J. Perry

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

JAMES M. DABBS, PRESIDENT
ALBERT W. DENT, VICE PRESIDENT
MARION A. WRIGHT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOSEPHINE WILKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT
RUFUS E. CLEMENT, VICE-PRESIDENT
JOHN H. WHEELER, CHAIRMAN
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
JOSEPH HAAS, COUNSEL
LESLIE W. DUNBAR, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 FORSYTH STREET, N. W.
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA
JAckson 2-8764

A Council to attain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South

December 3, 1963

Miss Edith M. Carter
730 Riverside Drive
New York City 31, New York

Dear Miss Carter:

Thank you for your good letter which is, indeed, a sharp little essay in itself. I am in thorough accord with your opinions. Knowing so many other young white Southerners of enlightened and liberal bent, I venture to promise you that even Mississippi will come before long to know that no "one race should have the monopoly over the earth," as you put it. In fact, even at Ole Miss, I found many youngsters who are obviously moving out of this attitude or who are already in a more rational and human state of mind.

Sincerely,

Margaret Long

Margaret Long
Editor, New South

ML/mg

The Georgia Sea Island Singers from St. Simons Island will be featured at the festival. This group represents the oldest survival of early American Negro folk music to be found today. Their extensive and varied treasury of old inherited songs includes spirituals and shouts, work songs, dances, children's songs, games and ring plays -- all sung in authentic ante-bellum style. The group which has been performing at the Cloisters Hotel on Sea Island, Georgia for nearly fity years, has in the past year travelled all over the United States appearing at College concerts and folk festivals. In addition to receiving high acclaim in such cities as Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago, they were recently a great favorite at the National Folk Festival held in Newport, Rhode Island.*

*The Newport Folk Foundation is giving financial assistance to this festival, as they did to the first one in October.

Georgia Sea Islands

The rich-in-tradition way of life on these isolated islands is little known to the outside world.

Fringing the coast of Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia is a chain of low. wooded and often fertile islands, separated from the mainland by sea marsh and mangrove swamp. In the days of slavery the islands to the south, near Charleston, Savannah and Brunswick, particularly, were the sites of large and extremely rich rice plantations, in which the slave system reached its Fringing the coast of Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia is a chain of low, wooded and often fertile islands, separated from the mainland by sea marsh and mangrove swamp. In the days of slavery the islands to the south, near Charleston, Savannah and Brunswick, particularly, were the sites of large and extremely rich rice plantations in which the slave system reached its peak of efficiency. Because of their exposure to sea attack, parts of these islands were seized early in the Civil War by Union troops. The slaves were freed and at the conclusion of hostilities much of the land was turned over to them. These ex-slaves formed independent communities, which have endured in a relatively isolated state, cut off by swamp and sea, until today.

The folk of the Sea Islands kept to the speech of their ancestors and, in some places, still speak dialects in which many African words and syntactical features survive. Their folk and animal tales show a rich admixture of European and African traits at an early stage of blending. Their funeral customs, their religious ceremonies, indeed, their whole way of life bear the stamp of ante-bellum days. Yet this is no decadent culture. It has simply grown strong around a conservative base which is part pioneer, part planter gentility and part African.

There is an atmosphere in the Sea Islands unlike that of any other community in America. The air is soft and balmy. The huge, old live oaks, spreading their arms festooned with moss, make every road a green cathedral nave. The sea is full of fish and crab to be caught and eaten; the woods still abound with game. The little settlements are peaceful, hospitable and neighborly. The two races live together in a fair degree of dignity and mutual respect touching everyone with its calm and joyful spirit. In the settlements along the marshy arms of the sea live Negroes with a wit to tell folk tales, with bodies agile in the dance and with a deep love of the songs of their ancestors. These songs are solo-chorus in style, generally litany in form, set to straightforward four-beat rhythm but with a vast amount of free-playing, polymetric accompaniment.

In the days of slavery, almost every task and every hour of the day was relieved with song. There were songs for the rice fields, for rowing, for log rolling, for fishing, as well as a huge body of religious songs of many types. Of these, by far the most interesting is the shout, an African derived, American Negro dance. The singers sometimes move in a counter-clockwise circle around the church, shuffling their feet flat along the floor, watched by the deacon lest they cross their legs in an unseemly and "devilish" manner, clapping and singing strongly as they move their bodies in a truly African way. It is out of such songs that the later, more legatto, spirituals grew. The shouts are linked directly with the more hectic and less poetic Holy Roller songs today.

FONDATION NATIONALE
DES
SCIENCES POLITIQUES

Service des Périodiques

Réf. PER 64/401

PARIS, LE 14 Février 1964
27, RUE SAINT-GUILLAUME (VIIe)

NG/ACC

Gentlemen,

You have kindly accepted to place our Library on your mailing list for New South.

The following issues are missing in our collection and we should be very grateful if you could mail them to us :

N° 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 1963.

Thank you beforehand for your cooperation.

J. MEYRIAT

Director of Documentation.

sent
2/24/64
MG

NEW SOUTH
Southern regional Council
5 Forsyth Street
N.W. Atlanta 3 (Georgia)
U.S.A.

FOUNDED 1908

cable: FRANKSQUARE

THE FRANKLIN SQUARE SUBSCRIPTION AGENCY

545 Cedar Lane • Teaneck, New Jersey • 201 TEaneck 6-8700

1964-65 PERIODICAL HANDBOOK LISTING INFORMATION

New South
A monthly magazine covering the facts and opinions on southern race relations; devoted to Southern Regional Council's belief in equality for all Southerners.
Ed: Margaret Long, Atlanta Ga, 11 issues $2.00. One vol beg Jan; Vol 20 beg Jan 1963. No index. Indexed in Readers Guide.

Please indicate in which publishing classification you should be listed:

☐ General Interest and Farm

☐ Business, Financial and Trade

☐ Educational, Medical, Scientific and Technical

(If you wish to be listed in more than one section, please indicate above. The charge for one listing is $15.00; for each additional $10.00.)

☐ Please send more information about display advertising.

Check for $________ enclosed

Date______________

COMPANY______________________________

ADDRESS______________________________

CITY____________________ZONE______STATE__________

AUTHORIZED BY______________________________

TITLE______________________________

Migrant Study

Following, generally, are results of discussion Wednesday, Feb. 12, among Miss Margaret Long, Dr. Eric Lincoln, Dr. Joe Golden, Pat Watters...

Dr. Golden's class totals 30 students, Dr. Lincoln's ten. Of these, six are white. While it was agreed that there might be some problems involved in interviews by different races, these were not considered insurmountable. Details on this would be worked out in planning with students. Interviewing by Miss Long and Mr. Watters would help. The need to get the study organized right away in order to give students as much time as possible during the next semester (through May) was pointed out.

What is to be finally done with the findings is not yet known. Independently of the students' survey work, Miss Long and Mr. Watters will attempt to get to know several families of migrants and talk with them at length and in depth about the same things that the student interviews cover. The assumption is that results of these two approaches can be used to reinforce or correct findings of each, and more than likely suggest other things that need to be known. It was pointed out that some kind of publication of survey findings would be gratifying to the students who participate. It was also informally agreed that findings would be available to both institutions (Atlanta U. and SRC) and to individuals among the four of us for whatever use might be made of them. Expenses of the survey were discussed briefly: the mimeographing of the schedules (which could be done by SRC) and bus fares were mentioned. The latter cost could (could not) be borne by SRC. It was agreed that interviewers would probably find easiest acceptance by saying they were conducting the survey for Atlanta University--the assumption being that nearly anyone would understand university.

There was general discussion of the aims of the study, which included the point that the unscientific members of the planning team really just wondered what is it with poor people moved to the city from the farm, and the refinement of this by the scientific branch into measurable terms; and included the point that SRC is interested in the situation of such people simply as one general problem of the South, although its relevence to the racial situation can't be overlooked, and included the point that one thing the study might point up is that something other than race is the cause for conditions of deprivation which in stereotyped thinking often are blamed on race.

From the discussion, the following was developed:

1. A hypothesis: That the experiences of poor Negro rural migrants to Atlanta are similar to the experiences of poor white rural migrants to Atlanta...and these further assumptions:

1. That the background of the two groups are similar.
2. That the characteristics of the two groups are similar.
3. That what has happened to the two groups in Atlanta has been similar.

2. Sample. It would include only poor rural farm migrants, and not persons with non-farm rural backgrounds. It would consist of 200 persons, if we assign five interviews per student. We did not define poor. It should conform with census groupings so that our sample can be compared with the total migrant population of Atlanta. We also did not decide finally whether all respondents should be married, or whether we would interview single persons, and we did not discuss whether we will interview all of one sex, or try for a balance between husbands and wives. From the unscientific end here, only married people and preferably ones with children are preferred, and a mixture of husbands and wives. We defined migrants as people living in Atlanta a year or less.

It was agreed that the best way of finding people in the categories we want will be to knock on doors in areas where large numbers of migrants live. If the areas are large enough, sampling techniques will be used to find respondents. Mr. Watters will get as soon as possible, if possible, maps of such areas.

3. Methodology. The schedule was discussed generally. It was agreed that it will include sections on (1) Background; (2) What Caused Respondent to Move; (3) Descriptions of Who Respondents Are; (4) What Has Happened to Them in Atlanta.

Our discussion of Background got this far: We would want to know the following: Plance where the respondent came from, the name of the county and state, and an estimate of the population of the county (or settlement?) This could be compared with census data. Occupation in the rural area, including income. Income might be reported in terms of weekly pay and how many weeks worked last year, or in terms of how much was the largest and smallest amounts of money the family ever made farming in a year. Church. Frequency of attendance where came from; preference there; whether or not the respondent held an office in the church; whether there was home worship. Leisure Activity. How much time spent hunting, fishing, playing cards, visiting neighbors and kin, watching tv. Diet. A general question along lines of whether the family eats different in town from in the country, and how. Also: How many meals a day on the farm; how many in city? Which is big meal of day in country, in city? (This is as far as we got...Following are suggestions from this end...): What did parents of husband and wife do for living? What kind of schools did kids go to on farm? How many months per year? How often would they go to town to shop? What kind of house did they have on the farm? How many rooms? What arrangements for water, toilet, washing? Lights? Was electricity available? Did the roof leak? How was house heated? Did children seem happier/ less happy/ about the same/ there as compared with city? Did family have dogs or cats for pets? Do they now? What does the family miss most from the farm? What are they gladdest to get away from?

2. Reasons for leaving?

Was it impossible any longer to make a living? Was the farm sold out from under them? Was it because of a death of someone else who had helped with the farming work? Did the family figure they could make a better living in the city? Why? More jobs? Better pay? Wife could work? Was it for better schools for the children? Was it for educational opportunities (night school, industrial training) for the parents? Other reasons? (This may seem non-essential, but we would be interested in how they moved their things--by truck, car, what? Or did they just leave furniture behind, and plan to get some more in the city?) What did family think it would find in city in terms of job, schools, home, recreation, good things of life?

3. Descriptions of who the respondents are:
Age, sex, race, education, skills or trade or other training, present occupation, present income, number of children, any others living in same home, medical problems, (if feasible) criminal record, (again if feasible) does respondent look about the age he gives and how is respondent dressed/ how well groomed? Own tv? Takes a paper? Own a car? Vintage?

4. What has happened to them in Atlanta?
Did they have a place to come to live, or temporary place to stay while looking? Did family move together or husband come first? Did husband or wife have a job when came? How did they find home? How many homes so far in Atlanta? Were they evicted from any home? What the rent? Condition of home: number rooms, their repair, heat, electricity, plumbing, amount of yard for children. Is it a better or worse home than they had in country? Does family hope to find a better place to live? When? Was there any time when family had no place to stay in city? City religious life: what denomination/ any offices/ home worship/ how often attend/ reasons for any change of these. City recreation: what is done here that wasn't done in country; what was done in country that isn't done here? At which place did family seem to enjoy life the most? Any difference in children's play: more playmates; different games; are they "out" as much as on farm; is there as much supervision by parents? Do they behave as well in city? City occupation: how decide what kind of job to seek? how go about seeking job? government employment office used? how long did it take to get a job? how many jobs so far? longest time out of work so far? in present job, what hours, what conditions? seeking better? hopes of advancement? does wife work? does she want to? City schooling: how soon did children start to school after moving? are kids all in school? were they put back because of previous inadequate schools? do they like their new schools better than country ones? why? are classes bigger/smaller? school itself bigger? home work as frequent? work as hard? do children engage in more or less school activities? Assistance form city: has family received any kind of assistance from government or private agencies? If so, how did they find out this was available? If received no help, what services do they know of that they might receive if they needed it? How find this out? Did any one, including neighbors, welcome them to their new home? Offer to explain things, and show them around? How do they like having more neighbors and closer ones? Do they get along with neighbors? How long? Has there been any time in city when family didn't have enough to eat? Living expenses: Does it cost more to live in city? In what ways? What things are less expensive? Is it easier for wife to shop for food and clothing, other things? Does all family have enough clothes? Living patterns: Does family get up earlier or later? Go to bed earlier or later? Eat at different times? Spend more time working, or less? More time recreation, or less? Goals: education goals for children? what kind of job does father want? how much salary? does family need a new car? what new things for house? clothes? what would be the ideal home for the family? everything considered, would the family rather be where it is, or back on the farm, assuming a good living could be made either place?

All too obviously, these are just random things we feel we would like to know. We have missed much, and put too much in. But at least these questions could serve as guiding points or beginning points for your own development of information needed and specific q questions.

The next step agreed on was that Dr. Lincoln and Dr. Golden would get together and supply their own view of information needed, and work out plans for schedules and interviewing and confer back with us. So, until then...

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Raper, 2765 Gwinette Drive, Macon, Georgia

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hummon, c/o University Labs, Friday Harbor, Wash.,

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison C. Raper, c/o Dr. Harold Tryon, South Harpswell, Maine.

Dr. and Mrs. Jarrell Raper, Box 39, Veterans Administration Hospital,
Richmond, Virginia.

Mrs. M. E. Matthews, 216 N. Candler Street, Decatur, Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Schnerer, 1175 Cleveland Heights Boulevard, Cleveland Heights 21, Ohio.

Dr. and Mrs. Joe Summers, 6929 Columbia, University City, Missouri

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Jones, 23 Johnson Avenue, Newnan, Georgia

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Kuhn, 3116 Cathedral Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Loental, Oakton, Virginia

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ludlow, 414 Cleve Drive, Falls Church, Virginia

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. McNeal, 908 Ninth Avenue West, Birmingham, 4, Ala.

Dr. and Mrs. Carl C. Taylor
3139 N. Abingdon, Arlington, Virginia

Dr. and Mrs. G. Warren Gignilliatt, 4840 Forsyth Road, Macon, Georgia

Mr. and Mrs. Carol Fulkerson, 231 Nayatt Road, Barrington, Rhode Island
~~69 Power Street, Providence, 6, Rhode Island~~

Mr. Roscoe Dunjee, c/o The Black Despatch, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Dr. and Mrs. Carl B irky, Rt. 1, Box 61, Fort Collins, Colo.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright G. Baker, 2500 Q Street, N.W., Washington 7, D. C.

~~Dr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Jackson,~~

Desegregated Restaurants in Atlanta

Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations

July, 1963

Yohannon's
Sellers (Piedmont Hotel)
The Farm
Herren's
Camilla Gardens
Emile's (off and on)
Escoe's
Caruso's
Davis Brothers
Johnny Rebb's
Crossroads
Big Boy Drive-in Seven Steers
Miami Buffet
House of Eng
S & W
Bradshaw's
Howard Johnson's
Dales Cellar
Rex' Fine Foods
(The Rivera and Four Seasons for private parties.)

ICES

Johnson Rallies 35 Governors

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson received a standing ovation from 35 governors Monday night after a stirring appeal for unity among all Americans, regardless of party.

Johnson had called the governors hastily into a session at his offices in the Executive Office Building.

Many were reached as they prepared to board planes on their way home from attending the funeral of President John F. Kennedy.

Republican Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York described Johnson's speech to the 20-minute session as a "very moving statement for unity in America."

He said Johnson appealed for the support of the governors as Americans, without regard for partisanship and "had the full endorsement of all present. They gave him a standing ovation. It was a most impressive demonstration of unity in the face of our problems."

SPECIAL ALL DAY TUESDAY
CHICKEN POT PIE 39c
HEAD LETTUCE with Dressing 12c
Chocolate Chiffon Pie 12c
AND THE FINEST FRESH VEGETABLES IN THE SOUTH!
Davis Bros
CAFETERIA
Belvedere Plaza Shopping Center
Bolton — Moores' Mill Shopping Cente
51 4-Lane Highway, Marietta
642 Lee Street, S.W. (West End)
State Farmers' Market
820 West Peachtree St., N.W:
714 Oglethorpe Ave., Albany, Ga.
Toco Hills Shopping Center

Graham Jacks

Letter To a Columnist

(To understand this letter to Kays Gary of the Charlotte, N.C., Observer, the reader should know that the letter came to Mr. Gary from a white child who is living in a neighborhood which in the last four years has changed from predominantly white to predominantly Negro.)

Dear Mr. Gary:

My name is Max. I am eight years old. I need someone to play with because I am an only child. My mother and father have told me that you know the stork. If you see him tell him to send me a little WHITE brother or sister or both.

Sincerely,
Max L
North Graham st.,
Charlotte, N. C.

Dear Max:

Your mother and father are right. I do know the stork — twice as well as they do, in fact. But I have not seen him for a long, long time and to tell the absolute truth I have not been looking for him.

The stork and I agree. Boys need little brothers and sisters. You will have a hard time convincing those who already have them of this need but it is true.

Just like you, I had no brothers or sisters. Unlike you, I had no trouble finding somebody to play with.

My best friends at your age were two little boys who went away every Summer. They were white.

In the Summer I had a friend whose name was T. C. He was brown. His Mama cooked for some people down the road.

T. C. was a pretty good runner and wrestler. He was better at climbing trees. And when we picked blackberries he picked them twice as fast as I could and it made me mad.

"Don't you mind," he said. "I can't help bein' a gooder picker'n you."

And then he would give me some of his berries so we would have the same.

★

Somebody to play with? We "kicked-the-can" and shot marbles and built dams in the creek. We'd go prospecting for gold, but instead of gold we found muscadine vines to swing on and green apple trees and wild plums and tummy aches.

We also found baby terrapins and baby rabbits in their nests and smooth, round stones and we made slingshots.

One time we found a big turtle only we called it a cooter, but we didn't try to catch it because T. C. said if it got a-hold of your toe it wouldn't turn loose till it thundered and there wasn't a cloud in the sky and nobody wants to drag a cooter around on his toe for no tellin' how long. So we poked at it with a stick and I admired T.C.'s wisdom when it grabbed hold of that stick.

Besides being a good slingshot maker, T.C. knew how to carve the bark off a sapling to make a pretty stick. He gave 'em to his mother to stir clothes with in the wash pot. These were his gifts to her.

But I could read better than T. C. and sometimes he would listen. One day we walked to his school. It was better than two miles out there and it was a ramshackle place with a busted stove. Everybody who went there had to walk or they did walk, anyway. Our school had a furnace and buses.

★

The matter of color came up only twice in my memory.

One time his Mama made us wash our hands before giving us a piece of pie and I told T. C. he was lucky because if he didn't get his hands clean nobody would know it.

"Huh," he said. "Mama, she can tell. She 'bout rub your hide off!"

The other time was when we were cutting flips in the cotton seed house at the gin and a man hollered:

"Hey! You little niggers get outta there!"

We ran. We ran till we gave out of breath and flopped down on a bank of honeysuckle and T. C. said: "How come he said that? You ain't no nigger!"

His chin was trembling and his eyes were wild, then wet, and all of a sudden he started crying.

We didn't know what we were crying about, but it was bad, all right, and I said the only thing I could think of.

"You ain't no nigger, T. C. He's the nigger!"

"No, he ain't," T. C. sobbed, rocking his face down in the honeysuckle. "He ain't no nigger. He's as white as you."

That, Max, is the last thing I remember about my friend. He walked to his ramshackle school with the busted stove and I went to the brick school with the furnace where the buses rolled.

A lot of things have happened since then and there have been two wars. The only thing I know is that if he's alive he is about my age and he may be a bad man or he may be a good man. I can only remember him as a little boy and he was a good boy.

I have written all this because, no matter where you live, there must be a good little boy to play with. Your mother and father, though, must decide. Meanwhile, I'll try to get your message to the stork.

Sincerely,

KAYS GARY

It hasn't in Atlanta
Chamblee Flora because trans. supply good enough
from rural

The migration to the North has not made a dent in the South's maid supply. They like the South. Agencies in the North write Merry Way all the time wanting Mrs. Drewry to send up live-in maids. She says, "The scarcest thing in this country today is the live-in maid." Due to the rapid growth of the city, live-in maids are becoming scarcer. The larger the city, the scarcer maids are. Mrs. Drewry says that there are no more maids here who are willing to go North. N. Y. maids get $15-18 a day

The beginning salary for maids is $30 a week plus transportation costs. Maids make from $30-$45 a week plus transportation. Occasionally a maid may make $50. Children's nurses seldom make more than $30 a week plus carfare. Cooks average [illegible]$7 a day plus carfare. Day workers make between $6-$7 a day plus transportation. Butlers make between $50-$60 a week (5 day week). One butler in Atlanta makes $100 a week. Gardeners make $1.25 an hour and are very hard to find. The salaries of domestics, men and women, have tripled since the war. in 1957, the starting salary for maids was $25 a week. Live-in maids used to get Wednesdays and Sundays off, but had to cook breakfast and straighten up the house before leaving. Now, although this sometimes is still the case, they usually get two full days off, usually Sunday and Monday. Since most live-in maids are from out of town, getting two days off together is quite an advance.

seldom over 35
max $40

Men domestics are so scarce because men won't work under intolerable conditions, while unskilled women will take much more. Since war, not many men have been brought up to do domestic work, Have forgotten other unskilled jobs construction jobs particularly which have not been affected by automation

Since war, unskilled

Franklin

State Unem Comp

ask about

Call her at Plaza

T,

Ja 42411

Ja 1 0376

NAACP Ask Probe Of Deputizing Of Firemen

Mon. March 23

State NAACP leaders have asked the federal government to look into the "real reasons" for Mayor Haydon Burns' swearing in 496 firemen as special law officers after stating that further racial demonstrations will not be tolerated.

Burns went on radio and television Saturday to give "a clear understanding as to the official position that will be taken in the City of Jacksonville."

Burns said that "events of recent weeks and days by certain individuals, such as the bombing of a Negro home, are repulsive to every American whether he be white or colored. I personally hope that those found guilty will receive the maximum penalty of the law."

Burns said he has not prevented peaceful and orderly picketing "in reasonable numbers of not more than six persons. Racial picket line regulations have been and will continue to be enforced in exactly the same manner as labor or other contractual disputes," Burns said.

"Certain adults in recent days have told some Negro youths that their civil rights entitle them to force their presence at certain hotels, restaurants and other businesses." Burns said.

"As mayor of all the people, I want to set these youths straight. You do not have the right."

Burns said, "As mayor head of the government I am going to see that every legal right is preserved. . . the full forces of the law enforcemnet branch of government and the courts will be utilized to protect that right."

At the end of the broadcast, Burns swore in the firemen, saying that more than 1,000 law enforcement officers are now available to every citizen and every visitor to this city so that they may have assurance that peace will prevail.

Robert W. Saunders, NAACP state secretary, said yesterday he has asked the Civil Rights Commission to hold a full-scale hearing on the incident and that they investigate the real reasons behind the move.

Saunders said a recent federal decision, "in the estimation of our attorneys, prohibits the type of action you are reported willing to use."

State NAACP President Rutledge Pearson said immediately after the broadcast that he was "surprised at the mayor. I had expected him to use his influence to end discrimination."

SEND FLOWERS . .
the greatest comfort in time of sorrow
ALLIED FLORISTS N. E. FLA

★ ★ ★

Mon. March 23

Bombs Hit Burns' HQ; 3 Arrested

Three Molotov cocktails were shattered against a building housing the East Jacksonville campaign headquarters of gubernatorial candidate Haydon Burns during the night.

Only minor damage was done to the two-story building at Florida Avenue and Odessa Street, firemen said.

Assistant Fire Marshall C. D. Banks said his office is investigating the incident.

City police arrested three Negro teen-agers 90 minutes after the fire bombs were thrown.

Patrolman C. W. Moyer arrested W. W. Funches, 18, of 664 Franklin Ave., Anthony L. Armstrong, 17, of 1033 Grant St. and L. L. Furlow, 17, of 814 Van Buren St. at 1:35 a.m.

The youths were charged with vagrancy and are being held without bond for further investigation.

Banks said three bottles filled with kerosene were broken against the building. Fire trucks were called to the scene but the wooden structure was only scorched.

Light bulbs filled with paint also were thrown against the campaign poster-covered walls, leaving streaks, Banks said.

JACKSONVILLE'S OFFICIAL STAND TO PRESERVE HARMONIOUS COMMUNITY RELATIONS

Chief Executive calls on Youth, Parents, Community Leaders, and every citizen to understand and cooperate with all laws.

COMMUNITY ASSURED CONTINUOUS PEACE

In the Public Interest and to avoid misunderstanding or misinterpretation the full text of the official Message broadcast at 6 P.M. Saturday, March 21, 1964 is presented herewith.

A MESSAGE TO ALL CITIZENS

As your Mayor-Commissioner and Chief Executive of this community I first want to state that there is no emergency at this time — the purpose of this broadcast is to assure every citizen that there will be no emergencies in the future.

I appreciate the cooperation of the T.V., Radio stations and Newspapers in making this service available to us all.

I also want to thank the law enforcement officers for their presence as well as the other officials with whom I have discussed this situation, Sheriff Carson, Judge Santora and the other court officials.

My purpose tonight is to present to every community leader and to every citizen a clear understanding as to the official position that will be taken in the city of Jacksonville.

A review of situations past and current and what every citizen can expect in the future, beginning right now. As Mayor of all the people I

As Mayor, head of the government, I am going to see that every legal right is preserved, and in every instance that a citizen takes the prescribed and required action, the full forces of the law enforcement branch of government and the courts will be utilized to protect that legal right.

Certain adults in recent days have told some negro youth that civil rights entitle them to force their presence at certain hotels, restaurants and other businesses.

As Mayor of all the people, I want to set these youth straight. You do not have such a legal or civil right. If such were not the case, if such were not the law, then why is the Congress considering the Public Accommodations law at this time?

These same adults have led these young people to think that they have the right to congregate in public streets, parks or at public buildings. You do not have such a right under the law.

what the laws provide:

rt Carson, Judge Sanford and the other court officials.

My purpose tonight is to present to every community leader and to every citizen a clear understanding as to the official position that will be taken in the city of Jacksonville.

A review of situations past and current and what every citizen can expect in the future—beginning right now. As Mayor of all the people I both personally and officially ask for the helpful assistance of every school teacher, every principal, every minister, every parent, every businessman and every community leader.

I do not intend my comments should constitute a threat — but rather an understanding, a request for cooperation. My remarks are motivated by certain actions of a certain few individuals, or organized groups of opposing forces. Both White groups and Negro groups—I'm talking to both.

Certain actions by self-appointed leaders of both groups have provoked the majority of the citizens of both races to the degree that I feel this statement tonight is absolutely necessary. As a warning to some; but more especially as an assurance to the 99% and a fraction of our citizens who have, and want no problems with their fellow citizens.

I do not care what actions or requests or threatened reprisals may come from any pressure groups—I am the elected head of this city, both as the Mayor and Police and Fire Commissioner. I am the legally constituted head of government and the spokesman for this city. A capacity in which I have ably served for fifteen years. I refuse to delegate or to relegate this responsibility to anyone or any bi-racial committee or any other group, it is my responsibility and I will face it.

Events of recent weeks and days by certain individuals, such as the bombing of a Negro home is repulsive to every American whether he be white and colored. I personally hope that those guilty will receive the maximum penalty of the law.

The acts of mass or mob demonstrations or roving gangs is also just as un-American.

As the head of government I have issued approval in writing for parades which have been conducted along specific routes and at pre-arranged and agreed times and directed by the Traffic Division of the Police Department.

I have not prevented peaceful and orderly picketing in reasonable numbers of not more than six persons. I observe that the White House is picketed every day at Washington. Racial picket line regulations have been and will continue to be enforced in the same manner as labor or other contractual disputes.

Every citizen in Jacksonville enjoys his or her legal or civil right. The use of every public-owned or tax supported building or facility is available to all.

The matter of public services are rendered to all on an impartial basis. Employment through civil service is no longer a matter in which race is a deterent factor by law or by policy.

No citizen has just cause for complaint against the government of the people of Jacksonville.

Many merchants and other businesses as a matter of policy cater to all citizens. This is their own personal determination.

Other establishments have chosen a different policy under existing law, and this is their right.

My point is, that every citizen, the merchant, the white customer, the negro customer—everyone has his rights — and in Jacksonville no one has been deprived of his Civil Rights. The word civil means legal. So no citizen has been deprived of his legal rights.

have such a legal or civil right. If such were not the case, if such were not the law, then why is the Congress considering the Public Accommodations law at this time?

These same adults have led these young people to think that they have the right to congregate in public streets, parks or at public buildings. You do not have such a right under the law.

Now I am going to tell everyone what the laws provide:

First, a permit is required before any gathering can assemble in any public place. Permits for park assembly are granted by the City Commission. Other public gatherings, whether parades or assembly, require written permits from the Mayor's office. Gatherings other than by permit are a violation of law.

Now, I am a Christian, and I respect all religions, but this city is not going to permit law violations or the flouting of law by those who hide behind a sacrilegious shield of prayer.

Now—there will be no more demonstrations like last week. They will not be tolerated.

The City of Jacksonville will fully employ every applicable law against any who would disturb the peace by any unlawful act.

I hold in my hands 12 laws. Every one of which is applicable in this sort of case. First, the law that vests the power in the mayor and police commissioner; a law against assemblage on the streets without a permit; a law against disorderly conduct; a law against loitering or soliciting in hotels or offices, a law assembling crowds in streets or public spaces without a permit; a law providing for the clearing of streets and requiring a permit for parades; a law stating that any state law that is violated must be enforced by the law enforcement officers of the City of Jacksonville.

Now, another law that any person refusing to depart from the premises at the request of the owner or manager is subject under the trespass law to arrest under state statute. A trespass after warning is another law; the ejection of undesirable guests, to ask them to leave and to present them with a notice is sufficient to enact and to put this law into force; a law against gathering or riots or routs or unlawful assembly; and, a law against conspiracy. For those who would lead others to violate the law, this is equally applicable. Every one of these laws will be put in force to preserve the good name, the attraction, and the pleasantry of living in this city.

I will continue to issue assemblage or parade permits at reasonable intervals, upon proper request and when I feel the best interest of the public will not be disturbed.

I hope that every citizen understands what I have said.

In the Jacksonville Police Department there are 508 colored and white police officers. Within that number are 45 specially trained members of the Emergency Corps that are capable of meeting any situation. I am right now going to give the oath and swear in as Special Police Officers 496 Firemen who at this moment are assembled at their respective stations under the direction of their senior officers. The Chiefs of both the Fire and Police with their assistants are here in my office with me. If you gentlemen will rise and raise your right hand and if the gentlemen in the department will do likewise, you will take the following oath.

Do you solemnly swear to uphold and defend the Constitutions and laws of the United States, the State of Florida, and the City of Jacksonville, so help you God? You will answer "I do."

From this message and backed by all officials and the courts and now more than 1,000 law enforcement officers every citizen and every visitor to this city may have the assurance that peace will prevail.

HAYDON BURNS, Mayor-Commissioner

CITY OF JACKSONVILLE

Augusta Chronicle Mar. 24, 1964

Jacksonville unrest has abrupt ending

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—It was a quiet Saturday evening and a slim, tense Negro teacher sat in a room with a group of his pupils watching television.

The warm spring air outside was almost too much for the youngsters. They milled about the room, some only halfheartedly watching the screen on which appeared the image of Jacksonville's Mayor Haydon Burns.

In a prophetic statement that still has many Negroes and whites wondering, Burns said:

"As your mayor-commissioner and chief executive of this community I first want to state that there is no emergency at this time—the purpose of this broadcast is to assure every citizen that there will be no emergencies in the future."

Dropped a Bombshell

Burns read on and then abruptly dropped a bombshell.

"I am right now going to give the oath and swear in as special police offciers," he said, "496 firemen who at this moment are assembled at their respective stations under the direction of their senior officers. If you gentlemen will rise and raise your right hand . . . you will take the following oath."

"When the kids heard that," the teacher recounted later, "they got mad and I wasn't sure anyone could control them."

42 Hours Later

Some 42 hours after the mayor's surprise statement, Jacksonville was embroiled in its worst violence since August, 1960, when whites and Negroes fought with bare knuckles and slashing knives.

The violence was finished almost as abruptly as it began, but by the time the police radios had stopped their constant crackling of messages a Negro woman had been shot dead, a rock had smashed a white man between the eyes, squads of patrol cars roamed the azalea-fragrant neighborhoods and there were reams of police reports on muggings, stabbings, break-ins and beatings—most of them in the Negro sections.

Better Than Some

But it was a far cry from Birmingham, Ala., Cambridge, Md., New York City, Jackson, Miss., Danville, Va., or Chicago.

No water hoses were used, no tear gas, no dogs.

Jacksonville's troubles do not fit the usual mold of racial troubles. The demonstrations had no specific aim. There were no professional out-of-state organizers to keep it rolling. Essentially, the violence-filled days and nights resembled more of a rampage without a goal.

There is only one integration organization in town, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), and its leaders issued statements deploring the violence but not the frustrations of the young Negroes which they said was the underlying reason for the demonstrations.

Rutledge Pearson, the 34-year-old school teacher who watched the television set with his pupils—and who is also head of the Florida and Jacsonville branch of the NAACP—said he and others called the youths urging them to refrain from violence.

From the beginning, vandalism accompanied the violence and Negro leaders said that professional hoddlums had taken advantage of the unrest.

Turned on Own

The young Negroes, more often than not, turned on their own race. The same high school crowd that burned a car Tuesday and beat a newsman, hurled bottles and rocks at other Negroes as well as the police.

The racial violence which came to Jacksonville last Monday had been building up slowly for two years, according to integration leaders. It began to heat up last November, they add, and it oddly runs an Easter Sunday to Easter Sunday cycle.

Dr. Arnett Girardeau, a dentist and vice president of the city's NAACP chapter, says Negroes launched a shoppers' boycott of stores just before Easter Sunday, 1962. This he said, was born out of the frustrating "do-nothing, take-things-under-consideration" attitude of a community biracial committee. This committee had been formed after the 1960 violence outburst.

"Non-Violent" Campaign

Pearson said the NAACP pulled out of the biracial committee last November and launched a "non-violent" campaign of pocketing and demonstrations. He said Burns gave the committee only "lukewarm" support.

The demonstrations gradually grew more demonstrative. Pearson cites a straw which he says broke the camel's back. "More than 65 restaurant owners said they would desegregate. But then one refused to go along. The whole agreement fell through."

In the week before the March 24 violence, the demonstrations grew more rowdy and police cracked down with arrests. Young Negroes who saw their classmates go off to jail, wanted to do the same. Police obliged them.

By Friday the situation had become tense and Negro leaders said later that Burns' television statements Saturday resulted in the blow-up.

Burns Delays Tampa Trip

Tues
March 24

Negroes deny that violence was politically motivated, Page 7. Photos on Page 5. Municipal Court roundup, Page 7.

By The Journal Staff

Mayor Haydon Burns canceled most of his political plans for Tampa today and Police Chief Luther Reynolds told off-duty policemen to report for work in the wake of yesterday's racial violence and vandalism.

Meanwhile, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People called a mass meeting of Negro citizens for 3 p.m. today in Bethel Baptist Church to seek ways to get arrested Negro youths out of jail.

More than 200 Negroes have been arrested here since yesterday morning, some for refusing police orders for crowds to disperse, others for vandalism which plagued officers until about 1:30 a.m. today.

One person was killed and three were wounded by gunfire here last night. The death and one of the other shootings could not be definitely pinned down as racial episodes, but two of the woundings apparently were.

Another person reported to police that he was attacked by four Negro youths and slashed with razor blades. He received hospital treatment.

Mayor Burns, charging that the racial violence was inspired by his political opponents—a charge which his opponents deny—delayed a campaign tour to Tampa in order to stay in the city until tension subsides.

He was scheduled to begin a tour of Hillsborough County, leaving Jacksonville at 8:30 a.m. But he announced that he had rescheduled his flight for late this afternoon. A fish fry in the mayor's honor is scheduled at Tampa tonight, but Burns said even the afternoon trip to Tampa is subject to change.

Police Chief Reynolds said day-shift officers who normally get today off were told to report for duty this morning. He also ordered the evening shift of policemen, normally due to go on duty at 3 p.m., to stay by their tele-

Negro neighborhoods to the west and northwest of the downtown business district. Some of the vandalism at business firms wasn't noticed until this morning, when several additional reports were turned in to police.

Two men were arrested last night and charged with possession of Molotov cocktails. Several others were arrested for carrying concealed weapons. Some were arrested after they refused to disperse.

Detective Sgt. T. W. Johnson said he arrested one Negro who had his arm raised and was ready to toss a brick through a window of an unmarked police car. Detective Capt. H. F. Branch said a brick struck his unmarked car at the corner of Beaver and Jefferson streets.

Bars in Negro neighborhoods closed down last night at the height of the reports of violence.

Another fire caused $200 damage last night to Mayor Burns' gubernatorial campaign headquarters for Negroes at Florida Avenue and Odessa Street. This is the same spot where a fire bomb caused minor damage on Sunday night.

Assistant Fire Marshal C. D. Banks said he doesn't know how last night's fire started. Three Molotov cocktails were blamed for the Monday night blaze.

City jailer W. H. Connelly said he made about 325 sausage sandwiches for supper for the jailed Negroes last night. He said that "most of them got two."

Two sailors wounded by gunfire last night were treated at U.S. Naval Hospital and then released. City homicide detectives gave this report on the incident:

Three sailors were in a car which had stopped at 8th and Main streets. They were James tension subsides.

He was scheduled to begin a tour of Hillsborough County, leaving Jacksonville at 8:30 a.m. But he announced that he had rescheduled his flight for late this afternoon. A fish fry in the mayor's honor is scheduled at Tampa tonight, but Burns said even the afternoon trip to Tampa is subject to change.

Police Chief Reynolds said day-shift officers who normally get today off were told to report for duty this morning. He also ordered the evening shift of policemen, normally due to go on duty at 3 p.m., to stay by their telephones today in the event they are needed earlier.

Police said 42 cases of vandalism were reported between 1:30 p.m. yesterday and about 1:30 a.m. today. The city fire department said it answered 23 false alarms in the 24 hours ending at 9 a.m. today. Of these, 21 came from boxes in Negro neighborhoods.

Three fires from Molotov cocktails were reported last night. They were in shops at 728 and 758 W. Ashley streets and at the corner of Beaver and Jefferson streets. Total damage was estimated at less than $1,000.

Police received reports of bricks and other missiles being tossed at passing autos and into store windows in predominantly

★ ★ ★

Sidelights

City police asked sporting goods stores and other merchants who deal in weapons to cease selling any kind of weapon or ammunition as of yesterday afternoons. All are believed to be cooperating in the embargo. Police Inspector R. F. Hobbs said, "We don't want guns getting into the hands of hot heads of either race." He said the embargo will continue" until the situation resolves itself."

City firemen reported today they have answered at least 23 false alarms since the racial demonstrations started yesterday. Twenty-one of these were in Negro sections of town and most were believed to be inspired by the current demonstrations.

The Duval County Democratic Committee called off a scheduled political rally in Hemming Park last night due to the tense racial situation. Committee Chairman Richard D. Barker said the rally was canceled because the committee did not want to take any "unnecessary risks."

Assistant Fire Marshal [illegible] D. Banks said he doesn't know how last night's fire started. Three Molotov cocktails were blamed for the Monday night blaze.

City jailer W. H. Connelly said he made about 325 sausage sandwiches for supper for the jailed Negroes last night. He said that "most of them got two."

Two sailors wounded by gunfire last night were treated at U.S. Naval Hospital and then released. City homicide detectives gave this report on the incident:

Three sailors were in a car which had stopped at 8th and Main streets. They were James R. Watkins, 20, and John Lyons, 20, both Negroes; and Howard Means, 18, a white. They said two Negroes walked up to their stopped car and that one drew a pistol and fired into the car three times.

Watkins and Means were grazed by bullets. All the sailors are stationed at Cecil Field.

Police were vague about the incident—even the place that it happened. Although the reports said the incident occurred at 8th and Main, in other places on the reports it was indicated that it happened at 8th and Davis streets. The first is a white neighborhood, the other Negro.

Billy James, 25, of 2938 Farmer Ter. told police he was bound to a tree, beaten and slashed with razor blades by four Negroes in a wooded area near Belfort and Salisbury roads in the county. He was taken to Baptist Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Glider Shot Fails At Cape

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—An Air Force attempt to fly a delta-wing glider to the edge of space failed today when its booster rocket's second stage misfired.

The 1,176-pound flying laboratory, designed to glide back through the earth's atmosphere to help pave the way for man's spaceships of the future, plunged into the Atlantic off the coast.

The space glider, launched last September, sank after successfully withstanding searing temperatures on a 9,000-mile-per-hour glide.

Today's shot was the third space failure in a row here. A space agency attempt last Thursday to rocket a scientific satellite into orbit was ruined when the third stage of a similar Delta rocket failed. On March 13 an Air Force attempt to shoot a small payload deep into space also failed because of an upper stage malfunction of a Blue Scout Jr. rocket.

65 Demonstrators Convicted

By MONROE CAMPBELL
Journal Staff Writer

In a marathon eight-hour trial session that began at 7 last night, Judge John E. Santora found 65 racial demonstrators guilty and acquitted 11.

Another 27, juveniles who had lied about their age, were transferred to Snyder Memorial National Guard Armory, where Juvenile Court Judge Lamar Winegeart was processing more than 80 suspects sent to him.

Santora said the night trial, the first since he took the bench five years ago, was necessary because "there is no room on the docket or in jail."

He estimated he would dispose of the cases in two hours. As time wore on, he said, "We'll be here to dawn if necessary. We're going to get all the cases on the docket out of the way."

When he recessed court at 2:50 a.m. — scheduling it to reconvene at 10 a.m. — 27 untried cases remained on the docket. This figure did not include arrests made yesterday afternoon and last night.

All but one of last night's 76 defendants were Negroes. The white youth, Thomas S. Baker, 18, of 8223 Lexington Drive pleaded guilty to vagrancy and loitering in Hemming Park.

The arresting officer reported that witnesses said Baker was being disorderly by trying to encourage the Negroes in the park to "fight for their rights." The officer said Baker, who was arrested at 10:35 a.m., was the first racial arrest of the day.

He was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and serve seven days at the city prison farm.

The Negroes, predominantly teen-agers, were charged with unlawful assembly in violation of Florida State Statute 870.02 and Jacksonville City Ordinance 27-43.

Their sentences ranged from $25 and seven days for first offenders to $100 and 30 days for one defendant who had a previous conviction for trespassing.

One of the defendants was Prince McIntosh, 21, who identified himself as public relations director of the Jacksonville NAACP.

He testified that he was arrested as he was taking pictures in his official capacity. He was sentenced to pay a $25 fine and serve seven days at the prison farm.

Twenty-three of the Negroes were arrested at the Masonic Temple at 410 Broad St., the scene of brick and bottle throwing.

All were found guilty and, with the exception of one $75 fine-20-day term and one $100 fine-30-day term, were sentenced to pay fines of $50 and serve 15 days in the prison farm.

During the long session, which saw police officers and spectators dozing from time to time, defense attorneys Earl Johnson and O. E. Girardeau pressed for testimony from officers that the defendants had done anything more than be with a group of Negroes.

At one point, Santora angrily interrupted Johnson and said, "I've read the law. I will not allow you to question officers about the content of the law.

"I'll cite the law, and if more than three people are assembled and making noise they're violating the law," Santora said.

Johnson said, "I'm unable to find in the statutes that it's unlawful to sing or to assemble 200 people in the park."

"The court is ruling that 100 in the park is unlawful," Santora said.

To repeated questions from the defense, officers said they could not pick out any one person violating any law other than being disorderly by stopping traffic as the demonstrators marched or stood clapping and singing in violation of the unlawful assembly statute.

Officers said that in every arrest the crowds which ranged from 15 to 200, were asked to disperse first. When they failed to do so, arrests were ordered, they said.

As the defense continued to press for the officers to identify particular individuals and cite exactly what they had done, Santora said:

"I repeat—when you've got a riot on your hands, police can't remember every face."

When the charges were heard against 23 arrested at the Masonic Temple, which houses an office of the local NAACP, Girardeau continued to demand of arresting officers if they had seen any one individual throw a bottle or breach the peace. He also asked if a warrant had been obtained before entering the building.

Santora said, "I have attempted to be patient. I will decide what's right. When we are embroiled in riots and there are unlawful assemblies, an officer has a right to enter.

Inspector R. F. Hobbs had testified that he had kicked in the door to the NAACP office, where about 40 persons were arrested. Girardeau had attempted to show that a search warrant was needed.

Santora said he would not listen to questions repeated 15 times. "Get on with the next question. If you ask one more question that is repetitious, I'm going to stop you.

"You say you are a lawyer. Prove it."

Candidates React To Racial Strife

By United Press International

Racial strife in Jacksonville dominated the gubernatorial race in Florida yesterday.

Mayor Haydon Burns blamed demonstrations on "inflaming statements" from three other candidates.

He singled out Sen. John Mathews, also of Jacksonville, Fred O. (Bud) Dickinson of West Palm Beach and Miami Mayor Robert King High.

Burns said, "I received information Friday night that the events here would occur, and that they were instigated by persons active in the political camps of candidates on the current campaign."

Dickinson, in St. Petersburg and Tampa, said Burns "has done an outrageous disservice to the City of Jacksonville and all Florida by injecting politics at a time when misery and fear are rampant in his city.

"The people of Jacksonville need leadership, not rabblerousing, at this time. This is not the time for political charges and I would be doing a disservice for the people and my state if I chose to allow politics to dictate my statements during such a serious period."

Mathews immediately issued a denial he made any detrimental statements on the Jacksonville racial situation.

"I brand as absolutely false the statement by Burns that I have at any time said that racial relations were terrible in Jacksonville.

"Mayor Burns is the only person who has injected the Jacksonville racial question into the governor's race."

Mathews earlier yesterday charged both Burns and Dickinson with riding political machines. "The dull days of the campaign are over and I am now out to expose every false promise and bring out the scorecards to correct every false statement," he said.

Dickinson told a Democratic women's club in St. Petersburg of his proposal to provide broader benefits and fewer restrictions for the Kerr-Mills Bill and support for the new State Commission on Aging.

Sen. Scott Kelly toured Northwest Florida and promised more industry and payrolls for depressed areas. He also called for vocational-technical school programs to train skilled workers for industrial jobs.

Rep. Fred Karl of Daytona Beach was in Pensacola, where he stressed a general theme of "quality education." Karl said the state does not need more colleges, but needs to improve the ones it already has.

High repeated his promise that if elected he will file statements of his financial worth annually and the year after leaving office. He again challenged his opponents to disclose their net worth.

★ ★ ★

Negro Pastor Blames Burns

By GEORGE HARMON
Journal Assistant City Editor

The president of a Negro ministers' organization today accused Mayor Haydon Burns, "not his political foes," of causing yesterday's outburst of racial violence in Jacksonville.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, pastor of St. Stephen's A.M.E. Church, said Jacksonville Negroes started to get "stirred up" when city police began in February to arrest Negro ministers who attempted to integrate a downtown hotel and restaurant.

Then, said the Rev. Mr. Johnson, Mayor Burns' television speech last Saturday night "insulted 99 per cent of the Negroes in Florida and Jacksonville."

The Rev. Mr. Johnson is president of the Jacksonville Interdenominational Ministers Alliance. He also is a member of the Jacksonville Ministerial Alliance, a predominantly white organization.

He was arrested with three other Negro ministers when he tried to register at the Robert Meyer Hotel on Feb. 14. The charge against him was dismissed in Municipal Court, however, when the hotel's witnesses failed to appear in court on Feb. 14 to prosecute the case.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson also is a member of the executive board of the Jacksonville unit of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said the NAACP will sponsor a mass meeting of Negro citizens this afternoon in Bethel Baptist Church "to see what we can do to get our children out of jail."

He said that the NAACP did not organize yesterday's demonstrations by roaming gangs of Negro youths.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson led a delegation of Negro ministers to city hall yesterday to talk to Mayor Burns about the violence. He said "12 or 14" ministers accompanied him after he arranged the meeting.

"We met at 2:30 and stayed there until about 10 minutes till 5. He gladly welcomed us" the Rev. Mr. Johnson said.

"The most prominent Negro ministers were present. We asked the mayor to use his authority to keep the peace, we mentioned brutality of the policemen yesterday, that some children were beaten and had to go to the hospital."

He said Mayor Burns invited the ministers, to appear with him on a paid political television program last night "to talk to our people, to ask them to help keep the peace."

"The committee selected me as their spokesman," the minister said, "but after the tumult we decided not to go, but to go to the jailhouse, and go everywhere and try to see if we could get our children out of jail.

"The mayor said it was his political foes that stirred the Negroes up, but we wish to state it was not the political foes, it was the mayor's message on Saturday over the radio, the television, that insulted 99 per cent of the Negroes in Florida and in Jacksonville.

"That was the cause of the great uprising.

"We could not promise that we could control the youth. We have been talking to them to keep the peace all the time. What they are doing is simply a movement that cannot be stopped by brutality and putting people in jail."

★ ★ ★

Scenes Of Violence Toured By Reporter

By LLOYD BROWN
Journal Staff Writer

Two photographers and I cruised Negro neighborhoods just northwest of downtown Jacksonville last night, tracking down reports of racial violence that kept police so busy they couldn't get out of their cars for supper.

Journal photographer Lew Bush and Associated Press photographer Hal Valentine rode with me as we answered false reports of shootings and real reports of fire bombs being tossed through shop windows.

their car at Phelps and Main streets. They were munching hamburgers. They said they were not allowed to get out of their cars to eat. The prowl car motor was running.

Then we got a call at 7:45 p.m. about a fire bomb being tossed through the window of a tailor shop at 758 W. Ashley St. We went there and found the blaze had caused about $135 damage.

Ten minutes later there was a call about a bomb being tossed into a sundries store at Beaver and Jefferson streets. Damage was minor, mostly caused by block of New Kings Road and was throwing rocks at passing cars.

We got there just as police headed off 12 young Negroes and arrested them. Photographer Bush found a 22-caliber pistol lying on the ground near the group. Police checked and found it was registered to one of the 12 who had been arrested. The pistol's owner was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

While we were at the fire at 758 W. Ashley, a Negro

75%
CONVENTIONAL
HOME LOANS INTEREST AS LOW AS 5½%
ALSO FHA & VA LOANS
HAUGHTON & CO., INC.
355-9666 111 W. BAY

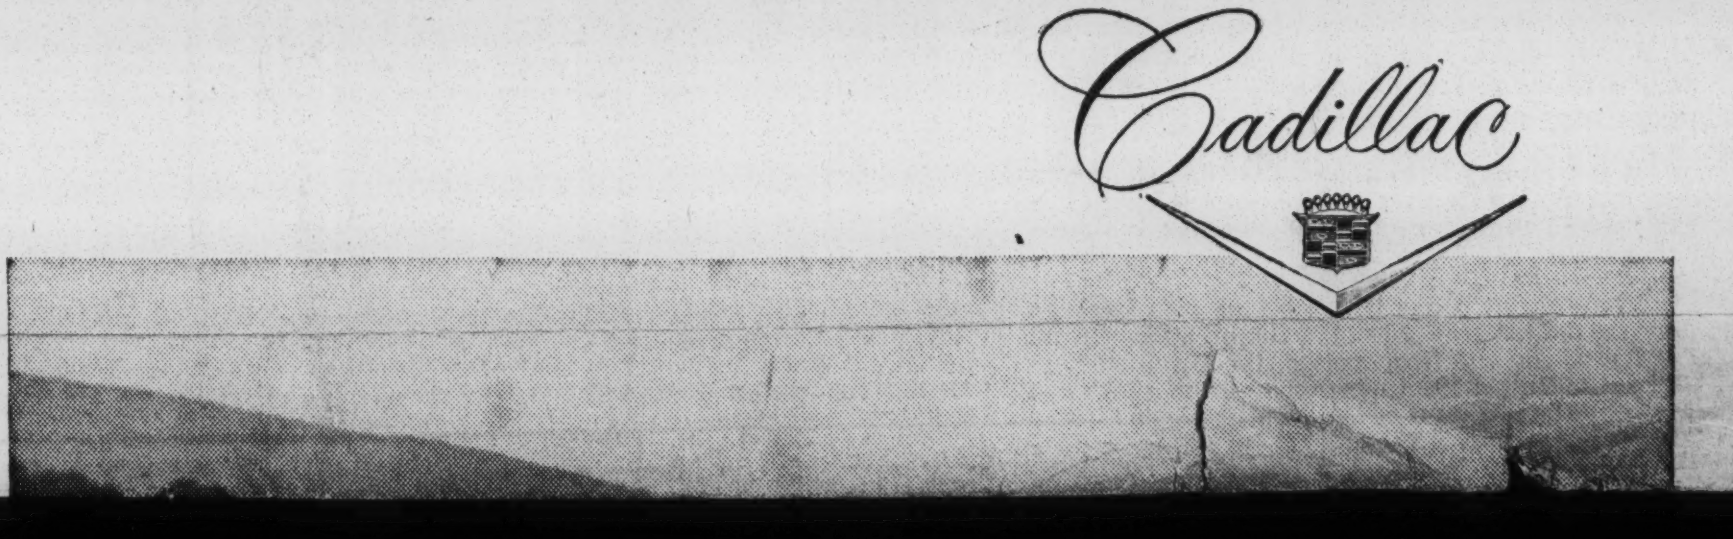
There IS a Safer Way to Smoke Cigarettes!

If You Are Concerned About the U.S. Surgeon-General's Report on Smoking, YOU SHOULD USE...

Aquafilter WATER-ACTIVATED DISPOSABLE FILTER TIPS

REMOVES UP TO 91% TARS, AND UP TO 90% NICOTINE FROM AMERICA'S FAVORITE CIGARETTES (filter or plain)

PACKAGE OF 10— GOOD FOR 200 CIGARETTES.....49¢



Cadillac

Journal Staff Writer

Two photographers and I cruised Negro neighborhoods just northwest of downtown Jacksonville last night, tracking down reports of racial violence that kept police so busy they couldn't get out of their cars for supper.

Journal photographer Lew Bush and Associated Press photographer Hal Valentine rode with me as we answered false reports of shootings and real reports of fire bombs being tossed through shop windows.

We raced from one spot to another as police received a flurry of calls about windows being broken by bricks tossed by vandals.

We stopped and talked to two policemen who were sitting in their car at Phelps and Main streets. They were munching hamburgers. They said they were not allowed to get out of their cars to eat. The prowl car motor was running.

Then we got a call at 7:45 p.m. about a fire bomb being tossed through the window of a tailor shop at 758 W. Ashley St. We went there and found the blaze had caused about $135 damage.

Ten minutes later there was a call about a bomb being tossed into a sundries store at Beaver and Jefferson streets. Damage was minor, mostly caused by smoke.

Fifteen minutes later another bomb call flashed over the police radio. We went to 728 W. Ashley St., a record shop, where the resulting fire caused about $800 damage.

After the third fire, we heard that police were being sent to the 800 block of New Kings Road, where a group of Negroes was reported congregating. When we got there, police were dispersing them.

Immediately afterward, the Florida Highway Patrol notified city police that another crowd of Negroes had formed in the 1000 block of New Kings Road and was throwing rocks at passing cars.

We got there just as police headed off 12 young Negroes and arrested them. Photographer Bush found a 22-caliber pistol lying on the ground near the group. Police checked and found it was registered to one of the 12 who had been arrested. The pistol's owner was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

While we were at the fire at 758 W. Ashley, a Negro policeman advised us not to drive down Ashley Street.

We drove to the corner of Broad and Ashley and found Ashley barricaded so that nobody could drive on the street west of Broad.

Two motorcycle policemen were guarding the barricade.

At all of the fires, large crowds of Negroes congregated. They cheered as firemen smashed windows to allow smoke to pour out of the structures.

Gradually, reports of fires and crowds tapered off. But calls about vandalism kept police busy until early this morning.

Rites Set For Norman Edwards

Funeral services for Norman C. Edwards, 78, realtor, Shriner and community leader, will be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. in All Saints Episcopal Church with Rev. Gladstone Rogers officiating. Burial will follow in Oaklawn Cemetery with Masonic services conducted at the graveside. He died yesterday following a long illness.

Mr. Edwards was a past potentate of Morocco Temple of the Shrine, past master of Duval Lodge 159, F. and A.M., past high priest of Duval Chapter 48 RAM and had held numerous other prominent positions in the Masonic order.

As a business leader, he was a past president of the Jacksonville Board of Realtors, district vice-president of the Florida Association of Realtors, a member of the Jacksonville Insurance Association and the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce and was a charter member and past president of the Southside Business Men's Club.

Survivors include a son, Stuart W. Edwards of Jacksonville; two grandsons, Stuart W. Edwards Jr. and Norman Edwards of Jacksonville; three great-grandchildren, Deborah Edwards, Norman Curtis Edwards Jr. and Kathryn Amanda Edwards, all of Jacksonville; and a sister, Mrs. Laura Spears of Tallahassee

To Sentence Dad Who Hit Principal

NEW IBERIA, La. (UPI)—A high school boy was cleared to return to classes today, his untamed hair still in wiry wings, but his father faced sentencing for hitting the school principal.

George Mouton was found guilty yesterday of simple battery for hitting New Iberia High School Principal John McGraw.

They quarrelled after Mouton's son Glen was sent hom from classes because his hair stuck stiffly out at the sides. The school has a regulation requiring students to have "normal" haircuts.

The school called the haircut "wings." They are forbidden. Glen's father called them "cowlicks." They can't be helped.

"My boy wears a crewcut and his hair was not more than an inch long when he was sent home," the service station operator said. He said the wings were the fault of nature, not adolescent hair fads.

"Glen's going back to classes," said Mouton. "His hair? No, nothing's been done to his hair. Nothing can be done. They accept that now."

TERMITES TERMITES
FREE ESTIMATES
EL 3-1328
CLARK
PEST CONTROL
TERMITES TERMITES

Kwikeeze brush cleaner
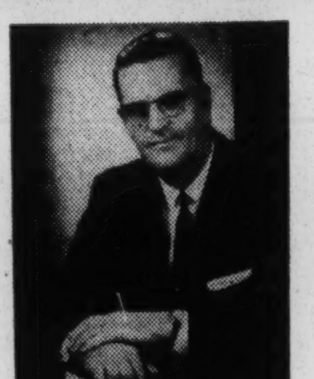
RESTORES HARD BRUSHES FAST
SAVOGRAN

Is there a paint brush cleaner that can make an old brush look new?
yes
Savogran makes it
and your hardware dealer has it!

Spiritual Life Mission
With
REGINALD GOFF
PRAYER EVANGELIST
MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 7:30 PM
MARCH 22-27 HOLY WEEK
Welcome
AVONDALE METHODIST CHURCH
Corner Herschel and Talbot



Cadillac

A WORD OF CAUTION TO OUR NEW OWNERS

If you are about to take the wheel of a 1964 Cadillac for the first time—there are some things we think you should know in advance.

First, there's a brand new engine up front—and it's the most powerful and dynamic in Cadillac history.

Second, it is teamed with a transmission that is smooth and responsive as never before.

And third, a Cadillac car is so unbelievably quiet and level in ride that the feeling of motion is little more than passing scenery.

So take it easy. And keep your eye on the speedometer until you become accustomed to this startling new kind of performance. Your new Cadillac is so effortless, so smooth, and so responsive that normal driving requires tapping only part of its exciting new action.

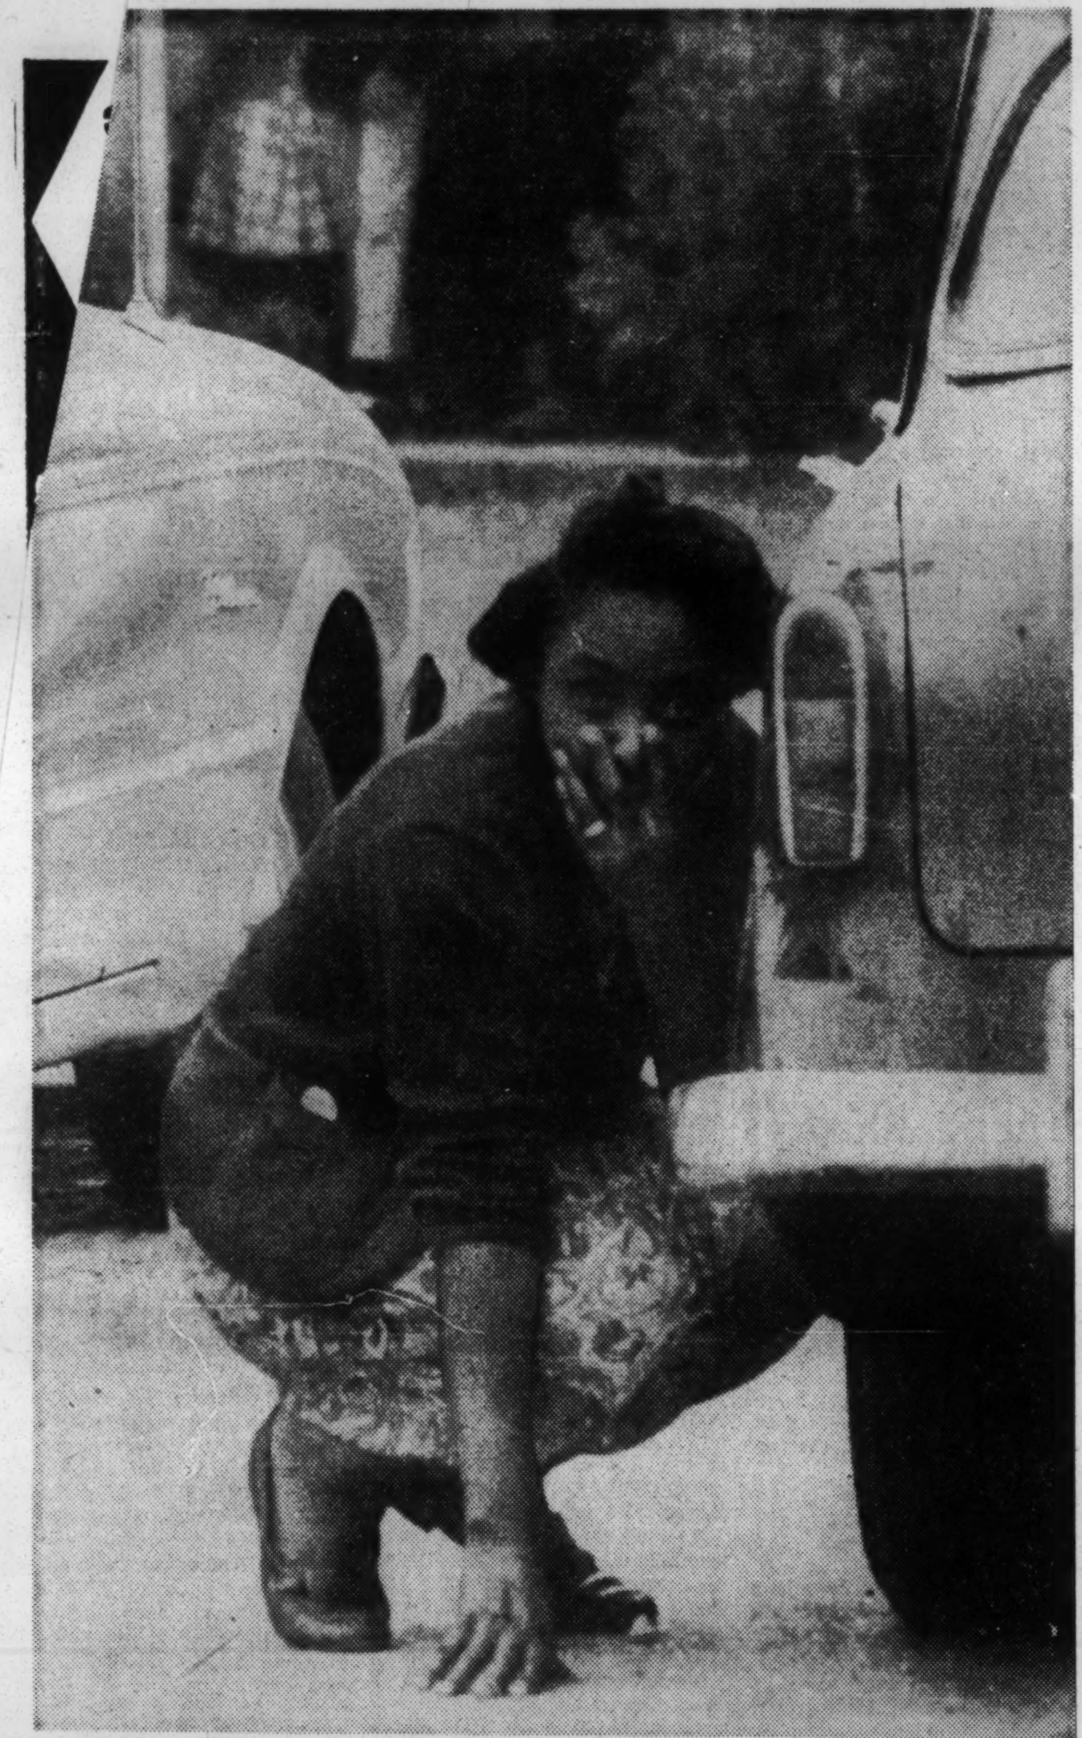
In fact, so many of our 1964 owners are so pleased with their new Cadillac's competent road behavior, they are spreading the word to their friends. And we're happy to report that they, in turn, are switching to Cadillac in unprecedented numbers.

So why not do someone you know a favor? Tell him about Cadillac's dramatic way of going—and then point out the location of his nearest dealer.

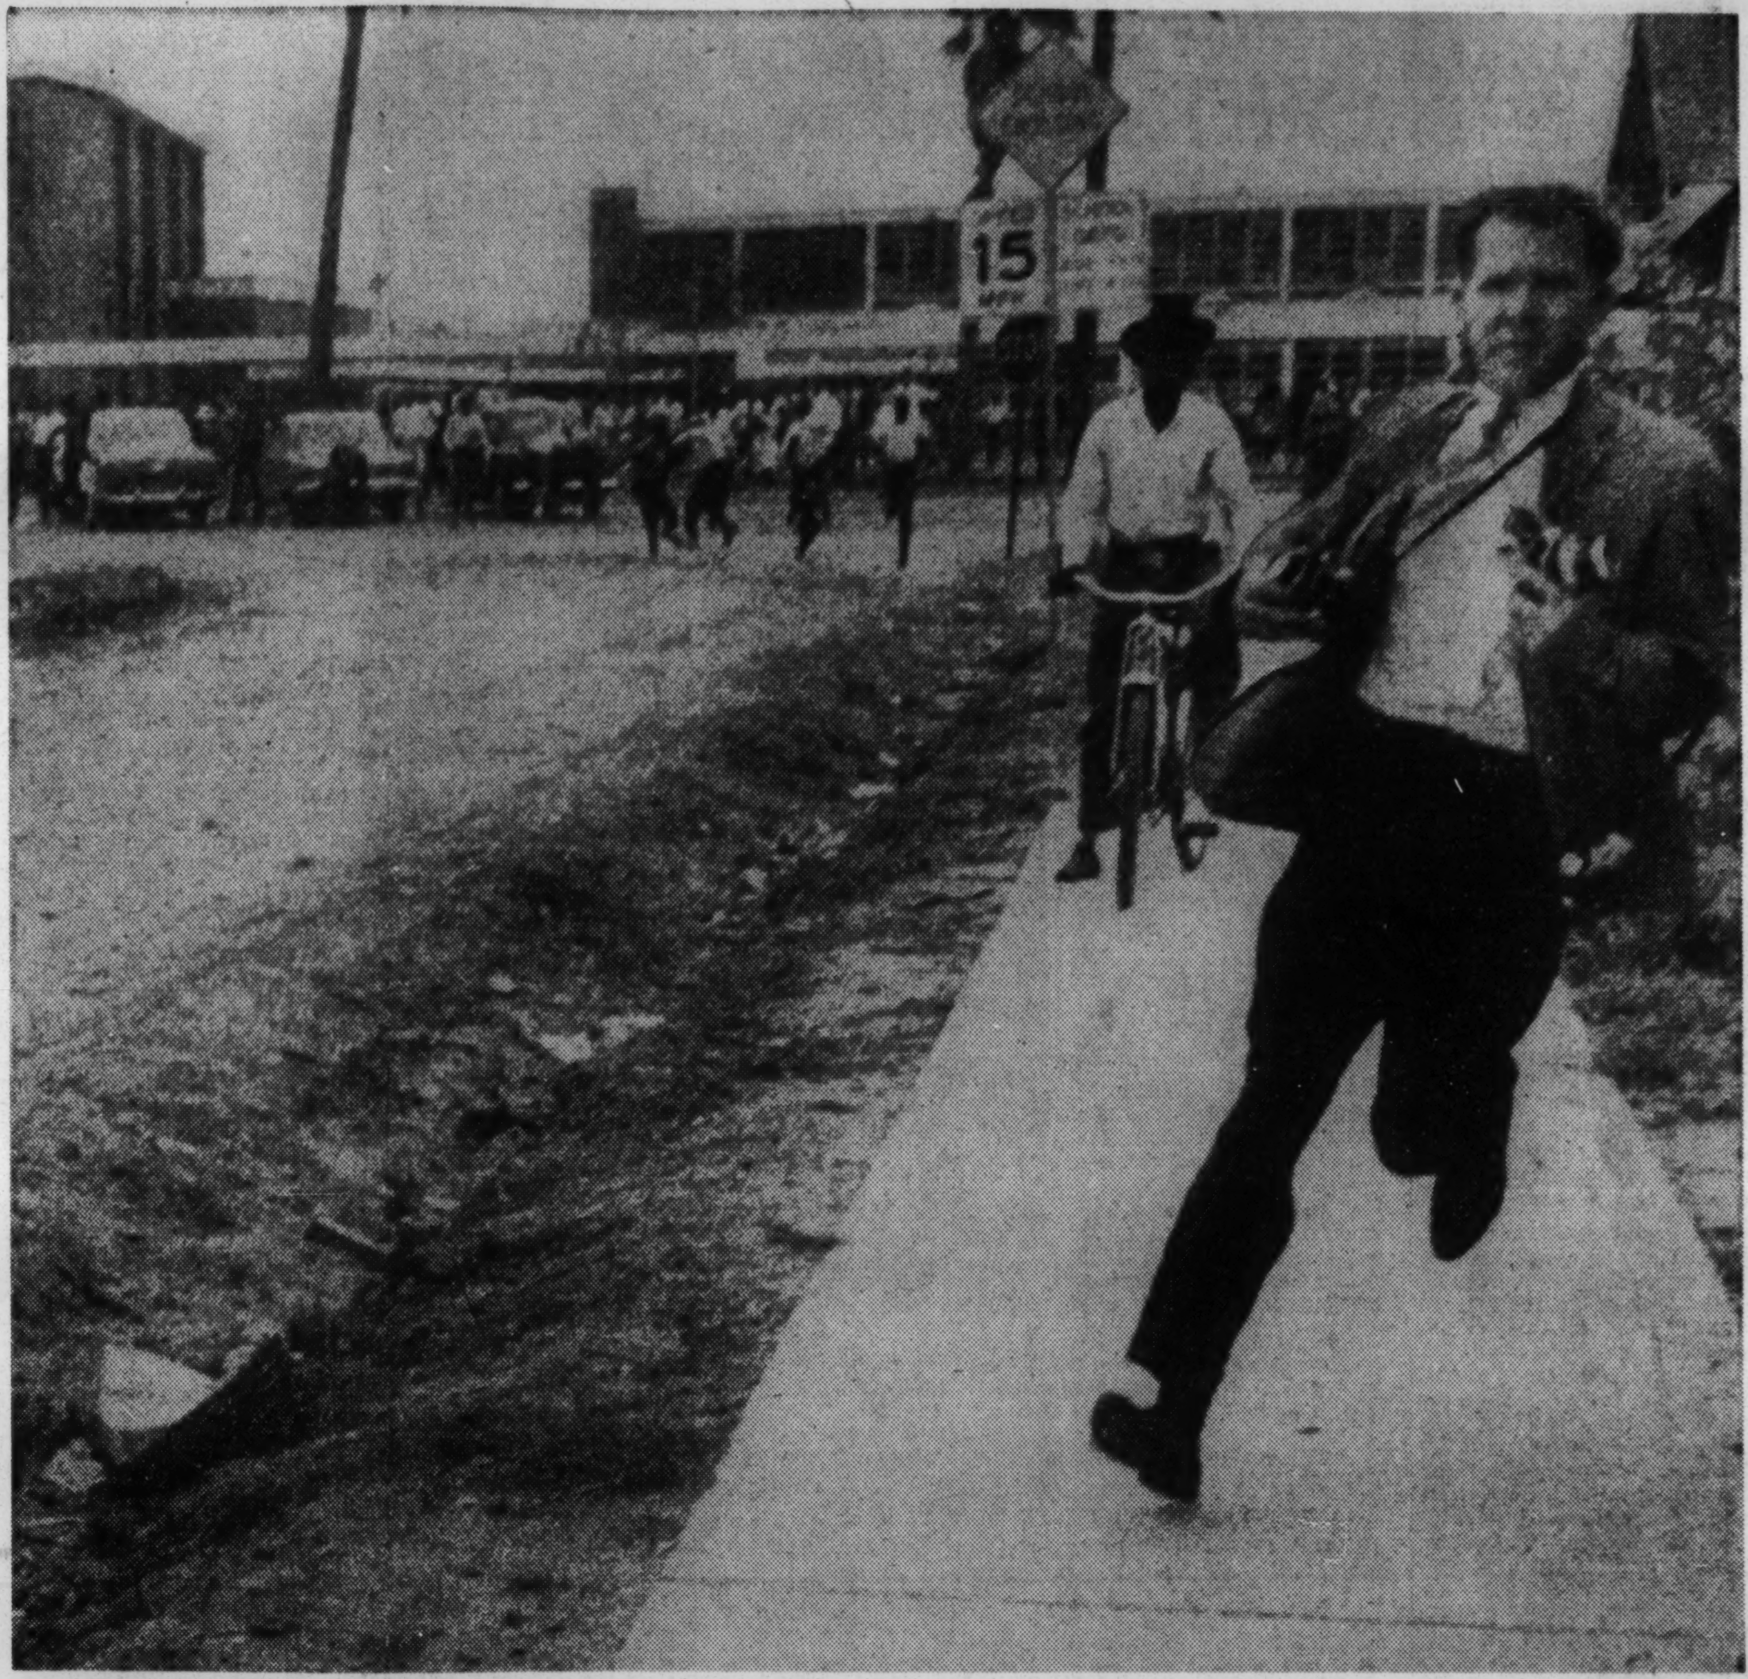
Chances are he'll soon be talking about all the wonders of his new Cadillac.

MORE TEMPTING THAN EVER—AND JUST WAIT TILL YOU DRIVE IT—SEE YOUR AUTHORIZED CADILLAC DEALER

CLAUDE NOLAN, Inc.
MAIN AND ORANGE STREETS • JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA



NEGRO WOMAN DUCKS TO AVOID MISSILES THROWN BY NEGROES



NEGRO STUDENTS (BACKGROUND) CHASE AND HURL STONES AT A NEWSMAN—LIFE MAGAZINE'S CHARLES MOORE

Journal Photos By Bart Parker

Strictly Racial Protest—Or Just Another Mob?

By GEORGE HARMON
Journal Assistant City Editor

The violence that abruptly ended more than three years of racial peace in Jacksonville has characteristics which don't fit the pattern of Negro protest and turmoil between whites and Negroes in other Southern cities in recent years.

The more militant organizations such as the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, haven't been reported active here.

The NAACP disclaims any connection with the roaming bands of young Negro demon-

Is this really a "racial" protest?

There are indications that you can answer this question with both a yes and a no.

Rutledge Pearson, president of the Jacksonville branch of the NAACP, told a group of

A Journal Analysis

tempt to relax racial tension here.

However, he said, "The actions of our mayor make it hard to make progress."

instances near Stanton yesterday.

Negro teachers rescued magazine reporter Mike Durham make his way on foot to Stanton yesterday when he rounded a corner and ran into a mob of 50 rock and brick-carrying students. An elderly Negro pulled him into a store and ordered a taxi summoned to take McGowan out of the neighborhood. Another Negro adult, clad in overalls, guarded the door of the store to keep several Negro adults. None of the adults molested them.

Pulitzer Prize - winning reporter Al Kuettner of United Press International dispatched a story today about Jacksonville's racial violence.

Although there is an element of racial protest in the

Another interpretation could be that it isn't a riot at all, that it's more like a group of students after a football game—using events to express their enthusiasm. All-out riot or not, their enthusiasm is for trouble—serious trouble.

Jacksonville's violence seems

A Journal Analysis

By GEORGE HARMON
Journal Assistant City Editor

The violence that abruptly ended more than three years of racial peace in Jacksonville has characteristics which don't fit the pattern of Negro protest and turmoil between whites and Negroes in other Southern cities in recent years.

Jacksonville is unusual, first of all, in that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is the only predominantly Negro organization working here against racial discrimination.

The more militant organizations such as the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, haven't been reported active here.

The NAACP disclaims any connection with the roaming bands of young Negro demonstrators who have tossed bricks and fire bombs and vandalized business firms here this week. These young people appear to be a fluid mass of basically unorganized Negroes who erupt into action when they begin to congregate in large groups.

Is this really a "racial" protest?

There are indications that you can answer this question with both a yes and a no.

Rutledge Pearson, president of the Jacksonville branch of the NAACP, told a group of Negro adults and newsmen yesterday: "Let me make this clear. The NAACP does not condone violence."

Pearson said NAACP leaders worked throughout Monday night contacting leaders of the young demonstrators in an attempt to relax racial tension here.

However, he said, "The actions of our mayor make it hard to make progress."

"These students have organized their own protest movement," Pearson said. "They're resentful of the police-state policies that they've seen the past few days."

So there seems to be an obvious "racial" basis for the young Negroes' actions.

Yet, at the same time, there are signs that something else motivates the demonstrators.

The strongest evidence of this is that vandalism has been directed against Negroes as well as whites.

When 1,500 students at New Stanton High School stoned police and newsmen yesterday, they were directing their fire also at Negro bystanders and Negro teachers who had gathered with the whites on Eaverson Street, which runs along the west side of the Stanton grounds.

In addition, police report that fire bombs tossed last night in Negro neighborhoods apparently were thrown by Negroes at business firms operated by Negroes.

Another characteristic of this week's turmoil is the fact that older Negroes don't seem to be participating with the young ones. In fact, brave adult Negroes helped newsmen in two instances near Stanton yesterday.

Negro teachers rescued magazine reporter Mike Durham after young Negroes attacked him during the stone-throwing melee. The Negro teachers escorted Durham to the Stanton principal's office, where he stayed until he obtained a ride to a hospital.

Associated Press writer Joe McGowan Jr. was trying to make his way on foot to Stanton yesterday when he rounded a corner and ran into a mob of 50 rock and brick-carrying students. An elderly Negro pulled him into a store and ordered a taxi summoned to take McGowan out of the neighborhood. Another Negro adult, clad in overalls, guarded the door of the store to keep the young people from coming after McGowan. McGowan escaped in the car, as a group of young Negroes headed for it.

After three newsmen ran from a young mob at Stanton yesterday, they stopped at a street corner where there were several Negro adults. None of the adults molested them.

Pulitzer Prize - winning reporter Al Kuettner of United Press International dispatched a story today about Jacksonville's racial violence.

Although there is an element of racial protest in the young people's outbursts, he said, "there was no apparent organized effort with specific complaints, goals and motives."

He believes part of Jacksonville's trouble can be laid to "wild blowing off of pent-up emotions."

be that it isn't a riot at all, that it's more like a group of students after a football game—using events to express their enthusiasm. All-out riot or not, their enthusiasm is for trouble—serious trouble.

Jacksonville's violence seems to be partly racial and partly a grim and potentially tragic way in which students react to spring.

In the nation's colleges, the time of year for spring frolics has arrived. In Jacksonville, it is a time of brick-tossing and fire-bombings.

★ ★ ★

False Alarms Costly

City and county police are operating on two 12-hour shifts during the current disorder instead of the regular three eight-hour shifts. More than 70 city and county patrol cars were on the streets last night and 50 state troopers were on standby if needed. Some auxiliary county patrolmen have been called in to assist.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

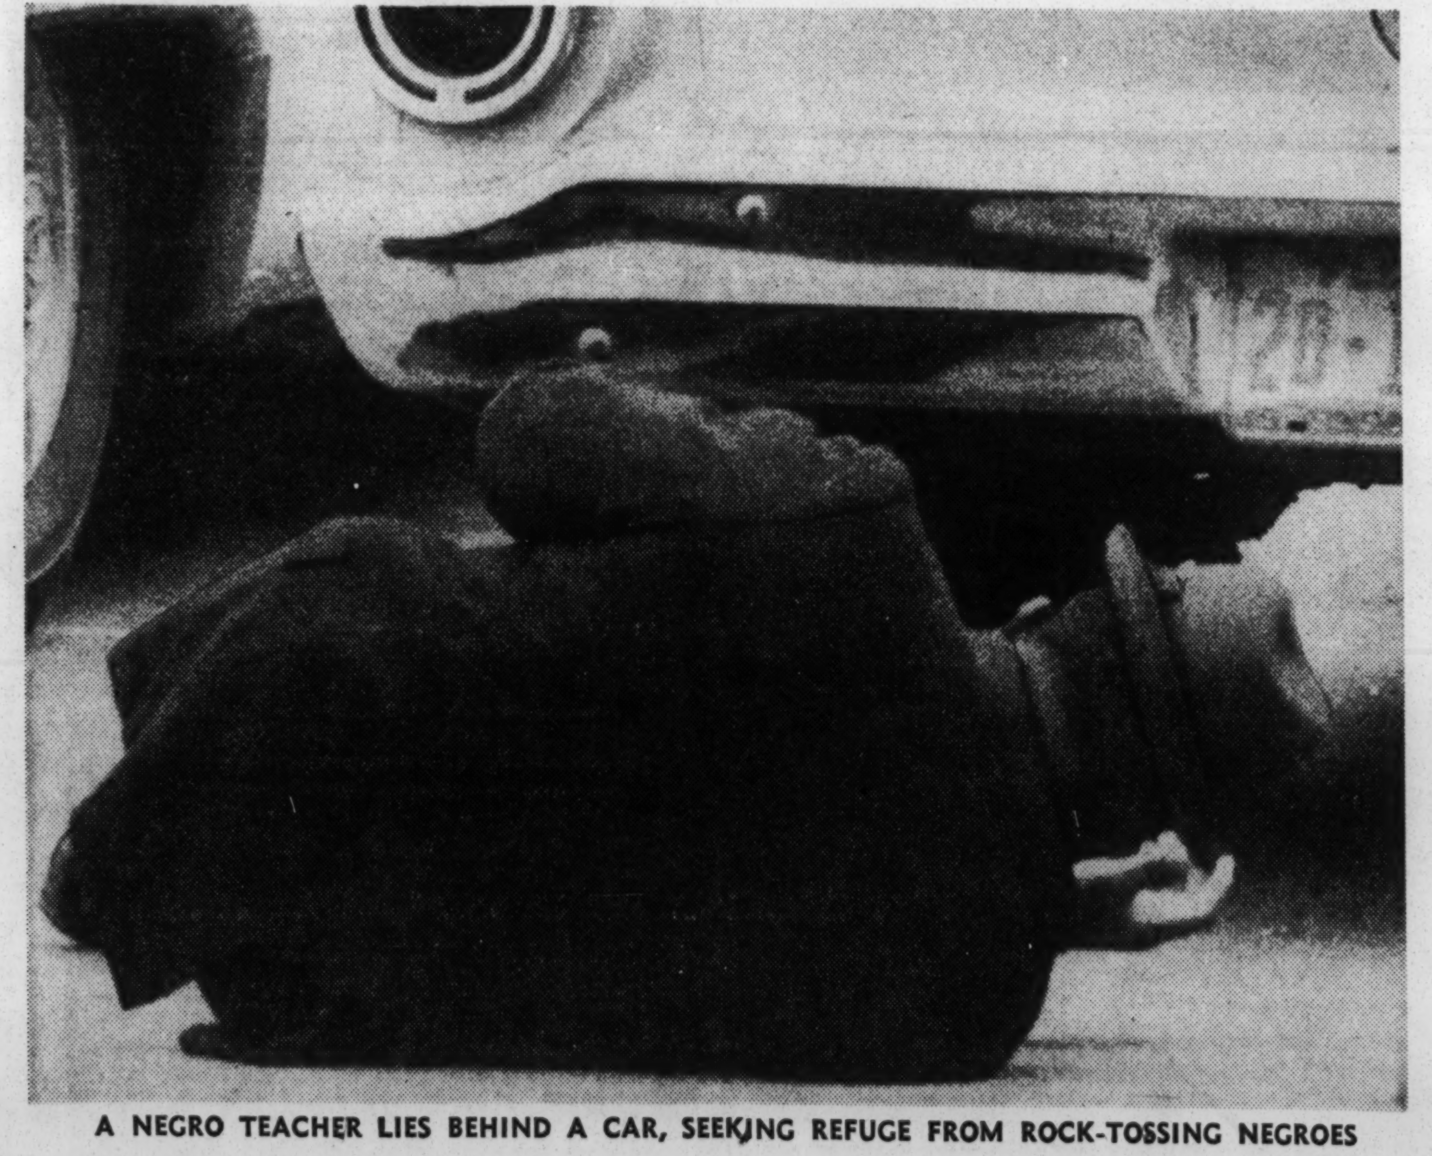
During one 25-minute period last night, 17 false alarms were answered by the city fire department. Thirty-four false alarms were answered during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today. Fire Chief G. R. Cromartie said another 15 to 18 alarms found later to be unlawful were not answered because firemen already were busy. Cromartie said each false alarm costs the city a minimum of $50.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The fire department estimated damage from fire bombs tossed at businesses and residences in the Negro areas last night at $2,350. The department said vandalism was responsible for another $840 in damage.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Dade County Metro Commission has banned racial discrimination by companies operating under county franchise or doing business on county property, and in on-site employment on county public works contracts. The commission said Jacksonville would not be having its current problem if it followed Dade's example and went to work for equal rights.



A NEGRO TEACHER LIES BEHIND A CAR, SEEKING REFUGE FROM ROCK-TOSSING NEGROES

Talking With Teens Is A Difficult Task

Third of Five Articles

The Youth Crisis

By HARRY FERGUSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—George Bernard Shaw once said it would be a better world "if parents would only realize how they bore their children." He struck at the heart of one of the major causes of juvenile delinquency—the inability of many parents to communicate with teen-agers.

The cold and unpleasant fact seems to be that millions of American children have either a resigned attitude of tolerance or outright contempt for their parents.

Case histories show that is especially true in broken homes—one of the prime factors in juvenile delinquency—and the bad news about that is that about one in every five American marriages ends in separation or divorce.

But the problem also exists in marriages that appear to be permanent and happy. One of the signs of the times is a current magazine article which advises teen-agers in all seriousness on how to bamboozle their parents into thinking everything is all right.

It is necessary, the article says, to make parents feel secure and its advice includes:

● Talk to your parents: "A friend of mine named Geraldine didn't talk to her parents for years because she knew they wouldn't understand her." But when Geraldine reached 17 she decided to talk to her parents without really saying anything, telling them trivial things. She reported her parents are now happy and no longer give her third degrees on what she has been doing.

● Shield them. If, for instance, you have a date with a boy who drives a hot rod, tell your parents he is interested in mechanical engineering.

● Ask their advice. This will work only if you follow the advice they give you and, therefore, you should ask their opinion only on things that don't really matter to you. Like whether you should serve an onion or cheese dip at your party.

It is a waste of time for parents to shower money and gifts on teen-agers in the hope of keeping them out of trouble. Rich kids become delinquents, too.

A teen-age slum boy who holds up the owner of the corner candy store with a switchblade knife may be doing it because he wants money to buy food. Children with too much money don't have that excuse and they commit senseless acts just for the thrill of violating the law.

"I know a boy whose parents gave him everything," said Philip G. Green of the U.S. Children's Bureau. "They spent a lot of money to buy him a snappy new convertible. He got behind the wheel, drove three blocks and saw a battered jalopy standing at the curb. He got out of his new convertible, got into the jalopy and drove away. Obviously he wasn't improving his method of transportation. He was just getting a kick out of doing something illegal and when he was caught he showed no remorse."

Rich children sometimes commit mass vandalism. A recent example of it was at a debut party outside New York for Miss Fernanda Wanamaker Wethergill. Her parents had rented a nearby mansion where the boys could spend the night. After the dance was over the boys retired to the mansion and wrecked it by swinging on chandeliers, throwing furniture out on the beach and breaking windows for a total damage of $10,000. About 100 boys were involved, but only 11 of them will be brought to trial, and the charge will be malicious mischief, an offense that does not carry a burdensome penalty.

American parents currently are under attack for over-coddling their children and forcing them to do foolish things for the sake of status.

Martha Lear, in her book "The Child Worshippers," cites the cases of mothers who put brassieres on 11-year-old girls and send their sons to summer camps where French is taught so the boys can come home and say "Bon jour, Mama." And some mothers, she writes, don't know when to leave their children alone and she quotes one of them:

"My son was in bed with a cold. I had lots of things to do and I felt guilty about being out all day while he was cooped up in the apartment with just the cleaning woman for company. So I canceled my lunch date and zipped through my beauty parlor appointment and grabbed a cab home and rushed into his room and said "Okay, I'm ready now. What shall we play?' And he said 'I don't know about you, Mom, but I have homework. Can't you find something to do?' "

This is the age of the psychiatrist and nobody can say for sure what happens when parents take a strictly psychiatric approach in their relations to children. Miss Lear finds some of it to be ridiculous and quotes a mother to prove it:

"My friend had a fight with her husband in front of their 5-year-old daughter. She's very psychiatry-minded and she has been worried sick about its effect on the child. That kind of thing is contagious. And even if I'm saying to my husband, 'You b---,' which our 8-month-old wouldn't understand anyway, I say it softly and with a smile on my face."

TOMORROW: Beatlemania and Assorted Enthusiasms.

★ ★ ★

'Give A Little Love...'

WASHINGTON, (UPI)—Famous opinions about parents and children:

Give a little love to a child and you will get a great deal back.—JOHN RUSKIN.

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child.—SHAKESPEARE.

LBJ Rejects Interventio

(Continued from Page 1)

also involved a discussion of the Senate's consideration of the civil rights bill.

It was reported that Johnson discussed with the Justice Department officials the need for developing programs that would be put into effect if the civil rights bill is enacted.

BRYANT KEEPS HANDS OFF

TALLAHASSEE, March 25 (AP)— The governor of Florida maintained his hands-off stand in the Jacksonville racial problem today, despite pressure from state leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A delegation of NAACP officials said Gov. Farris Bryant told them he was keeping in close touch with the situation but that his powers as the state's chief law enforcement officer were limited and he could not intervene in a local matter unless asked to.

Robert Saunders, NAACP state field secretary, quoted Bryant as saying he would respond to a call from Duval County Sheriff Dale Carson for assistance if matters worsened and warranted help.

Saunders and four other NAACP members met with the governor this morning to discuss the Jacksonville problem and a march on Tallahassee scheduled Friday to support passage of the civil rights bill in Washington.

Newsmen were barred from the meeting. Bryant's only comment in response to their questions was a quick "good morning" as he departed for Key West to join former President Harry Truman for dinner tonight.

Saunders said the governor advised the delegation that he was supporting Florida Sens. Spessard Holland and George Smathers in their opposition to the President's public accommodations bill.

Saunders said Bryant gave as an additional reason for not intervening the fact that the racial outbreak had become an issue in the governor's race and he did not want to inject himself into the political campaign.

He said Bryant considered the situation in Jacksonville to be a local matter.

City Plagued By Vandals

City Plagued By Vandals

(Continued from Page 1)

house trailer at 15961 Main St. was destroyed by fire early yesterday, told county police that earlier during the day she had received telephone calls, one from a white man and the other from a white woman, threatening to burn the trailer if her husband "did not join the Ku Klux Klan."

She said her husband refused to join, according to police.

T. W. Burkhart, deputy state fire marshal, is conducting an investigation into possible arson in the case.

City police sent out every available car into service yesterday afternoon, with three to four officers in each vehicle to reinforce night-duty police throughout the troubled areas.

Chief Luther A. Reynolds said, "We have to play this thing by ear on an hour-to-hour basis and cope with each situation as it arises."

Ten false fire alarms were reported between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. yesterday.

New Stanton High School, the scene of an outbreak of violence in which an automobile was burned and one newsman injured Tuesday morning, was evacuated twice because of bomb scares during school hours yesterday. Students returned to classes after each incident.

Principal Charles D. Brooks said yesterday's attendance was about 600 of an enrollment of 1,900.

School officials said attendance in all Negro schools here was off sharply yesterday.

As the situation moved into its third day, Mayor Haydon Burns called for an end to violence while President Johnson conferred with Justice Department officials on conditions here.

Rocks Thrown

The isolated cases of vandalism reported to police consisted primarily of rocks and bottles being thrown at passing automobiles and at stores.

Judge John E. Santora tried 63 demonstrators in Municipal Court yesterday, finding some of the defendants not guilty and imposing fines up to $50 on others. Jail terms were given persons with previous arrest records.

Advertisement

Has r doctor
rec nded

Crisis Building For 6 Months, Negroes Say

By GEORGE HARMON
Journal Assistant City Editor

The Jacksonville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People issued a formal statement on racial tension here, saying that for the past six months Jacksonville's "officials and mayor have refused to recognize the dangerous situation that has been growing here."

Rutledge Pearson, president of both the city and state NAACP organizations, read the statement yesterday afternoon in Bethel Institutional Baptist Church as a group of Negro adults gathered to begin rush-hour picketing of a downtown restaurant and hotel.

At the same meeting, a Negro ministerial group passed out copies of a resolution which, their spokesman said, has been sent to Mayor Haydon Burns.

The ministers' statement said, "The position taken by the mayor . . . has served to foment hate and to give rise to a potential movement of violence that could create untold harm to the community and make Jacksonville a city bathed in blood."

Pearson said this week's racial turmoil is "a direct result of the words and actions of Mayor Haydon Burns on Saturday, when he swore in the Fire Department to deal with student demonstrations."

He was referring to Mayor Burns' television and radio address, when Burns announced he would not tolerate further demonstrations that violate city ordinances. During that talk, Burns swore in the city firemen as special police officers.

Speaking of Monday's racial outburst, Pearson said:

"These students, marching peacefully, were brutally attacked by policemen, and even girls were clubbed and manhandled. The office of the NAACP was illegally entered and ransacked."

(Police said they entered the office in the Masonic Temple Building to arrest a large group of Negro youths who were throwing objects at passersby in the street below.)

"For the record," Pearson said, "in recent weeks the City Commission of Jacksonville has received letters from the biracial committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the Human Relations Council, the Urban League and the interracial (Jacksonville) Ministerial Alliance, all calling upon the mayor and the city officials to form a biracial committee to deal with growing racial unrest.

"They were flatly refused.

"Beginning in September with the integration of several schools in this city, the officials and mayor have refused to recognize the dangerous situation that has been growing here."

For three and a half years, Pearson added, the NAACP met with a biracial committee of the Chamber of Commerce, but last November decided that direct action was the only answer "due to the ineffectiveness" of the chamber committee.

"During these past three years, the mayor has given only lukewarm support to the chamber's committee. Let it be known here, now, that the direct action program of the NAACP will not stop because the Negro people are determined to erase the cancer of segregation from the heart of the city."

The ministers' resolution came from the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance. The statement said the organization represents more than 200 Negro church congregations of the community.

★ ★ ★

A FAIR Exhibit

Six of Jacksonville's most charming and attractive young women today began training as public contact representatives at the city's World's Fair exhibit. City Commissioner Louis H. Ritter, shown here explaining the workings of city government to the group, said the girls will undergo three weeks of intensive schooling in all phases of city government, services and operations, ect. From left, Angela Jones, Elizabeth Anne Walker, Mary Elizabeth Stanly, Ritter, Gayle Hayden, Loretta Lewis and Margaret Lovejoy. (Journal Photo)

'A Sorrow For Every Thinking Floridian'

By The Associated Press

Five of the six Democratic candidates for Florida governor met head on in Tampa at a Chamber of Commerce coffee to-

will be mobs at the courthouse poisoned by hate."

High said he generally favors the civil rights legislation now pending before the U.S. Senate and will enforce its provisions if son for the problem to become a political football.

Karl reiterated his charge that lack of leadership in the Duval County legislative delegation, of which Mathews is a

Imeson Airport Is Picketed

Three white persons and a Negro picketed Imeson Airport yesterday with signs labeling St. Augustine "a city of violence and segregation."

The demonstration, which also saw two persons handing out waybills deploring the racial situation in the nation's oldest city, lasted only about 15 minutes and there were no incidents.

The demonstrators got out of two cars bearing Massachusetts

★ ★ ★

It's A Local Problem —Bryant

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Florida leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People took the Jacksonville racial problem directly to Gov. Farris Bryant today and reported that Bryant said he will not intervene unless asked to do so by local authorities.

Bryant himself made no comment on the meeting other than a breezy "good morning" to newsmen as he left the capital for Miami and Key West, where he was to dine with former President Harry Truman.

The Negro delegation was led by Robert Saunders, Florida field secretary for the NAACP, who laid the organization's complaints on the governor's desk. Newmen were barred from the meeting.

The group told Bryant that Jacksonville Mayor Haydon Bruns' ultimatum that he would not tolerate further racial demonstrations "is a denial of rights guaranteed by the Constitution and only recently upheld by the federal courts of our state."

Saunders said the governor advised him that he does not want to intervene or make statements concerning the violence of the past several days in Jacksonville because "he does not want to inject himself or his office into the governor's race."

Mayor Burns is one of six Democratic candidates for governor. Other candidates, with the exception of Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach, criticized Bruns' handling of the racial problem in his city.

Saunders said he was told by the governor that if conditions reach the point where Duval

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Tired Lawmen Keeping Long, Lonely Vigil Here

By MONROE CAMPBELL
Journal Staff Writer

At 8:20 p.m. the police radio blurted: "Somebody shot. 1419 W. Beaver St."

I was riding with Capt. I. L. Griffin, Sgt. J. E. Starling and Patrolman Jack Austin last night. We had seen a lot of each other the last two days.

Griffin spends most of his time in Municipal Court, where he is coordinator. In some courts he would be called bailiff. Starling is the courtroom sergeant and Austin also is assigned to the courtroom.

On Monday, their day began at 5:30 a.m. as they prepared a heavily loaded court schedule. At the end of the morning's court session, they were assigned to street patrol. At 7 p.m., they were back in the courtroom and didn't leave until after 3 a.m. yesterday.

A few hours later they were back in the courtroom. Last night they were back in the streets. They had had only two hours sleep at the most since Sunday night.

They were serving in a dual capacity because all street units had been boosted to maximum strength because of the racial strife.

When we got to the Negro house on Beaver Street, all the windows in the neighborhood were dark. The lights didn't come on until the officers had satisfied the people inside that they were police.

When the lights did come on inside, a woman opened the door and said, "Somebody shot at us." She pointed to a large hole in the screen and glass of the one window at the front of the house.

At first inspection, it looked as if the hole had been made by a 45-caliber weapon. Collier Cohen, 70, had been sitting in front of the window.

His wife, Agnes, 56, was sitting on a sofa. The missile just missed Cohen.

rorists were traveling on foot. Last night they were mobilized and employed hit-and-run tactics.

Just an hour before the Beaver Street incident, Griffin had observed, "the town's pretty quiet."

The radio interrupted: "Man on roof with shotgun at 2033 Kings Road. He's being pushed. Get some cars there."

Tommie Russell, owner of an auto electric shop at that address, said he and his wife had just closed up and she had gone home. As he started to leave, he saw four Negro youths trying to tear down a Burns campaign poster.

Russell shot at them. The gun was loaded with rock salt. The vandals were not found.

All through the night, driving even a police car through the Negro sections in the northwest part of town was tricky business. The streets are narrow. Many of the intersections are "blind."

It would have been easy to drive out in front of a highballing fire truck as the fire departments were kept busy answering about 50 calls. More than 40 of them were false alarms.

The real fires—most of them—could be blamed on Molotov cocktails. These bombs are bottles filled with gas or fuel oil with a rag stuck down the neck to serve as a fuse.

The fuse is lighted and the bomb thrown against a building. In a predominantly frame-structure neighborhood, the bombs almost always start a fire.

The firemen probably spent the longest night, as they did Monday.

But the police were on the go, too. Chief Luther Reynolds said 60 cars were out last night. They criss-crossed, met and followed each other all over town. Most of them contained four men. No chances were taken on not being able to handle a situation.

It was a trouble spot all night.

Another was at Golfair and the expressway. Motorists repeatedly called to report their cars were stoned. The vandals managed to elude police.

During the night, we put more than 100 miles on the police car. About 10:30, the vandalism began to slacken. The officers went back to the station.

More than 80 prisoners had to be put on the court calendar for trial today. That's the principal job of the courtroom officers.

Jacksonville Journal

Published every weekday afternoon by Florida Publishing Co., 400 W. Adams St., Jacksonville 2, Florida.

Second-class postage paid at Jacksonville, Florida.

Subscription Rates by Carrier

Week	Year
.30	$15.60

RAPID

Advertisement

Has your doctor recommended this laxative?

If not, he may do so. Because it fits the requirements of dependability and effectiveness that most doctors insist on . . . yet is 100% free of chemical ingredients. Contains only the purest vegetable ingredients.

Gentle Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not cause harsh irritation or griping. Do not dry your system. Do not upset your stomach or form a habit. Nor do they have an alkalizing action your doctor may say is wrong for you.

Yet . . . Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets work within hours to give you the relief you want. "I like them better than anything I have ever tried." "Most satis-

By The Associated Press

Five of the six Democratic candidates for Florida governor met head on in Tampa at a Chamber of Commerce coffee today and three directed the bulk of their comments to the racial violence in Jacksonville which kept Mayor Haydon Burns from his campaign schedule.

Perhaps the strongest statement came from Mayor Robert King High of Miami.

"If we do not decide here and now to enlist reason and settle problems at the conference table and not in the streets, there will be mobs at the courthouse poisoned by hate."

High said he generally favors the civil rights legislation now pending before the U.S. Senate and will enforce its provisions if he is elected governor and the bill passes.

"What happened in Jacksonville was a sorrow for every thinking person in Florida," said High, "when men resort to ax handles and not reason in solving problems of this sort."

Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville called for patience and understanding and continued his criticism of other candidates for bringing the Jacksonville problem into the governor's race.

"We don't need loose talk or political accusations that inflame passions," he said.

Mathews said he was shocked by charges by Rep. Fred Karl of Volusia County that there was a breakdown in leadership by the Duval County legislative delegation.

Mathews said there is no reason for the problem to become a political football.

Karl reiterated his charge that lack of leadership in the Duval County legislative delegation, of which Mathews is a member, led to a breakdown in communications between the races.

"Florida needs a social climate in which diverse groups might come together and settle their differences with words about a conference table," said Karl.

He called for settlement of racial differences at the conference table rather than "with dogs and violence." He said some candidates for governor have ducked the racial problem when the people are entitled to know their stands.

Sen. Scott Kelly of Lakeland and Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach stayed away from comment on the Jacksonville situation.

Dickinson said again that he does not want to make political capital from the misfortunes of others. He reviewed his 25-year program for road construction in Florida and issued a new call for an end to sectionalism.

Kelly spoke of the need for fiscal conservatism and new industry.

He said Florida's greatest need in the next 15 years will be year-around payrolls which can only be brought about by increased industrialization.

Kelly said Florida needs a businessman governor and hit at the "tax-and-spend" 1963 legislature.

Mathews said some of Florida's major needs are in the fields of education, constitutional revision, reapportionment and air and water pollution control. He also called for an end to the sale of state bottomlands in rivers and harbors.

Miami Paper In Race Peace Bid

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Herald editorially urged the City of Jacksonville today to quickly find a solution to its racial problems.

"It is not Miami's business to tell Jacksonville what to do," the editorial, appearing in this morning's editions, said.

"Yet in the name of Florida we urge that men of good will assert themselves lest the ill will of two minorities destroy the pattern of racial relationships throughout the state," the editorial continued.

"Generally speaking that pattern is sound. In community after community it is reflected in calm counsel and reasonableness.

"Specifically, we believe that an appeal from Gov. Bryant to the conscience of misguided Negro and white leaders, plus a stern warning that violence is intolerable to Floridians, might well restore social sanity," the newspaper added.

The demonstration, which also saw two persons handing out waybills deploring the racial situation in the nation's oldest city, lasted only about 15 minutes and there were no incidents.

The demonstrators got out of two cars bearing Massachusetts license plates and flashed placards saying "When You Travel To Florida, Bypass St. Augustine —America's Oldest Segregated City."

exception of Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach, criticized Bruns' handling of the racial problem in his city.

Saunders said he was told by the governor that if conditions reach the point where Duval County Sheriff Dale Carson asks for state help the governor will respond.

Otherwise, said Saunders, the governor considers it a local matter. This is a stand normally taken by the state chief executive when he considers such problems.

Rutledge Pearson, head of the Jacksonville Branch of the NAACP, was to have been the Negroes' spokesman at today's meeting. Saunders said Pearson was involved in the Jacksonville situation and did not feel he should meet with the governor because he is a public school teacher.

At first inspection, it looked as if the hole had been made by a 45-caliber weapon. Collier Cohen, 70, had been sitting in front of the window.

His wife, Agnes, 56, was sitting on a sofa. The missile just missed Cohen.

A closer check of the room revealed what caused the hole.

It was a marble—apparently hurled with great force by some kind of slingshot.

Whoever propelled it apparently was in a car. And that was one of the big differences between last night and Monday night. Monday, most of the terday.

But the police were on the go, too. Chief Luther Reynolds said 60 cars were out last night. They criss-crossed, met and followed Chickens Need Love?

LONDON (UPI)—Monroe C. Babcock, an American hen expert, said that if your chickens aren't laying eggs they may need a little loving.

Discussing a strain of hen named for him—the Babcock B300—which was introduced in Britain a few months ago, he said:

"These birds are showing that they love people. What is more, they particularly love people who love them."

And they will respond by laying more eggs, Babcock wrote in a technical pamphlet for British egg farmers.

Advertisement

WANTED

6 Homes That Need Painting

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. Six home owners in this general area will be given an opportunity of having the new DuPont Tedlar veneer finish applied to their homes at a very low cost. It will be of special interest to home owners who are fed up with constant painting and other maintenance costs. This new Miracle Finish developed by DuPont after 20 years of testing and research is especially recommended for use in Florida climate and was recently shown on DuPont's T.V. show. It carries a 30 year guarantee and provides full insulation, winter and summer, thereby lowering the cost of heating and air-conditioning. The new product can be used over every type of home, including frame, concrete block, stucco, etc. Many different decorator colors are available. Please call Mr. Leon, 398-0872 as soon as possible. An appointment will be arranged to see your home without any obligation whatsoever. Out of town owners call "collect." All types of financing are available.

AMERICAN BLDG. CONTRACTORS
1121 Alvarez St., Jax
Telephone 398-0872

Advertisement

Don't Cut Corns, Calluses, Warts
Use New Magic Rub Off

Thousands of sufferers from laming corns, calluses, and common warts now report astonishing results with an amazing new formulation that rubs them off painlessly and safely without danger of infection from cutting, acids or abrasives. Secret is a wonder-working medicated creme called DERMA-SOFT that softens and dissolves those tormenting, hard to remove growths so that they rub right off, leaving skin silky smooth and soft. So don't suffer another minute. Get DERMA-SOFT at all

LIGGETT DISCOUNT
DRUG Rexall STORES

Advertisement

Top Quality! MOROLINE WHITE PETROLEUM JELLY Preferred first aid dressing because it's super-refined to guaranteed hospital quality! Relieves pain and itching of minor burns, chafe and skin injuries. Switch to Moroline, 1000 uses. Only 17¢—or get over twice as much for 27¢.

do not cause harsh irritation or griping. Do not dry your system. Do not upset your stomach or form a habit. Nor do they have an alkalizing action your doctor may say is wrong for you.

Yet . . . Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets work within hours to give you the relief you want. "I like them better than anything I have ever tried." "Most satisfactory laxative I've ever used." "Most reliable results I've ever experienced." Comments like these are typical.

That's why Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are guaranteed—even in cases of chronic constipation—to give prompt relief or money back from maker.

RAPID
MOVING & STORAGE CO.
ANYWHERE
(Complete Moving Service)
EL 3-9057

Your Watch Fixed $5
INCLUDES CLEANING - OILING - ADJUSTING
CASE POLISHED AND ONE OF THESE PARTS.
Jewel—Main Spring—Regular Crystal—Stem or Crown
ALL WORK GUARANTEED FOR 1 YEAR
N. A. ANGELO, Watchmaker
CHRONOGRAPHS AND SPECIAL MODELS SLIGHTLY HIGHER
THE LUGGAGE SHOP INC.
CORNER LAURA AND MONROE
3-DAY SERVICE
MAIL ORDERS

NOTICE TO HOME OWNERS
April 1st is the Last Day to File 1964
HOMESTEAD TAX EXEMPTIONS
FILE NOW WITH
RALPH N. WALTER-ASSESSOR
ROOM 102-104 COUNTY COURT HOUSE
(Office Will Also Be Open Sat., Mar. 28, 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m)

"A HEARING LOSS IS NOTICED MORE THAN A HEARING AID"
E. M. KINNEY
ZENITH RADIO CORP.
SOLES HEARING AID CENTER
217 HOGAN ST.
JACKSONVILLE, FLA.
355-2765
353-1440
Authorized Zenith Hearing Aid Dealer

FREE New FORD
No Obligation
DRAWING SOON
register now
NEW CAR
Stock Reduction
Big Discounts
OFF UP TO 30%
Ford Wins Again!
1st and 2nd Bristol "500"
Stock Car Race Sun., Mar. 22nd
Total Performance
Ford
EXCLUSIVE! FREE 10,000 PLAID STAMPS with new car sale
ALSO EXECUTIVE CARS DEMONSTRATORS BELOW COST
Phone EL 4-5432
Lynch-Davidson
Hogan at Union St.

cksonville Journal

Afternoon FINAL

© 1964, Florida Publishing Co. Jacksonville, Florida, Wednesday, March 25, 1964 Telephones: Want Ads EL 6-1111 Other Depts. EL 6-1212 10 Cents

Mayor Calls For Race Relations Committee

Discount Some Strife Reports

By MONROE CAMPBELL and LLOYD BROWN
Journal Staff Writers

County and city detectives today punctured some of the mounting racial violence reports.

County detectives said they will mark as unfounded a report that a man was beaten, robbed and slashed with razors by four Negroes on Monday night.

William Leroy James, 25, told police the attack took place at Belfort and Salisbury roads Monday night.

County patrolmen found him tied to a tree near his pickup truck and said James had numerous superficial cuts on his body.

Chief County Detective J. C. Patrick said that after extensive investigation he will mark the report as unfounded. He added that in 1958 James reported a similar incident at the same location. That time he said his attackers were Ku Klux Klansmen.

City detectives said they are "almost positive" that two sailors did not receive bullet wounds as they drove past Eighth and Davis streets Monday night.

There were two Negroes and one white man in the car. The white sailor and one of the Negroes suffered minor injuries. One was grazed across the chest and the other grazed across the

Crisis Coverage

PAGE 3
- Crisis building six months, Negro leaders say
- Candidates blame Burns, Mathews
- NAACP says Bryant won't intervene unless asked by Sheriff
- Tired lawmen keeping long, lonely vigil.

PAGE 5
- An analysis , with photos.

PAGE 4
- Editorial.

run demonstrations at segregated businesses.

Rutledge Pearson, president of the local and state units of the NAACP, said the term "hit and run" refers to Negroes entering segregated businesses, asking to be served and leaving immediately if refused.

BURNS AT PRESS CONFERENCE

LBJ Confers On Situation

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson discussed with top Justice Department officials today the recent racial violence in Jacksonville, Fla. Indications are that no federal intervention is currently contemplated.

By JIMMY WALKER
Journal Staff Writer

Mayor Haydon Burns today called for creation of a community relations committee of both races in an effort to end racial unrest and terrorist activity in Jacksonville.

The mayor's request for an "unofficial" biracial committee was greeted with enthusiasm by three prominent businessmen whose names were suggested by the mayor as possible members of the committee. A Negro rights leader expressed skepticism.

One of the three, Robert L. Milius, president of May-Conen's, said a group would meet immediately "to form a committee as suggested by the mayor."

The mayor, his gubernatorial campaign halted as Jacksonville remains the object of national attention due to the racial disorder, announced the request at a press conference today.

The mayor's office was overflowing with local and national television, radio and newsmen, when he walked in and read a prepared statement then answered questions.

He urged immediate meetings of a community relations coming the committee has no real power granted by government, then this committee will not be able to answer the problems of the community in this present crisis."

He said the NAACP will have to determine what responsibility the committee will have before deciding whether to participate.

Contacted by the Journal, Milius said:

"I am confident that we can form a group of citizens of good will whose only desire is to allay the unrest which has existed in recent days and which will result in bringing about peace and harmony among all citizens in our beautiful city so that people may go about their normal lives again."

Murchison said:

"If the mayor expressed a desire that I serve on the committee, and if those who form the committee think I can be of day night.

There were two Negroes and one white man in the car. The white sailor and one of the Negroes suffered minor injuries. One was grazed across the chest and the other grazed across the back.

Capt. R. B. Whittington of the city homicide detail said the incident now is under investigation by naval authorities.

"The men never called police," Whittington said. "The naval hospital did.

"We don't think it had anything to do with the racial situation. We are almost positive it didn't happen around Eighth and Davis.

Police Chief Luther Reynolds said many of the incidents being reported have no racial basis and that his officers are running them down as quickly as possible.

"I think the newspapers are being as fair as possible in reporting the informations available," Reynolds said.

In Municipal Court today, John E. Santora tried 63 demonstrators. Some were found not guilty, others received fines up to $50 and those with past records got jail terms.

Defendants charged with carrying concealed weapons were given 30-day jail sentences. Fifteen more Negroes are being held for further investigation.

Judge Santora tried 129 racial cases yesterday and 76 in Monday night's eight-hour session.

Also tried today were 16 Negroes charged earlier with trespassing at downtown restaurants. All were teen-agers except for a mailman. They were fined $50.

Juvenile Court Judge Lamar Winegeart said today that 209 juveniles had been arrested through last night.

After two nights of strife, Jacksonville police braced for more of the same today as Negro leaders called for hit-and-

Rutledge Pearson, president of the local and state units of the NAACP, said the term "hit and run" refers to Negroes entering segregated businesses, asking to be served and leaving immediately if refused.

Such tactics have been used here recently by the NAACP in connection with picketing of such firms. In some instances, however, demonstrators who entered business places and asked for service refused to leave and were arrested for violating state trespass statutes.

Yesterday the NAACP demonstrators limited their activities to picketing two downtown restaurants and a hotel.

Pearson today made "an urgent and sincere appeal to the Negro community to immediately cease and desist from committing all unbecoming acts of violence and vandalism."

Dr. J. Irving E. Scott, assistant director of education, said attendance at Negro schools is "very much off" today. He said no schools were closed, however.

When a bomb threat emptied Matthew W. Gilbert Junior High School about 3 p.m. yesterday, the crowd got out of hand.

Windshields were broken on police and fire department call cars and acting Assistant Fire Marshal J. A. Fevec received minor injuries.

More than 60 police cars prowled the city last night. About 40 Negroes were arrested in connection with demonstrations and juvenile arrests reached the 200 mark.

Police reported 34 cases of vandalism last night. Several weapons and fire bombs were seized from Negroes on foot and cruising in cars.

Late last night, somebody broke into a pawn shop in the 600 block of Davis Street and took $617 worth of merchandise, including a 32-caliber revolver, a 32-caliber automatic pistol, a 16-gauge shotgun, and two 12-gauge shotguns.

Stanley Fox, president of the pawnbroker's association, said all sales of rifles, shotguns, pistols and ammunition have been stopped by pawn dealers.

Reynolds said all days off and vacations have been canceled.

Sixteen Conservation Department officers have been assigned to back up the Florida State Highway Patrol during the racial crisis.

Meanwhile, the Navy advised its personnel to stay away from downtown Jacksonville until the racial disturbance ends, unless they have important business in the city. The notice was sent out yesterday, the Navy said.

INDEX

Amusements 17
Classified 19-23
Comics 10, 11
Dear Abby 9
Dr. Alvarez 17
Du Brow 12
Editorials 4
Edmondson 10
Gallup 12
Goren 9
Hairston 13
Knight 6
Markets 18
Obituaries 19
Puzzle 10
Radio-TV 12
Sports 13-16
Weather 24
Winchell 11
Women's 7-9

BURNS AT PRESS CONFERENCE

Senate Rights Vote Tomorrow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate agreed today to meet at 9 a.m. tomorrow for its first two civil rights votes. These are expected to place the controversial rights bill in position for a full-fledged Southern filibuster starting Monday.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield told the Senate that tomorrow will be a "most important working day." He urged every member who is physically able to be on hand.

Mansfield said there will be "plural votes"—on taking up the House-passed bill and then on a proposal to refer it to the Judiciary Committee for a 10-day study.

The Senate is certain to vote to take up the bill, which would ban racial discrimination in voting, education, employment, union membership, places of public accommodation and use of federal funds. But Southerners have prevented a vote on this by slow-up tactics.

Road Safety? Braaaack!

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The minister of highways for British Columbia, Philip Gaglardi, says safety campaigns "are not only a bore, they are a menace."

And nothing gets his dander up more than slow drivers.

Gaglardi, sometimes referred to as the "hot rod minister," says, "The fast driver is the safe driver because he is more alert."

Short and pudgy—he looks a little like Edward G. Robinson—Gaglardi and his six-man entourage are in this country to drum up tourist business by speaking of the glories of British Columbia.

GAGLARDI

AP Wirephoto

"Lowering speed limits tends to create accidents, raising the limit prevents them," he said, jabbing the air with a short finger.

"Safety campaigns scare the timid and emotionalize danger," Gaglardi said. "The big holiday weekends and death tolls are dramatized when probably there are fewer accidents per miles driven than any other time.

"Policemen drag out their radar on the big weekends and catch a few hundred drivers going five or 10 miles over the limit and pack up and leave.

"It burns me up to get a ticket like that."

The minister of highways got a speeding ticket?

"Yes, I've got them before," he said.

More than one?

"Six, I think."

"He's tried to talk his way out of a ticket, but "when they find out who I am, they are more determined than ever to give me one."

Gaglardi said he opposes suspending driver's licenses for a given number of infractions.

Has he ever had his license suspended?

"Yes."

For speeding too often?

"Yes."

How long did the suspension last?

"I think it was for one month on two occasions, and once they suspended it for three months."

Has he ever driven when his license was suspended?

"No, I'm a law-abiding man."

today.

The mayor's office was overflowing with local and national television, radio and newsmen, when he walked in and read a prepared statement then answered questions.

He urged immediate meetings of a community relations committee of "outstanding citizens of good will of both races, representing all factions."

The mayor said he would not appoint anyone to the committee but rather thought it should be a community effort. He did suggest that Milius; Charles W. Campbell, vice president of Prudential Insurance Co., and Charles Murchison, an attorney, would be active in its work.

"When such community action is taken, I shall, as mayor-commissioner, be delighted to receive reports and recommendations and do everything in my power to cooperate to the end that discord will be brought to a speedy termination, and that peace and harmony and understanding will once again prevail . . . "

The mayor said it is not a change in attitude on his part.

He said such a committee would be community action by civic leaders. He indicated no city government representative should have a part in it.

"I think the role of government is to enforce laws on the books. I don't believe government can do more than call for the cooperation of community leaders," he said.

It was later learned that Milius would serve as chairman of the organizational committee. Working with him will be Claude Yates, Campbell, Robert R. Feagin, Dr. W. W. Schell, Earl Johnson and I. H. Burney. Schell, Johnson and Burney represent the Negro community.

The mayor's comments drew immediate skepticism from Rutledge Pearson, local leader of the NAACP.

He said, "If the mayor is sayin our beautiful city so that people may go about their normal lives again."

Murchison said:

"If the mayor expressed a desire that I serve on the committee, and if those who form the committee think I can be of service, I will be delighted to serve."

Campbell said:

"We are facing a situation here in which all of us will have to work together.

"If I am asked, as I probably will be, I will be glad to participate."

In response to questions at his press conference, Burns denied the community relations committee had been urged upon him, although he said he had received varying suggestions in many conferences with businessmen, merchants, white and Negro ministers this week.

Burns also expanded on earlier complaints that the racial unrest had been instigated by other gubernatorial candidates, a statement which drew fiery comment from the other candidates.

Today he said, "It was politically inspired, but it was not at the direction of any candidates; it was the unfortunate course pursued by some of their Negro supporters."

He also stressed that the community relations committee should be organized for the purpose of solving differences through the "time-honored method of communication and exchange of ideas."

"This will not in any wise alter my responsibility to preserve the peace," he said.

The mayor declined to assess the effect of the racial violence on his gubernatorial campaign.

Asked if the "heart of this Negro resistance and violence" could be controlled by the Negro leadership joining such a committee, Burns answered:

"I hope they will be aware they are attracting upon themselves the complete distaste and disrespect of all good citizens."

News Flashes

Boat Spills; Fear 9 Dead In S. Fla.

MIAMI —A drift fishing boat overturned today while approaching an Atlantic Ocean inlet near Palm Beach, Fla. First reports to the Miami Coast Guard said three persons died, six were missing and 11 were picked up by rescue craft.

Fears were expressed that the missing persons were trapped under the 65-foot hull of the drift fishing boat Two Georges.

JFK MEMORIAL AT RUNNYMEDE

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home announced today that Britain will give the United States an acre of historic Runnymede as the site for a memorial to President John F. Kennedy.

Runnymede, a meadow on the banks of the Thames river at Egham, Surrey, was the scene of the granting of the Magna Carta by King John in 1215.

The Race Problem: 'Uncontrollables'

By AL KUETTNER
United Press International

One day last spring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the Negro integration leader, left the Gaston Motel in Birmingham for a short walk to the 16th Street Baptist Church where a full house of young racial demonstrators awaited his orders to march downtown.

As King walked, he looked searchingly across the street where a small group of about 100 Negroes stood silently watching the developments.

"You know," King told a reporter reflectively, "I'm not concerned about the people in the church. I believe they will remain nonviolent. I'm not even concerned about the police or the other white people of Birmingham. I'm worried about those people over there across the street."

The "uncontrollables" in the racial revolution are causing increasing concern among sincere civil rights workers as well as police.

Armed with broken bottles, rocks and firebombs, they strike in all directions, often smashing plate glass store windows in the Negro sections the same night they are hurling missiles at whites.

When these angry young Negroes meet the same element in the white race, there is usually a fight.

"The greatest problems today in the racial movement are the side effects," said Atlanta Police Chief Herbert Jenkins, first vice president of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

"Some demonstrators have made the act of going to jail a popular and glamorous performance."

Jenkins said the criminal element in both white and Negro races is taking advantage of the current situation. The result is an increase in crime.

"Going to jail is no longer the greatest deterrent to crime within the criminal element," Jenkins said. "We are finding more individuals — white and Negro—who are associated with both civil rights and criminal activity at the same time."

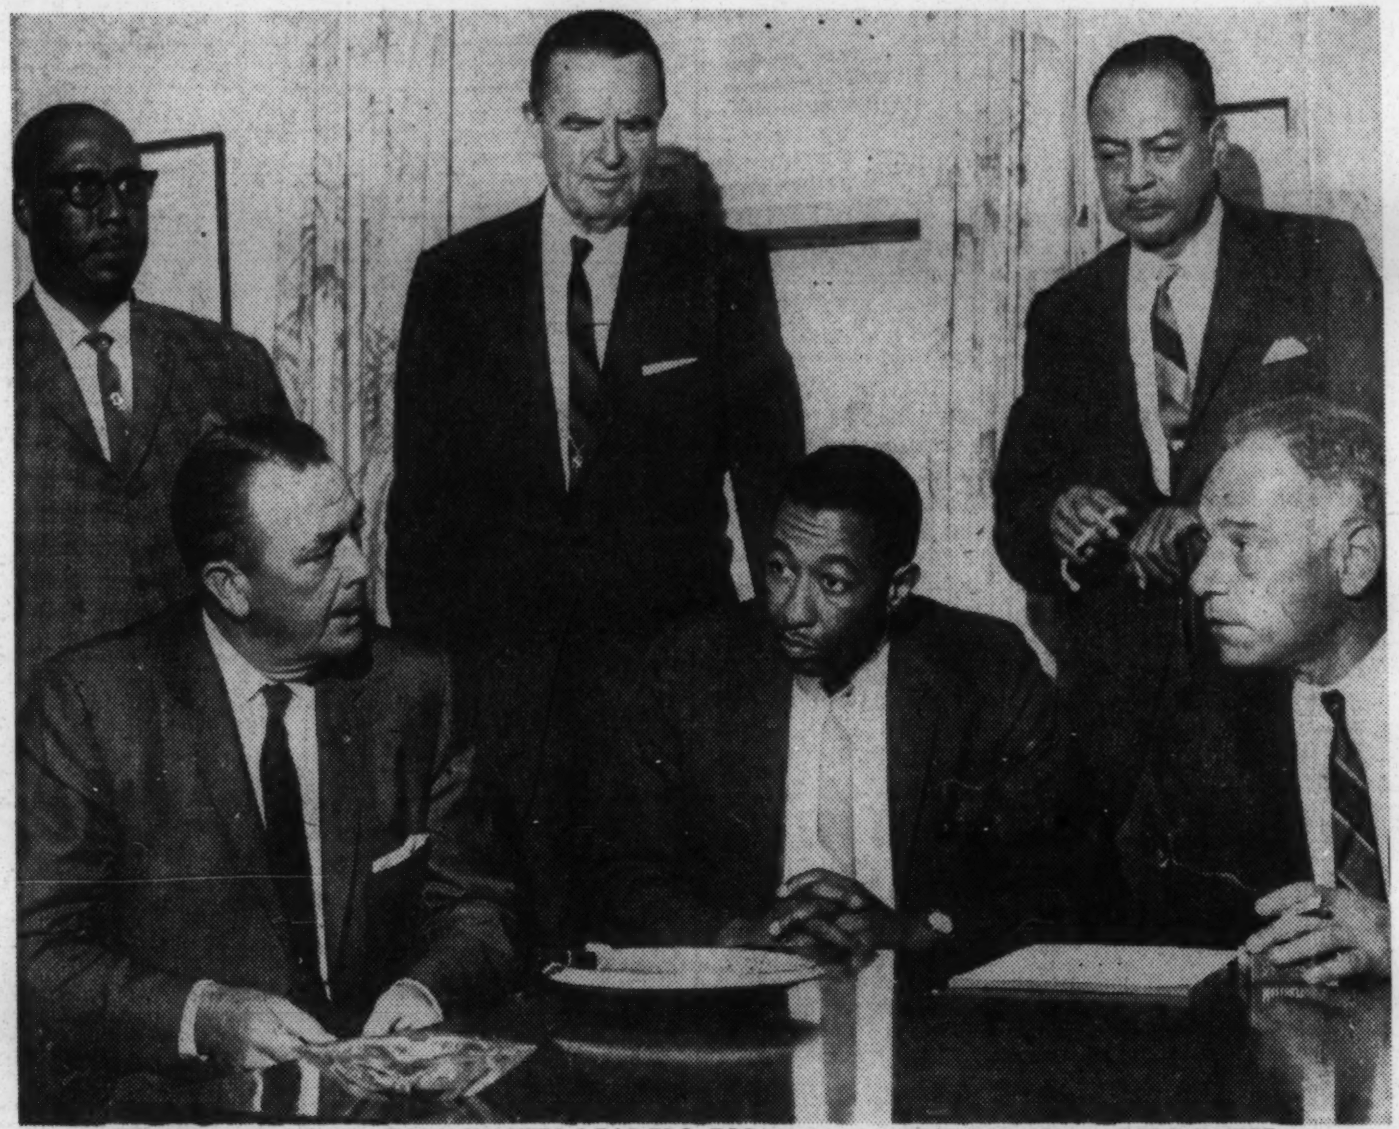
Another botnersome aspect of the racial revolution for police is the slowly increasing activities of the Black Muslim movement.

Police do not at present view the Muslims as a threat to law enforcement, but keep the organization under constant revaluation. They were disturbed somewhat recently by the public pronouncements of ex-Muslim Malcolm X who urged Negroes to arm themselves.

King called Malcolm's split from the parent Muslim movement proof that the organization "does not have the allegiance of the majority of Negroes."

"We do not believe that violence is the solution to the civil rights problem," King said.

★ ★ ★



SIX OF THE SEVEN COMMUNITY LEADERS FORMING A NEW BIRACIAL COMMITTEE
Seated (L-R): Feagin, Johnson, Milius; Standing: Schell, Yates, Burney

Journal Photo

Biracial Group Organizes

A committee of whites and Negroes, armed only with the power of persuasion to bring racial peace to Jacksonville, is being organized today.

The nucleus of the committee, three prominent Negro businessmen and four white leaders, began making plans for the new Community Relations Committee yesterday following a suggestion by Mayor Haydon Burns that such a group be planned.

Robert L. Milius, president of May-Cohen's department store, announced immediately after the mayor's press conference that he had gone to work to put a biracial committee together.

Before the afternoon was over, Milius announced that six other persons, representing both races, had agreed to serve on the committee. They are:

- I. H. Burney II, Negro, vice president of the Afro-American Life Insurance Co.
- Charles W. Campbell, senior vice president of the South-Central Home Office of the Prudential Insurance Co.
- Robert R. Feagin, vice president of Florida Publishing Co.
- Earl M. Johnson, Negro attorney.
- Dr. W. A. Schell, Negro physician and president of the Jacksonville Urban League.
- Claude J. Yates, vice president and general manager of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Florida.

Milius said he hoped that organization of the larger committee would be completed today so it could hold its first meeting today.

He said the biracial group would seek members from "as broad a base of the community as possible" and he hopes it will include leaders of the legal and medical professions, all branches of business plus members of the clergy.

Mayor Burns has refused to appoint a biracial committee himself, but said yesterday if a privately organized group were formed he would be "delighted to receive reports" and do everything in his power to cooperate "to the end that discord will be brought to a speedy termination."

The new committee will succeed the Community Advisory Committee (CAC), which had worked in the field of race relations since 1960.

The CAC announced last month that it could achieve no further progress and asked that the City Council form a committee with the power of the municipal government behind it.

The City Council refused.

Burns said at that time: "I cannot and will not take sides. My responsibility is the preservation of peace."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

Mathews Says Mayor 'On Edge Of Slander'

State Sen. John E. Mathews Jr. of Jacksonville has challenged Mayor Haydon Burns to name anyone connected with him who bears any responsibility for racial outbursts here.

Mathews said in a televised address last night that statements by Burns that Mathews inflamed this week's racial trouble constitute a cheap political trick. Both are candidates for governor.

"The truth is I have refrained, even in August of 1960, of being critical of the way racial relations were handled in Jacksonville," Mathews said. "When Mayor Burns makes statements like this, obviously it is an act of desperation.

"It shows a complete lack of qualifications to handle executive decisions if he serves as your governor," Mathews added.

He said Burns' statement that some of Mathews' supporters were connected with the racial outbreaks were "on the edge of slander."

"Last Friday he said he was tipped off as to what was going to happen," Mathews said. "If he knew what was going to happen, it was his duty to inform the Duval County sheriff, the state attorney and the county solicitor."

Mathews said "thank goodness" Burns has been "persuaded or overruled by some farseeing Jacksonville business leaders" and now wants to establish a biracial committee.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Karl Blasts Milk Board

By United Press International

Rep. Fred Karl of Daytona Beach blasted the Florida Milk Commission today as racial tension eased in Jacksonville and the candidates for governor turned their attentions to other matters.

Karl, in an old-fashioned political talk from the courthouse steps at Fort Myers, said the milk commission has damaged the cause of free enterprise. Noting a recent court order requiring a Tampa Bay area distributor to raise his prices to comply with commission orders, Karl said, "That a man should be hauled into court to defend his right to sell his own product at his own price is ridiculous. The commission's arbitrary actions and illogical approach have created a chaotic situation, particularly in the Tampa Bay area.

"Dairy farmers will be forced out of business or will have to thews challenged Burns to name the person and prove it.

Fred Dickinson sidestepped the racial issue, saying he didn't want to fan the fires. He hammered away at his program for increased old-age pensions, repeal of state intangible taxes, and development of deep-water ports. Dickinson campaigned in Central Florida towns yesterday.

Sen. Scott Kelly of Lakeland said he would insist on fiscal responsibility in bringing a halt to the "tax and spend" trend which he said now prevails in Tallahas-

SUITS • COATS • SPORTSWEAR
TALL MEN 6'1" TO 6'11"
BIG MEN 46 TO 60
Alleson OF ROCHESTER
Customline Apparel
WRITE FOR OUR FREE CATALOG
FREE CUSTOMER PARKING
GATE CITY GARAGE
LEIBO'S
MEN'S SHOP
105 W. Bay St.

Take That $100 Ride To . . . .
. . . THOR Chevrolet Inc
JACKSONVILLE BEACH FLA
See TOM McCUE
New Car Sales
"Today, tomorrow, any day the saving you make when you come here to trade is worth the time it takes . . . come in today, tonight or at your earliest convenience. The prices are right, the trades are better and you'll save money from start to finish."
Tom McCue

put a biracial committee together.

● Claude J. Yates, vice president and general manager of privately organized group were formed he would be "delighted

My responsibility is the preservation of peace."

★ ★ ★

NAACP Head Wanted To Be A Baseball Pro

By JOE McGOWAN
Associated Press

A Negro who says his lifetime ambition to play professional baseball was thwarted by segregation is leading the civil rights drive in Jacksonville.

He is Rutledge Henry Pearson, 34, schoolteacher and president of both the Florida and Jacksonville branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"I always wanted to play baseball and I worked hard at it," Pearson said in an interview. "I played in school here in Jacksonville and then at Houston-Tillotson school in Austin, Tex. I played first base."

After Pearson got a bachelor's degree in sociology, he played semipro baseball and said he finally attracted the attention of Abe Saperstein of the Harlem Globetrotters.

"I started the season with the 'Trotters baseball team and then Mr. Saperstein shifted me to the Chicago American Giants in the Negro American League.

"After the season I returned home. My mother was very sick and I didn't want to leave, so they assigned me to the Jacksonville Beach Seabirds (in the Florida State League).

"They barred me from the park," Pearson said. "I didn't know they were going to do it until the day before spring practice."

Pearson got a job teaching at Darnell-Cookman Junior High here and a contract as baseball coach at New Stanton High, both Negro schools.

"I was active in the NAACP's Youth Council years ago, so when I went into teaching I became a council adviser. In 1959 we started demonstrations for removal of restrictions against Negroes at lunch counters.

"On Aug. 27, 1960, I was a participant in the demonstrations."

On the day Pearson referred to, a band of white men carrying ax handles came into town, picketed a variety store where Negroes had been demonstrating, and violence broke out which lasted several days.

"My contract as baseball coach wasn't renewed, and it was published in a paper that I was fired as coach for participation in NAACP affairs. I never was told why, however," Pearson said.

The slender 6-foot-2 Pearson gets to play baseball one hour each day during a free period between classes.

"It's the only leisure time I have," Pearson said. "Teaching and the NAACP are my life. I sure don't get to spend much time with my wife and three children.

PEARSON

"I may be looked on as in too much of a hurry. I'm in a hurry to be completely free. My anxiety is brought on by the fact that I feel Negroes have got to progress, to be trained for automation.

"If the Negro gets bogged down with the civil rights program, he'll find himself on a welfare program."

★ ★ ★

Chamber OKs Rights Stand

Directors of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce, meeting at their headquarters today, approved policy declarations recognizing the right of privately owned businesses to serve or not serve any customer.

Recommendations of the National Affairs Committee, which met last night, were presented by Chairman Ralph H. Martin, Jacksonville attorney.

Also approved was a reiteration of the chamber's position that an employe should have free choice of joining or not joining a union and that interference with that right should be prohibited by law.

Opposition also was expressed to the proposal to pay double time for overtime and to the creation of a cabinet post of housing and community development. There are two bills in Congress now to create such a post.

The chamber voted to hold its 1964 annual meeting in Jacksonville in November.

4 Killed As Boat Capsizes

BOYNTON BEACH (AP)—A huge, freak wave capsized a 65-foot boat as it returned from a day of sport fishing and pitched 20 persons into Boynton Beach Inlet only a short distance from shore.

Four persons were killed, four hospitalized and one was missing.

A 14-year-old boy with both legs in braces because of polio said he swam to shore despite a fishhook that caught in his throat.

The dead were Harry Williams, about 65, of Lyndhurst, Ohio; Ernest Jeffries, about 70, of Boynton Beach, a retired Cleveland, Ohio, burial vault manufacturer; Mrs. Ernest (Mary Agnes) Whitman, about 70, of East Boston, Mass.; and Louis Paletta, 79, of Rural Medford, N.J.

Missing is Jerry Sapp, 20, of Fort Lauderdale.

EVERY HOUR
of every day Times-Union & Journal want ads are reaching prospects. To place your ad phone ELgin 6-4111. A courteous ad writer will assist you.—Adv.

'Torture Good For Juveniles'

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—One of the main defendants at Germany's largest war crime trials declared today that a torture apparatus he developed at Auschwitz concentration camp should be used on teen-agers.

"I am of the definite opinion that there would be far less juvenile delinquency today if my swing, together with whipping, were used on teen-agers," former SS Sgt. Wilhelm Boger testified at the trial of 21 former guards and Auschwitz functionaries.

A gasp went up from the 300 or so trial spectators. Shouts of "phooey" and "no, no, no" came from a number of young people in the spectators' gallery.

"That's right," Boger shouted. "That's exactly what I mean."

The defendant developed what a parade of former Auschwitz prisoners have called the camp's most sadistic torture instrument, the "Boger swing," or what Boger calls "my talking machine."

It consisted of a beam of wood hung from the ceiling of the interrogation center. Naked male prisoners were bound around the beam, their hands tied to their feet, and beaten with such force on the genitals that the victims swung back and forth.

Boger told the court he favored its use on juvenile delinquents shortly after a former Auschwitz inmate had testified that a friend of his had been worked over by the defendant on his torture instrument and: "He died shortly after."

Boger insisted that no one died as a result of being on his swing.

and illogical approach have created a chaotic situation, particularly in the Tampa Bay area.

"Dairy farmers will be forced out of business or will have to turn to the federal government for relief." Karl blistered one of his opponents, Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville, saying he helped kill in the senate last year a house-passed measure that would have eliminated retail price fixing on milk.

Meanwhile, Mathews shook hands in Live Oak after appearing in Tallahassee yesterday to open campaign headquarters and speak on television, calling for an end to phony promises from candidates and issue-ducking.

Two fellow senators, Ed Price of Bradenton and L. K. Edwards of Irvine, appeared on the TV program to endorse Mathews and urge his election. Mathews promised full support of the state merit system, a strong program of quality education from grade school through graduate school and said he opposed a northern route for Interstate Route 10 as being proposed by the present administration in North and West Florida.

Mayor Haydon Burns of Jacksonville, forced to cancel campaigning during racial riots in his city earlier in the week, anouced that the situation is easing and he will soon hit the campaign circuit again.

The Jacksonville situation has occupied most of the candidates this week, with Burns trying to put some of the blame on Mathews and other candidates for governor, and Karl blaming a partial breakdown in leadership in the Duval County Legislative delegation.

Mathews said in a special TV cast, filmed for showing in Jacksonville last night, that Burns was using cheap political tricks in an attempt to share the blame for the Jacksonville tragedy. He referred to a story in a Miami newspaper which quoted Burns as blaming an unidentified Mathews supporter as having a part in causing the racial strife. Ma-

Sen. Scott Kelly of Lakeland said he would insist on fiscal responsibility in bringing a halt to the "tax and spend" trend which he said now prevails in Tallahassee.

Mayor Robert King High of Miami campaigned in Tampa and Fort Lauderdale yesterday,

CALL EL 4-7751
FOR AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION SERVICE
FREE INSPECTION AND ESTIMATES
EDDIE BLAND MOTORS
655 W. ADAMS EL 4-7751

MONEY Available
for RESIDENTIAL and COMMERCIAL
MORTGAGE LOANS
• Conventional • FHA • VA
First Federal Savings
AND LOAN ASSOCIATION
Adams at Julia—Branches, Cedar Hills Shopping Center
Gateway Shopping Center, 44th and Norwood Ave.

saving you make when you come here to trade is worth the time it takes . . . come in today, tonight or at your earliest convenience. The prices are right, the trades are better and you'll save money from start to finish."
Tom McCue
THOR CHEVROLET
711 Beach Blvd. Jax Beach

ZALE'S formerly DUVAL'S
VALUE PARADE!
103-PC. HOMEMAKER COMBINATION
- 45-Pc. Melmac® Dinnerware
- 50-Pc. Stainless Flatware
- West Bend Percolator
- Sunbeam Portable Mixer
••• with 6-pc. Refrigerator set

NO MONEY DOWN
ALL 103 PIECES ONLY $39.88
● $1 WEEKLY

45-PC. MELMAC in beautiful "Rhapsody" pattern includes: 8 decorated dinner plates, 8 salad plates, 8 soups, 8 cups, 8 saucers, covered sugar bowl, creamer, vegetable dish, platter.

West Bend Percolator Brews 4 to 9 delicious cups of coffee to your exact preference . . . fully automatic.

Sunbeam Portable Mixer . . . with 6-pc. Refrigerator Set Fingertip selector control . . . 3-speed . . . beater ejector.

50-PC. STAINLESS FLATWARE includes 8 soup spoons, 16 teaspoons, 8 knives, 8 salad forks, Sugar shell, Butter knife. "Riptide" pattern. Chest extra. Includes 6-pc. Refrigerator Set.

ZALE'S JEWELERS formerly DUVAL'S

Shop 3 Convenient Jacksonville Locations

DOWNTOWN
34 W. FORSYTH
PHONE EL 6-1361

FIVE POINTS
1003 PARK ST.
PHONE EL 5-5386

LAKE SHORE
CEDAR HILLS CENTER
PHONE 771-4711

45-PC. MELMAC in RHAPSODY PATTERN
WEST BEND PERCOLATOR
SUNBEAM PORTABLE MIXER WITH 6-PC. REFRIGERATOR SET
50-PC. STAINLESS FLATWARE IN "RIPTIDE" PATTERN

Storm Blamed In 1 Death, 3 Injuries

—Story Below, Column 6

WEATHER

CARRY YOUR UMBRELLA

H	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	1
T	69	69	69	68	68	67	68	69	71	70	69	71	70

More About Weather on Page 15.

Jacksonville Journal

Afternoon FINAL

Volume 77—Number 169
© 1964, Florida Publishing Co.
Jacksonville, Florida, Thursday, March 26, 1964

Telephones: Want Ads EL 6-4111
Other Depts. EL 6-1212

10 Cents

Senate Votes To Air Civil Rights

—SUMMER TAKEOVER—

Mercer College Dean To Head JU

The new president of Jacksonville University, to be announced tonight, will be Robert Harry Spiro, 43, dean of the college of liberal arts at Baptist-run Mercer University in Macon, Ga.

Formal approval by the JU Board of Trustees is expected at a meeting of the board this afternoon and the announcement is to be made at a dinner tonight.

Dr. Spiro is not expected to assume his new post immediately, but probably will take over here this summer.

The appointment drew from Dr. Rufus Harris, president of Mercer, this statement: "Mercer is glad she can give to Jacksonville one of the most competent and dedicated young educators in this area who is willing to enter university executive administraton."

Dr. Spiro, a Southern Baptist preacher's son and himself an ordained Baptist deacon, is a European history specialist and a commander in the Navy Reserve.

He was born in Asheville, N.C., and attended elementary and junior high schools there. He graduated from high school at Hampden DuBose Academy, a prep school in Orlando, and was valedictorian of his class.

He received a bachelor of science degree in 1941 from Wheaton College, a church school in Wheaton, Ill., and then served in the Navy from 1941 until 1945. He saw service in the Pacific.

From 1946 to 1950 he was an assistant professor and later a full professor of history at King College in Bristol, Tenn.

He received a doctor of philosophy degree in 1950 from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

His next faculty position was at Mississippi College, a Baptist school at Clinton, Miss., where

—TORN IN TWO—

Explosion Rips Tanker

From Journal Wires

NORFOLK, Va.—An explosion shattered the midsection of the 523-foot tanker San Jacinto 40 miles off the Virginia coast early today, but 37 of its 39 crewmen elected to stay aboard the stern section to await the arrival of salvage tugs.

[illegible] crewman was reported

Santora Releases 20 Youths

Martin Luther King tells how demonstrations get out of control, other news about racial situation and photos on Page 36.

By MONROE CAMPBELL
Journal Staff Writer

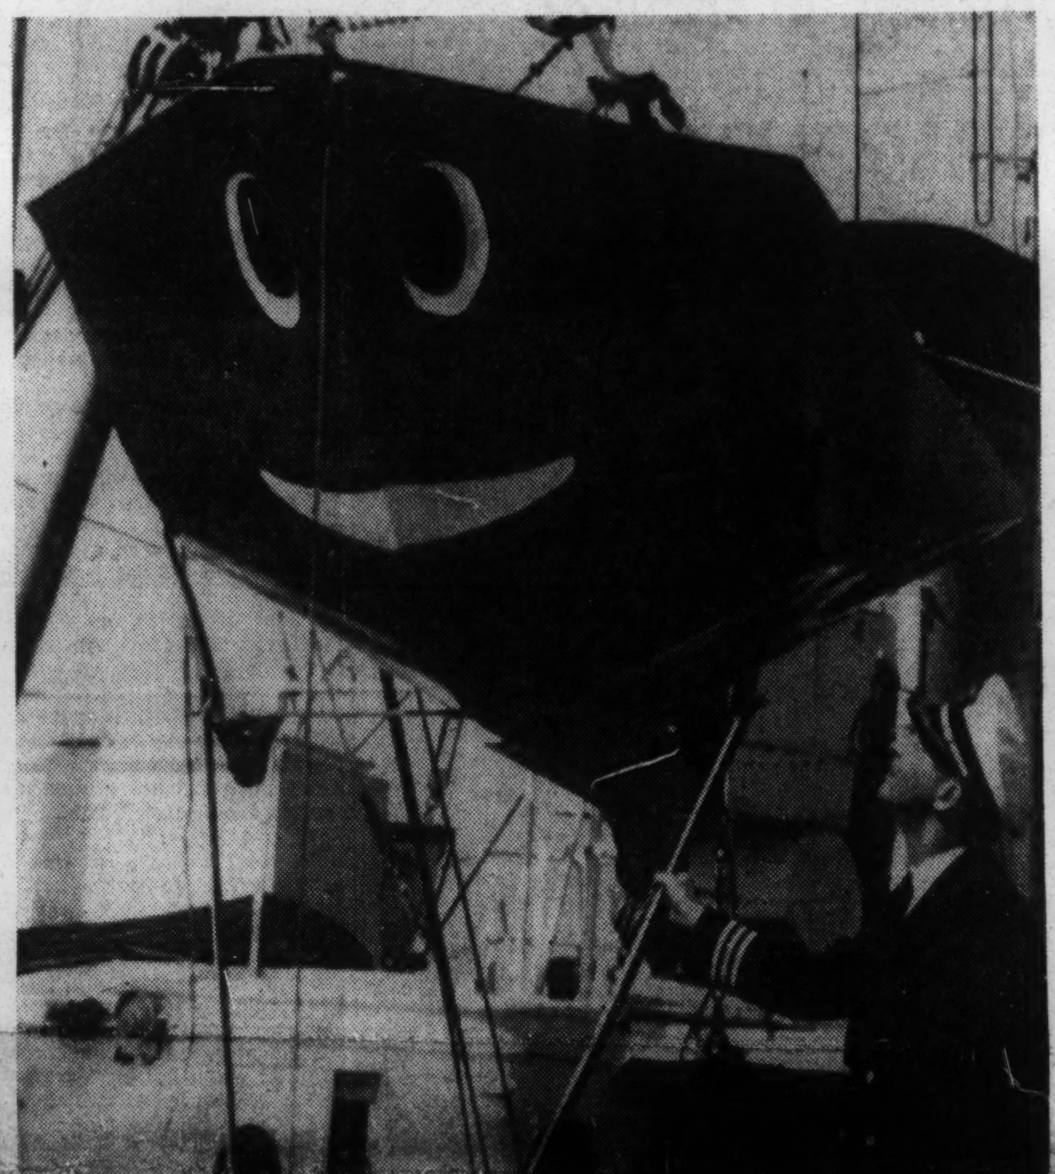
Municipal Court Judge John Santora released 20 Negro youngsters to their parents or ministers today as vandalism sparked by racial outbursts declined.

"Nobody wants these kids in jail," Santora said. "My only interest is that some responsible adult, preferably the mother or father, take supervision of them. Nobody can convince me that parents can't handle their teenage children."

The release of two more youngsters had been sought, but it was discovered they were juveniles and they were transferred to juvenile authorities.

Before releasing any of the Negroes today, Santora checked for previous convictions. This was done because one of the 10 released yesterday had two previous convictions before his arrest during racial demonstrations.

Meanwhile, Rutledge Pear-



Motion To Study Next

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate, breaking a deadlock lasting since March 9, voted today to take up for formal consideration the House-passed civil rights bill.

Southerners, who have used the motion to take up as the basis for lengthy speeches bitterly attacking the bill itself, finally let the vote come on the 16th day of the debate.

The motion, made by Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, passed overwhelmingly as expected.

The roll call vote was 67 to 17.

The Senate met today three hours ahead of its usual time, and the roll call came without any further speech-making.

This first vote cleared the way for a motion by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., to send the bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee headed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., for 10 days of hearings and study.

Democratic leaders plan to try to kill this move with a tabling motion later today, but expect the outcome to be close.

However, Sen. Hubert H.

NORFOLK, Va.—An explosion shattered the mid-section of the 523-foot tanker San Jacinto 40 miles off the Virginia coast early today, but 37 of its 39 crewmen elected to stay aboard the stern section to await the arrival of salvage tugs.

One crewman was reported dead.

A Coast Guard pilot who dropped flares over the disaster scene reported that pipes, wiring and structural beams were holding together the bow and stern sections. But several hours later the Coast Guard said the bow section was adrift.

The tanker captain radioed that all 37 of the men still aboard the drifting stern section were in good shape.

Two salvage tugs en route to the disabled tanker were due about 3 p.m.

The tanker was en route from Portland, Maine, to Houston, Tex., with its tanks in ballast for the trip.

Two crewmen were picked up by the merchant ship Mobile Pagasus. It was one of these men who was pronounced dead by a Navy doctor.

Seas were running as high as 10 feet when the first word of explosion was flashed to Coast Guard headquarters at nearby Portsmouth at 12:30 a.m.

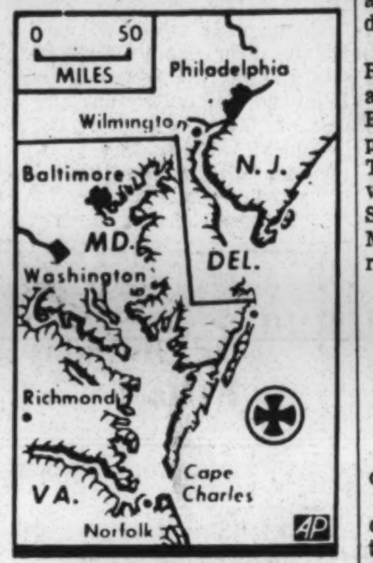
Shortly after daylight, with the seas still running 5 to 10 feet, the two sections of the tanker were reported riding smoothly.

"All well with no injuries," San Jacinto Capt. Harold Titus reported by visual signals to rescue vessels in the area.

The dead man was identified by the Coast Guard only as chief steward Dotilia. The other man aboard the Mobile Peagasus was identified as San Jacinto "radio officer Bock."

It was the second time part of the San Jacinto had suffered such a fate.

In 1952, while sailing under the name Fort Mercer, the ship broke in two after a collision with the tanker Pendleton off Cape Cod. Fifteen persons died in that collision and 69 were rescued.



EXPLOSION SITE

AP Wirephoto Map

He received a doctor of philosophy degree in 1950 from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

His next faculty position was at Mississippi College, a Baptist school at Clinton, Miss., where he was a professor of history from 1950 to 1957.

He left Mississippi College to become president of Blue Ridge Assembly, a North Carolina religious retreat operated by the Young Men's Christian Association, from 1957 to 1960.

He joined the Mercer faculty as dean of the liberal arts college in 1960 and has held that position since. He also has been a professor of history at Mercer during that time.

He married the former Miss Ruth Suenell Bennett of Orlando, a schoolmate at Hampden DuBose Academy, in 1942. The couple has three children—Robert Timothy Spiro, a senior at Davidson College; Elizabeth Susan Spiro, a senior in high school at Macon; and James Monroe Spiro, a second-grader.

Dr. Spiro is a deacon at Macon's Vineville Baptist Church, where his wife also is active. He belongs to the Macon Kiwanis Club and is active in the American and Southern historical associations.

His wife also is active in Macon's League of Women Voters.

Mercer University is a coeducational institution affiliated with the Georgia Baptist Convention. It has about 1,300 students and a faculty of 80.

Negroes today, Santora checked for previous convictions. This was done because one of the 10 released yesterday had two previous convictions before his arrest during racial demonstrations.

Meanwhile, Rutledge Pearson, president of the Jacksonville branch of the NAACP, said his organization would continue picketing downtown establishments. The NAACP started daily picketing in mid-February.

Pearson also said the NAACP leaders began spreading the word for Negroes to boycott downtown Jacksonville stores last Saturday night, immediately after Mayor Haydon Burns' television speech in which the mayor said he would not tolerate further mass demonstrations.

Pearson said about 800 members of the NAACP, at their weekly meeting last night, unanimously endorsed the weekend announcement of the boycott.

Pearson was quoted as saying, "Don't depend on your leaders to tell you which stores we mean. You must learn to walk into a store and recognize Jim Crow signs."

New Stanton High School was evacuated at noon today when a telephone caller said, "A bomb has been planted in the school overnight." This is the third straight day such a report has been received there. On the two previous days, the calls turned out to be hoaxes.

In a development yesterday, President Johnson talked with Justice Department officials in Washington about the racial disturbance here. White House sources said the conferees felt that the Jacksonville violence was "a local situation as of this point" and did not warrant federal intervention.

In other Municipal Court action today, a white man's suspended fine was revoked after he threatened a policeman outside the courtroom.

Paul W. Carter, 25, a carpenter who lives at 3904 Eve Drive E., and Max L. Ray, 20, of Lumber City, Ga., had been arrested in the 100 block of Davis Street last night about 10:30. Ray was charged with vagrancy and prowling and Carter with resisting arrest, vagrancy and prowling.

Sgt. Jim Miller of the city police intelligence division and Patrolman W. H. Pringle testified today they stopped a car the two were in as it drove slowly through a Negro neighborhood. When they searched the men, the officers said, one of them had a small knife and a bottle was also found under the car seat.

During the search, officers said, Carter started to strike Pringle. Carter also swung at Miller as Miller tried to subdue Carter.

Santora found Ray not guilty of his charges and fined Carter $50 but suspended the fine.

However, when Carter got outside the courtroom, policemen said, he accosted Pringle and said, "You'll reap what you have sown." Carter was brought back before Santora and the suspension was revoked.

There were about a dozen cases before Santora today which might have had racial implications. Sentences ranged up to 90 days.

Gabby

Cmdr. Emerson Jones of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey examines "Gabby," a high-IQ radio buoy with which currents of Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries are being plotted. Gabby's bright orange color and his face, which was painted on by the crew of the mother ship Marmer, are likely to provide some mariners with an unsettling experience. (AP Wirephoto) of hearings and study.

---

Democratic leaders plan to try to kill this move with a tabling motion later today, but expect the outcome to be close.

However, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., floor manager for the bill, predicts that the tabling motion will win and that the Senate can begin its debate on the bill itself Monday after a three-day Easter recess.

Mansfield said Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the minority leader, would make a speech supporting the committee hearings and urging changes in the bill. Mansfield said he would make a brief speech in opposition to the commitment move.

Morse told the Senate he was offering his motion because he felt referral to committee "will give us the best chance of getting adoption of a strong measure."

He noted that the Senate passed civil rights bills in 1957 and 1960, but that both fell far short of what civil rights advocates wanted.

Both those measures had to be watered down because their supporters did not have the two-thirds majority needed for cloture to shut off debate, Morse said.

"I ask the supporters of this bill whether they think the result looks any different this time?" he said.

"If we do not have enough support for cloture, this bill will not come to a vote until its most important and effective sections have been jettisoned.

"It is time we devised a civil rights strategy that will gain us the two-thirds needed for cloture. If we do not, we will only be going through the 1957 and 1960 experiences again. . .

". . . We will not get a meaningful bill until we can get cloture, and I am doubtful that we can get it so long as we follow the procedure of bypassing a committee."

—SAYS HOLDUPS 'RAMPANT'—

Judge Cracks Down With 50-Year Robbery Term

"Robbery has become rampant in Jacksonville and I'm going to do what I can to stop it," Judge Hans Tanzler said today as he handed down one of the stiffest robbery sentences ever in Criminal Court here.

Tanzler's remarks came from the bench along with his deterrent—50-year and 25-year prison sentences to two brothers convicted of robbing a liquor store.

Alfred Eugene Grizzell, 34, whose address is listed as 11303 Soforenko Drive, was sentenced to the 50-year term while his brother, Troy Grizzell, 41, whose address is listed as 1622 Sixth Ave. No., Jacksonville Beach, was sentenced to 25-years.

The two were convicted March 10 after County Solicitor Edward M. Booth filed direct informations against them charging they took $140 at gunpoint from the Lake Lucina Lounge, 2621 Cesery Blvd., on the afternoon of Feb. 13, 1963.

Tanzler denied defense counsel's motion for a new trial and observed that the brothers had other charges pending against them in Daytona Beach and in Duval County.

"Your guilt," he told the defendants, "was obvious to the jury as was attested to by the fact that they deliberated only 15 minutes in deciding this case. Obviously neither of you has any respect for our laws or the people's property rights."

He told Alfred Grizzell, "I don't think you will ever learn and your criminal record clearly shows this. Starting in 1945 you have been arrested and convicted of numerous offenses including a conviction for rape. You are too dangerous to walk the streets of this community."

The judge noted that Troy Grizzell had been arrested on several occasions and had charges pending against him but that this was his first felony conviction.

Maximum sentence for robbery in Florida is life imprisonment.

Says Ruby Would Testify

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Jack Ruby's new chief attorney said today that Ruby has agreed to take the stand if he is given a new trial for the slaying of probable presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald.

Dr. Hubert W. Smith, director of the University of Texas Law School's law-science institute, became Ruby's chief attorney Tuesday after Ruby fired Melvin Belli and Percy Foreman of Houston quit the case because of differences with the Ruby family.

Ten Are Convicted Of Great Train Robbery

AYLESBURY, England (UPI). A jury today convicted 10 persons in the $7.3-million "great mail train robbery" last Aug. 8, the biggest theft of all time.

The jury took 67 hours to reach its verdict, the longest such deliberation in British legal history. It took 12 minutes to read the verdicts after the 51-day trial. Sentencing was postponed until April 7.

Seven of the defendants were convicted of actually taking part in the robbery. Two were found guilty of conspiracy to rob, and one was found guilty of conspiring to obstruct justice.

An 11th defendant had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and receiving stolen goods.

Despite the convictions, the case is far from closed. Some ringleaders of the robbery gang are still at large, and most of the loot still is missing.

The defendants were not sentenced immediately.

People In The News

From Journal Wires

LADY ASTOR, nee BRONWEN PUGH, third wife of VISCOUNT ASTOR, gave birth today to her second child, a daughter, at Cliveden near London.

LYNDA BIRD JOHNSON, 20-year-old daughter of the President, was due back in the White House today after two days of theatre-going and Easter shopping with her college roommate in New York.

JOAN MERRIAM, aviatrix attempting a solo around-the-world flight, was delayed another day by leaky gas tanks in Surinam, hopes to take off tomorrow for Natal, Brazil. . . . Meanwhile, JERRIE MOCK, also attempting an around-the-world flight, plans to take off today for the Azores from Bermuda.

GEN. BARKSDALE HAMLETT, Army vice chief of staff, suffered what was described as a moderate heart attack and was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital.

POPE PAUL VI will give an Easter message to the world at 6:30 a.m. (EST) Sunday, with radio networks of 14 nations linked to Vatican Radio, the Vatican said today.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON will fly to Texas today to spend the Easter holiday at his ranch near Johnson City, the White House announced.

DEAN RUSK, secretary of state, will visit Formosa April 16 and 17 to discuss "matters of mutual interest, including the maintenance of peace and security in the Far East."

RICHARD M. NIXON, on a 24-day tour of 10 nations, visited with Pakistan President MOHAMMED AYUB KHAN.

MacArthur Has Inflamed Lung

WASHINGTON (AP)—Army doctors found signs of moderate inflammation or pneumonitis at the base of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's right lung today and started treatment with antibiotics. He is still in serious condition.

A statement from Walter Reed Army Medical Center said:

"Gen. Douglas MacArthur is progressing satisfactorily. His condition is still regarded as serious."

INDEX

Amusements	13	Hairston	9
Classified	15-19	Markets	14
Comics	34, 35	Obituaries	15
Dear Abby	5	Porter	14
Dr. Alvarez	13	Puzzle	34
Du Brow	26	Radio-TV	26
Editorials	4	Sports	9-12
Edmondson	34	Weather	15
Food	21-36	Winchell	35
Goren	16	Women's	5-7

---

1 Killed, 3 Injured By Storm On Northside

Bad weather was blamed for one death and three injuries on Jacksonville's northside today.

A man was killed when a tree limb fell on him at 3118 Rhone Drive, the Duval County Road Patrol reported.

The victim was identified as Jacob B. Anderson, a machinist for St. Regis Paper Co., who lived at the address where the death occurred. He was married and the father of four.

The death is believed to have happened during a thunderstorm which also unleashed a lightning bolt which slightly injured three airline employes at Imeson Airport about the same time.

Rev. F. L. Braddock, pastor of Springfield Church of God, which Anderson attended, said Anderson had been working in his backyard garden when his wife left the house in search of him.

She found Anderson lying on the ground under a large limb about 12 inches in diameter, the pastor said. A large piece of concrete, which Anderson is believed to have hit as he fell, was nearby.

The county patrol said the death occurred at 11:50 a.m., at the time the storm was reported on the northside.

Lightning struck a National Airlines DC8 jetliner at Imeson Airport at 10:30 a.m. slightly injuring three employes loading baggage.

Passengers on the New York-bound flight and the crew escaped injury, O. H. Hill, National's sales manager, said.

He identified the injured as R. A. Allen, E. G. Edwards and E. L. Cantrell. The three were under the front of the jet loading baggage into the bin and apparently took some of the electric shock since they were touching the ground.

Allen was knocked unconscious when his head struck the concrete, Edwards suffered slightly burned fingers and Cantrell was treated for mild shock, Hill said. Allen is in satisfactory condition at St. Luke's Hospital and the other two men were taken to the hospital for examination.

Hill said the airliner was not damaged structurally. It has been inspected thoroughly. There may be some minor electrical wiring damage, however, he said.

The plane was still at Imeson at 12:30 p.m., but Hill said it is expected to be released shortly for the nonstop flight to New York.

Weather Today
Cloudy and Warm;
Scattered Showers.
Weather Maps on Page 45.
Temperatures Yesterday:
High, 82; Low, 62.
Expected Today:
High, upper 70s; Low, 62.

The Florida Tin

A Leader in the Growth and Development of Florida and

VOL. XCIX—NO. 86—99TH YEAR © 1964, Florida Publishing Co. JACKSONVILLE, THURSDAY, MARCH

Community Body Seeks Race Peace

Negro, White Leaders Will Confer in Response to Plea by Burns

Mayor Haydon Burns yesterday called for settlement of racial unrest in Jacksonville by the "time-honored method of communication and exchange of ideas."

Meanwhile, as incidents of violence subsided, Burns said he would continue to enforce the laws against violence, illegal assembly and trespass.

In response to Burns' plea for settlement of racial frictions through negotiation, which he made at a massive press conference in his office yesterday morning, a group of white and Negro leaders formed the nucleus of a community relations committee.

Purpose of the committee, according to its temporary chairman, Robert Milius, manager of May-Cohens department store, is to enlist representation from as many walks of life as possible to accomplish restoration of harmonious relations.

Ready to Cooperate

Burns said he will "be delighted to receive reports and recommendations and to do everything in my power to cooperate to the end that discord will be brought to a speedy termination, and that peace and harmony and understanding will once again prevail in our lovely city of Jacksonville."

In calling for the establishment of the committee, Burns said:

"...I am not satisfied just to enforce the laws and to have people arrested after those laws have been violated, if there is anything I, or other people of good will, can do to prevent the continuation of the violation of those laws.

"With this in mind, I am requesting a group of outstanding citizens of good will of both

(Continued on Page 6—Column 1)

—Times-Unio

BURNS TELLS PRESS OF PLAN FOR RACIAL P
Mayor Requests White and Negro Leaders to Sett

LB.
Ba
In

WASHI
Presideni ligious l day, an particula
for a s Turnin
a plea fo into the office ar
in a Sou seminar:
"No gr greater rights th
The S ing 10 r
domina

good will, can do to prevent the continuation of the violation of those laws.

"With this in mind, I am requesting a group of outstanding citizens of good will of both

(Continued on Page 6—Column 1)

—Times-Union Photo by Reece Morabito

ORGANIZING COMMITTEE TO IMPROVE COMMUNITY RELATIONS
Members Are (standing) Schell, Yates, Burney, (seated) Feagin, Johnson, Milius

WHITE MAN INJURED

Negro Vandalism Appears Declining

Racial tensions eased here yesterday as acts of vandalism and violence, which plagued police and fire department personnel for two consecutive days, appeared to be on the decline.

Only isolated cases of racial incidents in the Negro sections and fringe areas were reported to police during the day.

Police said a white man was injured seriously when he was struck by a brick thrown by Negro teen-agers. The incident was the only major act of violence reported to police all day.

Car Burned

Firemen investigated two cases of fires set by fire bombs last night but firemen responded to 36 false alarms up to 10:30 p.m. yesterday.

Police said flames caused by a fire bomb gutted a convertible on a used car lot at 2937 Kings Ave. Another bomb was found smouldering on the front seat of another car on the lot but damage was minor.

Police reported only 17 adult arrests for any offenses were made yesterday. None of the adults booked into the city jail were charged with anything racially connected. Seven juveniles were picked up by police during the day.

Shortly after 5 p.m. Negro pickets set up a line at the Robert Meyer Hotel and another group entered the Amber House at 309 Laura St., but left when the state trespass law was read to them.

Lester Phillips, 53, of 1118 E. 18th St., was admitted to St. Luke's Hospital, where he was reported in "very bad condition" last night.

Attacked by Gang

Police said Phillips told them he was walking west in the 400 block of East Eighth Street about 2 p.m. when he was attacked by 12 to 15 Negro boys and girls in their middle and late teens who started throwing rocks and bricks at him.

Phillips told police he was struck on the forehead by one of the missiles. Hospital spokesmen said he suffered a possible skull fracture.

At least one earlier report of an assault by Negroes on a white person was discounted by police while another was termed doubtful.

Report Unfounded

J. C. Patrick, chief of Duval County detectives, said a report by Billy L. James, 25, that he had been tied to a tree and slashed by a group of Negroes on Monday was unfounded.

"Following interrogation of James we found several discrepancies in his story. Sgt. Roland Grant ran him on the polygraph machine and he is definitely lying," Patrick said.

Patrick said James made a similar report in 1958, but at that time he claimed he was assaulted by four white youths. "We are convinced James inflicted those wounds on himself," the county officer said.

City police said they were almost positive two sailors, one white and one Negro, did not receive bullet wounds from another Negro as they drove past Eighth and Davis streets Monday night as previously reported by the sailors.

"We don't think it had anything to do with the racial situation and are almost positive it didn't happen around Eighth and Davis," homicide detective Capt. R. B. Whittington said.

Mrs. Dorothy Maye, whose

(Continued on Page 14—Column 1)

LBJ Rejects Jacksonville Intervention

WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—President Johnson conferred with Justice Department officials today about racial violence in Jacksonville, Fla., and, it was learned, concluded that federal intervention would not be warranted at this point.

Johnson met with Deputy Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, Asst. Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall of the department's civil rights division, and Joseph F. Dolan, assistant deputy attorney general.

White House sources said the conferees felt that the Jacksonville violence was "a local situation as of this point"—meaning there was no immediate need for federal action.

George Reedy, White House press secretary, said Johnson is in continuing touch with the Justice Department on the situation. He noted that department observers are on the scene in Jacksonville.

Asked whether Johnson had talked directly with either Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy or Gov. Farris Bryant of Florida, Reedy said, "Not to my knowledge."

Today's White House meeting

(Continued on Page 14—Column 1)

rights
The
ing 10
domina
the Dem times
of the consider taking rights

Readin
ously ha great ca of any a ficant planned,
ing churc
"Your p power str munities
ers of st towns are and they s
Their attit changed preach an write and you set."
One Bapt
Duncan of the church
Baptist, sai ent seemed statement move Sout more abou
Se
"Everyor
he hit the and gave can said.
"One ha
dent shoul nominatio what thei
perhaps it
Johnson cause "dem
time, men truth, una quences of
"There
there are and dissen work in Ar

(Continued

'Go to Hell with Ai
Suka

JAKAR ident S hell wi lapse w Sukarn
ing of a ing here bass
Howard and saic
"There
country ening to foreign Indone
"That think scare
I say with y
Sta
tary D week t substar less a pute o
tion is Suka
not c

Community Body Seeks Race Peace

(Continued from Page 1)

races, representing all factions in our community, to get together and if it is deemed advisable to form themselves into a committee which might appropriately be called a community relations committee for the purpose of meeting at the earliest possible date and continuously thereafter (so long as it is deemed appropriate) in efforts to allay all unrest and to resolve all differences by the time-honored method of communication and exchange of ideas."

Hits Demonstrations

In his opening remarks, Burns called the mass demonstrations "unwarranted, illegal and purposeful" and "designed to break long - established laws of our city."

During questioning at the press conference, Burns said he would not name the membership of the proposed committee as it is his view it is not the proper role of government to establish such a committee.

Burns said the committee he called for yesterday "is not an officially designated biracial committee" and "has no official standing."

He said if such a committee was appointed by the head of a government "the community would not accept the recommendations of that group."

Later Burns said it is government's role to apply the law equally to all, adding that government "can't do more than call for cooperation of the citizens" in such cases.

"Government will not be successful in dictating any policy," he said, referring to the naming and establishment of the committee.

In announcing the formation of the nucleus of the community relations committee with membership from both white and Negro leaders, Milius said it is the purpose of the seven initial members to form a larger, more representative group to carry out the suggestions of the mayor.

Committee Members

Participating in the formation of the committee with Milius were Robert R. Feagin, vice president of Florida Publishing Co.; I. H. Burney II, vice presiunder control and did not require outside help. Burns said he has the cooperation of the sheriff's office and that he did not need to use any of more than 400 specially deputized firemen in police roles.

- That he would not speculate on the implications to his gubernatorial campaign of the rioting in Negro neighborhoods during the past several days. Burns, who canceled a West Coast campaign trip to remain in touch with the Jacksonville race situation, said he would forego campaigning "to devote all my energies to my job as mayor" while the race situation here remained critical.
- The weakness of the community relations committee of the Jacksonville Area Chamber of Commerce, which had operated since the 1960 riot, was that it represented "only the white community" and a limited segment of the colored community.
- Requesting establishment of the enlarged community relations committee "does not alter my responsibility to enforce all laws."

4 Dead, 1 Missing in Sea Tragedy

(Continued from Page 1)

Palm Beach; Marvin Blackwood, 43, of West Palm Beach; and Jimmy Stevens, 44, of Boynton Beach.

One of the survivors treated and released was Ernest Whitman, 70, whose wife perished in the capsizing.

The Two Georges was one of numerous drift-fishing craft popular with tourists who visit Florida's East Coast. In drift fishing, a boat cruises to a likely spot, then cuts its engines while passengers fish over the side with poles or hand lines.

Capt. James Stevens, skipper of the Two Georges, estimated that the swell which struck the boat was 18 or 12 feet high. From his hospital bed he declared:

"There was nothing I could do . . . Nature had its way . . . It was just one of those things . . . I didn't think it could happen, but it did."

PARKING TICKETS ROUGH ON PENS

TORONTO, March 25 (AP)—How can Toronto's policemen each go through 60 pen refills a year, Alderman George Ben asked at a council meeting last night.

"We issued 817,000 parking tags last year," replied magistrate C. O. Bick, chairman of the police commission.

Pope to Wash Feet Of Latin Students

VATICAN CITY, March 25 (AP) Vatican officials announced today that Pope Paul VI will wash the feet of 13 South American student priests in Holy Thursday services in the Basilica of St. John Lateran.

OFFICIAL GUIDE
to many bargains: the want ad section.—Adv.

Advertisement

CONSTIPATED due to DIETING? "Crash" liquid diets can be very constipating! Thousands get relief with NUJOL. Not a mere lubricant, NUJOL emulsifies in intestines to increase moisture retention, thus add bulk for easier elimination. Non-habit forming. Take NUJOL at bedtime. Economize on large size.

B

. . . W
risin sowi whe said.

Lo
ence, answ actio rights tion u house can d

In t came t make th So lead t civil r

How secreta Johnso
the Pr
er oc

to many bargains; the want ad section.—Adv.

Non-habit forming. Take NUJOL at bedtime. Economize on large size.

ernment "can't do more than call for cooperation of the citizens" in such cases.

"Government will not be successful in dictating any policy," he said, referring to the naming and establishment of the committee.

In announcing the formation of the nucleus of the community relations committee with membership from both white and Negro leaders, Milius said it is the purpose of the seven initial members to form a larger, more representative group to carry out the suggestions of the mayor.

Committee Members

Participating in the formation of the committee with Milius were Robert R. Feagin, vice president of Florida Publishing Co.; I. H. Burney II, vice president of the Afro-American Life Insurance Co.; Claude J. Yates, vice president and general manager of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Florida; Dr. W. W. Schell, physician and president of the Jacksonville Urban League; Charles W. Campbell, senior vice president of the South-Central Home Office of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, and Earl M. Johnson, attorney. Burney, Schell and Johnson are Negroes.

Milius said the group would concentrate on contacting leaders in the legal and medical professions, all branches of business, food and restaurant company operators and the ministry to get "as broad a base of the community as possible" for the committee.

Milius said it is hoped to have a meeting of the enlarged committee by today.

In response to questions at the press conference in his office yesterday morning, Burns said:

- The violence and vandalism by Negro youths which started Sunday night with the fire bombing of his eastside campaign headquarters was instigated by supporters of his opponents in the gubernatorial race. Monday Burns laid responsibility for the mass demonstrations and violence by Negroes at the doorsteps of Sen. John E. Mathews Jr., Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach and Mayor Robert High of Miami.
- "I reiterate," Burns said yesterday, "the (violence) was not at the direction of any of the candidates, but was the unfortunate course pursued by some of their Negro supporters."
- Gov. Bryant, contacted by Negro rights leaders to intervene in the Jacksonville situation, "wisely stated that the situation is best resolved at the community level and I might add by men of good will."
- The picketing by the NAACP of a hotel and restaurants does not mean they have been singled out because they are owned by companies not domiciled in Jacksonville and because of the policies of the absentee owners.
- During the massive demonstrations and violence, most of which has been confined to the Negro neighborhoods, Jacksonville police had the situation

SUITS • COATS • SPORTSWEAR

BIG

MEN

"Ra

Ea

the

gos

life,

Jacksonville Journal
Editorials

Published by Florida Publishing Company Every Afternoon
Except Sunday
400 West Adams Street, Jacksonville 2, Florida

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Associated Press is entitled exclusively to the use for publication of all the local news printed in this newspaper as well as AP news dispatches. Entered as second class matter at the Post Office at Jacksonville, Florida, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Time For Reason

Creation of a committee to sit down and discuss Jacksonville's racial problems strikes us as a wise step. It is one urged by the Community Advisory Committee, formed soon after the August 1960 disturbances, and which worked long and faithfully for right and reason before calling on the city's governmental leaders several weeks ago to establish a new committee.

If the welfare of the community is at stake, and there seems little doubt here that this is the case, then any measures taken which might accomplish public safety would seem little enough to try.

Already, this city has received adverse publicity that will linger in the minds of many who are not here and do not realize that some reports have been vastly exaggerated.

Downtown Jacksonville is not a battleground. There is nowhere near the stark horror citizens of Birmingham experienced. But it could become that if leaders of both races fail in their efforts to bring about peace and common sense agreements.

Mass arrests are not the answer. Neither are mass demonstrations. The answer lies in a common effort to quell any demonstrations which might invite counter-acts of violence and send the entire community into terror.

Surely, if the faith is there and the honesty is there, the leaders of the Negro and white races in this city can reach an understanding without further resorting to the sort of degrading acts that have smeared Jacksonville this week.

Much blame has been placed on the youth of the city for starting the outbreak. But the youth of any community merely reflect what is thought and advocated by those older. As the twig is bent, so shall the tree grow was never truer than in the case of a youth who is spurred on to show disrespect for the law.

We pray that Mayor Burns and the committee use their influence and their wisdom to bring full harmony to our city.

Accent On Keeping Racial Harmony

The accent passed from restoring racial harmony to finding a way of keeping it today as an eight-man executive subcommittee of the larger Community Relations Committee worked on a list of objectives.

Robert L. Milius, department store president who is chairman of the over-all group, said an organizational meeting was held yesterday and the executive subcommittee of five whites and three Negroes was named.

Objectives will be outlined tomorrow, Milius said.

Milius would not give details of discussions in yesterday's closed session, but he said Rutledge H. Pearson, state and local president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, attended.

A discordant note has come from Pearson, who said earlier he would not join the committee unless it had the official sanction of Mayor Haydon Burns. "We're not concerned with just having a committee," Pearson said. 'We're concerned with desegregation."

A previous racial relations group was disbanded about a month ago.

Burns was not among 30 business and civic leaders present at the organizational meeting. Campaigning for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, he spoke in Tampa last night. He has suggested names for a biracial committee but has steadfastly kept such a group outside the realm of government.

The city has quietened. Police said there were only eight reported cases of vandalism last night. This was in contrast to the earlier part of the week, when police had their hands full in quelling violence and vandalism. There were widespread demonstrations by Negro youths and challenges to police authority.

The NAACP said it plans to resume peaceful demonstrations in downtown Jacksonville tonight about 7:30, after a group of several hundred local Negroes return from the Tallahasse march.

Assistant Police Chief H. V. Branch said police would continue heavy security precautions throughout the Easter weekend.

* * *

Burns Tosses Blame Back At NAACP

By United Press International

Jacksonville Mayor Haydon Burns — away from home for the first time since racial violence erupted in Jacksonville Monday — rapped the NAACP as he hit the campaign trail again last night.

The gubernatorial candidate told the Tampa Junior Chamber of Commerce that "the race trouble in Jacksonville lies at the door of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Burns, who has been accused by the NAACP of himself being responsible for the trouble, also said he is still opposed to any official biracial committee to settle the trouble.

"But I hope the unofficial one will help ease tension," he added. A Community Relations Committee was set up in the wake of the uproar.

Burns reported that "things are now quiet and we are working hard to make the situation proper and in good climate."

Fred Karl and Scott Kelly also addressed the group, but the two candidates did not mention the race trouble—a hot issue of late in the governor's race.

Generally, the gubernatorial candidates have eased off campaigning for the Easter weekend after attacks on the State Milk Commission and on each other.

Miami Mayor Robert King High was the second candidate to criticize the commission, particularly for its court action against a Tampa dairyman selling milk below the commission-set minimum.

"If one dealer can sell milk under the price recommended by the milk commission and still make a profit, why should parents, many with large families, be compelled to pay the higher price?" High asked in campaigning in Hialeah and later before the Gold Coast Democratic Club at Pompano Beach.

High reiterated proposals made crease in auto license tag fees and the intangible property tax without saying how he would replace the revenue.

Kelly spoke to several women's groups and proposed re-establishment of the Florida Children's Commission, which was deactivated due to lack of funds from the last legislature. Kelly said the commission is a logical agency to administer a program of delinquency control.

FAA Ends Gainesville Crash Probe

GAINESVILLE (UPI)—Federal aviation officials have ended their probe of an air taxi crash which killed 10 persons, but said a probable cause of the crash will not be determined for some time.

A Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) spokesman said all evidence taken during a three-day hearing here will be carefully evaluated before the investigators make their report on the crash.

Witnesses told the investigators the plane may have been tail-heavy because of modifications made on the aircraft and due to the way it was loaded before taking off from the Gainesville airport for Jacksonville.

Rights Leader Talks At Rally In St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE (UPI)—Jose Williams, field secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, arrived here last night to take charge of a campaign to break down local segregation barriers.

Williams addressed more than 300 persons at a rally in an Elks club last night and deplored St. Augustine as "the oldest segregated city in the nation."

After the rally, Williams huddled with other integration leaders to plan more demonstrations in this historic city.

Classes at a Negro high school here had to be dismissed yesterday when a lunch-hour student demonstration got out of hand and school officials feared it would develop into a riot.

Malcolm Jones, a coach at Murray High School, said the demonstration started when students began marching down the halls, singing and pounding on metal book lockers.

"It was a spontaneous reaction," he said. "There was pandemonium."

Sheriff's deputies went to the school and took two students from Ivy League colleges into custody for investigation on possible charges of inciting a riot.

But the two, Bruce Bribley of Yale and Robert Tomlinson of Penn State, later were released without being charged. Tomlinson told police he went to the school "just to talk with the teachers and some of the students."

Jones, who said he coaches "everything" at the school, believes the demonstrations were planned on the buses when the students rode to school.

"They got off the buses singing freedom songs," he said. "It seems to me they came with some definite plan in mind."

The coach said the students were restless all morning and that the tension reached a boiling point during the noon recess.

School principal Richard Murray told sheriff's deputies he dismissed classes at 1:30 p.m. because he was afraid the demonstrations were getting out of hand and would develop into a riot.

2 Groups Disagree Over Marchers' Route

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — An apparent split in the leadership of a civil rights march on the capital developed today as Negro and white integration leaders gathered to protest the civil rights filibuster in Congress and honor "Florida freedom fighters."

Leaders of the march called a news conference to announce the split between the NAACP, originators of the march, and the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) who disagreed over the route of the march and other planning.

Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee, a member of the national advisory board for CORE and also president of the local NAACP branch, said CORE was pulling out of the march and would have nothing to do with it.

Asked if CORE planned something on its own, Steele said, "They may. I don't know." He said the local head of CORE, Florida State University student Frank O'Neil of Jacksonville, went to Nassau last night after calling CORE chapters around the state and telling them not to come to Tallahassee.

Steele estimated this would take about 1,500 persons away from the march, including students from the University of Miami and other colleges.

The local CORE chapter, dominated by white and Negro university students, insisted on a parade route that would give the demonstrators more public exposure by circling the Capitol Building in downtown Tallahassee.

Robert Saunders of Tampa, NAACP field secretary, and Mrs. Ruby Hurley, regional NAACP director, said the march would go as planned, from Florida A&M University's campus to a state-owned baseball field three blocks south of the Capitol.

Saunders dropped his earlier estimate of 10,000 marchers to a maximum of 3,500.

He also said that plans to end the demonstration by sending a group of 300 Negroes to the south lawn of the Capitol for closing ceremonies had been abandoned. He said it would be difficult to pick 300 from the 3,500 and it also was believed that fear of trouble in the downtown area contributed to the decision.

On the surface, Tallahassee appeared quiet as busloads of demonstrators from St. Petersburg, Jacksonville and elsewhere began pulling into the gathering area at A&M three quarters of a mile from the center of town.

But there were very few people downtown, and highway patrolmen and police cruised the town.

There were seven patrolmen stationed at the south door to the Capitol and a couple in the corridor leading to the governor's office.

"We want an orderly demonstration," Saunders said, "the kind we had in Washington where the people cooperated." He said the march would be directed by marshals with loudspeakers.

Mrs. Hurley said, "Our marshals will direct our people. If somebody does something else, we'll leave that up to local officials"—obviously referring to a fear that CORE-directed demonstrators would break from the parade route.

The so-called "Tallahassee March" was planned before the racial upheaval in Jacksonville earlier this week, and, although they weren't expecting trouble, police here took extra precautionary measures.

Gov. Farris Bryant, who plans to return to this Ocala home for the Easter weekend, said yesterday he doesn't believe the march "will be any different than a meeting of a group of bird watchers or peace lovers."

"These people have a right to meet and express their views," the governor said.

Accuse 5 Of Burning Store

Five Negroes were accused today of setting fire to a grocery after burglarizing it Tuesday night.

Thomas Grocery at 834 Baker St. was destroyed by the fire, according to city police.

The five suspects were arrested Wednesday night. Warrants charging them with breaking and entering, grand larceny and arson were issued today.

Detective Sgts. E. B. Mattox and K. R. Brown said the five entered the grocery with a crowbar and took $120 worth of merchandise.

Then two of the suspects poured gasoline on the floor and lit it, detectives said.

Police identified the five as Carl Williams, 17, of 1841 DeCotte St.; Elijah Riley, 24, of 814 Baker St.; Clifford J. Simmons, 17, of 2155 Woodside St.; Charles LeRoy Robinson, 18, of 728 Robinson St., and Jimmy Lee Henderson, 19, of 776 Robinson St.

Burglary Suspect Nabbed On Rooftop

Two teen - agers who heard

Ortiz was charged with break-candidates did not mention the race trouble—a hot issue of late in the governor's race.

Generally, the gubernatorial candidates have eased off campaigning for the Easter weekend after attacks on the State Milk Commission and on each other.

Miami Mayor Robert King High was the second candidate to criticize the commission, particularly for its court action against a Tampa dairyman selling milk below the commission-set minimum.

"If one dealer can sell milk under the price recommended by the milk commission and still make a profit, why should parents, many with large families, be compelled to pay the higher price?" High asked in campaigning in Hialeah and later before the Gold Coast Democratic Club at Pompano Beach.

High reiterated proposals made earlier to seek a state minimum wage of $1.25 an hour to cover some 500,000 workers of all sorts in Florida who are not covered now by the federal minimum wage law. He pledged he would veto any tax on groceries or medicine and said consumer taxes could be reduced if the state began taxing "special interests."

Earlier in the day, Rep. Fred Karl of Daytona Beach lambasted the commission at Fort Myers, charging that it has "damaged the cause of free enterprise."

Former Sen. Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach released a statement reiterating his vow not to release any statement which might inflame again the Jacksonville racial situation.

Dickinson said, however, that he would not want Burns "to think that I have forgotten his incredulous and irrational charge that I was involved in the promotion of the chaotic race disturbance."

He said he plans to examine the charge publicly "with every vestige of my ability."

Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville also attacked Burns for similar charges against him and then turned his talk at Live Oak against "pie in the sky" campaigning by his opponents.

He particularly criticized Sen. Scott Kelly of Lakeland for promising to eliminate the in-

---

Crash Probe

GAINESVILLE (UPI)—Federal aviation officials have ended their probe of an air taxi crash which killed 10 persons, but said a probable cause of the crash will not be determined for some time.

A Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) spokesman said all evidence taken during a three-day hearing here will be carefully evaluated before the investigators make their report on the crash.

Witnesses told the investigators the plane may have been tail-heavy because of modifications made on the aircraft and due to the way it was loaded before taking off from the Gainesville airport for Jacksonville.

The twin-engine craft, owned by South Central Airlines, plunged to the ground shortly after clearing the runway here, killing the pilot and all nine passengers.

Miami Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) investigator Henry C. Faller said at the hearing yesterday that he would not have flown the plane because its center of gravity was too far to the rear as a result of modifications to the craft and the way it was loaded.

He said the location of the center of gravity would make the craft tail-heavy and "uncontrollable."

Other witnesses said the plane appeared to stall after climbing a few hundred feet, plummeted to the ground and burst into flames.

But the two, Bruce Bribley of Yale and Robert Tomlinson of Penn State, later were released without being charged. Tomlinson told police he went to the school "just to talk with the teachers and some of the students."

Jones, who said he coaches "everything" at the school, believes the demonstrations were planned on the buses when the students rode to school.

"They got off the buses singing freedom songs," he said. "It seems to me they came with some definite plan in mind."

The coach said the students were restless all morning and that the tension reached a boiling point during the noon recess.

School principal Richard Murray told sheriff's deputies he dismissed classes at 1:30 p.m. because he was afraid the demonstrations were getting out of hand and would develop into a riot.

Republican 'Paul Reveres' Here Tuesday

Three Republican congressmen will be here Tuesday to discuss domestic and foreign issues in the coming political campaign.

The three — who make up one of seven panels formed into "Paul Revere Teams" — are James F. Battin of Montana, Page Belcher of Oklahoma and Patrick Minor Martin of California.

They will hold a press conference at 12:30 p.m. in the Seminole Hotel and then attend a rally and reception from 5 to 8 p.m. at the hotel.

Steele estimated this would take about 1,500 persons away from the march, including students from the University of Miami and other colleges.

The local CORE chapter, dominated by white and Negro university students, insisted on a parade route that would give the demonstrators more public exposure by circling the Capitol Building in downtown Tallahassee.

Robert Saunders of Tampa, NAACP field secretary, and Mrs. Ruby Hurley, regional NAACP director, said the march would go as planned, from Florida

---

Accuse 5 Of Burning Store

Five Negroes were accused today of setting fire to a grocery after burglarizing it Tuesday night.

Thomas Grocery at 834 Baker St. was destroyed by the fire, according to city police.

The five suspects were arrested Wednesday night. Warrants charging them with breaking and entering, grand larceny and arson were issued today.

Detective Sgts. E. B. Mattox and K. R. Brown said the five entered the grocery with a crowbar and took $120 worth of merchandise.

Then two of the suspects poured gasoline on the floor and lit it, detectives said.

Police identified the five as Carl Williams, 17, of 1841 DeCotte St.; Elijah Riley, 24, of 814 Baker St.; Clifford J. Simmons, 17, of 2155 Woodside St.; Charles LeRoy Robinson, 18, of 728 Robinson St., and Jimmy Lee Henderson, 19, of 776 Robinson St.

Burglary Suspect Nabbed On Rooftop

Two teen-agers who heard voices from the roof of a Main Street lumber company were responsible for the arrest of a burglary suspect early today.

Frank Anthony Ortiz, 24, was arrested on the roof of the Putnam Lumber and Export Co. at 4560 Main St. by city patrolmen F. W. Cauley and B. R. Ridenour.

Cauley said the unidentified youngsters were walking home from a drive-in theatre at 2 a.m. when they heard voices and called police. The officers said a window in the office had been broken and a desk drawer ransacked.

Ortiz was charged with breaking and entering and was held for further investigation.

FURNISHED MODEL
OPEN EVERY DAY

Let Mrs. Murray show you why so many people are buying our BRICK HOMES.

733-1767, EVE. FL 9-5889

victoria PARK

Jacksonville Journal
Editorials

Published by Florida Publishing Company Every Afternoon Except Sunday

400 West Adams Street, Jacksonville 2, Florida

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Associated Press is entitled exclusively to the use for publication of all the local news printed in this newspaper as well as AP news dispatches. Entered as second class matter at the Post Office at Jacksonville, Florida, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Time For Reason

Creation of a committee to sit down and discuss Jacksonville's racial problems strikes us as a wise step. It is one urged by the Community Advisory Committee, formed soon after the August 1960 disturbances, and which worked long and faithfully for right and reason before calling on the city's governmental leaders several weeks ago to establish a new committee.

If the welfare of the community is at stake, and there seems little doubt here that this is the case, then any measures taken which might accomplish public safety would seem little enough to try.

Already, this city has received adverse publicity that will linger in the minds of many who are not here and do not realize that some reports have been vastly exaggerated.

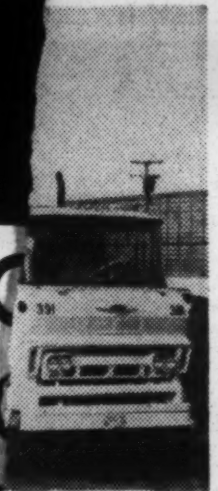
Downtown Jacksonville is not a battleground. There is nowhere near the stark horror citizens of Birmingham experienced. But it could become that if leaders of both races fail in their efforts to bring about peace and common sense agreements.

Mass arrests are not the answer. Neither are mass demonstrations. The answer lies in a common effort to quell any demonstrations which might invite counter-acts of violence and send the entire community into terror.

Surely, if the faith is there and the honesty is there, the leaders of the Negro and white races in this city can reach an understanding without further resorting to the sort of degrading acts that have smeared Jacksonville this week.

Much blame has been placed on the youth of the city for starting the outbreak. But the youth of any community merely reflect what is thought and advocated by those older. As the twig is bent, so shall the tree grow was never truer than in the case of a youth who is spurred on to show disrespect for the law.

We pray that Mayor Burns and the committee use their influence and their wisdom to bring full harmony to our city.



E HERE

ustry's vast research g centers. Sponsored Automobile Manufac-ssociation, the showeing brought here by sonville-Duval County
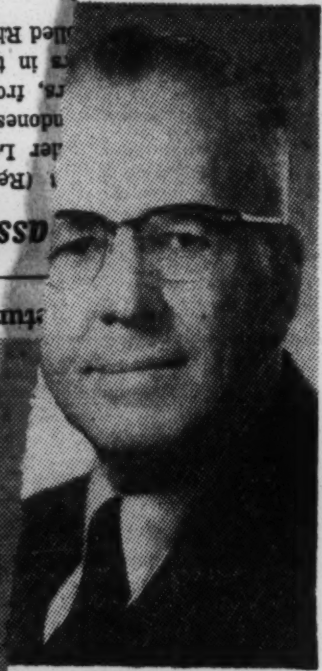
ouncil.



ALFRED M. BAILEY
Naturalist, Speaker

Film Series By Audubon

Goals of Community Relations Unit Given

(Continued from Page 17)

All actions are to be taken by the full committee."

The chairman distributed to newsmen a list of 30 members of the full committee who attended yesterday's meeting. It included 17 white members and 13 Negroes.

The full text of the statement approved by the full committee is as follows:

"Jacksonville in recent years has made some progress in relations between the races and in civil rights. Colored citizens now work in jobs that they could not have held some years ago. They are served in many restaurants which some time ago were segregated. They are welcome in public facilities where they were once denied admittance. There is a Negro assistant county solicitor and a Negro assistant public defender. A program of pupil integration has begun in the first grade of our public schools. There has been some progress in other respects.

Divided on Pace

"Many of our citizens feel we must make much more rapid progress. Many of our citizens feel we should proceed more slowly.

"There has been a period of unrest—a period when respect for law and order has been ignored.

"No citizen can afford this situation. It is caused by a lack of communication between the races, and a lack of our ability, in the words of President Johnson, 'to sit down and reason together.'

"This committee was formed to resolve these problems.

"OUR GOALS:

"1. The Community Relations Committee recognizes that respect for, and protection of, the rights of all individuals and their property is the paramount purpose of law.

"2. There are communities which have resolved these problems in one way or another, and we believe there are lessons to but that much more should be done. The building of the economic status of the Negro in the community is an important goal. Such an improvement would contribute significantly to the overall economy of the Jacksonville community. The committee will study, therefore, avenues of increasing employment and concurrently avenues of training citizens of the Negro race to qualify for better employment and increased income.

"4. It is agreed by the committee that the study, discussion and analysis above proposed, and the decisions to the questions which have been above set forth, will be concluded at the earliest possible date.

"This information can be obtained most rapidly, and it is recommended that the first of these reports be made to the full committee by April 10, or sooner, if possible. It is hoped that continuing reports will be made to the full committee, so that a program of action may proceed.

Calmness Urged

"5. This committee cannot function with any degree of success in an atmosphere of violence, and it urges upon all citizens calmness and patience, which provide the only atmosphere conducive to progress. Nothing in this statement of policy is intended to restrict or oppose the lawful rights of individuals or groups to participate in peaceful protests."

Immediately after the press conference, Pearson, the NAACP head, issued a statement to newsmen in which he said he endorsed the committee's general objectives but insisted that no studies of the experiences of other communities are necessary to immediately desegregate public facilities here.

Pearson said:

"Having endorsed the general objectives of the Community Relations Committee and assuming that these objectives will be forthwith implemented, and at the request of Mr. Robert Millius, I have temporarily accepted

J

Under le passed, each has authority places in his ment book d
Charles E. Be named the Ja
Library and Sw
Jacksonville U shown receiving

5 PCT. GA

Flor
Bring

Florida far record $880,861,0

Beach Boule
Accident V
Out of Ho

Constance Jenrette, 19
Peach Drive was relea

ALFRED M. BAILEY
Naturalist, Speaker

Film Series By Audubon Unit to End

The final film in the 1963-64 series of screen tour presentations sponsored by the Audubon Society of Duval County will be shown tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Prudential auditorium.

Dr. Alfred M. Bailey, a well-known naturalist and director of the Denver Museum of Natural History since 1936, will present "Ecuador's Enchanted Isles," a full-color film made during a cruise through the volcanic islands of the Galapagos Archipelago.

Dr. Bailey's film contains pictures of some of the unique species found by Charles Darwin during his visit to the islands in 1835. The Denver museum's field party made the expedition under Dr. Bailey's direction in 1960 and the film to be presented here is one of the outgrowths of that trip.

The film includes land and marine iguanas, giant tortoises, flightless cormorants, Darwin finches, Galapagos albatrosses, as well as underwater photographs of colorful fish, sharks and manta rays.

Dr. Ray Edwards is president of the local society and Harold Clark has served as chairman for the tours

---

"OUR GOALS:

"1. The Community Relations Committee recognizes that respect for, and protection of, the rights of all individuals and their property is the paramount purpose of law.

"2. There are communities which have resolved these problems in one way or another, and we believe there are lessons to be learned from their experience.

To Gather Data

"The committee has therefore determined immediately to gather information and data based upon this experience, particularly from other Southern cities which have experienced similar conditions:

"(a) To ascertain to what extent and how they resolved similar unrest and differences existing in their communities.

"(b) To determine what course of action (including the power of reason and persuasion) can be undertaken to bring about a voluntary desegregation in our community of all establishments serving the public;

"(c) To determine, if possible, what laws, if any, the committee, can undertake to have repealed, or passed, in the hope that they will help bring about a permanent resolution of the unrest and differences presently existing;

"(d) To determine what recommendations can and should be made to the duly constituted authorities of our city and country and immediately to make such recommendations as may be deemed desirable in a further effort to accomplish such purposes.

Gains Noted

"3. The committee further recognizes that in this community there have been gains in the area of employment of Negroes, er communities are necessary to immediately desegregate public facilities here.

Pearson said:

"Having endorsed the general objectives of the Community Relations Committee and assuming that these objectives will be forthwith implemented, and at the request of Mr. Robert Milius, I have temporarily accepted appointment to the committee's executive board.

"In respect to public accommodations, I am persuaded that no further studies, outside of the information and experiences of Jacksonville, are necessary or important for their immediate desegregation.

NAACP Position

"It is the position of the NAACP that these services can be desegregated without further ado, study, analysis or consideration. If the NAACP has at hand any experience or statistics that will be helpful in giving momentum to this body and will aid in the speedy desegregation in places of public accommodation, it shall forthwith submit such information to the committee."

Aside from Milius and Pearson, executive committee members attending the press conference were Thomas Hargraves, executive secretary of the James Weldon Johnson Branch of the YMCA and the committee's elected secretary; I. H. Burney II, vice president and secretary of the Afro-American Life Insurance Co.; Dr. W. W. Schell Jr., physician and chairman of the board of the Jacksonville Urban League; and Earl M. Johnson, an attorney, all Negroes; and Charles W. Campbell, senior vice president of the Prudential Insurance Co. of America; Robert R. Feagin, vice president of Florida Publishing Co.; and Claude J. Yates, vice president of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., all white members.

Members Listed

When he distributed the list of names of full committee members voting at yesterday's meeting, Milius said there were others who have accepted appointment who were not able to be present yesterday. Aside from those members of the executive committee attending the press conference, the list distributed by Milius included:

Dr. Arnett E. Girardeau, Frank Hampton, Wendell P. Holmes, Rev. J. S. Johnson, Dr. C. B. McIntosh, Leander J. Shaw Jr., Eric O. Simpson, and Rev. Landon Williams, all Negroes; and Fred J. Abood, C. A. Alexander, Rear Adm. Robert Goldthwaite, Ernest E. Lent Jr., Richard J. Lewinson, William H. Maness, Dr. A. McKenzie Manson, Roland Mumford, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick E. Nolan, Prime F. Osborn, Franklin G. Russell, Crawford Solomon, and Nathan H. Wilson, all white members.

Milius pointed out that the committee membership includes outstanding community leaders of both races in a wide range of fields of endeavor.

Police Note Continuing Decline in Vandalism

No new incidents of racial violence were reported in Jacksonville yesterday for the second straight day.

Police said there was no widespread vandalism or rock throwings—acts which had caused concern earlier in the week. The Jacksonville fire department reported only five false alarms which was "about normal."

Yesterday morning, Bernard A. Thomas, 29, of 1150 Community Court, was convicted of turning in an unlawful fire alarm. Judge John Santora sentenced Thomas to pay a $250 fine or spend 30 days in jail.

Ultraviolet Trap

An officer who testified in court said police and firemen had spread a paste on many fireboxes. The paste shows up under ultraviolet light. The officer testified Thomas was arrested at Jessie and Franklin streets at 9:15 p.m. Friday. There was a false alarm turned in on Jessie Street near the railroad about 30 minutes earlier.

Officers shined ultraviolet light on Thomas' hands after he was arrested and said the normally invisible paste showed up.

Thomas told the court he shook hands with a number of his friends Friday night and had not turned in a false alarm.

Beach Boule Accident V Out of H

Constance Jenrette, 1
Peach Drive was releas
Baptist Memorial Hospita
day. She had been admi
day following a two-car at Beach Boulevard and Road.

Duval County Patrolma
Biondi said a car driven
Carroll Graham, 58, of 81
on Ave. was traveling onto Boulevard from an acces and attempted to make turn across the thorou
Graham's car collided wi driven by Harry Jenrette, the Peach Drive address. H traveling west on Beach
vard.

Three other persons inju
the wreck were released treatment at the hospital.

It was erroneously report
the Florida Times-Union y day that Jenrette had been ing his car onto Beach
vard from the access road.

Burns

(Continued from Page 17

dress to state convention of ida League of Women Vote
6 p.m. (all candidates invi
While in Orlando meet with resentatives of the Florida
neering Society. Return to M
Wednesday night.

Thursday — Campaignin
Dade County; appear on live vision with Mrs. Burns,
Irene Menzer of Vero Beach
Mrs. Fred Rouse of Miami, latter two being state and D
County women's division ch men of the Burns campaign, spectively; leave Miami for T
pa at 5 p.m.; address Hillsboro
County Education Association
8 p.m.

Friday—Fly to Fort Pierce reception and luncheon and campaign in St. Lucie and chobee Counties; leave for Lauderdale at 3 p.m. for re
tion given by Mrs. Pat DuP

Saturday — Campaign in B ard and Palm Beach cou and attend a fish fry and in Boca Raton Saturday a noon.

Sunday — Attend after rally in Pompano Beach. Re to Jacksonville Sunday nig

THE WASHINGTON

By James V. Allday

Special to The Washington Post

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — "Jacksonville's police chief charged today that 'hoodlums and vandals' are responsible for this port city's racial violence."

That accusation from Police Chief Luther Reynolds is three years old, but sounds as if it were written yesterday in the light of Jacksonville's racial flare-up that struck last Monday.

Somewhere in the mess of confusion and bloodshed, there's a reason for the renewed violence in this city that bills itself as the "Gateway to Florida." The Negroes were the source of most of the activity, but the man in the middle is 52-year-old Haydon Burns, Mayor for 14 years.

Saturday, March 21, Burns requested television and radio time from every station in the city to issue a statement on the growing racial unrest that manifested itself the previous Friday as a mass demonstration in front of the municipal court where 20 "sit-inners" were being tried for violating Florida's anti-trespass law.

"Certain adults have told Negro youths that they have the civil right to force their presence upon certain hotels, restaurants and other businesses. As mayor of all the people, I want to set them straight."

Burns waved his finger into the TV lens and said, "you do not have such civil rights and I will not tolerate any further demonstrations."

IN THE PRESENCE of the city-wide audience, Burns then administered the oath of office to 496 firemen to serve as special law officers. Each of the men raised his right hand while standing in front of his television set and listening to the Mayor.

The reaction from the Negro community was immediate, intense anger. Rutledge Pearson, a Negro school teacher in Jacksonville and State President of the NAACP said, "I've never seen people (Negroes) so mad before. The man (Burns) is just asking for trouble."

Pearson, who re-organized a "direct action" program against segregation following the collapse of a Chamber of Commerce sponsored bi-racial committee began to lose control of his young flock.

Members of the NAACP Youth Council, emotionally inflamed over the Mayor's remarks, began to organize an unofficial school boycott for the following Monday.

Monday morning, a crowd of about 150 Negro students, playing hooky from school, marched arm in arm downtown singing traditional freedom songs. When they reached Hemming Park, the center of downtown and site of the 1960 riots, they began to get a little unruly.

TWO LARGE BUSES used to haul prisoners to the city's prison farm, were soon filled with screaming, kicking Negro youngsters.

By nightfall, incidents of violence began to pop up in rapid fire sequence. A Negro woman was killed by a pistol shot while she searched the roadside for her purse. A Cuban refugee was creased in the skull by a bullet.

Burns promptly blamed his political opponents on the outbreak of bloodshed.

For a man who stands an odds-on chance of becoming Florida's next governor after the May 5 Democratic primary, this sounded at first like political suicide.

Four years ago he entered the gubernatorial race as a political unknown as far as the state was concerned, and, with a limited campaign budget, fell just 12,000 votes short of getting into the runoff. This was enough to convince Burns that next time around he would be the people's choice.

Burns has a talent for politics that began when he was 16 years old. In fact, it's the only business in which he has succeeded. Early in his adult life, he entered the appliance business and failed. A plumbing partnership wasn't much better.

WHEN HE WAS 16, Burns stepped in the campaign for his ailing father who was running for an obscure city post.

A public relations man, who for years was a top-notch political reporter in Jacksonville, says, "Nobody, but nobody, advises Burns or tells him what to do. When he makes a decision, it's all his."

Back in 1949, Jacksonville was known as a fleshpot, and not much of a seaport. Burns decided he wanted to be mayor and won the support of Edward Ball, chairman of the board of the Florida East Coast Railway, and a political power to be reckoned with in the state.

Burns won election to a two-year term, and started to work on what is now known as "The Jacksonville Story." He's been in office ever since and has succeeded in lengthening the term to four years.

Burns has helped clean up the once miserable Bay Street waterfront area. When he took office, Bay Street was a continuous line of shady taverns and prostitute hangouts. Today, Bay Street contains a new City Hall that bears a deliberate resemblance to the United Nations building, a magnificent multi-million dollar civic auditorium and a municipal parking lot.

As mayor, he assisted the Chambe of Commerce and did a lot of the selling himself, helping to bring in businesses and beautiful buildings whic add to the new breathtaking effect o Jacksonville's skyline.

Burns's opponents claim he goes to far in taking all the credit for thes accomplishments.

The negro attitude toward th Jacksonville story is another stor

THE WASHINGTON POST
Sunday, March 29, 1964 E3

nd the seat of much of today's disontent.

NAACP President Pearson said, Burns doesn't care a hoot for the inlividual. All he cares for is concrete."

When the Jacksonville Expressway vas built at the urging of the Mayor, iundreds of Negro families were disocated.

Negroes seem to feel that Burns's ersonal ambition has destroyed the egro's chances in Jacksonville.

Ruby Hurley, regional secretary of he NAACP who came to the aid of Pearson last week, said, "Burns simply refuses to recognize the fact that there is a racial problem here. None of this (violence) would have happened if it had not been for Burns who is one of the most stupid men in the South."

What Negroes want most now is what Burns refuses to give: a bi-racial committee with the official sanction of the city government. Burns has repeatedly stated he will not form a bi-racial committee, but on Wednesday, when vandalism and violence had reached a peak, he called a press conference to urge "responsible citizens" to form a committee of both black and white, which he said would not necessarily be a bi-racial committee.

Mayor Burns has been inaccessible to reporters since making his suggestion to form the committee.

HE VOWED TO listen to the advice of such a committee. Here again, what first seemed like political suicide was turning into a political coup for candidate Burns.

The man who had sounded so bitter five days earlier was now picturing himself as willing to reason with any man, regardless of race.

The Burns name already has become a rallying cry in most of Florida. Since losing out in the first primary election for governor four years ago, Burns has been steadily building a statewide organization that will be very tough to beat next May.

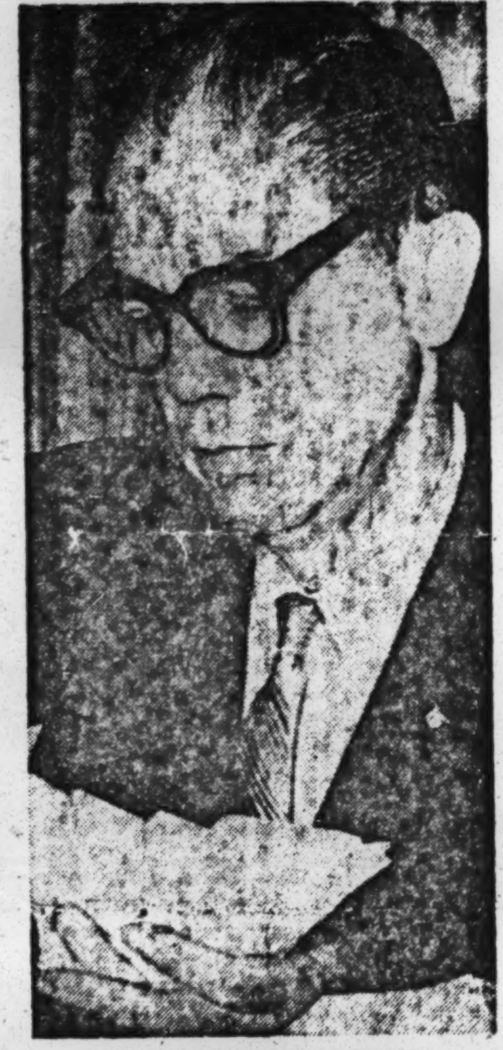
The last time he ran for re-election as mayor, his opponent was John Lanahan, a prosperous lumberman who was serving on the City Council.

The campaign was an adventure in mud slinging. Lanahan accused Burns of profiteering from the police department and requiring personal allegiance from high police officials.

Burns cried foul and entered a $75,000 libel suit against Lanahan which is still pending. He was reelected by a 2-1 majority.

The FBI once investigated Burns for certain activities in connection with the regime of the late Dictator Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic. It was suggested that Burns had failed to register with the State Department as an agent of a foreign power. Nothing ever came of the investigation that the public has been told.

NOR HAS ANYTHING been told about the weeks of investigation by a Federal grand jury in Miami of Jacksonville policemen believed to be conducting clandestine activities while supposedly performing their police duties.



MAYOR HAYDON BURNS
. . . wants to be Governor

Burns is a politician who wants to win and it is probable that should he think the public attitude favored immediate integration, he would promote it.

When the movement for racial equality in the South produced its first rash of bombings, Burns organized a southern conference on bombing and succeeded in drawing up lines of communications between cities to exchange intelligence information and put an end to further acts of violence. Since then, only one Negro home has been bombed in Jacksonville.

The new bi-racial committee that is shaping up at the suggestion of Burns may have some effect in solving the racial dilemma of Jacksonville, whose Negro population numbers 44.9 per cent of the total of 201,000 persons.

It looks like a long hot summer for the south and its racial problems. But for candidate Burns, who in three short days shot himself into the Nation's eye, it looks like his followers will have to order an extra supply of membership buttons.

afield.
The cred

Report L-47
April 16, 1964

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia
Jackson 2-8764

THE QUESTION FROM JACKSONVILLE

The Easter Week outbreak in Jacksonville of racial violence, predominantly from Negro sources, raises this question: was it something peculiar to Jacksonville, scene of one of the few and worst instances of raw rioting during the 1960 sit-ins; or was it a portent of terrible things to come, symptomatic of a mood and emotional climate to be expected over the South this Spring and Summer, as the great turning point of federal civil rights legislation is reached?

* * * * *

The immediate build-up to Jacksonville's rioting began the week of March 16. Negro demonstrations seeking desegregation of restaurants and hotels were stepped up. Instead of placid picketing which had, with a new impetus from participation of Negro ministers, become since February a regular thing on downtown city sidewalks, there began sit-ins. At some, a hit and run tactic was used; at others, demonstrators remained to be arrested. By Thursday and Friday of that week, roving Negro teenagers were moving through the downtown and its fringes, some demonstrating, some, according to most accounts, merely making their presence felt -- walking slowly in front of traffic, acting boisterously. Part of this seemed to be in reaction against arrests, and against Negroes being barred from a hearing on the arrests. At one point on Friday, March 20, 100 or so of these youngsters gathered at Hemming Park in the center of the downtown, the center of the 1960 rioting.

Various observers said the activity Friday afternoon had led them to expect a confrontation with white racists at the park that night or Saturday, and possibly a riot. This did not materialize either time. But Mayor Haydon Burns had communicated to newspapermen before 1 a.m. Saturday his plans for a television speech Saturday night on the racial situation, based on a warning that a riot was immanent.

The mayor's statement Saturday night was later reproduced by him as a full page advertisement in the city's newspapers.

The Mayor asserted he had full responsibility for the city, and declared "I refuse to delegate or to relegate this responsibility to anyone or any bi-racial committee or any other groups, it is my responsibility and I will face it." (A week before, he had been approached by representatives of the Jacksonville Council on Human Relations and urged to form a bi-racial committee with official sanction, or to do something positive in the face of growing Negro restiveness. This same recommendation had been made by others previously.)

The mayor's statement also pointed out that publicly owned facilities were desegregated, and maintained that Negroes had no "civil rights" to seek service at private hotels and restaurants and other businesses. "...If such were not the law, then why is the Congress considering the Public Accommodations law at this time?"

The statement then went on to say that, under twelve city laws, "demonstrations like last week" (presumably sit-ins) and "gatherings other than by permit" (the collecting at Hemming Park) would be prohibited. The laws cited included one "against conspiracy." To supplement "508 colored and white police officers," including "45 specially trained members of the Emergency Corps that are capable of meeting any situation, "the mayor said he was "right now going to give the oath and swear in as Special Police Officers 496 Firemen who at this moment are assembled at their respective stations under the direction of their senior officers."

Observers said that they stood back and waited for the lid to blow. It did not Sunday. But on Monday morning, March 23, a crowd of demonstrating Negro youths gathered at Hemming Park. They were dispersed, some arrested, some chased by police who had circled their gathering in motorcycles with sirens and motors roaring. After the rout, Jacksonville entered its two nights and two days of violence and vandalism.

Negroes threw rocks, bricks, and bottles at cars and store windows in the pie-wedge Negro section that points into the heart of downtonw, and tossed fire bombs at white and Negro stores and businesses, perhaps half a dozen, including Mayor Burns's Negro gubernatorial campaign headquarters. Negroes were arrested in possession of fire bombs and other weapons. False alarms, as many as 17 in 25 minutes, kept up during the period. Something like 76 police cases of vandalism were reported between Monday night and Wednesday morning.

A Negro woman was shot to death along a road from a passing car, in a Negro area. Police at the time and since said they had no clues and no way to know whether the shooting was connected with racial strife. A car containing one white and two Negro sailors was fired into, apparently by Negroes. The white sailor and one of the Negroes were slightly injured. A tourist car was fired at, its occupant cut by glass. A man who claimed to have been tied up and cut with razor blades by Negroes turned out to be the same man who claimed the same thing happened to him during the 1960 rioting at the hands of the Ku Klux Klan. Police said his story was false.

At one point, police kicked in the door of the NAACP headquarters and arrested students there. The police said they were throwing bottles out the window. An NAACP spokesman denied it. He also charged that desk drawers in the office were rifled.

Virtually all of the vandalism was confined to the Negro section. It was sporadic and involved individuals or small groups. Something more nearly approaching mob violence occurred Tuesday at New Stanton High School, a Negro school which includes students from the "best" Negro homes. The school was emptied by a bomb threat. (Previously, bomb threats had provided school yards full of youngsters from which the hit and run demonstrators sought recruits.) Students vandalized (details are not clear) a bread truck driven by a white nam. Police were called, and a small contingent arrived. A Negro officer arrested one youth. While one group of students engaged the police, razzing them, others freed the arrested youth. A Negro officer fired a pistol into the air. A help call went out, and re-enforcements arrived, including, according to the sheriff's office, about 15 cars of state troopers, 30 men, of a group which happened to be in a training session in Jacksonville. The pistol shot, and the sight of the troopers and their weapons, angered the already dangerous crowd of 1,500 students. Rocks and bottles were thrown at police and newspapermen, and at Negro teachers and other Negro adult on-lookers. The police pulled out. (They later said they thought it the best way to calm the crowd.) The crowd turned on the newsmen, overturning their car and setting it on fire, chasing three (while adult Negro on-lookers sat on their porches laughing.) They caught one, pummeled him, and, according to one of the three chased, robbed him. The man was rescued by Negro teachers who took him into the school for safety and treatment. Another reporter, arriving on the scene, was quickly pulled into a grocery store whose door was then guarded by Negro adults until he could get out of the area safely.

Similar -- though less violent -- mob scenes occurred at two other Negro schools emptied by bomb threats. At Matthew W. Gilbert Junior High School, police and fire vehicle windows were broken, and at Northwest High School rocks were thrown at two grocery stores.

In the midst of this, on Wednesday, Mayor Burns called for an "unofficial" bi-racial committee to regain "peace and harmony and understanding." (At a press conference, he said this was not inconsistent with his previous stand. The committee was "community action"; he was still responsible for law enforcement.) Friday afternoon pickets were walking peacefully downtown, and by Easter Morning, with sunshine bathing the Confederate monument in Hemming Park, the riot tension seemed over.

The bi-racial committee, headed by important members of the city's business elite, was understood to be ready and equipped to act; it could conceivably be the instrument for Jacksonville's peaceful acceptance of a fair deal in race relations. Backsliding, however, could mean more trouble.

Continued picketing and a boycott to keep pressure on the new committee was the policy the NAACP announced that Easter Sunday afternoon.

* * * * *

Which was it? A legacy of violence cropping up again in Jacksonville or a new phase in the South's struggle to be rid of segregation?

A comparison with the similar Negro vandalism that occurred in 1960 shows extreme differences in the degree of provocation. Then it had come from whites swinging axe handles at sit-in demonstrators.

This time, the Ku Klux Klan was quiescent, and a speech by a visiting U. S. Nazi Party nabob drew an audience of ten, six of whom were police. The provocation seemed to center around impatience with the lack of desegregation progress, resentment of a gradually getting-tougher handling of demonstrators in Municipal Court, and an immediate flare-up of resentment over the mayor's speech. (Some said the speech was political; the mayor is one of six candidates for governor. He claimed the stepped-up Negro activity was inspired by his political enemies. He might be right, to the extent that Negro leaders may have wanted to show the state that they were not happy with what his 15 year old administration had produced for them.)

A factor common to both riot situations was gangs of juvenile and older Negroes who, under such colorful names as the "High Hats," "Boomerangs," and "Untouchables," are in normal times "involved in other matters that keep the Negro crime rate high" (in the words of Chief Deputy Sheriff William F. Whitehead). He, city police sources, and the NAACP attributed most of this year's Negro violence -- as in 1960 -- to such elements in the Negro community taking advantage of the civil rights tension to let go some of their own broader guage hostility. As an indication of this kind of anger in operation, some of the rocks and some of the fire bombs were thrown at Negroes and Negro businesses.

At the schools, another element entered. George Harmon, Jacksonville Journal assistant city editor, was one of those chased, and he said that the majority of the crowd was in a mood of excited, almost gleeful excitement, while there was violence in the mood of a hard core group at the center of the crowd. It was panty-raid, spring feverishness degenerated into mob violence, he said. Furthermore, no physical provocation to compare with the Birmingham police dog and fire hose treatments of Spring, 1963, ever occurred.

To say all of this is still not to get at a real understanding of a situation such as Jacksonville's, or of the roots of violence in such a southern Negro community. To understand is to begin with the stench and dilapidation of the Negro slums, and to try to comprehend the hopelessness that is compounded out of the thudding impact upon the human consciousness of being poor, and being blocked by the very conditions of this poverty and by the weights of discrimination from any possible escape. This is hopelessness deepened by the new knowledge that the old dream of escape to the North is false -- that up there it's just more of the dreary old same. "Our young," say Negroes in Jacksonville and elsewhere over the South in 1964, "don't care any

To know this is to know the extreme: the already defeated, desperate young -- fatherless or sons of men who have no jobs -- who have no model except within themselves, and who find their meaning in life in gangs, with their medieval and prehistoric overtones, their war councils, and their internecine battling. These gangs were there in 1960 as they have been at other southern racial crises, watching from the sidelines. They saw the non-violent demonstrators beat, and believed that the police failed to protect them, arresting them, and not their aggressors. This rankles, and is a part of what had been festering in the black ghettos of Jacksonville.

So, too, is the memory of what happened when the gangs ran violent after seeing the treatment of the non-violent in 1960, their own violence turned outward instead of upon self and one another. They recount to each other and to new initiates still the old war stories, of how for a few hours there they took over, controlled the expressways into town, and faced down cops, Negro and white. "And we came upon this white policeman, and man, he was so scared of us, that he gave us his gun, without our asking for it..."

Also, to understand is to know that a Negro community in a city like Jacksonville is not monolithic -- that while it is united in a drive to end segregation, it is fragmented in dispute over how best this might be achieved, whether by violence, or non-violent direct action, or peaceful, dignified negotiation. Such a community, just like its white counterpart, is torn, too, by the plain old human rivalries of class and age and personality: the scorn of the leader, who lives amid his people in the slums, for the "black bourgeoise," moved like the white man to a suburb that hides them from the harshness of the life of their people. The contempt of the professional man, who has fought his way up to a fine home with a swimming pool, for the upstart young militants who won't listen to the experience and skill and wisdom that got him where he is and was used in the long painful past of racial advancement that helped lead to the recent breakthroughs.

These are among the dynamic elements that are operating in such a situation as Jacksonville's, influencing actions, setting terms, in a context far more complex than the surface appearance of black against white, good against evil.

There had been some progress in the city. Now, there is a bi-racial committee, and more ground for hope.

"Yes," says the middle-class Negro leader, "there is hope -- because the white men know they've had two strikes. The third strike, and Jacksonville is out." In the background lurks the gang member, with a ring in his ear, a half articulated murmur in his brain. "Why not? There is no hope for me. Why should there be hope for anybody else? Boy this next one is going to be a BIG rumble..."

Rutledge Pearson, 34, Negro schoolteacher, is head of the Jacksonville and Florida NAACP branches, and the leader of the city's civil rights drive. He and other NAACP leaders worked all night Monday and Tuesday (including a television appeal) urging against the violence, telling the people that the effective thing to do was follow non-violent leadership. Mr. Pearson cites efforts by various groups to persuade the mayor to give official status to a bi-racial committee. He and others describe the long record of the previous bi-racial committee, established by the Chamber of Commerce after the 1960 riots. (Even in name, it tended not to admit being bi-racial; it was called the Community Advisory Committee and its Negro Counterpart.) It was hampered by lack of official recognition, and such things as a failure to keep minutes, according to Dr. W. W. Schell, who patiently and persistently worked as chairman of the "Negro counterpart." It was considered generally ineffective in the crucial, last-ditch efforts to desegregate public accommodations and jobs.

Like most southern cities, Jacksonville has desegregated most publicly owned facilities, including theoretically its beach. It closed its swimming pool. Thirteen Negro first graders entered five previously all-white schools in the Fall of 1963. A half dozen restaurants have desegregated; hotels accept Negro conventioners; theatres limit Negro customers to eight a night.

Thus, the wellsprings of Jacksonville Negro civil rights discontent seemed to be general dissatisfaction with tokenism -- a profound frustration growing out of a feeling that the city's civic leaders were not joining in good faith with those Negroes who were trying to find accommodation by peaceful means. The violence, which may have been diminished but could not be stopped by responsible Negro leaders, would seem to have sprung from youthful hysteria and mob spirit at the schools, and otherwise from criminal elements and others in the Negro community who sensed a ripe opportunity for expression of dangerous fury, out of a lifetime of deprivations.

And violence-proneness is not one-sided in the city. White racists may have been quiescent during the crisis, but they have in beatings and bombings (a recent case resulting in arrests) made their presence felt since 1960.

"...They were after anybody white," said a Negro mother sadly of the school rioters..Prince McIntosh, Jr., 21, public relations director of the Jacksonville NAACP (who was arrested while taking pictures of the demonstrations) said the local NAACP Youth Council does not at all condone violence, but -- "at the same time we feel just calling for the cease of violence will get nowhere... We need to try not so much to stop violence as to root out the evil that is the cause of the violence -- segregation."

* * * * * * * *

Whether Jacksonville is a special case ultimately rests with the South, as new opportunities for good-faith dealing between white and Negro people loom ahead for each community in this year of national decision making. In 1960, in a special publication, Racial Violence and Law Enforcement, the Southern Regional Council stated:

> The South is not an anarchy. It is not a region where government is weak. It is not a region where the lines of political and economic power are loosely held. The breakdowns in law and order in the South are an outcome of public policy -- no less because it is sometimes oral and traditional rather than written in statutes and police manuals.

The words still apply, as each community in the South faces the decision of whether to obey the prospective federal law on public accommodations and other civil rights.

In the years following 1954, the South chose to violate the American tradition of obeying the Supreme Court's reading of the Constitution.

The question for 1964 is whether the spirit of lawfulness has returned to the Southern political leadership, to that leadership which drummed up the orgy of massive resistance and which had always, as it has now even throughout the Deep South, power to maintain order.

In great areas of the South today, that leadership has been overthrown and replaced.

In those states and cities where it still exists, it acts still as the real agent provocatuer of turbulence and violence.

But the lesson of Jacksonville is also that wherever the white civic leadership -- religious, business, and political -- allows a racial crisis to develop and spill into the streets (whether by indifference or inattentiveness to the justified impatience of Negroes with tokenism or less, or by rebuff of Negro efforts to effect change through discussion and joint planning, or by other failures), then it invites violence in.

Beyond prudent doubt, the next six months will be packed with crisis and decision for the South and for the nation. Every indication points to protest activity of an extent and an intensity without precedent, not only in the South but in the North as well. The Senate filibuster wears on. When it is finally over and defeated, and a law is passed, the issue in the South will be compliance. In both Summer and early Fall, some of the most recalcitrant school districts of the Deep South will be under court order to desegregate. And in the background of all this, there will be the excitement of the Presidential campaign and many state races.

With the lesson of Jacksonville in mind, the expectations for this Spring and Summer for every community of the South seem to hinge around such questions as the following:

- What guarantees are there that a racial crisis might not set off the energies of mobs, whether of white or Negro students full of spring feverishness, or of white or Negro victims of impoverishment, sullen in their slums?
- What policies and tools (such as an honorable biracial committee) give responsible Negro leaders any hope that their just demands will be met, short of the creation of a race crisis?
- And finally, what is the unspoken communication of community leadership toward violence? In Jacksonville, it seemed to be the message that violence works. The two days of rioting accomplished the creation of an apparently effective biracial committee, something that weeks of urging had not accomplished. They seemed on their way to accomplishing in the field of public accommodations desegregation and the meeting of civic responsibility what three years of patient negotiation had not been able to achieve. Is this the message that will come from other communities, to shape the emotional climate and mood during the crucial, turning-point Spring and Summer coming upon the South?

File: Jacksonville

PA✓
PW✓
SB

704 Fla. Theater Bldg.
Jax 2 -

THE HARD CASE OF DESEGREGATION

By

William H. Maness

(This address was delivered by Judge William H. Maness, Chairman of the Community Relations Committee of ~~Jacksonville~~, Florida, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Exchange Club of Jacksonville on April 29, 1964.)

Expressing views and opinions on current social, economic and religious problems of our day is a grave responsibility. Yet, to remain silent on these same issues when opinions are being formed and decisions are being made is destructive of our Democratic way of life. Silence is the deadly enemy of freedom. Too long we have tried to solve racial problems without taking public stands. Too long we have tried to protect the public generally from the reality of racial tensions in our city that have boiled over at least twice in major proportions. There can be no understanding or acceptance of the problems or of the solution without involving the general public; without appealing to the citizens of this community. I have utmost faith in the ability of both the Negro and white citizens of this community to make the right decision if we trust them with the problems.

This is why I have chosen as my subject "Law Day and the Hard Case of Desegregation." The views I express are not necessarily those of anyone else, even my wife. They are my own. I think they are right; but, I would be less than frank if I did not admit room for error. I'm kinda like a man who came to see me about ten years ago to engage my services for an adoption. He wanted to adopt a boy he claimed to be his son but who had been born to the wife of another man. I inquired, "John, are you sure this is your child?" A broad grin broke across his face as he replied, "I ain't sure but I'm satisfied." This is my situation as I try to find answers for my own convictions. "I ain't sure but I'm satisfied."

It is often said by judges that "hard cases make bad law." This is true. Too often the particular circumstances that make a particular case most difficult are human factors. As we approach May Ist, Law Day U.S.A., we should remember that the great freedoms guaranteed by both our State and Federal Constitutions posed no problem for the courts when they were invoked by men of good repute. The privilege against self-incrimination, the right to a write of habeas corpus, the protection against unreasonable search and seizure, the right to be confronted by one's accusers, of trial by jury, and the right to counsel are just a few of long-cherished and taken-for-granted rights of "good" men. But when the courts extend the same rights to "bad" or unpopular men, the hue and cry goes up that "the crooks get all the breaks." Few people realize that these rights developed out of a necessity to provide a more realize that these rights developed out of a necessity to provide a more reliable method of determining "guilt or innocence" under law, a procedure that would insure the same impartial treatment, whether or not one is in current favor. The popularity of the accused would be a poor test to determine his rights. A faulty concept of "good" and "bad" or "right" and "wrong" is a constant danger in a civilization such as we have developed, a civilization characterized by a high level of education of the masses, many forms of communication, a highly mobile and constantly moving population, and the exploitation of freedom of speech, assembly, and the press. More people have more information about more events in more places more quickly than at any time in the history of the world.

Against this background our attention is focused on a race whose heritage has been predominantly a role of servitude to a Nation predominantly white. In our midst from the beginning -- slaving, working, serving, "sometimes up and sometimes down," too busy doing the menial tasks of life to question his role, too poor to look beyond the source of his material existence, too loyal to question the justice of the men he served, too ignorant to know educational and cultural deprivation, too trusting to want a voice in Government -- the Negro has asked little of the men and women he has served through the centuries. So little, in fact, that those he has served regard him more as a dependent child who will never grow up, who is satisfied with the status quo.

But suddenly, in the last twenty-five years, this emerging race, the Negro, has shown signs of growing up. His master has largely replaced him with machinery and he is no longer so busy with the menial tasks -- not so much work to do, so he begins to question his role. He has been required to look for some other source for his material existence. He has been required to go to school. He is no longer ignorant of educational and cultural needs, but sees his own inadequacies and is seeking to overcome them. His loyalties are detached from a particular source. He looks for economic opportunities in other fields of service, but he finds an attitude of resistance.

The men he has served so long find it difficult to accept his new status. Like a parent who cannot accept the fact that his child is now grown, presumed capable and self-sufficient, those who have been served are having difficulty accepting the Negro as a person or as a race, as mature, capable, and self-sufficient, in a different role of economic endeavor. Many are having even greater difficulty accepting the idea of the "servant" eating with the family and patronizing the same public facilities.

So, for a time the Negro recoiled from such resistance to his new role and became disillusioned with the justice of his historical benefactors. "What rights do I have?" he wondered. Now there was time to study, to reason, to think, to look for new resources of assistance. The Negro now has found these resources and other assistance to provide the answers to all his questions. He is now aware of what he has not done, has not had, what he can do, and how to do it. "What do we want?" read the placard of a Negro picket pacing in front of the City Hall. "The same thing you want, and get," was the answer on the same sign.

The most compelling fact that we must now face in Jacksonville is filled with the same anxieties that we experience when our 16-year-old finally gets his license and we no longer have a legal excuse to deny him or her the use of the car alone. It is filled with the same emotions that well up within us when we realize that some day, perhaps tonight, we must let our daughter go out on her first car date. We wish we could put her request off for a week, a month, a year, forever -- but we can't. We must give in and trust and pray she will return safely. They usually do. So also, we must admit that the process of time and change has brought us to this compelling fact that we now must face, to wit: that discrimination against the Negro solely because he or she is a Negro must be ended. Racial discrimination finds no justification in the law of the land. The peaceful, law-abiding atmosphere we all desire will not be realized in any other way. The Negro is too well organized, too well financed, too well informed, and too determined to achieve his right to live here, in freedom, to stop short of his goal of equality under law. Furthermore, the support of the overwhelming majority of the people of this country (and I believe in Jacksonville) is on the side of the Negro in this demand. The courts of the State and the United States have many times defined his rights and many times upheld those rights by declaring a variety of laws unconstitutional in their application to a particular situation. The Congress of the United States is about to put on the law books of this country a civil rights act that should be repugnant to every freedom-loving person in this country, white or black, simply to demonstrate the extent to which it will go to support the Negro in his fight for equal treatment under the law. Last, but not least, isn't it time to abandon our outmoded and unnecessarily paternalistic attitude toward the Negro race? Haven't we hesitated too long already in trusting him to stand on his own merits, in letting him accept both the privileges and responsibilities of citizenship?

If we go this route, if we accept this challenge to our own capabilities to live up to our reputation as worthy citizens of the greatest nation on earth, it should not be with any feeling of duress. It is true that we want first to restore the harmony between the races, but this would be only temporary and would not solve the problems that stir men up, create tensions, and cause nonviolent demonstrations to become violent. Yet, all the duress that can be brought to bear on our fair city should not cause us to yield unless the change we accept is right and just under the law and one which we believe the Creator of all men requires. This, it is.

In accepting the Negro in a new role in Jacksonville, we can demonstrate to a watching world that we can learn by the mistakes of others. South Carolina took advantage of the bitter experience of Mississippi in admitting the first Negro student to Clemson College. This fact won the admiration of men everywhere. Jacksonville can do likewise by taking advantage of the bitter experiences of Jackson, Mississippi and Birmingham, Alabama. The greatest blow we could possibly strike against communism -- as a community -- would be to show to the world that in a democracy, men can achieve redress and change without violence.

What will such change require? How will you and I be affected? It could be no different from the circumstances we have experienced on any trip to Washington, Philadelphia or New York, or on trains, busses, and planes to and from those places -- or on the busses here, the Municipal Auditorium, the ball park, the Coliseum, the Greater Jacksonville Fair, the zoo, and similar public facilities. We would see a few Negroes in restaurants, hotels, motels, and other places that cater to the public generally, as well as in churches. We should try to put ourselves in the place of the Negro and tie our nerve-ending to his or hers so that we will not yield to any temptation to leave or avoid a place just because it is also serving the needs of a Negro. We should try to put ourselves in the place of the owner of such restaurant, hotel, motel, or other place of business and realize that this is the means by which he and his employees earn a living for their families; we should be aware that this change in community relations is costing him considerably because some people have not been able to accept this change in deep-rooted customs and traditions. We should remember that such a sacrifice on the part of such an owner of a business is for the benefit of an entire community of over 450 thousand, and that he deserves our special support. Such changes will not be accomplished with trumpet sound or roll of stirring drums -- they will be discovered to have occurred. Such discovery is the signal for applause and cooperation.

When such changes come the Negro himself will be slow to take advantage of the new opportunities. He will probably be reluctant because of the ever-present possibility of being denied service for a sufficient reason other than the color of his skin. He will be the conscious of the economic effect his presence at first may have on the particular business. He will be concerned about the attitude of resentment that may be demonstrated by an employee, even though the management accepts him. But he will expect to pay the price, observe the standards, and conduct himself in keeping with others enjoying the same facilities.

At best, such a cooperative effort of all the citizens of Duval County as well as those from out of town will not be free from embarrassments, set-backs, and perhaps some strife. But we have too much at stake to recede from the most persistent effort of all times to put behind us this period of transition. Most of us share the views of Dr. Madison V. Scott, pastor of Morningside Baptist Church here in Jacksonville, who said in addressing a racially-mixed group gathered for the annual dinner meeting of the Greater Jacksonville YMCA:

> "Personally, I'm tired of our racial struggles. I think we have grown weary of the tension and the turmoil and the bitterness of this tragic and useless struggle. In the name of our future under God, Americans have something better to do than to fight each other in the streets and set race against race. This world is changing. Justice is coming for black and white. It is time that forced racial segregation died of fatigue. The struggle to maintain it isn't worth it. I have faith that our society can leave me room for personal, private preferences, while granting equality of opportunity to all races."

The pending Civil Rights Bill in Congress is a poor substitute for personal persuasion by concerned citizens. The greatest service we can render to our community, and to the businessmen who have created the economic opportunities we enjoy, is to eliminate the necessity for any such legal coercion. The Department of Justice should never have occasion to invoke any of the provisions for the enforcement of this act, much less ever obtain a conviction thereunder.

I'm proud of this community. Much progress has been made. The Negro has shown great restraint in pressing for well-defined rights. In 1954 when the Supreme Court of the United States departed from the separate-but-equal doctrine, I felt that in ten years the crisis would be over, either by the Court's receding or by Congressional intervention. But that was just a dream. The Court has not and will not recede. Congress has not and will not intercede. A Constitutional Amendment has not and cannot come out of Congress and would not be approved by the required number of State Legislatures. Our legal remedies were exhausted years ago in the fight to preserve our customs and traditions. The pendulum is swinging further and permanently away from any possibility of return to "the good old days." The good days are the days of opportunity now at hand to turn strife into stability, discord into direction, and bloodshed into brotherhood.

These lines from the great pageant of the Cherokee Indians, "Unto These Hills," form my closing thoughts:

> Out of the great womb of Destiny,
> Into the doorway of the world
> Come the souls of men;
> Created equal in the eyes of their Maker.
> When their day is done, they return, still equal,
> Into the bosom of the eternal.
> Somewhere in between, on the plains of human life,
> Caught in the monstrous mistakes
> That men devise to plague each other,
> It is the fate of some of them to suffer and to die
> And to be twisted on the rack of greed and hatred . . . . .

Of the monstrous mistakes we have made, none has been greater than the denial of equal rights to Negro citizens in the application of the guarantees of the State and Federal Constitutions, but, by the same token, it would be difficult to imagine a more monstrous mistake than could now be made if in our zeal to correct the injustice to the Negro we destroy or impair the equal rights of others. Only by the fullest cooperation of all of our citizens can we avoid both extremes.

The bad law that the "hard case" of desegregation has made and is making is the Civil Rights Bill. "Harder" still are the acts of the Executive Branch of our Government as it assumes the responsibility of making, by the strong arm of the law, social changes that we as loyal Americans should now voluntarily recognize and accept. This is not the responsibility of the Government or the church or the chambers of commerce, nor of professional groups or labor unions or any other particular group. But all these can help. This calls for soul-searching, individual action. It is the responsibility of every person who lives in or comes to Duval County.

Will you do your part? Will you help our community realize its great potential?

#####

Goals Outlined By Community Relations Body

Businesses Serving Public Due Emphasis in Study

Jacksonville's new Community Relations Committee yesterday adopted a program of objectives with priority given to exploring means of bringing about a voluntary desegregation of all establishments serving the public.

The committee also agreed to study ways to provide Negroes with more jobs, better types of employment and increased income.

The full committee's executive committee was given a mandate to proceed with a study of how to attain the objectives and to make an initial report no later than April 10.

A nucleus of the Community Relations Committee was formed Wednesday in response to a request by Mayor Haydon Burns that leaders of good will of both races meet to re-establish racial harmony in Jacksonville. Burns said that while the committee would have no official standing, he would be delighted to have any recommendations it would present.

Unanimous Backing

The statement of goals was formulated by the executive committee and then approved unanimously yesterday by the full committee. It was announced at a late afternoon press conference by the full committee's chairman, Robert Milius, president and general manager of May-Cohens department store.

Other members of the executive committee were on hand, including Rutledge Pearson, president of both the Jacksonville and Florida branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Pearson told newsmen that he has accepted temporary appointment to the executive group.

Milius said that the total membership of the full committee is in the mid-thirties. He said that the number of members of the full committee will be expanded greatly within the next few days.

No Power of Action

Milius also emphasized that the executive committee "has no power of action except as specifically delegated by the full committee of the Community Relations Committee. Our only power is to suggest and recommend.

(Continued on Page 24—Column 4)

—Times-Union Photo

EASTERS' EASTER

For the first time in his 14 years Gary Alan Easters' birthday, March 29, falls on Easter Sunday this year. Gary, who lives at 3133 Cecelia St., is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Easters and an eighth grade student at John Gorrie Junior High School. He was born in Jacksonville in 1950. As far as records can be traced, this is the first member of the family to have a birthday fall on Easter Sunday in six generations.

BRUNSWICK, GA.,

One Dead, 3 Injured in Jax Racial Strife

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Racial violence raged unabated today in Jacksonville where a woman was already dead from gunfire and three men lay wounded.

Negro high school students stoned newsmen and photographers who followed police units to investigate a bomb threat at Stanton High School, a new school for Negroes on the west side of town.

The bomb threat proved false but the more than 1,000 evacuated students began pelting the news representatives with rocks, said George Harmon, assistant city editor of the Jacksonville Journal.

A rented car which Harmon and journal photographer Bart Parker drove to the scene was set afire as they fled.

Mike Durham of Miami, a reporter for Life magaine who had gone with Harmon and Parker, said he was roughed up by some of the youths but escaped to the school principal's office.

Police took some of the youths into custody, bringing the number for two days to around 20. All but one are Negroes.

A gun fired from a passing car brought death to Johnnie Mae Chappell, 36, mother of several children. She was shot as she walked along U.S. 1, northwest of the city limits.

Two white men and a Negro man were shot and wounded, none seriously.

The shootings and at least 10 fire bombings came while a parade of young Negroes went before City Judge John Santora and, in most cases, headed for

The shootings and at least 10 fire bombings came while a parade of young Negroes went before City Judge John Santora and, in most cases, headed for $25 fines and seven-day terms at the city prison farm.

Virtually all the 140 defendants, arrested during a day of hit-and-run demonstrations and defiance of police orders to disperse, were charged with unlawful assembly.

More than 80 juveniles also were taken into custody. Those whose parents came for them were handed over.

The place where the violence first flared is an ancient two-story wooden building in a Negro section which houses a campaign sub-headquarters of Mayor Haydon Burns. He is one of six Democrats seeking the nomination for governor in May.

A fire there Monday night was the result of rags piled at the rear of the building and ignited, firemen said. Damage was estimated at $200. Sunday night, three kerosene filled bottles were smashed against the building but flames only scorched the structure.

Negroes were aroused against the mayor by a message he delivered on television and radio Saturday night pledging to halt selective sit-in demonstrations at downtown restaurants and hotels which have not integrated.

H. F. Branch, assistant police chief, said groups of Negroes began congregating in downtown Hemming Park in mid-morning Monday, and police moved them along several times but without making any arrests.

When the number grew to about 350, Branch said officers warned them to leave or be arrested. Those who didn't leave were taken into custody, he said.

Some of those who left congregated again at a Negro housing development several blocks away, but the group was broken up with more arrests.

Then groups of Negroes started going through Negro schools, gaining in size, Branch said. The largest number of arrests came at that stage.

A police detail forced its way into the headquarters office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and took several adults and juveniles into custody.

Branch said they had been throwing bottles and other objects from the second-floor NAACP office onto cars driving along Broad Street in front of the building.

1,500 Frenzied Negro Youths Attack Jacksonville Police

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI). Fifteen hundred screaming, rock-throwing Negro youths battled police, set fire to a car and beat a newsman Tuesday in continuation of a bloody but seemingly pointless uprising.

The violence appeared to be leaderless mob actions, rather than acts in support of any specific integration demands.

A Negro woman was mysteriously shot to death, a white man was tied to a tree and tortured with razor slashes and at least three other whites injured by sniper fire when the violence first erupted Monday night.

Nearly 200 persons have been arrested in the violence. Police took 45 juveniles and six adults into custody Tuesday, and 127 persons were arrested Monday night.

Police sealed off the Negro section during the night but violence flared again Tuesday morning outside New Stanton High School when the building was emptied because of a bomb scare.

The high school violence triggered still other acts of vandalism and incidents were reported throughout the city during the day. A truck line reported its vehicles were struck by rocks thrown by young Negroes, and police said three stones at passing cars from an expressway bridge.

The flow of traffic into the city was interrupted by a detour which police set up on the expressway to route motorists around the Negro district.

Many whites phoned police headquarters to ask whether it was safe to venture into the city. They were given qaulified answers.

The worst outburst of the day came at New Stanton High following an anonymous call that a bomb had been planted in the school.

Police rushed to the scene and tried to break up the mob by arresting one of the ringleaders, but this only infuriated the youths further.

Continued on Page 6, Column 4

1,500 Frenzied Negro Youths Attack Jacksonville Police

Continued from Page 1

They succeeded in freeing the Negro youth from a patrol car and continued their assault on police with rocks and bottles, despite pistol shots fired into the air by police.

In hopes that the Negro youths would quiet down if they left, the officers turned and walked away from the crowd.

ATTACK NEWSMEN

This left about a dozen newsmen facing the angry crowd, and the youths quickly switched their attack to the reporters.

Most of the newsmen succeeded in finding refuge in the school, stores and autos, but one reporter, Michael S. Durham, a Life corresondent based in Miami, was chased down and beaten.

Three of Durham's companions, George R. Harmon, assistant city editor of the Jacksonville Journal; photographer Bart Parker of the Journal and Florida Times-Union, and Charles Moore, a Time-Life photographer from Miami, fled on foot and took refuge in another car.

The vehicle which the four had used to get to the scene was overturned and set afire. A black column of smoke from the vehicle curled 300 feet in the air.

Several Negroes caught Durham between two houses and kicked and beat him about the face. "They really worked him over," said assistant Police Chief H. V. Branch.

Durham was taken to a hospital where doctors said he had suffered lacerations of the head, a sprained wrist and bruised leg.

WARNED TO LEAVE

United Press International reporter Nicholas C. Chriss was escorted off the street by Charles Brooks, principal of New Stanton High School. "Don't stay out here," Brooks warned. "It's dangerous for your life.

An Associated Press newsman took refuge in a store and the owner barricaded the door. Negroes surrounded him a short time later when a taxi arrived to pick him up, but he managed to slip inside the vehicle and was driven to safety.

Shortly after the violence outside the high school, anothe band of about 150 young rock carrying Negroes started t ward an outlying white busi ness district but police quickl stepped in and broke up th march.

Two busloads of the marche were carted off to jail.

33

Violence soon broke out again. There were beatings of Negroes who got or sought service at public accomodations under the new law. SCLC said places resegregated, their owners appearing to have been intimidated, one appearing to have been beaten.

Dr. King returned to St. Augustine in mid-July briefly, and warned that such violence against the operation of the civil rights law, unrestrained by police, could become a pattern of resistance across the South. Onee more the Negroes went into Federal Court. Motels and restaurants were enjoined from further discrimination (only Howard Johnson's was desegregated before the new law), and individuals, including Hoss Manucy, were enjoined from violence. Then, and only then, was there general compliance, and a let-up in violence.

****

Many things in the background of ~~the~~ this most blatant of southern breakdowns of law and order were of the norm and pattern of the abnormality of past crisis.

There was the familiar split within the Negro community, of moderate and militant leaders. Some, stressing their own devotion to the equal society, criticized Dr. Hayling for his methods and for a statement attributed to him last winter that Negroes should arm themselves in their own defense. Some important Negro leaders were thus aloof from the movement; as ever, many more "common people" supported it than marched. Dr. Hayling--who came to St. Augustine five years ago from his home in middle Florida on make [illegible]

assignment in a professional training scholarship arrangement--remains that most baffling of Negro enigmas to much of the mentality of the South, simply a man who esteems himself possessed of all the attributes and rights of a man, no more but no less.

There was, also, the familiar wall of segregationist resistance in the white community. As in most such towns, this pervaded ~~the~~ high and low reaches ~~of all institutions~~. But as elsewhere, it was not monolithic. There were silent dissenters, the people of good will and of good business sense.

The difference in St. Augustine (as in Mississippi) was that those who disagreed with racism, either on conviction or, ~~ultimately~~ eventually, on economic grounds, were silenced. Those who wanted an end to the not~~e~~oriety and the shame of the crisis were, for too long a time, paralyzed.

identify?

Asking to be strictly anonymous, one local citizen ~~described~~ gave his version of the situation. Since it was in the 1890s developed as the "~~and~~ end of the line" tourist resort by Flagler, St. Augustine has been fighting progress, he said. It gladly takes all it can from tourists, but will do nothing for them beyond developing so-called attractions, occasionally moving some ~~of them from one site~~ "historical site" from one place to another. Daytona down the road developed tremendously after World War II; St. Augustine remains about the same. Some local people have tenaciously fought the quadricentennial restoration project, presumably out of fear of losing property to it. Into this naturally negativistic environment a few years ago came the far-right influence. One local man got interested in Birchism, wouldn't tie in with it, but formed a Coalition of Patriotic Societies. (At its headquarters, with a remarkably complete far-right library, the little old lady in charge had a simple solution to the problems of East-West international relations: "Drop the bomb on Russia.") Far-right speakers like Major Edgar C. Bundy and Billy James Hargis have been brought to town. People wear Confederate buttons, and cars long have had Goldwater stickers. A Sunday School teacher attacks the National Council of Churches; a high school teacher organizes a ~~Youth for Freedom~~ teen-agers' conservative group. Mayor Shelly is characterized as a "state rights conservative." ~~It was~~ In line with his logic of free enterprise and on his recommendation, ~~that~~ the city government refused in 1963 to deal in matters of business to the extent of forming the biracial committee that probably would have prevented 1964's disastrous crisis. The Klan (or Manucy's Raiders or Ancient City Hunting Club) emerged with the Negro-beating meeting last year, and ever since violence has been a part of the atmosphere of the city.

PAGE (s) MISSING

So people were afraid, he said. they faced violence, and they faced social and business ostracism, if they dissented. For some, the trap was of their own making. They had gone so far in public anti-Negro big-talk that they couldn't, once the consequence of their talk was evident in dreadful action, back down. The "power structure" was such--and this was a common description--that only two men, or even just one was big enough to buck such tides flowing in St. Augustine, and assert reason. The biggest man was a banker, deep in state and national Democratic party politics. He, for whatever his reasons (some said it was fear on his part, too, and some said conviction, and others said family ties), refused to act until the very end. When the big man wouldn't, the little men in the middle felt they couldn't.

Charles Arnade, professor of history at the University of South Florida, despairing of the quadricentennial which he had helped plan, said this of the community: "The unfortunate thing is that St. Augustine is dominated by a small, narrow-minded power structure which can't see anything. They are years behind in everything. They are totally unenlightened, some to the point of ignorance. They don't want to give an inch.

"The St. Augustine white community has not been able to produce moderate leaders. The tragedy is that white supremists suppress all moderates."

Pointing out that the city is the diocesan seat of the Roman Catholic Church for Florida, he said: "The greatest tragedy is that the church leaders have utterly failed to produce leadership in this crisis. They have taken the attitude that the problem does not exist."

The fear spoke out in many interviews. ~~Another~~ One man began the interview by saying he assumed it was realized that if his name was used, he would be ruined. He said the only people speaking were those with violent notions about "the Communist movement." "Moderates" saw no hope of accomplishing anything by speaking out, and didn't want to endure unpopularity for nothing. They were not showing cowardice, but common sense, he said.

State Senator Liston Pope and two bankers - H. E. Wolf and Frank Harrold - were the ones who apparently finally did assert reason. But at the height of the crisis, Senator Pope was saying only Mr. Wolf had power to act.

An owner of vast tracts of forest lands talked of how he had to be friends with the terrorists, because they could with one box of matches destroy everything he had spent a lifetime building.

The price of integrity was high, Father Charles M. Symour Jr., who at the insistence of vestrymen had refused Negroes at Trinity Episcopal Church in the spring, finally allowed some to enter the 11 a.m. services on June 21. Ultra-conservatives in the church were already against him for such heresies as defending the National Council of Churches against Klan and Birch charges of Communist domination. He also ~~and~~ denounced ~~ing~~ the Klan for the Negro beatings. The vestrymen demanded his resignation when he admitted Negroes to worship. His Bishop backed him, and so did many in his congregration. at last report he was staying on.

The only people who spoke out fully and insistently and continuously for America's meaning in St. Augustine were those in the Negro movement. ~~The Negroes~~

Dr. King had chosen St. Augustine as a re-testing ground of the strength and effectiveness of classical non-violent demonstrations. (With the passage of the civil rights law, the non-violent movement will never again be involved in exactly the same kind of campaggn as in St. Augustine.) The method and meaning of the movement, in very large measure, were found not wanting. Negroes were not engaged in civil disobedience, but time-honored and Constitution-protected methods of protest. They gave their bodies to terrible punishment in the name of American idealism, and showed the legnths to which some Americans will go in opposing that idealism.

Whatever elements of Negro violence lurked in the background (and there were repeated reports of Black Muslim influence), they were curbed or controlled by Negroes. The nation has come to know Negro lawlessness and violence, screaming out of intolerable conditions in northern ghetto slums. The achievement of Negro non-violence in St. Augustine (and still, generally, over the South), and the debt the nation owes it, is thus ever more evident in its grandeur.

40

At the slave market, one sunny afternoon, three rows of ~~them~~ Negroes, from the elderly to tots, stood and sang: "We love everybody"..."Nobody knows the trouble I've seen." Hosea Williams, civil rights leader from the far more progressive seaboard city of Savannah, Georgia, got up and shouted, as the white hoodlum gangs stood muttering around: "We know we are the children of God...and citizens of the United States of America, the greatest nation in the world...Negroes have shed blood here that what Thomas Jefferson said might come true.

Negroes have shed blood here so that Lincoln shall not have died in vain. Negroes have shed blood here that Jack Kennedy shall not have died in vain, and Medgar Evers and the children in Birmingham. Yes they died and we may die, but we'll die with this in our mind...If the black man loses his freedom, no man will be free, We will bleed and die that America shall be free."

The standing Negroes hummed: We Love Everybody, as he cried: "We pray, oh God, for our white bretheren."

From the same place, J.B. Stoner shouted to the mob that night: "We whites are due more rights, not less...When the constitution said all men are created equal, it wasn't talking about niggers..."

Such contrasts were common and contained most of the truth of St. Augustine. Consider this scene, among the many when Manager James Brock of the Monson Motor Lodge stood in the doorway blocking sit-in demonstrators. The exchange is between Brock and Hosea Williams.

"This is private property. We do not choose at this time to serve colored people."

"You'll feed Communist Cubans, and Russians, and Germans that I fought against in the war. Why won't you feed us?"

"How come you're not including the American Indian? He's discriminated against."

"We don't believe in discriminating against him either, or anybody."

"Will you leave?"

"Germans who fought against me and against America eat here --

Start

but not me?"

"This is my right under free enterprise."

"You have a license to serve the public. And yet you turn down members of the public."

"Since Easter, I've removed 99 from here. I'll give you the honor of being the hundredth."

"One of the greatest ways to combat Communism and make a greater nation is to go to jail...So that you can't look at us like we are some animals..."

As police led Mr. Williams and his group away, as Brock with his thin moustache, glossed hair, heavy-top glasses, and checkered sports coat grinned triumphantly, one of the Negroes cried: "I love you, no matter how you treat us."

The whites watching, including ~~the~~ some tourists from over America, stood a bit, then went on back into the Monson restaurant, continued eating there, continued staying there.

42

There are still ~~slide off into~~ other ~~levels of~~ meanings in such a situation as St. Augustine's. ~~There were many of these.~~

At the most elementary was the story told by a young man named James, who was 14 on July 7, who has five brothers and three sisters, whose mother and father are separated, whose mother does domestic work to support the family, who makes good grades in junior high school, who likes football, and who thinks he would like to be a doctor or a scientist when he grows up. He has been in the movement since last summer. He marched, with an older girl beside him, into the white mob. "I was kind of scared...But I want to be part of it, so when I get big, my children can go in a restaurant and eat like other folks."

~~At~~ Perhaps the deepest meanings ~~[illegible]~~ of all ~~were~~ in the confrontations of the white marchers with the Negro community. The obvious contrasts of the old Klan symbols of hate with "I Love Everybody" fell away to reveal something else. Here, one heard the teenage tough, with blond crew cut and tight t-shirt, connected with the Klan tell the teen-age tough, with long, curly, heavily oiled hair, connected with the Negro "gang" which had spread out ahead of the white marches to put down any potential violence from Negroes: Y'all did a damn good job policin' last night." Here, in the silence broken only by the marching feet, with a Negro outside a beer joint, "Big Daddy's Blue Goose," muttering, "They don't need no police protection down here; we won't bother them," and a white staring fearfully up the dark streets, ~~[illegible]~~ was a communication of a sorts. The white marchers prided themselves on maintaining their own non-violence. The Negroes were perhaps aware that they had ~~been succeeded~~ scored success in drawing ~~a~~ such an imitative response, however negative, from these whites. This, and even ~~on [illegible]~~

43.

the beatings, as far from the meaning of America or the intention of the civil rights law as they are, as bad as they were, are something better than the numb and cold lack of communication and contact ~~with~~ which characterizes so much of white America's dealings with ~~his~~ the Negro revolution.

If there has been a failure of the non-violent movement, ~~(which with the passage of the civil rights law will never again be involved in exactly the same kind of a campaign as in St. Augustine),~~ the failure has been ~~on the part~~ that of the ~~masses of~~ many Americans who ~~were somehow~~ have been incapable of responding to its ~~highest~~ appeals to conscience and ~~[illegible] a sense of~~ justice.

And if the elements of totalitarianism which showed, ~~its~~ dread, pale, and deathly, ~~lifelessly in face~~ for a time in St. Augustine, ever should ~~come to all of~~ overwhelm America, ~~any just estimate of blame would have to center~~ the blame would not be on the ignorant and shabby and essentially pitiable people who follow the limping step of a professional hate-monger through dark and narrow streets. We would have to examine instead the institutions and society which produced them, and produced also the more numerous others who for many years were unable to ~~react~~ act against to human need and ~~against~~ injustice, and were eventually incapable of acting for law, democracy, and ~~the order of civilization itself.~~ human Freedom itself.

For it was never clearer than in St. Augustine that the notion of a middle ground is a myth in the clash of human beliefs symbolized on the one hand by the Negro movement, and x on the other hand by the thought and methods of racism. The people who claimed to be moderates were indeed paralyzed and impotent; ~~for~~ the Negroes stood on the true middle, American position. Not just Negro x freedom or racial justice was threatened, but freedom and justice for all. Once more, ~~it was evident to white Americans that not to speak for the Negro's rights~~ it should have been evident to white ~~American~~ Americans that not to speak for the Negro's rights is to surrender their own.

###

1

31

THE QUESTIONS FROM JACKSONVILLE

The Easter Week outbreak in Jacksonville of racial violence, predominantly from Negro sources, raises this question: was it something peculiar to Jacksonville, scene of one of the few and worst instances of raw rioting during the 1960 sit-ins; or was it a portent of terrible things to come, symptomatic of a mood and emotional climate to be expected over the South this Spring and Summer, as the great turning point of federal civil rights legislation is reached?

leave some space here

* * * *

The immediate build-up to Jacksonville's rioting began ~~on~~ the ~~W~~week of March 16. Negro demonstrations, led ~~conducted by the NAACP~~ seeking desegregation of restaurants and theatres, were with a new impetus from participation of Negro ministers, stepped up. Instead of placid picketing which had, become since February a regular thing on downtown city sidewalks , there began sit-ins. At some, a hit and run tactic was used; at others, demonstrators remained to be arrested. By Thursday and Friday of that week, roving Negro teenagers were moving through the downtown and its fringes, some demonstrating, some, according to ~~the~~ most accounts, merely making their presence felt--walking slowly in front ~~[illegible]~~ of traffic, acting boisterously. Part of this seemed to be in reaction against arrests, and against Negroes being barred from a hearing on the arrests. At one point on Friday, March 20, ~~around~~ 100 or so of these ~~young people~~ youngsters gathered at Hemming Park in the center of the downtown, the center of the 1960 rioting.

Begin page

Various observers said the activity Friday afternoon led led them to expect a ~~crowd~~ confrontation with white racists at the park that night or ~~Fri~~Saturday, and possibly a riot. ~~The crowd~~ This did not materialize either time. But, ~~according~~ ~~to George Harmon, assistant city editor of the Jacksonville Journal,~~ Mayor Haydon Burns had communicated to newspapermen before 1 a.m. Saturday his plans for a television speech Saturday night on the racial situation, based on a warning that a riot was immanent.

single space

The mayor's statement Staurday night was later reproduced by him as a full page advertisement in the city's newspapers. # The Mayor asserted he had full responsibility for the city, and de= clared "I refuse to delegate or to relegate this responsibility to anyone or any bi-racial committee or any other group, it is my responsibility and I will face it." (A week before, he had been approached by representatives of the Jacksonville Commission Human Relations ~~Council~~ and urged to form a bi-racial committee with official sanction, or to do something positive in the face of growing Nego restiveness. This same recommendation had been made by others previously.)

The mayor's statement also pointed out that publicly owned facilities were desegregated, and maintained that Negres had no "civil rights" to seek service at private hotels and restaurants and other businesses. "...If such were not the law, then why is the Congress considering the Public Accomodations law at this time?"

The statement then went on to say that, under twelve city laws, "demonstrations like last week" (presumably sit-ins) and "gatherings other than by permit" (the collecting at Hemming Park) would be prohibited. The laws cited included one "against conspiracy." To supplement "508 colored and white police officers," including "45 sepcially trained members of the Emergency Corps that are capable of meeting any situation," the mayor said he was "right now going to give the oath and swear in as Special Police Officers 496 Firemen who at this moment are assembled at their respective stations under the direction of their senior officers."

3

Observers said that they stood back and waited for the lid to blow. It did not Sunday. But on Monday morning, March 23, a crowd of singing and praying Negro youths gathered at Hemming Park. They were dispersed, some arrested, some chased by police who had circled their gathering in motorcylces with sirens and motors roaring. ~~(The NAACP says it is gathering affidavits on police brutality at at this rout and later; police deny any brutality.)~~ After the rout, Jacksonville entered its two nights and two days of violence and vandalism.

Rewrite police

Negroes threw rocks, ~~and~~ bricks, and bottles at cars and store windows in the pie-wedge Negro section that points into the heart of downtown, and tossed fire bombs at white and Negro stores and businesses, perhaps half a dozen, including Mayor Burns's Negro gubernatorial campaign headquarters. Negroes were arrested in possession of fire bombs and other weapons. False alarms, as many as 17 in 25 minutes, kept up during the period~~, perhaps, though nobody on the scene speculated about it, to keep the deputized firemen busy.~~ Something like 76 police cases of vandalism were reported between Monday night and Wednesday morning.

A Negro woman was shot to death along a road from a passing car, in a Negro area. Police at the time and since said they had no clues and no way to know whether the shooting was connected with racial strife. A car containing one white and two Negro ~~sailors and one white~~ sailors was fired into, apparently by Negroes. The white sailor and one of the Negroes were slightly injured. A tourist car was fired at, its occupant cut by glass. ~~according to police~~. A man who claimed to have been tied up and cut with razor blades by Negroes, turned out to be the same man who claimed the same thing happened to him during the 1960 rioting at the hands of the ~~KKK.~~ Ku Klux Klan. Police said his story was false.

Proof Read

✓ J

4

At one point, police kicked in the door of the NAACP headquarters and arrested students there. The police said they were throwing bottles out the window. An NAACP spokesman ~~said it is impossible to throw anything out of the windows.~~ denied it. He also charged that desk drawers in the office were rifled.

Virtually all of the vandalism was confined to the Negro section. It was sporadic and involved individuals or small groups. Something more nearly approaching mob violence occurred Tuesday at New Stanton High School, a Negro school which includes students from the "best" Negro homes. The school was emptied by a bomb threat. (Previously, bomb threats had provided school yards full of youngsters from which the hit and run demonstrators sought recruits.) Students vandalized (details are not clear) a bread truck driven by a white man. Police were called, and a small contingent arrived. A Negro officer arrested one youth. While one group of students engaged the police, razzing them, others freed the arrested youth. A Negro officer fired a pistol into the air. A help call went out, and reenforcements arrived, including, according to the sheriff's office, about 15 cars of state troopers, 30 men, ~~who~~ of a group which happened to be in a training session in Jacksonville. The pistol shot, and the sight of the troopers and their weapons, angered the already dangersou crowd of 1,500 students. Rocks and bottles were thrown at police and newspapermen, and at Negro teachers and other Negro adult onlookers. The police pulled out. (They later said they thought it the best way to calm the crowd.) The crowd turned on the newsmen, overturning ~~setting~~ their car, and setting it on fire, chasing three (while adult Negro onlokers sat on their porches laughing.) They caught one, ~~of the reporters,~~ pummeled him, and, according to one of the three chased, robbed him. The ~~This~~ man was rescued by Negro teachers who took him into the ~~to~~ school for safety and treatment. Another reporter, arriving on the scene, was quickly pulled into a grocery store whose door was then guarded by Negro adults until he could get out of the area safely.

Rewrite phrase

5

Similar--though less violent--mob scenes occurred at two other Negro schools emptied by bomb threats. At Matthew W. Gilbert Junior High School, police and fire vehicle windows were broken, and at Northwest High School rocks were thrown at two grocery stores.

[illegible]

In the midst of this, on Wednesday, Mayor Burns called for an "unofficial" bi-racial committee to regain "peace and harmony and understanding." (At a press conference, he said this was not inconsistent with his previous stand. The committee was "community action"; he was still responsible for law enforcement.) Friday afternoon pickets were walking peacefully downtown, and by Easter ~~sunday~~ Morning, with sunshine bathing the confederate monument in Hemming Park, the riot tension seemed over. # The biracial committee, ~~was~~ headed by important members of the city's business elite, was understood to be ready and equipped to act; it could ~~be~~ conceivably be

Run in lead space

the instrument for Jacksonville's peaceful acceptance of a fair deal in race relations. Backsliding, however, could mean more trouble.

Continued picketing and a boycott to keep pressure on the new committee was the policy ~~[illegible]~~ the NAACP announced that Easter Sunday afternoon.

* * * *

Leave time space here

Which was it? A legacy of violence cropping up again in Jacksonville, or a new ~~look at~~ place in the South's struggle to be rid of segregation?

A comparison with the similar Negro vadalism that occurred in 1960 shows extreme differences in the degree of provocation. Then it had come from ~~[illegible]~~ whites ~~[illegible]~~ swinging axe handles at sit-in demonstrat~~[illegible]~~ors.

This time, the Ku Klux Klan was quiescent, and a speech by a visiting U.S. Nazi Party nabob drew an audience of ten, six of whom were police. The provocation seemd tocenter around impatience with the lack of desegregation progress, resentment of a gradually getting-tougher handling of demonstrators in Municipal Court, and an immediate flare-up of resentment over the mayor's speech. (Some said the speech was political; the mayor is one of ~~the~~ six candidates for governor. He claimed the stepped-up Negro activity was inspired by his political enemies. He might be right, to the extent that Negro leaders ~~might~~ may have wanted to show the state that they were not happy with what his 15 year old administration had produced for them.)

A factor common to both riot situations ~~were~~ was gangs of juvenile and older Negroes who, under such colorful names as the "High Hats," "~~[illegible]~~ Boomerangs," and "Untouchables," are in normal times "involved in other matters that keep the Negro crime rate high" (in the ~~[illegible]~~ words of chief Deputy Sheriff William F. Whitehead). He, city police sources, and the NAACP attributed most of this year's Negro violence--as in 1960--to such elements in the Negro Community taking advantage of the civil rights tension to let go some of their own broader guage hostility. As an indication of this kind of anger in operation, some fo the rocks and some of the fire bombs were thrown at Negroes and Negro businesses.

At the schools, another element entered. George Harmon, ~~the~~ Jacksonville Journal assistant city Editor, was one of those chased, and he said that the majority of the crowd was in a mood of excited, almost gleeful excitement, while there was violence in the mood of a hard core group at the center fo the crowd. It was panty-raid, spring feverishness degenerated into Mob violence, he said. Furthermore, no physical provocation to compare with the Birmingham police dog and fire hose treatments of Spring, 1963, ever occured.

To say all of this is still not to get at a real understanding of a situation such as Jacksonville's, or of the roots of violence in such a Southern Negro Community. To ~~really~~ understand is to begin with the stench and dilapidation of the Negro slums, and to try ~~with empathy~~ to comprehend the hopelessness that is compounded out of the thudding impact upon the human consciousness of being poor, and being blocked by the very conditions of this poverty and by the weights of discrimination from any possible escape, This is hopelessness deepened by the new knowledge that the old dream of escape to the North is false--that up there, it's just more of the dreary old same. "Our young," say Negroes in Jacksonville and eslewhere over the South in 1964, "don't care any more whether they die, if they've got to go on living like we have to now."

D To know this is to know the extreme: ~~The~~ already defeated, desperate young--the fatherless or sons of men who have no jobs--who have no model except within themselves, and who find their meaning in life in gangs, with their medieval and prehistoric overtones, their war councils, and their internecine battling. These gangs were there in 1960, as they have been at other southern racial crises, watching from the sidelines. They saw the non-violent demonstrators beat, and [redacted] believed that the police [redacted] failed to protect them, ~~but~~ arresting them, and not their aggressors. This rankles, and is a part of what had been festering in the black ghettos of Jacksonville.

So, too, is the memory of what happened when the gangs ran violent after seeing the treatment of the non--violent in 1960, their own violence turned outward instead of upon self and one another. They recount to each other and to new initiates still the old war stories, of how for a few hours [redacted] there they took over, controlled the expressways into town, and faced down cops, Negro and white. "And we came upon this white policeman, and man, he was so scared of us, that he gave us his gun, without our asking for it..."

Also, to ~~really~~ understand is to know that a Negro community in a city like Jacksonville is not monolithic-- that while it is united in a drive to end segregation, it is fragmented in dispute over how best this might be achieved, whether by violence, or non-violent direct action, or peaceful, dignified negotiation. Such a community, just like its white counterpart, is torn, too, by the plain old human rivalries of class and age and personality: the scorn of the leader, who lives amid his people in the slums, for the "black bourgeoise," moved like the white man to a suburb that hides them from the harshness of the life of their people. The contempt of the professional man, who has fought his way up to a fine home with a swimming pool, for the upstart young militants who won't listen to the experience and skill and wisdom that got him where he is and was used in the long painful past of racial advancement that ~~led~~ helped lead to the recent breakthroughs.

These are among the dynamic elements that are operating in such a situation as Jacksonville's, influencing actions, setting terms, in a context far more complex than the surface appearance of black against white, good against evil.

There had been some progress in the city. ~~But when the NAACP came home from the Washington March, it was with the bitter taste of the unrealized hope to be free in '63, and the leaders began to draw their plan of action~~. Now, there is a biracial committee, and more ground ~~fro~~ for hope. "Yes," says the middle-class Negro leader, "there is hope--because the white men know they've had two strikes. The third strike, and Jacksonville is out." In the background lurks the gang member, with a ring in his ear, a half articulated murmur in his brain. "Why not? There is no hope for me. Why should there be hope for anybody else? Boy this next one is going to be a BIG rumble...."

period

Rutledge Pearson, 34, Negro schoolteacher, is head of the Jacksonville and Florida NAACP branches, and the leader of the city's civil rights drive. ~~He blamed the violence on the mayor's speech and police handling of Negroes. He said it came from cirminal elements, the gangs, and described how he~~ He and other NAACP leaders worked all night Monday and Tuesday (including a television appeal) ~~to show these elements~~ urging against the violence, telling the people that the effective thing to do was follow ~~the~~ non-violent leadership. ~~of the NAACP.~~

Mr. Pearson cites efforts by various groups ~~since September~~ to persuade the mayor to give official status to a bi-racial ~~member~~ committee He and others described the long record of the previous bi-racial committee, established by the Chamber of Commerce after the 1960 riots. (Even in name, it tended not to admit being bi-racial; it was ~~called~~ the Community Advisory Committee and its Negro Counterpart.) It ~~This group~~ was hampered by lack of official recognition, and such things as a failure to keep minutes, according to Dr. W. W. Schell, who patiently and persistently worked as chairman of the "Negro counterpart." It was considered generally ineffective in the crucial, last-ditch efforts to desegregate public accommodations and jobs. Like most southern cities, Jacksonville has desegregated most publicly owned facilities, including theoretically its beach. It closed its swimming pool. Thirteen Negro first graders entered five previously all-white schools in the fall of 1963. A half dozen restaurants have desegregated; hotels accept Negro conventioners; theatres limit Negro customers to eight a night.

should name be in quotes?

Thus, the wellsprings of Jacksonville Negro civil rights discontent seemed to be general dissatisfaction with tokenism--a profound frustration growing out of a feeling that the city's civic leaders were not joining with in good faith those Negroes who were trying to find accommodation by peaceful means. The violence, which may have been diminished but could not be stopped by responsible Negro leaders, would seem to have sprung from youthful hysteria and mob spirit at the schools, and otherwise from criminal elements and others in the Negro community who sensed ~~an~~ a ripe opportunity ~~ripe~~ for expression of dangerous fury, out of a lifetime of deprivations. And violence-proneness is not one-sided in the city. White racists may have been quiescent during the crisis, but they have in beatings and bombings (a recent case resulting in arrests) made their presence felt since 1960.

"...They were after anybody white," said a Negro mother sadly of the school rioters.. Prince McIntosh, Jr., 21, public relations director of the Jacksonville NAACP (who was arrested while taking pictures of the demonstrations) said the local NAACP Youth Council does not at all condone violence, but "at the same time we feel just calling for the cease of violence will get nowhere... We need to try not so much to stop violence as to root out the evil that is the cause of the violence--segregation."

* * * *

Whether Jacksonville is a special case ultimately rests with the South, as new opportunities for good-faith dealing between white and Negro people loom ahead for each community in this year of national decision making. In 1960, in a special publication, Racial Violence and Law Enforcement, the Southern Regional Council stated:

Indent and single space

> The South is not an anarchy. It is not a region where government is weak. It is not a region where the lines of political and economic power are loosely held. The breakdowns in law and order in the South are an outcome of public policy--no less because it is sometimes oral and traditional rather than written in statutes and police manuals.

The words still apply, as each community in the South faces the decision of whether to obey the prospective federal law on public accommodations and other civil rights.

In the years following 1954, the South chose to violate the American tradition of obeying ~~a~~ the Supreme Court' reading of the Constitution.

The question for 1964 is whether the spirit of lawfulness has returned to the Southern political leadership, to that leadership which drummed up the orgy of massive resistance and which had always, as it has now even throughout the deep South, power to maintain order.

In great areas of the South today, ~~their~~ that leadership has been overthrown and replaced.

In those states and cities where it still exists, it acts still as the real agent provocatuer of turbulence and violence.

But the lesson of Jacksonville is also that wherever the white civic leadership--~~religion~~religious, business, and political--allows a racial crisis to develop and spill into the streets (whether by indifference or inattentiveness to the justified impatience of Negroes with tokenism or less, or by rebuff of Negro efforts to effect change through discussion and joint planning, or by other failures), then it invites violence in. ~~This has always been true,~~

Beyond prudent doubt, the next six months will be packed with crisis and decision for the South and for the nation. Every indication points to protest activity of an extent and an intensity without precedent, not only in the South but in the North as well. The Senate filibuster wears on. When it is finally ~~[illegible]~~ over and defeated, and a law is passed, the issue in the South will be compliance. In both Summer and early Fall, some of the most recalcitrant school districts of the deep South will be under court order to desegregate. And in the background of all this, there will be the excitement of the Presidential campaign and many state races.

people, just ~~as~~
~~it would to any other less emotional problem.~~ # With ~~this — and the~~ the lesson of Jacksonville in mind, the expectations for this spring and summer for every community of the South would seem to hinge around such questions as the following:

indent

What guarantees are there that a racial crisis might not set off the energies of mobs, whether of white or Negro students full of spring feverishness, or of white or Negro victims of impoverishment, sullen in their slums?

What policies and ~~apparatus~~ tools (such as an honorable biracial committee) give responsible Negro leaders any hope that their just demands ~~(backed by increased legal authority)~~ will be met, short of the creation of a race crisis?

And finally, what is the unspoken communication of community leadership toward violence? In Jacksonville, it seemed to be the message that violence works. The two days of rioting accomplished the creation of ~~a~~ an apparently effective biracial committee, something that ~~six months~~ weeks of urging had not accomplished. They seemed on their way to accomplishing in the field of public accommodations desegregation and the meeting of civic responsibility what three years of patient negotiation had not been able to achieve. Is this the message that will come from other communities, to shape the emotional climate and mood during the crucial, turning-point Spring and Summer coming upon the South?

1 —

The Questions from Jacksonville

~~JACKSONVILLE, FLA.--~~ The Easter week outbreak ~~here~~ in Jacksonville of racial violence, predominantly from Negro sources, raises this question: was it something peculiar to Jacksonville, scene of one of the few and worst instances of raw rioting during the 1960 sit-ins, or was it a portent of terrible things to come, symptomatic of a mood and emotional climate to be expected over the South this spring and summer as the great turning point of federal civil rights legislation is reached?

extra spacing here

* * * *

Was not real beginning

The immediate build-up to Jacksonville's rioting began on the week of March 16. Negro demonstrations, [redacted] conducted by the NAACP, seeking desegregation of restaurants and theaters, were stepped up. Instead of [redacted] placid picketing which had become since February a regular thing on downtown city sidewalks, there began sit-ins. At some, a hit-and-run tactic was used; at others, demonstrators remained to be arrested. # By Thursday and Friday of that week, roving bands of Negro ~~teenagers~~ were moving through the downtown and its fringes, some demonstrating, some, according to most accounts, [redacted] merely making their presence felt-- walking alowly in front of traffic, ~~ax~~ acting boisterously. Part of this seemed to be in reaction ~~k~~ against arrests, and against [redacted] Negroes [redacted] being barred from a hearing on the arrests. At one point, Friday, March 20, around 100 [redacted] of these young people gathered at Hemming Park, in the center of the downtown, the seene of the 1960 [redacted] rioting. ~~The NAACP disclaimed these youngsters and their behavior.~~

~~Accordingxto~~ Various [redacted] observers said the activity Friday afternoon led them to expect a crowd at the park ~~Friday~~ that night or Saturday, and possibly a riot. ~~Accordingxto~~ The crowd ~~didn't~~ did not ~~xxxx~~ materialize either time. But, according to George Harmon, assistant city editor of the Jacksonville Journal, Mayor Haydon Burns had communicated to

Councilor

By him

newspapermen ~~that he would speak on tele~~ before 1 a.m. Saturday ~~had [illegible]d to newspapermen~~ his plans ~~[illegible]~~ for a television speech Saturday night on the racial situation, based on a warning that a riot was ~~[illegible]~~ immanent.

The mayor's statement Saturday night was later reproduced as a full page advertisement ~~in~~ the city's newspapers. ~~The lengthy statement~~ The mayor asserted ~~the mayor had~~ he had ~~[illegible]~~ full repponsibility for the city, and declared, "I refuse to delegate ~~or~~ to relegate this responsibility to anyone or any bi-racial committee or any other group, (sic) it is my responisibility and I will face it." (A week before, he had been approached by representatives of the Jacksonville Human Relations ~~Council~~ and urged to form a biracial committee with ~~[illegible]~~ official sanction, or to do something in the face of growing Negro restiveness. This same recommendation had been made by others previously.) ~~[illegible]~~

note Dickinson's charge

The publicly owned statement also pointed out that ~~public~~ facilities were desegregated, and maintained that Negroes had no "civil rights" to seek service at private hotels and restaurants and other businesses. "...If ~~If~~ such were not the ~~[illegible]~~ law, then why is the Congress considering the Public Accomodations law at this time?"

positive

The statement then went on to say that under ~~12~~ twelve city laws, "demonstrations like last week" (presumably sit-ins) and "gatherings other than by permit" (the collecting at Hemming Park) would be prohibited. ~~[illegible]~~ The laws cited included one "against conspiracy," ~~[illegible]~~ To supplement ~~[illegible]~~ "508 colored and white police officers," including "45 specially trained members of the Emergency Corps that are capable of meeting any situation," the ~~[illegible]~~ mayor's ~~[illegible]~~ said he was "right now going to give the oath ~~[illegible]~~ and swear in as Special Police Officers 496 Firemen who at this moment are assembled at their respective stations under the direction of their senior officers."

"R. Dickinson"

Observers said that after that, they ~~[illegible]~~ stood back and waited for the lid to blow. It ~~didn't~~ did not Sunday. But on Monday morning, March 23, ~~[illegible]~~ a crowd of singing and praying Negro youths gathered at Hemming Park. They were dispersed, some arrested, some chased by police who had circled the gathering in motorcycles with sirens and motors roaring. (The NAACP says it is gathering affidavits on police brutality at this rout; day later police deny any brutality.) After ~~it occurred~~ the rout, Jacksonville entered its two nights and two days of violence and vandalism.

~~This consisted of~~ Negroes ~~throwing~~ threw rocks and bricks and bottles at cars and store windows in the pie-wedge Negro section that points into the heart of ~~the~~ downtown, and tossed fire bombs at white and Negro stores and businesses, perhaps half a dozen, including Mayor Burns's Negro campaign headquarters. Negroes were arrested in possession of fire bombs and other weapons. False alarms, as many as 17 in 25 minutes, kept up during the ~~two days~~ period -- perhaps, though nobody on the scene speculated about it, to keep the deputized firemen busy. Something like 76 police cases of vandalism were reported between Monday night and Wednesday morning.

A Negro woman was shot to death ~~at a roadside~~ along a road from a passing car in a Negro area. Police at the time and since said they had no clues, and no way to know whether the shooting was connected with racial strife. A car containing two Negro sailors and one white sailor was fired into, apparently by Negroes; the white ~~sailor~~ and one of the Negroes were injured slightly. A tourist car was fired at, its occupant cut by glass, according to police. A man who claimed to have been tied up and cut with razor blades by Negroes turned out to be the same man who claimed the same thing happened to him during the 1960 rioting at the hands of Ku Klux Klansmen. Police said his story was false.

Conclusive that police right

At one point, police kicked in the door of the NAACP headquarters and arrested students there. The police said they were throwing bottles out the window. An NAACP spokesman said it is impossible to throw anything out those windows. He also charged that desk drawers in the office were ~~had been~~ rifled.

Virtually all of the vandalism was confined to the Negro section, ~~according to all reports.~~ It was sporadic and involved individuals or small groups. Something more nearly approaching mob violence occurred Tuesday at New Stanton High School, a Negro school which includes st dents from the "best" Negro homes. ~~From various eyewitness accounts and newspaper reports, here is what happened:~~ The school was emptied by a bomb threat. (Previously, bomb threats had provided schoolyards full of youngsters from which the hit-and-run demonstrators sought recruits.) Students vandalized (details are not clear) a ~~white bakery~~ bread truck driven by a white man. ~~A~~ Police were called, and a small contingent arrived. A Negro officer arrested one youth. While one group of st dents engaged the police ~~him~~, razzing them ~~him~~, others freed the arrested ~~pxxxxxx~~ youth. A ~~The~~ Negro officer fired a pistol into the air. A help call went out, and ~~xx~~ reinforcements arrived, including, according to the sheriff's office, about 15 cars of state troopers, 30 men, who happened to be in a training session in Jacksonville. ~~(A Negro student who saw it all said the~~ The pistol shot, ~~and~~ the sight of troopers and their weapons ~~[illegible]~~ angered the already dangerous crowd of 1,500 students. Rocks and bottles were thrown ~~from the crowd~~ at police and ~~whik~~ newspapermen, and at Negro teachers and other Negro adult onlookers. The ~~P~~olice pulled out. (They later said they thought it the best way to calm the crowd.) The crowd turned on the newsmen, setting their car on fire, chasing three (while adult Negro onlookers sat on their ~~[illegible]~~ porches, ~~[illegible]~~ laughing). ~~and~~ They caught ~~xxxxxxx~~ one of the reporters ~~[illegible]~~ and pummeled him, and, ~~and~~ according to one of the three chased, robbed him. This man was rescued by Negro teachers who took him to the school for safety and treatment. Another reporter, arriving on the scene, was quickly ~~xxxxxxNegroesxbehindx~~ pulled into a grocery store whose door was then guarded by Negro adults until he could get out of the area safely. ~~and back into town.~~

Similar-- t ough less violent-- mob scenes occurred at ~~the~~ two other Negro schools emptied by ~~xxxx~~ bomb threats. At Matthew W. Gilbert Junior High, police and fire vehicle ~~had~~ windows were broken, and at Northwest High School, rocks were thrown at two grocery stores. ~~Afterx~~

In the midst of this, on Wednesday, Mayor Burns called for an "unofficial" biracial committee~~xx~~ to regain "peace and harmony and understanding." (At a press conference, he said this was not inconsistent with his previous stand. The committee was "community action"; he was still responsible for law enforcement.) By ~~EasterxSundayxmorningx~~ Friday afternoon, pickets were walking peacefully downtown, and by Easter ~~Sunday~~ morning, with sunshine bathing the Confederate monument in Hemming Park, the riot tension seemed over. The biracial committee, ~~was~~ headed by important members of the city's business elite ~~power structure~~, ~~is~~ was a fair deal in race relations.

understood to be ready and ~~a~~ equipped to act; it could ~~conceivably~~ be the instrument for Jacksonville's peaceful acceptance of ~~federal civil rights legislation.~~

Continued picketing, ~~[illegible]~~ a ~~[illegible]~~ boycott, ~~and [illegible] watchful waiting~~ on the new committee was the ~~[illegible]~~ policy of the NAACP announced that Easter Sunday, afternoon,

Which was it? A legacy of ~~xx~~ violence cropping up again in Jacksonville, or ~~[illegible]~~ a new look in the South's ~~[illegible]~~ struggle to be rid of segregation?

A comparison with the ~~1960 violence~~ similar Negro vandalism that occurred in 1960 shows extreme differences in the degree of provocation. Then it ~~was in the form of~~ had come from Ku Klux Klansmen swinging ax handles at sit-in demonstrators. This time, ~~with~~ the Klan ~~(whose strength, according to the a spokesman [illegible] might be as high as [illegible] members)~~ ~~was~~ was quiescent, ~~with~~ and a ~~xx~~ speech by a visiting ~~N~~ U.S. Nazi Party nabob ~~drawing~~ drew was an ~~x~~ audience of ten, six of whom were police. the provocation seemed to center around impatience with the lack of desegregation progress, resentment of ~~[illegible]~~ a gradually getting-tougher handling of demonstrators in Municipal Court, and an immediate flare-up of resentment over the mayor's speech. (Some said the ~~xx~~ speech was political; the mayor is one of ~~xx~~ six candidates for governor. He claimed the stepped-up Negro activity was inspired by his political enemies-- and he might be ~~xxx~~ right to the ~~x~~ extent that Negro leaders might have wanted to show the state that they ~~weren't~~ were not happy with what his 15-year-old administration had produced for them.)

or more

the other work ADL

A factor common to both ~~xxx~~ riot situations were ~~[illegible]~~ gangs of juvenile and older ~~[illegible]~~ Negroes who, under such colorful names as the "High Hats," "Boomerangs", and "Untouchables," are in normal times ~~are~~ "involved in other matters that keep the Negro crime rate high," (in the words of Chief Deputy Sheriff William F. Whitehead). He, ~~xxxxx~~ city police sources, and the NAACP ~~xxxx~~ attributed most of this year's violence-- as in 1960-- to such elements in the Negro community taking advantage of the civil rights tension to let go some of their own broader-guage hostility. As an indication of this kind of anger in operation, some of the rocks, and ~~some~~ of the fire bombs were thrown at Negroes and Negro businesses.

At the schools, another element entered. Mr. Harmon, the Journal assistant city editor, was one of those chased, and he ~~described the whiskered~~

INSERT

To say all of this is still no to get at a real understanding of a situation ~~like~~ such as Jacksonville's, or of the roots of violence in ~~[illegible]~~ such a Southern Negro community. To really understand is to begin with the stench and ~~[illegible]~~ delapidation of the Negro slums, and to try with empathy to comprehend the hopelessness that is compounded out of the thudding impact ~~[illegible]~~ upon the human consciousness of being poor, and being blocked by the very conditions of this poverty and by the weights of discrimination from any possible escape. This is hopelessness deepened by the new knowledge that the old dream of escape to the North is false-- that up there, it's just more of the dreary old ~~[illegible]~~ same. "Our young," say Negroes in Jacksonville and elsewhere over the South in 1964, ~~[illegible]~~ "don't care any more whether they die, if they've got to go on ~~[illegible]~~ living like we have to now."

To know this is to know the extreme: the already defeated, desperate young-- the fatherless or sons of men who have no jobs-- who have no model except within themselves, and who find their meaning in life in gangs, with ~~their medieval~~ medieval and ~~[illegible]~~ prehistoric overtones, their war councils, and their internecine battlings. These gangs were there in 1960, as they have been at other Southern racial crises, watching from the sidelines. They saw the non-violent demonstrators beat, and saw that the police not only failed to protect them, ~~they~~ but arrested them, and not their aggressors. This rankles, and is part of what had been festering in the black ghettos of Jacksonville.

~~Negro demonstrations prior to this moment — alcoholism, sexual promiscuity, joblessness etc. — all inward. Expression now is outer-directed~~

So, too, is the memory of what happened when the gangs ran violent after seeing the treatment of the non-violent in 1960, their own violence turned outward instead of upon self and one another. They recount to each other and to new initiates still the told war stories, of how for a few hours there they took over, controlled the ~~[illegible]~~ expressways into ~~[illegible]~~ town, and faced down the cops, ~~whites and Negroes~~ Negro and white. "And we came upon this white policeman, and ~~[illegible]~~ man, he was so scared of us, that he gave us his gun, to us, without our asking for it..."

INSERT p. 2

~~Just like "white community..." 9 candidates for Gov., for [illegible]..."~~

Also, to really understand is to know that a Negro community in a city like Jacksonville is not monolithic-- that while it is united in a drive to end segregation, it is fragmented in dispute over how best this might be achieved, whether by violence or non-violent direct action or peaceful, dignified negotiation. Such a community, just like its white counterparts, is torn, too, by the plain old human rivalries of class and age and personality: The scorn of the leader who lives amid his people in the slums for the "black bourgeoise" moved like the white man to a suburb that ~~[illegible]~~ hides them from the harshness of the life of their people... The contempt of the professional man, who has fought his way up to a fine home with a swimming pool, for the upstart young militants who won't listen to the experience and skill and wisdom that ~~[illegible] has~~ got him where he is, and ~~has been~~ was used in the long, painful past of racial advancement that led to the recent breakthroughs.

These are among the dynamic elements that are operating in such a situation as Jacksonville's, influencing actions, setting terms, in a context far more complex than the surface appearance of black against white, good against evil.

There had been some progress in the city. But when the NAACP came home from the Washington March, it was with the bitter taste of the unrealized hope to be free in '63, and the leaders began to draw their plan of action. Now, there is a biracial committee, and more ground for hope. "Yes," says the middle-class Negro leader, "there is hope-- because the white men know they've had two strikes. The third strike, and Jacksonville is out." In the background lurks the gang member, with a ring in his ear, ~~his~~ a half-articulated murmer in his brain: ~~[illegible]~~ Why not? There is no hope for me. Why should there be hope for anybody else? Boy this next one is going to be a BIG rumble. ...

~~abxbaxbixbxbngxfrbmbxbabxbxbxbxfbxbxbxb25xbxb30xpbxbxbxbixbxbxbxbxbb~~ said that ~~nokvaxixkhavu~~ the majority of the crowd was ~~more~~ in~~x~~ a mood of excited, almost gleeful exci~~b~~tement, while there was ~~than in the one of~~ grim violence ~~which~~ in the mood of ~~came from~~ a hard-core group at the center of the crowd. It was panty-raid, spring ~~xxxx~~ feverishness degenerated into mob violence, he said.

#Furthermore ~~Again,~~ no provocation ~~, [illegible], in~~ to compari~~son~~e with h ~~such standards as~~ the Birmingham police dog and fire hose treatment~~x~~ of Spring 1963 ever occurred. ~~possibly less out-of-hand crowds, seems relatively [illegible]~~ ~~comparatively less severe.~~

Insert

Rutledge Pearson, 34, Nergo schoolteacher, who ~~says he~~ ~~was blocked by segregation~~ ~~[illegible]y from being a professional baseball~~ career ~~player in Jacksonville,~~ is head of the Jacksonville and Florida NAACP ~~s~~ branches, and the leader of the city's civil rights drive. He blamed the violence on the mayor's speech and police handling of Negroes. He said it came ~~was~~ from criminal elements, the gangs, and described how he and other NAACP leaders worked all night Monday and Tuesday ~~nights~~ (including a television ~~tv~~ appeal) ~~for~~ to show these elements that the effective thing to do was follow the non-violent leadership of the NAACP.

~~Prince McIntosh Jr., 21, public relations for the Jacksonville NAACP, arrested taking pictures of demonstrations, said the local NAACP Youth Council does not at all condone violence , but "at the same time we feel just calling for the cease of violence will get nowhere... We need to try not so much to stop violence as to root out the evil that is the casue of the violence--segregation."~~

Mr. Pearson ~~said [illegible]~~ cited ~~in a newspaper interview in which [illegible]~~ efforts by various groups since Sptember to ~~get~~ persuade the mayor to ~~form~~ give official status to a biracial committee. He and others described the long record of ~~the~~ previous biracial committee, established by the Chamber of Commerce after the 1960 riots. ~~(which~~ (Even in name, it t~~e~~nded not to admit being biracial; it was called the Community Advisory Committee and its Negro Counterpart.) This group was ~~,~~ hampered by lack of official regognition and such things as a failure to keep minutes, ~~2~~ according to Dr. W. W. Schell ~~--~~ who pat~~ie~~ently and persistently worked as chairman of the "Negro counterpart"

It was considered generally ineffective in the crucial, last-ditch efforts to desegregate public accommodations and jobs. Like most southern cities, Jacksonville has desegregated most publicly owned facilities, including theoretically its beach. (It closed its ~~swimming~~ Negro pool.) Thirteen first graders entered five previously all-white schools in the fall of 1963. A half dozen restaurants have desegregated; hotels accept Negro conventioners; theaters limit Negro customers to eight a night.

~~It is one of the principle causes of dissatisfactio~~

~~Thus, to answer the question of whether Jacksonville is ~~xxx~~ peculair unto itself in a penchant for violence or whether it~~

~~Thus, it would seem that Jacksonville's Negro discontent sprang not so much from the degree of discrimination or from a more than normally harsh administration of Southern justice. What seemed to bother Negroes was a more profound feeling of frustration and hopelessness about further desegregation and a lack of good faith on the part of the city with whom they were trying by peaceful means to negotiate.~~

~~Without going into the~~ ~~Whether or not the penchant to violence is a peculiar idosyncrisy in Jacksonville is a question that really can't be answered. But whether it is, or whether it is typical of the new mood of Negro communities in the South, these further points would seem important:~~

~~1. A new demand for dealing in good faith will be upon every community in the South when and if federal civil rights legislation is passed.~~

~~That Negroes will [illegible] have federal law behind them [illegible] just one more [illegible]~~

~~2. Righteous indignation [illegible] dealing with them by Southern communities & one more [illegible]~~

~~Factor to~~

~~2. Every Southern Negro community has its own brand of the lawless, the angry, the holders of grudges against society. These are the products of discrimination and of poverty, ~~the~~ a new ~~[illegible]~~ vintage from the old grapes of wrath.~~

~~3. Mob violence is part of the unfortunate side of the human repertoire. It can move through a crowd of Negro high school students in Jacksonville; it moved through a similar crowd in a high school that same week in Saint~~

Thus, the wellsprings of Jackson ville Negro discontent seemed to be ~~that of~~ ~~the~~ general dissatisfaction with tokenism-- a profound frustration ~~hopelessness~~/~~about~~ ~~further desegregation~~ growing out of a feeling that the city's civic leaders were ~~power structure was~~ not journeying with ~~meeting~~ in good faith those Negroes who were trying to find accommodation by peaceful means. The violence, which may have been diminished but couldn't ~~couldn't~~ be stopped by responsible Negro leaders, would seem to have sprung from youthful hysteria and mob spirit at the schools, and otherwise from criminal elements and others in the Negro community who sensed an opportunity ripe for expression of dangerous fury out of a lifetime of deprivations. And ~~violence-proneness~~ is not one-sided in the city. White racists may have been quiescent during the crisis, but they have in beatings and bombings (a recent case resulting in arrests) made their presence felt since 1960.

"...They were after anybody white," said a Negro mother sadly of the high school rioters. Prince McIntosh Jr., 21, public relations director of the Jacksonville NAACP (who was arrested while taking pictures of the demonstrations), said the local NAACP Youth Council does not at all condone violence, but "at the same time we feel just calling for the cease of violence will get nowhere... We need to try not so much to stop violence as to root out the evil that is the cause of the violence-- segregation."

extra space here

* * * *

~~In the final analysis, the answer to the question of~~ Whether Jacksonville is a special ~~1964~~ case ultimately rests with the rest of the South, as ~~a~~ new opportunities for ~~dealing in~~ good faith dealings between white + Negro people loom ahead for ~~every~~ each community in this year of national decision making ~~the probability of the passage of federal civil rights legislation.~~

In 1960, in a special publication, Racial Violence and Law Enforcement, the Southern Regional Council stated:

indent + single space

"The South is not an anarchy. It is not a region where government is weak. It is not a region where the lines of political and economic power are loosely held. The breakdowns in law and order in the South are an outcome

PAGE (s) MISSING

All Papers
Thursday
April 16, 1964

"The lesson of Jacksonville is --- that whenever the white civic leadership – religious, business, & political – is indifferent ~~to~~ or inattentive to the justified impatience of Negroes with tokenism or less, wherever ~~Negro~~ Negro efforts to effect change through discussion & joint planning are rebuffed, violence is invited in."

This is a conclusion of short report on the Jacksonville (Fla.) riots of Easter week, released today by the Southern Regional Council.

~~The report takes also the question~~

Beyond prudent doubt, the next six months will be packed with crisis and decision for the South and for the nation. Every indication points to protest activity of an extent and an intensity without precedent, not only in the South but in the North as well. The Senate filibuster wears on. When it is finally over and defeated, and a law is passed, the issue in the South will be compliance. In both Summer and early Fall, some of the most recalcitrant school districts of the deep South will be under court order to desegregate. And in the background of all this, there will be the excitement of the Presidential campaign and many state races.

ditto

of public policy-- no less because it is sometimes oral and traditional rather than written in statutes and police manuals.

The words still apply, as each community in the South faces the decision of whether to obey the prospective federal law on public accommodations and other ~~civil rights. as any others. With Jacksonville in mind, the expectations~~ civil rights.

In the years following 1954, the South chose to violate the American tradition of obeying a Supreme Court reading of the Constitution.

The question for 1964 is whether the spirit of lawfulness has returned to the Southern political leadership, to that leadership which drummed up the orgy of massive resistance and which had always, as it has now throughout the deep South, power to maintain order.

In great areas of the South today, their leadership has been overthrown and replaced.

In those states and cities where it still exists, it acts still as the real agent provocateur of turbulence and violence.

But the lesson of Jacksonville is also that wherever the white civic leadership-- religious, business and political-- allows a racial crisis to develop and spill into the streets (whether by indifference or inattentiveness to the justified impatience of Negroes with tokenism or less, or by rebuff of Negro efforts to effect change through discussion and joint planning, or by other failures), then it invites violence in. This has always been true; Jacksonville indicates an increase in the danger of violence.

When a southern community finally sits down to deal honorably with the problems that are the legacy of segregation and discrimination, it is not "giving in to Negro demands." It is merely addressing itself out of duty and self-interest (if not moral persuasion) to a community problem affecting all the people, just as it would to any other less emotional problem. ~~affecting all of the people~~ With this-- and the lesson of ~~Jacksonville in mind~~ Jacksonville-- in mind, the expectations for this spring and summer for every community would seem to hinge around such questions as the following:

~~Spring and Summer~~ ~~for every community~~ would ~~seem to hinge around the following, such questions: for~~ ~~such guarantees~~

What guarantees are there ~~ever~~ ~~[illegible]~~ that a racial crisis might not set off the energies of ~~[illegible]~~ mobs, whether ~~[illegible]~~ of white or Negro students full of spring feverishness, or ~~the~~ of white ~~and~~ or Negro victims of impoverishment, sullen in their slums? ~~[illegible]~~ What policies and apparatus (such as ~~a~~ an honorable biracial committee) give ~~[illegible]~~ responsible Negro leaders any hope that their just demands (backed by increased legal authority) will be met, short of the creation of a race crisis?

And, finally, what is the unspoken communication of community ~~power structures~~ leadership toward violence? In Jacksonville, it seemed to be the message that violence works. The two days of rioting ~~there~~ accomplished the creation of a ~~[illegible]~~ biracial committee, something that six months of urging ~~couldn't~~ had not accomplished. They seemed ~~[illegible]~~ on their way to accomplishing in the field of public accommodations desegregation and the meeting of civic responsibility what three years of patient negotiation ~~hadn't~~ had not been able to achieve. Is this the message ~~[illegible]~~ that will come from other communities ~~[illegible]~~ to shape the emotional climate and mood during the crucial, turning point Spring and Summer coming upon the South?

##

(width) double space:
begin the first sentence
third [illegible]
(new line)

#In the year following 1954 the South chose to violate the American tradition of obeying a Supreme Court ~~declaration~~ reading of the Constitution.

#The question for 1964 is whether the spirit of lawfulness has returned ~~as~~ to the southern political leadership, to that leadership which drummed up the orgy of massive resistance & which had always, as it has now throughout ~~the~~ even the deep South, power to ~~enact~~ maintain order.

#In great areas of the South today, this leadership has been overthrown & replaced.

? #In those states & cities where it still persists, it acts still as the real agent provocateur of turbulence & violence.

n.a.t. #But the lesson of Jacksonville is also that wherever the white civic leadership - religious, business & political - is indifferent or inattentive to the justified impatience of Negroes with ?

Pat-

Exercising a woman's privilege I ~~=~~ yield on ~~th~~ press release. Second thoughts suggest ~~that~~ we let this stand alone. The good guys, hopefully, will do something with it

So let's send it out, with just a slip stapled on giving a release date: Thursday, April 16, All Papers - if OK with you. Vernon will get it out

Please make sure ~~that~~ Jacksonville papers, radio, & TV get it, & all good papers or big ones in Fla.

For Release: All Papers
Thursday, April 16, 1964

"Beyond prudent doubt, the next six months will be packed with crisis and decision for the South and for the nation. Every indication points to protest activity of an extent and intensity without precedent, not only in the South but in the North as well. The Senate filibuster wears on. When it is finally over and defeated, and a law is passed, the issue in the South will be compliance. In both Summer and early Fall, some of the most recalcitrant school districts of the deep South will be under court order to desegregate. And in the background of all this, there will be the excitement of the Presidential campaign and many state races...

"...The lesson of Jacksonville is... that wherever the white civic leadership-- religious, business, and political-- allows a racial crisis to develop and spill into the streets (whether by indifference or inattentiveness to the justified impatience of Negroes with tokenism or less, or by rebuff of Negro efforts to effect change through discussion and joint planning, or by other failures), then it invites violence in."

These were conclusions of a short report on the Jacksonville (Fla.) riots of Easter week, released today by the Southern Regional Council.

~~The report suggested that Negro vandalism and violence that shook the city for two days and nights had its roots specifically, and in resentment of lack of desegregation progress, lack of an effective, combined with officially sanction for the city's biracial committee, generally flareup of resentment over a~~

The report suggested that Negro discontent in the city had its roots in resentment of lack of progress on desegregation of public accommodations [redacted] and lack of official sanction [redacted] which cut effectiveness of the city's biracial committee, combined with a flareup of resentment over a [redacted] television [redacted] statement by Mayor Haydon Burns invoking [redacted] tight police powers against sit-ins and public assembly of Negroes. It also suggested that [redacted] Negro violence and vandalism which rocked the city for two [redacted] days had its roots in a precedent for this sort of thing which occurred under more severe phsycial provocation in 1960, in the [redacted] hostility festering in Negro slum areas, with criminal elements taking advantage of a race crisis to express broader-guage anger, and in youthful mob spirit not unlike that of a panty-raid.

The report~~yx~~ pointed out that now [redacted] as in 1960, "the breakdowns in law and order in the South are an outcome of public policy..."

[redacted] It went on: "In the years following 1954, the South chose to violate the American tradition of obeying a Supreme Court reading of the Constitution.

"The question for 1964 is whether the spirit of lawfulness has returned to the Southern political leadership, to that leadership which drummed up the orgy of massive resistance and which had always, as it has now through the deep South, power to maintain order..."

Then the report raised these questions for any community to ask itself: ~~possible keys~~ ~~the key to whether Jacksonville will set the pace and tone for the South during the Spring and Summer:~~

"What guarantees are there that a racial crisis might not set off the energies of mobs, whether of white or Negro students full of spring feverishness, or [redacted] of white or Negro victims of impoverishment, sullen in their slums? What policies and tools (such as an honorable biracial committee) give responsible Negro leaders any hope that their just demands [redacted] will be met, short of the creation of a race crisis?

"And, finally, what is the unpsoken communication of community leadership toward violence? [redacted] In Jacksonville, it seemed to be the message that violence works. The two days of rioting accomplished the creation of an apparently effective biracial committee, something that weeks of urging had not accomplished. They seemed on their way to accomplishing in the field of public accommodations desegregation and the meeting of civic responsiblity what three years of patient negotiation had not been able to achieve. Is this the message that will come from other communities to shape the emotional climate and mood during the crucial, turning-point Spring and Summer coming upon the South?"

3

###

✓BP - see 10
✓MA - see 10
ML - see Abram letter 10, back cover?
SB✓

Section 4 | NEWS BACKGROUND
EDUCATION—SCIENCE

The New York Times.

EDITORIALS
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR | Section 4

6, 10, 11

E © 1964, by The New York Times Company. SUNDAY. APRIL [illegible] 1964. + E

THE NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REVIEW

Johnson's Way

And Nation's Mood

On the grim day five months ago when Lyndon Johnson inherited the biggest job on earth, there was deep uncertainty about what kind of President he would be. True, he had been an effective Senate majority leader, but was he cut to the size of the Presidency? The view in many quarters was that he was essentially a courthouse politician whose real talent was for wheeling and dealing, a provincial with no real grasp of world affairs, a "cornpone."

Today there appears to be a clear consensus that Lyndon Johnson is definitely on top of his job. His confidence, vigor and impact seem to be growing daily. While there are some who still object to his style and methods, there is no question that he has been getting results. There is widespread agreement that the mood of the country has changed, that the sense of crisis, transition and uncertainty has passed.

The President's activities last week underscored the energy with which he has been tackling his job and the record he has been building. He dominated the headlines in a week of speech-making and news conferences (he has had five in the past two weeks), of a trip to dedicate the New York World's Fair and to a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Chicago, of private consultations and public exhortations, with interludes of folksy humor and personal contacts with the electorate.

Two major developments stood out: The President scored a great coup—"a miracle," some called it—in helping to settle the five-year-old railroad dispute that had defied all previous efforts at solution; a strike that could have crippled the economy had been averted. And Mr. Johnson drew big, enthusiastic crowds in a dramatic tour of the Appalachia area in furtherance of his "war against poverty."

the Southerners in the hope of softening, if only by a jot, their last-ditch opposition; and toward Republicans whose votes are required to fill out the 67 needed for ending a filibuster.

Last week, Senator Mike Mansfield, the Democratic leader, and Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, the Republican leader, moved part way toward a Southern demand for jury trials in criminal contempt cases arising out of injunction suits under the bill. They offered an amendment providing that a person accused of willfully disobeying a court order could be tried with or without a jury, at the discretion of the judge. If the accused were convicted without a jury he could not be fined more than $300 or imprisoned for more than 30 days. Southerners want the jury trials on the theory that a Southern jury would be less likely than a judge to convict violators of civil rights laws.

Dirksen Amendments

Mr. Dirksen is also the sponsor of a series of amendments mainly designed to soften the fair-employment provisions of the bill, through such devices as providing for initial periods of voluntary compliance and permitting local and state, rather than Federal, enforcement of certain provisions. Last week Senator Dirksen introduced the most controversial of his amendments — a provision that complainants in fair-employment cases would file suit themselves. The House-passed version authorizes a Federal commission to file suit. Its supporters feel many Southern Negroes might not take cases to court for fear of physical harm or economic reprisal.

There is recognition that even if the civil rights bill passes more or less intact, all civil rights pressures and demonstrations will not end. The bill, for example, would scarcely affect the de facto segregation that was the main target of last week's New York demonstrations.

But the bill is expected to de-

United Press International

TO THE PEOPLE: President Johnson using the White House Rose Garden as a forum last Tuesday as he addressed visiting editors and broadcasters.

inner in Chicago, of private consultations and public exhortations, with interludes of folksy humor and personal contacts with the electorate.

Two major developments stood out: The President scored a great coup—"a miracle," some called it—in helping to settle the five-year-old railroad dispute that had defied all previous efforts at solution; a strike that could have crippled the economy had been averted. And Mr. Johnson drew big, enthusiastic crowds in a dramatic tour of the Appalachia area in furtherance of his "war against poverty." Yesterday he said he would send to Congress tomorrow new proposals on the antipoverty program.

Personal Stamp

All of this had the strong personal stamp Mr. Johnson has put on his Administration, the new manner and image he has brought to the White House. It is in sharp contrast to the Kennedy style, but it seems to have won the approval of a large section of the electorate.

In retrospect it seems clear that the pace and spirit of the Johnson Administration were set at that moment in Dallas when, immediately after taking the oath of office, he said, "Let's get this plane back to Washington." In the five months since, President Johnson can point to a number of accomplishments, abroad and at home.

In foreign affairs, Mr. Johnson had barely picked up the reins of government before he was confronted with a multiplying series of crises. There was concern and misgiving because this was felt to be the area of Presidential responsibility with which Mr. Johnson was least familiar. Moreover, it was thought that Moscow might try pressure and provocation to test the will and mettle of the new President.

Mr. Johnson's own edginess and concern on that score may have accounted for what many thought was his initial over-reaction to the Guantanamo "water crisis." But he soon demonstrated greater assurance in dealing with that and other emergency situations — in Panama, Cyprus, in the air over East Berlin and in the seemingly unending struggle for Southeast Asia.

As for Russians, if they ever entertained any idea of trying to provoke Mr. Johnson they apparent quickly abandoned it as he made clear that he did not intend to be pushed around or preside over the dissolution of the Western alliance. In a nuclear cutback agreement with Moscow last week, he advanced another step—however limited—along the path of eased tensions on which President Kennedy embarked.

Continuing Pressure

In domestic affairs, Mr. Johnson has maintained steady, and thus far largely effective, pressure for Administration programs. He put down an incipient Congressional revolt to obtain passage of the foreign aid bill. The tax cut bill was passed largely intact and with dispatch, and it appears to be having the promised effect of stimulating further an economy that already was booming. Wheat and cotton legislation the President deemed essential to forestall a farm depression have been passed. The civil rights bill has moved from the House on to the Senate floor; whatever its ultimate fate, the consensus is that the bill's chances are at least as good, if not better, under the Johnson stewardship than they would have been under Mr. Kennedy's.

In putting his prestige on the line by personal intervention in the rail dispute, the President took a large risk that has paid off handsomely in credit for promoting the agreement.

The economic boom has given the President a powerful talking point and helped win the confidence of the business community. There may be some argument about how much he is personally responsible for the buoyancy in the economy. But he has constantly identified himself with it by repeated citations of facts and figures that spell prosperity.

In pursuit of his programs and policies, Mr. Johnson has developed highly individual approaches toward the two elements on which a President's effectiveness depend—Congress and the people.

'Let Us Reason'

Toward Congress, he has drawn on his years of experience and intimacy on Capitol Hill, his talent for persuasion and compromise ("Come, let us reason together" is his favorite saying), and his politician's instinct for the use of the carrot and stick.

It is doubtful if the members of Congress have ever been bombarded by so many Presidential phone calls, so many invitations to White House breakfasts, luncheons, dinners and kaffee-klatsches.

An Administration official said recently that in dealing with Congress, Mr. Johnson "likes to stay ahead and anticipate what will happen and how to meet it." The "meeting it" might include anything from a flattering invitation to a Congressman to share the spotlight at a White House ceremony to some carefully applied pressure on a minor matter dear to the hearts of a Congressman's constituents.

Toward the people, Mr. Johnson has displayed a formidable gift for keeping attention focused on the Presidency. If he is economizing on other lights in the White House, he certainly is not economizing on the spotlight. He has already held 16 news conferences and has made 20 appearances on TV. Moreover, whether greeting sightseers at the White House gates, reading a letter over TV from a little girl troubled about a possible rail strike, or touring poverty-stricken areas, the President has managed to project a politically potent image of homespun friendliness and compassion.

The change in the nation's mood about the President has been paralleled by changes in his own performance and sense of confidence. The New York Times White House correspondent writes, "Mr. Johnson was visibly leary of the press when he first took office. Slowly he has overcome his fear of live TV, and the week before last finally mastered the big, formal conference in the State Department auditorium. You could see him loosening up and enjoying himself."

The New York Times diplomatic correspondent writes: "Mr. Johnson is no longer afraid that the Russians might 'test' his mettle in this or that difficult situation. He speaks more frankly of the slow pace of events and the frustrations of foreign affairs. 'Nothing to throw your hat in the air about' in Latin America, no instant peace conference in the cold war, etc.'"

A number of columnists and commentators have remarked favorably on Mr. Johnson's performance and impact. Walter Lippmann has said President Johnson is "by nature a healing man" with a great talent for "finding the point at which a consensus—an agreement—is possible."

Arthur Krock of The New York Times has written that Mr. Johnson is exercising the powers of the Presidency "in a protean political performance of many diverse roles," and James Reston of The Times has called "the tireless negotiating skill" of the President "one of the vital natural resources of this country." Columnist Doris Fleeson writes that "the President has arrived and he has the Presidency working for him." Another columnist spoke of the President's talent for "digging down deeply into the basic urges of ordinary people."

Big problems remain. The civil rights issue has aroused strong feelings throughout the country and is certain to provide hard tests of the President's leadership in the days ahead. Mr. Johnson will be called upon to show results in the "war on poverty" as opposed to promises and exhortations. Unemployment remains high despite the boom.

In the foreign field, the problem of how to deal effectively with Castro and the war in Vietnam press for solution. President de Gaulle continues to be a potential source of conflict within the Western alliance. A switch in Soviet tactics could swiftly alter the whole international picture.

Nevertheless, the evidence is that President Johnson has strong support throughout the country. His five-state tour last week had something of the aspect of a triumphal procession. He was mobbed in South Bend, hailed by large crowds in Pittsburgh; he mingled with warm and enthusiastic well-wishers in West Virginia and Kentucky. Secret servicemen, in fact, were deeply troubled by the extent of the President's "exposure." At his news conference yesterday, Mr. Johnson said he was not "unduly concerned about meeting American citizens on the streets." But former President Truman, who was Mr. Johnson's guest at the conference, described himself as "very much concerned."

The President's week reemphasized a fact most Republicans ruefully acknowledge: barring a major setback in the domestic or foreign field, Mr. Johnson is going to be a hard man to beat in November. All the polls show him ahead of any prospective Republican nominee. He has managed so far to prevent the Republicans from developing any really big issue. Unless they are able to develop one or more such issues between now and Election Day, their chances of regaining the White House do not seem good.

Rights Issue

In Streets & Congress

In the civil rights struggle last week the danger that extremism might lead to racial strife and violence appeared to recede, even if only temporarily. The more moderate established leadership of the Negro movement seemed to reassert itself. Still it seemed plain that so long as Negro aspirations remained unmet the possibility of serious trouble would continue.

In Washington, the debate over the principal effort to meet those aspirations—the House-passed civil rights bill—proceeded in the Senate. Leaders of both parties offered amendments designed to soften some of the opposition's objections. There was hope that a bill, modified but still acceptable to the civil rights forces, would finally emerge.

The immediate cause of concern had arisen primarily over a threat to create chaos at the opening of the New York World's Fair last Wednesday. Dissident elements of the New York City chapters of the Congress of Racial Equality had planned a "stall-in" of cars that would run out of fuel on highways to the fair if the city did not take immediate action against racial discrimination on several fronts.

The plans were denounced by James Farmer, head of CORE. Most other prominent Negro leaders also voiced opposition, as did President Johnson, who was to speak at the opening ceremonies, and a number of Congressmen and others regarded as sympathetic to the Negroes' cause.

But the stall-in never materialized. At the fair itself, however, there were a number of demonstrations. Placard-carrying youths shouting "Freedom Now!" occasionally drowned out the President's speech. Whites far outnumbered Negroes among the demonstrators.

About 300 persons, inside and outside the fairgrounds, were taken into custody and four demonstrators and three policemen were injured in a scuffle when efforts were made to block a subway. Among those arrested at the fair were Mr. Farmer and Bayard Rustin, organizer of last summer's March on Washington. Both had sat down with other demonstrators on the steps of the New York State Pavilion and disobeyed police orders to move.

Mr. Farmer was released next day, and on Friday conferred with Mayor Wagner for an hour and 15 minutes. They discussed Negro demands for better housing and jobs, racially balanced schools and for investigations of alleged police brutality. Mr. Farmer said the talks were "more productive than any previous meeting because we got down to brass tacks."

As for the aborted stall-in, the leaders claimed "victory" on the grounds that only 92,000 persons showed up at the fair against a predicted opening day attendance of at least 250,000. But how many stayed away because of the stall-in threat and how many because of the miserable weather was impossible to say. It seemed evident that the stall-in leaders never had anything like the support and strength they claimed.

Moderates Criticized

New tests are expected between moderates and militants for influence in the civil rights movement. Leaders such as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Roy Wilkins of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Mr. Farmer have been coming under increasing criticism for not producing "results." The pressure appears strongest in the North, where discrimination is subtler than in the South, but for that reason often harder to overcome. Nevertheless, if the events in New York last week were any index, extremists are still in the minority among Negroes and the tactic of generalized protest against the entire white community does not yet have broad support.

Moreover, the mere threat of a stall-in may have left a lasting mark on the civil rights struggle. It appears to have reinforced the so-called "white backlash" against integrationist pressures that many political leaders have sensed in the electorate. To a degree at least that reaction is thought likely to persist even though the threat was not carried out.

Elsewhere in the North and West, demonstrations continued last week. At Chester, Pa., schools were closed Wednesday when violence developed during demonstrations against de facto segregation. Sporadic skirmishing between demonstrators and police continued all week, with scores arrested. The schools are scheduled to reopen tomorrow, and the Board of Education has applied for an injunction against further demonstrations.

In Oklahoma, nearly 100 whites and Negroes were arrested in racial battles at Guthrie, the state's first capital, during a state celebration of a land run 75 years ago. The small police force was overwhelmed, and Oklahoma City police had to race to the town's aid.

In the Senate last week—the seventh week of debate on the civil rights bill—the emphasis was on the kind and extent of compromises the civil rights forces would have to make to get the bill through. Their object was to prevent weakening of the bill to the point where it might be worse than no bill at all.

The compromises were being made in two directions—toward cases would file suit themselves. The House-passed version authorizes a Federal commission to file suit. Its supporters feel many Southern Negroes might not take cases to court for fear of physical harm or economic reprisal.

There is recognition that even if the civil rights bill passes more or less intact, all civil rights pressures and demonstrations will not end. The bill, for example, would scarcely affect the de facto segregation that was the main target of last week's New York demonstrations.

But the bill is expected to deflect some of the civil rights agitation; and certainly if it does not pass, or if debate drags on through the summer, the agitation and the influence of the extremists are likely to increase.

Yet one of the cruel dilemmas of the civil rights struggle appears to be that increased pressure in the streets, with its accompanying white backlash reaction, may further jeopardize the bill's chances.

CORE
JOBS NOW
CORE
BOSTON CORE

United Press International

TO THE FAIR: Civil rights demonstrators at the opening of the World's Fair last Wednesday.

THE WORLD

Asian Questions

Ten years ago, Indochina was, to most Americans, a remote, little known land where the French were coming to the end of a cruel, losing war. Today, it is the arena of an increasingly complex struggle that has already taken a toll of American lives and treasure and is posing a test of American leadership of the forces of anti-Communism in the Far East.

Last week, the complexity of the struggle was reflected in events in two of the states involved, Laos and South Vietnam.

In Laos, a neutralist regime—a frail buffer in the East-West conflict—was swept aside by a rightist military revolt.

In South Vietnam, the pro-Communist guerrillas were intensifying their attacks, placing the U.S. under pressure to devise new responses.

The immediate crisis was in Laos. It grew out of the collapse, only the week before, of talks between the country's three leading figures—Prince Souvanna Phouma, the Premier and head of a small neutralist faction; Prince Souphanouvong, Deputy Premier and head of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao movement; and Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, Deputy Premier and commander of the pro-Western rightist camp.

Talks on Coalition

The three met in a tent on the Plaine des Jarres, the country's great central plain, for talks on restoring a coalition regime that had been set up by a 14-nation East-West Geneva conference in 1962 but which to all intents and purposes had fallen apart a year ago. "Red Prince" Souphanouvong, flying in from his military base near the North Vietnamese border, laid down a condition: immediate neutralization of Luang Prabang, the seat of the country's figurehead King. General Nosavan, whose Royal Army controls that city along with Vientiane, the administrative capital, refused. Souvanna Phouma said his efforts to hold the coalition together were at an end; he would resign.

He flew back to Vientiane—into the thick of a plot. A junta headed by Gen. Siho Lamphouthacoul, the rightist security chief, and Brig. Gen. Kouprasith Abhay, commander of the Vientiane region, placed him under house arrest last weekend. The rebels declared the coalition defunct, for having "failed to bring about unity." At that point, however, the coup stalled.

General Nosavan refused to join it. By Monday the junta leaders

CIVIL RIGHTS: POLITICS

Despite the Strong Cross Currents It Has Stirred The Rights Bill Is Expected to Pass

By E. W. KENWORTHY

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 25—The civil rights movement produced the civil rights bill. Both are highly charged political issues—the more so with increasing evidence of a "white back-lash" in the North against "black" pressure. What effects are these counter-acting forces having on the bill in the Senate? What effects do the politicians see on the Congressional and Presidential elections?

Now comes a paradox wrapped in an enigma. The politicians of both parties, who are highly sensitive to political voltage, are for the most part relatively unconcerned—at least so far. This is because the pressures operating on most of them are so numerous and counter-balancing as to be imponderable.

Pressures Remain

On a national scale, of course, the pressures for and against civil rights (leaving aside the obvious Southern opposition) are plain enough.

Negro groups, most union leaders, many industrial unions (but by no means all of their members), the clergy, (but not all of their flocks) and the professionally liberal organizations are militantly behind civil rights.

The white back-lash is more amorphous, less organized, but plainly discernible from Congressional mail and the vote amassed by Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama in the Wisconsin Presidential primary.

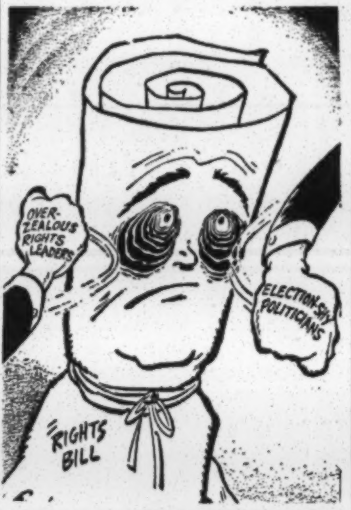
Assume for the moment a Senator or representative who is not a saint, ideologue or moralist, but just a garden variety politician. He translates these pressures into state and district terms. That is where the confusion sets in.

One Example

Take, for example, Ray J. Madden, the Democratic representative from Lake County, Ind., a heavily industrialized (steel, oil and chemicals), highly unionized area populated by a Polish-American majority and sizable groups of Negroes, white mountain folk from Kentucky and Tennessee, Hungarians, Mexicans and assorted Slavs and the Mississippi state government) has been advertising heavily in The Polish Daily Zgoda, a Chicago Polish language paper, which reaches up into South Milwaukee and over into Northern Indiana.

It would surprise no one here if Governor Wallace got a very heavy vote, even a majority, in Mr. Madden's district in the Presidential primary on May 5.

But would this portend trouble for Mr. Madden? Does it mean that a majority of the Democrats in his district, ignoring his consistent record in support of New Deal - Fair Deal legislation, would turn on him because of his vote for civil rights and elect a Repubican?



Morris, A.P. Newsfeatures

"Who needs enemies?"

Not Likely

Or that they would turn against President Johnson and vote for Governor Rockefeller, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge or Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania whose stand on civil rights is equally uncompromising or for Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, who favors right-to-work laws and advocates a voluntary Social Security program?

This is believed possible, but not likely.

Take another example—Republican Senator Glenn Beall of Maryland, where Governor Wallace is also entered in the May 19 Presidential primary.

Mr. Beall is up for re-election. He has always been for civil principal strength lies in the Republican western counties and in the Baltimore suburbs. But he also needs all the spare votes he can get in the heavily Democratic industrial wards of East Baltimore and on the Eastern Shore, for he won in 1958 by a narrow margin.

East Baltimore is made up of pockets of Negroes, "hill-billies," Poles, Italians and what Baltimoreans still call Bohemians (Czechs). Politicians living in this district report intense anti-Negro feeling among the whites, and predict that in four of the wards Governor Wallace may get from 50 to 90 per cent of the Presidential primary vote.

The Forecast

The Eastern Shore is southern, with a past and recent history of racial conflict. The whites are normally Democratic conservatives of Southern stamp but there was evidence of some defections for Mr. Nixon in 1960. The forecast is that Governor Wallace will get a heavy vote among these whites.

The rural and small-town Negroes of the Eastern Shore tend to be anachronistic—they still adhere to the old "party-of-Abraham-Lincoln" tradition. It was largely owing to this Republican Negro vote that Mr. Nixon carried six of the Eastern Shore counties.

These are the forces Mr. Beall must try to balance. If Mr. Wallace gets the predicted heavy vote in East Baltimore and the Eastern Shore, Mr. Beall might be tempted to take a softer line on civil rights in the hopes of picking up normally white Democratic votes. But if he did this, he would certainly lose the traditional Negro Republican vote on the Eastern Shore, and probably some of the white Republican vote in the western counties, which have a Union background.

Best Course

On balance then, from a strictly pragmatic viewpoint and leaving aside his convictions, Mr. Beall would probably do better not to equivocate.

Turning to the Presidential election, few observers here be- selves on President Johnson, a Southerner, by voting for a Republican civil rights candidate.

There may be some danger of larger Southern defections if Mr. Goldwater is the candidate. But this, too, is doubtful. The Senator opposes Federal intervention to prevent discrimination in public accommodations and employment. But he has bluntly said he favors withholding of funds where states or localities practice discrimination in Federally-aided programs. ("Take away their road funds.") This is the part of the bill that the South probably fears the most.

Legislative Hopes

The hopes the Southern Senators place on the white-back-lash—in fact the whole thrust of the campaign of the Coordinating Committee of Fundamental American Freedoms—are not political but legislative. They are desperately hoping to emasculate the civil rights bill since they know they cannot kill it.

But even here the back-lash has not had any marked effect. The civil rights forces have agreed to amend the bill to provide jury trials in criminal contempt cases arising out of any of the bill's anti-discrimination injunctions where a judge imposes a fine of more than $300 or a sentence of more than 30 days. This is in line with the precedent set in the 1957 law on voting suits. It is not con- refused to acknowledge in criminal contempt proceedings.

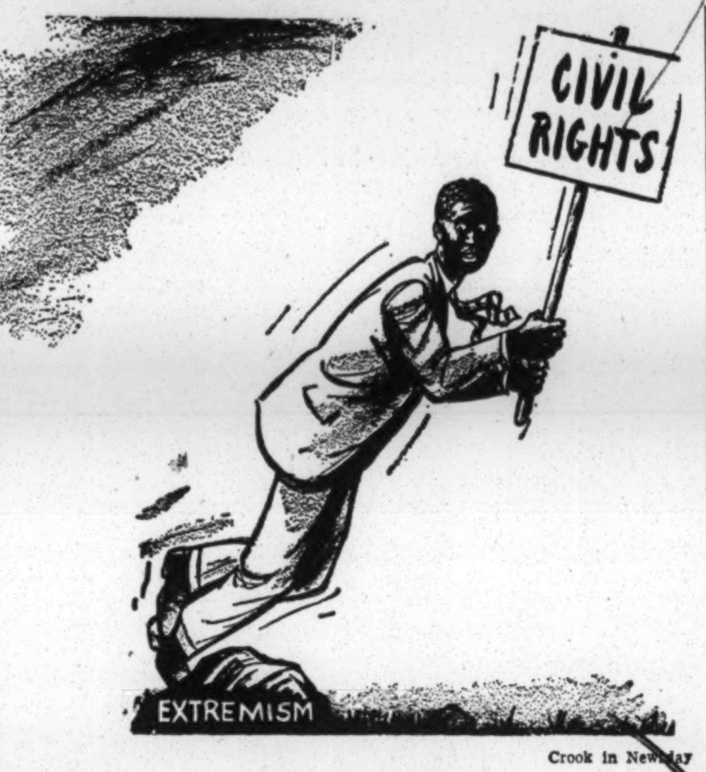
There is also agreement that the sections on discrimination in jobs and public accomodations shall be amended to give jurisdiction to state agencies for a limited time before the Federal Government steps in, and to give more opportunity for voluntary compliance before resort to court action.

Republican Position

These amendments will probably attain their final form during floor debate. But the feeling is that, though they may weaken the bill somewhat as it passed the House, they will not cut it.

This the Administration leaders cannot do nor connive at, and the Republicans dare not if they would. As a matter of fact, most of the Senate Republicans, while they may have doubts about further extension of Federal powers over private property and employers, are not disposed to chop the bill down to ineffectiveness.

After all, the Fourteenth Amendment was a Republican amendment. The Civil Rights Acts of 1875 (declared unconstitutional in 1883) were Republican statutes. A Republican administration sponsored in 1957 the first civil rights legislation in nearly a century. The Republican platform in 1960 had a strong civil rights plank,



Crook in Newsday

"Watch your step!"

CIVIL RIGHTS: LEADERS

Revolt Within the Movement Fails but It Opens Some Large Questions About the Future Course

By JOSEPH LELYVELD

The civil rights movement experienced a revolt within its revolt last week. It failed dismally but not without leaving bad scars and opening some large questions about the future of the movement.

The brief and abortive insurgency came from within the ranks of the Congress of Racial Equality in this city—the Brooklyn, Bronx and Manhattan chapters in particular. Significantly, of the 14 local chapters, these were the three with the largest Negro memberships. In defiance of the established leadership, they threatened to cause a monumental traffic jam on the opening day of the World's Fair.

Perhaps never before in the brief span of civil rights activism has a threat had such an impact, disquieting authorities on every level of what the activists call the power structure. But in the cold, rainy hours of last Wednesday morning, it became apparent that there would be no deeds to match the threat. All the words of anger and alarm seemed to dissolve in the rain and the saccharin music that bubbled from the loudspeakers at the fair. Outside on the broad highways, traffic moved with unexpected ease.

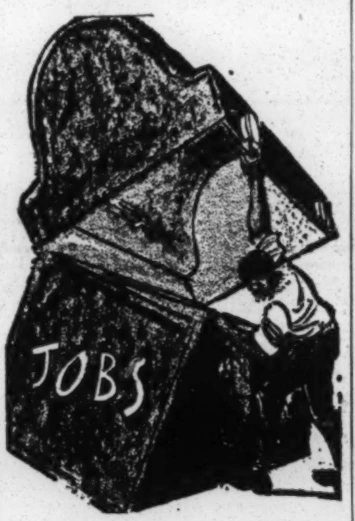
Invitation to Violence

The promised "stall-in" had been viewed by many as an invitation to racial violence. Even its proponents saw it as an unprecedented type of direct action—a technique of protest that was aimed at the whole community, those who passively accept the evils of discrimination as well as those who actually perpetuate them.

Self - proclaimed militants within the movement promised that the stall-in would be only the start. They charged that the protest techniques of the established leaders had not been effective; that the movement had been stymied. They promised to get it moving, first of all by dramatically halting traffic to a fair that had been built to celebrate the prosperity of a progressive United States.

The established leaders—CORE's James Farmer, Roy stall-in technique as "essentially revolutionary" and expressed concern over its possible effects on the civil rights debate in the Senate. At the same time, they warned government officials and whites in general that the new and extreme protest techniques were expressions of bedrock frustration and despair

As it turned out, it was James Farmer who became the first person to go to jail for demonstrating at the fair. And it was Mr. Farmer who drew the contrast between "the glittering world of fantasy and the real world of brutality, bigotry and poverty." As he was carried into the police van, the marchers—mostly college-age whites—were chanting "Farmer is our leader. We shall not be moved. Farmer is our leader . . ."



Ellinwood in The Tucson Daily Star

"Looking for a full dinner pail."

Under Pressure

But Mr. Farmer's deeds and their chants did not seem likely to forestall new challenges to the established leadership. The failure of the stall-in, say observers of the movement, can in no sense be taken as signifying an absence of frustration and despair at the grass roots of the Negro community. If anything, they say, it showed that these frustrations were too hard and deep to be reached easily by any would-be leader with an idea for a demonstration. If the dissident CORE chapters did according to these forecasts, some of them will succeed in staging drastically different kinds of demonstrations.

Such protests, like the proposal for the stall-in, would be generated out of the bitterness and alienation of activists who find that all their sitting in and marching gained little or nothing. In other words, they would be protests without the hope of progress.

Liberal political leaders and analysts have warned Negroes of a "hardening" of white attitudes under the pressure of extreme protests. They cite, for example, the strong showing of Gov. George C. Wallace in the Wisconsin Presidential primary earlier this month.

But civil rights leaders listen to these warnings, with considerable skepticism. White attitudes, they say, are not hardening—they are merely appearing without the camouflage of previously untested expressions of goodwill.

Deep Frustrations

Despite the warnings from liberals and Wednesday's failure on the way to the fair, it seems clear that the civil rights leadership remains under pressure to protest dramatically and to show results.

In the South—where established authority is hostile to the cause—protests do bring progress. In any case, there is no choice between activism and compliance. Negro voters have been and are being registered. Facilities have been and are being desegregated. Change comes painfully but with something like steadiness.

In the North—where discrimination is not ordained on the statute books—change frequently and paradoxically seems harder to achieve.

The failure of the stall-in indicated that the radicals in the movement may have no coherent alternative to offer to the established leaders. It did not prove, however, that the established leaders are here to stay. They still have to convince a skeptical Negro community that they can produce results. But, they quickly acknowledge, they cannot produce results without active white support.

Assume for the moment a Senator or representative who is not a saint, ideologue or moralist, but just a garden variety politician. He translates these pressures into state and district terms. That is where the confusion sets in.

One Example

Take, for example, Ray J. Madden, the Democratic representative from Lake County, Ind., a heavily industrialized (steel, oil and chemicals), highly unionized area populated by a Polish-American majority and sizable groups of Negroes, white mountain folk from Kentucky and Tennessee, Hungarians, Mexicans and assorted Slavs and Balts.

The Coordinating Committee for Fundamental American Freedoms (financed largely by against President Johnson and vote for Governor Rockefeller, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge or Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania whose stand on civil rights is equally uncompromising or for Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, who favors right-to-work laws and advocates a voluntary Social Security program?

This is believed possible, but not likely.

Take another example—Republican Senator Glenn Beall of Maryland, where Governor Wallace is also entered in the May 19 Presidential primary.

Mr. Beall is up for re-election. He has always been for civil rights and still is. But he is nervous, and understandably so, because the forces at work are complex and conflicting. His the hopes of picking up normally white Democratic votes. But if he did this, he would certainly lose the traditional Negro Republican vote on the Eastern Shore, and probably some of the white Republican vote in the western counties, which have a Union background.

Best Course

On balance then, from a strictly pragmatic viewpoint and leaving aside his convictions, Mr. Beall would probably do better not to equivocate.

Turning to the Presidential election, few observers here believe the civil rights issue will have any great affect. There is no expectation that the Southern states will avenge them- are not political but legislative. They are desperately hoping to emasculate the civil rights bill since they know they cannot kill it.

But even here the back-lash has not had any marked effect. The civil rights forces have agreed to amend the bill to provide jury trials in criminal contempt cases arising out of any of the bill's anti-discrimination injunctions where a judge imposes a fine of more than $300 or a sentence of more than 30 days. This is in line with the precedent set in the 1957 law on voting suits. It is not controversial and will spike the Southern charge that the bill denies the right of jury trial—a right the courts have steadily licans, while they may have doubts about further extension of Federal powers over private property and employers, are not disposed to chop the bill down to ineffectiveness.

After all, the Fourteenth Amendment was a Republican amendment. The Civil Rights Acts of 1875 (declared unconstitutional in 1883) were Republican statutes. A Republican administration sponsored in 1957 the first civil rights legislation in nearly a century. The Republican platform in 1960 had a strong civil rights plank, and House Republicans wrote the compromise bill that passed the House on Feb. 10 with three-fourths of Republican members voting for it.

accept the evils of discrimination as well as those who actually perpetuate them.

Self - proclaimed militants within the movement promised that the stall-in would be only the start. They charged that the protest techniques of the established leaders had not been effective; that the movement had been stymied. They promised to get it moving, first of all by dramatically halting traffic to a fair that had been built to celebrate the prosperity of a progressive United States.

The established leaders—CORE's James Farmer, Roy Wilkins of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Whitney M. Young, Jr., of the National Urban League—branded the Farmer is our leader . . ."

Under Pressure

But Mr. Farmer's deeds and their chants did not seem likely to forestall new challenges to the established leadership. The failure of the stall-in, say observers of the movement, can in no sense be taken as signifying an absence of frustration and despair at the grass roots of the Negro community. If anything, they say, it showed that these frustrations were too hard and deep to be reached easily by any would-be leader with an idea for a demonstration. If the dissident CORE chapters did not have the constituencies they claimed, it is argued, other pretenders to leadership will soon appear. Before the summer ends

In the [illegible] ination is not ordained on the statute books—change frequently and paradoxically seems harder to achieve.

The failure of the stall-in indicated that the radicals in the movement may have no coherent alternative to offer to the established leaders. It did not prove, however, that the established leaders are here to stay. They still have to convince a skeptical Negro community that they can produce results. But, they quickly acknowledge, they cannot produce results without active white support.

"One-tenth of the population," James Farmer has said, "cannot win this fight."

For many Negroes today this is a dispiriting realization.

SUMMER SCHOOLS

EDUCATION

REGISTER NOW

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

SUMMER COURSES FOR ADULTS AT WASHINGTON SQUARE

DAY AND EVENING CLASSES BEGIN IN JUNE

LIBERAL ARTS (June 15 to July 31)
ENGLISH COMPOSITION
CREATIVE WRITING
LITERATURE
ART
MUSIC
PHILOSOPHY
PSYCHOLOGY
HISTORY
SOCIOLOGY
SPEECH

MANAGEMENT INSTITUTE
(June 1 to July 3)
SYSTEMS ANALYSIS
ELECTRONIC DATA PROCESSING
PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

FOREIGN LANGUAGES
(June 15 to July 23 and July 27 to Sept. 3)
Reading courses mainly for A.M. or Ph.D. candidates. In addition, there are optional oral drill sessions.
FRENCH
GERMAN
ITALIAN
RUSSIAN SPANISH AND OTHERS

COLLEGE PREPARATORY
June 22 to July 30 (eve.) and July 6 to Aug. 14 (day)
To prepare students for college entrance, accelerated courses (day and evening) are offered in:
ENGLISH
FRENCH
ARITHMETIC ALGEBRA GEOMETRY
TRIGONOMETRY
GOVERNMENT
SOCIOLOGY

THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE INSTITUTE June 15 to Aug. 20 (day) June 22 to Aug. 13 (eve.)
Day and evening courses for international students who wish to learn American English.

THE READING INSTITUTE
Daytime courses for high school and college students (June 29 to July 31 and Aug. 3 to Sept. 4)
Evening courses for adults (June 22 to Aug. 5 and June 23 to Aug. 6)

TESTING AND ADVISEMENT CENTER
(by Appointment)
The services of specialists in the fields of psychology and counseling to the general public, University students, schools, professional workers, and business and industry.

CENTER FOR SAFETY EDUCATION
Instruction in the major areas of accident protection offered in connection with the Graduate Division of the School of Education.

SUMMER WORKSHOP IN TELEVISION AND RADIO
(June 29 to August 7)
A full-time, six-week program of professional training for advanced students, teachers, educational television participants or administrators, or radio people. Credit or non-credit.

FOR A GENERAL BULLETIN, PLEASE SEND COUPON OR TELEPHONE SPring 7-3131

DIVISION OF GENERAL EDUCATION
NEW YORK UNIVERSITY
Washington Square, New York 3, N. Y.

Address: Director of Summer Sessions
Division of General Education, New York University
1 Washington Square North, New York 3, N.Y.

Please send me the general bulletin for the summer session.
(Please print carefully.)

NAME____________________

ADDRESS____________________

CITY__________ ZONE_____ STATE______

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

THE GRADUATE FACULTY OF THE NEW SCHOOL

66 West 12th St.
NEW YORK 10011
OREGON 5-2700

GRADUATE COURSES IN:

ECONOMICS: Africa—Geography and Economic Development; Statistical Inference; Capitalism and Socialism in Theory and Practice.

PHILOSOPHY: Existential Philosophy; Concepts of Consciousness in Modern Philosophy; Philosophy of the Social Sciences.

POLITICAL SCIENCE: The Supreme Court in Recent History; Political Institutions in Modern China; Theories of International Politics.

PSYCHOLOGY: Perception; Statistics; Culture and Personality; Current Psychological Literature; Problems in Cognition.

SOCIOLOGY: American Minority Relations; Social Science and History; Problems in Modern Sociological Theory.

REGISTRATION: June 10 - June 18
Last day of application for admission and transcripts: May 1

CLASSES MEET TWICE A WEEK, 6 TO 8:05 P.M. OR 8:30 TO 10:10 P.M.

SUMMER SESSION 1964
JUNE 15 - JULY 23

NEW SCHOOL FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH T.
66 West 12th St., New York 10011
☐ Send Summer Bulletin of the Graduate Faculty of Political & Social Sciences.
☐ Send 1964/65 Bulletin of the Graduate Faculty.
Name____________________
Address____________________
Major Field of Study________________

Pratt INSTITUTE
DAY and EVENING
SUMMER PROGRAMS 1964
JUNE 8 to SEPTEMBER 11
Campus Residence Facilities Available

BACCALAUREATE Degree courses: architecture; art; building science; engineering.

MASTER'S Degree courses:
architecture; art education; library science.

ASSOCIATE Degree courses: art; building and construction.

LIBERAL ARTS courses for credit:
art history; English literature; social studies; philosophy; psychology.

SPECIAL ART WORKSHOP FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS:
July 6-17; July 20-31; August 3-14.

FOOD SCIENCE & MANAGEMENT WORKSHOP July 13-17.

For further information and application form,
phone (212) MA 2-2200
or write to Director of Summer Session —Box 216
PRATT INSTITUTE, BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11205

PREPARATORY

RHODES
Summer
HIGH SCHOOL

New York's largest, most distinguished private summer school offering a complete schedule of high school subjects at a moderate tuition. Personal attention, small classes. Fully accredited. Co-ed.

COMPLETELY AIR-CONDITIONED!

Morning and accelerated evening session.
SPECIAL: Driver Education;
Extracurricular Activities.

JULY 6 TO AUGUST 18
Register Now for choice of hours and subjects
PAMPHLET UPON REQUEST
Registered by N. Y. Board of Regents

11 WEST 54th STREET (nr. 5th Ave.) N. Y. C. 19
(Easily accessible from all boroughs)
PLaza 7-7900

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

fordham university
SUMMER SESSION 1964
DAY SESSION
JULY 6 to AUGUST 14 . . . UNIVERSITY CAMPUS BRONX
EVENING SESSION
JUNE 22 to AUGUST 11 . . . CITY HALL DIVISION, 302 BROADWAY

COEDUCATIONAL

- GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE COURSES:

Art, Biology, Business, Chemistry, Classics, Economics, Education, Educational Television, English, Film Appreciation, Government, History, Mass Communications, Mathematics, Modern Languages, Pharmacy, Philosophy, Physics, Political Science, Psychology, Science, Sociology, Speech Theology.

- INSTITUTES and WORKSHOPS:

THEOLOGY: Christian Marriage—New Liturgy
EDUCATION: Mathematics — Guidance — Elementary School Principals
LANGUAGES: French—Contemporary Russian Studies
RELIGION: For Religious and Sacerdotal Vocations—For Teachers of High School Religion
PSYCHOLOGY: In Projective Techniques
BUSINESS: Management Development Program
COMMUNICATIONS: T. V. Films—Modern Theatre

Registration dates: 302 BROADWAY....JUNE 16-17
BRONX CAMPUS....JULY 1-2

For Information write:
DEAN, fordham university,
SUMMER SESSION . . . Bronx, New York 10458
Telephone: FO 7-5400 EXT. 232-281
NEW AIR CONDITIONED CAMPUS CENTER

WAGNER COLLEGE
STATEN ISLAND, N.Y.
Founded 1883

COED, LIBERAL ARTS
SUMMER SESSIONS
JUNE 8 - JULY 31
1, 2, 3, 4, and 5-week Sessions
Undergraduate and Graduate Programs
28 Major Fields—Day and Evening Classes

HOLIDAY FESTIVAL of the ARTS

A unique five-part Fine Arts Program featuring outstanding faculties and guest lecturers and employing the cultural and educational riches of New York City.

- Exploring Art in New York
- The Great Church Organs in New York
- Choral Music Techniques
- Drama in the Church
- Ninth Annual N.Y.C. Writers Conference

Special Program for High School Honor Students.

86-acre rural and residential campus overlooks N. Y. C. skyline, N. Y. Harbor and Atlantic Ocean.

Located only minutes from the World's Fair and stimulating environs of the metropolitan area.

For Complete Information write:
Dean of Summer School, Wagner College
Staten Island, N. Y. 10301 — Gibraltar 7-7880, Ext. 55

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

University of California Extension

offers individualized instruction in your own home, at your own pace. You may enroll at any time throughout the year and receive lessons, study materials, and university faculty guidance in over 200 college-level Correspondence Courses

Anthropology, Art, Astronomy
Business Administration
Chemistry, Classics, Dramatic Art, Economics, Education
Engineering, English
Geography, Geology, History
Languages, Mathematics
Music, Nutritional Sciences
Philosophy, Physics, Physiology
Political Science, Psychology
Sociology, Statistics, Zoology

Write for a catalogue of courses
Department NYT-84
Correspondence Instruction
University of California Extension
University of California
Berkeley, California 94720

SUMMER STUDY IN NEW ORLEANS

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Write Director Summer Session

ADDITIONAL EDUCATION ADVERTISING APPEARS TODAY ON PAGES 7 & 8

The New York Times.
Published every day in the year by The New York Times Company

ADOLPH S. OCHS, Publisher 1896-1935
ORVIL E. DRYFOOS, Publisher 1961-1963

ARTHUR HAYS SULZBERGER
Chairman of the Board
ARTHUR OCHS SULZBERGER
President and Publisher

HARDING F. BANCROFT, Executive Vice President
ANDREW FISHER, Vice President
MONROE GREEN, Vice President
IVAN VEIT, Vice President
FRANCIS A. COX, Secretary-Treasurer

TURNER CATLEDGE, Managing Editor
LESTER MARKEL, Sunday Editor
JOHN B. OAKES, Editorial Page Editor

Next Steps on the Railroads

The railroad settlement, forged with such dramatic speed at the White House last week after five years of futile negotiations and Government involvement, provides the starting point for a relationship that could justify President Johnson's expressed hope for permanent labor-management peace in this pivotal industry.

But the floundering record of the whole dispute makes it plain that both sides have a lot to learn—or perhaps to relearn, since few industries have a longer history of collective relationships—before they can be counted on to make bargaining work without excessive dependence on Government help.

No agreement ever would have been reached had it not been for the unremitting pressure exerted by the President and the resourcefulness brought to bear by his special mediators. Even these factors probably would have proved insufficient if the President had not secretly pledged the railroads a sympathetic hearing on a costly tax problem. This appeasement of the employers through the prospect—though not the guarantee—of substantial tax savings helped break down their resistance to appeasing the unions by keeping some wasteful work rules.

And none of these maneuvers would have been of much avail if the stickiest element in the long conflict—how to eliminate jobs made useless by changing technology—had not already been decided through the award of the first compulsory arbitration board in the country's peacetime history.

The difficulty in the railroads is that both sides have got in the habit of exhausting all the cumbersome processes of the Railway Labor Act before they even begin to bargain. The appointment of a Presidential emergency board to make settlement recommendations is no longer a last resort in crisis situations; instead, it has become an almost automatic step in the negotiating process—a conventional jumping-off point in the most routine disputes.

If the present accord is to usher in a new era of self-reliance, the railroads and the unions will have to start working together on a year-round basis to seek answers for the many complex problems left unresolved by this contract and for the new ones being presented each day by technological innovation and the inroads of

but we are the one country on earth that has an opportunity to approach the goal of eliminating poverty within the next decade.

Thus, the race is with ourselves. Employing an artificial rabbit in the form of the Soviet Union merely demeans the efforts that we must be prepared to make.

The Atlantic Challenge

The most recent warnings of disintegration of the North Atlantic Alliance—heard nowadays with increasing frequency—were sounded a few days ago by a panel of which former President Eisenhower is sponsor and his brother Milton the chairman. The Critical Issues Council of the Republican Citizens Committee contains six former Eisenhower Cabinet members and two former NATO Supreme Commanders, one of whom, General Lauris Norstad, headed the group's NATO study. Its report obviously deserves close attention.

General Norstad warns against threatening American troop withdrawals to spur Europe to provide more divisions. He argues that there will be little chance of getting Europe to do more if the United States does less. And the possibility of building a true Atlantic community will be undermined.

Europe's revival, its desire for a larger role and its demand for a voice in nuclear decisions underlie much of the tension within NATO. Some Americans see, in the uniting of a revived Europe, a danger of "European nationalism" and "protectionism" that could escalate our conflicts with President de Gaulle to a larger scale. But America's best friends in Europe, those who want closest trans-Atlantic ties, are also dedicated to Europe's federal union; any weakening of American support for this concept would defeat American interests. Those in Europe who oppose federal union—chiefly the Gaullists and Communists—are even more opposed to integration with the United States in a larger Atlantic community.

What the United States must do, as General Norstad rightly indicates, is to strengthen trans-Atlantic bonds as Europe unites. The report proposes that policies on military strategy, control of nuclear weapons, trade, agriculture and monetary problems be harmonized. It comes to grips with the central issue when it states:

Washington

On the Care and Feeding of Lyndon Johnson

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON, April 25—President Johnson recently appointed several distinguished Americans to a Committee for the Preservation of the White House, but what is needed more urgently is a Committee for the Preservation of the President.

The man is a high-compression machine and, as such, runs better at high speed, but lately he has been trying to settle every problem, shake hands with every visitor, confer with every Senator, attend every public dinner and dance with every lady in town.

"I'm the only President you have," he tells his visitors, but he doesn't act like it. He has made three speeches, held four press conferences, toured five states, opened the World's Fair and settled the railroad strike in the last eight days, and the week ended with a fourth speech to the Gridiron Club late Saturday night.

The Unending Filibuster

There hasn't been anything like this kind of explosive energy in the Republic since the Alaska earthquake, and the disturbing thing about it is that he burns up almost as much energy on small things as he does on big things.

A delegation of Congressmen complaining about the importation of foreign shoes gets the same intense treatment as the railroad negotiators. A reception for the editors is not a handshake and a drink, but a major speech, a tour of the White House, a series of monologues and a dance.

His press conference outdoors last Thursday was a filibuster, followed by a personally conducted tour of the White House garden, followed again by another informal press conference, while Secretary of Defense McNamara and a group of Senators and Representatives waited around behind the shrubbery to see him on other matters.

Even when he sleeps, which isn't often, he is restless. "Every night when I go to bed," he told a delegation the other day, "I ask myself: 'What did we do today that we can point to for generations to come, to say that we laid the foundation for a better and more peaceful and more prosperous world?' " This is not the sort of thing that sends a man off into dreamless peace.

Washington talks about this problem more than about anything else, and some old-timers even think

Observer

WASHINGTON, April 25—The American alarm-clock industry is circulating a long treatise on sleep in honor of the return of daylight saving time. It contains ridiculous advice on how to take the agony out of getting up.

For example: "The average sleeper goes through three steps in waking up: (1) the period of awakening when the alarm rings, (2) the period of relapse when the sleeper plays possum with himself, and (3) the period of re-awakening when the sleeper wakes himself up all over again . . . The second period is the trap—and one to avoid, by getting up at the first sound of the alarm."

How Not to Get out of Bed

Many people, of course, can get up at the first sound of the alarm without bad results, but these are not the kind of people who really enjoy sleep. They snatch it on the run, regarding it as a necessary impediment to dynamic living. People who are not so luckily constituted should take care.

These people, upon responding to the first sound of the alarm, invariably wind up before the medicine-chest mirror, swollen-eyed and creaky, seeing themselves and their lives with brutal clarity. In bad cases, they go back to bed and never leave it again.

There was a typical case some years ago in Newark, N. J. A normal, undynamic young man named Arthur, who dreamed of some day becoming president of his company (this was before young men lowered their goals to vice-presidencies), got up at the first sound of the alarm and sprang to his bathroom mirror.

There, with his normal waking illusions still dormant, he suddenly glimpsed himself as he was—sallow, unprepossessing, watery-eyed, slow-witted about business. In a fearful flash of truth, he saw quite clearly that the presidency to which he aspired would go to the boss's nephew and that he would be retired at 70 with a platform rocker.

Arthur went back to bed and took up reading the classics. Relatives took him in, and he became something of an authority on Italian Renaissance poetry and a drag on the economy. Had he not insisted on hopping out of bed at the first sound of the alarm, he might have enjoyed the life of a normal, self-sustaining taxpayer and be retired today with a platform rocker.

Garbage Won't Do

The alarm-clock industry also has this advice for difficult wakers: "Give yourself an impor-

Letters to The Times

Education for Whites

Need Seen for Learning to Fight Subtler Injustices to Negroes

TO THE EDITOR:

We must not permit our resentment against the tactics of certain civil rights groups to obscure the justified grievances of the American Negro. Most of these daily and continuing grievances rarely come to the attention of a majority of Americans. [Editorial April 23.]

Some have suggested the need for a massive education and training program for the great body of Negroes, who have been deprived by years of discrimination and community neglect. This may well be needed. As a personal reaction, I would like to suggest that many whites — certainly myself among them—have need of some education themselves, of an unusual kind.

Only recently a Protestant church group petitioned the Federal Communications Commission to deny reissue of a television license to a Jackson, Miss., TV station. The station was accused of not reporting Negro community affairs, never broadcasting Negro church services, never using Negro leaders on programs, failure to use courtesy titles in referring to Negroes, permitting local politicians and leaders to use the facilities to promote the local mores on the race question; in short, behaving as has been customary with radio and TV licensees in most Southern communities.

Failure to Protest

This is why I say that education of whites is also needed. For although I had lived as an adult in the South for 25 years and knew first-hand all the facts as charged, I had never raised my voice in protest against this particular type of discrimination. Certainly I had never thought of attempting to have a broadcast license revoked for failure to deal decently with one-third of the population when the airways belong to all the people.

True, I had spoken out and had acted against the more obvious forms of discrimination. But the point is that I, and other whites of goodwill who are concerned with discrimination, seem to have become anesthetized by habit, custom and circumstance.

The plain truth is that customs and traditions of discrimination so pervade our past, infecting North and South alike, that we have become desensitized to injustice unless it is brutal, overt or obvious. We

It is on people like them that we must depend to introduce to the geographically and politically limited Southerner the inevitable trends of contemporary American society.

The refusals by Mr. Spender, Mr. Gassner and Mr. Allen are detrimental not only to the students of the 27 colleges and universities attending the Southern Literary Festival, but also to the prejudiced mind. For it is only through reorientation by reasonable educators that the unreasonable can realize and accept the dignity and integrity of all men.

MARCHITA MAUCK,
VIRGINIA COLE.
Columbus, Miss., April 18, 1964.

Goulart Rule Assailed

Advocacy of Reforms Is Seen as Demagogic Bid for Support

TO THE EDITOR:

I find it difficult to see deposed President João Goulart as a martyr in the cause of much needed reforms, as the April 19 letter of Herbert Marcuse, Barrington Moore Jr. and Martin H. Peretz implied. Rather, Goulart and most of his associates can better be interpreted as political opportunists who went to great extremes to maintain and enhance their power.

There can be little doubt that Goulart's stop-and-go advocacy of basic reforms, especially land reform, was a generally inept demagogic attempt to rally popular support to a government that had failed even to try to solve the problem felt to be Brazil's most urgent—inflation.

Goulart, after becoming President, almost continually agitated the country. In 1962, during his drive to achieve full Presidential powers, he and his brother-in-law, then Governor of the big agricultural state of Rio Grande do Sul, even went so far as to disrupt for months the food supply of São Paulo and especially Rio de Janeiro. He had encouraged military men to speak out politically (as long as they agreed with him) and was at least not dismayed by the revolts of the sergeants in Brasilia and of the marines in Rio.

'Attack' on Inflation

Some of the specific "reform" measures Goulart had advocated in the last few months are illuminating. Unwilling to face inflation's roots, he had attacked its symptoms in ways absurd even for the Brazilian scene. He fixed rents at ridiculously low levels. He advocated price control of food from the farm level sides have got in the habit of exhausting all the cumbersome processes of the Railway Labor Act before they even begin to bargain. The appointment of a Presidential emergency board to make settlement recommendations is no longer a last resort in crisis situations; instead, it has become an almost automatic step in the negotiating process—a conventional jumping-off point in the most routine disputes.

If the present accord is to usher in a new era of self-reliance, the railroads and the unions will have to start working together on a year-round basis to seek answers for the many complex problems left unresolved by this contract and for the new ones being presented each day by technological innovation and the inroads of competitive forms of transportation. Better communications are especially needed to guard against a recurrence of the featherbedding dispute in two years—the time limit set by the compulsory arbitration law.

Steel and other industries, in which discord and strikes were once the rule, have found a useful vehicle for cooperation in the formation of joint committees to discuss their mutual problems in an atmosphere free of strike deadlines or other forms of economic coercion. The establishment of such a committee in the railroads would do much to make the hope voiced by the President—and earnestly shared by the country—come true.

Churchmen for Civil Rights

The roots of civil rights run deeper than man-made laws. Long before our own Constitution guaranteed equality of citizenship regardless of race, creed or color, most religions recognized that the dignity of man was not to be delimited. Neither religion nor law is skin-deep.

While the extended debate continues on the floor of the Senate on the eleven titles in the civil rights bill, an important commitment is being made on the bill's behalf by the spiritual leaders of the nation. A National Interreligious Convocation is scheduled for Tuesday in Washington, involving churchmen of almost every denomination. The gathering is designed to put spiritual strength and unity behind the legislative drive for civil rights.

The effect of the churchmen's meeting can be enormous, not only in Congress but in the country. For the interfaith response by the clergy to the need for enactment of this civil rights measure helps to place the whole subject above politics and beyond states and regions.

Surely there is no conflict between the basic ideas of social justice and the basic tenets of our religions. The Declaration of Independence holds that all men, not all white men, are created equal, and that their Creator has endowed them with certain inalienable rights. Our Constitution declares that we, the people, not we the white people, seek the blessings of liberty. By placing civil rights on a spiritual plane, the religious convocation is indeed getting to the heart and soul of the human guarantees and opportunities promised by the bill. They are making it doubly plain that this is a moral, not a political, issue.

The Poverty Race

Sargent Shriver's proposal to challenge the Soviet Union to a race to eradicate poverty warps the focus of the Administration's anti-poverty campaign. A statistical comparison makes clear that the vast majority of Soviet citizens live under what we regard as poverty, so that we begin with an enormous advantage. If all the United States has to do in the war against poverty is—in the American context—to beat the Soviet Union, then everyone can sit back and relax. Such a race would amount to no contest.

Eliminating poverty in the United States should not be depicted as a sort of Olympic sprint, with a medal going to the winner. It is a deadly serious battle to better the lives of all Americans, which demands a mustering of all the talents and resources that the nation can command. It cannot be accomplished in a hurry, scale. But America's best friends in Europe, those who want closest trans-Atlantic ties, are also dedicated to Europe's federal union; any weakening of American support for this concept would defeat American interests. Those in Europe who oppose federal union—chiefly the Gaullists and Communists—are even more opposed to integration with the United States in a larger Atlantic community.

What the United States must do, as General Norstad rightly indicates, is to strengthen trans-Atlantic bonds as Europe unites. The report proposes that policies on military strategy, control of nuclear weapons, trade, agriculture and monetary problems be harmonized. It comes to grips with the central issue when it states:

"Our allies are demanding more than merely to be kept informed about decisions over which they have no control, more also than 'consultation' in which their views carry weight only if they conform with U.S. preconceptions. What they want is real participation, a true share, in the process by which decisions vital to all are reached. This is what they have every right to demand."

The Atlantic challenge of the 1960's can only be met by moving vigorously now to share sovereignty across the Atlantic between a uniting Europe and the United States.

Confusion in Laos

A week after the right-wing coup in Vientiane, confusion and squabbling continue to dominate the Laotian situation. The generals who seized power in that city are making no secret of their distaste for Western efforts to reconstitute the coalition government under Prince Souvanna Phouma. With utmost reluctance the rightist leaders have agreed to let him stay at the head of a government reorganized along lines that would greatly increase their influence. But the pro-Communist Pathet Lao has rejected a reorganization on such terms.

The one encouraging aspect is the cooperation of the United States and the Soviet Union in seeking restoration of the old balance. The United States can press the right-wingers with the threat of cutting off American aid. Whether the Soviet Union has equal influence over the Pathet Lao is more doubtful. The Laotian leftists are much closer to Peking than to Moscow.

Admittedly, the coalition has not worked perfectly. The right-wingers are understandably resentful at the Pathet Lao's nibbling away at their positions in a period of supposed stability. But restoration of the coalition—under conditions of more firmly supervised neutrality—is infinitely better for Laos than the resumption of full-scale internal war.

April Summary

Before April is gone and the first flush of spring becomes the colorful wealth of May, we might pause for a moment of summing up.

April has its whims, but it always is marked by warm names for old truths newly seen: Daffodil, anemone, violet, lamb, trillium, robin, oriole; and bud, blossom, flower, floret, bloom. April is color: Pussy willow gray, pollen gold, violet purple, marsh marigold yellow, grass green. It is all the greens in the spectrum, of course, but before it is green it is an astonishment of pastels, leaves fresh from the bud, still soft as baby's skin, and glowing pink and blue and lavender and yellow and golden tan. It is the lowlands rouged with swamp maple bloom, the meadows frosted with bluets, the woodland margin dainty with anemones and waxen white with bloodroot.

April is a young world, new as sunrise, in which miracles can happen, and do happen every day before sundown. Nothing is newer than an April morning, nothing more full of wonders than a bud or a seed. April is an old world made new again, a tired, disillusioned world of frost and ice and snow made innocent once more. It is a tempered wind and a warming rain, and almost fourteen hours of daylight.

And in April, man is here only to see and listen and participate, not to manage or administer. April doesn't need him; it tolerates him.

fense McNamara and a group of Senators and Representatives waited around behind the shrubbery to see him on other matters.

Even when he sleeps, which isn't often, he is restless. "Every night when I go to bed," he told a delegation the other day, "I ask myself: 'What did we do today that we can point to for generations to come, to say that we laid the foundation for a better and more peaceful and more prosperous world?' " This is not the sort of thing that sends a man off into dreamless peace.

Washington talks about this problem more than about anything else, and some old-timers even think something can be done about it, though they are not very sure.

One idea, for example, is that the Congress could pass a joint resolution simply affirming that the President is an essential instrument of the national welfare, and stating that it is the sense of the Congress that he should pay more attention to his wife.

Mrs. Johnson should obviously be chairman of any committee for the Preservation of the President, but she would need help.

The head of the Secret Service clearly should be a member of the committee. He is now charged with the security of the President but is not doing a very good job. He is supposed to be the one man in the Government who can tell the President what to do, but Mr. Johnson simply brushes him aside and plunges into the crowds, as he did in South Bend the other day, where he was almost suffocated by the crush.

Stan Musial, the resident physical-fitness chief of the Government, might also help. Lately the President has shown a vague interest in golf, but this makes things even worse. Golf is a plague, invented by the Calvinistic Scots as a punishment for man's sins, and nobody has yet found anybody in Washington the President can beat.

This merely adds to his frustration. As General Eisenhower discovered, it is easier to end the cold war or stamp out poverty than to master this devilish pastime, so Musial will have to find some other diversion.

Baseball is no good either. The President went to the opening game between the Washington Senators and the Los Angeles Angels but, as soon as he threw out the first ball, he gathered a quorum of the House and Senate around him, sat between Senator Dirksen and Minority Leader Halleck and began lobbying for his civil rights bill.

A Desperate Suggestion

Driving an automobile liberates the President and it is probably a mistake to deny him the pleasure. If necessary, the District of Columbia police could clear and rope off Constitution Avenue or the Shirley Highway once or twice a week and cut him loose.

This is a desperate suggestion, but something clearly has to be done. The President got back in town Friday night late after his tour of Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia, and found himself with nothing to do Saturday before the Gridiron dinner.

So he called up President Truman at the Blair House and had him over for lunch and then, on the spur of the moment, summoned a press conference—his fifth in a little over a week.

In a way, of course, the press is his sport. Playing question and answer with the reporters is almost his only diversion, and he's getting better at it all the time, but after all even that is not a very satisfactory way of life.

nephew and that he would be retired at 70 with a platform rocker.

Arthur went back to bed and took up reading the classics. Relatives took him in, and he became something of an authority on Italian Renaissance poetry and a drag on the economy. Had he not insisted on hopping out of bed at the first sound of the alarm, he might have enjoyed the life of a normal, self-sustaining taxpayer and be retired today with a platform rocker.

Garbage Won't Do

The alarm-clock industry also has this advice for difficult wakers: "Give yourself an important job to do soon after arising (taking out the garbage, lighting the stove, etc.). This makes sure you get up."

The point here, obviously, is that waking with a sense of mission will help sleep-lovers to get past that awful moment before the mirror when intimations of mortality crowd in. Taking out the garbage and lighting the stove, however, will not do the trick.

Most men who wake up thinking, "I must rise and take out the garbage," will immediately go back to sleep thinking, "Garbage, schmarbage." What is needed is a truly important reason for getting up, and here is the rub.

The time to decide on an important reason for getting up is just before retiring at night. "I need an important reason for getting up tomorrow morning," a man may tell his wife. In most families there will probably be a blank exchange of stares. The wife will want to say, "The important reason for getting up is to get out and make the mortgage money."

The Ultimate Waker

A smart wife will not say this. She knows it will start that old rondelay which begins, "Is that all I have to live for?" It will occur to the husband that perhaps there is no important reason why he should get up tomorrow. He may brood.

In any case, there has been raised a question between them that should remain unasked. In extreme cases the husband may refuse ever to get up again until his wife gives him an important reason for it. And if she tells him the truth—about the mortgage money—they may both end at the marriage counselor's.

The alarm-clock people should forgo the advice and concentrate on producing the irresistible alarm clock. It should flood the room with sunshine collected from a childhood morning in June and give off the scent of honeysuckle.

In a no-nonsense feminine voice, it should evoke a zest to grab life by a leg and pish-tush all those gloomy suspicions that a foot put out of bed is merely a foot set on a treadmill. RUSSELL BAKER.

ure to deal decently with one-third of the population when the airways belong to all the people.

True, I had spoken out and had acted against the more obvious forms of discrimination. But the point is that I, and other whites of goodwill who are concerned with discrimination, seem to have become anesthetized by habit, custom and circumstance.

The plain truth is that customs and traditions of discrimination so pervade our past, infecting North and South alike, that we have become desensitized to injustice unless it is brutal, overt or obvious. We react against such injustice, but we are scarcely aware of those more subtle forms of discrimination that make life so difficult for the Negro. This is where education for whites is so important.

Until the majority of Americans come to have more sensitive consciences, we shall not rid ourselves of our most acute national problem. For we will not even be aware of so many of the forms in which it exists. MORRIS B. ABRAM,
President, American Jewish Committee.
New York, April 23, 1964.

Writers' Boycott Criticized

TO THE EDITOR:

Stephen Spender, John Gassner and Walter Allen recently canceled speaking commitments at the Southern Literary Festival at the Mississippi State College for Women, following the precedent set by other eminent personalities in regard to public appearances in Mississippi before segregated audiences.

Their cancellations imply an evasion of the responsibility inherent in the set of principles for which they stand. This set of principles, defined in various ways, "equality of opportunity for all regardless of creed or color," "universal brotherhood," etc., includes a need for the re-education of the prejudiced mind.

There are those of us on the Mississippi State College for Women campus who desire that the Negroes be provided equal opportunities with the whites. We are the minority group and feel the differences of attitude quite keenly. We believe that most of the hatred and prejudice is fostered by ignorance and the unawareness of the nature of mankind and anthropological fact.

It appears to us that these men have a more complex task than simply publishing a refusal to appear on the basis of "principle." In spite of the fact that they may have been pressured, precedent has offered them the easy way out.

Perhaps it has occurred to them, as it has to us, that their refusal to speak in the segregated South is depriving us of a cultural and educational opportunity which they are in an ideal position to present.

couraged military men to speak out politically (as long as they agreed with him) and was at least not dismayed by the revolts of the sergeants in Brasilia and of the marines in Rio.

'Attack' on Inflation

Some of the specific "reform" measures Goulart had advocated in the last few months are illuminating. Unwilling to face inflation's roots, he had attacked its symptoms in ways absurd even for the Brazilian scene. He fixed rents at ridiculously low levels. He advocated price control of food from the farm level to the consumer. Since the prices would normally be below cost to the farmers, the Government would have paid a subsidy to producers.

One recent "reform" was the nationalization by the state oil monopoly of all the domestic-owned oil refineries, even though state enterprise desperately needed to use its capital for exploration rather than to pay for the private companies' stock.

Goulart refused to compromise on the issue of land reform, not that his proposal was so radical in itself. But apparently Goulart wished to prolong the issue. Understandably, opposition to land reform was enhanced by the prospect that the Goulart Government would have administered it.

The fact is that the Brazilian left was generally divided, opportunistic and bankrupt of productive new ideas. It was not a left, for instance, that an American liberal could admire. This makes our Brazil policy doubly difficult, ostensibly committed as we are to basic reforms. GORDON W. SMITH,
Bliss Fellow in Latin-American Studies, Harvard University.
Cambridge, Mass., April 19, 1964.

Dangers in Air Pollution

TO THE EDITOR:

It doesn't require a span of 136 years to prove the destructive effect of air pollution on stone, as shown in the pictures of the Parthenon in Athens in The Times of April 13. In 1920 we were shown recent photographs of the exterior of European cathedrals which were in as bad a condition as those in Athens now. Interesting, however, is the fact that these cathedrals had been photographed before, some time around 1850, when cameras were a novelty. In these pictures, taken about 70 years earlier, the big stone figures were in almost perfect condition.

Is it too far-fetched to believe that the same element which can destroy stone could also attack a much more fragile substance, when with every breath we take we aid in the assault of our lungs?

F. ST. SAUVEUR.
New York, April 14, 1964.

Offices and Subscription Rates of The New York Times

OFFICES OF THE NEW YORK TIMES
MAIN OFFICE..229 W. 43d St., New York 10036
Telephone: 212 LA 4-1000
Classified Advertising and Microfilm Reference, 1457 Broadway, Bet. 41st & 42d Sts.

ALBANY..........Press Room, State Capitol
ATLANTA..........The Constitution Bldg.
BOSTON..........News, Herald-Traveler Bldg.; Advertising, 140 Federal St.
CHICAGO..........News, 435 N. Michigan; Advertising, 333 N. Michigan
DETROIT..........News, Free Press Bldg.; Advertising, Northland Towers, Southfield
GREENWICH..Keppie Bldg., 275 Greenwich Ave.
HEMPSTEAD..........156 North Franklin St.
KANSAS CITY, MO....2706 Power & Light Bldg.
LOS ANGELES....News, Statler Center Bldg., 900 Wilshire Blvd.; Advertising, 612 S. Flower St.
MIAMI..........Advertising, Dupont Plaza Center
NEWARK..........17 Academy St. (2)
PHILADELPHIA..........News, Bulletin Bldg.; Advertising, Philadelphia National Bank Bldg.
SAN FRANCISCO..........814 Mission St.; Advertising, 315 Montgomery St.
SMITHTOWN, L. I..........43 West Main St.
STAMFORD..........Advertising, 19 River St.
TRENTON..........Press Room, State House

WASHINGTON..........1701 K St., N. W.
WHITE PLAINS..........175 Main St.

ALGIERS..........4 Avenue de Pasteur
ATHENS..........31, Haritos Street
BEIRUT..........Hotel St. Georges
BELGRADE..........Hotel Moskva
BERLIN........6 Savignyplatz, Charlottenburg 2
BOGOTA..........Calle 75, 3-15
BONN........19 Bahnhofstrasse, Bad Godesberg
BUENOS AIRES..........San Martin 344
CAIRO..........33 Sharia Kasr El Nil
DUBLIN..........29 Belgrove Road
GENEVA..........Palais des Nations
JERUSALEM..........Lishkat Haitonuth
JOHANNESBURG.....care of Johannesburg Star
KUALA LUMPUR........8 Lorong Freeman Dua
LAGOS........P. O. Box 1573, 5 Maduike Street
LEOPOLDVILLE..........Stanley Hotel
LISBON..........Rua Joseph Bleck, 53
LONDON..........Printing House Square, E.C.4
MADRID..........Zurbano 39
MEXICO CITY..........259-11 Puebla
MOSCOW..........12-24 Sadovo Samotechnaya
NAIROBI.....care of The East African Standard
NEW DELHI..Indian Eastern Newspaper Society Bldg., Rafi Marg
OTTAWA..........Citizen Bldg.
PARIS..........News Bureau, 37 rue Caumartin; International Edition, 61 rue La Fayette

RABAT..........care of Map, Rue Gaillard
RIO DE JANEIRO........Avenida Rio Branco 25
ROME..........Via di Propaganda Fide 27
SAIGON..........322A Phan Than Gian
SANTIAGO, CHILE..........Bandera 75
STOCKHOLM..........Svenska Dagbladet Bldg.
TOKYO.....News Bureau, Asahi Shimbun Bldg., Advertising, New Ginza Bldg.
TUNIS...Colisee Bldg., Avenue Habib Bourguiba
WARSAW..........Hotel Orbis-Bristol

MAIL SUBSCRIPTION, U. S., TERRITORIES

Edition.	1 Yr.	6 Mos.	3 Mos.
Daily and Sunday	$55.00	$30.25	$16.50
Weekdays	28.00	15.40	8.40
Sunday	27.00	14.85	8.10

Rates to Other Countries on Request.

The New York Times also publishes an International Edition weekdays in Paris, and distributes a Weekly Review from Tokyo, Manila and Melbourne. It also publishes a bound volume, a microfilm edition and an Index.

The Associated Press is entitled exclusively to the use for republication of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited in this paper and local news of spontaneous origin published herein. Rights of republication of all other matter herein are also reserved.

Rights Bill Concessions

Amendments Gained by the Minority Said to Stress Rule XXII's Value

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, April 25—The acceptance by the bipartisan Senate leadership of amendments to the equal rights bill as passed by the House, after vowing it would not consent to any substantial change, is the latest demonstration of the constructive value of the Senate rule which protects extended discussion of highly controversial legislation. This rule, No. XXII, permits a determined minority to filibuster until overcome by physical exhaustion or silenced by the invoking of closure (which fixes a time when debate must end and floor voting begin).

But it is extremely difficult to muster the "two-thirds of the Senators present and voting" that is required for closure by Rule No. XXII. One reason is the awareness of every Senator in the instant majority that he may at any time be in the minority on some legislative proposal he fundamentally opposes. Another reason is that his right of unlimited discussion, since it is exclusive to that branch of Congress, is especially cherished as recognition of the greater importance and responsibility of the Senatorial office than membership in the House.

Determined Minority

The result is that a determined minority, which has done its homework and is ably led, can generally force concessions from a majority, however unwilling, and despite loud and reiterated announcements that no amendments whatever would be accepted. The retreat of the majority is the more certain when there is sufficient time for the minority to arouse the public and the Senate rank-and-file to highly questionable effects of legislation that its advocates either have overlooked or sought to conceal by misrepresentation.

The rules of the House enable its majority to ram through measures before the public or, no wheels, no deals, no compromise that will fundamentally alter this bill." And before and after that statement he confidently predicted that a measure meeting his description could "probably" be passed without invoking closure.

It is a question of definition whether the amendments on which the Administration and the bipartisan Senate leadership have yielded are "fundamental" alterations. To many, the change initiated by Senator Talmadge of Georgia will be so defined. The Mansfield - Dirksen substitute for the Talmadge proposal assures trial by jury if a judge inflicts a sentence more than that imposed for petty offenses on citizens under charge of wilful criminal contempt for violating any of the anti-discrimination compulsions in the equal rights bill. However, the proposal by Senator Saltonstall, on which agreement is forecast, can hardly be argued as fundamental."

Fixed Period

It fixes 90 days, instead of the vague allotment in the bill of "a reasonable time," for state and local agencies to obtain voluntary compliance to the anti-discrimination mandate of the public - accommodations section of the measure before the Attorney General can take to the courts a case arising under the section. But this is merely a mild restraint against a spirit of excessive enforcement zeal in the Department of Justice, while leaving in full force federally-compulsive integration.

Yet the history of the amendment process is that when it begins it tends to expand. There is some favorable sentiment

CIVIL RIGHTS HOPES CONGRESS

"The Greatest."

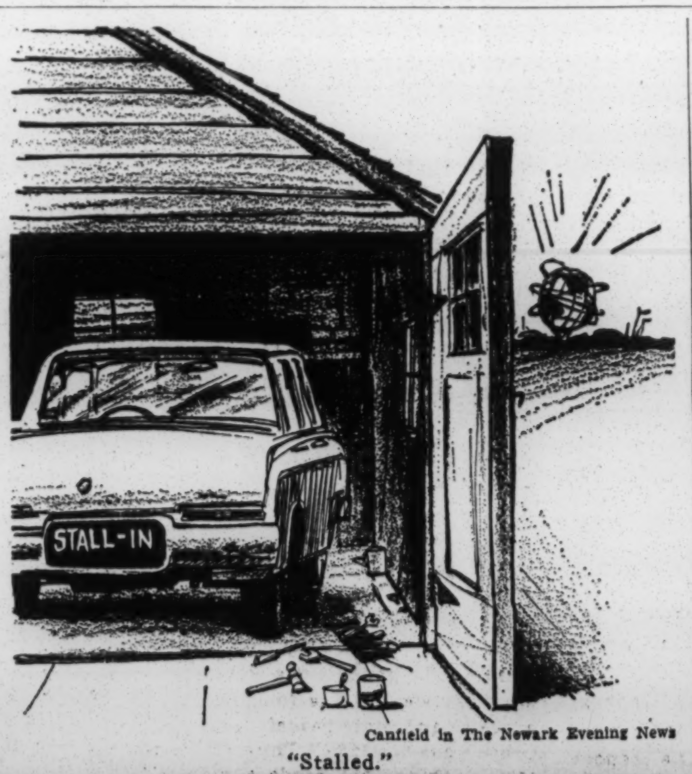
Peb in The Philadelphia Inquirer

Opinion of the Week: At Home and Abroad

RAIL SETTLEMENT

President Johnson's personal efforts and determination were given much credit last week for an accord reached in the long dispute between rail managements and rail unions which ended the threat of a national rail strike. Some doubts were expressed as to whether this had really saved collective bargaining in the rail industry. Following are comments from the country.

The Johnson method was to set the negotiators down to the task of finding their way out of their utter tangle of disagreement, all the while subjecting them to a relentless volley of exortation and cajolery to reason together and save the public interest. Apparently the tireless energy, persistence and persuasiveness of the President were a force that could not be resisted. It may well be that the negotiating railroads and unions are as surprised as the public is that their five-year-old dispute got settled.—SAN FRAN-



Canfield in The Newark Evening News

"Stalled."

. . . No one can tell to what realistic approach to the evalu-the "open diplomacy" concept as proclaimed by the United States has been dropped.—DIE WELT, Hamburg.

The impression should not arise that the defensive strength and will to defense of the West is weakening . . . One sometimes gets the impression that international tensions are now regarded as brought about not by pressure from the East but from the cohesion of the West. —HEINRICH KRONE, Minister without portfolio and chairman of the West German National Defense Council.

Italy salutes with satisfaction the announcement given simultaneously by President Johnson and Prime Minister Khrushchev . . . Peace within security is the ultimate end at which Italian foreign policy is aiming and this objective can be realized only through an effective and real easing of tension that obviously should be coupled to controlled reduction of armament. —GIUSEPPE SARAGAT, Italy's Foreign Minister.

U. N. Weathers the Storm

Recent Events Reflect an Enhanced Position for the World Body

By THOMAS J. HAMILTON

WASHINGTON, April 25—Four-fifths of the 12,000 letters Senator J. W. Fulbright has received in the last month endorsed his plea to Americans to abandon "old myths" and think "unthinkable thoughts" about the nation's foreign policy problems.

However, Senator Fulbright did not advocate any change in United States policy toward the United Nations. In fact, the Secretary General, U Thant, welcomed the Arkansas Democrat's speech and expressed the belief that the people of all nations—he singled out the Soviet Union and Communist China—should make their own reappraisals of foreign policy along the lines recommended by Mr. Fulbright, who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

There are other indications that the United Nations, which came under heavy attack in Congress in January, 1963, when the United Nations Congo Force was used to smash the secessionist movement in Katanga Province, has weathered the storm.

Two years ago, Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington, another Administration stalwart, made a celebrated speech in which he insisted that the United Nations must not become "a substitute for our own leaders as makers and movers of American policy" and urged a top-level review of the United States' role in the world organization.

No such review was made, but Senator Jackson has not returned to this suggestion. In any case, he demonstrated that he was not fighting the United Nations as such by joining the campaign for legislation authorizing the United States to buy $100 million of United Nations bonds to meet the deficit on the Congo and Middle Eastern Forces.

D.A.R. Silent on U.N.

But perhaps the most encouraging development has been provided by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Time was when a D.A.R. resolution demanding that the United States get out of the United Nations was as much a part of the Washington spring as the Japanese cherry blossoms along the Tidal Basin. Although reliable sources insist that the D.A.R. has not retreated, its national convention adjourned this week without saying a word about the United Nations. None of these developments two-thirds of the General Assembly.

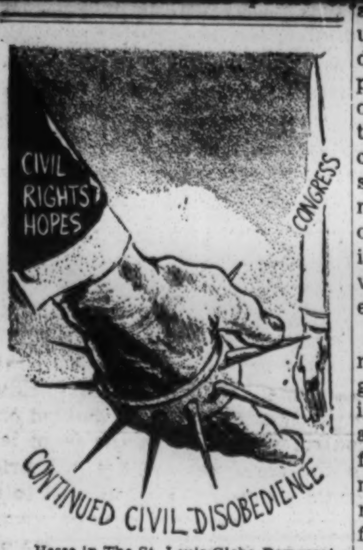
These, the smaller and poorer countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America, do not vote as a solid bloc. However, the dominant position the United States held up to 1955, when there were only 60 members, has been weakened by the influx of Asian and African members, who make up more than half the present membership of 113.

In 1950, the United States, despite bitter Soviet opposition and the unspoken opposition of the other great powers, persuaded the General Assembly to assume jurisdiction over international disputes at the expense of the Security Council. Now, however, the United States would like to see the Council resume some of its original powers.

A second preoccupation of the United States is the $100 million, half of which is owed by the Soviet Union, in unpaid assessments for the Congo and Middle Eastern Forces. Unless this problem is solved, it is extremely doubtful whether the United Nations can act with sufficient vigor if it is confront-

NO RIDERS
UN
NO RIDERS



Hesse in The St. Louis Globe-Democrat

"Doubtful way to get a handshake."

the membership as a whole can be made fully aware of their effects. This was particularly true of the equal-rights bill when the House sent it to the Senate in the form of a bipartisan draft hastily substituted for a committee product that alarmed even President Kennedy and his brother, the Attorney General, by provisions as radical as any in the Reconstruction statutes. These required the Army to enforce compliance, and installed carpet-baggers and scalawags in the seats of government in the South.

Defects Exposed

But, though the substitute was vulnerable to the critical analysis of the Senate minority that has exposed defects which the bipartisan leadership has been obliged to acknowledge, President Johnson insisted a priori that the House bill must be approved intact by the Senate. At his news conference, Feb. 29 of this year, he said he was "fully committed" to the House measure. He realized, he said, "there will be some Senators who will want to strengthen it, some who will want to weaken it, but so far as this Administration is concerned its position is firm and we stand on the House bill."

A few days later, speaking on a television program, Senator Humphrey, the Democratic floor leader of the legislation, implied some modification of this total textual commitment. He pledged that "there will be and local agencies to obtain voluntary compliance to the anti-discrimination mandate of the public-accommodations section of the measure before the Attorney General can take to the courts a case arising under the section. But this is merely a mild restraint against a spirit of excessive enforcement zeal in the Department of Justice, while leaving in full force federally-compulsive integration.

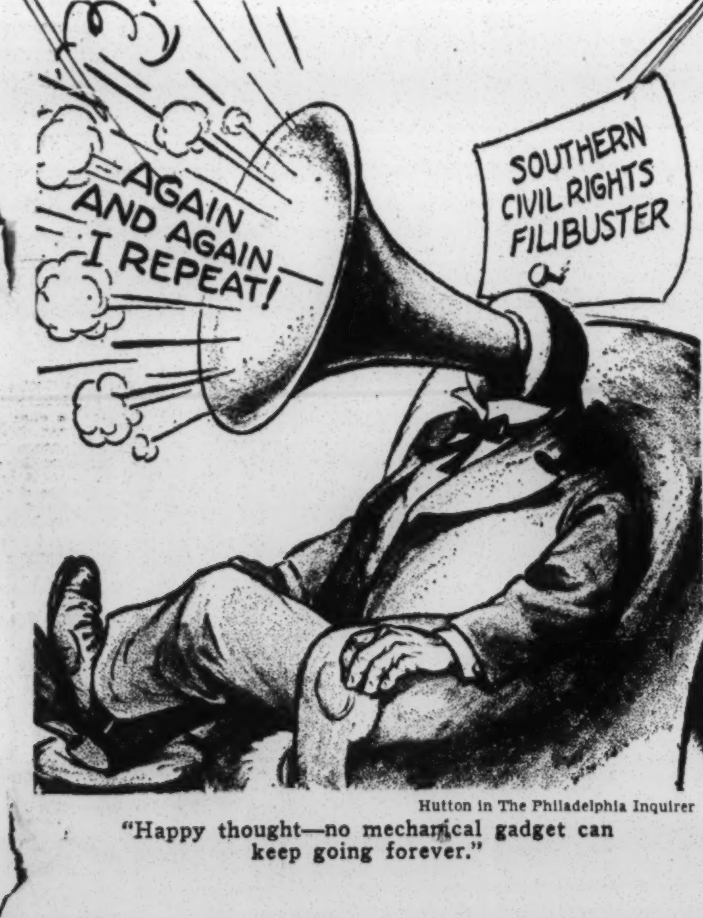
Yet the history of the amendment process is that when it begins it tends to expand. There is some favorable sentiment among non-Southern Senators for checks of a "fundamental" nature on the Federal bureaucracy established in the public-funds cutoff and the "equal employment opportunity" sections of the bill. Moreover, the clause in the House draft that authorizes employment discrimination against atheists is marked for excision as a violation of the First Amendment, a "fundamental" issue indeed.

But, though some Senate pulse-takers expect the failure of any motion for closure, with a possible consequence that the equal-rights bill will not be acted on in that body at this session of Congress, the prevailing belief is that if and when enacted the bill (A) will be compulsory and not voluntary in character; (B) it will include the paradoxical provision which sanctions discrimination in a public accommodation, whose owner lives on the premises, if it is no larger than four rooms; (C) it will invest the central Government, particularly the Attorney General, with police powers never before bestowed on a Federal officer; and (D) it will establish a vast new Federal bureaucracy.

Potent By-law

But whatever improvements of the House bill in the public interest there finally may be, and whether or not those which are "fundamental" extend to the compulsions in the areas of individual choice and property rights, none would have been possible without the Senate Rule XXII. If its only contribution is the change which would prevent the judge who cites a citizen in criminal contempt from also imposing severe penalties without reference to a jury, American democracy would owe a considerable debt to this by-law.



Hutton in The Philadelphia Inquirer

"Happy thought—no mechanical gadget can keep going forever."

The Johnson method was to set the negotiators down to the task of finding their way out of their utter tangle of disagreement, all the while subjecting them to a relentless volley of exortation and cajolery to reason together and save the public interest. Apparently the tireless energy, persistence and persuasiveness of the President were a force that could not be resisted. It may well be that the negotiating railroads and unions are as surprised as the public is that their five-year-old dispute got settled.—SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE.

We are glad to give President Johnson some of the credit for settling the five-year-old railroad work rules dispute and for ending the threat of a nation-wide strike. . . . Much credit, however, belongs to the series of mediation boards and to Congress, which last August passed a law prohibiting a strike and forcing the parties to submit the two principal issues to binding arbitration. — CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Government has called the tune for so long that the unions are unwilling to listen to anything else. It has managed to settle this particular dispute short of seizure and nationalization. But we have the unhappy feeling that those eventualities have only been postponed; government crossed the railroad industry's Rubicon long ago.—PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE.

The dramatics [of the rail dispute settlement] notwithstanding, Mr. Johnson has apparently plucked a genuine white plume to wear throughout the campaign. The agreement serves almost everybody in the nation. Both sides were driven by forces which they had generated but over which they had lost control. They were rescued by Presidential prestige.—LOS ANGELES TIMES.

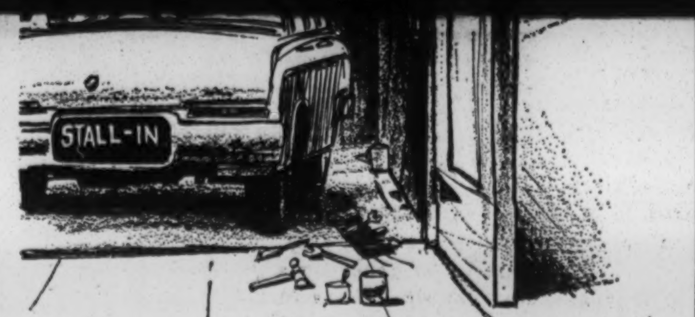
Before we applaud the supposed sudden rail harmony, it is essential to know whether even minor issues have really been settled for good or are only delayed to a more expedient political or economic period. Regardless, the real problem areas in modern railroad labor relations of diesel engines and train crew composition are still in a seemingly hopeless state of flux.—PHILIP ADLER JR., assistant professor of industrial management, Georgia Institute of Technology.

To President Johnson must go credit for persistence and effectiveness. He won a 15 day respite when a strike appeared to be certain. He set the negotiators to work and kept them at work, with the assistance of Secretary of Labor Wirtz and his most talented mediators. Johnson succeeded where both Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy had failed.—MILWAUKEE JOURNAL.

NUCLEAR CUT-BACK

In simultaneous statements President Johnson and Premier Khrushchev last week revealed mutual agreement on plans to cut back production of enriched uranium and plutonium, basic materials for nuclear bombs. The news brought varied reactions from this country's European allies. These are comments from Europe and Soviet Russia.

The hope is that each non-controversial accord may bring the crucial one a little nearer



Canfield in The Newark Evening News

"Stalled."

. . . No one can tell to what domestic pressures Mr. Khrushchev may also be subjected; but at any rate he shows himself ready to resume with Mr. Johnson the coloquy interrupted by Mr. Kennedy's death.—DAILY TELEGRAPH, London.

The explanation may indeed be that there is already enough—and more than enough—of the deadly explosive in existence. But the hope must be that the process of reduction, once begun, will continue. And agreement, once begun, may become a habit.—DAILY EXPRESS, London.

The Governments of the three nuclear powers are taking measures that although not constituting actual disarmament, are a continuation of the line adopted during the conclusion of the treaty to ban nuclear weapons tests in the three media and conform to the vital interests of the peoples of the world. . . . The radical change in the balance of world forces is in favor of Socialism . . . A realistic approach to the evaluation of the balance of forces is taking root in certain Western circles.—PRAVDA, Moscow.

After having turned into an international treaty their decision to retain their nuclear monopoly, Americans and Russians have succeeded in a new magician's trick: they announce to the astounded peoples that, disposing of stocks sufficient to destroy the planet fifty times, they generously renounce a production they no longer need. Naturally, this amounts to two unilateral decisions that are not juridically binding on third parties. . . . The farce is ugly: it will not, however, stop the nuclear equipment of Europe which is indispensible for its independence and freedom and for which France is providing the nucleus. — PHILIPPE DE SAINT-ROBERT IN COMBAT, Paris.

While the disarament conference in Geneva was marking time, secret United States-Soviet talks went on also there. We welcome their result. Nevertheless the fact remains that

IDEAS AND MEN

We do not try to mask our national disguises. We do not try to disguise our imperfections or cover up our failures. No other nation in history has done so much to correct its flaws.—PRESIDENT JOHNSON, opening the New York World's Fair.

He saw through all windows, and he had in abundance the two great gifts of humanity—the gifts of laughter and compassion.—QUEEN ELIZABETH II, in a message to the Shakespeare anniversary celebration at Stratford-on-Avon.

We feel that the West is on Pakistan's side no matter what. —MRS. INDIRA GANDHI, Prime Minister Nehru's daughter.

We must learn the difference between being feared and being respected, between being admired for our power and wealth, for our automobiles, roads, washing machines and hospitals, and being emulated for our nobility. — DR. ROSWELL P. BARNES, retiring as executive secretary in America for the World Council of Churches.

The business and educational community must be able to rely upon the political leaders to support a new educational economy. It will involve a new level of cost, but it will also involve old values, such as the simple fact that one really original mind may be worth more than ten warehouses full of new scientific products.—GOV. JOHN CONNALLY of Texas, addressing the Economic Club of New York.

The Treasury are never happy; even in Paradise they will be worried about excessive imports.—BRITAIN'S SIR ALAN HERBERT.

Answers to Questions on Page 2

1. Labor — W. Willard Wirtz; Commerce — Luther H. Hodges; H. E. W. — Anthony J. Celebrezze.

2. Wilkins — N.A.A.C.P.; Young — Urban League; Farmer — CORE; King — Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

3. (c)—a ban on orbiting nuclear weapons. The nuclear-test treaty applies only to tests above ground; there is no agreement on such an exchange of observers.

4. (b) and (c) are true, (a) is false. It is Korea that is divided at the 38th parallel. There is no formal division in Laos, although neutralist, rightist and Communist factions occupy various parts of the country.

5. Isaiah II, iv: "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

6. Michelangelo.

7. Justice Hugo L. Black.

8. Tanganyika, of which Mr .Nyerere is president, and Zanzibar, of which Karume is president.

9. Jobs. One hundred jobless men began the march in Massillon, Ohio, in 1894, under the leadership of Jacob S. Coxey, who predicted their number would reach 100,000. But only 500 got to Washington, and the effort ended in failure.

10. Crimean War (1854-56). The poet was Alfred Lord Tennyson (1809-1892).

of the West German National Defense Council.

Italy salutes with satisfaction the announcement given simultaneously by President Johnson and Prime Minister Khrushchev . . . Peace within security is the ultimate end at which Italian foreign policy is aiming and this objective can be realized only through an effective and real easing of tension that obviously should be coupled to controlled reduction of armament. —GIUSEPPE SARAGAT, Italy's Foreign Minister.

CORE FAILS AT FAIR

Demonstrations by some racial rights extremists on the opening day of the New York World's Fair failed when police arrested some 300 protesters. The incident, however, caused wide comment, some editorials condemning the extremists, others praising the peaceful Negro majority. Following are typical views from the nation.

The Negroes of New York kept their balance and sense of responsibility, and they refused to go down the deadend road of senseless violence. The victory in New York was not a victory of the white community over the Negro community; it was a victory of good sense among Americans who happen to be Negro.—PROVIDENCE JOURNAL.

The country can be much relieved over the failure of the New York stall-in to disrupt seriously the opening day at the World's Fair. But even though the demonstrators did not succeed, the effects of their effort long will be weighed seriously by thoughtful people. . . . A minority that turns to this kind of reprisal is itself employing a kind of blind and undiscriminating racial hatred. The face of racism is no prettier when it is anti-white than when it is anti-black.—WASHINGTON POST.

Smugness and gloating are as premature and uncalled for as was the hellraisers' cocksure notion that they held New York in the palm of their hands. . . . Our society's future lies not with the supercilious, beady-eyed Wallaces or the frenzied civil rights rioters, but with the millions of decent-intentioned Americans between them, and in their painful but earnest efforts to find common ground. —DETROIT NEWS.

At the World's Fair 80 nations are cooperating to show what man can accomplish when he puts his mind on getting things done. We think that only a distorted idea of the relative importance of issues could move demonstrators to fight police in the hope of keeping other people away from so beautiful a demonstration. — CHICAGO'S AMERICAN.

The failure . . . of the extremist demonstrators to achieve their blockade of the World's Fair does not remove the shadow cast by this baneful threat. It is, or was, a plan of obstruction scarcely short of anarchy. . . . But the damage it is calculated to do to the fair is minor compared with the wound it so grotesquely leaves in the very Negro movement itself. For those Negroes who have sought no more than relief from grievances they construed to be valid, it could turn out to be a severe setback.—THE [COLUMBIA, S. C.] STATE.

D.A.R. Silent on U.N.

But perhaps the most encouraging development has been provided by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Time was when a D.A.R. resolution demanding that the United States get out of the United Nations was as much a part of the Washington spring as the Japanese cherry blossoms along the Tidal Basin. Although reliable sources insist that the D.A.R. has not retreated, its national convention adjourned this week without saying a word about the United Nations.

None of these developments indicate that the United States wants to conduct foreign policy exclusively through the United Nations. The Cuba missile crisis, the most dangerous of the post-war era, was settled by an exchange of letters between President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev.

Of three subsequent agreements which involved the great powers, two were reached outside the United Nations — the nuclear test-ban treaty and the decision by Washington, Moscow and London to cut back the production of nuclear materials for weapons.

The third, the agreement not to install nuclear weapons in space vehicles, was embodied in a General Assembly resolution, adopted unanimously. But this was mainly a product of prior exchanges between Washington and Moscow.

According to the thinking in Washington, the United Nations of today can play an extremely useful role in helping find a solution for issues not directly affecting the security of the United States.

Full Role Opposed

However, there is little support for the idea that the United Nations should take over in every instance. For example, an influential sector of opinion is conscious of the all-out support that the neutralists in the organization intend to exert on behalf of the Greek Cypriotes and regrets that the Cyprus question was submitted to the Security Council.

In a speech last January, Secretary of State Rusk paid tribute to the organization's achievements but expressed concern over the fact that members with only 10 per cent of the world's population, and paying only 5 per cent of the bills, constituted ed with another crisis on the scale of the Congo.

Reidford in The Globe and Mail, Toronto

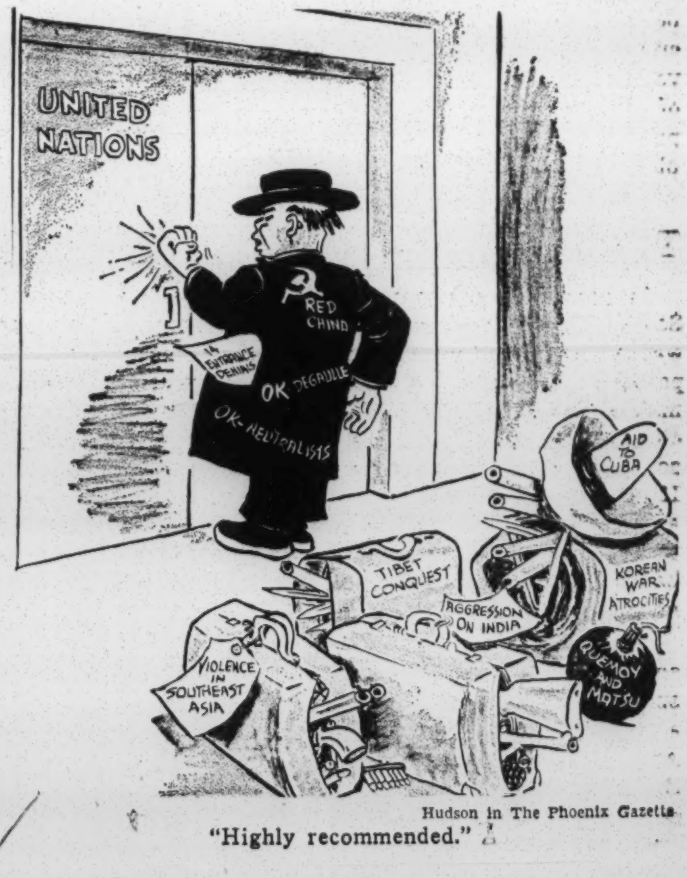
The compromise plan outlined by Adlai E. Stevenson in his recent Princeton speech would help solve both problems: The Soviet Union would pay the $8 or $9 million required to excuse it from the application of Article 19 of the United Nations Charter, but all future proposals for peace-keeping interventions would go to the Security Council in the first instance. A special scale of assessments for each such intervention would be recommended by a special Assembly committee weighted in favor of the members who pay most of the bills, including, of course, the great powers.

Article 19 denies a member a General Assembly vote if the member is in arrears for two years.

Since neither the United States nor the Soviet Union wants a head-on clash, least of all in the midst of the United States Presidential campaign, both have agreed to the postponement of the opening of the Assembly from Sept. 17 to Nov. 10, and acceptance of the delay by the membership is only a formality.

Both in Washington and the United Nations, it is agreed that by November a compromise will have been worked out that will avoid a bitter struggle over Article 19, a struggle that would wreck the present Washington-Moscow détente. But there is much more optimism in Washington than at the United Nations about the likelihood that the compromise will be on the terms outlined by Mr. Stevenson.



Hudson in The Phoenix Gazette

"Highly recommended."

JJ ✓
PAV
SB ✓

INTER-CITIZENS COMMITTEE, INC.
BOX 1443
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

RECEIVED
SEP 23

REPORT ON BIRMINGHAM SEPT. 20, 1963

DEAR FELLOW-HELPER,

Many months have passed since I wrote you about the progress of the Committee. The reason is that the work load has become so heavy, particularly since The Demonstrations last Spring, that it is impossible to keep up with all of the rights violations.

The savage, brutal, murderous, and ungodly bombing of Sixteenth Street Baptist Church on Sunday morning Sept. 14, has revealed to the whole world the evil of racism. Those few terrifying moments of the blast said what we have been trying to say to the nation for years, that there exists in Alabama the most unconscionable disregard for man and God on the part of some. If white supremacy consists in the wanton and brutal destruction of worshippers of God in the very house of worship, then I must confess that the church bombers are the most supreme murderers and cowards the world has ever seen. Only the diseased mind can aspire to reach such depths.

On the morning of the bombing I stood across the street from the church behind carbine bearing policemen and watched as the covered bodies were placed into waiting ambulances. Policemen drove a small crowd off the street. I got on a nearby porch. Women seeing the covered bodies being brought from the church cried and screamed without restraint. I could not bring my mind to believe what my eyes saw. It still seems like a tale from some distant land where people know nothing about freedom and democracy.

On Sept. 19, 1963 I sent a telegram to President Kennedy cataloging some of the horrible incidents which have afflicted and continue to afflict our city and our citizens. I share that list with you.

1. March, 1963 - a Negro home destroyed by a bomb.
2. May 11, 1963 - the A. G. Gaston Motel bombed.
3. May 11, 1963 - the home of Rev. A. D. King bombed.
4. August 14, 1963 - a tear gas bomb dropped in Loveman's Department Store following desegregation of eating facilities.
5. August 20, 1963 - the bombing of attorney Arthur Shores' home.
6. Sept. 4, 1963 - the second bombing of Arthur Shores' home, injuring his wife.
7. Sept. 7, 1963 - the fire-bombing of the home of Dr. A. G. Gaston.
8. Sept. 15, 1963 - the bombing of Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, taking the lives of four girls and injuring several.
9. June 27, 1963 - the fatal shooting of Blain Gordon Jr. (16), a mentally ill youth, by Birmingham policemen.
10. August, 1963 - the fatal shooting of David Scott by a Birmingham policeman.
11. Sept. 4, 1963 - the fatal shooting of John Coley (20) by Birmingham police following the second bombing of attorney Shores' home.
12. Sept. 15, 1963 - the fatal shooting of Johnnie Robinson (16) by Birmingham police following the bombing of Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.
13. Sept. 7, 1963 - the shooting of Charles Gray by Birmingham police.
14. Sept. 5, 1963 - the shooting of a mentally ill youth Sylvester Alexander by Birmingham police.
15. Sept. 4, 1963 - the shooting of Lyman Thomas, who was near John Coley when he was killed by Birmingham police.
16. Sept. 15, 1963 - the shooting of Billy Charles by Birmingham police following the bombing of Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.
17. Sept. 15, 1963 - the beating of Ben Bolden on Sunday night by Birmingham police.
18. Sept. 15, 1963 - the injuring of George Benjamin Sr. on Sunday night by Birmingham police.
19. Sept. 15, 1963 - the shooting in the head of Charles Lane by State Troopers.
20. Sept. 15, 1963 - the firing of 12 shots into the home of Francis Garrett by Birmingham police attempting to make people get off the street and into houses.

Your continued interest and support is again solicited.

Sincerely yours,
Rev. C. Herbert Oliver
Secretary

April 7, 1964

COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia Telephone: 523-1581

YOU ARE ALL WELCOME...Laws and customs change from day to day, sometimes from hour to hour. There are degrees of "segregation" and "desegregation"—"segregated" may mean no Negroes or it may mean Negroes and whites segregated within the same facility. It is customary to make changes in racial policies without public announcement, which is at times necessary and desirable. This does make it difficult, however, for those affected to secure accurate information. Periodically the COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA compiles a list of places which as far as we can determine, are open to all. We welcome additions and corrections. This list is accurate as of April 7, 1964, to the best of our knowledge. We have omitted those places where Negroes may have been served but where the management stated that the policy is not certain.

EATING PLACES

YWCA Cafeteria, Edgewood. & Ivy
YMCA Coffee Shop, Luckie St.
Stouffeur's, Downstairs Merchandise Mart
Top O' the Mart (Stouffeur's)
Rich's Magnolia Room and other eating places in the store
Davison's Tea Room and other eating places
Grant's
Jacob's Pharmacies (all branches)
Sears-Roebuck & Co. (all lunch counters in all stores)
H. L. Green
Kress (Broad and Peachtree)
McCrory's
Lane's Drug Stores
Franklin Simon's (lunch counters and restaurants)
Walgreen's (all have been given instructions to serve everyone)
Woolworth's
Newberry's
Emory University Food Service Center
Herren's
Yohannon's
Caruso's Italian Restaurant (Piedmont Road)
Johnny Reb's (Forsyth, W. Peachtree and Roosevelt Highway)
Crossroads (but not on Stewart Avenue)
Seven Steers (downtown -691 Peachtree St.)
Miami Buffet (downtown)
Dale's Cellar
S&W
Rex Fine Foods
All 4 Howard Johnson Restaurants
Davis Fine Doods (Luckie, Marietta, Pryor and Forsyth Streets)
Town House (Forsyth Street)
Escoe's Restaurant (2143 Peachtree Rd.)
The Golden Plam (Atlanta Americana)

Eating Places, Cont'd.

Hank and Jerry's (1006 Peachtree)
The Riviera (1630 Peachtree St.)
Dobbs House (all locations)
Shoney's Big Boy (all locations)
The Tiki
Fisherman's Wharf
Golden Goddess (Dinkler Plaza)
Red Velvet (Atlanta Americana)
Room at the Top (Atlanta Americana)
Wit's Ent
Rendezvous (Atlanta Biltmore)*
Oak Room (Piedmont)*
MOST HOTELS AND MOTELS WILL ARRANGE PRIVATE INTERRACIAL PARTIES

*Will serve Negroes who are registered guests.

HOTELS

Air Host Inn
Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel
Atlantan Hotel
Atlanta Biltmore
Atlanta Cabana
Dinkler Plaza
Holiday Inn
Hilton Inn
Howard Johnson's Motor Lodges
Peachtree Manor
Piedmont Hotel
Riviera Hotel
Marriott Motor Hotel

CULTURAL AND RECREATIONAL FACILITIES

Atlanta Art Galleries
Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Concerts
Actors Equity Production
Theater Under the Stars (at Chastain Park)
Jewish Community Center
Quaker House
Copa Atlanta
Wit's End
Atlanta Choral Guild
Atlanta City Golf Courses
Atlanta Public Library (all branches)
Decatur-DeKalb Library
All City of Atlanta owned and operated facilities
Recreational facilities operated by City of Decatur, excluding swimming pools

DOWNTOWN MOVIES

Fox
Rialto
Roxy
Rhodes
Peachtree Arts
Loew's

LEGITIMATE THEATERS

Pocket
Academy (including Shakespeare Festival)

NEIGHBORHOOD MOVIES

Gordon
Emory
Lenox Square
Cherokee
Hilan
Plaza
Atlantic
Techwood

DRIVE-INS

Bolton
Fulton Blvd.
Glenwood
Peachtree
Piedmont
South Expressway
Steward
Thunderbird
Starlight
Scott

STONE MOUNTAIN

All facilities, including Stone Acres Plantation, and Stable of Thoroughbreds (old autos)

HOSPITALS

DeKalb General, South Fulton, Kennestone and Aidmore provide separate wardd or wings for Negroes and whites. Grady's emergency clinics, ambulances and operating rooms are integrated; other services are still segregated. St. Joseph's is integrated. Emory Universty's Hospital accepts Negro patients referred by physicians who are members of the hospital staff.

CHURCHES

All Episcopal, Catholic, Unitarian-Universalists, Quaker House. Most others are open to visitors, but policies vary with individual churches.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

All colleges and universities in the Greater Atlanta area
Certain Atlanta public schools
Catholic Parochial Schools
Trinity Presbyterian School
Smith-Hughes and Carver Vocational Schools
DeKalb Area Trade School
Grady Hospital X-ray and Technical Schools

ORGANIZATIONS

Active Voters
Atlanta Association for Gifted Children
Atlanta Chapter, American Association for the United Nations
American Association of University Women
Greater Atlanta Council of Churches
League of Women Voters (of Atlanta, of DeKalb County)
Women's International League for Peace and Freedom
Democratic Party organizations of DeKalb and Fulton Counties
Republican Party organizations of DeKalb and Fulton Counties
Alcholics Anonymous
Metropolitan Atlanta Mental Health Association
Atlanta Chamber of Commerce - Junior Chamber of Commerce

EMPLOYMENT OFFICES

All locations of Georgia State Employment Service. Jobs listed in the Help Wanted ads of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION and the ATLANTA JOURNAL are not listed according to race.

TRANSPORTATION

No segregation on busses or in taxi service.

COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA
5 Forsyth Street, N . W.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

BULK RATE
U. S. POSTAGE PAID
ATLANTA,GA
PERMIT NO. 281

APRIL NEWSLETTER

Mrs. Margaret L. Leonard
40 15 Street Apt. #1
Atlanta, Ga 30309

SEE PAGE 4--MEMBERSHIP DUES FOR 1964

COUNCIL on HUMAN RELATIONS of GREATER ATLANTA

NEWSLETTER

April, 1964
5 Forsyth Street NW
Atlanta, Georgia
Telephone: 523-1581

EDITORIAL

by Eliza Paschall

"Uncertain" is still the best description of the state of desegregation in Atlanta's public accomodations, according to a survey of restaurants and lounges in Atlanta by the Council on Human Relations of Greater Atlanta made last week.

Of the 76 establishments listed in the Atlanta Convention Bureau's "Visitor's Guide" to Restaurants and Night Life in Atlanta", 28 are integrated, 28 are definitely still segregated, 10 will serve Negroes under varying conditions, three said they had no policy and did not want to be listed as integregated or segregated, and efforts to reach seven were not successful.

Among the "undecided", one restaurant replied that it will serve a Negro "sometimes if alone, usually if in integregated parties; no definite policy -- have refused and have served at different times." Another said it has served Negroes at one location and refused at another, and still another was described by the interviewer as "more cautious than against it."

Of the 15 establishments listed in the classified section of the Telephone Directory as "American Express Card Restaurants", nine have a definite policy of segregation. A total of 30 eating places located in major downtown restaurants and hotels and chain operations, plus sixteen locations in retail stores in shopping centers throughout the area, and ten lounges and night clubs are desegregated.

An up-to-date list of integrated facilities, including eating places, is available from the office of the Council.

ATLANTA SCHOOL TRANSFERS AND SUMMER SCHOOL

According to a release from the Atlanta Summit Leadership, the Atlanta Board of Education has announced that free summer schools will be available for all students who have been on double session this year. This includes students at Anderson Park, Bryant, Capitol Avenue, Clement, Cooper Street, Craddock, English Avenue, Fain, Gideons, Herndon, Hill, North Avenue, Pitts, Pryor Street, Rockdale, Stanton, Wesley, and Whiteford.

Summer school sessions will be held at the following grammar schools: Anderson Park, Capitol Avenue, Clement, English Avenue, Gideons, Herndon, Hill, Oglethorpe, Pitts, Slater, Towns, Whiteford and Wesley. Summer sessions for high school students will be held at Price, Harper, and five white schools. Transfers from one system to another are authorized by the State Board of Education with the state allotment money following the pupil, if the new Board agrees to the transfer, for one or more of these reasons -- higher accrediation, teachers with higher certification, particular courses offered, more practical and convenient transportation and better buildings, equipment, etc. Present information is that seventh graders will be able to state their preference for high schools, and that proximity to the school preferred will be a major factor in approving requests for assignment. It is probable that the Supreme Court decision will have no effect on this program. Listed are the Negro grammar schools with probable transfers to white high schools under the FEEDER system.

(Continued on Page 2)

NEGRO GRAMMAR SCHOOLS	WHITE HIGH SCHOOLS
Faith, Reynolds	Murphy
Wesley, Whitford	Bass
North Avenue	Grady
Forrest	Bass
Oliver	Therrell or Southwest
Cox	West Fulton
Thomasville	Fulton
Dobbs	Fulton
Crogman	Roosevelt
Harnett	Sylvan Hills
Gideons	Brown
Whittaker	O'keefe
English	O'keefe
Oliver	Terrell

NEW MUNICIPAL STADIUM JOBS

The Personnel Department of Thompson and Street Contractors located at 2622 Piedmont Road, NE is hiring persons interested in working on construction of the new municipal stadium. Contact Mr. Taylor at the job site at the corner of Washington and Frazier Streets near the Capitol Building.

POLITICAL ISSUES FORUM

Every Tuesday, Central YWCA, Edgewood and Ivy, 12:30-1:30 - lunch in the Library with discussants - who talk about political questions. The first meeting's discussion "PROPOSED CHANGES in ELECTION LAWS". Second subject discussed was "PROPOSED NEW CONSTITUTION". Everybody welcome! Be an informed voter.

Council on Human Relations of Greater Atlanta//NEWSLETTER

Chairman -Mr. Morgan Stanford
Executive Director-Mrs. Eliza Paschall
Editor -Mrs. Harriett Adams

UNITED NATIONS MEETING

The Atlanta Chapter of the American Association for the United Nations is presenting Mr. Charles W. Yost, second ranking member of the U.S. delegation to the UN as guest speaker. Make reservations with Mr. Grady Randolph, 873-4471 (during the day) or Mrs. Eleanor Murphy, CE 3-6200 (during the evening. Mr. Yost will speak at the AMERICANAHOTEL BALLROOM, May 4, 1964, 12:30, tickets $2.25. The Council office will make reservations for any Council member interested in attending.

"THE NEGRO AS AN AMERICAN"

"The essential question is: Are we whether we be black or white, willing to call all men brother and to match this proclamation with our acts? If the answer is yes, we will save the honor of America, which from the beginning has been tarnished by a native corrosive racism. If the answer is no, and perhaps it is, then only darkness lies ahead. But, at the moment of truth, one thing is sure, the time for self-deception and hypocrisy has passed" Excerpt from "The Negro as an American", Lyndon B. Johnson, Robert C. Weaver, Joseph P. Lyford and John Cogley.

Letters

"Orientation U.S." Program
Deputy Under Secretary of State for Administration-Washington

Dear Mrs. Paschall:

Miss Duvall of my staff has informed me of your valuable assistance in making hotel arrangements and planning a program for Ambassador Jayaratne of Ceylon and his party during their visit to Atlanta on March 16, 1964.

As you are well aware, the success of our "Orientation U.S." Program for foreign diplomats is largely due to cooperation from Americans such as you who volunteer to extend hospitality to our foreign friends regardless of the color of their skin.

Sincerely yours,
Pedro A. Sanjuan, Director
Office for Special Representational Services

"Understanding Ourselves and Others"
Young Women's Christian Association
72 Edgewood Avenue NE Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Frieds:

As ones who are interested about building understanding and establishing better communications between groups in our community, you will be interested in a CITYWIDE HIGH SCHOOL WORKSHOP scheduled for Saturday, May 9, from 11:30 am to 4 pm at the CENTRAL YWCA.

DR. MARGARET MEAD, world-famous anthropologist and author, will make the key-note address. Her talk on "UNDERSTANDING DIFFERENCES" will follow a showing of the excellent film "The High Wall", which dramatizes the general problems of prejudice as experienced by a Polish family in America.

**** **** ****

Sincerely,
Mrs. Edward L. Askren, Jr.

Understanding Ourselves and Others sponsored by YWCA Second Goal Club in cooperation with National Conference of Christians and Jews and the Council on Human Relations of Greater Atlanta. REGISTER FOR THE ENTIRE WORKSHOP AS AN INDIVIDUAL OR GROUP REPRESENTATIVE. SEND REGISTRATION WITH $1.00 FEE BY MAY 7 to YOUTH DEPARTMENT, YWCA, 72 Edgewood Avenue, NE - Atlanta, Georgia 30303. Advanced registration required - limited to those who can attend the entire workshop.

AL HORN writes: Our ANNUAL FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN has been in progress since April 15th and will continue through May 15th. It is our hope that all of you will contribute and will invite the participation of your friends. Because of our lack of funds, we were not able to retain our Assistant Director, Mr. Thomas McPherson. Only your interest, your contributions, your monthly dues can sustain the Council. There will be for many years the need of the Council - LAWS CAN CHANGE THE PATTERNS OF SEGREGATION, BUT ONLY HUMAN RELATIONS GROUPS can change the hearts of mankind.

Printings Available

These printings are available to you from the office:
Georgia Council Report on Albany
Synopsis of Civil Rights Bill
List of Desegregated Facilities in Atlanta

From Betty Vinson -

I am now working with the Partners for Progress organization and cannot do justice to the Council Newsletter. I bow out to a better editor, but this does not lessen my support in the Council.

Membership Card

If your membership card is not enclosed in this Newsletter, it means your 1964 dues are still outstanding. Kindly send them in as soon as possible

NAME ____________________

MEMBERSHIP CARD ENCLOSED____Yes____No

Dues for 1964 $________________

We Need

You to help us as observers at public meetings to report first hand - meetings of school boards, Board of Aldermen, County Commissioners, County Boards of Family and Children Services. You to visit the restaurant owners who have a stated policy of segregation and those who are uncertain. You to call employers listed by the U.S. Commerce Department holding government contracts-to procure information relative to job vacancies. You to call at health and social agencies concerning admission and employment practices. The list of public meetings, time and places is available to you in our office.

Wanted

Volunteer typists to copy research material from our office reference files.

We Can Give

Office space to a file cabinet and a strong-box. If you have seen any or know of any file-cabinets or strong boxes who do not have an office, we will give to them rent free for as long as they wish a nice location in our office!

> "Isn't this the most fascinating country in the world? Where else would I have to ride on the back of the bus, have a choice of going to the worst schools, eating in the worst restaurants, living in the worst neighborhoods - and average $5,000 a week just talking about it?"
>
> Dick Gregory
> From Back of the Bus - Avon Books

FEATURE PRESS SERVICE

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, 156 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 10, N.Y.

ERNEST ANGELL
Chairman
Board of Directors

EDWARD J. ENNIS
OSMOND K. FRAENKEL
General Counsel

JOHN de J. PEMBERTON, JR.
Executive Director

ORegon 5-5990

Alan Reitman, Associate Director
in Charge of Public Relations

WEEKLY BULLETIN #2201

May 11, 1964

ACLU BACKS BROAD JURY TRIAL RIGHT IN CRIMINAL CONTEMPT CASES

The American Civil Liberties Union called last week for federal legislation guaranteeing a jury trial for all defendants charged with criminal contempt but said that if such a law could not be enacted it would support the Dirksen-Mansfield amendment to the civil rights bill which offers a limited right of jury trial.

The Dirksen-Mansfield amendment, , which has become one of the major issues around which the civil rights debate in the Senate is focussing, provides the accused in any criminal contempt proceeding with a jury trial at the judge's discretion. But if the charge is heard without a jury the fine to be paid and the sentence to be served cannot exceed $300 or 30 days in jail.

The Civil Liberties Union, in a letter written by the group's executive director, John de J. Pemberton, Jr., to the Senate Democratic and Republican leaders who are directing the civil rights debate, said: "While the Dirksen-Mansfield amendment is not as sweeping as the broader jury trial guarantee we urge, it establishes a good measure of protection against arbitrary judicial behavior, particularly where the penalties and sentences may be severe."

The ACLU letter was written to Senators Mike Mansfield and Everett M. Dirksen, Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, and Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Thomas H. Kuchel, Democratic and Republic floor managers of the civil rights bill.

The civil liberties organization noted that it champions the right of jury trial in criminal contempt cases as a basic civil liberty and had filed a friend of the court brief arguing this point in the United States Supreme Court in the key, Barnett case. This case concerned a criminal contempt charge against the then Mississippi Governor, Ross Barnett, who defied a federal court order to admit James Meredith in the University of Mississippi. The Supreme Court on April 6 rejected Barnett's plea that he was entitled to a jury trial, but pointed out that "punishment by summary trial without a jury would be constitutionally limited to that penalty provided for petty offenses."

In urging the Congress to adopt broad legislation assuring jury trials in all criminal contempt cases, the ACLU said it would exclude only contempts committed in the presence of the court. "Since we regard the guarantee of a jury trial as such an integral element of our entire civil liberties structure, we believe it should be applied not only to one area but should be recognized as a fundamental safeguard whereever a criminal contempt charge occurs. The exception we have noted recognizes the necessary judicial power to deal immediately with contumacious behavior that may affect the fair and orderly process of a trial."

The ACLU letter also recognized the distinction the Supreme Court drew in the Barnett case concerning cases where the punishment would be minor. It said: "In considering criminal contempt legislation, should Congress decide to set up categories of contempts, with scales of punishment for these categories, we would not oppose the denial of a jury trial in those categories where the punishment to be imposed would classify the offenses as minor. This would be so, at least, as long as practice in the trial of statutory criminal offenses recognizes a distinction between minor and major offenses in affording a right of jury trial. This distinction, in the trial of criminal contempts as well as statutory crimes, would not burden the court while preserving the right of jury trial for those kinds of cases which subject the individual to possibly heavy penalties."

LM - rec 3
WB ✓ - rec 3
✓ J ✓ ML

NEWS FROM

NAACP

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE

SB ✓

20 WEST 40TH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10018
BRYANT 9-1400

ROY WILKINS
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

HENRY LEE MOON
DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

FOR RELEASE: UPON RECEIPT

May 15, 1964

GOLDWATER'S RIGHTS STAND CHALLENGED BY ROY WILKINS

NEW YORK. — Senator Barry Goldwater's states' rights position grants "immunity to ... the use of the cattle prods and shotguns of Alabama state troopers, the armored tank and dogs and fire hoses of Birmingham police, the bomb murderers of little children in church in Alabama and the assassins in Mississippi," NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins charges in a telegram to the Arizona Senator.

The wire, dispatched May 13, challenges statements made the previous night by the leading contender for the Republican presidential nomination at a Madison Square Garden rally here.

"Those of your party members in the Senate who have been hair-splitting and fence sitting," Mr. Wilkins says, "might well join Representative William McCulloch and the 137 other House Republicans who voted for the civil rights bill and thus help other Republican Senators who are providing leadership toward the responsibility and common sense you say you covet."

The complete text of the telegram follows:

> YOUR DECLARATION IN NEW YORK SPEECH MAY 12 THAT ELECTION OF YOUR PARTY TO POWER WOULD COOL THE FIRES OF RACIAL STRIFE IGNORES THAT THAT STRIFE HAS GROWN OUT OF THE REFUSAL OF CERTAIN STATES TO INITIATE CORRECTIVE MEASURES THEMSELVES OR TO PERMIT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO PROTECT THE CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS OF UNITED STATES CITIZENS RESIDING WITHIN THEIR BOUNDARIES.
>
> THE HISTORY ON THIS ISSUE IS CLEAR AND IS WRITTEN IN BLOOD, ALL THE WAY FROM THE CIVIL WAR TO THE ASSASSINATION OF MEDGAR EVERS IN JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI, LAST JUNE 12. YOUR RECORD IS CLEAR ALSO. YOU HAVE STATED REPEATEDLY THAT YOU BELIEVE IN LEAVING CIVIL RIGHTS MATTERS TO THE STATES.
>
> REGARDLESS OF HOW YOU RATIONALIZE YOUR POSITION YOU GRANT IMMUNITY TO, IF YOU DO NOT AFFIRMATIVELY SUPPORT, THE USE OF THE CATTLE PRODS AND SHOTGUNS OF ALABAMA STATE TROOPERS, THE ARMORED TANK AND DOGS AND FIRE HOSES OF BIRMINGHAM POLICE, THE BOMB MURDERERS OF LITTLE CHILDREN IN CHURCH IN ALABAMA AND THE ASSASSINS IN MISSISSIPPI. YOUR POSITION IS PART OF THE

COTTON BATTING COMFORT ACCORDED THIS REGIME OF BLOOD AND DEATH BY THOSE SENATORS NOW BLOCKING EVEN A VOTE ON A CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

THERE IS NO BILL PENDING IN ANY LEGISLATURE WHICH, TO USE YOUR COMPLETELY MISLEADING LANGUAGE, SEEKS TO FORCE ANYONE TO LIKE ANYONE ELSE. THE PENDING CIVIL RIGHTS BILL SEEKS TO SECURE THE ELEMENTARY RIGHTS TO WHICH EVERY AMERICAN CITIZEN IS ENTITLED WHETHER ANYONE LOVES HIM OR NOT.

YOU AND YOUR SUPPORTERS CAN CONTINUE TO PLAY POLITICS WITH THIS QUESTION IN WHICH IS WRAPPED LITERALLY THE PSYCHOLOGICAL AND PHYSICAL LIFE AND DEATH OF TWENTY MILLIONS OF AMERICANS WHO FOR MORE THAN THREE HUNDRED YEARS HAVE GIVEN THEIR COUNTRY THEIR LIFE'S BLOOD. IN RETURN THEY HAVE HAD THEIR MANHOOD RIGHTS DOLED OUT BY THE TEASPOONFUL. THE TIME HAS ARRIVED FOR THE ENDING OF ALL THAT. THE ROOT CAUSES ARE KNOWN. THE PREACHERS OF PATIENCE AND PATERNALISM ARE KNOWN. THE MACHINERY OF OPPRESSION, SUCH AS THE SENATE FILIBUSTER, IS NAKEDLY EXPOSED. NEGRO CITIZENS WILL NOT RETURN TO THIS 1900 LIFE IN 1964.

IF THEIR PLEAS CONTINUE TO BE MET WITH SOPHISTRY AND ANTEBELLUM ORATORY THERE WILL CERTAINLY BE VIOLENCE IN THE STREETS AND ELSEWHERE. THERE IS NOTHING LEFT. THERE IS NO PLACE TO TURN. SUCH PERSONS AS MAY WANT TO SEE GOVERNMENT MOVE ARE BLOCKED BY THE IGNORANT, THE CUNNING AND THE STUBBORN. THUS THE NEGRO IS FORCED BACK UPON HIS OWN RESOURCES. IN SUCH A STRUGGLE HE KNOWS THAT HE WILL BE AT A NUMERICAL DISADVANTAGE, BUT HE REASONS THAT HE IS ALREADY LOSING AND BEING SPAT UPON TO BOOT.

WE CAN AGREE WITH ONLY ONE PART OF ONE SENTENCE IN YOUR ENTIRE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN SPEECH QUOTE THAT EVERY AMERICAN, REGARDLESS OF HIS RACE OR CREED, WILL COME TO HIS SENSES IN TIME TO RESTORE SOME COMMON SENSE AND DECENCY TO THIS SITUATION UNQUOTE. THAT COMMON SENSE WOULD INCLUDE, OF COURSE, HAVING THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ACT IN ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND SIMILAR STATES AS WELL AS IN VIET NAM. THOSE OF YOUR PARTY MEMBERS IN THE SENATE WHO HAVE BEEN HAIR-SPLITTING AND FENCE SITTING MIGHT WELL JOIN REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM MC CULLOCH AND THE 137 OTHER HOUSE REPUBLICANS WHO VOTED FOR THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL AND THUS HELP OTHER REPUBLICAN SENATORS WHO ARE PROVIDING LEADERSHIP TOWARD THE RESPONSIBILITY AND COMMON SENSE YOU SAY YOU COVET.

NAACP CONVENTION TO FEATURE WILKINS AS KEYNOTE SPEAKER

May 15, 1964

NEW YORK. — NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins will deliver the keynote address at the Association's 55th annual convention in Washington, D.C., June 22 to June 27, it was announced this week.

Mr. Wilkins will speak at the Metropolitan A.M.E. Church where all the convention mass meetings are scheduled.

More than 2,000 delegates are expected to converge on Washington from the Association's 1,725 units to make it one of the largest conventions in the history of the Association.

Major emphasis at this year's convention will focus on the poverty program and how NAACP units can best aid the federal government in eliminating this pressing social problem. Top experts in the field will spend an entire day discussing President Johnson's program for raising the economic level of the millions of deprived people in the nation.

Also on the agenda are workshops to review NAACP programming in the areas of political action, with primary emphasis on voter registration and lobbying for civil rights legislation, employment and school desegregation.

NAACP ASKS MEANY TO END WHITE PLUMBERS' WALKOUT

May 15, 1964

NEW YORK. — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has called upon George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations to institute "stern measures to end racist exhibition" by white plumbers who walked off a job in New York City when a Negro and three Puerto Rican plumbers were hired by the contractor.

In a telegram to the labor chief, dated May 8, NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins cited the civil rights commitments of Mr. Meany and of the AFL-CIO. He also pointed out that the offending Local 2 is Mr. Meany's own union.

The white plumbers walked off the $25 million construction job in the Bronx on April 30. They said they would not work with the newcomers because they didn't belong to the union. However, the Puerto Ricans and the Negro had been denied union membership although qualified plumbers.

The continuing refusal of the white plumbers to work with the four minority group workers, Mr. Wilkins told Mr. Meany, "is naked racism in open defiance of AFL-CIO policy and of your own declarations calling for equality of rights and opportunities. This disgraceful spectacle of racial intolerance reflects not only upon the labor movement but also upon our national prestige and leadership of the free world.

"National Association for the Advancement of Colored People believes that situation calls for stern measures to end racist exhibition by members of Local 2. We urge you to take such steps and to condemn publicly the bigotry and defiance of the members of Local 2 involved in the walkout."

Meanwhile, the downtown offices of the local were picketed by Bronx NAACP members under the leadership of Bernard Jackson, president of the branch.

WILKINS WARNS SENATORS AGAINST DILUTED BILL

May 15, 1964

NEW YORK. — NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins warned the U.S. Senate that dilutions and restrictions of the civil rights bill would force the Negro population "to act in behalf of its own dignity in each locality in such ways as may seem effective to aggrieved local groups and to the leadership."

In telegrams to Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Thomas H. Kuchel, Democratic and Republican leaders working for passage of the bill now lagging in the Senate, Mr. Wilkins reported that proposals to weaken "jurisdiction and action by [the] Federal Government has aroused sharp and cynical resentment in [the] Negro community."

The full text of Mr. Wilkins' telegram follows:

> GRATIFIED YOUR CONTINUED STAND AGAINST AMENDMENT PROPOSALS WHICH WOULD RENDER CIVIL RIGHTS BILL LESS EFFECTIVE. BELIEVE YOU WOULD WANT TO KNOW REPORTED PROPOSAL FOR ONE OR MORE TITLES OF BILL WHICH DILUTES, DELAYS OR RESTRICTS JURISDICTION AND ACTION BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS AROUSED SHARP AND CYNICAL RESENTMENT IN NEGRO COMMUNITY. THE FEELING IS THAT IF THIS IS TRULY FEDERAL LEGISLATION SEEKING TO PROTECT FEDERAL CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS THEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT MUST BE EMPOWERED TO ACT PROMPTLY IN VIOLATIONS. ANY BUT THE MEREST CEREMONIAL BOWS TO THE STATES WILL PERPETUATE THE VERY SYSTEM OF SEGREGATION AND DEPRIVATION THEY HAVE MAINTAINED FOR A HUNDRED YEARS. IT WILL CRUELLY DISAPPOINT MILLIONS OF NEGRO AMERICANS.
>
> IF ONLY PATTERNS OF SEGREGATION ARE TO ENGAGE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THESE TO BE ESTABLISHED ONLY AFTER TORTUOUS SURVEY AND COURT DETERMINATION, THEN THE DESPAIRING NEGRO POPULATION WILL HAVE NO CHOICE BUT TO ACT IN BEHALF OF ITS OWN DIGNITY IN EACH LOCALITY IN SUCH WAYS AS MAY SEEM EFFECTIVE TO AGGRIEVED LOCAL GROUPS AND TO THEIR LEADERSHIP. NOW IS THE TIME FOR FORTHRIGHT FEDERAL ACTION. IT CANNOT BE HALFWAY ELSE MANY YEARS OF TENSION AND ABRASIVE RACIAL RELATIONS LIE AHEAD.

****

NEGRO HEROES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

A Weekly Feature By

NAACP

****

OLIVER CROMWELL

As Thomas Paine, with his celebrated pamphlet Common Sense (January 1776), had aroused the American people to declare their Independence on July 4, 1776, similarly he was to rally George Washington's soldiers for the New Jersey campaign. Paine had come to the attention of American patriots through his initial writing in this country, an anti-slavery work.

At Newark, Paine wrote the first of his Crisis papers. Published on December 19, 1776, it blared forth: "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph."

Among the patriots who did not shrink from the service of their country, but who stayed with Washington's dwindling army, was Oliver Cromwell. He was one of the soldiers selected to cross the Delaware River on Christmas night of 1776 to surprise and take the British garrison at Trenton, New Jersey.

Cromwell was born in Columbus, Burlington County, New Jersey, May 24, 1753. It is not definitely known, but it is believed that Cromwell was never a slave. He enlisted in the Second New Jersey Regiment under the command of Colonel Israel Shreve. Serving for nine years and six months, Cromwell was one of the war's few long-term soldiers. He saw action at the Battles of Trenton (1776), Princeton (1777), Brandywine (1777), Monmouth (1778), and Yorktown (1781). It was at Yorktown, as he often told his friends and admirers, that he personally witnessed the war's last casualty.

In addition to other recognitions for his long and honored military service, Cromwell also received a Federal Government pension of $96.00 a year. A farmer by occupation, he lived to be 100 years old. Cromwell died in Columbus, New Jersey, on January 24, 1853, leaving six children.

As Cromwell had crossed the Delaware River on Christmas night in the year of this Nation's Independence to participate in the stunning victory at Trenton, a few days later he crossed the river again into New Jersey with Washington's brave but desperate army. This latter crossing culminated in another American upset victory at Princeton on January 3, 1777. The Battle of Princeton cleared western New Jersey of British troops and stalled their advance on Philadelphia.

A student of the Revolutionary War has noted: "Independence was established in the present [New Jersey] campaign — in the year of its declaration; and more than to any others we owe this political privilege to the men who fought from Long Island to Princeton."

program highlights

GEORGIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS - 41 EXCHANGE PLACE, ATLANTA, GEORGIA

May, 1964

TEN YEARS LATER

Ten years after the 1954 Supreme Court Decision on education, finds Georgia with token integration of public schools. After long and envolved court cases, Atlanta now has 185 Negroes in formerly white schools, out of a total of about 100,000 students. Athens with 7, Savannah 19, and Brunswick 6, makes a total of 185 in Georgia or about .01% of the school population. The majority of the students have done well, several receiving high honors.

Ten Georgia Colleges enrolled approximately 36 students during 1963 - 1964.

What will next year bring?

A federal district court ordered Bibb County to desegregate next September under a grade-a-year plan suggested by the board of education. A similar plan was approved by a court for Muscogee County. Four Negroes have been accepted for enrollment in all white schools in Columbus. A fifteen day period in February was the only opportunity given the students to transfer.

Albany, scene of past racial trouble, registered 81 Negroes to enter first and second grades in white schools this fall. Student assignment will be made on the basis of proximity to the school, student capacity and availability of transportation facilities.

Desegregation methods are being studied by a committee of the Richmond County (Augusta) Board of Education.

A federal appellate court heard arguments on whether desegregation should be speeded up in Chatham and Glynn counties. The NAACP lawyers asked for complete desegregation of the Glynn County system and desegregation of the first four grades in Chatham County plus two a year thereafter. No decision has been rendered.

If it takes Georgia 10 years to achieve .01% desegregation, how many years will pass before the supreme court decision is enforced in Georgia?

SCLC
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

Newsletter

Volume II October - November Number 9

INSIDE THIS ISSUE

Editorial .... Page 4
Sarah Patton Boyle ...... Page 5
Dr. King Writes .... Page 7
Ed Clayton .... Page 5
Convention Photos ..... Page 6
New SCLC Dept. .... Page 8
The War on Poverty .... Page 12

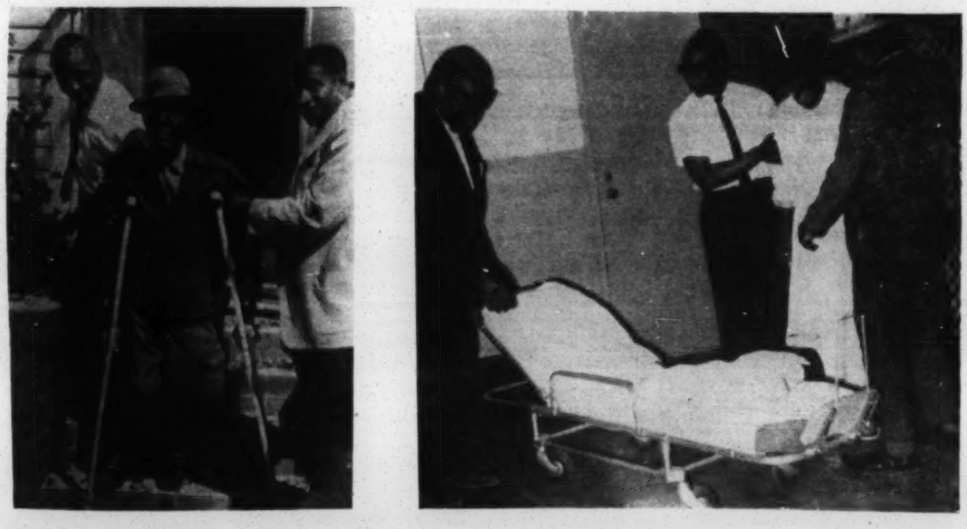
Dr. King To Receive Nobel Prize In Oslo, Norway December 10



AILING AND CRIPPLED GO TO POLLS—In Macon, Georgia, the determination of Negroes to vote was exemplified by George Jones (on crutches, left) and Mrs. Rose Roberts (right photo), who was carried to the polls on a stretcher. SCLC field staffer Willie Bolden (at left of left photo) helped direct voting drive that brought Macon Negroes out in record numbers.

SCLC Puts Might Of It s Organization Against "Goldwaterism" To Aid In Win

By Hosea Williams

In one of the most determined all-out voter drives, SCLC fused the full force of its organizational might against "Goldwaterism" in the November Presidential election and waged such an effective campaign that even the bedridden in many areas went to the polls on stretchers to cast their vote in the landslide Johnson victory.

Hosea L. Williams, SCLC's Director of Voter Registration, said: "it took 44 full time staff members working night and day and more than $10,000, but we turned out the largest percentage of Negro voters in the history of America."

SCLC coordinated its South-wide Get-Out-The-Vote Campaign through its Affiliates, Adult Citizenship Schools, Active Voter Registration organizations and bi-partisan and non-partisan political organizations. Dr. King requested 2,800 different community organizations across the Southland to join SCLC in its Southwide Get-Out-The-Vote Campaign, and 2,363 organizations responded favorably.

(Continued on Page 2)

SCLC 8th Convention In Savannah, Ga. Is Success Despite Rain

Despite a sudden rainstorm that forced cancellation of a scheduled civil rights mass rally at Savannah, Georgia's Grayson Stadium, SCLC was

(Continued on Page 3)

Parents, Staff Members To Witness Ceremonies

"It was almost like a dream. For a moment I was really feeling like I was dreaming. Then I realized I was not dreaming . . ."

This was the reaction of SCLC President Martin Luther King, Jr. from his hospital bed at Atlanta's St. Joseph Infirmary on Oct. 14 when he received the news that he just had been awarded the 1964 Nobel Prize For Peace. It is the world's greatest honor that man can bestow upon man, and Dr. King, at 35, became the youngest person ever to receive it as well as the 12th American and the third man of color in history. The other two were United Nations Undersecretary Ralph Bunche (1950), and South African Nationalist leader Albert John Luthuli (1960).

Gives Prize Money To Movement

The coveted prize, which carries with it a cash gift of $54,600 tax-free, was created as one among five such annual awards by 19th century Swedish Inventor Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite, who at his death bequeathed $9 million for the perpetuation of the honors.

Told of the cash award, Dr. King immediately let it be known that the entire

(Continued on Page 3)

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Getting Out The Vote—People To People

Dr. King Tours Across Nation To Defeat 'Goldwaterism'

ADMONISHING VOTERS—On whirlwind tour across nation to get out the vote against "Goldwaterism," Dr. King points finger to emphasize message.

IN BALTIMORE—A huge welcome, like the one above in Baltimore, greeted Dr. King at every stop of the tour. Effectiveness of tour was evident in overwhelming Negro vote for President Johnson and defeat of Goldwater.

SCLC PUTS MIGHT

(Continued from Page 1)

The South-wide Campaign was launched by SCLC by sending out in full force its army of civil rights mass meeting speakers. Within two weeks they spoke at 242 mass rallies, reaching and inspiring more than 200,000 campaign workers across the South.

The program kept SCLC's printing department operating day and night for two weeks. More than 500,000 pieces of literature were mailed out to the 2,363 participating organizations. The material included two brochures (How To Conduct An Effetive Get-Out-The-Vote Campaign and Vote For What You Need.) A kit containing leaflets for blanketing each community the night before election, a "citizenship sermon" for local ministers, handbills on how to promote effective mass meeting and handbills on how to promote political awareness were also mailed out. Audio Visual aid played a big part in making the Campaign a great success. Many citizenship movies were shown south-wide. The movies, which portrayed the Savannah Movement, SCLC's Affiliate of the year for 1964, was the most effective.

ANCIENT RUINS OF ROME—SCLC Treasurer Ralph D. Abernathy is shown above amidst the ancient ruins of the Coliseum in Rome, Italy, where thousands of early Christians were put to death for their religious beliefs. The photo was made on Sept. 16, the day before Dr. Abernathy and Dr. King had an audience with Pope Paul VI.

Concentrated In Three States

SCLC concentrated the major portion of its full time staff in Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama. The South Carolina campaign was coordinated by The Rev. C. T. Vivian. Rev. James Bevel directed the Alabama program.

In Georgia, three to five full time staff members were assigned to each of the U. S. Congressional Districts. Each District had a local coordinator. The coordinators consisted of the top flight voter registration experts from each District. Each Coordinator used a SCLC staffer as director.

Georgia witnessed its largest (both in number and percentage) Negro vote in history. Although Goldwater carried the state, the Negro vote defeated a great number of Republican candidates who tried desperately to ride into office on Goldwater's coat tail. At predominantly Negro polling places lines were stacked up two blocks long when the polls opened. Several reports came in from all around the state that similar situations remained throughout election day and on into the night when the polls were closed.

Negro Vote Doubled

The effectivess of the Get-Out-The-Vote efforts can be seen by contrasting the 1960 and 1964 campaigns in Columbia, South Carolina's 9th Ward, where the late President Kennedy received 1,112 votes to Nixon's 280. Within four years the Democratic Presidential ticket support almost doubled. President Johnson received 2,203 votes to Goldwater's 55.

The Negro turnout was just as effectively covered by the hard-working SCLC crew. In Richland County's rural Gadsden precinct, in South Carolina, the influence of newly-registered Negro voters was also demonstrated. The count there was 301 for Johnson and 21 for Barry Goldwater. Four years ago that same precinct gave Kennedy only 64 votes to 30 for Nixon.

The great SCLC Voter Registration Drive showed up in heroic ways. Mr. Hope Williams, formerly of SCLC's Citizenship School program, registered 800 Negroes in Calhoun County in South Carolina. This year's election was the first time Negroes had the opportunity to vote in any sizeable numbers in that county since Reconstruction. A total of 729 voted.

Line Circled Block

In one Columbia precinct Negroes stood three abreast in a line circling a city block to vote. In Charleston's Ward 9 the vote was 781 for Johnson and 30 for Goldwater. In Charleston 12th Ward, First precinct, there are 1,469 white voters and 1,469 Negro voters. The final vote was 1,180 for Johnson and 833 for Goldwater.

"The election helped Negroes to become aware of more organization and less separate entities. The kind of organization and enthusiasm the Republicans put forth challenges us as Negroes to gird our loins now for 1966. We must then do a mammoth job with finance, hard work and spirit," said Mrs. Septima Clark, evaluating the election.

From The Pages of Negro History

The biggest slave-trading American colonies were not Southern, but Northern—Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island.

AT BERLIN FESTIVAL—Invited to deliver the principle address at the opening of the annual West Berlin Festival on Sept. 11, SCLC's Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. is shown with West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt, who extended the invitation. Dr. King later spoke before 20,000 at the Waldbuhne amphitheater, and before standing-room only crowd at Marienkirche, Berlin's oldest church. Also while behind "Iron Curtain," he delivered a sermon at Sophienkirche. At Berlin's East-West border, Dr. King and party were admitted without passports, the first known such entry on record. They had forgotten to bring them, but were permitted to enter when an East Berlin official recognized Dr. King from having seen him on television.

SCLC CONVENTION

(Continued from Page 1)

able to conclude its Eighth Annual Convention in this port city and count it among the most successful in recent years. The torrential downpour struck with such sudden force the night of Oct. 2 that the anticipated crowd of some 5,000 had to be re-directed by radio bulletins to St. Paul C.M.E. Church to hear the "Freedom" Message from Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

The rally was the second of two such scheduled meetings during the four-day convention (Sept. 29—Oct. 2), the first of which drew a near-capacity crowd at the First African Baptist Church on Sept. 29 to hear addresses by A. Phillip Randolph and James Farmer, two foremost civil rights leaders.

Theme Is 'New Directions'

Theme of this year's convention, coordinated by SCLC's Director of Affiliates C. T. Vivian, was: "New Directions In Nonviolence." Host for the meet was the Chatham County Crusade For Voters, an SCLC affiliate, whose president is SCLC Voter Registration Director Hosea Williams.

A spirited convention from the opening session and the keynote address by SCLC Second Vice-President Joseph E. Lowery of Birmignham, the four-day meet saw intense interest in panel discussions and workshop groups centering around the "New Directions" theme of the convention. Such participants as Bayard Rustin of the War Resistor's League, New York; Harry Golden, Editor of the Carolina Israelite and others contributed much in the way of interpretive thought toward projecting the future course of the civil rights movement.

As was true with last year's convention in Richmond, this year's annual "Freedom Banquet," held at the desegregated DeSoto Hotel, was a complete sell-out. More than 650 guests crowded into the ballroom banquet hall to hear a dinner speech by Former Brooklyn Dodger Baseball star Jackie Robinson and dine on Rock Cornish Hen.

Awards Given

Among other highlights of the successful meeting, awards were given to Dr. Aaron Henry of Mississippi; Mrs. Septima Clark, SCLC Supervisor of Teacher Training; and the Chatham County Crusade For Voters. Dr. Henry, an SCLC Board Member and head of Mississippi's Freedom Party," received the Rosa Parks Award, SCLC's highest citation and one given annually to the person who has made the most creative and significant contribution to the nonviolent movement.

Mrs. Clark, a former school teacher and principle for many years, was cited for her meritorious contribution to the freedom struggle. The Catham County Crusade For Voters was given the award of "Affiliate Of The Year."

A special award was also given to Wyatt Tee Walker, former Executive Assistant to Dr. King, now on leave with the Negro Heritage Library. He was cited for his contribution to the development and growth of SCLC.

Newsletter Now Being Printed In SCLC Office

For the first time in the three-year history of the SCLC Newsletter, this edition was printed on presses in the printing department of the Atlanta-based home office.

The move was necessitated by increasing production costs and the great demand for the monthly official SCLC organ, which first began publishing in 1961 as a four page publication. It is hoped that with the reduction in printing costs, the Newsletter will continue to be distributed free to SCLC's contributors and supporters.

NOBEL PRIZE

(Continued from Page 1)

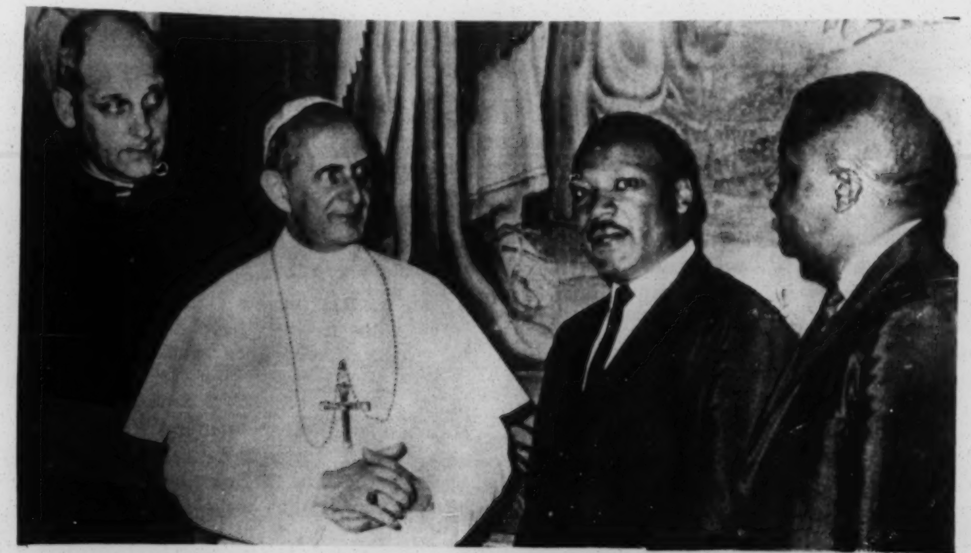
sum would be given to the civil rights movement.

Meanwhile, as the noted civil rights leader prepared to depart for Oslo, Norway and Stockholm, Sweden to receive the award in official ceremonies on Dec. 10, scores of well-wishers, friends and staff members began making plans to be on hand for the celebrated occasion. So great was the rejoicing at news of the Prize that many staff members who have been with him almost since the days of the Montgomery Bus Boycott promptly set out to secure funds to finance their trips, some even negotiating loans to pay their way abroad. In some instances, churches were getting up purses to help with the expenses of some SCLC staffers.

Officially, only Dr. King and his wife, Coretta, will make the trip at the expense of the Norwegian government. Others will be privately financed, either through churches or purses contributed by friends.

"I think it is wonderful that so many wish to witness the awarding of this great honor," Dr. King said, "but I do want to make it understood that not a penny of the prize money will be spent on travel. There is a great need for this money in the civil rights movement for the work we are doing all over the South, and that's where we intend that it be put to use."

Among those expected to make the trip with Dr. King, in addition to Mrs. King, are: Rev. and Mrs. Martin Luther King, Sr.; SCLC treasurer Ralph Abernathy and his wife, Juanita; Executive Director Andrew Young; Bernard Lee, special aide to Dr. King; Miss Dora McDonald, secretary to Dr. King; Mrs. Lillie M. Hunter, SCLC Bookkeeper, who has been with the organization since Montgomery; Mrs. Dorothy Cotton, Citizenship School Director; and Miss Carole Hoover, Director of Promotions.



AN AUDIENCE WITH POPE—On a visit to Europe for September speaking engagements, SCLC President Martin Luther King, Jr. and Treasurer Ralph Abernathy had a 25-minute audience with Pope Paul VI (2nd from left) on Sept. 17 in the Vatican, Rome Italy. At right is Monseigneur Paul Marcinkus of Chicago, who was interpreter for the group. The Pope said he, personally, as well as the Catholic Church is in sympathy with the Freedom Movement and that he is "a friend of the Negro people."

SCLC Newsletter

Publisher, SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

334 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
Phone: 522-1420

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., President

F. L. SHUTTLESWORTH, Secretary

RALPH D. ABERNATHY, Treasurer

ANDREW YOUNG, Executive Assistant

EDWARD T. CLAYTON, Editor

AIMS AND PURPOSES OF SCLC

1. To achieve full citizenship rights, and total integration of the Negro in American life.
2. To stimulate nonviolent direct mass action to remove the barriers of segregation and discrimination.
3. To disseminate the creative philosophy and techniques of nonviolence through local and area workshops.
4. To secure the right and unhampered use of the ballot for every citizen.
5. To reduce the cultural lag through the Citizenship Training Program.

Editorial

The President's Mandate

It is heartening to witness such an overwhelming expression of the will of the American people as was made evident on November 3 when President Johnson was reelected to the Presidency by such a great and decisive margin over Senator Barry Goldwater. It had to be thus. Any less a victory might have suggested that this nation had fallen dupe to "Goldwaterism," and would now be indecisive and unsure about solving its great national problems.

Fortunately, such was not the case. President Johnson was given an historically enormous victory, and with it a mandate of the same proportion to continue in the progressive direction his office has been pointed. There can be no mistaking in his triumphant reelection that the great swell of Negro voters in record-breaking numbers across the nation contributed immeasurably to the decisiveness of that victory. There can be no mistaking either that such a crushing defeat of "Goldwaterism" makes it crystal clear that the conscience of this nation has been reached, and that it is no longer content to exist half-free and half-oppressed.

It is indeed an awful mandate that President Johnson has been handed, and one he dutifully must accept as a challenge. He can not waiver from the course he has chosen; neither can he break faith with those allies who have demonstrated their great faith in him. It is not now enough to win the victory, but it is for the victor to remain steadfast to the faith so many Americans, black and white, have placed in him.

—ETC.

Nobel Prize Honors More Than Mere Racial Change

(Reprinted by permission from the Atlanta Constitution of October 15, 1964)

All Americans can take pride in the award of the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. of Atlanta.

His efforts to improve the lot of the American Negro could have come to naught if the American heart had not responded. He could not have moved people unless they had thought it right to be moved. So thinking, they braved the enormous difficulty of social change.

And recognizing their difficulty, his own thinking showed the bravery of understanding.

In a changing time fraught with threats of violence, he counseled peace.

Another kind of leader could have counseled violence, and had it. Many Negro leaders have been more militant, more impatient, more heedless than he. None have approximated the power of his unarmed example, among members of his own race as well as the other races of pluralistic America. The fact that he, more than any other Negro leader, best touches and moves the emotions of all Negroes is a measure of the peacefulness, steadiness and good will of his race.

Caught in the turmoil of change, many Americans have spoken of him harshly. These have not been easy days. But history will surely show the United States was fortunate to have a man of peace, not a man of violence, speaking for the Negro when this time arrived.

He has sought to unify, not to divide; to join the Negro to society, not to lead him out of it. He has trusted America and relied upon its institutions, leading not a revolution against his nation, but a demonstration of belief in it.

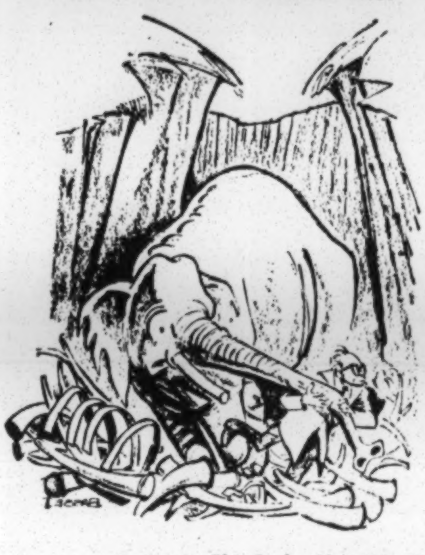
His speech last year before the Lincoln Memorial, telling " I have a dream," was a hymn of loyalty and faith in this country at a moment when others were tempted toward a dream of bitterness. When bitterness has led to Negro violence, his has been a voice raised against it, his the leadership saying no. Holding to his religion, he has moved a nation in peaceful ways, when it could have drifted, unmoved to violence, vengeance and despair.

This young man, a product of the Atlanta public schools, of Georgia heritage, and of Christian universality, has led without violence through a turbulent era and made a mark that transcends civil rights; he has shown that ways of peace are not futile, that surer factors than force do still shape human destiny.

He deserved the Nobel Peace Prize. The award of it to this American honors all Americans, for theirs was the spirit he moved.

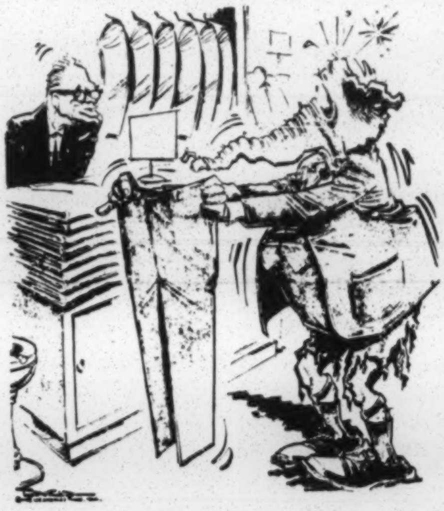
The Cartoonist's View

"Where Have You Taken Me?"



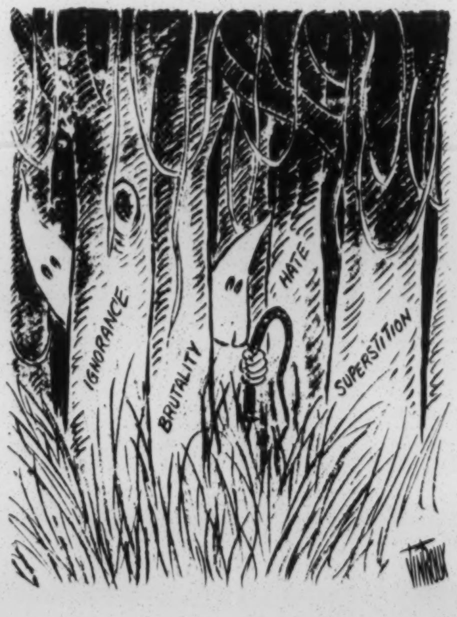
Basset In The Rocky Mountain News

"May I Help You . . . ?"



Conrad In The Los Angeles Times

American Jungle



Vinroux in The Charleston Gazette

ed clayton

Of a Jail Mate And a Nobel Prize

In the grey-dawn hours behind bars of southern jails there are often many untold dramas acted out with only the cell walk for a stage and the darting cold light of flashlights for a spotlight.

Such a stage was set for Martin Luther King, Jr. one early morning in 1960 while he was serving an eight-day sentence in Atlanta. He had been arrested while driving home author Lillian Smith (Strange Fruit) in a borrowed car from a friend whose license plates had expired. He already was under suspended sentence for another traffic violation in a neighboring county, and authorities there earnestly hoped for him to be arrested again. It would mean that they could seize him and he would have to serve six months at hard labor.

Thus the stage was set for one of jail's seldom told dramas.

One morning about four o'clock, as he slept on his cot, he was startled out of his sleep by the play of flashlights in his eyes.

"Get up, King, a guard ordered, prodding him in the side. There were several uniformed police officers accompanying the guard.

Placed In Chains

Martin looked at them dazedly, not knowing what to think. Then, as he raised himself in bed and finally drew himself up to full height standing, he was ordered to hold out his hands. The officers shoved him roughly, first one way and then another. There was a "click" quickly followed by another as handcuffs were snapped on. Then there was the clinking sound of a chain. Leg irons were clamped around his ankles.

Through all this a wizened little man had been watching from the cell next door, peering as best he could through the half blackness to see what was taking place.

He stretched out a black arm through the bars as Martin was being led away. In his hand was a dollar bill.

"Please take this," he pleaded. There were tears in his eyes. He had overheard Martin's wife, Coretta, asking him the day before if he had any money, and Martin had replied, "no."

"Oh, no, I couldn't take that," Martin said to his jail mate.

"Please take it," the little man urged. Tears began to glisten under the glare of flashlights on his black cheeks.

"Go on. Please take it. Here."

Martin looked at him for a moment, then reached out and took the money. "Thank you, and God bless you," he said.

"Come on boy," the guard barked. And he was led away.

Kennedy Calls

A few days later a United States Senator named John F. Kennedy, who at the time was running for President of the United States, called Mrs. King to see if she was all right, and if there was anything "I can do." Months later he became president.

Now, four years later, the man in handcuffs and leg irons has been awarded the world's highest honor—the Nobel Peace Prize. With usual humility he has declared that this honor must be shared by all who have been a part of the freedom struggle.

Surely among them must be an unknown little man who was holding an outstretched dollar bill one grey-black morning in an Atlanta jail.

For Human Beings Only

The "Danger" Of Intermarriage

By Sarah Patton Boyle

(The following is reprinted from Mrs. Boyle's new book, For Human Beings Only.)

Mrs. Boyle

Ask a tense-faced segregationist what he means by "the danger of intermarriage" and he is likely to retort, "The ultimate destruction of our country! Do you want us to become a brown nation?"

We could reply, "why not? It would save time and money now spent on getting suntanned." But as our colored population is only 10 per cent as most of its members already have noticeable amounts of Caucasian blood, even after complete amalgamation we probably still would have to resort to sunlamps and beaches for our attractive tans.

On learning this, our segregationist may cry, "when race mixing occurs, civilizations invaribly fall!"

Civilizations Do Fall

True. But of equal significance is the fact that people who move into brick houses, invariably die—all within a few decades, some within a few months! Civilizations do fall, but reputable modern historians find no connection between "race mixing" and their demise.

"Biology shows," our segregationist will declare, "that crossbreeding produces offspring inferior to those of pure racial strains."

The best reply to this fiction is to ask for one biology textbook currently used by accredited colleges that makes such a claim relative to races of man. Anthropologists inform us sharply that "pure racial strains" exist only in the imagination.' Race mixing began before the dawn of history.

'Hope I'm Dead'

"Well," the segregationist may sigh, "if intermarriage must come, I hope I'm dead when it does."

Congratulate him—he probably will be. While experts who venture prophesy on the subject disagree, the consensus seems to be that integration will not speed amalgamation much or soon . . . Even those who fear intermarriage must have little reason to use it as an argument against integration.

Indeed, some experts think that segregation more than integration leads to intermarriage. Anthropologists have estimated that about 20 thousand Negroes who are light enough to pass for white "cross over" every year to escape the handicaps of segregation. They marry unsuspecting whites.

'Horrified If They Knew'

"The irony of it," a social psychologist commented, "is that Negroes who cross over often prentend to be rabid segregationists as a safeguard against detection. The result is that they attract genuine rabid segregationists as mates—people who would be utterly horrified if they knew."

One of the logical replies to the question "Do you want your daughter to marry a Negro?" might well be "Do you want your daughter to know a Negro suitor when she sees one?"

From The Pages of Negro History

The first American woman to earn more than $1,000,000 on her own was "Madam" C. J. Walker, a St. Louis laundress, who in 1905 developed a 'hair conditioner" that created "a new world for Negro women in America."

Convention Highlights Caught By Camera

Delegates Register

Typical scene at convention headquarters in St. Paul C.M.E. Church on opening day of meet found delegates crowding registration tables to pick up credentials. Here, SCLC secretary Elizabeth Jones (standing right) assists two from Florida. Over 400 delegates were registered.

Holding Press Conferences

At press conferences during meet, newsmen were able to question principal participants for more in-depth reports. Dr. King is shown above in news conference on opening day. With him are Rev. Andrew Young and Rev. Ralph Abernathy. Below, A. Phillip Randolph (l.) and James Farmer are shown in joint news session.

Some Participating Speakers

Whether in workshops, panel discussions or public meetings, speakers were listened to intently by conventioneers. In photo at left, Harry Golden, editor of the Carolina Israelite, Charlotte, North Carolina, delivers an afternoon address. In center photo, Bayard Rustin of New York lectures on "Building Alliances" during a workshop. Right photo shows Rev. Joseph E. Lowery of Birmingham as he delivered the keynote address.

Awarded Rosa Parks Award

Honored as the person who has contributed the most in a creative way during the year to the nonviolent movement, Dr. Aaron Henry (r.) of Clarksdale, Miss., is given the Rosa Parks award, SCLC's highest honor. Making presentation are: Rev. Andrew Young, Mrs. Parks and Dr. King.

Affiliate Of The Year Award

Named this year as the outstanding SCLC Affiliate from among some 218, Savannah's Chatham County Crusade For Voters is presented a plaque by C. T. Vivian (l.), Director of Affiliates. Accepting is the group's president, Hosea Williams, now SCLC's Director of Voter Registration.

Closing Mass Rally

At convention's close, hundreds crowded into St. Paul C.M.E. Church to hear address by Dr. King after sudden downpour of rain brought a last minute cancellation of rally at Savannah's Grayson Stadium. Despite rain, church was filled to capacity after public was notified by radio bulletins.

Of The Nobel Prize

A Mighty Army Of Love

By Martin Luther King, Jr.

Martin L. King, Jr.

After many months of exhausting activity in the civil rights movement I reluctantly checked into the hospital for a rest and complete physical check-up.

The following morning I was awakened by a telephone call from my wife informing me that she had received a call from a New York television network informing her that it had been announced in Oslo, Norway, by the Norwegian Parliament that I was the recipient of the Nobel Prize for Peace for 1964.

My eyes were hardly open, and I could not be sure whether this was merely a dream or if I was hearing correctly. I was stunned at first. I had known of my nomination for this honor, but in the rush of responsibilities of a movement such as ours, one does not have time to contemplate honors, so I was quite unprepared psychologically.

But then I realized that this was no mere recognition of the contribution of one man on the stage of history. It was a testimony to the magnificent drama of the Civil Rights Movement and the thousands of actors who have played their roles extremely well. In truth it is these "noble" people who have won this Nobel Prize.

"Tired Feet For Weary Souls"

This is a prize for fifty thousand Black men and women of Montgomery who substituted tired feet for weary souls and walked for 381 days until the sagging walls of bus segregation were crushed by the battering rams of these determined souls, walking in the might and power of God. It is an award given posthumously to "Sister" Pollard of Montgomery, an 80-year-old saint who walked to work daily and proclaimed, "my feets may be tired, but my soul is restful."

This foremost of earthly honors is a tribute to students, who, in sitting-in at lunch counters, were standing up for the best of the American creed, and who forced the nation, its courts and Congress back to the wellsprings of Democracy and made possible a new level of Freedom in our society for people of color.

In the final analysis, it must be said that this Nobel Prize was won by a movement of great people, whose discipline, wise restraint, and majestic courage has led them down a nonviolent course in seeking to establish a reign of justice and a rule of love across this nation of ours.

The Herbert Lees, Fannie Lou Hamers, Medger Evers, Chaney, Goodman and Schwerner, and the thousands of children of Birmingham, Albany, St. Augustine, and Savannah who have accepted physical blows and jail, have discovered that the power of the soul is greater than the might of violence.

These unknown thousands have given this movement the international acclaim which we now receive from the Norwegian Parliament.

'A World Without Want, Without Hate'

I am sure that Count Nobel would be pleased with this mighty army of love, and I am sure that the entire world now looks to the Negro in America for leadership in the whole task of building a world without want, without hate, and where all men live together in shared opportunity and brotherhood.

The Nobel Prize for Peace places a new dimension in the Civil Rights struggle. It reminds us graphically, that the tide

(Continued on page 8)

SCLC Creates Department To Reach White Community

Harry Boyte

As a result of a continuing examination of our on-going programs, and in the search for creative response to changing moments in history, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., has announced the establishment of a new department in SCLC to be known as "OPERATION DIALOGUE."

Dr. King emphasized the commitment of the organization to this new department by issuing this statement: "We have reached the moment in our quest for freedom when it has become imperative that the total dimensions of the Civil Rights Revolution must be presented clearly to the national community. Through the dialectical method, we will seek to involve both Negro and white Americans in meaningful personal encounter wherein the complexities of our society, including Cybernation, Automation, unemployment, poverty and quality education will be explored in their more basic and unsophisticated implications."

Interpretation Of Program

In interpretation of this new program, Dr. King pointed out that many of our fellow Americans of latent good will have not found a way to participate in meaningful relationship with their neighbors, or otherwise to express themselves without fear of reprisal.

This new program is developed to bring such meaningful and creative encounters into being through leadership by members of the neighborhood groups involved.

Visits Communities

Harry G. Boyte, who was appointed Special Assistant to Dr. King in July, 1963, has been designated to direct the program. He is now engaged in visiting those communities interested in further interpretation of the program. Those groups interests in having Mr. Boyte present the program in a given community should write: OPERATION DIALOGUE, SCLC, 334 Auburn Avenue, Atlanta, Ga. 30303.

The new direction will be undertaken in many instances within the disadvantaged white communities, where there exists so little understanding of the meaning of the Civil Rights movement to the larger society.

THE MARCH ON WASHINGTON • • AUGUST 28TH 1963
WE SHALL OVERCOME!
OVERCOME!
WE SHALL OVERCOME!
WE SHALL OVERCOME!

Why Not Give An Historical ALBUM As Your Holiday Gift?

AS THE HOLIDAY SEASON FOR GIFT-GIVING APPROACHES, NO GIFT PERHAPS WILL BE MORE WELCOMED AND CHERISHED AS THIS HISTORICAL ALBUM OF THE MEMORABLE MARCH ON WASHINGTON. THIS AUTHORIZED VERSION, WHICH CONTAINS ALL OF THE SPEECHES, INCLUDING THE UNEDITED PRESENTATION OF DR. KING'S MOVING "I HAVE A DREAM" ADDRESS, IS NOW AVAILABLE IN LIMITED QUANTITIES AT SCLC AT THE SPECIAL PRICE OF $3.00. IT ALSO INCLUDES MUCH OF THE MUSIC OF THAT HISTORIC AUGUST 28 DAY AS SUNG BY MARIAN ANDERSON, JOAN BAEZ, ODETTA AND PETER, PAUL AND MARY. SUCH A GIFT WILL DO MUCH TOWARD FURTHERING IN A FINANCIAL WAY THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM IN ADDITION TO BRINGING A PRIZED POSSESSION TO YOUR FRIENDS AND RELATIVES THAT WILL BE CHERISHED THROUGHOUT THE YEARS.

Supply Limited! Order Today!

SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE
334 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

Please send me __________ copies of the album, "We Shall Overcome," the authorized recording of the March on Washington at the special SCLC price. I enclose $3.00 for each record ordered.

NAME______________________________

ADDRESS______________________________

CITY______________ZONE______STATE__________

Please make check or money order payable to SCLC.

ARMY OF LOVE

(Continued from Page 7)

of world opinion is in our favor. Though people of color are a minority here in America, there are billions of colored people who look to the United States and to her Negro population to demonstrate that color is no obstacle or burden in the modern world.

The nations of Northern Europe have proudly aligned themselves with our struggle and challenged the myths of race the world over.

This is the promise of a strong international alliance for Peace and Brotherhood in the world. Northern Europe, Africa and Latin America all indicate a willingness to confront the problem of racism in the world. This is the starting point of a peaceful world.

Now the Negro must look abroad also. We have been looking toward Africa for some time, but the interest has been rather academic. Poverty and hunger are not peculiar to Harlem and the Mississippi Delta. India, Mexico, the Congo and many other nations face essentially the same problems that we have faced.

If the world is to survive in peace, then some concern for the world's hungry masses must grow out of the great wealth of this nation. It will probably grow out of the sensitivity and love which is being generated morally and politically through God's children in America.

CIVIL RIGHTS MEDAL HONORS DR. KING

THE HAGUE—Rayla Beheer Ltd., Goldsmiths and Medalmakers, have struck a special medal commenorating the ceremonial signing of the civil rights act by President Johnson.

The Medal is one of the series issued by Royal Beheer honoring various persons in the fields of science, arts, letters or politics.

Previous medals have been issued commemorating, among others, Dag Hamarskjold, Painter Pablo Picasso, John F. Kennedy and Queen Wilhelmina.

On the face of the latest medal, The Rev. Martin Luther King, who was at the signing, is depicted with the legend: "So faith, hope, love abide, these three, but the greatest of these is love (1 Cor. 13:13).

On the back appears the raised arm of the Statue of Liberty with the legend: "Civil Rights Act J. F. Kennedy-L. B. Johnson era."

Two thousand copies of the medal (38 millimeters in diameter) will be struck. Number 1 of the numbered series will be offered to Dr. King.

From The Pages of Negro History

Contrary to folklore, Negro slaves hated slavery so passionately that thousands joined in bloody revolts. The biggest was led in 1831 by Nat Turner, a Virginia slave preacher, whose rebels killed 60 whites before he was captured and hanged. Also contrary to folklore, the U. S. had 488,000 free Negroes by 1860, almost half of them in the South.

N. Y. Union Gives $6,000 To Civil Rights Groups

As one of the highpoints of the SCLC Convention in Savannah, New York Negro labor leader Cleveland Robinson, on behalf of his Union, District No. 65, Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, AFL-CIO of New York City, presented checks totaling $6,000 to representatives of Southern civil rights organizations at the Oct. 1 mass meeting at St. Paul CME Church. A $1,000 check went to SNCC of Mississippi; a $2,000 check was presented to Dr. Aaron Henry on behalf of the state conference of the Mississippi NAACP and a $3,000 check was presented to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Advisor To Dr. King

Cleveland Robinson, Secretary-Treasurer of his Union and International Vice President, works closely with Dr. King in SCLC as one of his labor advisors. Robinson is also National Vice President of the Negro American Labor Council and Commissioner of the City of New York, appointed by Mayor Wagner for the New York City Commission for Human Rights. His Union has long been identified with the civil rights struggle and has supported SCLC, NAACP and other civil rights organizations throughout the years. In making the contribution, Robinson pointed out that contributions from his Union came from the membership which numbers 30,000, the majority of whom are white.

The unity of this membership, Negro, white and spanish speaking, and its dedication to the cause of freedom and human dignity for all, has been one of the outstanding characteristics of this organization, Robinson said.

'Nothing But Sympathy' For Hoover Dr. King Replies To 'Liar' Charge

In one of the most scurrilous and undignified verbal attacks upon SCLC President Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in recent months, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover on Nov. 18 referred to him as "the most notorious liar in the country" in answer to a charge that FBI agents in Albany, Ga., have taken no action in civil rights cases because they are Southerners.

The blast at Dr. King was made during a group interview with some 200 women reporters who periodically meet with Washington officials.

Expressed Surprise

Dr. King, busy at the time, in the seclusion of an island in the Bahamas, preparing his acceptance speech for the Nobel Prize, expressed surprise at the Hoover charge and promptly wired him a reply and issued a statement.

The statement read:

"I cannot conceive of Mr. Hoover making a statement like this without being under extreme pressure. He has apparently faltered under the awesome burdens, complexities and responsibilities of his office, therefore, I cannot engage in a public debate with him. I have nothing but sympathy for this man who has served his country so well."

Text Of Telegram

In his telegram to the FBI Director, Dr. King had this to say:

"I was appalled and surprised at your reported statement maligning my integrity. What motivated such an irresponsible accusation is a mystery to me. I have sincerely questioned the effectiveness of the FBI in racial incidents, particularly where bombings and brutalities against Negroes are at issue, but I have never attributed this merely to the presence of southerners in the FBI. This is a part of the broader question of federal involvement in the protection of Negroes in the South and the seeming inability to gain convictions in even the most henious crimes perpetuated against civil rights workers.

"It remains a fact that not a single arrest was made in Albany, Georgia during the many brutalities against Negroes. Neither has a single arrest been made in connection with the tragic murder of the four children in Birmingham nor in the case of three murdered civil rights workers in Mississippi. Moreover, all FBI agents inevitably work with local law enforcement officers in car thefts, bank robberies, and other inter-state violations. This makes it difficult for them to function effectively in cases where the rights and safety of Negro citizens are being threatened by these same law enforcement officers.

'Happy To Discuss Question'

"I will be happy to discuss this question with you at length in the near future. Although your statement said that you have attempted to meet me, I have sought in vain for any record of such a request. I have always made myself available to all FBI agents of the Atlanta office and encouraged our staff and affiliates to cooperate with them in spite of the fact that many of our people have suspicions and distrust of the FBI as a result of the slow pace of justice in the South."

Six New Members Named To SCLC Board

Six new members were added to the Executive Board of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference during its recent eighth annual convention in Savannah, Georgia.

The new members, representing a total of four states, will serve varying terms through 1967.

They are as follows:

Jesse Hill, Jr., a businessman from Atlanta, Georgia, was a selection from Georgia to the Board. Mr. Hill is Actuary of Atlanta Life Insurance Company in Atlanta, Chairman of the All Citizen's Registration Committee and president of The Atlanta Inquirer, Inc.

Mrs. Victoria Gray and Rev. Allen L. Johnson of Mississippi. Mrs. Gray, of Hathiesburg, Miss., is an SCLC Citizenship School supervisor and was a recent candidate on the Freedom Democratic Party ballot against Mississippi Senator John Stennis.

Rev. Johnson, of Jackson, Mississippi, is President of the Ministers' Alliance of that city, an affiliate of SCLC.

From Alabama, two board members were chosen. They are: Rev. T. Y. Rogers of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Rev. A. D. King of Birmingham. Rev. Rogers is pastor of the First African Baptist Church in Tuscaloosa, and is president of Citizens for Action Committee, another SCLC affiliate. Rev. A. D. King, the younger brother of Dr. King, is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ensley, Birmingham, Ala.

He replaces on the Board, W. E. Shortridge of Birmingham, who died earlier this year.

The second woman named to the Board was Mrs. Marian B. Logan of New York City. The wife of prominent physician Dr. Arthur Logan, Mrs. Logan has for a long time been very active in the civil rights movement.

From The Pages of Negro History

The first successful suit in the U. S. against school segregation occurred not in the South of the 1950's but in Boston in 1849.

STAFF MEMBER WEDS—Rev. Fred C. Bennette of Atlanta, Georgia, and Miss Bernita Darby of Savannah exchanged marriage vows in Savannah in July. Rev. Bennette is Executive Director of SCLC's "Operation Breadbasket." Mrs. Bennette is employed by the Board of Education in Savannah and also has her own radio show.

The SCLC Bookshelf

Available At SCLC

» Why We Can't Wait by Martin Luther King, Jr. Publishers: Harper & Row. Price: $3.50.

» Strength To Love by Martin Luther King, Jr. Publishers: Harper & Row. Price: $3.50

» Stride Toward Freedom by Martin Luther King, Jr. Publisher: Harper & Brothers Co. Price: $2.95

» The SCLC Story In Words & Pictures, edited by Ed Clayton. Publishers: Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Price: $1.00.

» Echo In My Soul by Septima Poinsette Clark. Publishers: E. P. Dutton & Co. Price: $4.50

» The Desegregated Heart by Sarah Patton Boyle. Publishers: William Morrow & Co. Price: $5.00

» The Day They Marched, edited by Doris Saunders. Publishers: Johnson Publishing Co. Price: $1.00

War On Poverty

(Continued from Page 12)

places—as Negro activists have realized that the lunch counter is not so important after all and that people still live in rat-infested ghettos—the tendency has been toward militant black nationalism. Here the mood was militant but not nationalist.

SCLC has always been for a unity of Negro and white. Previously, this position has been mainly a moral imperative, based on the SCLC orientation to the Christian church. This year one felt that the appeals for Negro-white cooperation, while still morally based, had a new dimension: the practical matter of necessity.

Whites, Too, Would Gain

"The Negro people," Dr. King said, "do not themselves possess the political power to create full employment. We must add our political power to that of other groups (the religious communities—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish—labor, the liberals, and the intellectuals) in order to create a broad and strong political force to ensure positive action."

Bayard Rustin, considered by many to be one of the most effective strategists in the civil rights movement, led a workshop at the convention on how to achieve such an alliance.

Dr. King noted that although a greater percentage of Negroes than whites are poor by the $3,000 standard, 78 percent of the total nine million families classified as poor in America are white. Thus, if the civil rights movement can provide some motor power for a drive to win a real war on poverty, white will benefit as much as Negro, or more.

The practical necessity for an alliance exists on the white as well as the Negro side of the fence. The question the civil rights movement faces is how to convince enough whites that this is so.

Dr. King Manuscripts Now at Boston Univ.

The personal papers and manuscripts of SCLC President Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. have been presented to the Boston University to be housed in its projected $5,500,000 Central Library.

Dr. King visited the university on Sept. 11, to turn the documents over to the Library.

In 1955, Dr. King received a Ph.D. in theological studies and in 1959 an honorary D.D. degree from Boston University. He stipulated that he annually would add files of his papers to the collection.

Letters From Presidents

According to Dr. Gustave A. Harrer, director of libraries at Boston University, there are in the collection, letters from Presidents of the United States, Senators, Congressmen international governmental leaders prominent figures in the world of arts and literature, as well as officials on the state and local levels.

It also contains the manuscripts and notes of lectures and speeches, reports of press interviews, engagement books, records of incoming and outgoing telephone calls, citations, accolades and memorabilia.

There are manuscripts of the King Books, "Stride Toward Freedom" (1958); "The Measure of Man" (1959); "Strength To Love" (1963); and the recently published "Why We Can't Wait."

House 1,400,000 Volumes

Boston University's new multi-million dollar Central Library, which will house the King Collection, will consist of six stories with two underground floors. It will ultimately house some 1,400,000 volumes and will allow for consolidation of nine of the University's branch libraries on the Charles River campus between the recently completed George Sherman Unio and the new 19-story "high rise" Law-Education Building. Ground will be broken th year for the Library which is expected be completed by the fall of 1966.

Voting Education Film Now Available to Groups

Brandon Films has acquired the new 16mm color documentary (28½ minutes), "Right Now!", which has been used in voter education campaigns in the South and is credited with helping to register some 500,000 Negroes.

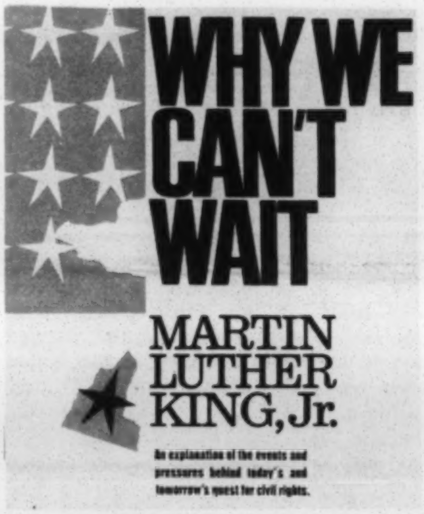
Made in Savannah, Georgia, "Right Now!" was sponsored by the United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Committee for Racial Justice now, and the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council. It shows in candid close-ups how responsible Negroes in Savannah went about the task of convincing Negro non-voters that they had a stake in registering to vote.

'Superb Document'

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., said of "Right Now!", "A superb and artful film document, the most accurate, effective, moving account I have seen of the people of the South who are the backbone of the Freedom Movement. These are the people whom I know and love and America should be made aware of their contribution."

"Right Now!" is immediately available in 16mm to community groups for purchase and rental, and to television, for licensing.

Written, produced and directed by Robert Newman, it has photography by Graeme Ferguson and music by Mel Pahl.



WHY WE CAN'T WAIT
MARTIN LUTHER KING, Jr.
An explanation of the events and pressures behind today's and tomorrow's quest for civil rights.

WHY WE CAN'T WAIT
MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.
WHY WE CAN'T WAIT

The most lucid appraisal to date of all the complex circumstances that have surrounded today's nonviolent revolution, Dr. King writes with critical candor of the Negro's contained discontent and his determination to have "NOW" his long-denied rights.

$3.50

Harper & Row, Publishers

SCLC
334 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303
Dear Sirs:
☐ Please send me....................copies of WHY WE CAN'T WAIT at the regular price of $3.50. I enclose $...............in........ cash............check............money order.
Name..
Address..
City......................State......................Zip.......

Newsletter Editor Authors 2 New Books

Ed Clayton

SCLC Newsletter editor Ed Clayton has just authored two new books, one for children, the other for adults, which were published by two different publishing houses within two weeks of each other. The books are: Martin Luther King: The Peaceful Warrior, a children's biography of the noted civil rights leader, published Oct. 15 by Prentice-Hall, Inc., Englewood, N. J., and The Negro Politician: His Success and Failure, published Nov. 2 by Johnson Publishing Co., Chicago, Ill.

In the children's book, Clayton traces the life of Dr. King from his birth on Atlanta's famed Auburn Avenue through the Montgomery Bus Boycott and his later rise as a world figure. Its 80 pages, beautifully illustrated by New York artist David Hodges, have brought into compact focus the high points in the career of this young leader and placed it within easy reading grasp of children in the age group of 9-12.

Review Noted

The Chicago Tribune of Nov. 1, in a brief review of the biography, had this to say:

". . . The author has brought the personality thru the gradual recognition of prejudices, the increasing pressures of discrimination, and the ultimate insults and injustices without interjecting a trace of bitterness.

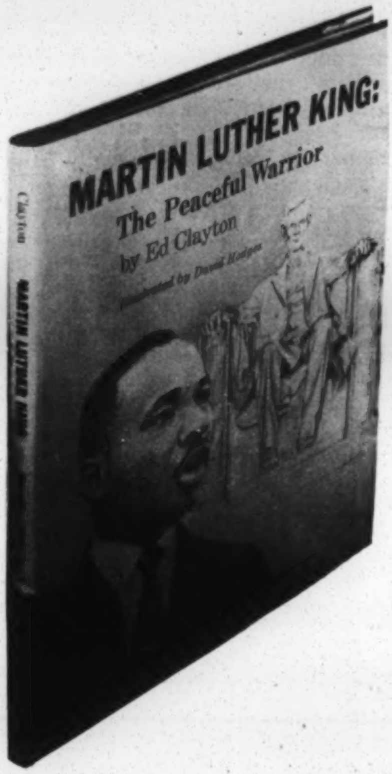
"He leaves the reader with a moving portrait of a gentle, peaceful man. At times, the fluid style, simple langauge, and understated strength of character of the central figure lend an essence of saintliness to the man."

Political Book Informative

In The Negro Politician, Clayton brings to the reader an informative account of the role of the Negro in American politics from his early beginnings during Reconstruction up to the present day. Unlike previous books written on the subject, this new work has been written with the layman in mind to help give a greater understanding of politics. At the same time it brings more sharply into focus those Negro politicans of the past and present who have made their contributions to the government of America's cities, counties and states.

From The Pages of Negro History

Negroes contributed key inventions to 19th century U. S. industrialization — for example, the mechanical laster that revolutionized shoe manufacturing. Besides this, Granville T. Woods, holder of 150 patents, developed the third rail for electric trains in 1890. as well as induction telegraphy for communicating with trains in motion.



Just Published!
In Time For Holiday Gift Giving!

Two New Books In A First

Combination Offer

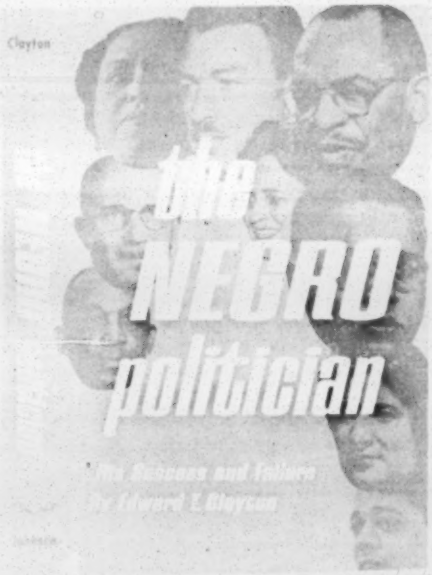
Save $1.20

for children . . .

Here for the first time, in Martin Luther King: The Peaceful Warrior, is an official biography of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., written especially for children in simple, easy-reading language. It tells the story, with accompanying illustrations, of the famous Negro leader from his early childhood up to the present day.. It was authored by Ed Clayton, editor of the SCLC Newsletter.

for adults . . .

Another book from the pen of Ed Clayton, The Negro Politician is a book that has been especially written for the layman. With a foreword by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the book traces the Negro's role in politics from Reconstruction days through the 1964 election.



SCLC
334 Auburn Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

☐ I would like to take advantage of your combination offer of $7.00 on the two new books, MARTIN LUTHER KING: THE PEACEFUL WARRIOR (regular price $3.25) and THE NEGRO POLITICIAN, which normally retails for $4.95.

☐ I would like to order .... copies of THE PEACEFUL WARRIOR at the regular price of $3.25.

☐ I would like to order .... copies of THE NEGRO POLITICIAN at the regular price of $4.95.

I enclose $ .... in .... cash .... check .... money order.

NAME ....

ADDRESS ....

CITY .... STATE .... ZIP CODE ....

SCLC Enters The War On Poverty

Civil Rights: The New Target Is The Economy

By Anne Braden

(Editor's note: Mrs. Braden, of Louisville Ky., is a long-time civil rights worker, a member of SCEF and editor of the Southern Patriot.)

Improving the economic condition of the American Negro has now become the main objective of large sections of the civil rights movement.

The trend has been in this direction for some time. More evidence of it appeared in the themes that ran through the eighth annual convention of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) here in Savannah.

Dr, Martin Luther King, in his annual report to the convention, put it this way: "Of what advantage is it to the Negro to establish that he can be served in integrated restaurants or accommodated in integrated hotels, if he is bound to the kind of financial servitude which will not allow him to take a vacation or even to take his wife out to dinner?

"What will it profit him to be able to send his children to an integrated school if the family income is insufficient to buy them school clothes?"

Questions like this have been prevalent in the student civil rights movement for some time. What nobody has really defined yet is just how to attack the problem most effectively.

SCLC already has a program called "Operation Breadbasket"; this consists of campaigns to get more jobs for Negroes by withholding business from firms which do not hire Negroes and patronizing those that do. This has won a number of new jobs in several cities—but it is obviously not a program large enough to solve the Negro's problem of poverty in America.

The Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, long-time leader of SCLC, spoke of the thousands forced to live in slum conditions in the nation's cities. Dr. King noted that one-half of all Negro families in the United States are "poor" when measured by the figure used by the federal government to determine poverty, income under $3,000 a year.

What Dr. King was actually calling for is a gigantic federal program to combat poverty and its effects in the form of slums, poor schools, etc. He said he considered President Johnson's current "war on poverty" just a "cautious beginning . . . a start and not the end." What is needed, he said, is "full mobilization of all the nation's resources."

Two Major Tactics

The Negro, Dr. King said, becomes "cynical and skeptical about 'war on poverty' when he reads about expenditures to photograph the moon which are manyfold larger than the cost of the anti-poverty bill before Congress . . . "

Although no one had a blueprint as to how to secure a program of the scale needed, two major tactics emerged from the discussions here and are likely to shape future SCLC programs.

First, there was general agreement that there must be more emphasis on political action. Dr. King said SCLC will continue to encourage sit-ins, picket lines, marches and civil disobedience—in other words, nonviolent direct action—when these seem effective. But he said this tactic is no longer enough.

Demonstrations alone sometimes opened public accommodations, he noted, because they called attention to the evil, aroused the conscience of the community, and additionally eliminated the evil itself if men and women stood firm. But as the civil rights movement turns its attention to jobs and the elimination of slums and the creation of quality integrated schools, more is needed. Demonstrations can still call attention to the evil and arouse the conscience of the community, but they do not present a program for removing the evil itself, Dr. King declared.

"For example." he explained, "demonstrations can be useful in calling attention to the fact that Negroes are tragically unemployed . . . . But billions of dollars are needed to insure full and fair employment . . . . This is a question of creating political power to induce Congress to appropriate such a sum of money."

New Significance

This perspective gives new significance to the concentration on voter registration in the Southern civil rights movement. The blood in Mississippi and the sweat even in less dangerous places takes on new meaning if there is a vision of a program worth voting for.

Second, there was agreement among SCLC people that in order to wage an attack on economic issues, the civil rights movement must find new allies in the white population. This convention specifically rejected the concepts of black nationalism, which hold that the Negro must go it alone in his battle for justice in this country.

This is significant because in some

(Continued on page 10)

CONTRIBUTIONS

I wish to contribute to the work of SCLC and the social struggle in the South.

NAME ....

ADDRESS ....

(street)

....

(city & state)

Amount of Contribution ....

Send to: SCLC
334 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30303

SCLC Newsletter
334 Auburn Ave., N.E.
Atlanta, Ga. 30303

Non Profit Org.
U. S. POSTAGE
PAID
Atlanta, Ga.
Permit 663

Mr. & Henry B. Clark, II
5 Forsyth Street
Atlanta, Georgia

RETURN REQUESTED

Recd 12/4/64

ML

COmmunity SERVices to International Visitors

NEWSLETTER

December 1964 Vol. ix No. 2

Executive Committee Hears National Agencies

TRENDS IN VISITOR PROGRAMS DISCUSSED

WASHINGTON, D.C.—"We now have a mandate to present the participants in our training programs with a total American experience, not limited to the teaching of skills," declared Robert W. Kitchen, Director of the Office of International Training in the Agency for International Development, before members of CO-SERV's Executive Committee who were gathered here October 19 and 20 for their semi-annual meeting.

Mr. Kitchen explained that A.I.D. has long been working on the problem of how far to take participants beyond training in skills and academic subject matter. It has been determined, he said, that the non-instructional phases of participants' programs are of major importance for a satisfactory experience in the U.S. and that "the 168-hour week is of greater concern than the 30- or 40-hour week."

Non-Instructional Expenses High

In this connection, Mr. Kitchen cited suitable housing for participants as a major problem. He added that, although the cost of A.I.D.'s training program runs to about $50,000,000 annually, about $10,000,000 or 20% goes into travel to and within this country; $30,000,000 or 60% goes into housing and food; and only about $10,000,000 or 20% is left for actual training. By contrast, a typical American education, he said, is estimated at 80% for schooling and 20% for daily living, a much more desirable ratio which A.I.D. would like to achieve for its participants and trainees.

To assist in the solution of some of the problems inherent in the process of training annually some 6000 individuals from the developing nations, A.I.D. is consulting with a group of experts from the American Personnel Guidance Association and the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs, on the setting up of guidance and counseling programs.

Unsponsored Student-Leaders

For the first time, Mr. Kitchen said, A.I.D. will be accepting responsibility for some unsponsored students, some of whom have been recognized as promising leaders who may significantly affect the image their countrymen have of the United States when they return home.

Explaining some of the difficulties that A.I.D.'s Office of International Training has encountered, Mr. Kitchen cited the substantial increase in visitors from South Asia and Africa, many of whom do not fit the historic characteristics of participants and trainees. In the past, he said, there was a heavy concentration on college-level English-speaking people. With the shift to non-college level, non-English-speaking personalities, including many recognized statesmen, special new services are required. When political leaders from Africa and South Asia are confronted with their peers in this country, problems frequently arise that call for A.I.D. leadership in assuring high-quality experience for these influential people.

Summer Employment

Summer employment of overseas visitors is also a challenge, Mr. Kitchen declared. He is hopeful that new programs will be developed that will help solve the problems of foreign nationals who are disadvantaged in seeking employment during the summer months.

Looking to the future, Mr. Kitchen said that the reorganization in which A.I.D.'s training program and staff are now engaged, and which has the full support of A.I.D.'s top administrators, will attempt to ensure that its professional staff will have had extensive overseas experience in the geographic areas under their direction. He added that it was A.I.D.'s hope to eliminate itself eventually from direct programming, and to rely instead on recognized private organizations and educational institutions.

No Major Changes at State Department

Speaking for the State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs was John N. Hayes, Deputy Director of the Bureau's Office of U.S. Programs and Services. Mr. Hayes said that no major shifts in the balance of existing programs are anticipated under the leadership of the newly appointed Assistant Secretary, Mr. Harry C. McPherson.

Mr. Hayes announced a new plan under which the State Department hopes to bring to this country for 90-day programs a limited number of foreign nationals employed in labor and commercial activities by our foreign posts. He said that in cities in this country where they exist, the U.S. Government offices of Labor and Commerce will be assisting these visitors but they will call upon the Department Reception Centers and vol-

(continued on page 2)

COmmunity NEWSLETTER
SERVices to International Visitors

December 1964 Vol. ix No. 2

Published quarterly and distributed without charge by the National Council for Community Services to International Visitors (COSERV), Meridian House, 1630 Crescent Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. DE 2-1028.

Chairman, COSERV Executive Committee
..... John F. Reichard
Executive Secretary .... Helen H. Ringe
Editor .... Ruth H. Frank

(continued from page 1)

untary groups to participate in arranging local programs.

Ernest J. Mansmann, also of the State Department, and Chief of the Division for Visitors from Abroad, expressed the Department's concern over the peaks in visitor arrivals, particularly during recent months, which overload national programming and community facilities. He outlined steps that had been taken to level off the overload. (1) Messages were sent out worldwide in early September asking that posts hold off all future arrivals for September and October. In some few cases postponements were not possible. (2) Messages were sent out calling a halt to all voluntary visitors until November 5, after the U.S. elections were concluded. (3) The European and African areas of the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs are instituting the practice of awarding grants to Leaders and Specialists only when a departure date from the visitor's home is known. This should help to spread arrival times. (4) Each outbound cultural attaché now meets with Mr. Mansmann who explains the need to "even out" arrival loads.

Mr. Mansman also referred to a special 3-week training program that the State Department holds for escort-interpreters. Now in its third year, there are about 20 individuals in each group. However, Mr. Mansmann said, it is still difficult to recruit an adequate number of good interpreters.

Private Programming Agencies Report

A view of summer activities was also given by representatives of national programming agencies who are members of COSERV and on its Executive Committee.

African-American Institute— Stewart Edwards, Director of A.A.I.'s Short-term Visitors Program, gave some indication of "peak loads" when he stated that from September to June his organization had programmed 12 visitors, while in July alone there were 96. He said that in trying to develop more satisfactory approaches to educational travel programs, the Institute is limiting to four (plus an escort-interpreter) the number of visitors travelling together to the communities. A.A.I. is endeavoring to make sure that in the future there is a common interest shared by the group. It is hoped that this will simplify the community's task in arranging programs for the visitors.

Experiment in International Living—Dr. F. Gordon Boyce, President, reported that The Experiment had had a greatly increased demand for its services but was aware of the need to maintain quality along with quantity. Non-sponsored visitors and some European student visitors, he said, frequently arrive here with expectations that cannot be met. The Experiment therefore feels the need for a statement addressed to all visitors concerning their responsibilities in this country.

In order to diversify its world-wide program, the Experiment is encouraging its European office to suggest travel to Latin America and Africa for its members. Additionally, Dr. Boyce said, the Experiment has committed itself to a greater investment of staff and funds in countries other than those in Western Europe. This will mean more exchanges with the Middle East, Far East and Africa. For short-term visitors in need of language assistance, the Experiment is establishing a short English-language training course.

Governmental Affairs Institute—H. Philip Mettger, President, said that some time ago he had predicted a great increase in visitors who were interested primarily in the American elections. The accuracy of his forecast was borne out, he said, by the fact that well over two-thirds of G.A.I.'s visitors due between July 1964 and June 1965 would have completed their visits by the end of November 1964. "It has been," he sighed, "too much too soon." He praised the "heroic work" of the communities, adding that the overload had been a problem for the State Department and the programming agencies, as well as for the local organizations. He concurred with others who stressed the need for an increase in the number of well-qualified interpreters.

Institute of International Education—Richard B. Myer, Director of I.I.E.'s Special Projects and Arts Department, announced that a group of Hungarians was newly arrived on these shores and a group of Roumanians was anticipated during the coming year, representing an innovation in sponsored visitors' countries of origin.

International Student Service—J. Benjamin Schmoker, Executive Director, agreeing that the summer had been a busy one, reported that his organization had met 2000 students a week just in New York City. Other ports of entry also carried heavy summer loads. Had the well-planned student housing bureau, under the auspices of the Greater New York Council for Foreign Students, not been set up in advance, "we couldn't have survived!" he said. He felt that more and better information on the U.S. should be given to students before they come here. Many arrived with inadequate funds and hoped to work. Their high expectations, he said, frequently resulted in grave disappointments.

Note: See Page 6 for reports from the communities presented at the Executive Committee meeting.

Sequel to "A Beacon of Hope"

The Second Annual Report (August 1964) of the U.S. Advisory Commission on International Educational and Cultural Affairs, just published, is available on request from the Secretariat to the Commission in the U. S. Department of State, Washington, D. C.

THE AFRICAN-AMERICAN INSTITUTE

The following three articles describe the African visitor program from three points of view: the programming agency, the community organization and the visiting participant.

The report on the AAI is one of a continuing series on national programming agencies carried in the Newsletter.

The African-American Institute is a private, non-profit organization founded on the belief that practical contributions to Africa's development can be an effective means of building friendship and understanding between peoples of the two continents.

Beginning with a small program of hospitality and assistance to African students and visitors to the U.S. ten years ago, AAI's work has evolved rapidly with the dramatic change of pace in Africa. AAI now administers more than 20 educational and development programs.

Expansion of scholarship programs has been AAI's first priority. To date, some 3,000 young Africans have received education and assistance through AAI—a significant fraction of the new leadership in the continent. Many of these men and women brought to the U.S. for training will strengthen Africa's own institutions sufficiently to enable them to do the basic tasks of African education at home. Training in the U.S. will then be reserved for advanced work in specialized fields.

The ASPAU Program

At the university level the Institute administers a number of programs for African students. In 1960, a group of 24 American universities, with the administrative assistance of AAI, offered scholarships to 24 Nigerians for undergraduate study in the U.S. This launched what has grown into ASPAU—The African Scholarship Program of American Universities. Today, ASPAU operates in 28 African countries; 215 cooperating colleges and universities in 45 American states form its strong academic base. By the end of 1964, about 1,000 young Africans will have been granted scholarships under the program, to prepare for technical, teaching and public service careers.

Manpower Needs Aided

In 1963 AAI joined with the U.S. Council of Graduate Schools to launch a graduate fellowships program. Based largely on the ASPAU experience, the new AFGRAD program places special emphasis on the selection of fellows in terms of key manpower requirements of their respective countries. Fellowships are provided under grants from A.I.D., and joint State Department-UNESCO arrangements.

As the new African countries modernize their economies, there is increasing need for technically skilled personnel to serve in government and business and such specialized fields as airport and harbor management, rural and urban planning, and land, water and wildlife conservation. Therefore, in addition to its regular undergraduate programs, AAI—with A.I.D.'s financial help—administers programs to meet priority manpower needs at various levels, from technical and vocational, to graduate and professional.

Increasingly important is the programming of short-term African visitors to the U.S. So far in 1964, under State Department contract, AAI has made detailed arrangements for 50 leaders and specialists—men and women interested in economics, education, journalism, politics, social welfare and community development. It has also administered educational travel grants for some 90 visiting African students selected for their leadership potential.

African journalists with escort-interpreters meet Hon. John B. Duncan (extreme right), U. S. Commissioner for the District of Columbia. Journalist M. A. O. Pearse who wrote article on Page 5 of Newsletter is eighth from right.

At the invitation of the U.S. Department of State, 18 African newsmen from 16 countries arrived in the U.S. last October 15 for a 30-day observation of news media and candidates at election time. AAI accepted the challenge to create a meaningful and useful experience for these persons with limited knowledge of American political history and politics. A week's orientation program in Washington was followed by placement in key American mid-western, western and southern communities for observation of election and post-election meetings.

Women's Group Assists

The Women's Africa Committee, an affiliate of AAI, was formed in 1959 by 30 American women concerned with the special problems of African women. Since then, by itself or in cooperation with major women's organizations and local groups throughout the country, the Committee has worked with women from almost every African country helping them to realize their leadership potential in their home countries.

Other programs administered by AAI include: Teachers for West Africa, Special Training Program for Refugees, The Economic and Social Development Program, Summer Training Programs, and Media Programs. AAI also publishes Africa Report, the leading American journal on Africa.

In a continuing effort to help the African continent meet its great potential, the African-American Institute works with a host of foundations, corporations, individuals, U.S. Government agencies and 32 African Governments.

AFRICANS IN LITTLE ROCK

by Mrs. Barbara F. Buck, Volunteer
International Hospitality Committee of Pulaski County
Little Rock, Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Little Rock/racial tension. Ten years ago these terms were synonymous. Since then things have progressed slowly and quietly toward compliance with the spirit of the new Civil Rights Law. For Little Rock residents, the change is significant; to outsiders, the transition is largely unrecognized. And so, to the foreigner coming to America, the name "Little Rock" still rings with racial notoriety. How, then, can the local International Hospitality Committee present to its short-term visitors a fair, honest picture of present-day Caucasian/Negro sentiment? And, how are African guests treated in the city?

To help the visitor from abroad understand the civil rights problem, Little Rock's International Hospitality Committee, under the effective leadership of Mr. Fred K. Darragh, Jr., provides opportunity for the visitor to talk with uneducated farm Negroes, to discuss housing and educational problems with staff members of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, and to visit socially with educated Negro families in the capital city. Through these contacts and by association with Caucasian host families, it is hoped the foreign visitor will be able to draw his own conclusions.

Generally, there is no difference between a visit from an African leader and that of an Indian specialist or a German student. Africans stay in downtown hotels, are entertained socially (producing some "firsts" as far as integrated parties), and can meet any person with whom they desire to discuss their special interest.

Visitors Question Freely

Of all short-term visitors stopping at Little Rock, about one-third are African. Of these, the majority are intelligently informed and they express sincere interest in our social problems. Through the repeated good will of Mrs. Joe R. Brewer, foreign guests are taken on a tour of the cotton plantations just outside Little Rock. Understandably, the visitors are shocked at the dramatic contrast between the prosperous planters' homes and the indigent tenant farmers' shanties. While driving along the dusty farm roads, a recent group of Africans wanted to know:

"Why do so many tenants have abandoned automobiles in their yards? If the church is interdenominational, why isn't it integrated? Why aren't the Negro children in school?"

Since Mrs. Brewer lives in the midst of this plantation area, she can handle their questions adeptly. But she also gives the visitors a chance to talk directly with the tenant farmer. The African students who met "Frank," a disabled, retired tenant farmer, were quietly appalled by the dilapidated condition of his house, but talked easily with him and commented on the cleanliness of the place.

A startling revelation to some African visitors is their getting to know Little Rock Negroes who hold professional positions. Through Delta Sigma Theta, a public service sorority composed mostly of Negroes, foreign visitors are treated to an evening in one of the women's homes. Although the sorority has served exchange students in Arkansas for the past ten years, it has been only since the Spring of 1964 that they have volunteered their services to the International Hospitality Committee. Since then they have hosted 20 Africans as well as other short-term visitors. According to Mrs. Dorothy White and Mrs. Sue Williams, the evening get-togethers consist of mutual give-and-take. Significantly, perhaps, the Africans have avoided discussing the racial situation. However, they are frank in expressing their feelings and when they have been entertained in very comfortable Negro homes, Africans have speculated as to whether they are being subjected to "set-up" conditions. Too, the Africans express ideas conceived from Little Rock's crisis days and find it difficult to believe that their Negro hosts are able to live free from pressure.

Illustrating the effort exerted by the International Hospitality Committee of Pulaski County in presenting a complete sketch of racial attitudes was Mrs. Scott's fulfilling a Cairo student's request to meet a segregationist. He was disappointed at not hearing any such talk from host families, so she, as hostess, arranged for his group to visit a farmer who was articulate in expressing his segregationist stand. To hear such views not only satisfied the students' desire, but demonstrated to them the diversity of opinion which can survive in our nation.

Visiting students from Tanganyika, Uganda and Zambia with escort Garry Edwards in courtyard of the Arkansas Art Center in Little Rock.

Since racial conditions are the major reason for most short-term visitors' coming to Little Rock, the Hospitality Committee devotes the equivalent of one day's time to exposing the status quo, the progress which has already been made, and the huge task still confronting those concerned with full respect for human rights. However, the typical four-day program also includes general sightseeing, a visit to the Arts Center, a social evening with host family and friends, appointments with people in their special field of interest, and visits to other places of significant interest to them.

(continued on next page)

(continued from page 4)

Mrs. James B. Gates laughs about the summer cloudburst which flooded the entrance to the local library during a visit with a group of African students. The Africans pitched in with library workers in moving tables and chairs from the path of streaming water. As they joked about it, the Africans probably were unaware that such tiny deeds are the very things which endear them to the hearts of the people they meet.

Some of our African visitors have confided, "I wondered what I was going to do in Little Rock for five days. Now, I want to stay longer."

And for host families in Little Rock, some of whom have established meaningful friendships with foreign guests, welcoming African visitors has provided distinct benefits.

IMPRESSIONS OF A VISITOR

by Mike A. Olu Pearse

Mr. Pearse, Northern Regional Editor of the "Daily Express," Nigeria, visited the U.S. on a 30-day observation tour for African journalists.

A few days after my arrival in the United States of America, an American tried to find out from me my impressions about America. Then, I told him it was too early for me to make any comment. Now, after over two weeks in the United States, I think I am in a position to express my observation about the great country, from what I have seen and heard so far.

America is not new to me, not new in the sense that my country—Nigeria—has for a long time had association with her one way or the other and I have also read and heard about her. There are a lot of Americans in my country and from some of them, I have heard much about the country. There are a number of Nigerians also who studied in America and went back to their country to tell those of us who had not been there something about the land of Uncle Sam.

But I believe that whatever description one may give about anything, seeing is believing.

My visit to America has in fact fulfilled one of my dreams in life. Thanks to the American government.

Movies Influence Youths

America has an enormous influence among the youths of my country, so much so that many of them tend to behave like the Yankees. But to my greatest surprise, I found in America that the imitation by these youths, of American way of life, is completely based on a wrong assumption. The way they looked at America was partly influenced by the movies, especially the cowboy films.

Before my arrival in the States, I too had fallen a victim of the belief that American cities were noisy and that life in the country was quite hectic. I thought all Americans carried guns in their pockets and that their drinking bars would be scenes of physical duels. I am pleasantly surprised by the quiet and serenity I have found in America during my few weeks stay.

I doubt whether there is any country in the world today who gives a more practical demonstration of democracy than America. I think the rest of the world has something to learn from America's practical democracy. I am saying this not because I am in the midst of Americans but because I have witnessed the practice of democracy in the country. Someone said some time ago while giving the definition to the word "democracy," that "democracy is the right to do wrong."

Colour discrimination in America is a social problem to which the Americans themselves must find an everlasting solution. But, by and large, there is freedom in America—freedom in the real sense of the word and not a freedom sandwiched with dictatorial tendency. Freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of worship. The freedom given to the press in America is almost to a fault, yet it is worthy of emulation because the press make themselves responsible and powerful.

Democracy in Action

I was in Baltimore one night during one of President Lyndon Johnson's campaign tours for the presidential election when a group of youths carrying Senator Barry Goldwater placards trooped into the hall where President Johnson was addressing his supporters.

I was bathed in cold sweat as I thought guns would soon start to rip past. But what happened? There were just boos while President Johnson himself halted his speech to allow the noise to die down, and merely smiled over the whole incident.

One of the Goldwater supporters even went so far as to move forward to the front line amidst the thick crowd of Johnson supporters and all that was done for him was to cover his placard with other placards depicting support for President Johnson. I watched the incident with much amusement. In other countries of the world, blood could have flown in the hall and there could have been uncontrollable pandemonium.

I have also found Americans to be very friendly but this does not mean that I am ruling out the possibilities of isolated cases of unfriendly attitude towards foreigners like myself by some people who still belong to the old school of thought.

I have met a number of Americans who through their own volition denied themselves their personal pleasure to make sure I really enjoyed my stay in America.

While all this is going on in the country, I cannot imagine why colour segregation is being practiced in some parts of America especially in the southern states.

A Question Remains

One big question which is still in my mind and to which I have not had a satisfactory answer is why should there be discrimination in a civilized country like America which is doing her best to help developing countries technically and financially? Why should a country full of friendly people still tend to regard the Negroes who make up its population, an inferior race? Why must America continue to go on like this?

I think a definite solution must be found to this social problem because although American Negroes are Americans, yet we in Africa consider any discrimination against them as discrimination against all races of African descent.

COSERV ACROSS THE U.S.A.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Summer 1965 was a busy time for COSERV organizations across the country. The Executive Committee of COSERV at its October meeting heard reports from members who were just beginning to recover from the 3-month deluge. The summarized reports from representatives of community organizations follow:

Atlanta—Mrs. Joseph F. Haas, General Chairman of the Atlanta Committee for International Visitors. A large number of summer visitors came from U.S. Department of Defense installations located in the southeastern states. The number of visiting A.I.D. participants also increased. Last-minute cancellations by visitors caused some problems, but community support has buoyed the Committee and stimulated its growth. The visit to Atlanta of Secretary of State and Mrs. Rusk is reported on Page 8 of this Newsletter.

Boulder, Colorado—Mrs. Edward Sampson, Jr., General Chairman of Community Hospitality for International Visitors in Boulder. Many visitors arrived for 3-, 6-, and 9-month stays with families. To assist these people who need information on day-to-day living, Mrs. Sampson's Committee produced a brochure explaining everything about the community "from its shopping system to services of psychiatrists." Men have been added to the Board who are well-qualified to explain the Committee's work to the community. Goals for this year include a club room where visitors can gather to meet local citizens and other visitors.

Mrs. Sampson also mentioned her visit, in June, to Salt Lake City with Miss Helen H. Ringe, COSERV's Executive Secretary. The two met with many individuals who were providing services to international visitors in Utah's capital city. Mrs. Sampson felt that their visit had helped to inform each group of what the others were doing and that a large step toward coordination of all these services had been taken.

Buffalo, New York—Mrs. Robert M. Kohn, Vice-President of the Buffalo World Hospitality Association. A total of 1143 visitors came during the three summer months, with very few problems. "The 'problem visitors' must have gone to the World's Fair rather than Niagara Falls this year," she said. Mrs. Kohn made a special plea for "return reports" from other communities and from sponsoring agencies if visitors made any adverse comments on experiences in Buffalo. She also announced a Niagara Frontier Conference on Exchange of Persons to be held March 20, 1965. The one-day Institute will bring together campus and church groups as well as other local community organizations involved in exchange programs. The featured speaker will be John N. Hayes of the State Department. One objective is to inform the rest of the community of the total scope of the exchange-of-persons program. It is also hoped that the meeting will help coordinate the multiple local activities in this field.

Chicago—Mrs. Noel Flint, Executive Director of the International Hospitality Center of Chicago. At the request of the State Department, the Center took on the programming of a great number of Leaders and Specialists who came to Chicago. To handle the additional load, one new full-time and a part-time person were added to the staff, but the job was a challenging one even with the extra help. The visitor load was divided according to field of interest between the Center and the Chicago office of the Institute of International Education. The 3-month period saw 1080 visitors to the Center and, said Mrs. Flint, "we just about managed!"

New York City—Mrs. Donald Droste, Co-Chairman of the Short-Term Visitor Committee of the Midtown International Center. The World's Fair brought an influx of visitors unparallelled in the history of the Center. The total of 6000 visitors to the Center included 3300 international employees of the Fair. The only real crisis occurred when a sponsored group of 192 visitors arrived after the Center had been told that the group would number 25. "We managed somehow," she smiled.

Philadelphia—John F. Reichard, Executive Director of Philadelphia's Center for International Visitors. The Center was gratified that it had been able to carry the intensely heavy load of programming that fell on its shoulders in spite of the fact that many other organizations in Philadelphia which depend on volunteers closed up entirely during the summer. The Democratic Convention in Atlantic City in August, and the World's Fair, were undoubtedly responsible for a large number of African and South American student leaders coming to Philadelphia and its environs on their summer travel programs.

Pittsburgh—Mrs. Jeanne Witman, Executive Secretary of the Pittsburgh Council for International Visitors. The summer months showed a wider diversity of "sending" organizations than in previous years. When the program objectives of the sending agency differed from the visitor's objectives, the community organization was uncertain as to what plans to make for the visitor. Mrs. Witman hoped that better coordination on program objectives could be attained in the future.

Portland, Oregon—Mrs. Hilmar Grondahl, Chairman of the International Visitors Committee of the World Affairs Council of Oregon. The Committee had many more visitors this summer than in the past, with many happy experiences. Mrs. Grondahl particularly commended the African-American Institute and the Governmental Affairs Institute for sending excellent biographical data on visitors in advance of their arrival, so that meaningful programs could be planned around their interests. She also appreciated having visitors in the Community long enough—4 or 5 days—to permit a better understanding of Portland. Mrs. Grondahl added that when the flow of short-term visitors decreases, volunteer interest is kept alive through providing programs for students from nearby educational institutions.

Sioux City—Elmer S. Swenson, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee for International Visitors. Sioux City's 290 visitors during the first nine months of this year considerably outnumbered last year's total of 178. The summer load was particularly heavy. Twenty-three Sioux City people accepted an invitation and at their own expense visited Lima, Peru. While there they adopted the Peruvian seaport, Callao, as a Sister City. The Mayor of Callao was a guest of Sioux City early in October.

'EXPERIMENTAL' INSTITUTE HELD

DALLAS, TEX.—Recognizing that success in serving international visitors requires more than good intentions and a ready smile, the Dallas-COSERV Institute, a major educational effort, was conducted October 15-17 on the campus of Southern Methodist University. Participants were community leaders in southern states serving visitors from abroad. Its stated purpose was "to enlist and train stronger community leadership to carry on services for . . . educational and cultural exchangees."

Dallas Committee for Foreign Visitors

Mrs. Catherine Norrell, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State (left), with Mrs. Clyde Emery, Director of the Dallas-COSERV Institute and Chairman of Dallas Committee.

Mrs. Clyde Emery, Vice-Chairman of COSERV's Executive Committee and General Chairman of the Dallas Committee for Foreign Visitors, organized and directed the Institute under the joint sponsorship of COSERV and the University. The first of its kind, it was considered an experiment, and attendance was limited to a selected few. COSERV's Executive Committee was represented by three members: Alan Bartholemy of the Sacramento (Calif.) People-to-People Council; Mrs. Edward Sampson, Jr., Community Hospitality for International Visitors in Boulder (Colo.); and W. Thomas Thach, Committee for International Visitors in Oklahoma City. Assistance was also given by Bill Maclay, Southwest representative of The Experiment in International Living.

Down-to-earth Methods

The format of the Institute put total emphasis on practicality. A general one-hour opening session explained the purposes and procedures of the 3-day sessions. Case studies, centered around the following problem areas were then presented for discussion: (1) preparing reports on the community organizations' work; (2) securing Negro hosts; (3) training local escort guides; (4) identifying and carrying out good programming; (5) creating informational booklets for visitors; (6) raising funds; (7) recruiting members; (8) evaluating visitor-host experiences with a view to improvement; (9) feeding back information to sending agencies.

Tape recordings of interviews between visitors and prominent citizens were used as source material. Exhibits of typical programs, prepared by communities across the nation, were studied and discussed.

Typifying local hospitality, Dallas host families invited groups of participants to their homes for dinner, during which time discussion leaders steered the conversations toward the very problems the participants had come to Dallas to review.

Maintaining the exciting pace, dinner was followed by participation in the annual meeting of the Dallas Committee for Foreign Visitors held in the Grand Ballroom of SMU's Student Center. The featured speaker, Mrs. Catherine Norrell, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Educational and Cultural Affairs, declared, "You are part of a great current of our time. You are, in your communities, serving your country's commitment to one of mankind's most promising pathways to peace."

African Visitor Needs Studied

The following day, Professor W. Richey Hogg, Professor at SMU's School of Theology, gave the group a "Background for Programming the African Visitor," based on his research and travels in Africa. Dr. Hogg traced past history that has led up to current tensions on the African scene. He reflected on the difference in views of the white man that are held by other-than-white peoples. Around the world, he explained, the white man's feeling of superiority is significantly known as "the white man's disease." He reminded his listeners that our time is experiencing new realities to which we must be sensitive, and with which we must work creatively and constructively.

The program plan for the Institute included consultation hours when participants were able to meet individually with experienced COSERV advisors. Community problems were discussed in both private and group sessions, thus allowing lively debate over possible solutions and constant exchanges of information.

Participants expressed great satisfaction with the Dallas-COSERV experimental Institute. According to one, it gave "new insight about the background of the international visitor, the possibilities for participation and leadership in the community, and. . . innumerable practical operational suggestions for techniques that are helpful in relationships with both visitors and communities."

COSERV Office — Meridian House
1630 Crescent Place, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20009

Please send me the quarterly COSERV NEWSLETTER free of charge.

Name ....

Organization ....

Address ....

City, Zone, State ....

NOTE: Please inform the COSERV office immediately if the name or title or address indicated on the reverse side of this coupon is no longer correct. We would also appreciate notification if you wish to be dropped from our mailing list. Postal charges are at an all-time high.

COSERV PIONEER RESIGNS

DETROIT, MICH.—Dr. Florence Cassidy, one of the "First Ladies" of COSERV and Director for 27 years of the Nationality Department and Foreign Visitors Program in Detroit's United Community Services, has resigned, as she put it, "to be free to travel."

At reception, Miss Cassidy (center) is joined by Richard Huegli, Executive Director of United Community Services, and Mrs. Mary Ball, her successor.

At a reception in her honor held at Wayne State University, more than 300 leaders of nationality and civic groups paid tribute. A dedicated friend of the foreign-born, Miss Cassidy's career spanned 50 years of humanitarian service. John F. Reichard, Chairman of COSERV's Executive Committee, wrote her:

"If ever an individual richly deserved the hardy American sobriquet of 'pioneer,' Florence Cassidy is that individual. What COSERV has become, indeed what numerous community councils throughout the nation have accomplished, has resulted from the vision, energy and devotion of such pioneering founders as you. . .You have always been there when you were needed and could be helpful, and I suspect that your COSERV friends will find you there in some new ways in the years ahead."

On October 19, Mrs. Mary G. Ball, former Chief Publicist for the City of Detroit, became Director of Community Programs for International Visitors, succeeding Miss Cassidy. The International Institute of Metropolitan Detroit now administers the programs.

RETURN OF A NATIVE

ATLANTA, GA.—Secretary of State Dean Rusk returned to his native Georgia on October 21 as one of its most distinguished former citizens. At the invitation of the American Bar Association he had agreed to address its regional meeting in Atlanta. On learning that the Secretary was to be in town, the Atlanta Committee for International Visitors invited Mr. Rusk, and Mrs. Rusk if she were to be with him, to meet informally with members of the Committee's Executive Board prior to his talk at the Bar Association. The Secretary promptly accepted the invitation of the thriving organization which has served more than 700 visitors from 81 countries since its inception only two years ago.

The visit of Secretary and Mrs. Rusk provided a spark that members feel will draw added community support. The Secretary talked informally on how foreign policy is made, stressing the contributions of those not in official diplomatic positions. It is important, he said, for individual citizens to realize that they can serve our foreign policy objectives wherever they are. Mrs. Rusk's presence was considered particularly significant because of her interest in and constant support of services to international visitors.

Mrs. Joseph Haas (center), Chairman of Atlanta's CIV chats with Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk during their visit to the southern city.

COSERV

National Council for Community Services to International Visitors

Washington International Center
Meridian House Foundation
1630 Crescent Place, N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20009

Return Requested

Nonprofit Org.
U. S. POSTAGE
PAID
Washington, D.C.
Permit No. 41854

Dr Leslie Dunbar
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Stree, N W
Atlanta, GEORGIA

A YEAR LATER WITH STATE PARKS

THEN....

A year ago the Director of State Parks contended that he inherited a system of 36 parks covering 39,000 acres. Thirty were designated for white, five of these had small areas set aside for Negro use. A sixth location for Negroes was approximately three acres minus toilet facilities, drinking water, a developed play area, and possessing a condemned swimming pool.

Most prominent among the state owned facilities is Jekyll Island operated under the Jekyll Island Authority. However, in a pattern operant in some other parks, Jekyll Island had a small designated area for Negroes.

These holdings are what Mr. Caldwell referred to in a communication as his inheritance on assuming office in early 1963. This was the situation about which we complained to him as Director of State Parks in June 1963. In reply to our complaint Mr. Caldwell wrote "The General Assembly had made it possible to correct part of this during the next two years...."

NOW....

Twelve calendar months later and no longer a neophyte on his job Mr. Caldwell's course is very clear. He has not parlayed his inheritance into a program designed to provide equal benefits for all citizens of Georgia or taken steps toward desegregation.

He has created a new Negro park by sub-dividing a previously all white park. He has successfully negotiated the sale of 2.3 million dollars in bonds, and secured federal implementation funds. For the record, these funds can be used to improve only those facilities for which the state holds clear title.

Sixteen white parks meet this qualification. Six Negro areas are in state leased and federally owned sites, hence are not eligible for improvement in this transaction. The seventh still has a condemned pool.

The fate of Jekyll Island rests with the U. S. District Court. The case has been heard but the decision has not been rendered.

In spelling out the use of these secured funds, Mr. Caldwell has assured that sixteen additional parks "designated" white will have rental cottages, comfort stations, service centers, recreational concessions etc, found in part at only one park for Negroes. Is this correction? Will it be necessary for Georgia taxpayers to go through the expense of litigation? Will we have public demonstrations before desegregation can take place in Georgia's parks?

PAGE (s) MISSING

HOW WILL WE SPEND OUR SUMMER LEISURE?

Visit the Bus Station:

We often hear, "The signs are down in our bus station but the Negroes still crowd in the old 'dirty side' and leave the formerly white side empty".

See if you can lend a hand. College students home for the summer might help you, NOT to disobey the law, NOT to go to jail but to quietly and peacefully encourage people to use their existing rights. You might find out the busiest times of day at the bus station. Make frequent visits, even daily, to talk with the people waiting, to allay their fears, so that they might sit in a more comfortable waiting room.

Enjoy Reading:

For all children - You and your friends could make a life long contribution to a child in introducing him to the treasures of the library. Busy mothers often do not take advantage of the summer reading programs. You could help. Prizes offered might be an added incentive. What plans does your library have for vacation activities? Is there a story hour? Who is invited?

For all adults - Visit your library and ask for a shelf of books to be placed in a conspicuous place, containing works of Negro writers, particularly Negro history. Use your leisure to read those books you have intended reading for the last several months or years! The librarian will probably be happy to order books you might suggest.

SPREAD THE WORD:

In barber shops and beauty parlors. No spot is more popular for conversation and heated arguments than the barber shop or the beauty parlor. Here people read whatever is at hand. Here is a perfect spot for a provocative article. Here a white person might have the opportunity of getting the new point of view by reading Ebony or Crisis or the local Negro Newspaper. Seek to help some one else understand a different point of view.

August 29, 1958, from the Atlanta Daily World

City Prison Farm Brutality Alleged

Crime + Dist

By EDDIE WILLIAMS

(This is the first in a series of articles on charges of deplorable conditions at the Atlanta Prison Farm.)

Highly placed and reliable sources have joined former Negro women prisoners in charging that irregularities exist in the Atlanta Prison Farm and have strongly urged that the prison farm — described by them as "the country club" — be investigated and "cleaned up."

These charges and suggestions were brought out in an investigation conducted by several Atlanta organizations. Results of the probe reveal that alleged irregularities are not as "wild" as officials have termed them.

MOLESTING ALLEGED

The charges seriously question the efficiency of prison personnel and hurl a blasting indictment against prison operations and activities, including molesting of Negro women inmates.

The city prison farm, located at [illegible] Key Rd., S.E., is under the direct supervision of H. H. Gibson who is its superintendent. Like the city jail, it houses persons who have been convicted in city court of misdemeanor crimes.

There are nearly a thousand inmates — both colored and white, male and female on the farm.

Misdemeanor or minor crimes which can result in imprisonment at the city farm include fighting, drunkenness, loitering, malicious

---

Crime ✓ Dist

An Anti-Crime Commission Would Help

ATLANTA DAILY WORLD AUG 8 1958

Surely no racial or social order would take pride in a citation which sets it apart as furnishing a disproportionate quota in the annals of crime. Where there is an obvious discernment of criminal elements in any given strata, it would naturally suggest that something must be radically wrong at the grass-roots causing this abnormal presentation of unfavorable conduct.

The abnormal disregard for set standards and the open abuse of rights and privileges of others would also suggest that such treatment be given as would correct this activity.

The recent survey, according to an unusual proportion of crime on the part of Negro citizens, is deeply deplored. The [illegible] of such a casualty in community behavior and attempts to explain it away would never be the full answers to the problem.

To honestly accept the challenge with remedial measures in an effort to offset such an alarming figure, would involve a revision of the practices meted out to Negro citizens. There should be ample room in the community for the development of the children. More parks, playgrounds and recreational activities should be provided as a move to help reduce delinquency.

On the other side of the ledger, we believe there is a feeling in the Negro community of the uncertainty of punishment where violations are concerned against other members of our racial group.

To help change this attitude, we suggest repeal of the state law which requires a separate listing of the taxpayers by race. The jury lists are taken from the taxpayers' list, and if taxpayers were indiscriminately listed, through chance, more Negroes would be drawn for jury duty, especially where all Negroes are concerned.

If the Negro is given more employment and participation in law enforcement, he will naturally feel a part of it, and will exhibit a proportionate increase of interest in helping to reduce and eliminate crime.

Crime is a detriment to the total society and every responsible citizen should become aware of the huge costs involved in its treatment, including the indirect taxpayers, because every person pays his share of taxes, whether he owns anything or not. Any consumer, whether it be food, clothing or medical care, pays his portion of the tax burden.

It is everybody's business to assist in curbing crime which affects the whole of the community. No individual is immune from such molestation and inconvenience involved in the commission of crime. It is a case of one for all—and all for one.

An anti-crime commission should be set up with members of both racial groups represented.

Molesting Of Negro W

mischief and other disorderly conduct offenses for which persons cannot pay a fine after conviction. Some offenses, however, carry straight prison sentences.

THE MAXIMUM PENALTY

Maximum city fine which a Municipal Court judge can levy is $50[illegible] or [illegible] days, or both according to a court official. The minimum fine is $1 or one day, or both.

The prison farm has been under observation from the Negro community for some time because of reports of alleged brutality, inhumane treatment, molesting, rape and other acts which do not lend to an air of rehabilitation which should be the primary concern of this and any other prison.

Perhaps the most flagrant charge is that some Negro women inmates have been forced into illicit sex relations and unnatural acts. Several persons allegedly affiliated with the prison have been named in signed statements as perpetrators in such acts.

Former women prisoners and reliable sources have charged that Negro women inmates are ordered to work in the field, the laundry, the kitchen, and clean prison quarters while the white women inmates' work—sewing and canning—is more in line with feminine occupations and with a constructive rehabilitation program.

MONEY WASTED

One source, deploring conditions at the prison, declared that the prison, through the lack of a well-rounded program for inmates, is wasting taxpayers' money.

Reports of alleged beatings and harrassing of Negro women in the prison have found their way to the outside where growing concern has been voiced in connection with the allegations. One former inmate swore she witnessed another woman prisoner being beaten with a broom handle.

A highly placed source described the prison farm as "the country club" because of the atmosphere in which it is run and because of the lack of discipline among both prison personnel and inmates.

DEMANDS MADE

Certain demands have been made by the Negro citizenry familiar

(Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

A Prompt Investigation Is In Order

ATLANTA DAILY WORLD AUG 31 1958

On the basis of charges from sources which may be considered authentic, we are of the opinion that a prompt inquiry should be made of the conduct at the City Prison Farm. These charges are serious and they are in the possession of a member of the staff of this newspaper. Some of them have been printed in a prior edition of this paper.

They range from inadequate and improper supervision of the colored women prisoners to immoral conduct.

A few years ago similar charges were brought to the attention of this newspaper and its editor took them up with the proper officials. Subsequently a colored woman matron was employed at the prison. Now we understand there is no colored matron at the institution. The charges then are similar to those we are now hearing about.

There is no excuse for the mistreatment of prisoners, and especially women, while in the custody of the law. So, we shall turn over our information, without revealing the source of it except in cases where we have specific permission to reveal the source, to the proper authorities and we hope and shall insist that necessary action be taken to correct any wrong doings that exist at the prison farm.

continuation of article:

with the prison farm. These include the hiring of Negro guards and matrons to supervise Negro inmates. At ~~present~~ present there are no Negro supervisory personnel on the farm, despite Mayor Hartsfield's appointment of a Negro matron several years ago.

The woman did not hold her position long, and when she departed, white guards continued to supervise the women.

Another woman was later appointed as nurse-matron but is no longer affiliated with the prison, it was reported.

Other complaints are that Negro women are at all times in the custody of ~~Negro male~~ white male guards, at least one of whom allegedly handles sick persons in the absence of qualified medical personnel.

APR 7 1964

COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta, Georgia Telephone: 523-1581

YOU ARE ALL WELCOME...Laws and customs change from day to day, sometimes from hour to hour. There are degrees of "segregation" and "desegregation" — "segregated" may mean no Negroes or it may mean Negroes and whites segregated within the same facility. It is customary to make changes in racial policies without public announcement, which is at times necessary and desirable. This does make it difficult, however, for those affected to secure accurate information. Periodically the COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS OF GREATER ATLANTA compiles a list of places which as far as we can determine, are open to all. We welcome additions and corrections. This list is accurate as of April 7, 1964, to the best of our knowledge. We have omitted those places where Negroes may have been served but where the management stated that the policy is not certain.

EATING PLACES

YWCA Cafeteria, Edgewood & Ivy
YMCA Coffee Shop, Luckie St.
Stouffeur's, Downstairs Merchandise Mart
Top O' the Mart (also Stouffeur's)
Rich's Magnolia Room and other eating places in the store
Davison's Tea Room and other eating places
Grant's
Jacob's Pharmacies (all branches)
Sears-Roebuck & Co. (all lunch counters in all stores)
H. L. Green
Kress (Broad and Peachtree)
McCrory's
Lane's Drug Stores
Franklin Simon's (lunch counters and restaurant)
Walgreen's (all have been given instructions to serve everyone)
Woolworth's
Newberry's
Emory University Food Service Center
Herren's
Yohannon's
Caruso's Italian Restaurant (Piedmont Road)
Johnny Reb's (Forsyth, W. Peachtree and Roosevelt Highway)
Crossroads (but not on Stewart Avenue)
Seven Steers (downtown-691 Peachtree St.)
Miami Buffet (downtown)
Dale's Cellar
S&W
Rex Fine Foods
All 4 Howard Johnson Restaurants
Davis Fine Foods (Luckie, Marietta, Pryor and Forsyth Streets)
Town House (Forsyth Street)
Escoe's Restaurant (2143 Peachtree Rd.)
The Golden Palm (Atlanta Americana)

Eating Places, Cont'd.

Hank and Jerry's (1006 Peachtree)
The Riviera (1630 Peachtree St.)
Dobbs House (all locations)
Shoney's Big Boy (all locations)
The Tiki
Fisherman's Wharf
Golden Goddess (Dinkler Plaza)
Red Velvet (Atlanta Americana)
Room at the Top (Atlanta Americana)
Wit's End
Rendezvous (Atlanta Biltmore)*
Oak Room (Piedmont)*

MOST HOTELS AND MOTELS WILL ARRANGE PRIVATE INTERRACIAL PARTIES

*Will serve Negroes who are registered guests.

HOTELS

Air Host Inn
Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel
Atlantan Hotel
Atlanta Biltmore
Atlanta Cabana
Dinkler Plaza
Holiday Inn
Hilton Inn
Howard Johnson's Motor Lodges
Peachtree Manor
Piedmont Hotel
Riviera Hotel
Marriott Motor Hotel

CULTURAL AND RECREATIONAL FACILITIES

Atlanta Art Galleries
Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Concerts
Actors Equity Production
Theater Under the Stars (at Chastain Park)
Jewish Community Center
Quaker House
Copa Atlanta
Wit's End
Atlanta Choral Guild
Atlanta City Golf Courses
Atlanta Public Library (all branches)
Decatur-DeKalb Library
All City of Atlanta owned and operated facilities
Recreational facilities operated by City of Decatur, excluding pools

DOWNTOWN MOVIES

Fox
Rialto
Roxy
Rhodes
Peachtree Art
Loew's

LEGITIMATE THEATERS

Pocket
Academy (including Shakespeare Festival)

NEIGHBORHOOD MOVIES

Gordon
Emory
Lenox Square
Cherokee
Hilan
Plaza
Atlantic
Techwood

DRIVE-INS

Bolton
Fulton Blvd.
Glenwood
Peachtree
Piedmont
South Expressway
Steward
Thunderbird
Starlight
Scott

STONE MOUNTAIN

All facilities, including Stone Acres Plantation, and Stable of Thoroughbreds (old autos)

HOSPITALS

DeKalb General, South Fulton, Kennestone and Aidmore provide separate wards or wings for Negroes and whites. Grady's emergency clinics, ambulances and operating rooms are integrated; other services are still segregated. St. Joseph's is integrated. Emory University's Hospital accepts Negro patients referred by physicians who are members of the hospital staff.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

CHURCHES

All Episcopal, Catholic, Unitarian-Universalists, Quaker House. Most others are open to visitors, but policies vary with individual churches.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

All colleges and universities in the Greater Atlanta area.
Certain Atlanta public schools
Catholic Parochial Schools
Trinity Presbyterian School
Smith-Hughes and Carver Vocational Schools
DeKalb Area Trade School
Grady Hospital X-ray And Technical Schools

ORGANIZATIONS

Active Voters
Atlanta Association for Gifted Children
Atlanta Chapter, American Association for the United Nations
Greater Atlanta Council of Churches
League of Women Voters (of Atlanta, of DeKalb County)
Women's International League for Peace and Freedom
Democratic Party organizations of DeKalb and Fulton Counties
Republican Party organizations of DeKalb and Fulton Counties
Alcholics Anonymous
Metropolitan Atlanta Mental Health Association

EMPLOYMENT OFFICES

All locations of Georgia State Employment Service. Jobs listed in the Help Wanted ads of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION and the ATLANTA JOURNAL are not listed according to race.

TRANSPORTATION

No segregation on busses or in taxi service.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

NEWS from
COLLIER BOOKS

PUBLIC RELATIONS DEPARTMENT
60 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y. 10011
TEL. 620-4153

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE Contact: Barbara Heckethorn (212)620-4152

A one-hour radio discussion between Howard N. Meyer, New York attorney and editor of ARMY LIFE IN A BLACK REGIMENT (Collier Books, 95¢), and Leon Lewis of WWRL in New York City's ~~Harlem~~ Woodside, has been selected by National Educational Radio, a division of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters for its "Special of the Week" series. The program will be aired within the next few weeks over 103 stations of the National Educational Radio Network in 31 states coast-to-coast.(In N.Y. WRVR-FM-July 1/8.00P.M

Originally broadcast earlier this year in observance of Negro History Week, the discussion covers significant contributions of the Negro to American life and government from the Reconstruction Era to the present time. Mr. Meyer believes that the Negro contribution to American society has been seriously underplayed and greatly distorted.

As a result of the WWRL broadcast, Mr. Meyer was requested to write the cover story for the June 1964 Negro Digest. His article is entitled "Enriched History for the White Man."

ARMY LIFE IN A BLACK REGIMENT, the diary of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the white colonel of the first Negro fighting unit in the Civil War, was long out of print prior to its 1962 publication as a Collier Books paperback with an introduction by Mr. Meyer. The book went into its second printing in fall 1963. Howard Meyer's own rare first edition of Higginson's book, which prompted him to crusade for its re-publication, was presented to President Kennedy in February 1963. It is being held for inclusion in the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library at Harvard.

An upcoming Collier Books paperback which also treats the place of the Negro in American history is THE NEGRO IN THE MAKING OF AMERICA, an original book by Benjamin ~~Quarrels~~ Quarles of Morgan State College. It will be published in September 1964 at 95¢.

* * * *

6/11/64

'Manucy's Raiders' a Whi

Reprinted from late Saturday editions

By CLARENCE JONES
Herald Staff Writer

ST. AUGUSTINE — Hoss Manucy says he has a thousand white men under his command and townspeople call them "Manucy's Raiders."

Manucy lives at the end of a deadend road six miles north of St. Augustine. He has 14 children and a yard full of dogs.

The frame house with its rusting, ripped screens has grown with the family. Most of it is green. One end is red. The yard is littered with automobile parts, empty Clorox bottles and broken toys.

A black dog rages at strangers at the end of a chain. Four hounds [illegible] in the [illegible] around the house. A pig [illegible] snorts under the [illegible].

In the back yard, half a dozen of the younger children frolic in a concrete block swimming pool Manucy built. The water is two feet deep and brown. A little girl floats a baby on an innertube. The baby [illegible] and then giggles when the water splashes in her eyes.

* * *

HOLSTEAD RICHARD MANUCY is 45. He is 220 pounds of muscle except where his belly is beginning to bulge. His trademark is a cowboy hat. He comes out of the house with a battered black hat that looks like it was used for the last two years of Rawhide shows.

He brings a loaded pistol and puts in on the car seat.

The hat covers his baldness, and the bushy black hair bunches around his neck and ears. He has the soft, slow, drawl of a lifetime in St. Augustine. It takes a while for him to open up with strangers. When he does, he can talk your ears off.

Manucy has always headed the two-year-old Ancient City Hunting Club. He claims 1,476 members. "We're better organized than the niggers are, and the niggers know it," Manucy said. "That's the only way we can win. Us white people have got to stick together."

About two dozen of Manucy's men have two-way radios in their cars. You can spot them by the tall, whipping antennas. They patrol the streets almost constantly these days.

—Herald Staff Photo by BILL KUENZEL

Sheriff's Dog Serves as Guard for Martin Luther King

. . . integration leader was returned to jail following grand jury testimony

"We've got a better communications system among ourselves than the police, I guess," Manucy chuckled.

The attacks on racial demonstrators and cameramen here have been the work of kids, Manucy says, not his men.

* * *

MANUCY'S NAME was on a list of special deputies that St. Johns County Sheriff L. O. Davis submitted to federal Judge Bryan Simpson last week.

Simpson noted that Manucy was a convicted felon and asked if the Ancient City Hunting Club as not another name for the KuKlux Klan.

"Should they have put my name in the paper like that?" Manucy asked. "Sure, I've got a record. Everybody around here knows that. It's a whisky record. I never stole nothing or anything like that.

"I haven't messed with no whisky since I was in court in '56. Now I'm not working because of what was in the paper. I got laid off.

"Actually, I never was a special deputy. I had a permit to tote a gun. I give up the permit. Actually, I was requested to give it up. I got a letter to that effect.

"We don't carry no guns ourselves. Out on the street, I mean. Sure, we have them in our cars. I think every white citizen has got a gun in his car. I had the permit to carry my pistol when I was on fire patrol or running cattle in the woods. I didn't have any arresting authority at all.

"They tried to connect us with the Klan in these newspaper stories. Actually, we're not tied to the Klan in any way. We're completely separate. We did parade in that te Force in St. Augustine

White Citizens parade in Duval County, and the Klan led it.

"Now I'm definitely not knocking the Klan. It's a wonderful organization. A lot of people have the wrong idea about the Klan. Besides, who ever heard of a Catholic being a Klansman anyhow."

* * *

MANUCY MAY have saved the life of a police officer here Thursday night. He wrestled a gun from a white man who became hysterical when officers used tear gas to stop a group of white teenag[illegible] on marching into the [illegible] section.

"[illegible] just happened to be [illegible] when the kids started [illegible] trooper told them not to take another step. This guy I know gets mad. Real mad. I got ahold of him. He was so mad he told our boys not to lay a hand on him.

"We were pulling him back to the car when the police come around in a circle and throwed that gas grenade. I don't know where the gun came from, but I look around and he's got it in hand.

"[illegible] policeman that was standing [illegible] shot, he'd [illegible]. That's a fact. [illegible] wouldn't have been no way to control the crowd at all [illegible] shot had been fired.

"I [illegible] down and got the gun away and we hustled him into the car and got him out of here."

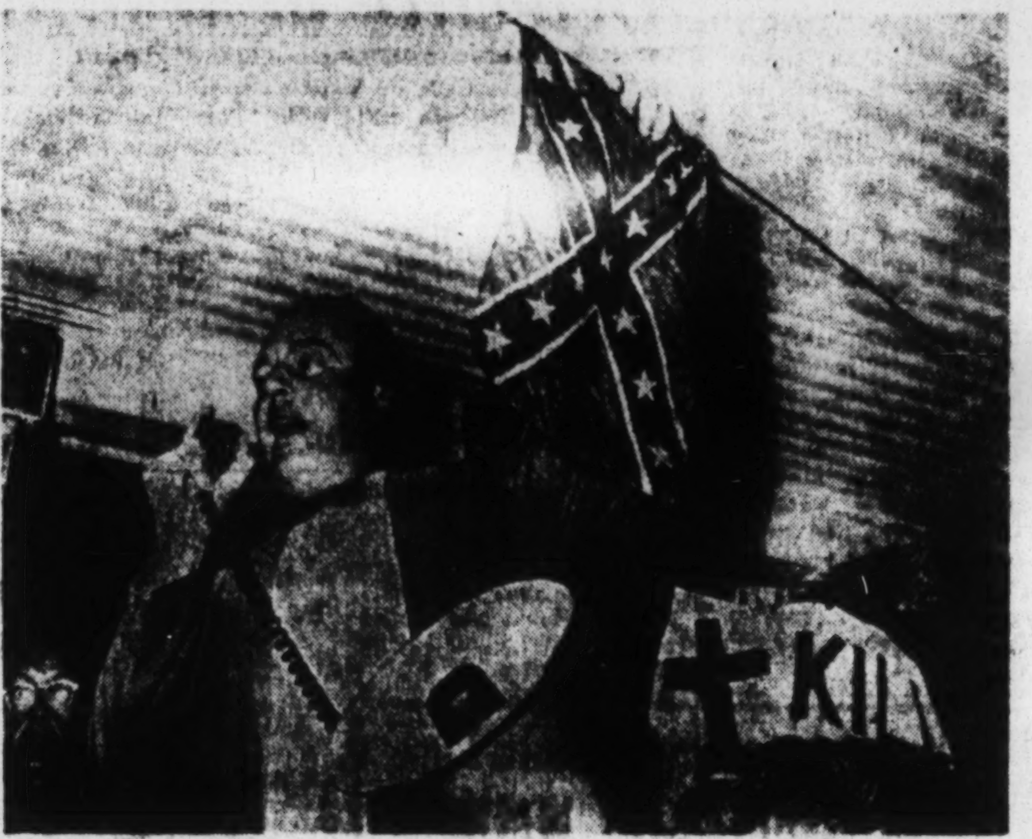
* * *

EVERY [illegible] officer in this section knows Manucy. Sheriff Davis was Manucy's coach when Manucy played [illegible] for St. Joseph's Academy. "He was one of the [illegible] ever lived. The best."

"I tell you, we know what's going on around here," Manucy [illegible] of his members. "We've been asked for help before by the police and the sheriff's office.

"But we refused to be special deputies this time. We're not going to fight white people. I can't understand why white citizens would want to protect niggers against white people. They're really just protecting niggers."

The Ancient City Hunting Club provides bail for whites arrested during racial demonstrations, Manucy said. "The kids that get caught, we bond them out. Some of the parents try to pay us back, but we won't take it. We don't want to be beholden to anybody."



—Associated Press Wirephoto

Segregationist From Atlanta Waves Flag

. . . J. B. Stoner urges on whites at slave market

Manucy's son was driving the car in which a white man was shot and killed here last fall. "The bullet came right by his head and hit this boy in the head beside him."

* * *

MANUCY says his club could organize a march of section. "We don't know whether it would do any good. Not in violence, now. In protest. We'd show them the white's strength.

(Hours later, Manucy participated in the white march through St. Augustine's Negro area. It was not known, however, if he actually organized it.)

"The niggers made a speech the the white people was scared of niggers. That's not so. There's no white man scared of a nigger. That's a proven fact in St. Johns County.

"The niggers said they wouldn't fight and they wouldn't run. Well, they did both. They did run and they did stand up and fight. So we won that round. They went against what they said they'd do and it was just kids made 'em do it," he laughed.

* * *

MANUCY SAYS his club will accept any upstanding white citizen after his background is investigated. The club is a corporation with a clubhouse and hunting preserve. Lately, meetings have been called two or three times a week.

"We don't go in for this here rock throwing. We don't have to do that. We can win by sticking together. None of our boys will go in Woolworth's or McCrory's since they integrated.

"Actually, if it gets much worse, there's only one way to stop it. We'll ask white people to fire every nigger in the county. That's really the way to do it. They'll find out niggers can't survive without whites in St. Johns County. We have some rights, too. Not many, but some."

His members come from a 30-mile radius and from every walk of life, he said. "No, we don't have any women. Not even an auxiliary. The women folks have been mighty understanding about this thing. We have to spend a lot of time and money patrolling.

"After all, that's what we're doing it for — to protect the women and the children."

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

A MATTER OF MONEY

New South will increase the magazine subscription price from $2 to $2.50 a year September 1. Old readers may renew their subscriptions and new subscribers may take New South at the present rate of $2 for one year, until September 1. The $2 rate will not apply to renewals or new subscriptions of more than one year.

Should be a space here

The $2.50 price buys 11 issues of New South, including the big, combined July-August magazine, and one or two special issues on important events or new issues in civil rights.

The Southern Regional Council invites annual subscriptions to all our publications, except New South, at $5 a year, beginning July 1.

SRC heretofore has distributed reports, studies and persuasions from our research department to mailing lists of persons, press and organizations, according to interest, and to individuals and groups on request. Many persons and agencies ask to be "put on your mailing list to get all your materials." Since there is no one mailing list, such distribution of all publications to one person or group, regardless of interest, could be wasteful and expensive. To meet the requests of people and organizations who are interested in every field on which SRC reports, we announce the $5-a-year subscription to all our literature.

Should new sentence
no "and" as in original copy)

Annual Subscribers will receive 12 to 15 publications during the year.

should be colon

should be colon

Money

Last year SRC published these reports and studies:

Pamphlets - Token Segregation and Beyond; The Desegregation of Public Schools; a Psychiatric Study; The Economic Status of Negroes; In the Nation and in the South.

Special Report -- Plans for Progress: Atlanta Survey.

Special Issues of New South ---March on Washington, September 1963; Direct Action in the South, October-November 1963.

no comma

no comma

Miscellaneous --- The City and Minority Group (with Potomac Institute and International City Managers Association); The Civil Rights Crisis; A Synopsis of Recent Development, in four parts.

Leadership Reports --- L -- Reports 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, reprints of speeches, articles and studies on ideas, events and community planning affecting business.

: colon

A Matter of Money

New South magazine

~~We will~~ increase the subscription price from $2 to $2.50 a year September 1.

~~Old subscribers may renew New subscribers. Old readers may renew their subscriptions at the present $2 rate for one year until September 1, and new subscribers~~

Old readers may renew their subscriptions, and new subscribers may take New South, at the present rate of $2 for one year, until September 1. ~~Subscriptions of more than one year [illegible]~~ The $2 rate will not apply to renewals or new subscriptions of more than one year.

The $2.50 price buys 11 ~~[illegible]~~ issues of New South, including the big, combined July-August magazine, and one or two special issues on important ~~[illegible]~~ new events or ~~[illegible] in the [illegible]~~ issues in civil rights.

Space

~~The Southern Regional Council July 1 will invite subscribers to all our publications~~

The Southern Regional Council invites annual subscriptions to all our publications, except New South, at $5 a year, beginning July 1.

~~Reports, studies and persuasions from our research [illegible] distributed to mailing lists of persons, press~~

SRC heretofore has distributed reports, studies and persuasions from our research department to mailing lists of persons, press and organizations, according to interest, and to individuals and groups on request. Many persons and agencies ask to be "put on your mailing list to get all your materials," a~~[illegible]~~ and since ~~[illegible]~~ there is no one mailing list, such distribution of all ~~our~~ publications to one person or group, regardless of interest, could be wasteful and expensive. To meet the requests of people and organizations who are interested in every field on which SRC reports, the we announce the $5-a-year subscription to all ~~[illegible]~~ our literature.

~~[illegible]~~ Annual Subscribers will receive 12 to 15 publications during the year.

Last year SRC published these reports and studies:

Pamphlets--Token Segregation and Beyond; The Deseregation of Public Schools: A Psychiatric Study; The Economic Status of Negroes: In the Nation and in the South.

Special Report---Plans for Progress: Atlanta Survey

Special Issues of New South---March on Washington, Sepemper 1963; Direct Action in the South, October-November 1963

Miscellaneous---The City and Minority Groups (with Potomac Institute and International City Managers Association); The Civil Rights Crisis: A Synopsis of Recent Developments, in four parts.

L~~Reports--Excerpts from Speeches of Governor Bert Combs of Kentucky and Secre~~

~~E Reports--~~

Leadership Reports---L-Reports 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, reprints of speeches, articles and studies on ideas, events and community planning affecting business.

MEMORANDUM

THE GEORGIA CITIZENS COMMITTEE
OF
THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON CRIME AND DELINQUENCY

The attached table was prepared in the Southern Office of NCCD, to show some comparative information about states from information available from several sources.

It illustrates that Georgia has the highest percentage of inmate population in its state penitentiary of all states in the U.S. Apparently, Georgia has more than twice the rate per 100,000 of general population in its prisons, as does South Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas, Illinois, and Iowa. It has three times as many as Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Connecticut, and five times as many as Delaware.

The increased rate from 142 to 184.8 from 1950 to 1959 is also the greatest rate of increase in the United States. Whereas, from 1950 to 1960, the general population increased 14% in Georgia, Georgia's prison population increased 52% from 1950 to 1959.

You'll find that in some states the prison population has actually decreased and in many, the increased prison population has not exceeded the percentage of increased general population.

This means that Georgia is undoubtedly spending a disproportionate amount of tax dollars on support of inmate population. It has been demonstrated elsewhere that a greater percentage of offenders may be placed on probation for about 1/10 the cost of prison care and with no increased danger to the community.

Certainly, this is one of the important areas where the Georgia Citizens Committee, through enabling and influencing a greater use of probation services, can effect a material saving in cost and with greater opportunity for rehabilitation of the offender, as well as protection for the public.

This is just one example of many problems with which the Georgia Citizens Committee will be concerned.

FW:mb

PREPARED BY SOUTHERN OFFICE OF NATIONAL COUNCIL ON CRIME AND DELINQUENCY
530 LITTLEFIELD BUILDING
AUSTIN 1, TEXAS

1961

STATE	PRISON INMATES END OF 1950 (6)	PRISON INMATES END OF 1959 (6)	% of Change	POPULATION 1950 (5)	POPULATION 1960 (5)	% of Change	PRISON INMATE RATE PER 100,000 EST. CIVILIAN POP. (6)		CRIME RATE PER 100,000 EST. CIVILIAN POP. - ALL AGES		(6) % OF PERSONS RELEASED THAT WERE PAROLED		% OF PERSONS RELEASED CONDITIONALLY (6)		PER CAPITA INCOME (5)		AMT. INCOME IN MILLIONS
							1950	1959	1957	1959 (7)	1950	1959	1950	1959	1950	1958 (1)	1950	1958 (1)
New York	15,587	16,821	+ 7.	14,830,192	16,782,304	+13.	103.1	102.3	874.2	962.6	74.3	75.5			1,883	2,585	28,054	41,954
California	11,464	19,299	+68.	10,586,223	15,717,204	+48.	106.2	134.8	1675.3	1635.8	75.9	81.9			1,848	2,559	19,627	36,692
Pennsylvania	6,856	7,924	+16.	10,498,012	11,319,366	+ 7.	70.6	70.1	606.0	655.8	73.9	85.5			1,566	2,127	16,477	23,617
Illinois	7,420	8,660	+17.	8,712,176	10,081,158	+15.	90.4	85.3	703.8	951.2	43.1	49.5			1,827	2,435	15,984	24,076
Ohio	9,132	11,448	+25.	7,946,627	9,706,397	+22.	114.7	118.3	644.7	656.9	92.4	93.7	.04		1,614	2,104	12,891	20,409
Texas	6,604	11,123	+68.	7,711,194	9,579,677	+24.	84.3	119.0	955.2	1026.9	32.1	38.1			1,340	1,814	10,375	17,007
Michigan	9,132	9,622	+ 5.	6,371,766	7,823,194	+22.	134.1	121.1	959.3	1077.2	83.7	83.1			1,684	2,099	10,803	16,507
New Jersey	4,005	4,101	+ 2.	4,835,329	6,066,782	+25.	82.8	69.7	765.5	778.4	77.4	83.0			1,792	2,521	8,699	14,494
Massachusetts	2,315	1,913	-17.	4,690,514	5,148,578	+ 9.	50.7	39.0	723.4	708.1	61.3	68.3	6.		1,662	2,394	7,799	11,641
Florida	3,860	6,802	+75.	2,771,305	4,951,560	+78.	142.7	145.5	1306.0	1386.0	31.7	43.1	.3	.1	1,288	1,876	3,632	8,334
Indiana	4,603	5,268	+14.	3,934,224	4,662,498	+18.	119.6	113.8	759.2	775.9	82.1	74.8	2.		1,521	1,990	6,006	9,118
North Carolina	4,439	5,949	+34.	4,061,929	4,556,155	+12.	107.8	133.6	606.1	652.9	25.5	30.5			1,009	1,384	4,108	6,297
Missouri	3,252	3,614	+11.	3,954,653	4,319,813	+ 9.	85.2	85.8	908.2	1018.8	23.3	29.4			1,443	2,037	5,704	8,702
Virginia	4,540	5,909	+30.	3,318,680	3,966,949	+19.	137.6	153.0	820.3	768.3	41.0	37.4	.8	.9	1,222	1,674	4,024	6,586
Wisconsin	1,880	2,640	+40.	3,434,578	3,951,777	+12.	58.6	65.9	421.8	428.5	62.3	71.9	.1	18.	1,467	1,936	5,060	7,624
Georgia	4,542	6,963	+52.	3,444,578	3,943,116	+14.	142.0	184.8	786.1	807.8	43.6(2)	29.6(3)	31.	48.	1,016	1,487	3,510	5,678
Tennessee	2,683	2,914	+ 8.	3,291,718	3,567,089	+ 8,	84.2	83.7	745.0	821.5	35.9	39.5			995	1,439	3,288	4,992
Minnesota	1,834	2,137	+14.	2,982,483	3,413,864	+14.	63.2	63.0	514.0	593.3	69.4	70.5		.9	1,397	1,916	4,184	6,468
Alabama	4,416	5,449	+23.	3,061,743	3,266,740	+ 6.	146.4	172.0	580.9	730.5	31.6	27.1			867	1,359	2,659	4,364
Louisiana	2,583	3,561	+37.	2,683,516	3,257,022	+21.	98.8	113.3	715.9	702.0	48.3	60.9		.2	1,089	1,576	2,937	4,901
Maryland	3,952	5,010	+26.	2,343,001	3,100,689	+32.	167.5	168.6	854.3	893.8	16.3	26.8	.02		1,588	2,221	3,755	6,566
Kentucky	2,995	3,430	+14.	2,944,806	3,038,156	+ 3.	112.0	111.4	671.8	751.9	33.0	39.6	1.3	48.	958	1,397	2,834	4,303
Washington	2,151	2,876	+43.	2,378,963	2,853,214	+19.	98.5	104.0	981.6	958.0	98.8	98.7	.9	.1	1,671	2,160	3,986	5,982
Iowa	2,081	2,212	+ 6.	2,621,073	2,757,537	+ 5.	79.0	78.8	421.2	467.1	38.2	44.0			1,447	1,863	3,799	5,258
Connecticut	1,081	1,500	+38.	2,007,280	2,535,234	+26.	50.8	62.4	619.3	630.9	79.3	84.4	1.1	.3	1,908	2,817	3,860	6,524
South Carolina	1,583	2,131	+34.	2,117,027	2,382,594	+12.	72.7	90.2	651.6	772.0	5.5(4)	12.3	13.		881	1,218	1,869	2,929
Oklahoma	2,430	2,706	+11.	2,233,351	2,328,284	+ 4.	108.1	120.7	921.2	863.2	13.2	14.2			1,133	1,740	2,514	3,975
Kansas	1,895	2,248	+21.	1,905,299	2,178,611	+43.	103.5	106.8	617.0	630.0	83.5	83.5		1.	1,374	2,001	2,643	4,234
Mississippi	2,168	2,057	- 5.	2,178,914	2,178,141	-.03	100.0	95.1	341.8	420.4	28.9	25.4	3.	6.	729	1,053	1,590	2,302
West Virginia	2,974	2,492	-16.	2,005,552	1,860,421	- 7.	144.3	126.9	359.9	456.8	56.3	73.0	.1	.1	1,094	1,509	2,203	2,972
Arkansas	1,471	1,911	+29.	1,909,511	1,768,687	- 6.	80.2	110.3	519.2	558.9	73.2	57.8	.2		805	1,228	1,539	2,168
Oregon	1,542	1,552	+.6	1,521,341	1,768,687	+16.	100.5	88.2	747.2	819.4	47.0	41.8			1,602	2,006	2,451	3,556
Colorado	1,446	2,012	+39.	1,325,089	1,753,947	+32.	113.7	121.6	1076.8	1184.2	92.2	95.5			1,446	2,047	1,930	3,503
Nebraska	1,131	1,237	+10.	1,325,510	1,411,330	+	86.4	85.8	390.8	448.3	17.6	24.0			1,468	1,894	1,949	2,759
Arizona	900	1,493	+72.	749,587	1,302,161	+72.	117.5	123.2	1346.8	1500.2	70.1	47.1			1,297	1,932	979	2,203
Maine	698	696	-.3	913,774	969,265	+ 5.	81.1	74.7	418.5	478.6	78.4	84.4	3.		1,188	1,704	1,087	1,622
New Mexico	665	1,136	+70.	681,187	951,023	+39.	104.9	133.0	1127.3	1170.2	70.1	66.0			1,163	1,838	798	1,548
Utah	469	533	+13.	688,862	890,627	+29.	81.6	60.8	800.5	827.1	65.9	51.6	.5	18.	1,283	1,753	892	1,516
Rhode Island	248	274	+11.	791,896	859,488	+ 8.	36.6	32.3	882.7	1058.2	42.9	56.0	.6		1,644	1,966	1,207	1,720
South Dakota	411	561	+36.	652,740	680,514	+ 4.	69.3	82.5	449.6	597.7	14.4.	44.3	39.	20.	1,213	1,894	793	1,147
Montana	575	588	+ 1.	591,024	674,767	+15.	100.8	86.3	664.8	863.7	50.4	78.8			1,606	1,920	957	1,321
Idaho	469	509	+ 7.	588,637	667,191	+13.	87.3	77.2	570.9	657.6	57.7	24.7			1,279	1,701	757	1,126
Hawaii				499,794	632,772	+22				1201.0					1,731	1,852	689	1,154
North Dakota	224	870	+20.	619,636	632,446	+ 2.	38.0	42.3	321.7	336.9	24.6	38.3			1,260	1,697	781	1,103
New Hampshire	207	147	-29.	533,242	606,921	+13.	44.3	25.3	349.4	470.5	95.5	93.0	.9	3.	1,314	1,885	699	1,101
Delaware	161	232	+44.	318,085	446,292	+39.	49.2	52.0	657.6	869.2	16.3	17.0			2,153	2,760	689	1,253
Vermont	260	315	+21.	377,747	389,881	+ 3.	68.7	84.9	375.4	366.6	29.1	13.1	43.	38.	1,185	1,745	448	649
Wyoming	368	387	+.5	290,529	330,066	+13.	144.4	121.7	950.5	762.1	24.3	24.7			1,629	2,088	474	668
Nevada	285	399	+40	160,083	285,278	+72.	151.9	146.7	1703.8	1915.8	86.0	16.3	11.		1,938	2,569	314	686
Alaska				128,643	226,167	+75.
AVERAGE							97.6	106.1	835.2	896.0	55.1	58.7			1,491	2,057

(1) Last Available Year
(2) 31% Conditional Releases
(3) 48% Conditional Releases
(4) 13% Conditional Releases
(5) Statistical Abstract of U. S. 1960 - U. S. Chamber of Commerce
(6) National Prisoner Statistics 1950 & 1959 - Federal Bureau of Prisons
(7) FBI Uniform Crime Reports 1959

Leslie W. Dunbar, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council

Clarence D. Coleman, Southern Field Director
National Urban League

Wyatt tee Walker, Executive Director
Southern Christian Leadership Conference

Margaret Long, Director of Information
Southern Regional Council

Norman C. Jimerson, Executive Secretary
Alabama Council on Human Relations

Zenas Sears, Manager
Radio Station WAOK

Eliza Paschal, Executive Director
Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations

James Forman, Executive Secretary
Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee

Frances Pauley, Executive Director
Georgia Council on Human Relations

Rufus Lewis, Chariman Voter Registration Committee
Montgomery Improvement Association (Alabama)

Ruby Hurley, Southeast Regional Secretary
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

James A. Moss, Director of Research
Southern Regional Co uncil

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Washington, D. C.

March 6, 1958

100-2-11
A-5-1

Mrs. A. C. Henry
Route No. 3 Box 387
Austell. Georgia

Dear Mrs. Henry:

The White House Office has referred your letter of February 25, 1958, to the Department for acknowledgement. You request assistance for your son who is detained in prison.

The authority of the President to extend clemency to offenders is limited to those cases in which some federal statute has been involved. It does not appear , therefore that either the President or the Department of Justice can assist you. However, if you have not already done so, it is suggested that you appeal to the Board of Pardons and Paroles, Atlanta, Georgia, for assistance in your son's case.

Sincerely yours,
S. A. ANDRETTA
Administrative Assistant Attorney General

I have the copy of this from Pres. Isenhower. You can tell by the date how I tried to help get my son released to get his leg fixed so he could lead a normal life, but no one cared to help.

OPEN LETTER TO GOV. VANDIVER

Prisons Release Hardened Men

By JOHN PENNINGTON

An open letter to Governor Vandiver—

Dear Governor:

One day last week you had a few words to say about the prisons in Georgia. The gist of it was that you consider the penal situation in pretty good shape, you endorse its present modus operandi, and you find it difficult working up sympathy for the incorrigibles.

Is there any sympathy for the society upon which these incorrigibles are to be released after the blacksmith process of hammering them into more hardened criminals is completed?

They will be released, you know. Statistics show that 95 per cent of all convicts eventually are discharged.

* * *

LEAVING THE subject of personal emotions for the moment, take a brief look at the views of the eminent psychiatrist, Dr. Karl Menninger, who said:

"Today it is no secret that our official, prison-threat theory of crime control is an utter failure. Criminologists have known this for years. When pocket-picking was punishable by hanging, in England, the crowds that gathered about the gallows to enjoy the spectacle of an execution were particularly likely to have their pockets picked by skillful operators who, to say the least, were not deterred by the exhibition of justice."

On the subject of who falls victim to "our antiquated penal system," Dr. Menninger said (in an article in Harper's Magazine):

Dr. Menninger

Dr. Weltner

"It is not the successful criminal. . . . It is the unsuccessful. . . . The clumsy, the desperate, the obscure, the friendless, the defective, the diseased. . . . But they are not the professional criminals, many of whom occupy high places. In some instances the crime is the merest accident or incident or impulse, expressed under unbearable stress. More often the offender is a persistently perverse, lonely and resentful individual who joins the only group to which he is eligible — the outcasts and the antisocial."

* * *

DR. MENNINGER seems to write as if he felt sympathy for the outcasts. He went on:

"And what do we do with such offenders? After a solemn public ceremony we pronounce them enemies of the people, and consign them for arbitrary periods to institutional confinement. . . . Here they languish. . . . Then with a planlessness and stupidity only surpassed by that of their original incarceration they are dumped back upon society, regardless of whether any change has taken place in them for the better and with every assurance that changes have taken place in them for the worse."

Which gets back around to the starting point: That these incorrigibles and all other prisoners in the state system, 95 per cent of them, their offenses notwithstanding, will be turned loose in society.

* * *

ANOTHER person of eminence, Dr. Philip Weltner of Atlanta, put it differently: He asked: Are we living up to what we know is our greatest obligation?

And while this enlightened talk goes on, there has been in Georgia serious talk, by top penal people, of favoring the gallows pole, county level, and a whipping post for the incorrigibles, to further punish them. And naked they go, in many prison camps, into bread-and-water solitary. This under camp-wide policy, despite contentions that the convicts are stripped, each man considered individually, to prevent self-destruction.

Do you really lend your support to head-clippings, body-strippings and starvation, Governor? To willful physical and mental depreciation of a human body, though it be possessed by a criminal? To county profiteering off state prisoners (last board meeting, it was reported by Mr. Bill Key that Jasper County had made enough off its prison camp to lower the county tax rate)?

Turn to Page 5-C

OPEN LETTER

Continued From Page 1-C

You said: "If they give evidence to the fact that they can be rehabilitated—fine."

* * *

IF THOSE nearly 5,000 in the state camps give such evidence, whose responsibility is it to afford the rehabilitation?

You said: "If any guard in the penal system is guilty of brutality, certainly we will not let him remain — if it can be proved."

And the last five words hold the key nto the nature of the system: if it can be proved.

A guard mistreats a convict. The convict complains to the warden. The warden calls an inspector. The convict tells the inspector the guard hit him, without provocation. The guard tells the inspector the prisoner "jumped" him. And nothing has been proved, because the guard is always right.

* * *

SORT OF LIKE the incident over in Gwinnett County, investigation of which ended with the reporter who "instigated" it being made villain, and the matter closed on the basis of a grand jury investigation which was not made.

You said: "I have complete confidence in Mr. Jack Forrester and Mr. J. B. Hatchett. They are able men. They have been in the field of penal institutions for many, many years and know the problems . . ."

Mr. Forrester has been in the field of penal institutions for one gubernatorial administration, going into his present position without prior penal experience, according to reports at that time. Like other penal administrators, he knows the problems. Most others claim also that they do not know the answers.

You said: "We know that the present system is not perfect, but I am certain that those in authority will do everything they can to continue reform."

What reform, Governor?

Gas Dealer and Wife Stabbed by Bandits

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12 (AP) — Two Negro bandits stabbed to death a 60-year-old white service station operator and critically injured his wife in a robbery here early Saturday.

Police said the dead man was Wesley Johnstone. His wife was in critical condition at Charity Hoospital with knife wounds in the neck.

Police said the two men entered the service station and stabbed Johnstone in the shoulder and neck. When Johnstone's wife ran to his aid she was stabbed.

Police said the robbers got $14.

12/22/59

Journal

HE DEW"

nit Urged Schools

Many Can't Go to Atlanta To Air View, Smith Says

By CHARLES POU

House Speaker George L. Smith, one of several originators of a proposal for a new commission to study the state's school segregation troubles, Tuesday said he thinks it should be a group which would rove the state sampling sentiment.

"If the Legislature does create such a commission," he said, "it should have a right to go into every section of state and hear everyone who wants to come before it.

"There are many people who can't come to Atlanta who would like the chance to express their views to the Legislature."

Rep. Smith, who has been talking privately about the commission idea for some time, has said he thinks the commission should report its findings back to the Legislature as soon as the investigation is completed.

* * *

THE GENERAL proposition for a study commission apparently has the approval of the Vandiver administration—only the governor said Monday it would be somebody in the Legislature, not him, who will be sponsoring specific legislation creating such a group.

The Georgia League of Women Voters Monday asked the governor to sponsor the creation of a study commission.

Gov. Vandiver made it plain he goes along with the idea but that it won't be originating with him.

Meanwhile, Rep. Frank Twitty and Sen. Carl Sanders endorsed the study commission plan. Rep. Twitty is House floor leader and Sen. Sanders is president pro tem of the Senate.

* * *

FEDERAL COURT Judge Frank Hooper has under study the Atlanta Board of Education desegregation plan, which, at the judge's suggestion, is contingent on enactment of permissive legislation by the General Assembly.

Rep. Twitty said he thought there might be merit in the commission proposal.

Sen. Sanders said the "problem is upon us" and cannot be ignored further.

Lt. Gov. Garland Byrd expressed confidence that the General Assembly would deal with the school question "on a constructive basis, acting in good faith."

* * *

SPEAKER SMITH said it was his idea the commission should have some lawyers on it—some of whom would not be members of the Legislature—who could study and review present segregation laws.

He set no date on when the commission should report back to the Legislature but indicated he he thought this should be in 1960.

There had been some specula-ion the group would not come ith its findings and recommen-tions before 1961.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

THE ATLANTA JOURNAL assigned John Pennington to report on conditions within the Georgia prison system because of cumulative evidence that conditions were bad and growing worse.

Stories of brutal treatment and mutinous behavior continued to leak out of the Rock Quarry prison for incorrigibles, the scene of the sensational prisoner self-mutilations of the past.

At Reidsville—itself the result of a prison reform movement of two decades ago—there also was trouble and clear evidence of overcrowding with its attendant evils.

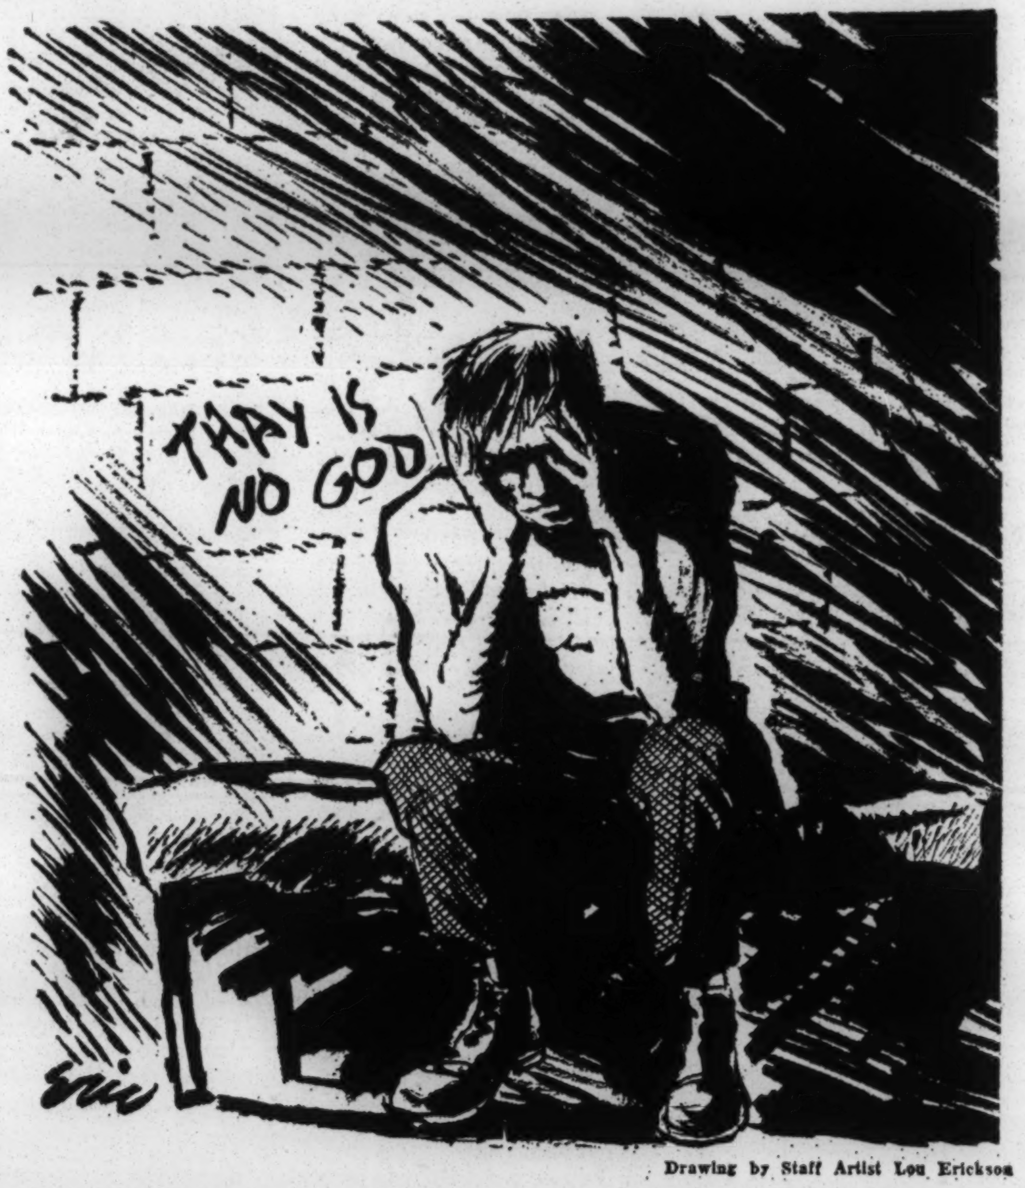
From various camps maintained by the state and the counties there came tales of poor administration and cases of sadistic treatment.

Topping everything was the official complacency and self-satisfaction of those in charge, an attitude which, if encouraged, could only lead to increasingly serious problems.

Mr. Pennington's able documentation of conditions within the system, the good along with the bad, attracted the kind of public attention needed to bring about changes for the better.

At the request of interested organizations and individuals The Journal is happy to reprint Mr. Pennington's series in this form in hopes it will help achieve a new era of better treatment for prisoners and bring about a more constructive view of the methods and purposes of punishment.

JACK SPALDING,
Editor.



Drawing by Staff Artist Lou Erickson

Reprinted from a series in
The Atlanta Journal
November-December, 1959
By JOHN PENNINGTON

BEHIND PRISON BARS—NO. 1

Penal Reform TALK Comes Easy

By JOHN PENNINGTON

The cry for penal reform is old, old, old.

But reform in the prisons is easier talked about than done. And when is it achieved?

Not yet in Georgia, high-sounding reform laws and occasional big talk notwithstanding.

They took the chains from the chain gangs—but left the prison system saturated, even yet, with a chain gang atmosphere.

The state's penal system epitomizes this bitter summary of penology from another state: "A system with the modern goal of rehabilitation, but with an emotional commitment to medieval vengeance."

* * *

THE GEORGIA SYSTEM is one which has found it emotionally and economically practical to practice only a very small portion of the rehabilitation it preaches.

It is a system filled with too many prisoners, run with too little money.

It is a system whose capabilities of constructive production and self-support are being wasted.

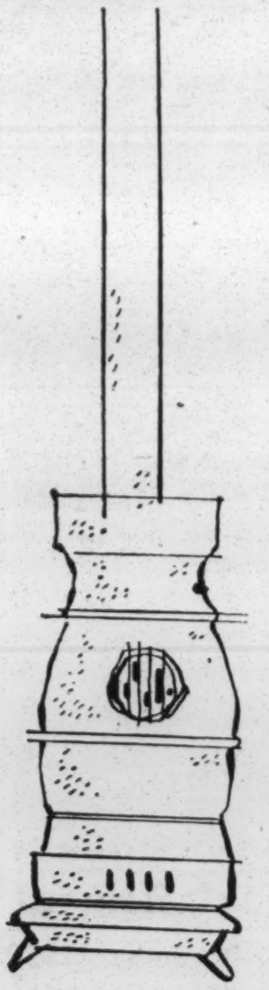
Chain gang atmosphere?

True, they don't wear chains any more. And they don't legally call work gangs chain gangs.

But the atmosphere does prevail. Throughout the state, on a tour of prisons, this reporter heard wardens, guards and convicts, over and over, refer to work gangs as chain gangs. They look upon them as such.

* * *

AND THROUGHOUT the state one finds prison work gangs, where the state has bartered out to counties groups of strong-backed convicts, trading the use of them for their keep. For the shelter and guard and meals they furnish, the counties exact a toll in daily labor, giving nothing, no education, no rehabilitation, no recreation in return, fulfilling for the state the commitment to vengeance.



"Work therapy," one prison official termed it, explaining the therapeutic value of teaching the discipline of application to inmates unaccustomed to daily labor.

True, they don't legally whip convicts any more, and the lawful designation of "whipping bosses" has passed away.

* * *

BUT THERE REMAIN "bosses" aplenty, a hangover from the lawful chain gang days. If you're a convict, the guard over you is "Boss." That's what you call him, and don't forget it. If you're a convict, the warden is "Cap'n." This is true, despite a Georgia State Prison rule that guards be called "Mr.," if you know the name, or "Sir," if not.

This reporter walked down the hallway of one prison camp with a warden. A prisoner nodded and spoke, "Good morning, Boss." With a flush of embarrassment, or something, he realized the error and hastened to make a correction: "I mean, Cap'n."

Though it's illegal for a custodial officer to strike a prisoner, the top three men in the office of the State Department of Corrections spent several hundred words one morning justifying an occasional slapping.

("What would you do," one official asked, "if you were a guard, and a big, black nigger walked up to you and said, 'I wish your wife was here, I'd . . .'?"

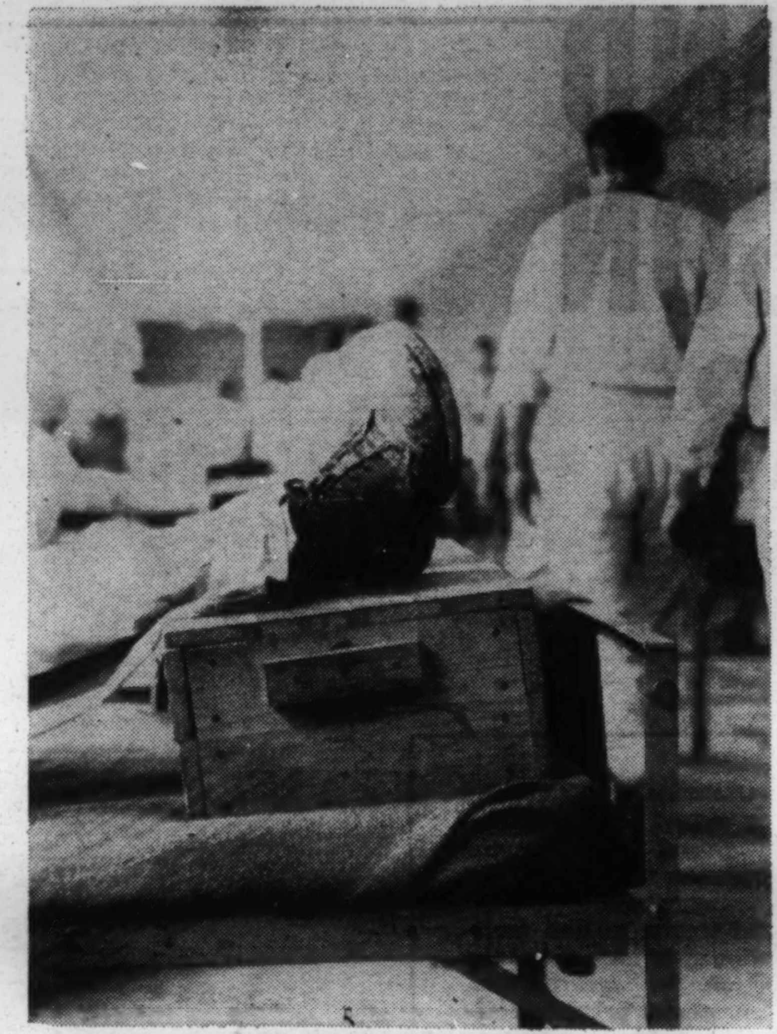
("When a prisoner complains about seeing somebody slapped," said another, "he's not telling you the whole story. A guard calls a prisoner and the prisoner walks up to him, calling him a SOB with every breath. All the prisoner tells you is about the slapping. He didn't hear the cursing."

("You've got a right to slap a man that calls you a SOB," said the third official. "The law gives you the legal right to do that.")

It is true that they don't wear chains any more in Georgia prisons. The law confines punishment to solitary confinement.

But solitary confinement can vary in intensity and severity. It's a relative thing, as we shall later see, and perhaps there are burdens heavier than physical ones.

This and subsequent stories on the subject are a result of a lengthy excursion inside the prisons of Georgia and numerous interviews with penal authorities of the system and elsewhere.



TIME ON HIS HANDS, FOOT ON LOCKER
What to Do Here But Serve Your Sentence?

Remember the cutting of heel tendons by convicts?

The leg breakings at the Buford Rock Quarry?

The rumblings of unrest which occasionally find their way out from behind the bars? The so-called hunger strike at Reidsville, the scrapping and tear-gas shooting recently at the quarry?

* * *

THE OCCASIONAL suicide, or attempt?

The high escape rate, and revelations of custodial laxity?

What kind of story do they tell? What is the implication?

What is Georgia doing with her convicts, her offenders against society, a group which includes a hodge-podge of habitual criminals, accidental lawbreakers who got caught, and fuzzy-faced kids whose delinquencies got them behind bars?

In an attempt to find some of the answers, I went unannounced to prison branches and county camps all over the state, to look into every nook and cranny to be found.

Director Jack Forrester of the State Board of Corrections, saying he had nothing to hide, prepared a letter on request authorizing inspection of any prison camp in the system. He handed over the letter with some misgivings, saying it was "something you can cut my throat with."

* * *

SINCE THAT TIME, more than a month ago, the Department of Corrections has turned loose a barrage of writings painting a healthy picture of what the prison system is and what its intentions are. Wardens at camps throughout the state got letters from Mr. Forrester urging them to seek local recognition of their good accomplishments (such as the building of a gymnasium by prisoners at Alma, a good accomplishment).

The department submitted to Dr. M. W. H. Collins, staff director of the Governor's Commission on Economy and Reorganization, a self-portrait of the penal system, relating accomplishments and objectives.

Just last Friday, Mr. Forrester announced a plan, which he said has been under consideration for some time, to reorganize his administrative set-up to include four specialized assistants. He also said he is recommending to the Board of Corrections a change in the bread-and-water routine for convicts in solitary confinement—a routine he stoutly defended back in July, when prisoners at Reidsville rowdily sought concessions.

* * *

THE LETTER OF permission from Mr. Forrester permitted inspection and picture-taking of premises. No interviews with prisoners were allowed, because Mr. Forrester and his assistant director, J. B. Hatchett, insisted the truth cannot be had from prisoners.

I went into camp after camp, mostly unannounced, and looked.

There were sights to shock the sensitivities of one unconditioned to such; at the same time there were efforts and attitudes at some camps that were heartening, spirit-lifting.

Subsequent stories will describe what was seen and heard (and in some cases smelled).

Perhaps the stories will not get across what it's like for the prisoner, behind the walls and bars, who is locked away from family and friends, but not his memories.

Prisoners often say, writing in their prison publications, that nobody knows the misery a convict feels, except the convict himself.

One cannot, they say, come and look by day, and taste of their food, and study their collective lot, and walk away free by night, leaving behind the confines of the bars, and then tell what it's like to be a prisoner.

One prisoner wrote, with his heart in it:

"Life in prison is frustration and loneliness and boredom and futility. It is a kind of dry, aching misery that lets a lifer know that the yokel who wrote, 'Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage,' never did a day's time in his life. Walls and bars do things to the soul and the mind as well as the body . . ."

Gazing upon the figure of a man in a darkened Georgia solitary confinement cell, his head hung in humiliation and futility, one remembers those lines and realizes there are two sides to the prison story: The convict has a side, as well as those who confine him.

* * *

SO LATER stories will tell what was seen and heard (and smelled), what the prison system looks like to the outsider, what it is, who is in it, whom it is run by, its problems, successes and failures, prison laws (including some toothless ambiguity) and the ever-present hope, by prisoners and penal folk alike, that there'll be a better day, some day.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

You're Naked and Clipped

By JOHN PENNINGTON

The man sat stark naked, his head shorn to the scalp, reading from a Bible by a tiny shaft of light through the bars.

He was in "the hole," or "the box"—a solitary confinement cell in a Georgia prison, a convict undergoing additional punishment, in this case for escaping.

Behind the next door of bars another convict stood naked, his hair likewise clipped to the skin, his immodesty lighted, like his cell-neighbor's Bible, by a shaft of light.

Both spoke penitently to the warden. One asked about getting out soon. He was, he said, "getting pretty weak."

The answer was no. The two had been in solitary only a week, and the normal dose of isolation for "running" is 30 days.

* * *

THE TWO MEN occupied separate box-rooms, about five by seven feet, a commode and drinking fountain in the corner. The door of bars admitted a strip of light obliquely from windows at the end of a narrow hall jointly shared by the cells. Another door of solid steel locked the isolation quarters off from the rest of the prison.

Each of the isolated men had a blanket, to serve as bed and cover and clothing.

This was their punishment for escaping (they got tracked down quickly by bloodhounds): Thirty days in isolation, with shorn heads and naked bodies, diet restricted to two slices of bread for breakfast, and two more for supper, with an evening meal every fifth day, all the water they wanted to drink, and all the Bible they wanted to read, as long as the shaft of light held out.

(Corrections Director Jack Forrester has, since this visit, recommended to the Board of Corrections a relaxation of the bread-and-water diet for prisoners in solitary confinement, to include unseasoned dry cereals, vegetables, soups and black coffee.)

* * *

TO WHICH MIGHT be later added either and/or a hard work trip to the Buford Rock Quarry, additional prison sentence, loss of "good time," future detail to something known in prison parlance as the "bully squad."

Scene of this confinement was the Pulaski Prison Branch at Hawkinsville, where Warden Charles A. Head runs, from the isolation room forward, one of the most liberal camps in Georgia. (He said the head-shearing is imposed against escapees.)

The Pulaski isolation cells are, physically, among the nicer ones.

Some others seen by this reporter, visiting prisons throughout the state, are dungeons, cast in midnightlike darkness 24 hours a day, with no Bible to read, nor light to read by.

Some wardens expressed distaste at having to use the cells, but most are indifferent. And a reporter's impressions along the way, seeing things at once offensive to the eyes, the ears, the sense of smell, might help explain that attitude.

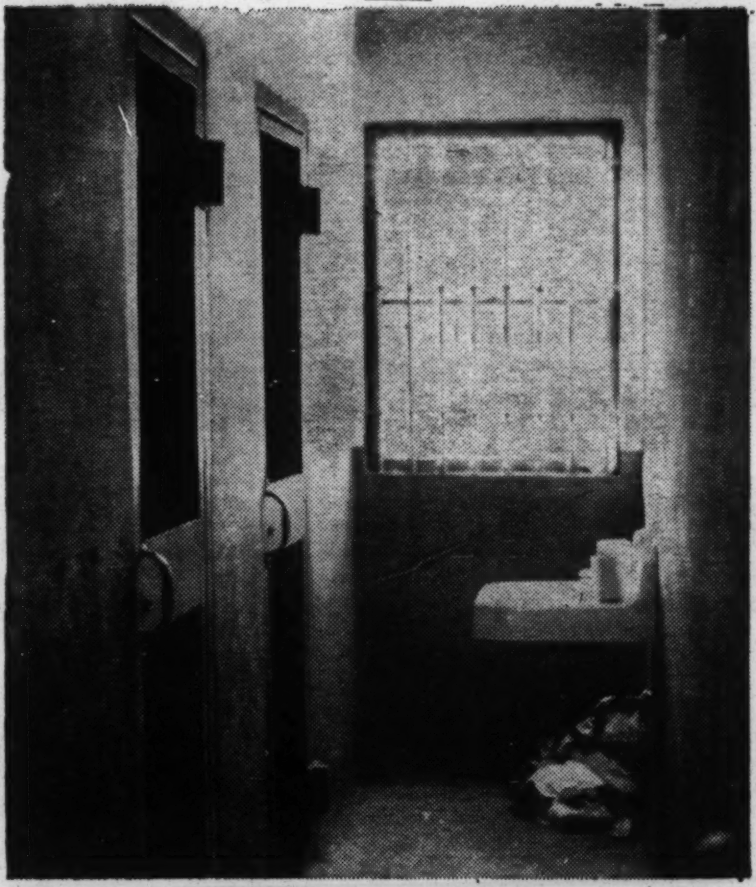
The first camp visited was the Ware Prison Branch at Waycross. Two men were in "the hole"—facilities similar to those at Pulaski. Both walked out of the darkness of their cells into the dim light near the doors when Warden A. W. Clay and the reporter entered the hallway.

* * *

THEY WERE NAKED from head to toe, the whiteness of their bodies standing out sharply against the darkness behind them. Their whiskered faces silently bespoke defeat, humility, futility.

Naked they would stand, or sit, or lie, or pace like a zoo beast, in their five-by-seven cell, for 30 days, suffering a wilful depletion of their physical strength and mental health, with the finality of no recourse living always with them. And of course there's the other side, like the prison people say, that they shouldn't have done what they did in the first place.

Later on, seeing prison after prison, the happier (but still not very happy) side of them, the feeling that came with looking in on a caged man was tempered some. One is conditioned by repetition, and perhaps this explains the indifference of some prison folk towards their methods. They live with it until it's routine.

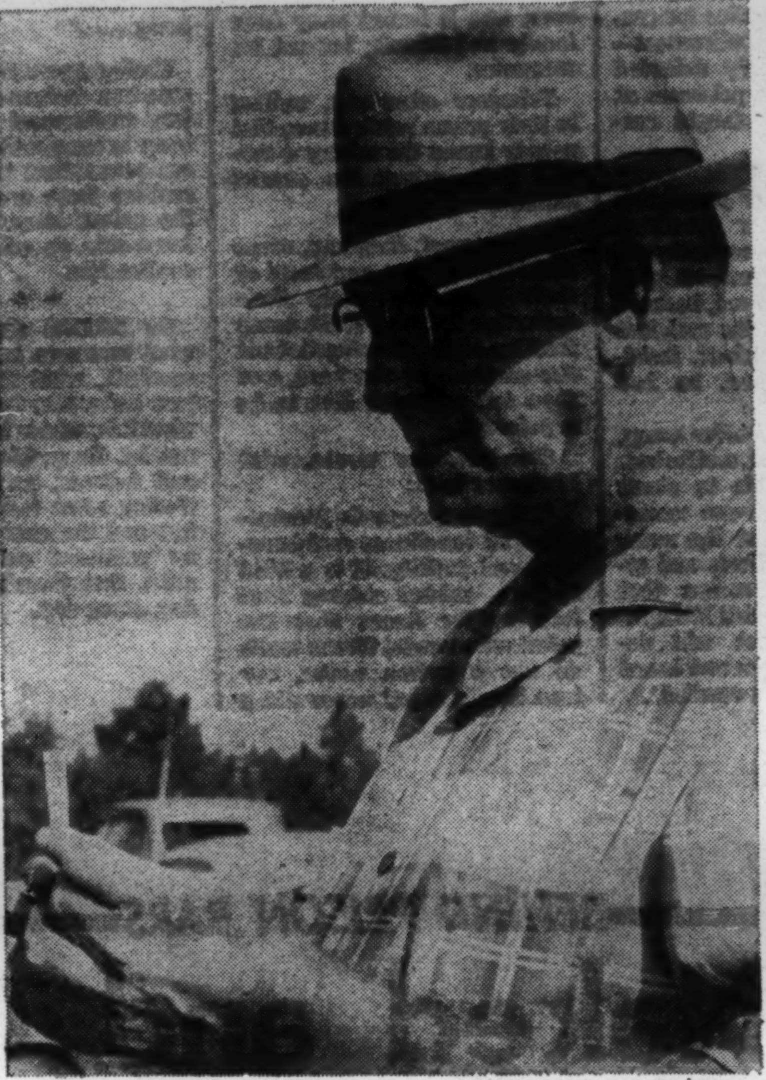


Staff Photo—John Pennington

HALL LEADS TO "SOLITARY" CELLS (L)
Facilities at Ware Prison Branch in Waycross

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Lifer Directs Prison Boss



Staff Photo—John Pennington

WARE PRISON BRANCH WARDEN A. W. CLAY
"I Had to Put Him in Solitary"

By JOHN PENNINGTON

At the front door, the man with the key was wearing civilian-looking T-shirt and blue jeans. He was on the outside of the locked door, presiding over it. He looked like the man in charge.

. No, he said, Mr. R. L. Hall, general manager, was in charge in the warden's absence. He called for him. I waited, letter of introduction from the state penal office in hand, wanting to look around the Ware Prison Branch at Waycross. This was the first stop on a tour of many state prison branches and camps.

Mr. Hall came out, exchanged introductions, and read the letter. All right, he asked, what would you like to see?

* * *

THE DOORKEEPER spoke up, sounding businesslike.

"Boss," he said, "You'd better wait until the captain gets back. He'll be here in a few minutes."

Boss? The doorman was a convict, and he was talking to the general manager, who followed the suggestion. This was surprising, a prisoner directing the actions of the Boss, particularly since Corrections Director Jack Forrester, in granting inspection privileges, had forbidden the reporter to talk to prisoners on grounds that the truth could not be had from them.

* * *

BUT WE WAITED, and while so doing Mr. Hall, in answer to questions, identified the prisoner on the front door as one doing life for murder.

Shortly Warden A. W. Clay came in and showed off the camp, a branch of the state prison which at that moment contained 107 white inmates.

It was late afternoon and the prisoners were coming in from the day's work, washing up for supper, clustering together in two dormitories in their only major diversion, watching TV. The food was being readied in the kitchen, looking plentiful and appetizing, with dessert for supper.

* * *

DOWN THE END of a long hall was a steel door marked "isolation." As the door was being opened with a big key, I remembered what a convict in Atlanta had said, shaking his head: "Waycross got a bad hole."

The door swung open and we walked into a strong odor of unwashed human bodies, perspiration. A narrow hall ran at right angles to the entrance, with a cluster of solitary confinement cells facing the hall and a window on each end. The cells were dark and it took a moment of blinking to see the naked occupants who stepped forward in two of them.

Both men were in "the hole" 30 days — one for escaping, one for a more unusual offense. The latter, a young man from Oregon, had failed, or refused to go to bed on a Saturday night. Guards called the warden.

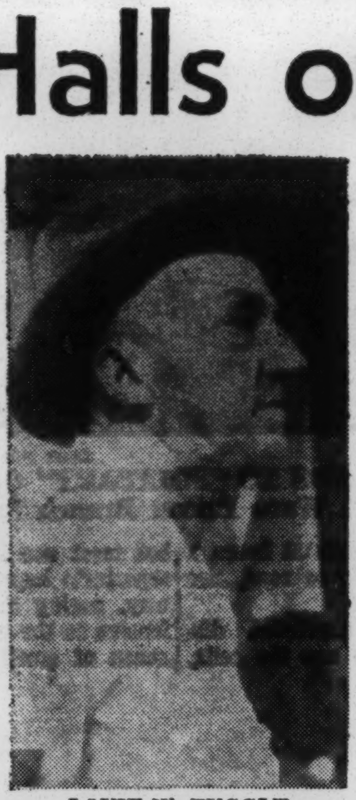
* * *

"HE WAS JUST walking the floor," said Warden Clay. "I asked him, 'what's the matter?' He just looked at me. He didn't say a word. I had to put him in solitary."

And there he was, in a darkened five-by-seven cell, where he could pace away unworried by the working day, or meals, or wearing clothes, and reflect on whatever problem it was that got him in trouble in the first place.

Jammed Cells Overflow Into Halls on Rainy Day

By JOHN PENNINGTON



LOUIE W. TUGGLE
Prison Yardman

It was a dreary day at the Putnam County Prison Branch. Rain fell heavily outside. And time hung heavily inside, where 120 Negro convicts were crowded into quarters built for half as many.

Double-deck bunks were pushed together in twos, forming double beds upper and lower, rows of such. Incarcerated humanity jammed two dormitories and the overflow lined a U-shaped hall with beds.

An Atlanta Journal reporter came to call, and got a candid glimpse of a rainy day in a Georgia prison camp.

Warden Doyal Smith was away. Louie W. Tuggle, yardman, was in charge.

Downstairs they were unloading some buses which never went out to work because of the rain. One held a state road crew, one a group of convicts "rented" to the City of Eatonton. Two guards stood their distance, long shotguns in the crooks of their arms. Mr. Tuggle stood by with the count roster, Guard Howard Graham "frisked" the returning inmates. One by one, in rhythmic fashion, the convicts leapt out of the back door of the bus, shoulders hunched against the rain, counting themselves loudly as they jumped. "One. Two. Three. Four . . ."

* * *

MR. TUGGLE cast a critical eye at one who came under the basement shelter with a little lapse of memory. "All right, boy. Get your cap off."

Properly counted against Mr. Tuggle's tally sheet, the prisoners went into the shower room. One young Negro came back, stripped to his shorts, and addressed Mr. Tuggle: "Boss, can we have some soap?"

"No," said the Boss. "We're not running soap today."

The prisoner shrugged, hands out in entreating gesture. "But," he complained, "I don't have any soap to wash my face with."

"We gave you soap the other day," Mr. Tuggle said, "and you didn't take care of it."

The prisoner started to answer. "But . . ."

Mr. Tuggle turned on him and ordered sharply: "Don't say a damn word to me."

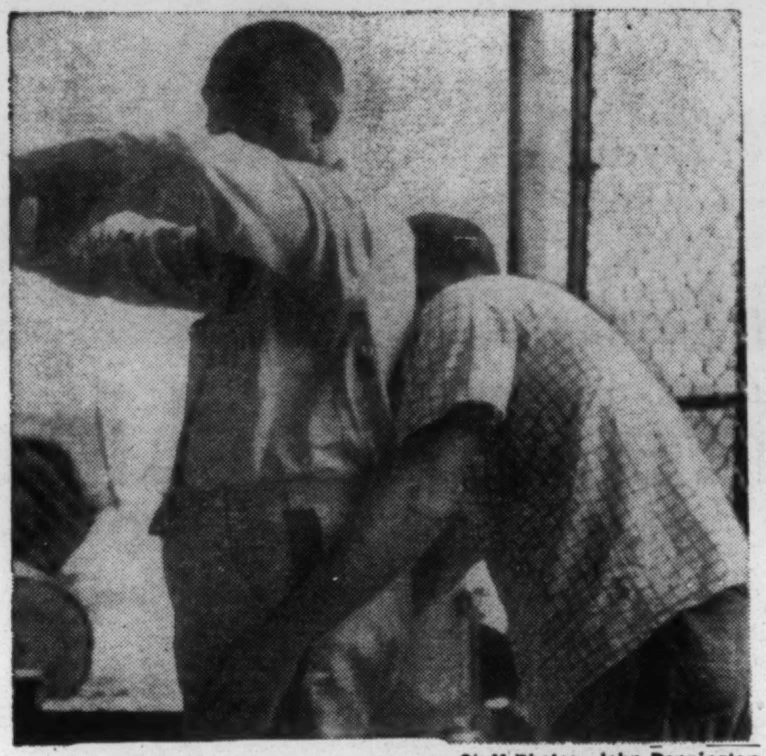
* * *

THE PRISONER walked away and Mr. Tuggle explained: ". . . We can't give them soap every time they ask for it."

Upstairs in the dormitories the prisoners, sitting out the rainy day, watched TV, slept or read. Trusties occupied the overflow beds in the hall. Three occupied solitary confinement quarters, a row of cells with a hall on each end.

In the darkness of one solitary cell, a wide pair of eyes rolled, following the path of visitors down the hall. The dark face, blending with the darkness of the cell, did not move. One cell, just that morning emptied, had toilet paper all over the floor.

"They tear it up and use it to lay on," said Mr. Tuggle. "See," he said, pointing to the head with



Staff Photos—John Pennington

GUARD 'FRISKS' INMATE AT PRISON
Such Checks Made Constantly

the rolling eyes, "they've got that for a pillow."

And sure enough, each of the three was lying on the concrete floor wearing shorts and wrapped in a blanket, each using a small roll of toilet paper for a pillow.

* * *

THE DOCTOR came, big, affable Dr. E. M. Lancaster of nearby Shady Dale, who examined the three in solitary and another who had been hurt. He stayed for lunch, as did the visiting reporter

The guards and visitors ate from a table laden with fried fish, fried side meat, big white beans, peas, corn bread, biscuits, butter, peaches, jam, syrup, peppers, pickles, water, coffee and-or tea.

A guard, asked what the prisoners get, said: "They eat just like we do."

Soon the prisoners filed into the inmate dining room. They ate like we did—to this extent: They got fried meat, beans, peas, two slices of corn bread and water. Syrup was on the tables in gallon jugs. The menu on the kitchen wall showed that they would have an opportunity to enjoy fried side meat at the noon meal four days that week.

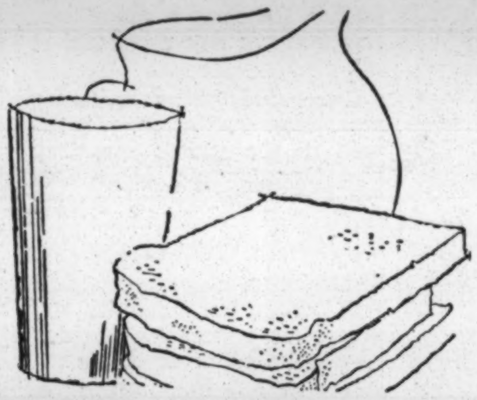
* * *

AT THE PUTNAM camp, and some others, a convict speaks before he moves, a part of the rigid discipline imposed. This was demonstrated at lunch time. One big convict wanted water, and he shouted, without looking up: "Gettin' up, Boss."

The boss shouted back, "O.K." And the prisoner got up for his water

Lunch over, the prisoners counted themselves back into their dormitories, just as they had counted out, each man who moved counting loudly one number higher than the man before him.

And that's what it was like, on a rainy day at the Putnam prison branch.



BEHIND PRISON BARS

Utter Futility in 'the Hole'

By JOHN PENNINGTON

A convict wrote on the cold steel wall of his solitary confinement cell at the Buford Rock Quarry Prison, in terrible grammar but eloquent anguish:

"Thay is no God."

The sentence was printed, obviously composed under considerable effort by one unaccustomed to using the written word.

It could be simply that the author was a nonbeliever. And it could be that he was one who had been reduced to utter futility in "the hole" of Georgia's toughest convict camp; a camp which in itself is extra punishment, where men have resorted en masse to self-injury, where suicide has been attempted on several occasions, where serious trouble constantly impends, where the Boss' dominance and prisoner submission take precedence over—or obviates—correction; a camp whose punitive measures have been questioned by a federal authority on such.

WARDEN SMITH
"Captain" Is Quiet

The wall on which this inscription was found was in one of 33 solitary-confinement cells on a basement level at the rock quarry.

They sit in two rows, with sliding steel doors on the inside, a heavy wire mesh at back, with a "catwalk" around them. Inside each there's a concrete commode, which can be flushed from the outside only. Two of the 33 were occupied. Muffled voices, conversing through the wall between them, could be heard outside the inhabited cells.

Those inside heard the voices of the reporter and Warden Hubert Smith. "Captain Smith," one called. "Can we talk to you?"

A long moment of silence followed while they waited for an answer which did not come. The Captain remained quiet.

Again the unseen prisoner called. "Captain Smith, can we talk to you?"

The Captain hesitated a moment and called back:

"Wait. I'll talk to you after awhile."

"All right," the voice answered, satisfied.

We walked away and I suggested to the warden that he go ahead and talk to the prisoners then, and let me listen.

"I don't intend to talk to them," he said.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

It's Easier, If He Toes Line

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Contrast — a commodity plentiful in Georgia's prison camps:

In one prison dining room curtains frame the windows with subdued warmth, partially hiding the bars.

There's a podium with a little cross, and the word "CHURCH" spread across it; a big poster above, with a picture of Jesus, saying welcome to Thursday night prayer meetings, and to Sunday afternoon worship. Another sign, with religious picture accompanying, relates that 20 attended services today, 28 last service (out of a prison population of 80).

The contrast?

This is the same prison camp in whose solitary confinement cells were found two inmates, stark naked, their heads shorn as punitive reminder of their waywardness, on a diet of bread and water, doing imposed penance for a recent escape.

* * *

THIS WAS the Pulaski Prison Branch at Hawkinsville, one of the most attractive camps in the state's penal system. It is a place where the average prisoner's lot has been made easier by Warden C. A. Head Jr. — if the prisoner toes the line and makes no effort to depart the camp's hospitality.

Warden Head interviews every prisoner who goes into his custody. In the warden's private office a prisoner sits, and listens.

C. A. HEAD JR.
Prison Branch Warden

"A man comes to me," said the warden, "I talk to him, tell him what's what. I tell him what I expect of him, and what he can expect of me.

"He comes to me as a human being, not as a dog or something. He's human, he's got a job to do. If he will stand good treatment, that's what he'll get.

"I tell him, 'I'm the only man here who can help you. The other convicts can't. If the other man could help you, he'd help himself.' "

* * *

MR. HEAD, this camp his first warden-job, lets inmates out to play volley ball and horseshoes on Saturday afternoons (inside the prison compound). His camp is one of very few that has any recreation at all.

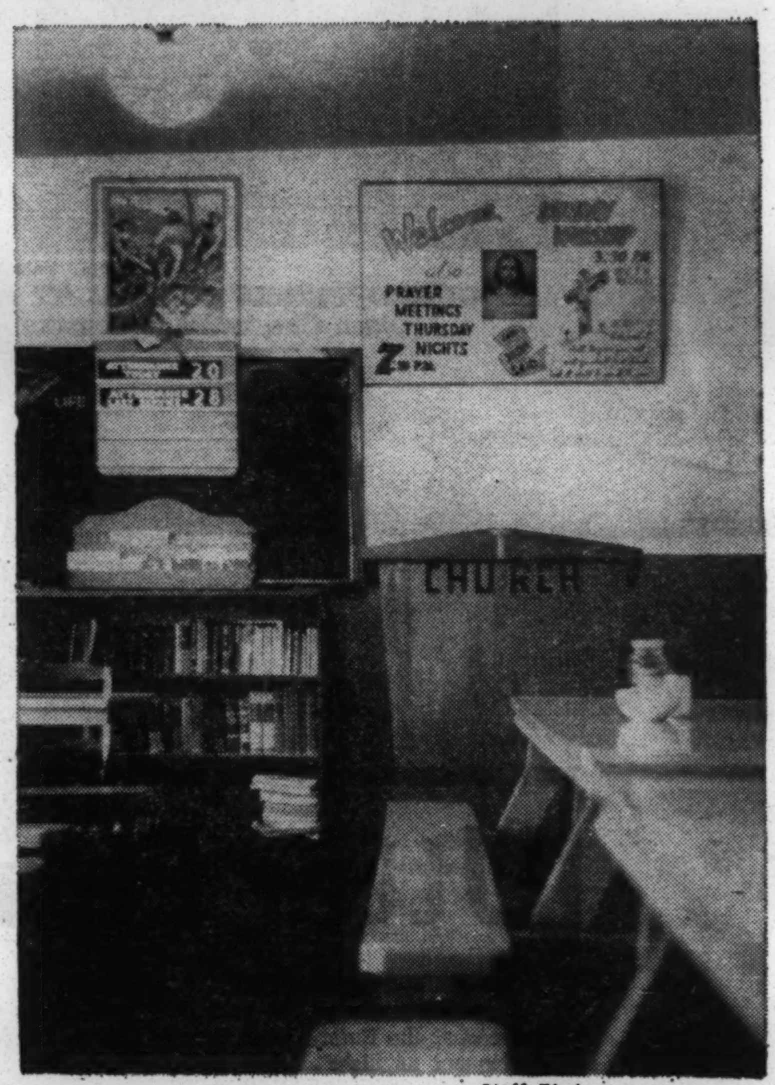
His guards wear uniforms, nameplates sewn on. Underpaid as the guards are, they rent the uniforms, clean ones regularly, themselves paying the bill.

Mr. Head supports the publication of a religious paper (and writes a column for it), one of his outstanding inmates serving as editor of it. He favors education in prison, some payment for the labor of convicts, to save against the day they get out.

* * *

HE PERMITS the Bible in solitary confinement if the prisoner wants it. Other camps allow no reading matter.

But he has their heads clipped, extra humiliation, if they give in to the temptation to "run." And naked they go into solitary. One of many contrasts in Georgia prisons.



Staff Photo

RELIGIOUS SIGNS AT PULASKI BRANCH
Inmates Have Sunday, Thursday Services

Behind Prison Bars

2 MINUTES IN SOLITARY GIVES REPORTER CHILL

By JOHN PENNINGTON

"It's all we've got," a prisor. warden said of solitary confinement as punishment.

"It's effective," said another.

Convicts who have been in "the hole" in a Georgia prison would testify to its effectiveness at taking the starch out of a man—or woman, because the weaker sex gets isolated too.

I spent about two minutes in one solitary confinement cell, its iron door slammed tight, all light shut out, and everything suddenly very still. That was enough to leave me chilled and wondering about the effects of 30 days of such; and partially understanding why many emotionally and mentally unstable convicts have tried to escape by the only means possible, self-imposed death.

* * *

A FORMER convict said:

"That picture you ran in the paper—that wasn't 'the hole.' That was a cell fixed up to look like a hotel room. You ought to see a real solitary confinement cell. . . ."

So on a tour of state prisons I made it a point to look at each camp's version of "the hole," or "the box." I also visited federal isolation quarters for comparison.

The picture to which the former convict referred was run about four months ago, in connection with a story about Reidsville's so-called hunger strike. Warden Hubert Smith of the Buford Rock Quarry showed the cell and represented it to be a typical solitary confinement cell.

* * *

THE CELL HAD a made-up bed, with clean sheets and blanket, and lavatory along with the commode. It did look like a hotel room by comparison with actual solitary confinement cells.

State law says the Board of Corrections shall restrict punishment of prisoners "to isolation and restricted diet, or uniform standard humane punishment which the board may deem necessary. . . ."

But there are variations, and then more variations, on isolation and on restricted diet as well, and different people might have different ideas on what is humane and what is not.

One warden will sock a man 30 days in "the hole" for what another would consider a five-day infraction. (County camps, which finance the upkeep of prisoners in return for their labor, tend to impose shorter confinement, for a man can't pay for his bread in "the hole.")

* * *

ISOLATION quarters range from semi-lighted, ventilated ones to stone-walled dungeon types, cast in perpetual darkness. Where one warden will send men into solitary naked, and-or with clipped heads, one lets them wear pajamas, another actually has a bed.

A new variation on "restricted diet" has been proposed by Jack Forrester, director of corrections, a variation which falls within the same law that permits the old bread-and-water regimen.

Mr. Forrester, who until very recently defended stoutly the bread-and-water diet in solitary confinement, with one meal each five days, said he talked with physicians and visited the state prison at Texas and reconsidered and now recommends to the corrections board, for consideration Monday, that prisoners in solitary get three meals daily, to consist of: plain oatmeal or dry cereal, dry toast and black coffee for breakfast; unseasoned vegetables and soup for dinner, and unseasoned vegetables and soup for supper, with more black coffee, but no sugar or salt for any meal — healthy but "monotonous."

* * *

THIS TYPE OF DIET conforms with recommendations of modern penologists, and it is similar to a practice followed by federal institutions for at least 15 years.

Warden after warden commented to this reporter that isolation is the only effective punishment available to them. You obviously can't, they pointed out, take privileges away from a man who doesn't have any to speak of. You can take his "good time," but if a man has a long term, he doesn't care. You can take away visitation and letter-writing privileges as well. But if a man has nobody to write to, nor nobody to visit him, he doesn't care about that either.

One isolated convict spoke briefly about his narrow cell of confinement, and how he looked upon it. He stood looking at his feet, fingering the bars between us, obviously embarrassed at his position. And why not?

* * *

"SIR," HE SAID, "an awful lot occupies your mind in a place like this. You have time to do a lot of thinking."

His naked body jerked with mirthless laughter at the "joke" about time to think. He had about three weeks to go in a dark and tiny cell. Already the whiskers darkened his face, the skin was close to his ribs after a week on bread and water.

Here's what some isolation cells looked like:

At the shiny new Gwinnett County Public Works Camp, which Warden Clyde N. Phillips said is as spic as a motel when rainy weather hasn't got things muddied up, two solitary cells were in use.

In the first, two white men eyed the warden sulkily and asked what they were in for. He told them it was for going to breakfast with their dirty clothes on. He makes his charges wear clean clothes to meals.

In the second a big Negro prisoner was lying on a mattress on the floor, covered with a blanket. Mr. Phillips opened the door and switched on an overhead light (the only cells seen with lights in them) to find a scene of disorder and filth. Blankets were scattered on the floor and a strong odor came forth.

* * *

THE PRISONER disclaimed responsibility for the disarray, saying others before him had left the mess. He pointed to the commode, which had a blanket pulled over it, and said it was stopped up. Warden Phillips asked him why he hadn't cleaned it up.

"It's dark in here," the convict exclaimed.

"Well, it's not dark now," the warden said, pointing to the light. "Clean it up."

At the Gilmer County Public Works Camp, Ellijay, a camp unfit for human detention but scheduled for replacement, the isolation cell is a concrete block appendage to the main building. A look through the peephole door revealed two prisoners in body-length, sacklike gowns, blinking owlishly at the intrusion — one in for "flirting with the girls," the other for "getting ready" to escape. Inside, with the door shut, was total darkness.

Staff Photos—

ON INSIDE LOOKING OUT OF "HOLE"
Window in Door Reveals Warden Caldwell

OUTSIDE LOOKING IN Darkness and Loneliness

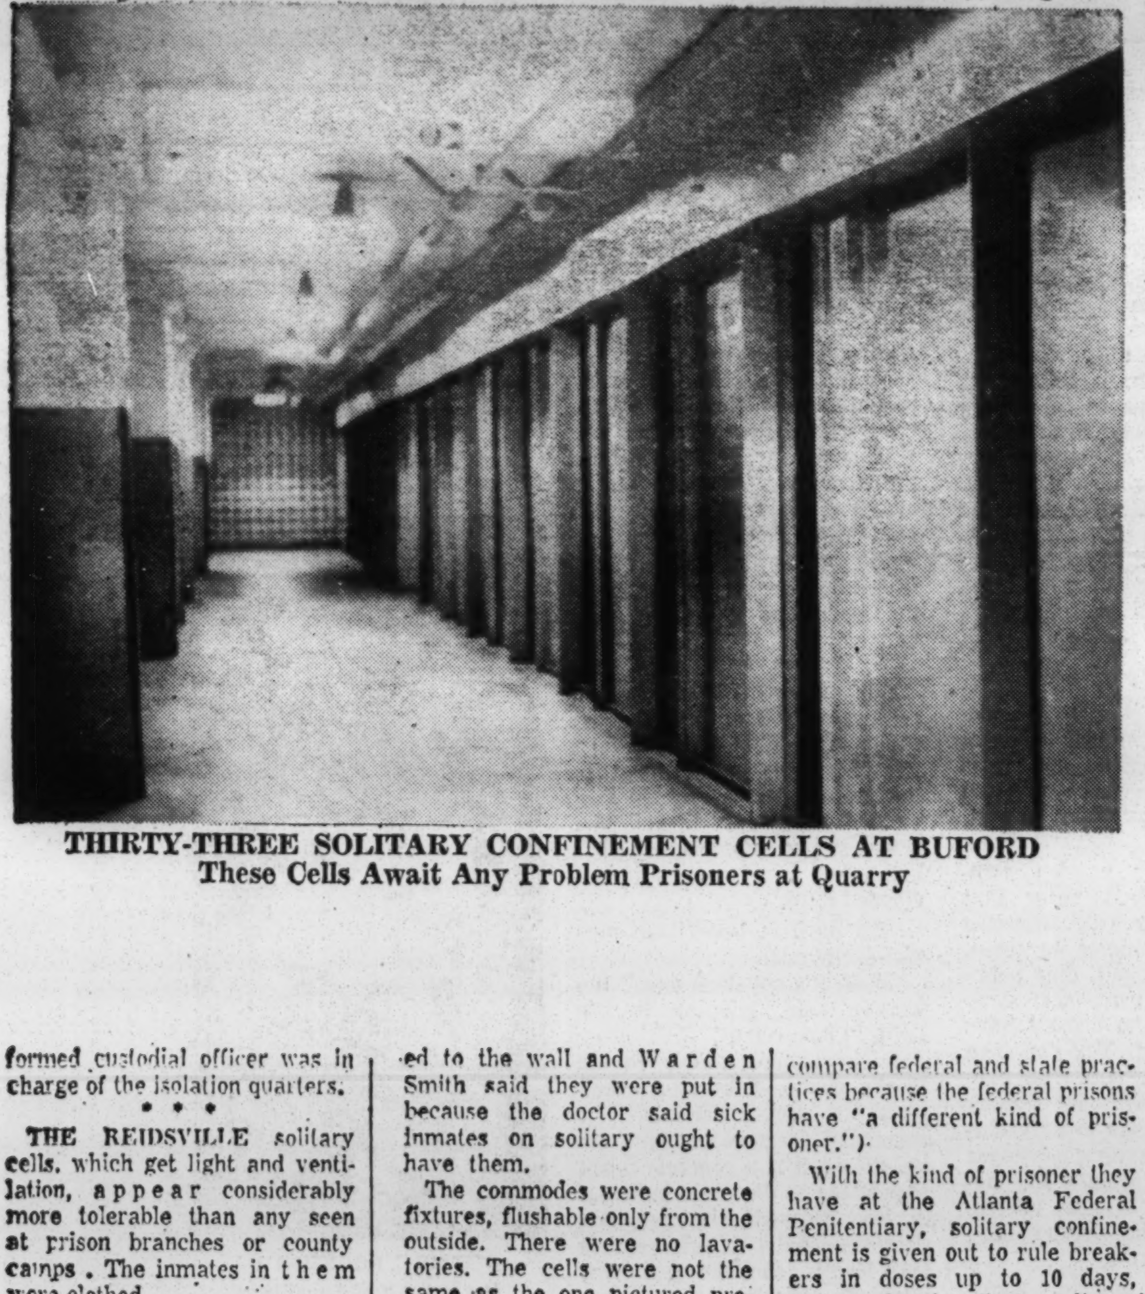
HERE'S "HOLE" AT PIERCE COUNTY CAMP
Corregated Roof, No Windows for Prisoners



THIRTY-THREE SOLITARY CONFINEMENT CELLS AT BUFORD
These Cells Await Any Problem Prisoners at Quarry

• • •

AT THE Floyd County Public Works Camp, Rome, two basement solitary cells, dark and dungeonlike, are equipped with beds and mattresses, most unusual equipment in such quarters. It was here that Warden C. M. Caldwell shut the big door on me in one of the cells, than opened the peephole door to show what it looked like to the prisoner inside.

As do some other wardens, Mr. Caldwell uses the old chain gang "stripes' as additional punishment for escapees, making the convict who fled wear them as a badge of misconduct.

At the Pierce County camp, Blackshear, where Negroes are incarcerated, the isolation building fits its description as "the box." A small, wooden box-building, it sits out in the heat of the south Georgia sun with no obvious ventilation. The warden was not present, so the inside went unseen.

• • •

AT THE Industrial Institute at Alto, Georgia's prison for young offenders, Supt. Walter Matthews tempers the restricted diet occasionally, using milk as a substitute for water. During this reporter's visit, he had one Negro boy in isolation, wearing shorts and wrapped in a blanket against the concrete floor.

State prison branches at Ware and Pulaski counties, described in previous stories, both strip inmates naked before subjecting them to solitary. At the Pulaski branch, Negro inmates used shredded toilet paper to try to soften the concrete under them.

(Mr. Forrester told newsmen it is not prisonwide policy to strip the clothes from convicts in solitary confinement. He said individual wardens make their own decisions as to whether to take the clothes from prisoners in individual cases.

• • •

(SOME WARDENS enforce a blanket decision on that matter. One warden said he stripped all offenders, another indicated it was regular policy.)

At the State Prison at Reidsville, where a group of prisoners on a so-called "hunger 'strike" demanded concessions, some changes had been made in solitary—but not, Warden R. P. Balkcom Jr. said, because of any prisoner demands.

The strikers wanted one full meal every three days, instead of every five. And they wanted to get rid of a prisoner-attendant they unaffectionately called "Nigger Joe," claiming he threw their bread on the floor and otherwise showed a lack of compassion for their misery.

• • •

WARDEN BALKCOM said he had started giving prisoners in solitary two full meals a week—each Saturday and Sunday evening — amounting to one full meal for each three and a half days and leaving the bread-and-water regimen for the weekdays. The warden said this was not a concession to prisoner demand, but something he had in mind already because he found out cell neighbors in solitary were sharing meals when they got them on alternate days, thereby beating the rap a bit.

This they could do, he said, by passing it around the barrier between them and handing it through the bar doors to the unseen neighbor.

"Nigger Joe" was gone from the solitary detail, a circumstance not explained. A uniformed custodial officer was in charge of the isolation quarters.

• • •

THE REIDSVILLE solitary cells, which get light and ventilation, appear considerably more tolerable than any seen at prison branches or county camps. The inmates in them were clothed.

At the Buford Rock Quarry, where the "hotel room" confinement cell had been photographed, Warden Hubert Smith has 33 solitary cells, enough to do a lot of simultaneous isolating. They are located on a basement level, two rows of them, each with a sliding steel door. Several had steel pallets welded to the wall and Warden Smith said they were put in because the doctor said sick inmates on solitary ought to have them.

The commodes were concrete fixtures, flushable only from the outside. There were no lavatories. The cells were not the same as the one pictured previously.

• • •

IN SHARP contrast to Georgia's solitary confinement practices are those used in federal prisons.

(The state's top penal authorities, Corrections Director Jack Forrester and his assistant, J. B. Hatchett, say you cannot compare federal and state practices because the federal prisons have "a different kind of prisoner.")

With the kind of prisoner they have at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, solitary confinement is given out to rule breakers in doses up to 10 days, more only in "extraordinary cases.'

In solitary the inmate loses his privileges — of an afternoon play period on the recreation field; store privileges, movie privileges, smoking and reading.

• • •

BUT HE HAS a mattress at night, he gets 30 minutes to an hour of exercise in a small, enclosed yard daily; he gets a shower and a shave every day or so and he is fed a minimum of 2,300 calories a day in a "monotonous diet." His cell is not a dungeon, and he is never restricted to bread and water.

The "monotonous diet" is basically the same as fed other prisoners, but without seasoning frills, no desserts — very similar to the diet to be considered by the board of corrections Monday for the State of Georgia type of prisoner.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Investigation Bores Goble

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Warden Fred Goble, a short, stocky man with piercing eyes and the appearance of one rooted to his standing spot, virtually bristled with hostility.

"I don't care what the newspapers write about me," he said, in answer to a reportorial intrusion on the Whitfield County Public Works Camp. "I've forgotten more about prisons than they'll ever know."

I was there on a tour of prison camps, with a letter of permission from the state penal office to look around. Warden Goble acted like a man sick-sick-sick of being investigated. His camp, a county-owned camp using state convicts, has been much in the news, for various reasons—such as too many escapes, the hiring of an ex-convict as a guard, letting a felony prisoner go home for the weekend, and using convicts for work on private property. Warden Goble himself is an ex-convict, and one state penal authority said he is "too soft," apparently for that reason. Investigators have several times recommended that the camp be closed, but it still operates.

* * *

THE WARDEN swung open the iron door to the prison dormitory, the usual row of beds giving way to the toilet facilities in the rear, and lifted his arm in sweeping gesture.

"Go ahead," he said. "Look around."

He went along down a hallway leading to solitary confinement and trusty quarters. He opened the door to isolation and one prisoner scampered off the commode in the corner. Another was sitting on the floor. Both stared suspiciously.

* * *

THEY SHARED the single cell, which had an outside window. The window admitted light, and also some flies. The convicts wore prison pants. They were barefooted and used their shirts for bedding against the concrete floor.

On the back side of the camp, another isolation cell, this one of the dungeon variety, was unused at the moment for human detention. It was stacked with county record books.

As the warden returned from the inspection circuit inside the prison, Clerk Dave Oden, himself a former warden, said to a young man in the front office:

"Here's the warden, son."

Then Oden directed me to follow him outside.

* * *

THE YOUNG MAN, without wasting any words on introduction formalities, said to the warden:

"I wanted to talk to you about grading my driveway."

"Where is it?" the warden asked.

As the young man began to tell him, Oden insisted that I follow him outside to walk around the stockade premises. When we returned, the young man was gone and Warden Goble stood before the old-brick building, overlooking the north Georgia mountains, whose peaceful-looking exterior gives not a hint of the irregularities involved in the county camp's 10-year use of state prisoners.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Twice Fired, Still Guard

By JOHN PENNINGTON

A guard who was fired from one Georgia prison camp for shooting a prisoner and from another for kicking one has gone on to a new job of convict guarding.

The warden who most recently employed him did not ask for reference from the warden who most recently did the firing.

Georgia penal law says the State Board of Corrections "shall by rule and regulation define qualifications for wardens, guards and other personnel. . . ."

Corrections Director Jack Forrester said prison guards are started at $175 a month, and they can go as high as $190. If promoted to foreman, the figure rises to $210.

* * *

UNDER THIS PAY SCALE, Mr. Forrester said, about the only thing the board can require of guards in the way of qualifications is "good character."

The guard with the record of trouble with prisoners is Florence Blasingame. He has been described as a "good" guard who let his impulses get away with him.

Warden W. N. McHan of the Colony Prison Farm at Milledgeville, which serves the state hospital, fired Blasingame during the summer after he kicked a prisoner and the prisoner hit Blasingame.

The guard had been with him about nine months, said Mr. McHan, about a month of that time as a "walking boss"—working unarmed as foreman amongst a crew of prisoners—when the incident occurred.

Blasingame kicked a prisoner, said the warden, who turned and "hit him in the face and mashed his nose."

* * *

ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL account of it, the altercation ended there. A former inmate who witnessed it—the first to relate it to an Atlanta Journal reporter—said the guard insisted on fighting the prisoner and another guard let them fight. The former inmate said the prisoner won.

At any rate, Mr. McHan fired Blasingame and put the prisoner in solitary confinement. No one but himself, he said, is allowed to administer punishment to prisoners.

Blasingame then was hired by the Wilkinson County Public Works Camp at Irwinton. Warden McHan said the warden there made no request of him for reference, and never asked the reason for the guard's leaving.

The shooting incident occurred more than a year earlier than the kicking, when Blasingame was working at the Walton County Public Works Camp at Monroe. The warden there at that time was L. P. Savage, who has since left.

* * *

MR. SAVAGE SAID BLASINGAME was a "walking boss" there also when the incident occurred. He shot a prisoner—a serious shot but not a fatal one—and claimed, said the warden, that the convict was "making at him with a shovel." (A charge against Blasingame growing out of the shooting was later no-billed by a Walton County grand jury.)

"There was some doubt," said Mr. Savage, "as to whether the shooting was absolutely essential.

"In truth, he was a foreman with a crew (in a rock quarry) which was supposed to be under the watchful eye of a guard with a shotgun, who was a safe distance away. Blasingame wasn't supposed to have a loaded firearm."

The incident was investigated, and Blasingame was "fired on the spot." In the interim between Walton County and Milledgeville, Blasingame worked at the Jones County camp at Gray and reportedly left there of his own will following some kind of local disagreement.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Law and Practicality

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Georgia law says a program of rehabilitation "shall be instituted" in the state's prisons.

But the law didn't say when, and such a program is nonexistent as far as most prisoners are concerned.

The only convicts with any access to planned rehabilitation are those at the state's prison for juveniles, the Industrial Institute at Alto. And the program there is badly hampered by circumstances beyond control of the superintendent.

The law says the rehabilitation program "shall include academic, industrial, mechanical, agricultural and vocational training."

* * *

AGAIN, THE only effort is at Alto, and that also is hampered by circumstances. Some job-teaching occurs at the prison farm at Milledgeville, where a prisoner unit serves the state mental hospital, and at Rome, where another serves Battey Hospital, and in some cases where construction projects are going on.

But the great majority of the state's prison population of nearly 10,000 are in prison camps where there is all work and no education and in most cases no recreation.

One ex-prisoner described it thusly: "All they want is to keep you in that stumphole."

In many camps throughout the state, the only mental exercise required of prisoners is counting down and remembering to take his cap off before addressing the Cap'n or the Boss.

* * *

J. B. HATCHETT, assistant director of the State Department of Corrections, on the subject of education and work, said:

"Educate a criminal and you just make him a smarter crook, if you give him education without giving him anything else.

"To rehabilitate a man, you need to occupy his hands and mind. It's better to keep a prisoner busy with hard work than to put him in a cell and feed him tranquilizers. . . ."

It is obvious to a visitor to state and county prison camps that the hands of prisoners are kept busy, but there is little evidence that they are given anything to occupy the mind.

* * *

THE PENAL LAW calling for rehabilitation and education of prisoners was passed by the well-intended Legislature of February, 1956. The law characterized itself as one designed "to comprehensively and exhaustively revise, supersede and consolidate" prison laws.

But, in some ambiguous and contradictory wording, in the paragraph following the one on rehabilitation, it left a hole big enough to throw a lawbook through. It says:

"The State Board of Corrections . . . shall give the prisoners opportunity for reasonable educational and recreational activities where practical. . . ."

So it isn't practical, and they're too busy working to do any educating at 100 prison camps, state and county, and only one prison, the one for juveniles, does any at all and that on a two-afternoons-a-week basis. Recreation is almost as rare, but not completely nonexistent.

Staff Photo—John Pennington

POT-BELLIED STOVE HEATS QUARTERS WHERE PRISONERS LIVE
At Public Works Camps Living Area Is Cramped and Cluttered

Behind Prison Walls

TREATMENT CONDITIONS VARY WIDELY AT CAMPS

By JOHN PENNINGTON

A joke is told about prisons which is funny at first glance, then not so funny when you get to thinking about it.

A visitor went into a county public works camp to look around and asked one fellow he saw:

"What got you in here?"

"Politics," he said.

"Politics?" the visitor asked. "How's that?"

"I'm the warden," the man replied.

* * *

AND SUCH is the case, not in all but in many of the county public works camps throughout the state. Many are the former county prison wardens whose jobs ended promptly after election time and the seating of a new board of road commissioners. (In one county, Jackson, the county commission chairman is the warden. He got the warden's job after being elected commissioner.)

The State of Georgia has nearly 10,000 prisoners—the exact total on Sept. 1 was 9,240. This puts the state in the unenviable position of having the highest rate of prisoners to population in the nation, a fact figured out annually and publicized nationally by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. In other words, we're on the bottom of a king-size totem pole.

Almost exactly half of the prisoners are confined in the Georgia State Prison and 19 branches—a total of 20 institutions.

* * *

AND HERE'S where the counties come in. The other half, between 4,000 and 5,000 convicts regularly, are contained in 81 county public works camps. Georgia is one of only a few states that still follow this practice.

These are state prisoners, the same as those in the state prisons. But they are placed in county bondage for the duration of their sentences, under a deal whereby the state is relieved of the man, and the county takes him on, financing his upkeep in return for his daily labor.

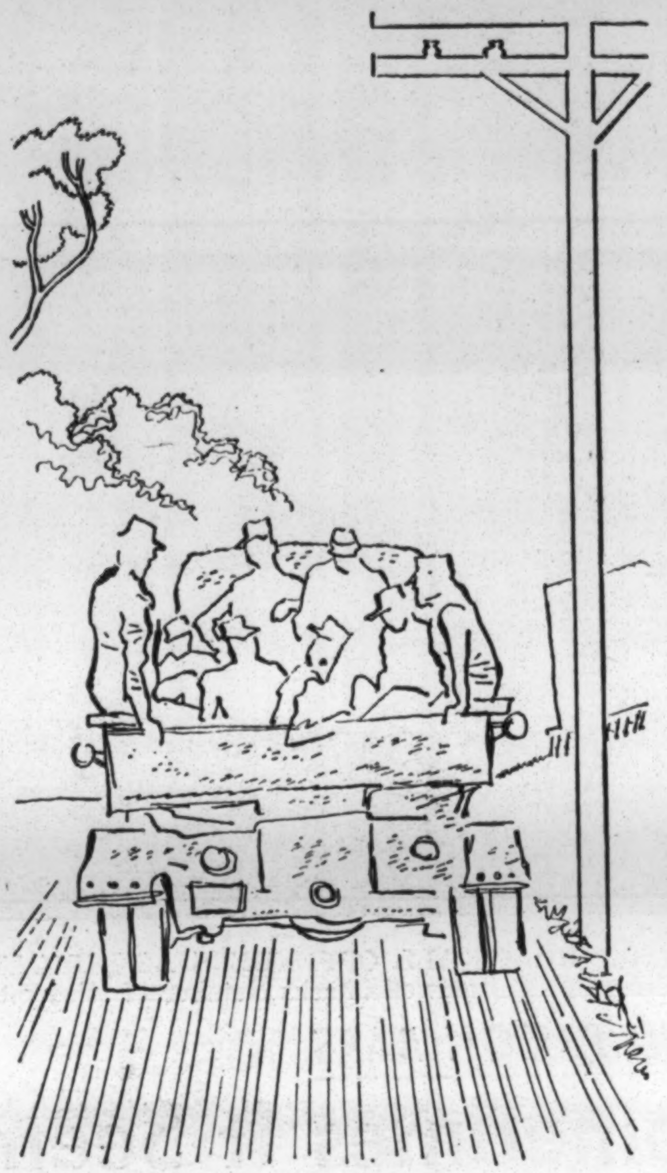
There is no consistency about the county camps — they range from near-hovels to air-conditioned quarters (the latter at Newnan). They vary just as much in other aspects, such as the furnishing of soap and clothing and food. And they vary in attitude toward the convict. Some treat the inmate like a man, while still punishing him—others delight in Cap'n-calling and making a prisoner snatch his cap off with the speed of light before addressing the Boss.

* * *

PRISONERS GOING to county camps are assigned, after conviction, by the State Department of Corrections, which never touches them or lays out a penny on them, and thereby does no "correcting" of them. The counties pick up the prisoners at their point of conviction, take them to their camps—and work them. When the sentence is up, the counties turn them loose at point of conviction and the state clears the record without having spent any money.

Meanwhile, in most camps in Georgia, the prisoner has then served his term when it would be virtually impossible under existing circumstances to comply with the laws purportedly governing the penal system, camps where uniformity just does not exist.

How would they, for example, go about providing education, rehabilitation and recreation — all called for by law—in a county camp where the warden's ability to run a work camp has been repeatedly questioned, and where the deputy warden can neither read nor write?



BEHIND PRISON BARS

A Slip Lands You There

By JOHN PENNINGTON

You never know whom you'll find in prison.

I walked into the Pulaski Prison Branch at Hawkinsville and there, with what he called "the stripe of sin" down his leg, was an old college classmate.

He was a convict, but not a hoodlum. He is not mean. He is not to be viewed with alarm, prison stripe notwithstanding.

This young man got into cheating and swindling trouble through the excessive use of whisky and he says prison and abstinence and religious reflection have shown him the error of his ways. Now he is the driving force behind a religious publication at the Pulaski camp, "The Key to Freedom," and active in other camp religious activities.

* * *

THE STATE PRISONS have many such inmates who are paying for their erring ways with loss of freedom.

Unfortunately, there is a tendency on the part of the public, and short-tempered authorities who have to deal with crowded prisons, and law officers who have to hunt escapees, to lump all convicts together into one big bundle, tied with a striped string, fitting the habitual criminal label.

This fact is demonstrated in many ways. One day on a manhunt, a fearsome thing when you look at the human side of it, a veteran state trooper, a tall, burly man, waded through a wooded area, rifle across his arm, bloodhounds baying in the distance. He squinted through the undergrowth ahead and growled:

"If some of these (blankety-blank) newspaper writers had to go out in the woods on a search like this for armed and desperate men, they'd stop wanting to coddle the convicts."

(He neglected the fact that an Atlanta Journal reporter, along with other newsmen, was along with him, but armed only with camera and dull pencil.)

* * *

THE TROOPER was lumping all convicts together—the penitent young man at Pulaski along with the desperadoes being hunted at the moment, and he recited a typical anticoddling, treat-'em-rough view.

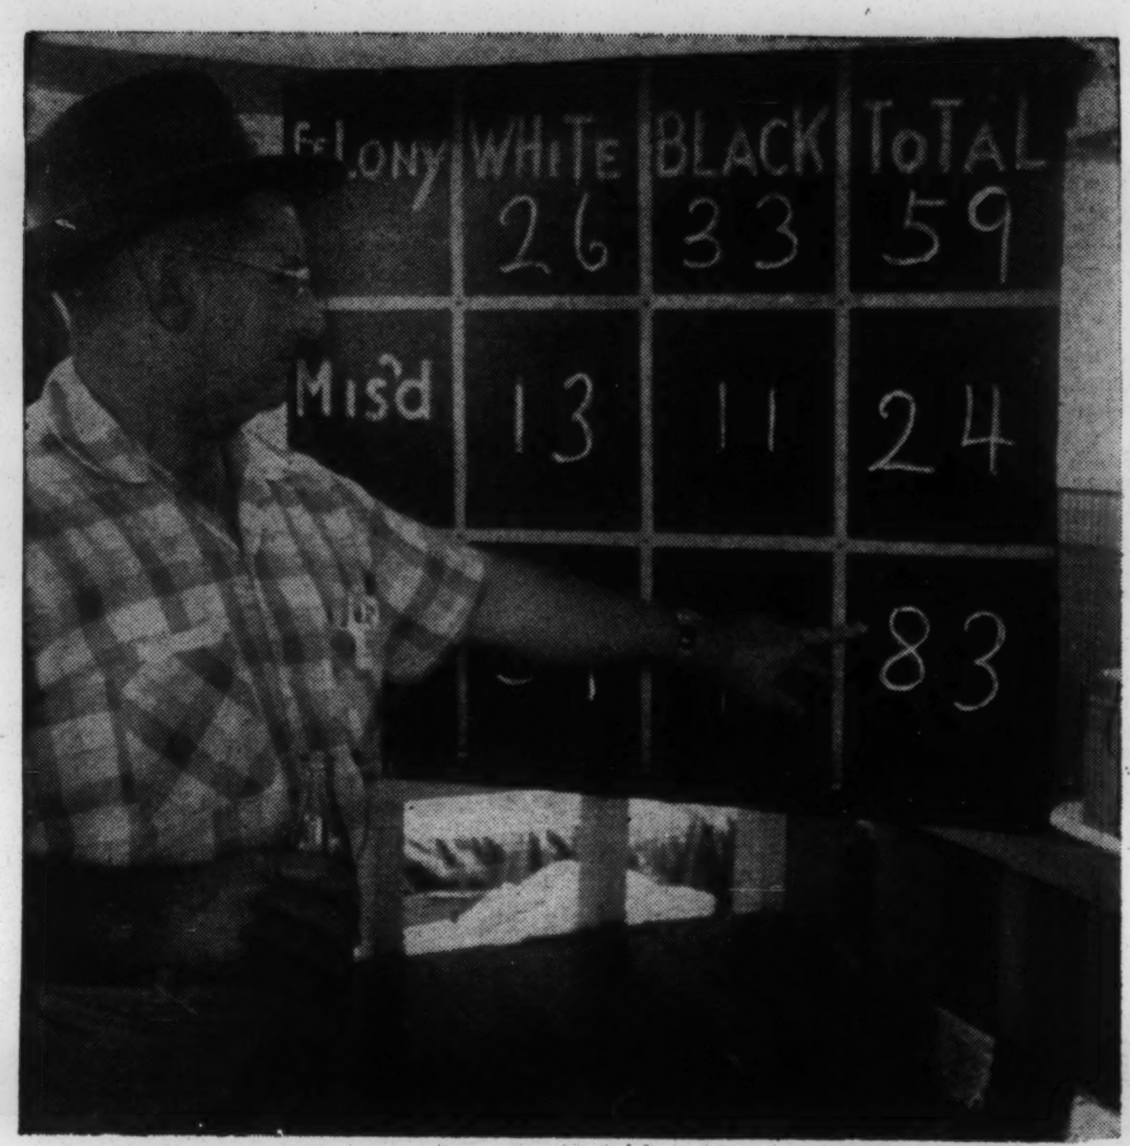
To compound the problem, the convicts are physically lumped together in prison. Thus, along with the real toughies, the I-don't-care boys who have a better home in prison than out, are any number of sensitive and normally sensible individuals who drifted or slipped into a moment of crime and who, if recognized and given the opportunity, would work conscientiously toward self-rehabilitation, toward the day when they could again take the place they left in the free world.

* * *

IN A ROAD gang, with all work and no diversion, Jack gets to be a dull boy, and maybe bitter, because he's in a university of hard knocks which could teach him more about lawbreaking than that which got him into trouble in the first place.

The young man in the Pulaski camp reminds those on the outside, in an article in the Key to Freedom, not to be too smug about freedom. He points to cases where men of great respectability, in a single moment of fear or passion, committed acts that brought life sentences.

"When you have visitors," he told his inmate readers, "invite them to gaze upon your face, and look at the stripe of sin down your leg, and . . . at the bars, steel doors. . . . Invite them to share with you for a moment the embarrassment, the loneliness, the maximum confinement of being a prisoner. In doing so, perhaps, it will make them more conscious of sin, freedom, and except for the tender love and grace of God, it could happen to them."



Staff Photo —John Pennington

PRISON HOLDS ALL OFFENDERS AS INDICATED BY BOARD
Warden C. M. Caldwell Checks Number of Misdemeanors, Felonies

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Sometimes It Seems That Justice Is Not Equitable

By JOHN PENNINGTON

The law doth punish man or woman
Who steals the goose from off the common;
But turns the greater felon loose
Who steals the common
from the goose.

A young prisoner at one Georgia penal institution is doing 20 years for stealing $30 as a juvenile delinquent.

Now 20, the young man already has four years of prison behind him. The sentence was imposed when he was 16. He's got 16 to go.

By way of comparison, the now-famous Mrs. Margaret Burton of DeKalb County doctor-fleecing fame, got out after serving 18 months, her debt for embezzling $186,000 completed.

* * *

SOME WOULD say, considering such, there just ain't no justice. That saying, worn trite by usage, could be tempered somewhat to insist accurately that justice does not always seem equitable.

The state's prisons are full of living proof of man's fallibility, and the fallibility of his justice.

And the young man doing 20 years for $30 seems at this point to demonstrate dramatically that prisons which lock men up as punishment can also reclaim some misdirected lives—if somebody cares to try.

Walter Matthews, superintendent of the Industrial Institute at Alto, cares. He presides over the one real effort of the Georgia penal system at rehabilitation. The juvenile prisoners, mostly from 15 to 18, are sent to him.

* * *

MR. MATTHEWS and a reporter, walking through an inmate dormitory with neither bars nor locks, came upon the young man with the heavy sentence. He was a nice looking fellow, like the boy down the street. He shook his head sadly over the act of burglary that got him into his deepest trouble, and said: "I didn't know then what I know now."

The superintendent later explained: The boy was a juvenile delinquent, sent several times to the Training School for Boys at Milledgeville. During an escape from that institution, he burglarized a tavern. He got $30. No force or weapons were involved. The judge said 20 years, and the young man went to Mr. Matthews bitter and determined to get away. For awhile he was the problem child of the institution.

* * *

PATIENCE AND compassion for saving lost souls paid off for Mr. Matthews. The boy now is a model prisoner and the superintendent said he would hesitate not a bit to turn him back to society for another chance, if the laws would permit it. He agreed that the plight of this young man, at this particular point seemingly rehabilitated, is a good argument for indeterminate sentences. For who knows what effect the weight of more years will have on him?

This is not to indicate that the state doesn't have its share of hardened criminals. It has a gluttonous portion, some of them achieving their hardening in the state's prison system.

In the prison population are plenty of habitual criminals who have killed, raped, or used the force of arms to steal. Nobody has suggested that these men should be coddled, feather-bedded, set up in hotel rooms or given the front door key.

* * *

BUT IT HAS LONG been recognized by penologists and thoughtful, interested persons that no correction of lesser criminals is achieved when you mix them with the known toughs.

The law separates felony crimes by definition from misdemeanor ones, and provides specific punishments accordingly. The law also says that, once convicted, offenders must be classified and segregated with respect to race, age, first offenders, habitual criminals and incorrigibles, and the like. A felony crime generally is one resulting from wickedness, baseness, treachery, deceit. Misdemeanor crimes are misdeeds less grave in consequence.

Georgia's penal system has some separation— incorrigibles to the Rock Quarry Prison at Buford, the juveniles to Alto, some minimum security risks to the Colony Farm at Milledgeville— but by and large its camps and the county public works camps contain a hodgepodge of convicts guilty of everything in the book, felonies and misdemeanors all mixed together in crowded dormitories with double-decker bunks sometimes virtually spilling them over one another.

* * *

HOW MANY OF THESE are wicked felons who can be subdued and adequately punished only by treat-'em-rough methods?

During the past fiscal year, Georgia had more than twice as many misdemeanor convictions as felony convictions—6,118 to 2,683. More than two out of three convicts going into state incarceration were guilty of the lesser misdeeds.

Habitual criminals? Also during the past year, more than two-thirds of the 6,118 misdemeanor convictions were first offenders, not habituals. More than two out of three felony convicts were first offenders, not habituals.

One seldom hears of a person of means, who can afford a good lawyer or a fine, getting convicted and sent to a public works camp for such as drunkenness, reckless driving, or some other violation of the motor vehicle law. Yet during the past fiscal year a total of 1,118 persons were committed to the custody of the State Board of Corrections for plain drunkenness.

* * *

ANOTHER 1,234 was committed for drunk driving. A total of 782 were sent to prison for violations of the motor vehicle law, more than a thousand for some form of larceny.

One of these was a DeKalb County man who went to the State Prison for plain drunk, to serve four months. He told of seeing youthful first offenders encircled around a hardened criminal, a long-timer, listening to tales of burglary and the like, and how to succeed at it. (To break into a country store, for example, wait until a big diesel truck roars along the highway, then break a window when the noise won't be heard. This is a penitentiary lesson for first offenders.)

These misdemeanors by the thousands are the people who overcrowd the state's prisons and branches and county public work camps.

* * *

MEANWHILE, on the subject of who's in prison and their status as criminals, it is a well-known fact that there are plenty of offenders against society whose guilt is never translated into conviction. They subsequently are never compelled to sample the relative hospitality of the penal system and therefore find it easy to shout for revenge against those who are convicted, with never a thought for restoration of usefulness.

For example, one paragraph of the Georgia law says, without equivocation, that convicts may be hired out to labor for cities, public authorities or political subdivisions, BUT "shall not be hired out to private persons or corporations."

Violation is, by law, a misdemeanor, and those who permit prisoners to labor on private property, or cause them to do so, are subject to fine and/or imprisonment upon conviction.

During the immediate past years, how many cases of convicts working on private property have been revealed. And how many have been taken into court for it? Or sent to prison?

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Reality Bedevils Dream

By JOHN PENNINGTON

If there were some place to move 170 women from the crowded state prison at Reidsville, it would make room for separation of 400 misdemeanor prisoners from the felonies.

That is one of many bedeviling problems confounding Georgia's penal people. It is a fact pointed out by Warden R. P. Balkcom Jr., whose dreams to run a model prison at Reidsville are overrun daily by frustrating reality.

All of Georgia's white women prisoners, usually something over a hundred, are confined in a building at Reidsville removed from the prison proper. Some Negro women are held there, and some are assigned to specialized duties at Rome, Milledgeville and several other places.

* * *

THE BUILDING used at Reidsville for the women, Warden Balkcom said, would easily accommodate 400 short-termers and somewhat uncomplicate his housing problem — but there is no other place to put the women.

Another problem bedeviling the warden is Atlanta's contribution to his facility.

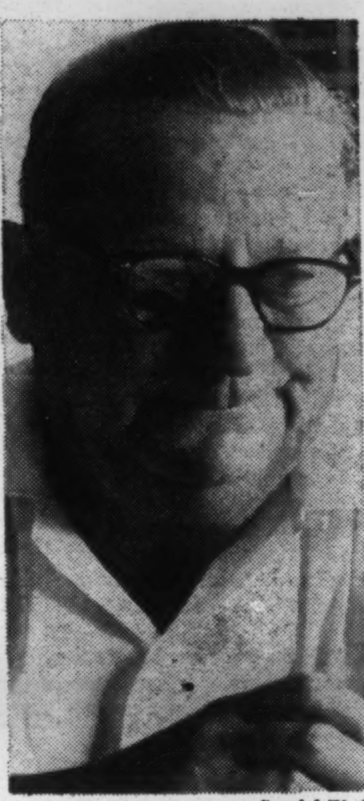
A bus runs between Atlanta and Reidsville with deadly regularity, burdening the state penitentiary with the likes of vagrants and drunks and stockade escapers and other misdemeanor prisoners. About 30 a week they go, individuals convicted to sentences running from about three to 12 months.

* * *

OUT OF HIS prison population of 2,500, Warden Balkcom has 582 short-termers with less than a year to serve, coming and going in a steady stream, causing him to ask, how can he run a modern penitentiary, instituting rehabilitation and education and recreation, and industrializing, when the prison is virtually spilling over with such?

"This is," said Mr. Balkcom angrily, "nothing but a stockade."

For example, he gets a man with a four-month sentence to the state prison for escaping from the Atlanta stockade and, foolish as it may sound, the state penitentiary gets plenty of those. With 120 days to go, the prisoner gets 16 days statuatory good time, 16 more for good behavior, and he's about 21 days in quarantine (where he's checked for social diseases and the like). That's a total of 53 days, leaving about 60 work days when you count out the weekends.



Special Photo

R. P. BALKCOM JR., Bedeviling Problems

* * *

"WE HAVE to give him two suits of clothes, shoes, bedding, and run him through the hospital for shots," Mr. Balkcom said. "You can't plan a program for a man like that."

Atlanta's particular contribution to this situation is dramatic: During the past fiscal year, Fulton County (Atlanta) sent the state prison system over a third of the state's total of 6,118 misdemeanor convictions. Seven other big counties provided nearly another third. This is one of the big reasons Corrections Director Jack Forrester wants to build a new prison and classification center near Atlanta.

For at Reidsville is a prison where the goal of prison industry has long been held high, where a program of rehabilitation is a great hope unachieved—and where it very likely will go unachieved as long as the state prison is a dumping ground for vagrants and drunks and others of that type—big problems but minor criminals — from the state's metropolitan areas.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Drugs 'Make It Easier'

By JOHN PENNINGTON

A convict at the Georgia State Prison at Reidsville has been caught possessing a big batch of "bennies," a dangerous drug used by minor scale "dope" addicts.

This discovery of a barbituates cache at the big state prison was reported by a just-released inmate, and confirmed by Warden R. P. Balkcom Jr.

The former prisoner, who identified himself as a former addict, and showed a needle-scarred arm to demonstrate, said Herman Webb, a prisoner doing heavy time out of Atlanta for safecracking, was caught with 500 "bennies," or benzedrine tablets, on his person. He was caught in the bakery shop, where he worked.

* * *

WARDEN BALKCOM confirmed that Webb was recently caught with the pills during a shakedown resulting from an inmate tip. He was put in solitary confinement for 30 days. Mr. Balkcom did not verify the number of pills involved, but said it was "over a hundred."

The former inmate who described the pill-finding was one of three who told, in separate interviews, of their observations of inside - the - prison traffic at Reidsville of dangerous drugs.

All three said they knew of no "dope ring" at the prison — narcotics is called "the hard stuff" by takers — but saw plenty of the dangerous-drug pills.

* * *

NUMEROUS FORMER convicts have indicated that barbituates — such as benzedrine, nembutal and the like — are readily available to any prisoner who can pay 50 cents per. They said ingenious convicts, with help from some guards, manage to get the drugs in despite official "shakedowns" aimed at stopping them.

The former addict said the traffic is confined mostly to the "bennies"—a "dangerous drug" which gives the taker "a lift" at a cost considerably less than narcotics, and less habit-binding as well. They are taken by mouth, or dissolved and taken by shot.

The going price for "bennies" at Reidsville is 50 cents a pill—twice the purchase price "outside."

* * *

THE FORMER inmates indicated that most convict users of the barbituates take them "occasionally" rather than regularly, using four or five at a time. One estimated that 1,000 "bennies" a week are used at Reidsville.

One former inmate, once a barbituates addict, said he was propositioned by a guard to supply him with pills when he got out. He said he declined because he wanted to stay out.

Another, who said he never took any, said he saw fellow convicts regularly give themselves shots during evening hours in their medium security dormitory. They would wrap their arms with a belt or thin towel, he said, to raise the vein, slap the arm vigorously at its bending point, then administer the shot.

* * *

A FRIEND offered him a shot, said the former inmate, saying "it will help you stand this place." He said he declined. One prison friend used the pills regularly, he said, and "got quite irritable" when he missed them.

Warden Balkcom, whose prison is woefully overcrowded (2,500 where 1,500 ought to be) said he strives hard by constant shakedown and inspection to keep down the pill-taking, and occasionally catches an inmate with some in his possession. But with the prison being as crowded as it is, he said, it is impossible to keep some barbituates from slipping in.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

What Freed Men Face

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Many inmates leave the Georgia prison system, having paid their debt to society, virtually under sentence to go out and steal again.

The people who run the prisons know it. Most of them deplore it. But they're not in a position to do anything about it, and the reason is money.

When a felony prisoner completes his sentence in a Georgia prison, he is, under law, entitled to $8 worth of clothes and the price of a bus ticket to his home—or if he's from out of state, a ticket to his point of conviction.

* * *

THE MISDEMEANOR prisoner is entitled only to the ticket "by common carrier" to his home or point of conviction.

This situation, said State Prison Warden R. P. Balkcom Jr., just throws the ex-convict "on the mercy of the world." And for ex-convicts the world has little mercy.

"It just invites them back here," said the warden. "If a man doesn't have a place to spend the night, nor any money to buy food with, he's got to steal."

* * *

SO HE ENDS up back in prison, one of Georgia's repeaters, contributing to the nation's worst prison population problem, because he was sent out into the free world without a chance.

The answer is a simple one, and the federal government has partially solved it, as have a number of states.

They pay prisoners a pittance for their prison labors, and compel them to save it against release. As a matter of fact, it is saved for them. This serves the dual purpose of financial reparation and rehabilitation - fostering as well.

The Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, for example, has a "pre-release unit" through which prisoners pass before leaving confinement.

* * *

DURING A 60-DAY period they are counseled. Jobs are gotten for some. Long-termers are re-oriented, told what to expect on the outside. The outgoing convict has apprehension: Will he be accepted? Will he have a chance? An attempt is made to prepare him to face up, with courage, to difficulties. And he is prepared, somewhat, financially.

Many federal prisoners get a small payment for their work. They are compelled to save a portion of it. And the law permits a maximum of $30 to be given to the needy prisoner as gratuity, a matter handled on the basis of the need of each individual.

That is not enough, said Warden Fred T. Wilkinson of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary. He would like to give a man $100 at least, so he would have enough to eat for a few days, to pay for a room, and buy some work clothes, to face the future with confidence.

* * *

THE GEORGIA prison system, by contrast, gives the misdemeanor the clothes he wore in, the felony some new clothes, a bus ticket, goodbye, good luck, and he'll need it.

For if he has no money of his own, he leaves with no money.

If he lives in another state, and was convicted in Atlanta, he is returned to Atlanta. Broke, hungry, perhaps angry at the world, no one to turn to, no place to go. What happens? The crime rate again goes up.

A philosophical convict at one prison branch put it this way: "Very few men leave prison in better shape than they entered, either physically or mentally. . . . They leave with no money, right where they were the day they committed a crime to get money."

So our repeater percentage is high.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Attitude Is Vital Factor

By JOHN PENNINGTON

An attitude is an intangible which you cannot pick up in your hand and move from one place to another. There are attitudes involved in prison running, and they have a lot of bearing on the welfare of prison inmates.

You find an attitude at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, which is run under federal rules and regulations, and which has no connection with the state penal system

* * *

WARDEN FRED T. Wilkinson was interviewed, before this series of articles was begun, on the subject of prisons and prisoners. The warden is a man with a heart full of compassion for the unfortunates under his supervision, one who rose to his position from the ranks of prison guards. These quotations reveal his attitude:

"I feel that basically the prisoner is just as good as I am. I really mean that. . .

"I have never talked down to a prisoner in my life. And I'm never going to . . .

"I treat his relatives with the same respect I treat my own. . .

"I call him by his name. I realize his problems and talk to him about them. . . His troubles are very real. If he has a headache, he can't stop for a cup of coffee. . . I haven't seen anybody in here yet that I hate."

* * *

IN THE GEORGIA prison system, you can find varying attitudes, all affecting the prison population.

R. P. Balkcom Jr., warden of the big state prison at Reidsville, is a man respected by the majority of his inmates as one interested in their welfare. He says:

"Confinement is the worst thing in the world. The greatest punishment you can conflict on a man is to send him to bed at night, without his people, wondering about them. That's enough, without any physical punishment. . . ."

Warden Balkcom said he will not tolerate the striking or cursing of a prisoner. Nobody at the state prison is allowed to administer punishment but him. "There's such a thing," he said, "as giving a man too much punishment."

* * *

A DIFFERENT attitude came from a man high in state penal affairs, who gained anonymity by labeling his comment "off the record" after making it. He said he favored a return to the public whipping post as last resort punishment for incorrigibles.

The top man in Georgia's penal system, Corrections Director Jack Forrester, said he is strong on capital punishment, and favors "return of the gallows to the county, for public hanging, where they can see it done." This, he said, would "curb juvenile delinquency."

"If young folks watched the hangings," he said, "they would be more inclined to follow the law."

There is revelation in a bit of three-year-old penal history. Following a session of self-mutilation by prisoners at the Buford Rock Quarry Prison, investigation revealed some slapping and striking of prisoners by "Boss Doyal" Smith, then deputy warden. In one case a Negro was hit with a stick and rolled out of the quarry in a wheelbarrow, an incident Boss Doyal called a "show" put on to impress other prisoners.

Attitude? Boss Doyal's actions subsequently have been defended by top penal authorities, Mr. Forrester and his assistant, J. B. Hatchett. Boss Doyal was transferred from the .quarry—and promoted to warden of the Putnam Prison Branch at Eatonton. Other cases of stick-wielding have been condoned.

Behind Prison Bars

WITHOUT A PLACE TO SELL HELPFUL INDUSTRY CLOSES

By JOHN PENNINGTON

The prison industry of which Georgia's penal leaders are most proud was shut down. A coat of dust had settled over the idle assembly line. Young prison inmates who normally would have been building school desks for children were out instead working at some less constructive task.

This was the scene at the Georgia Industrial Institute at Alto, where the state's juvenile prisoners are held, and where the state's only real effort at rehabilitation — through education, recreation and industrialization — is being made.

But the effort is thwarted by problems aplenty, and the school desk situation is typical of a statewide situation.

* * *

WHY WAS the constructive little industry shut down?

Walter Matthews, superintendent of the prison for youthful offenders, explained that there just had not been enough customers to keep it going regularly. An order had come in, and the assembly line would be reactivated to fill the order.

Back in Atlanta, Corrections Director Jack Forrester displayed one of the desks, a handsome product, and explained the problem of selling them:

The facility at Alto can turn out the desks at a rate of one every 10 minutes, and sell them for $9.50 each. Such desks usually run about $15 each on the commercial market.

But the Department of Corrections doesn't have a steady market, despite the obvious bargain, because the State Department of Education does not make such purchases on a state level.

* * *

IT LEAVES desk purchases up to local school boards, which might find it more expedient to buy desks locally at $15 than to get them from the Department of Corrections at $9.50.

Meanwhile, down at the State Prison at Reidsville, a big expanse of warehouse or factory space lies empty, unused.

The reason is the same as for the idle desk factory: The state has not seen fit as yet to utilize the prison production capacity to supply goods which the state needs., Instead, it buys them at higher cost on the public market.

The state law which prohibits the use of convicts on private property also makes it lawful for the corrections department to sell prison-made goods to the state or other public governments or authorities, including school boards.

* * *

UNTIL RECENTLY the State Prison had only one industry—the tag plant, making auto license plates with 30-year-old, virtually absolete equipment. Now it has a print shop, ready, willing and able to do considerably more job printing for the state.

Strangely enough, the state prison operated a thriving industry from 1939 to 1941, profitably making road signs, guard rails, filing cabinets, lockers, tags, concrete pipe and school book covers, but regressed to tag-making only.

Penal authorities would like to reactivate the program, expanding to include the manufacture of soaps and paints, book repair and perhaps shoe making.

Since the program would foster rehabilitation and more than pay for itself, all they need for activation is some starting money.

And customers.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Industrializing Idea Appears to Be Unanimous

Staff Photo—John Pennington

INMATES ATTEND CLASS IN ALGEBRA AT PRISON
Teacher in Background, Standing, Discusses Lesson

By JOHN PENNINGTON

An item in the daily press sort of riled Corrections Director Jack Forrester and his assistant, J. B. Hatchett. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem Jr. had said, and it got a little splash, that the state prisons ought to do some industrializing.

"We have been saying the same thing for years," Mr. Forrester pointed out.

He patted a stack of annual reports from the State Department of Corrections, pointing out that each one, for the past several years, has proposed and urged the establishment of prison industry to sell goods to the state.

A perusal of the reports shows him to be right. The department has been urging the state to set up a program of industry, and to utilize the products at a saving to taxpayers. Up until this year, the urgings fell on deaf ears and no high state-level cooperation, and goods that the state prison could make were bought from private sources—sometimes irregularly, a situation now a matter of record.

* * *

THE SAME was true of efforts to get some educational facilities started in one branch of the prison system.

The 1957 annual report of the corrections department tells the sad story of the failure of the state prison's little bit of industry, in these words:

"Due to the fact that we have been unable to secure any volume of business from other state agencies, the revenue from the smaller (industrial) units is negligible."

The situation appears due for a change. Gen. Gillem, state supervisor of purchases, made a study of the situation and recommended that some modern prison industry be set up at the state penitentiary.

He estimated that half a million dollars would set up a shop that could employ 500 persons and take in more than $600,000 a year in income. As supervisor of state buying, he's in a position to provide a state market for prison-made goods.

* * *

IT SEEMS to be unanimous. Nobody openly opposes setting up prison industry. It would save the taxpayers money. It would put to work at constructive jobs some convicts who now labor in the stumpholes. It would no doubt prove helpful at restoring to useful life some men who now are burdens on society.

* * *

Then, for goodness sakes, you might ask, why has all this time of talking passed, with nothing really being done about it?

You can find a similar situation in the field of prison education—or lack of it.

The only book-learning education offered in the state penal system is at the Georgia Industrial Institute at Alto, presided over by Supt. Walter Matthews.

* * *

MR. MATTHEWS has five teachers—two white and two Negro "free men" and one inmate—teaching nearly 200 youthful inmates two or three half days each week. The classes are not accredited. The teachers are hired by the corrections department, and Mr. Matthews would like to have 11 instead of five, teaching 400 instead of less than 200, and accredited.

And now we come to one reason this is not the case: In 1956 a committee was appointed to study educational needs at Alto, where young offenders 15 to 18 are held. The committee recommended that the State Board of Education be asked to furnish teachers and set up a common school at the institution, since its inmates are of school age and would come under the board if not in prison.

"The board advised," reports the corrections department, "that it was their belief that the Department of Corrections should request additional funds from the Legislature for this work and that every individual department should stand on its own bottom, and that they could not establish the school at Alto."

* * *

SO EACH DEPARTMENT, each spending tax money, goes its own way.

Along with its limited educational facilities, the institution at Alto also offers recreation and athletic opportunities to its young inmates. The "school" has two football teams, one white and one Negro, each playing a regular schedule against "outside" teams. The institution has a full-time athletic director and coach.

Mr. Forrester summarized the education situation last summer in a report to Governor Vandiver on how he was keeping down spending. He wrote:

"We have never had funds available to inaugurate the proper type of educational and vocational training . . . but we have done all we could with funds available. . . .

* * *

"WE KNOW that we furnish the inmates with sufficient clothing, good wholesome food, medical and dental care and well constructed and adequate buildings."

And that about sums up what the state furnishes its prisoners.

How do the prisoners feel about behind-the-walls industry?

The answer is revealed in an article prepared by Inmate No. 32796, describing the new print shop facility at the state prison at Reidsville.

He called the new plant "a sparkling new print shop that promises to save taxpayers many dollars annually. No one yet knows how many 'new lives' it will produce.

"Other inmates at Reidsville are cocking an anxious eye toward the January Legislature and remarks commonly heard in the prison yard reveal deep interest and hope. 'Do a good job, print shop, and we'll have industry too. We're counting on you' . . .

* * *

"EDUCATION is restoration—to productivity.

"Who can price the value of a productive life restored to society?"

The federal prison system has an industrial program—Federal Prison Industries, Inc.—a wholly owned government corporation which provides training and employment for prisoners. And incidentally, makes a profit, while making goods for the government, saving taxpayer money, and paying prisoners a small sum for their labor. It has been in existence since 1934—long enough to show its worth. (Dividends of $36 million, moneywise).

* * *

EDUCATION IS available to all federal prison inmates, and mandatory for those who test under the fifth-grade level. The elementary students go to school half of each day until they reach the fifth-grade level, then they may continue in night school, through high school, if they wish. Correspondence courses of all descriptions are available.

Meanwhile, in the Georgia prisons, where nearly 10,000 are incarcerated, less than 200 inmates are getting any schooling at all, and these only in the juvenile institution.

By contrast, this news item shows up in the monthly prison magazine from New Mexico:

"Commencement exercises for the graduating class of the New Mexico State Penitentiary High School were held on the evening of May 20. . . .

"Commencement speaker was George P. White, director of instructional services, State Department of Education.

"Other dignitaries who participated were. . . ."

And in Georgia there are many, many inmates, completely illiterate, who have to ask a cellmate to write for them lines of endearment to loved ones outside. They leave a Georgia prison in the same shape, no matter how long they stay.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Woman's Anguish

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Women go to prison, too.

One who called herself "Ex-Reidsville" wrote in anguished plea:

"When a woman is given a one-way ticket to the town from where she was sentenced, no other monies, what does a woman do?

"Where can she go?

"To what social agency can she apply?

"Why doesn't someone at the prison advise the woman as to the possibilities of shelter, help and job placement when she leaves the prison?

"WHY?"

The woman was out of prison and she was bitter. What she had to say in her letter has been amplified and retold many times over by other former women inmates of the State Prison at Reidsville. Concensus: The women's prison is an unwanted stepdaughter of the penal system, both neglected and neglecting.

* * *

MANY FORMER inmates think the reason it is kept near the penitentiary for men—where it houses less than 200 women but could house 400 male misdemeanor prisoners—is because the wives of guards and other officials of the state prison have jobs there.

At any rate, the prison for women fosters bitterness. Ask anybody who has served in it. Here's more from "Ex-Reidsville":

"Does ANYBODY actually know what counselling or rehabilitation is given a woman who must serve at Reidsville?

"A woman serving for a misdemeanor has to serve her time at this one place. The filth, the schooling in criminal acts and the perversion is sickening to a first offender.

"I served time there and I know the loose, lax and shoddy methods and policies carried out. I stayed eight months and I was never approached by anyone who tried to find out what hope I had to adjust in this world when I left.

* * *

"I HAD EXACTLY 19 cents when I left Reidsville. I left on a Monday and didn't know until Sunday morning when my name was placed on the board to turn in my prison clothes. I didn't have time to write anyone asking them to meet me or even get my civilian clothes pressed before I was given a bus ticket back to the town from whence I was sentenced. I was thrown out like garbage with the words of the matron ringing in my ears . . . 'You'll be back.'

"There was never a time where anyone mentioned that the state was rehabilitating me. It was always that the state was 'punishing' me and while I was there I better walk the tow line.

"God help any woman who has to go to Reidsville for a short term sentence . . .

"God have mercy on those who have served and attempt to come back into society. I've been fired from three jobs because I couldn't make bond, sought out to write for the 'bug' operators in this town and I am now a waitress.

"Have pity on us that have erred but at least make it possible for us to serve the time without losing all self respect and confidence that tomorrow can bring a new horizon."

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Mrs. Burton Tells Futility

By JOHN PENNINGTON

With the women in prison, as with the men, there is an element of futility. There is also idleness, boredom and frustration. Jealousies and petty conflicts.

Education? Rehabilitation?.

One former inmate answered that question, spacing her words deliberately for emphasis: "I learned how to look a person in the face and stab them in the back."

She was one of numerous former inmates of the women's prison at Reidsville who talked to an Atlanta Journal reporter about that institution.

* * *

ONE WHO DID such was Mrs. Margaret Burton, alias Mrs. Janet Gray, who served 18 months for relieving a group of Decatur doctors of $186,000. She talked at length, though her lawyer advised her not to talk about the prison, and later told an ex-convict friend here:

"I've said it before. Something so terrible as this, something good has got to come after. If it gives us a chance to help some of those others, then I personally know that I owe it. . . ."

What she had to say, largely, has since been repeated numerous times by others who served at the prison, enough to imply a strong foundation of truth.

* * *

THIS REPORTER visited the women's prison, walking through it in the company of Warden R. P. Balkcom Jr. We saw dormitories with women standing alongside their beds, some hastening to tidy up for company; we saw empty dining tables, a row of empty solitary confinement cells. But what can a man really see in a woman's prison?

The inmates saw the inside, day after day, and here are some of the things they tell:

No. 1 complaint — an inmate, a "boss con," ran the prison. The one so accused, a big woman then doing murder from Muscogee County (recently released), reportedly had her way on everything. She could have a prisoner transferred from one dormitory to another, or sent into solitary confinement, without question.

* * *

SHE READ incoming mail. She demanded and got complete privacy in a dormitory bathroom. (Warden Balkcom said complaints to this effect reached him, but never stood up under investigation.)

The individual has no outlet for frustrations, no opportunity to discuss problems, to air grievances. "If you ask why, you are told, 'I don't have to answer to you.'"

One inmate, whose ills included dope addiction, became nervous and high strung last July 4. She sought an audience with a matron, and failed to get it. She asked for voluntary admission into solitary confinement, so she could be alone with her emotional problems.

She was ignored. Shortly afterwards she went berserk, broke soft drink bottles and assaulted a matron. Needless to say, she then was put in solitary.

* * *

WOMEN COMMITTED to "the box," former inmates said, wear a box gown only, no shoes, no underclothes. They get a bath once a week, are allowed no comb, no reading or writing materials, no smoking in the cell. They do have beds in the solitary cells for women.

Women on regular confinement are issued a can of Prince Albert smoking tobacco weekly.

Idleness, for all but about a third of the white women who work in the sewing room, and a few others on specialized jobs, is a major complaint. Women assigned to ward-cleaning average working about two hours a day, it was said, with sometimes as many as nine women assigned to clean a ward occupied by 16.

"If they'd just give you some work to do," said Mrs. Burton. "I got so upset at the futility of the thing. While paying my debt to society, I was incurring a further debt — for room and board."

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Vengeance Is Georgia's

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Georgia has her vengeance. More than any other state she has her vengeance.

In addition to standing out, right at the head of the national list, as the state with the largest per capita prison population (of nearly 10,000 persons), Georgia excels in another punitive area:

She consistently has put to death more criminals than any other state in the country—a fact that ties in with the attitudes prevailing generally toward justice and punishment.

This is a fact pointed out by Warden Fred T. Wilkinson of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, who is opposed to capital punishment, and an eloquent spokesman for his point of view.

* * *

EVERY YEAR, Warden Wilkinson said, Georgia executes more criminals than any other state.

Between 1930 and 1958, she put to death 346 persons. In a 13-year period to 1958, Georgia executed 29 persons under the age of 21.

A big year was 1957. Georgia put to death 14 criminals, out of a national total of 65. California was second, with nine.

Did Georgia deter crime thereby?

* * *

OBVIOUSLY NOT, for the rate of serious crime in Georgia ranks high in comparison of states with similar population.

As Warden Wilkinson points out in an essay on the question of whether it's proper to legally kill:

"It would take a poorly informed person or one indifferent to facts who would say that California and Georgia stand as models of crime prevention in the United States."

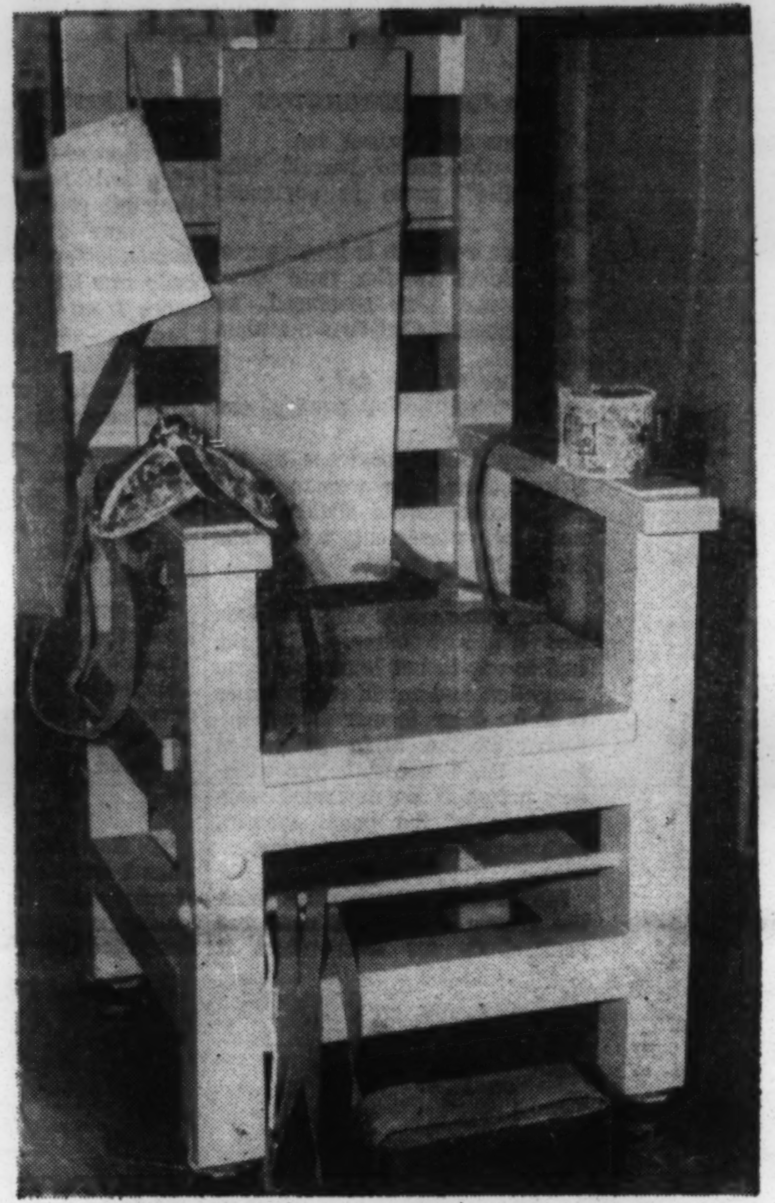
"My own position," said the warden, "is that the case for capital punishment . . . is unsound on the basis of religion, the concept of punishment and correction of offenders, and deterrence of crime.

* * *

"THERE IS no evidence that capital punishment, wherever it may be applied, has decreased crime either in number of offenses or in degree of severity.

"I am, therefore, opposed . . ."

Meanwhile, in more ways than one, revenge is ours.



"VENGEANCE" METED OUT HERE
Electric Chair Gives Georgia "Record"

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Starvation's No Cure

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Atlanta's famed "barbed wire surgeon," Dr. Alfred A. Weinstein, says solitary confinement on a bread and water diet is "exorbitant and excessive and cruel punishment."

"From the professional point of view," he said, the bread and water diet is one which will "rapidly lead to severe, irreversible vitamin deficiencies."

"It's strictly no good," he said. "From both the humane and professional point of view, I condemn it most bitterly."

Dr. Weinstein does not speak without feeling or first hand knowledge about incarceration. He went through World War II as a prisoner of the Japanese. He was isolated, starved, beaten and he wrote vividly of the experiences in his widely-acclaimed book, "Barbed Wire Surgeon."

* * *

HE SAYS the wilful starving of a man in isolation is worse than you would treat a dog. "If you treated a dog that way," he said, "the humane society could have you put in jail. You know that."

Likewise, he said, this kind of treatment gains nothing toward the rehabilitation of a prisoner, but rather intensifies the hatred of a man who eventually will be again in free society.

Dr. Weinstein said that now, "14 years after the fact," he bears no intellectual anger against "those who starved me."

"But I find it difficult to control my emotional anger," he said, "every time I see a Jap, or read about one."

* * *

EXCESSIVE punishment of a man in the penal system will have the same effect, he said—leaving him with a hatred permanently "against anyone connected with the penal system or law enforcement, even those who just control traffic."

Dr. Weinstein, drawing again from his own experience, said enforced starvation would be enough to adversely influence the central nervous system and damage the body beyond its capabilities of self repair.

"If you take a man who is on the brink of serious vitamin deficiency," he said (following 30 days in solitary, for example), "and put him back at hard labor, before his body has had a chance to heal itself, then the labor itself intensifies destruction. . ." This would include, Dr. Weinstein said, damage in the heart, liver, kidneys and brain.

Dr. Weinstein said a "minimal diet," for a man not working, should include eight ounces of meat, two glasses of milk, one fruit, two green vegetables, one ounce of a fat or butter product. Any person taking less ought also to be taking multi-vitamin capsules, he said.

* * *

PRISONERS in solitary confinement should get this minimal diet, he said, "unless you want to have sick animals on hand."

Looking at the diet from a calorie standpoint, Dr. Weinstein said a man should have about 2,200, depending on his size. Federal prisons give the convict in isolation a minimum of 2,300 calories daily.

About the effects of isolation itself, diet not considered, Dr. Weinstein said it is sufficient punishment. "I would rather be whipped than isolated," he said, "as I have been."

BEHIND PRISON BARS

DR. WELTNER SAW IT PLAIN AS A CHAIN-GANG VOLUNTEER

By JOHN PENNINGTON

An Atlanta man who went to a Georgia chain gang in 1912 in the interest of penal reform says it's time to take a fresh look at the penal system.

"The system we've got," he said, "doesn't make any sense."

Dr. Philip Weltner, former president of Oglethorpe University, long-time leader in the fields of education, jurisprudence and human relations, and a man known widely for his inquiring mind, shared his views on the prison problem through a series of piercing questions.

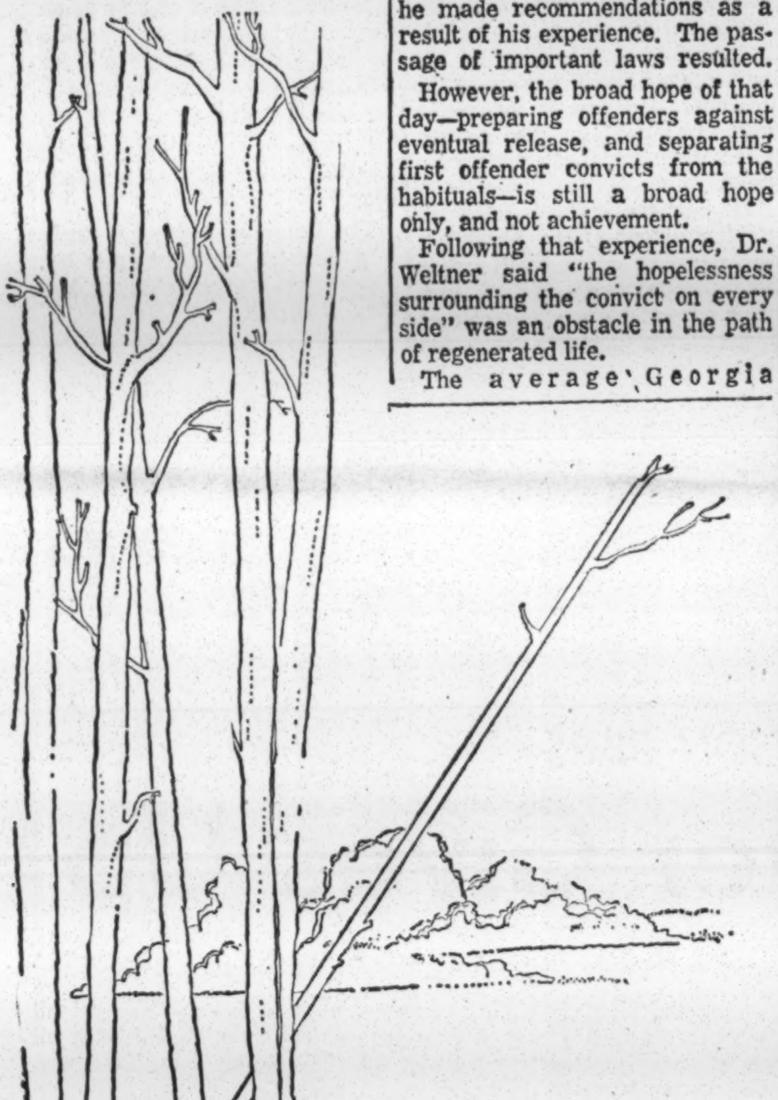
"I don't know the answers," he said. "But thank God we know the right questions . . ."

* * *

DR. WELTNER went on an old Campbell County chain gang 47 years ago, donning prison stripes voluntarily and working side by side with convicts as a water boy, to look at the problem from the inside. Then deputy solicitor general of Fulton County, he made recommendations as a result of his experience. The passage of important laws resulted.

However, the broad hope of that day—preparing offenders against eventual release, and separating first offender convicts from the habituals—is still a broad hope only, and not achievement.

Following that experience, Dr. Weltner said "the hopelessness surrounding the convict on every side" was an obstacle in the path of regenerated life.



DR. PHILIP WELTNER
One-Time Water Boy

The average Georgia convict is immersed still in hopelessness.

As Dr. Weltner found in 1912, the convict's day is filled with work, and no positive restorative action is taken "to fit him for an honest life." Ninety-five per cent of all convicts are eventually released back to the society they offended—in most cases not corrected, sometimes embittered, and always bearing the stigma of being an ex-con.

With the wisdom of years between his voluntary chain gang experience and the present, Dr. Weltner said:

"We need to take a fresh look at what we are doing in terms of what we know."

* * *

SO HE ASKED questions on the peral system — a system whose object is the protection of society against criminal acts, rather than raw punishment and revenge — questions asked "in terms of what we know."

Does society need protection? How do we get it?

"We don't get it by making people worse than they are.

"We don't get it by locking a man up a given number of years, then turning him out.

"We have two alternatives — either make him better, or shoot him."

Many of the answers to the penal problem are in the hands of the legal profession, said Dr. Weltner who started his diversified career as an attorney.

* * *

"IF WE LOOK for the best interests of all concerned," he asked, "wouldn't we have a different concept of the courts?"

The court is a battleground, he said, "a substitute for a personal feud," with the judge serving as an umpire and the jury deciding who wins. The court should not serve as a battleground, he said, but should conduct a "wide inquiry."

Dr. Weltner's inquiring approach to the penal problem:

When a person has committed an act against society, the inquiry should find out: Is he the kind of person who, unless restricted, would repeat the act? Does society have to be protected against repetition?

"Then the question is not how many years behind bars," Dr. Weltner said.

"The true question is, what must we do to get that fellow straightened out?

* * *

"YOU CAN'T protect society any other way, except by shooting him.

"That's the beginning of the inquiry."

That's the beginning, where's the solution? The question to Dr. Weltner brought another from him.

"What can we do now that will have greater value for the people 15 or 20 years from now?"

Prisons are full of individuals. You find as much diversity under prison suits as outside. How do you "straighten these fellows out?"

"First, know these people as individuals. Can this happen as the result of a court trial? No. Can we learn the answers through questions asked as a matter of record? No.

* * *

"WE JUST DON'T know enough. We're not asking the right questions."

Then is this a dead end, a futile hope?

"No," said Dr. Weltner. "It's not a dead end. It's the beginning.

"Collectively we know enough to answer those questions. As a group we know. It's up to us who don't know to learn from those who do . . ."

It's also up to those who don't know to say so, he said.

* * *

"SOMETIMES our duty requires us to say, 'I don't know.' It's no disgrace to say that."

Among those who could work toward a solving of penal problems, said Dr. Weltner, are the lawyers. "With their sense of justice," he said, "it's their baby. Society looks to them."

And who, Dr. Weltner was asked, would be in position to instigate the "fresh look" that he proposes?

"I would think the governor would be the one," he said. "He has pledged himself to honesty in government. He should be willing to take a fresh look at what we are doing in terms of what we know.

* * *

"I THINK Governor Vandiver is just the man to live up to his obligations . . .

"To live up to what we know: That's the greatest obligation of all of us."

BEHIND PRISON BARS

'The Most Brutal Man'

By JOHN PENNINGTON

"I will swear on 10 stacks of Bibles what (he) did to me . . . He is the most brutal human being I ever ran into . . ."

Forrest Turner speaking, Georgia's No. 1 reformed ex-convict, on the subject of one specific prison warden. Not too many years ago a No. 1 bad boy, Turner fought the uphill battle to respectability. Now he has a few words to say on what prisons need—and something they don't need, a heritage from the chain-gang past.

The heritage: Wardens who once exulted in chain-gang brutality and acts of sadism—wardens who despite their inclinations are highly placed still in the penal system of Georgia.

What prisoners need: Hope and Help. A desire for self betterment, some hope that all is not futile; and help from people who run prisons.

* * *

TURNER first went to prison in the 1930s, at the age of 19. In 10 years of confinement, he escaped 11 times and earned the Bad Boy title. He was paroled in 1943, during a surge of penal reform, and went on to become the state's No. 1 Reformee.

When Turner first went into prison, he wore chains. Later the chains were replaced by "picks"—metal objects welded to each man's leg—which he termed worse than chains. (How did they make him feel? "They were a constant reminder that if you could get away, you didn't have to wear them.") On many occasions, Turner said, he was beaten.

Looking back at the brutalities experienced and witnessed, Turner said Georgia prisons have come a long way. But he says they have a long way yet to go. It is his suggestion—one that he promotes in civic club addresses—that "the people" stand behind prison reform until the system is "second to none."

* * *

ON VISITS to prisons, Turner said, "I see some of the same old wardens and the same old guards that were connected with the system 25 years ago. Some of them have never done anything but cause confusion, and they have often been questioned in connection with brutality and graft."

On wardens and beatings, Turner signed an affidavit accusing three specific men of brutal and sadistic acts. He mentioned others in conversation. All of the wardens are still in the prison system, causing Turner to wonder how the building of a new prison and the easing of overcrowded problems would benefit the men serving under them.

Turner named the wardens . . . They will be referred to here as Wardens C, S and J.

* * *

ABOUT Warden C:

"He is the most brutal human being I ever ran into in my life. I served under him . . . in 1939-40. He did everything to prisoners . . . you could think of.

"He used to make Negro trusties go out with pitchforks and stick hogs to make them squeal, so the town people wouldn't hear the men screaming when he beat them with a hose pipe . . .

"He took me out at 2 o'clock in the morning and handcuffed me backwards, hooked a chain in the handcuffs and ran it through a ring imbedded in the ceiling, pulled it up and beat me unconscious.

"He beat me in the buttocks so bad the blueness, the bloodshot, went down to my feet. I've seen (others) beaten so bad, I took motor oil and put on their clothes to get them unstuck from the flesh.

"When he beat me, they were drunk. (Warden C) and a group of guards . . .

"I will swear on 10 stacks of Bibles what (Warden C) did to me. . . ."

* * *

AS MENTIONED before, Warden C is still in Georgia's penal system, head man at a prison branch confining over a hundred prisoners. . . .

About Warden S.

"I've seen (Warden S) on numerous occasions beat men with sticks, pick handles, hose pipe for the slightest infraction of any rules, such as failing to say yes sir, cap'n, and for failing to doff their hats when speaking to him . . ."

This man also is still prominent in the prison system, custodian and all-powerful over several hundred men.

About Warden J:

"I've seen (him) whip a lot of Negroes when he was a walking boss."

The latter is a deputy warden in a Georgia prison camp today.

One wonders: How much have they changed?

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Warden Never Gives Up

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Warden Fred T. Wilkinson of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary believes that many of the people in prison are victims of poor environment, unequal opportunities.

He believes they need and are entitled to help and correction.

He feels also that the root of the trouble, the national crime rate, Georgia's included, is embedded deeply in what we call society. In the teeming cities, in their slums and unlooked-after areas. He believes this is where some attention ought to be placed, at the breeding places of crime.

"I am personally very sorry," he says, "that we get such a late start on the corrections process . . ."

Mr. Wilkinson runs the big Atlanta penitentiary for federal offenders. Like the state's penal system, he is pressed with more inmates than he has room for—2,800 where his capacity is 1,890. And prison populations continue to rise, causing Mr. Wilkinson to look with alarm on the public treatment of crime-breeding areas.

* * *

WE REMOVE SLUMS, he said, to make room for a good quick highway—slums that should have been removed "for other reasons, long ago."

Allowing crime to breed in unlooked-after areas of poor environment, then fighting back through imprisonment and too-late correction, said the warden, is like standing in the middle of a swamp trying to kill all the mosquitoes with a swatter. It is not getting at the cause.

But about his correction efforts the warden speaks eloquently. He said:

On the kind of people in prisons, his and others—"We get all sorts. It's a melting pot. A very paradoxical situation, throwing all these people together, people who, 100 per cent of them, have been failures in society."

On prisoner work habits—"All the young people we get—they haven't learned to work. They haven't learned to set an alarm clock. We attempt to give them knowledge, a trade, prepare them to earn a living. We also attempt to get them to want to earn a living. . . ."

* * *

ON HOW CUSTODIAL OFFICERS should treat prisoners—They should set examples, give inmates something to emulate. Sympathize with them, talk with them "instead of breathing down their necks. We just don't like to breathe down their necks."

On incorrigibles—"We have 10 per cent we can't do anything with. They're irrascible, discontent. . . . Some in (that group) don't recognize anything except force—tight control and supervision. . . . Some ought to be kept out of society permanently."

On the others—"Almost 90 per cent can be helped. If I can do the job I hope I know how to do, and if I had the facilities, I feel we could have final success with 50 to 60 per cent of them, particularly the younger group."

Does he ever give up on a man?

"It would take a fool," said Mr. Wilkinson, "to look at a man and say, here's a fellow I'm going to write off."

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Tangled Web of Politics

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Prisoner welfare has to run the obstacle course of political comradery in the Georgia penal system.

Political implications start right at the top. The director of the State Department of Corrections, Jack Forrester, has been a Statehouse political figure for many years. He is an appointee.

Guided by the Board of Corrections—which is made up of five political appointees — Mr. Forrester runs the prison system. (The governor does not have complete control of the board. An appointee of former Gov. Marvin Griffin, Raleigh Rollins of Bainbridge, pleading no contest to a fraud charge, paid a $5,000 fine and drew a suspended sentence to the penal system he's supposed to help supervise. Gov. Vandiver wants him to quit, but so far he remains a member of the penal board.)

* * *

THEN THERE'S the county camp system, which spreads the political implications all over the state. The state disposes of about half of its nearly 10,000 prisoner population by farming them out to the custody of counties, which work them in return for their keep.

This naturally creates an atmosphere in which politicians elected on the county level, including state legislators, feel at least friendly; and in many cases beholden, to the corrections department and, in turn, the governor.

Local jobs are involved, from warden on down. Many county roads (often those passing the properties of influential citizens) get extra good care. (I recall many times riding over a south Georgia road that was county-paved 10 or 12 miles out from town, missing a big school by a couple of country miles, but running to the heart of a farm owned by a county commissioner, and stopping there.)

* * *

A LOT OF COMMERCE is involved, selling by local merchants. Takes a lot of groceries to run a prison camp, and trucks and tractors and gasoline and fuel oil, most purchased on the county level. There are 81 county public work camps in Georgia, thus happily spreading business and fixing roads and creating jobs, such as they are.

In addition, there are several branches of the state prison spotted throughout the state, doing the same thing. And of course when they got ready to build some prison branches during the past administration the logical place to put a couple was at Leesburg, hometown of Mr. Forrester, and Bainbridge, hometown of then-Gov. Griffin.

Down at Bainbridge, corrections board member Rollins did a neighborly deed and had some convicts get busy clearing some land owned by the governor. The convicts also cleared some for-sale subdivision land owned by Cheney Griffin, mayor of Bainbridge, and others.

* * *

MR. FORRESTER, who earlier had, as a favor to Cheney Griffin and to keep prisoners busy, let the city of Bainbridge have convict labor at half price, went down and investigated, but found little to fuss about.

It's easy to see that the line of political comradery is strong in the penal system: It goes much deeper and wider than this surface delineation indicates.

Thus it may be logical to assume that there will be no stampede by legislators in the direction of separating prisons and politics—a step that would be necessary to any real improvement of the penal system.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Take a Second Look

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Looking back — a recapitulation on prison visits and research:

In solitary confinement the men sat naked, on diet of bread and water. One said he was getting weak. "You should have thought of that," said the warden, "before you ran."

At Waycross, the Ware Prison Branch, a lifer prisoner was in charge of the front door key, and apparently more. He suggested to the prison's general manager, in manner authoritatively enough that he was heeded, that he wait for the warden before letting a newsman look around.

At the Putnam Prison Branch, Eatonton, a Negro convict wanted soap for his shower. It was denied. Insisting, he was told by the Boss: "Don't say a damn word to me."

* * *

CONTRAST: Curtains on the dining room windows at Pulaski Prison Branch, Hawkinsville, and a podium, all for the benefit of church services, at a camp where religion is emphasized. And back in solitary, in "the hole," sat two men, their heads shorn and their bodies stripped punitively for escaping.

* * *

PERSONNEL problems: One warden fires a guard for kicking a prisoner. Another warden promptly hires the offender without questioning the man who fired him. Prior violence on the guard's record.

Today's Feature Page shows scenes from Georgia's various prison institutions with a story by John Pennington. Page 16.

Prison laws say prisoners shall be rehabilitated. But how, at some of the places they're kept and worked, and under some of the high-up attitudes that prevail? The laws say prisoners shall be afforded educational and recreational opportunities. Another paragraph adds: "Where practical."

Who do you find in prison? You never know. An old friend, perhaps, for there are nearly 10,000 in.

* * *

ALL KILLERS and rapists and robbers by force? Hardly. The big majority of them are involved in petty crimes, misdemeanors. Many, many, many are those who are serving several months because they couldn't afford to pay a $100 fine. Yet, very recently a member of the State Board of Corrections, which supervises the penal system, paid a $5,000 fine to keep a sentence in suspension.

With all the overcrowding, prison officials have their problems, some seemingly simple but not that easy to solve: For example, 400 misdemeanors could be separated from the felons at the Reidsville State Prison if there were some place else to put 170-odd women.

Another product of overcrowding: Traffic in prison of dangerous drugs, taken for kicks by inmates.

* * *

A PRODUCT of short finances, or something: Georgia is one of the states which pays nothing for prisoner labor, leaving many broke and behind to start with when they get out of prison, some virtually under sentence to steal again.

Also a product of short finances, and perhaps some big - business reasons elsewhere: The state prison's productive capacity is barely tapped, to the loss of taxpayers, inmates, and all others concerned.

Along with her national ranking on prisoner population, Georgia also ranks No. 1 in executions, considered a dubious honor by some.

Forrest Turner, rehabilitated ex-convict, names wardens whose brutality he has witnessed and experienced. They're still in the system.

Dr. Alfred A. Weinstein, famous "barbed-wire surgeon" of World War II, a medical specialist, condemns the exorbitance of isolation on bread and water.

Dr. Philip Weltner, former president of Oglethorpe University, who once went on a chain gang in the interest of penal reform, thinks it's time to take a new look at the prisons, considering what's being done against what we know.

And then there's the tangled web of politics in which the penal system is enmeshed, county level on up.

Behind Prison Bars

FORRESTER FOR GALLOWS TO CUT DOWN CRIME RATE

By JOHN PENNINGTON

Jack Forrester

The man who runs Georgia's penal system is Jack (John Morgan) Forrester, a colorful, loquacious man who has been in the state capitol off and on, mostly on, for the past 26 years.

He is eminently qualified as a governmental administrator, having held numerous boss-jobs—in the public service commission, revenue department, welfare department, highway department, and now prisons department. He also has been in the legislature.

He is not, and readily admits it, "an expert penologist."

• • •

HE STARTED OUT on the job, in January of 1955, pledging for prisoners vocational training and the teaching of community responsibility. "You can do more good," he said then, "with sugar than vinegar."

In the meantime, he has built up the Rock Quarry bastion for tough punishment of tough individuals at Buford, promoted some hard - fisted personnel; defended some prisoner-slapping, and now favors returning executions to the gallows, on a county level, so the young people can watch hangings and thereby be deterred from juvenile delinquency. Back during the summer, when prisoners were rebelling at the State Prison in a so-called hunger strike, Mr. Forrester vowed to keep down such "if we have to pack them into isolation like college boys pack into telephone booths." (Isolation being "solitary" confinement, or "the hole," and diet of bread and water.)

Mr. Forester has held state jobs under favor of the late Eugene Talmadge, Herman Talmadge, Marvin Griffin, and Gov. Vandiver.

• • •

CONTROVERSY SORT of rides with him, a matter he blames some on the newspapers, and at one time on "selfish politicians." The penal system, supposedly reformed a time or two in the past decade and a half, has had more than its share of notoriety since Mr. Forrester took it over.

His job, paying $12,000 a year in salary and $2,000 subsistence, supposedly is nonpolitical, since he is an executive director of the State Board of Corrections, which itself is a board of appointive members with staggered terms. But the director served at the pleasure of former Gov. Griffin and he serves at the pleasure of Gov, Vandiver.

• • •

MR. FORRESTER'S political career: He became secretary of the Public Service Commission in 1933, when Eugene Talmadge was governor, serving until 1937. He went to the Legislature from Crisp County in 1939. In 1941, he became state revenue commissioner, bossing the liquor industry and the collection of taxes. This job he held until 1943, when the political winds and the governor changed. In 1948, under another change, he became state welfare director under Herman Talmadge. Next year he got embroiled in controversy with a group of 14 doctors at the Milledgeville State Hospital, with them demanding his hide or they would quit. Mr. Forrester now says he was trying then to do what is now being done at the hospital, but he was thwarted. Reports from that day say he tried to install efficient business methods, with his business manager trying to make the doctors punch a time clock. They revolted.

At any rate, Mr. Forrester quit that job and swapped with Alan Kemper, who was at that time treasurer of the State Highway Department. Mr. Kemper took over welfare and Mr. Forrester the highway job, both with the blessings of then Gov. Talmadge.

From 1951 until 1955, and the advent of Mr. Griffin, Mr. Forrester was coordinator of the State Housing Authority. And then he got the job of penal boss.

• • •

AFTER WORKING with the penal problems to now, Mr. Forrester blames many of his problems on money, the ever-present matter of fighting the budget. Always, he said, he has to keep back some money for emergency, running the system as sparely as possible. Then when the fiscal year ends, and the money hasn't been all used up because the emergency didn't materialize, what does he do with the money? Why, he gives it back to the state and they put it in next year's budget. He doesn't get to accumulate the unspent portion and the prisons have been run meanwhile at the astoundingly low rate of $1.09 per prisoner per day.

Meanwhile, prison population grows, despite lenient "good time" policies, and prison problems grow, despite citations of advances in the system's administration, and Mr. Forrester says the women and groups who jump into the call for reform are "do-gooders," and newspaper reports of the state of the system bother him not at all. He told this reporter that a letter, claiming prisons are getting two soft to deter crime, was "one hundred per cent true."

Mr. Forrester has indicated he would be happy to have a change of laws—to afford the warden more severe punitive measures at the Buford Rock Quarry. and to junk the big, awesome electric chair at Reidsville in favor of the gallows pole in 159 counties.

BEHIND PRISON BARS

Well, Is Reform Necessary . . . Or Do-Gooding?

By JOHN PENNINGTON

The cry for penal reform is dodged with nimble feet.

The need for it is denied with righteous protestation.

Interest in it is shunted aside, with ridicule.

Corrections Director Jack Forrester said members of women's groups who want to help are "do-gooders." Assistant Director J. B. Hatchett waved a booklet of laws governing the penal system at a reporter, whom he called a "90-day wonder," and suggested sarcastically: "Why don't you take this and rewrite it like you want it?"

While the issue is being ignored, let these questions get into the record:

—Do officials responsible believe the state is, or has been, doing its best, with the prisons? Can all the ills really be blamed on money?

* * *

—DO THEY CONDONE and endorse methods used in solitary confinement, of stripping men naked of clothing and human dignity as well, of punitively shearing the heads of those so confined, of starvation diet? Are these methods conducive to rehabilitation?

—Can a prisoner be rehabilitated in a county camp where getting a day's work out of him is the main consideration, and where there are no facilities for any kind of improvement such as education, recreation, and where sometimes the prisoner has to take his religion, if he gets any, through the bars, with preacher on one side, him on the other?

—Can a prisoner be prepared for the honest life "outside" in a prison branch where the warden and chief example-setter is an old-timer chain-gang cap'n who has beaten dozens, yea, hundreds of men, and apparently relishes human suffering?

—Does the penal system overall, county camps included, lend itself to "correction"—the logical goal of modern penology?

* * *

—WITH MUCH purported inclination toward self-injury on the part of prisoners, and the obvious need for mental treatment of some people in prisons, why is so little emphasis put on the emotional aspect that the department of corrections in the past fiscal year paid $850 to its chief psychiatrist, according to the audit, while paying one surgeon who devoted only part time to prisoners more than $13,000?

—When will the state, when specifically, take advantage of the numerous opportunities for industralization, putting prisoners to constructive work and taking some business away forever by law from political figures who form brokerage firms just to sell to the state?

—Why not more cooperation between state departments, such as corrections and education, to benefit the state, and not the departments? Education for prisoners, prison-made product-buying by education folk?

* * *

—HOW LONG will the "corrections" system look down on its inmates in enormous superiority, justifying slappings and beatings, rehiring guards with records of brutality, promoting some of the same?

—Will the building of a fine new prison, which is needed, improve the lot of the prisoners serving under the warden that Forrest Turner described as "the most brutal human being" . . . ?

—Why is it so difficult to find new ideas on solitary confinement when federal prisons have found less severe restrictions effective for years?

—If the prisoner emerges as an alumnus of the Georgia prison system a worse person than he went in, what has the state gained except raw vengeance, and a good candidate for repeat? And insurance to keep our prison population statistics high?

* * *

—WHY DOES IT take years to solve the problem of where to put less than 200 women at Reidsville—to make room for separation of 400 misdemeanor prisoners from the main institution?

—Is the famous Navy menu adopted by prisons being used in a prison branch where convicts have for dinner fried fatback and dried beans four days in one week?

—Granted that it's a bargain for the moment: Is it a long-range bargain to run the prison system at a cost of $1.09 per prisoner per day—probably the lowest in the country—not counting those other four or five thousand prisoners kept by county camps, who cost the state nothing?

—Would it not be an advantage to the state, though a political disadvantage, to put prison custodial personnel under the merit system?

* * *

—IS IT REALLY necessary for security at the Buford Rock Quarry prison to haul prisoners from one point to another, including to court at Lawrenceville, in a pickup truck dog cage?

—Is it really necessary in the name of discipline to intimidate prisoners with harsh and abusive language and false promises?

—Should not some attention be given to new methods of sentencing, when the present system of handing the task to a relatively uninformed jury leads to grave inequities and everybody in the legal and related professions and everybody in the legislature and state capitol knows it?

—Some knowledgeable persons with a sincere and unselfish interest in the penal problem seriously question modern prisons and their methods. It is suggested that what is being done in the prisoner-handling line is not up to what is known about the problem. When will the state make an effort at finding the answers to known questions, aiming at a method which will come nearer the penal goal of protecting society against lawbreaking?

* * *

—WHEN WILL WE, in the words of Dr. Philip Weltner, begin to live up, penalwise, to what we know—"the greatest obligation of all of us"?

These questions emerge from about six weeks of studying the state's prisons, and about that long writing about them, adding up to the 90 days that Mr. Hatchett spoke of in his "90-day wonder" remark. The prisons have been described as seen by one not so close to the woods that the trees could not be seen, with no interest save the revelation of what was observed, as the average non-convict citizen would have seen it.

Several citizen-groups have asked for action, in one case demanded it. Their interest has been taken lightly

The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs called for sweeping reforms, went on record "demanding reform of subhuman treatment of prisoners in solitary confinement cells.

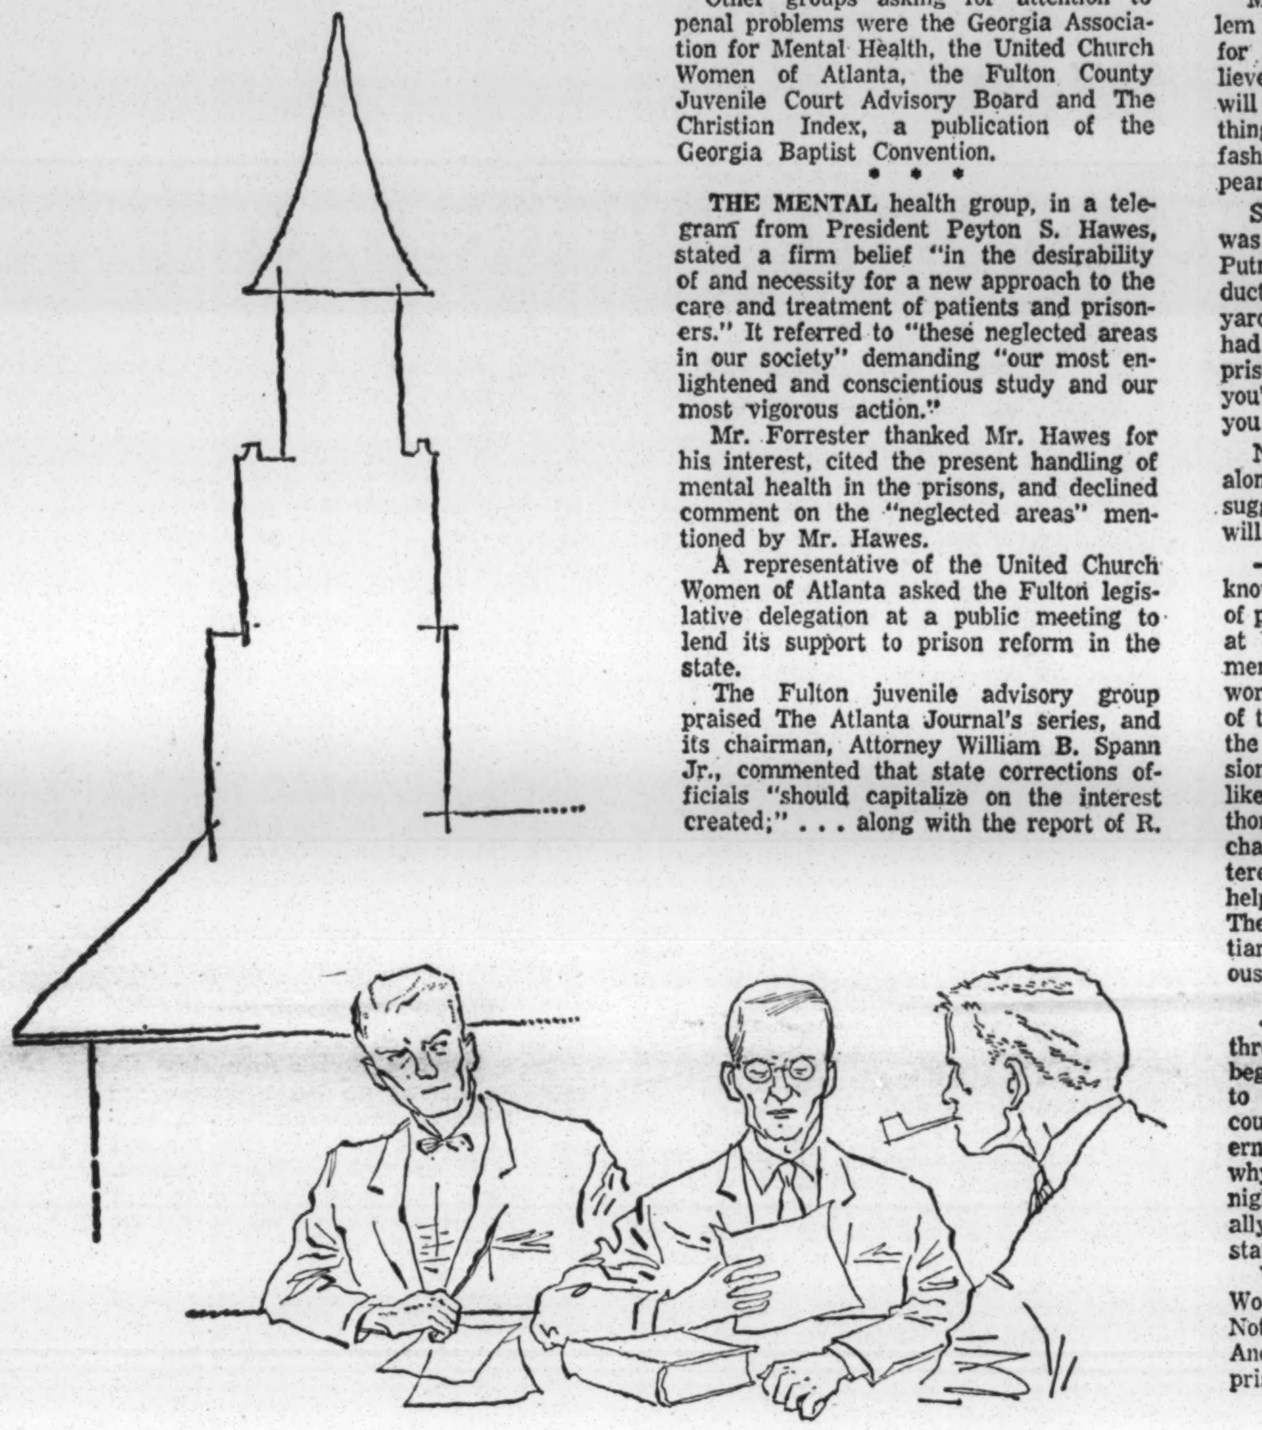
* * *

THE FEDERATIONS pledged full cooperation "in developing programs designed toward the rehabilitation of prisoners. . . ."

Mr. Forrester replied on the record that the corrections department would appreciate "any suggestions you may have which would enable us to more effectively punish prisoners which cannot be controlled otherwise than by isolation with restricted diet."

But privately he spoofed the women: he said he hadn't heard of any convention of them here; he referred to "do-gooders"; he suggested that the reporter-writer of this prison series had collaborated with the women to solicit their interest. Such was not the case.

Mrs. E. L. Barnes of Statesboro, president of the federation, later wrote Mr. Forrester:



"We believe that nakedness, hunger, loneliness and despair are not effective punishment. We consider it essential to improve the diet given prisoners . . . but we also believe that it is just as important to give food to the minds and spirits and encouragement that the future is not hopeless. . . ."

She said the group was asking authorities in the field of penology for suggestions.

Other groups asking for attention to penal problems were the Georgia Association for Mental Health, the United Church Women of Atlanta, the Fulton County Juvenile Court Advisory Board and The Christian Index, a publication of the Georgia Baptist Convention.

* * *

THE MENTAL health group, in a telegram from President Peyton S. Hawes, stated a firm belief "in the desirability of and necessity for a new approach to the care and treatment of patients and prisoners." It referred to "these neglected areas in our society" demanding "our most enlightened and conscientious study and our most vigorous action."

